MIGHT BE ANYBODY'S FLAG BUT SANFORD THINKS DIFFERENT.

With the race tightening on the first lap of the Florida State league first half season at least four teams are conceded a chance to finish ahead, while none of the clubs are entirely out of the running. Bartow which is bringing up the rear has a slight chance to finish at the top and Orlando has little better outlook but it is not out of the realm of possibility that either might win.

Sanford got 'away 'with a good start and has not been headed off entirely though the club has had serious reverses in the past, week and unless a rejuvenation of .some sort takes place, another week will see them further down the ladder. To say that club has .had breaks, might be a statement susceptible to criticism, but a team that can pile up seven errors in a single game and win looks like a horseshoe aggregation to an outsider.

Bradentown is regarded all round the circuit as a one-two teem, but those who have followed that club's record closely, declare all the breaks have been to their disfavor, though they are running Sanford a close race at present. The Growers have fair pitching, at times spectacular, air fielding, and base running, but the hitting stands out most. They have three heavy hitters and practically every member of the club is considered a dangerous hitter with men on the paths.

The Orlando management is making a desperate effort to build up a new machine to replace the one that has been surprisingly weak. When the season opened that club was looked upon as the strongest in the circuit, but it has failed to deliver under the management of Bert Humphries, former Cub hurler. The team has done ragged work in all departments but has been extremely weak in the pitching department outside of Humphries. Young has failed to show anything thus far and Surrency has done little better. Keene failed to deliver with the Caps and was discarded, with Bartow picking him up. Then the big pitcher came back and beat the league leaders two Bartow's failure to make a better showing is a puzzle. They have a good club and as good a manager as there is in the league. The breaks have been against them, say the dopsters. It has been in some instances, as a large majority of their losses have been by once score. L'Hommedieu's proteges will bear watching in the last half of the season. It's safe to perdict they will finish out of the cellar.-Tampa Tribune.

Sanford made monkeys of the Tampa team in the game here Moriday and while it was rumor that some players on the Tampa team: did not try to play it seemed that it was simply their off day. They started off well in the first inning and scored two runs on the locals but when Sanford started in the secon'd half of the first they made Tampa look like thirty cents and from then on romped home with so many runs that it looked like an exhibition of "town ball". The umpire failed to show up and a player from the Tampa team and one from the Sanford team did the umpiring and did it well. The Orlando Sentinel states that the game will be forfeited because some man told Umpire Osteen that he could not umpire the game and he returned to Orlando on the train. Since no one but the president of the league can tell an umpire whether he can serve or not the action of the umpire in going back to Orlando without showing up on the ball field is inexcusable and has nothing to do with any of the Sanford officials or the Sanford team.

The Orlando Sentinel also states that the Sanford team will be fined $100 for interfering with the umpire but does not state just where any one interfered with him or stopped him from going to the ball park. It also states that Tampa will protest (Continued on Page 13)

As it is with all good things--they cannot last forever. This sale will soon be a thing of the past. Thousands of people have already attended and saved hundreds of dollars by so doing. The question now is; will you take time by the forelock and come before all of the best bargains are gonel. There is one thing certain--if you saw a $10 bill in the middle of the road you would pick it up -- then why not make up a list of what you are going to need for the next 12 months and come to this

You will realize that sale. buying goods at such prices is better by far than finding money in the road for there is a limit to what you FIND and there is absolutely no limit to what you can SAVE during this sale. To tell you in cold hard type what awaits you would be impossible---it is beyond the power of press, public or pulpit; we can only say that it will pay you to close up the house, postpone engagements, borrow money (if necessary) and come prepared to buy.

The above is a summarization of the business of the Sanford Truck Growers, Inc., at the close of business June 30th, 1919, as compiled by Mucklow & Ford, C. P. A., Jacksonville, Florida.

The Sanford Truck Growers, Inc., is strictly a farmers co-operative organization, incorporated and capitalized.

Number of Cars Out, No Report On June 30th, 1919.

No person but a farmer can become a stockholder, but any farmer who will ship his produce entirely through the organization is eligible to hold stock.

The organization is so lined up with the buying trade as to warrant a constant demand for all it's output. It recognizes no superior as a marketing agency.

The organization pays 10 per cent dividends on it's stock and refunds back to loyal shippers, according to the number of packages shipped, 50 per cent of the earned surplus.

The organization owns and maintains it's own warehouses and carries always a full supply of hampers and crates for the stockholders and because of cash buying, this material is placed with the grower at prices under prevailing market prices.

The organization has no debts hanging over it, has a clear title to everything bearing its name and it has an established credit throughout the country second to no other organization or concern of a similar type in Florida.

The organization is backed by one of the largest and most conservative banks in Sanford and in addition has access to all the money it may need at any time from sources outside of the county.

All this has been made possible by the loyalty, co-operation and appreciation of the 140 growers who constitute the organization.

The sun had long since disappeared beneath the horizon, but there still lingered in the west a faint tinge of red. Party Roberts putted her horse lovingly as she gazed toward the low spreading house in the distance.

"Dear old Joe, you've traveled a long way foday. We'll soon be home, though. See, Joe, there It is now, and Caroline has a light in every window, I suppose she thinks we're lost,"

The low, rambling house was not far away, faintly discernible in the dusk nestling among a few trees. It was homelike and cheery in appearance.

Patty Roberts was staying with a former school chum, Caroline Fenwick, who had come to Hayton after finishing her course. Patty had been a strenuous worker during the dark days of the war, dividing her time between Red Cross workrooms and hostess work at the various cantonments, and now that everything was bright again, she had come out to her chum's for a much needed rest.

As the falthful Joe picked his way slowly along the trail-for though the night was bright, poor Joe was tired and sleepy, Patty gazed across the month stretch of land. Her eyes were a lift wisitud as she watched a star swiftly shoot neross the sky leaving n shiny path behind. She sighed. Then as if giving music to her thoughts she softly begun to sing the night air, and as she ended she sighed again and patting Joe said," somewhat wistfully, "Well, Joe, I guess we'd better be hurrying or Caroline will have a searching party out for us." Gathering up the reins and turning down toward the lighted house in the distance, Joe's hoof beats were soon out of hearing.

Unknown to Patty she had an audience while she was singing. chum's house and he, too, was enjoying a cluster of stunted trees and bushes until he could fairly perceive the singer and her horse in the moonlight. Where had be heard that song before? As he listened the soft sounds of the night and the music of the girl's voice was changed to the sweet strains of a waltz and he was dancing again in the living over again that night when he had found the girl who had won his heart completely,

And as Patty's voice died away and he heard her speak to her horse, Bob's heart leaped, "It couldn't be !- but it does sound like her voice," he muttered. Then he, iqo, turned his horse and soon was far along the trail which led to his home, about two miles away. But, as he rode, his thoughts lingered about the girl of his dreams, "Just a dream, that's all," thought Bob bitterly. "There's no use hoping I'll ever see

Life had been rather dult and lonely in the large school for the first few months, but one night, at a dance given for the boys in the service, he had met a airl with whom he had fallen deeply and brevocably in love, but although he never saw her afterwards, the hope that he might some day meet her again ,brightened his days, that were ong and menotonous. As the days didn't give up hope until he had obtulned his discharge and was speed-

One afterwish, about a week later Caroline called to l'atty as she was coming out of the barn, where she had been saddling Joe, preparatory to going to the postoffice, "Patty, be sure and hurry home, because we're going to have somebody nice here for supper. HELEN'S RESCUE

By EMMA LIBBEY

Helen Ramsey presented a fair picure as she floated on the pond in her. little skiff. The morning sun shone brightly on her profusion of golden curls, and the brisk breeze blew her light dress around her in picturesque confusion. Fldo, glossy black of coat, curled at her feet, jumping up at times to bark shrilly at the low-flying swallows swooping along the surface

She was unusually quiet and a deep lolet shade that crept into her blue eyes showed that she was deep in thought. The summer was coming to close, and she was thinking of how dull it would seem in her city hime without Reggle Vandyke. For a year he had been constant in his attentions and she was well aware that only her own coquettish evasions had kept him from telling of his love in words. And now he was gone out of her life, sent nway by her in anger because he had cuffed the ears of Fido when that painperod canine had endeavored to plant an affectionate kiss on his face.

Letting the ours hang loosely in her hands her thoughts wandered back to the occurrence. He was brutal, to be sure, but then everyone did not love dogs. She sighed as the thought came to her that now she would never feel the pressure of Reggle's lips against the pressure of Reggle's lips against hers, and as she realized the boldness of her thoughts a flush of crimson crept over her fair face. She was aroused from her reverle by n sudden blast of cold air that careened capsize. A second gust tore the oars from her grasp and spun the boat diszily around. Fido, in an ecstasy of fear, crept into her lab and tried to kiss her face, but the thought was now repulsive to her, and as she pushed him into the bottom of the boat thoughts of Reggie came to her and she found herself longing for his strong arms and steady stroke to carry her to

The beautiful morning had vanished, sudden tempest having burst upon the pond while she had been drifting nlong. The gale increased in strength and the roll of thunder grew into terrific crashes, while vivid sheets of fire lightened up the black clouds. The torrents of driving rain had drenched Helen, and her pretty white frock with its flying ribbons clung in folds about her chilled limbs. Her wealth of hair curled more closely to her head and shone in the flashes of lightning like a hato above her pale and terrified face, The blinding sheets of rain had shut off all view of the shore and, despairing of rescue, Helen prayed, silently and awaited what seemed like certain death. Fido, hend uplifted, howled in terror, sending out spasms of sound that it seemed impossible could come from so small a body.

Suddenly from-behind the vell of rain came a faint "Halloo," and the color came back to Helen's pale face. Safety was at hand. She was certain of it, for that was Iteggie's voice. She gave no thought to how he chanced to be there in the storm, but was content, as she knew she was safe when he was near. Fldo barked and howled in alternation, and soon, dimly seen through the blinding rain, came a dory impelled by Reggle's strong arms. As he drew up to the tossing skiff he threw one arm around Helen and lifted her into the dory, clasping her for an instant to his bosom in an agony of delight. Fido, with a courage developed from his fear, scrambled into the boat, and both mald and dog huddled in a drenched heap in the bottom of the dory. It was a long and desperate struggle against the wind, and Reggle was almost exhausted when a score of willing hands grasped the boat at the shore and Helen fell into her father's

An hour later Helen and Reggle stood at a window in the Ramsey cottage with his arm around her waist and her fair head resting happily on his shoulder. "Reggie," she whispered, "I think I will give Fido away. I never want him to kiss me again." With a loving look at the fair face resting on his shoulder Reggie refused the sacfor his barking I would not have been clous freight." As he stooped to press a kiss on her upturned lips a glorious. rainbow shone out in the sky, showing the end of the storm and the beginning of a life of happiness to Helen and

Over the Hedge

By MILDRED WHITE

Copyright, 1919, by Western Newspaper Union.) Rosemary stood on her toes and tried to peep over the hedge. But as Rosemary was small and the hedge high, she did not succeed.

Rosemary had grown up with a propensity to see the other side of things, and "seeing" had sometimes led her into difficulty. It was because she had yearned to know whether Rob Fulsome could continue true to herself under alluring circumstances, that she had invited the fascinating Bess Wilder to visit at her home and be much in Rob's company. And when later, Bess had departed, it was evident that Rob's | night before last." affection had falled to withstand the test, for he had followed to the home of Bess as often and as soon as opportunity permitted. Rosemary promptly returning his gifts had funcled for a time that her own heart was broken, while her unsympathetic family, dryly suggested a visit to the home of Aunt Ellen. And it was in the village where Aunt Ellen resided that Rosemary came during one of her walks, upon the impassable hedge. Aunt Ellen, in her various recitals of village life, had merely mentioned the place as old Colonel Hunter's.

Rosemary, In the excitement of her quest, forgot the sorrow which had brought her hither, forgot, in fact, all rules of convention, and climbing high upon the garden gate, bent over low to push back its rusty fron bolt. Uninvited, she intended to enter the closed earden, and to acquaint herself with

As the bolt yielded, the gate swinging inward threatened to make her lose her balance; but nimbly Rosemary alighted—and at the very feet of the prostrate figure of a nian. For a moment she drew back fearfully, for the man resting upon blanket and pilpings. His face, too, was ghastly white beneath the bundage which bound his head.

The man's eyes gave her no welcome as she looked down upon him, and fretfully he asked:

"How did you get in?" Rosemary blushed guiltily.

"Over the gate," she answered. "My orders were that people should to barred out," said the young man. "I prefer to do my suffering-in si-

"You are certainly diverting," he "For five minutes I watched your burglarlike experiments with my gate lock, and your easy descent over thy 'no trespossing' sign only to find that you have come to give me not vice in the end, Well, when a fellow can't move his leg and his head is banged up generally, just what mode

It's just a mater of time before I'll be all right, the doctors say -as if 'time' isn't the hardest thing a helpless man can bear." Rosemary nodded understandingly. "I know," she said, "it's wanting to get on the other side of the wall that makes the time so long. And, while you've been talking I've been thinking that perhaps I could help you to make the time pass. I know of many original ways to entertain an in-

"I know, then." Rosemary said delightedly, "why I had to see the other side of this hedge." And then, seated upon the grass before him, she told the amused man of her old curious propensity and the sorrow to which it

"You never told me," she accused, "that the town's war hero-who had won that much-talked-of medallives in the mysterious Hunter place. I should love to have met him."

"Meeting him," Aunt Ellen replied, "Is out of the question. Young Richand Hunter since his return refuses to see his nearest friends; Colonel Hunter is quite distressed about it. Even the nurse whom they sent out from town falls to arouse Richard from his morbid state. But, my, dear-" Aunt Ellen broke off abruptly. "What has happened to your white skirt? It is dirt and green stains from top to bem." Rosemary smiled. "I-had to climb a fence," she said guile essly.

Don't a Man Who Wants to Buy Your Fruit Crop Ever Tell You Any Good News About the Market?

Really it is r. the remarkable the amount of bad news which gets into circulation just about the time buyers are getting ready to contract for oranges and grapefruit. Here are some of the little items which are beginning just now to be talked:

> Poor sizes; it is rather remarkable how many groves have such a large proportion of poor tizes, according to these rumors.

> Also, it is equally remarkable how the entire yield sometimes threatens to be an "off-size" crop, if the rumors are right.

> Then there is the big crop, of course. The threat of over-production is always with us to judge by the rumors that are talked.

Scarcity of labor is another item of bad news which helps explain why the buyers can't hope to pay better prices.

Then, there are transportation difficulties, too. Sometimes the outlook for getting fruit to the markets is pretty blue.

These are just a few of the items of bad news. They are the cause for the question previously asked, and which we repeats Does the man who wants to buy your fruit crop ever tell you any good news about the market? Mr. Secord was born in Niagra county, N. Y. August 10th, 1839 and he would have been eighty years old had he lived until Sunday.

The deceased has had a most remarkable life. His father was killed by the Indians in Northern Michigan and at the tender age of six he was left an orphan and without a home. At fourteen he engaged in farming and shortly after drove a big herd of cattle into California, before he was fifteen. From then on failures and successes marked his life until the Civil War when in '62 he enlisted under the Star and Stripes being in active service for three years and four months. Almost shot to pieces in various engagements and carrying a bullet in his knee the rest of his life he was made a Con .misary Sergeant in '64. He was also made prisoner by the opposing forses several times but always escaping.

On October 8th, 1885 he married Miss Mary McCord and came to Sanford, where they have resided ever since.

Mr. Secord's health has been failing for several years and for a number of weeks it was known that his days were numbered.

The funeral services were held at the Congregational church at six o'clock Dednesday afternoon, R.v. G. B. Waldron and Dr. Geo. Hyman officating. Mr. T. J. Miller person-. nally had charge of the funeral arrangements. Interment at Lake View Cemetery.

Solemnly, and beautiful on the still evening air "tars" were sounded by Mrs. Robert Herndon. Honorary pall-bearers were W. H.

Active pall-bearers were J. H. Ferguson, F. R. Kent, Geo. Randall Henry Nickel, R. A. Terhuen and T. C. Carlson. The deceased is survived by his

Pure Food

Our pure food laws have three purposes:

- 1. To prevent the use of unwholesome material.
- 2. To prevent fraudulent substitution.

3. To inform the purchaser what she is buying.

Some products are so well known to the housewife that from the class name under which they are sold she can tell the ingredients contained therein. With others, such as baking powder, all the ingredients are named on the label, and as a result the most healthful. economical and desirable kind can be selected.

There is one class of mixtures, however. which are still bought blindly without knowledge of the ingredients. These are the socalled Self-Rising Flours. 'Read the label on any package of self-rising flour and there is never found either the statement, "This package contains the following ingredients and none other," or any equivalent statement. One cannot determine from the label either the quality of the flour or the nature of the other ingredients mixed therewith.

In the selection of baking powder, the housewife is very particular; but in self-rising flour she takes whatever ingredients are handed her without, asking questions and in an equal state of ignorance with the dealer who is selling to her, as to what these ingredients are.

It has been admitted by the manufacturers of acid phosphate that the phosphate used in self-rising flour frequently contains 25 per cent or over of calcium sulphate (gypsum). Physicians know the objections to introducing such an amount of unnecessary inedible material into the

The physician can do much toward the enactment of laws that will forbid the use of such material in the manufacture of self-rising flour and that will require a statement on self-rising flour of all the ingredients contained

Such laws will protect the health and the pocketbook.

Find Indian Stone Celts.

In an article on Indian stone celts it the Wisconsin Archeologist, Charles E. Brown, chief of the state historical museum, describes the various classes of celts, or stone hatchets, and in what Wisconsin localities many of them have been found. Jefferson county has been the source of many celts, and other counties in which they have been found are Dane, Calumet, Brown, Waupnen, Walworth, Winnebago, Waukesha and Washington.

Our War With Spain.

On the 18th of April, 1808, the United States senate and the house of representatives declared jointly that the Cubans "are and of a right ought to be free find independent" and empowered President McKinley to use the land and naval forces of the United States to their utmost capacity to carry the resolution into effect. This resolution constituted our declaration of war against Spain.

Death Valley.

Death valley is a narrow valley between the Panamint and Funeral inountains in California. It is traversed by the Amargara river, which is usually a dry channel, though probably it was formerly full of water. The level of the valley is covered with sait, supposed to have been brought by the torrents from the surrounding desert and left on the evaporation of the water. Death valley In considered to be the hottest and driest place in the United States. A temperature of 122 degrees has been

Simon's Worldbeater Pepper

Has Made Good in Florida and Texas for the Past Four Years.

A prominent grower of Sanford, Florida, whose name we can furnish on application, purchased 20 pounds of our Worldbeater Pepper in December 1918. He reports that many of the plants bore as high as 9 marketable peppers the first picking. The average was 4 pepper per plant for the entire acresge the first picking, or a total of 400 crates per acre, which were marketed at $4.00 per crate. We cannot recomend too highly our Worldbeater Pepper to all southern growers who desire to grow a money-making crop.
