Celery Markets

Bureau of Agricultural Economics cooperating with the Florida State Bureau of Markets. — L. E. Corbin, Local Representative

Forty three cars of celery were shipped from Sanford Saturday, and 12 from the Manatee Section, making a total for Florida 55 cars. Thirty two cars were shipped from the southern District of California giving a U. S. total of 85. Six cars went out from California on Sunday.

The cars from Sanford were billed to the following points: 13 Waveros, 11 Polomac Yards, 5 Chicago, 2 each to Cincinnati, Newark, New York, and St. Louis, and 1 each to Canton, Philadelphia, and Williamsport.

The Sanford L. A. B. market held firm to the end of the week at $1.75 per crate for 1-6 dozens in carload lots. Some stock of just fair quality sold as low as $1.50. The usual discounts were made for 5's and 10's.

Telegraphic from Philadelphia today indicates that the week is stringing off rather slow for celery on that market. Supplies are liberal, demand slow, and market dull. Florida 10-inch crates in the rough and washed, 4-6 dozens are selling at $2.25-2.50, 8's mostly $2.00-2.25, and 10's as low as $1.50.

BIBLE VERSE FOR TODAY

CONTENTMENT WITH GOOD: Better is a little with the fear of the Lord than great treasure and trouble therewith. - Proverbs 16:16

PRAYER: - O, Lord, our hearts will never rest in peace until they find themselves in Thee.

LOST CITY

We shall build it again though it be in ruins

And the ramparts fall where the mosa is

And the drawbridge no horseman crosses

Lets the dusk and the wind and the waves in

We shall build it with hills and with hollows

And small slopes where vineyards are growing

And a wall that crumbles in falling

And a river nobody follows

Through the gateways we'll see to the center

Where fountains are playing, and flowers

Run a flame up the twilight towers

Of the city we never shall enter

And the wind will die down in the streamers

And the spires will fall with the nightfall

But a door will open - a light fall on a street that is peopled with dreamers

Who Built The Roads?

We have noticed several contemporary editors recently trying to give the impression that it is not reasonable for two men to take credit for the present system of good roads which we now find in this state. In other words to these political observers it does not seem possible that Fons Hathaway and John W. Martin can both be running for office with the same plank. "I built the good roads" in each platform.

When a man decides to build a house, he first arranges for the financing. He probably consults a loan agent. Then he sees the architect who draws the plans. He then obtains a contractor who has charge of the actual work and proceeds along the lines laid out by the architect. Carpenters saw the boards and nail them together. Masons lay the foundations, build the sidewalks, and do whatever other cement work is called for. Plasterers plaster and tilers toll. Now who built the house?

As the Ocala Banner says: "Hon. John W. Martin Governor of the state of Florida and a candidate for the United States Senate, like good Cock Robin, says with bow and arrow, "I built the good roads."

"Hon. Fons A. Hathaway, chairman of the State Road Department and candidate for governor of the State of Florida, like good Cock Robin says with bow and arrow "I built the good roads."

"The owners of the lime pits say we furnished the bow and arrow, so like Cock Robin we built the good roads."

"The transportation companies say we furnished the bow and arrow so like good Cock Robin we built the good roads."

"The horny handed sons of toil say not with bow and arrow, but with pick and spade, unlike good Cock Robin, "we built the good roads."

"The automobile owner and taxpayers, pondering over their tax receipts say they built the good roads."

And the funny part of it is that they are all right. Without the taxpayers' willingness to foot the bill, nothing could have been done. Without a wise appointment to the chairmanship of the State Road Department, funds might have been misappropriated, or injudiciously spent. Without lime, rock, transportation companies and laborers, of course we could have no roads.

They all deserve credit for the roads we have.

Bookkeepers Need Exercise

How long do you expect to live? The average American, according to statistics recently compiled by the American Medical Association, gives up the struggle for existence after forty-seven years of effort. Yet it is very safe to say that very few younger men would not expect to be in the prime of life at that time.

A lot depends, of course, upon your form of occupation. If you are a steel worker, climbing lofty girders, or a bootlegger dodging officers' bullets, you need not worry about the frailties of old age. On the other hand strange as it may seem, American bookkeepers average the shortest length of life with only thirty-six and one half years in which to live.

Possibly this is attributable to the lack of exercise which the average bookkeeper obtains. Or possibly it may be because of a general lack of knowledge of how to take care of one's self properly. Whatever may be the reason, the fact remains. And physicians, probably because they do know how to get the most out of healthful conditions, live, on an average, sixty-two years.

Railroad trainmen come next to bookkeepers with an average life of 37.4 years. Others include: plumbers, 39 years; compositors, 40.2; chauffeurs, 42.4; machinists, 43.9; longshoremen, iron molders, 48; painters, 48.5; bakers, 50.6; coal miners, 51.3; laborers, 52.8; masons, 55; blacksmiths, 55.4; and farmers, 58.5.

We hope these statistics will not cause local bookkeepers to worry unduly. The fact that other bookkeepers die young is no reason why you, a particular bookkeeper, should. When we observe that farmers, blacksmiths, and laborers live the longest, the only obvious advice to bookkeepers is, take more exercise.

BAUMES LAWS REDUCING CRIME

FLORIDA TIMES-UNION

New York has in effect what are known as the Baumes laws, the name being that of the author of the bills that were presented by a member of the legislature of that state and by that body enacted into law. The police commissioner of New York City has just completed a compilation of the figures relative to crime in that city during the year 1927. These figures show a remarkable decrease in the number of crimes committed, the Baumes laws being given credit for a large share in crime reduction.

The official record made up by New York's police commissioner shows that in the year just ended murders decreased 55 per cent, as compared with 1926. Murders of 289 the year previous. Assault and robbery cases total 951, in comparison with 1,173. There was a decrease of 69 per cent in hold-ups, involving more than $10,000, and 82 per cent in those between $1,000 and $10,000. Payroll holdups decreased 64 per cent. In only one class of crimes was there an increase, burglaries advancing from 3,371 in 1926 to 3,380 in 1927, and this increase of nine was attributed to sneak thieves engaged in daylight robberies.

This is a showing that ought to be and probably is of very considerable interest to citizens everywhere, and to none more than to those in the various states in which now are operative laws that are patterned after the Baumes laws. Florida is one of the states that, through the action of the last legislature, has a law similar in many respects to the Baumes laws that are said to be producing such eminently satisfactory results in New York.

These laws in New York, increased the penalties for various classes of crimes, and particularly for repeated violations of and convictions under certain laws, so that confirmed criminals hesitate now to reach the limit, and be liable to life imprisonment. Under the Baumes laws, also, trial procedure was simplified in some instances, making evasion of penalties for law violations more difficult. In other words, "teeth" and very sharp ones, at that, were put into the law. Criminals soon found this out, although at first not showing any particular concern about the "new enactments" that were brought to bear in their operations. But, evidently, criminals operated in New York, have learned to their sorrow that the Baumes laws are enforceable, and they, the professional criminals, are showing down in their crime careers. This is the only interpretation that can be placed on the decrease of serious crimes, as officially reported.

But efficiently and effectively as the Baumes laws appear to be working, other reforms still are necessary to make the administration of justice still more efficient and still more effective. Too many opportunities still exist whereby criminals may evade punishment or, at least, delay proceedings under which the law is administered. There is the evil of professional bondsmen, for instance, that needs to be eliminated if criminals are to be deprived of one of their chief means for escaping the law's penalties.

For some time past a judicial investigation of bail giving in Philadelphia has been going on, with the result that up to this time some twenty professional bail-goers and cunning jurists-trusted have been arrested and held in heavy substantial bail for trial, and the investigation is not yet complete.

Committees are at work in various places, seeking to discover additional ways and means for effectually checking the prevalent bail-giving tendency. In this work, be it said with appreciation, many members of the legal profession are giving their aid, to the end that more practical laws may be enacted and more of efficiency put into procedure by which laws are to be enforced.

The POLICY of PROGRESS... A STATEMENT by GENERAL MOTORS

It is the policy of General Motors to maintain continuous improvement, in every one of its car divisions, with no interruption in production. This means that you enjoy the benefits of new engineering developments promptly - just as soon as they have been thoroughly tested on the 1215-acre Proving Ground.

It means that you can now order the new Chevrolet, Pontiac, Oldsmobile, Oakland, Buick, LaSalle, Cadillac, or GMC Truck, and receive immediate delivery.

Behind this policy of continuous improvement is an organization so widespread and resourceful that it can make and sell quality automobiles more economically than any automobile manufacturer in the world.

In the north and south it logs and mills its own lumber. In the east it makes its own ball bearings and radiators. In the middle west it produces its own plate glass. Its plants are busy in 33 important American cities.

From almost 5,000 suppliers, its materials are obtained - steel by the hundreds of thousands of tons - wire by the tens of thousands of miles - upholstery by the acres - nuts, bolts and washers by the millions. Its sales and service take place through 33,000 dealers. More than 275,000 families look directly to General Motors for their livelihood - almost a million and a half men, women and children in every community in the land.

Meaning so much to so many, General Motors has felt a supreme obligation to look ahead. Are there methods by which General Motors cars can be better built to better serve? Are there new ideas which can increase the utility and pleasure and safety of motoring? Are there new materials which can add to owner satisfaction?

Such are the questions that all General Motors engineers have always asked. The answers have made it possible, year after year, to offer an increasing measure of beauty in design, modern performance, riding comfort and distinct style. Thus in every price class, from Cadillac to Chevrolet, purchasers are constantly benefiting from the General Motors policy of progress.
