Last year, lawmakers directed Gov. Lawton Chiles and HRS Secretary H. James Towey to find ways to reduce their spending by 25 percent. The cuts would reach nearly $1 billion to meet the goal, according to a letter sent to district health officials from Towey last week

The proposed statewide cuts include climinal tion of 8,000 employees, primary care for residents ineligible for Medicaid or private insurance, elients parents and several programs. including the "Part II" early intervention services for young children with birth defects.

Lawmakers heard from Seminole County agency officials and a parent concerned the proposed cuts would do away with worthwhile programs.

Teen araches car, commits suici

PENSACOLA - An Alabama teen-ager put a rifle to his mouth and apparently committed suicide after crashing the car of a friend's sister during a night of drinking and driving.

Charles Wall, 18, a construction worker from Atmore, Ala., was behind the wheel after Larry Paul, 18, who had borrowed the car from his sister, decided he was too drunk to continue driving, said Escambia County, sheriff's investigator Tom Perry.

Two other friends were passengers. The car went out of control, flipped and crashed into some trees on a rural road in the Florida Panhandle late Saturday, Perry said.

The four young men suffered minor injuries but the car was estroyed. Paul told his friends they needed to help him pay for the damage, Perry said.

The others then noticed Wall behind the car with a .22 caliber rifle pointed toward his head.

"He said, 'I'll solve this problem,' and pulled the trigger," said sheriff's Lt. Ron McNesby.

UWF president has new outlook

PENSACOLA - University of West Florida President Morris Marx says his unsuccessful bid for the same position at Clemson University has given him a fresh outlook on his job.
He says it will cause him to resume his duties at West Florida with a new perspective although he doesn't plan major changes.

"One of the things that's always true when you take time to interview at another university is, boy, you learn a lot," Marx said. "You come back with the ability to be more objective about the things you're doing."

Marx was a finalist for the Clemson presidency, but the South Carolina university's board of trustees Friday hired University of Northern Iowa President Constantine Curris.

In addition to Clemson, Marx was a candidate for the presidency at Florida State University in 1993 and two years before that had been a finalist at Auburn University.

Teach or plan? Blueprint 2000 cuts into classroom time

TALLAHASSEE - Florida's plan to take power away from the Department of Educa-tion and give it to local teachers and parents is giving some teachers a headache.

The goal may mean more room for innovation, but some teachers complain the excess work is cutting into classroom time.

"This is something that's been brought up at every meeting we've had this year, that Blueprint 2000 is out of control," said Steve Fischer of the Hillsborough teachers' union. "There's no time to do it and there's no money to do tt."

The Blueprint 2000 decentralization plan lets schools request waivers of present state and school district policies, in an effort to encourage innovative thinking.

But of $7 waiver requests sent to Taliahassee this year, nearly one quarter have been for permission to release students early several times a year so teachers can work on Blueprint planning.

In Charlotte County, schools will have early dismissal once a month. In Chalcoss County, schools can release students an hour and 16 minutes early once a week. Leon County has asked to send students home early nine days a year.

Hillsborough County schools haven't solted extra early release days, but teachers are feeling the pinch. Fischer said.

Nearly every Hillsborough County teacher has a daily planning period for tasks such as making lesson plans, meeting with parents and grading papers.

There are also nine half-day planning days sprinkled through Hillsborough's school calendar, intended for teacher training in new programs or equipment.

At the county's Gaither High School, the 10 teachers who are part of the school's improvement team skip the half-days of training to meet with parents and business leaders for Blueprint 9000 planning. Math teacher and team leader Jon Suits said that's not enough time.

Teams must do extensive research to back their improvement plans and waiver requests. And now Suits is having to gather information on how well this year's plan is working — the accountability portion of the legislation. "Those 10 teachers just miss out," he said. "It's just one more load on top of this heavily burdened beast. Time is a problem. It's probably one of the biggest problems of the improvement team."

Mary Ann Fullerton, a Gaither parent and a member of the improvement team, said a parent with free time for such activities can meet the time demands, but agreed teachers are in a bind.

"They're interested in it and want to do it. but I really feel for them, they have so much put on them," she said. "If they're on an improvement team or involved in athletics or anything, it's a 20-hour-a-day job.

Federal and state grants, private donations and pledges by taxpayers have netted $41 million to acquire the 40 percent of the beachfront needed to complete the Archie Carr National Wildlife Refuge. "This is important because this 20-mile stretch is the most significant nesting beach in the world for loggerheads," said Dorn Whitmore, manager of the Merritt Island Wildlife Refuge at the Kennedy Space Center. Loggerheads nest in the greatest numbers on Florida's cast coast starting in northern Palm Beach County. A quarter of all nests are in the 20-mile Archie Carr Refuge, Whitmore

An estimated 175,000 out of nearly 16,000 nests along that stretch last summer. Whitmore said. But only about one in 10,000 hatchlings live to maturity.

As many as 35 percent — about 1,000 — of the rarer green sea turtles nest on the Archie Carr beaches, as well.

The refuge spans northern Indian River and southern Brevard counties and includes the Sebastian Inlet State Recreation Area.

The price so far is just under $2,100 a foot for 3.7 miles of undeveloped beach. About aix miles of undeveloped beach remain to be purchased. Whitmore said.

The refuge, established in 1969, has been able to acquire and preserve remote areas with donations.

Near-home policy fills correctional th murderere

By Associated Press

WEST PALM BEACH - A Florida policy of housing inmates near their families brought three of the five killers who escaped Glades Correctional Institution to the dormitory-style prison in rural Palm Beach County.

The unwritten policy has helped populate Glades Correctional with more murderers than any other of the 15 similarly sized prisons in the state, officials say.

Some Florida legislators are now questioning the wisdom of housing murderers in certain prisons just to make family visits more convenient.

"I feel the public would think it's outrageous if Glades held a disproportionate number of murderers because of this poli-cy," said Rep. Robert Sindler, the Apopka Democrat who is chairman of the House Corrections Committee.

"It's probably a humane policy." said Rep. Luis Rojas, R-Hialeah, a member of the committee. "But I think it's a policy that needs to be re-examined."

Glades housed 386 inmates serving sentences for murder and manalaughter in November. according to profiles of state prisons compiled by the Department of Corrections.

That's 100 more than the next highest number of killers in prisons of Glades's class - 284 at Avon Park Correctional In-stitute in Highlands County west of Okeechobee County.

Glades and 14 other prisons in the state are classified as Level 6B Close Custody facilities capable of housing all inmates except those serving a death sentence, needing psychological treatment or requiring single-cell quarters because they pose an escape risk or a danger to other inmates and guards.

Inmates convicted of murder and manslaughter constitute nearly a third of Glades' population. Only Dade Correctional Institution has a higher conpercent. The Dade facility houses 500 fewer inmates than allowing inmates to earn the right to be imprisoned near their hometowns probably accounts for the large number of murderers held at the Glades prison. Corrections Chief of Admission and Release Bobbie Glover said.

"Dade and Broward counties are the biggest contributors to the system." she said. Nearly 60 percent of Glades's inmates were convicted of crimes in Broward and Dade counties, according to the prison profiles. Only 13.5 percent of its inmates are from Palm Beach

Glades Assistant Superintendent John Townsend agrees that the facility houses a dis-proportionate number of inmates convicted of violent crimes because of the visitation policy. In the aftermath of the recent escape, Glades asked the state to transfer a portion of those inmates to other facilities. he said. The request was denied.

"Tallahassee told us that transferring inmates carte blanche was not the way to handle this." Townsend said. Prison administrators argue that the system, which houses 56,000 inmates, is understaffed and under-financed.

All of the five murderers who successfully escaped Glades on Jan. 2 had resided at one time in Dade County.

Three had been placed in Glades after applying for "closer to home consideration." Those inmates were: Florencio Alvarez. 39. Jesus Martinez, 44. and Juan Fleitas, 30. Fleitas is the only one of the escapees still

The theory is that family visits reduce inmate stress, making prisons more manageable. Moving inmates into prisons closer to their homes also reduces the hardships of their families, Glover said.

Although the policy has given Glades a heavy concentration of inmates who committed violent crimes, it doesn't mean the facility is dealing with an abundance of violent inmates, Townsend said.

"We're not housing any in-mates we shouldn't be housing. They all fit the criteria of a Level 6B institution." he said.

British tourist murder Prosecutors ready to try second youth

MONTICELLO - After the first trial in the fatal shooting of a vacationing British mechanical engineer ended without a jury verdict. Florida prosecutors are ready to try again.

They say 16-year-old Aundra Akins fired the shot that killed Gary Colley during a bungled robbery at an interstate rest stop, a slaying which cast shadow on Florida's reputation as an international vacation spot.

Akine is one of four youths charged in the death of Colley on Sept. 14, 1993. Jury selection for his trial was set to begin today.

The first trial of 18-year-old John "Billy Joe" Crumitie ended in a hung jury in November. He was scheduled to be retried in March.

All the youths were charged with first-degree murder and attempted first-degree murder. Two of the teenagers have pleaded to lesser charges.

Prosecutors say Akins and Crumitie startled Colley. 34, and his longtime companion, Margaret Jagger, while the couple dozed in a rental car during a drive from New Orleans to South Florids. drive from New Orleans to South Florida.

When Colley tried to back up the car to escape, both teen-agers opened fire. hitting Colley in the neck and wounding Jagger, 36, prosecutors say. Akins is accused of firing the fatal shot.

The murder was the ninth of a foreigner in a single year and attracted worldwide news coverage, battered Florida tourism and spurred lawmakers to pass tough juvenile justice reforms. The state also responded by posting armed guards at all interstate rest areas.

If convicted, Akina, who was 14 when he was charged, would face life behind bars. Florida law prohibits the death penalty for anyone under age 16.

Defense attorneys say the prosecution's case is weak. The state hasn't recovered the guns and has little physical evidence linking the suspects to the crime.

One of the most crucial pieces of evidence against Akins will be the eyewitness testimony of Jagger, who identified the youth in a live police lineup

Shortly after the killing, Jagger failed to pick Akins or Crumitie from police photos. In a live lineup about nine months later, she still couldn't identify Crumitie but she picked Akins, who stands 6 foot 3 and weighs 193 pounds.

Akins' lawyer, Mark Olive, is contesting her eyewitness identification, saying she collected television and newspaper accounts of the murder showing pictures of the suspects before she identified Akins in the lineup.

Olive has saked Circuit Judge P.E. Steinmeyer to prohibit Jagger from identifying Akins in court but the judge hasn't ruled on the request.

Prosecutors contend the jury ought to decide whether Jagger is telling the truth.

One of the youths who pleaded to lesser charges is expected to testify against Akina. Deron Spear, 18, pleaded guilty to conspiracy to commit armed robbery and accessory after the fact. Spear, who says he drove the getaway car the night of the killing, faces up to 10 years in prison under his plea bargain. He also testified in Crumitie's trial.

Spear's half-brother, 14-year-old Cedrick Green, pleaded no contest to lesser charges. He was sentenced last month to community control, placed on a curiew and ordered to perform 50 hours of community service.

Brenda Armitage, Colley's mother, was making her first abroad to attend the trial in the small town of Monticello.

"I sometimes still don't believe it's actually happened," she told a radio station in her hometown of Bradford. England last week. "I think to see where it happened, it might sort of help to come to terms with it more."

MIAMI - Crew and passengers of a 1991 flight are suing the federal government, saying they were tortured during a 15-day incarceration in Honduras because the U.S. government botched a drug sting.

The lawsuit, filed in federal court here, said Honduran jailers relentlessly interrogated the group, slipping leather hoods over their heads, forcing them to their knees, beating them with rubber hoses and jolting them with electrical wires.

Support public broadcasting

Congress is debating whether to cut federal funding for public broadcasting stations. It wouldn't be a gradual reduction in funds to allow for stations to restructure. It would be immediate and no doubt, cause serious problems in that industry, including damage to our local WMFE-TV. Channel 24.

The amount which could be lost would be 17 percent of the annual budget. The rest of the financing comes from private and business donations.

Yet this 17 percent is crucial as it would be if anyone suddenly lost 17 percent of a weekly

The money is used to obtain quality programming, and quality telecasting and/or broadcasting. To say that any one program type is more important than any other is not possible. Different people have different preferences. They may like some programming and not care about others.

WMFE-TV offers such programs as the McLaughlin Group, Firing Line, Newton's Apple, This Old House, New Yankee Workshop, Sesame Street, Lambchop, Mister Roger's Neighborhood, major musical per-formances, and yes, one of the most famous personalities of modern time, Barney.

Public broadcasting has a multi-purpose. It is to educate, inform, enlighten, teach people of all age levels about family and personal values, and give us a look at parts of the world we may not otherwise see.

For WMFE, and undoubtedly all other public broadcas complete cut of federal support funds will bring about many changes. It could shorten the overall broadcast day, increase fundraising on the air, eliminate some types of programs, offer fewer dollars which could be invested in national programming, and many other changes.

Some smaller public stations may even be forced off the air completely.

WMFE-TV has been with us for over 30 years. Over 300 local businesses directly support the station by underwriting programs and offering in-kind services. It has an estimated 470,000 households watching each

In addition to the television station, the same elimination of federal funding will also effect 90.7 WMFE-FM with a weekly audience of over 170,000 listeners.

We have many channels to watch these days, especially for people who have cable or satellite dishes. There are many shopping channels, religious channels, sports channels, and movie channels.

As we see it, however, only our public channels are trying to provide us with educational opportunities.

The current per-capita federal investment by Americans is $1.09. Locally less than two-tenths of one cent, per year, per person. is taken from tax money to pay for our own WMFE-TV, and less than four one-hundredtha of one cent to support 90.7 radio.

Not everyone believes the government should help pay for public broadcasting. regardless of how small the help is for each individual station. They have that right to speak their minds.

We are of the opinion, however, that a majority of people want to continue having public broadcasting stay where it is.

With this in mind, we urge citizens to write to their U.S. congressmen and express their opinions. Hopefully, they will listen to the people, if enough take the time to write.

This urging is not only for our local citizens. Visitors, from all across the nation who may be in Central Florida, should also write. They stand just as much a chance as we do to have public broadcasting diluted in their home

Write today. Response time is limited. Save public broadcasting, and yes, save Barney.

Job woes: The big, bad BA dilemma

Lately there has been much hand-wringing over the plight of Generation X. Having grown up in the era of Vietnam, Nixon and Whip Inflation Now buttons, they are now discovering that adult life is even worse than they imagined. This generation has been particularly celebrated for its failures in the job market, and indeed these troubles are tangible.

"It's real clear that for the '90s, people may find work but not work they're happy with," a University of Delaware career counselor told The New York Times. The counselor, Edgar Townsend, was referring to the fact that while Fortune 500 companies like DuPont are no longer recruiting college grads, many chain keep her job. Months of negotiations ensue. And though the ILGWU manages to save 800 jobs. it falls to save 450.

Hers is one of the 450. This is what happened last summer in Wilkes-Barre. And though the damage could have been much worse, things look bleak for the hundreds of women — who comprised 90 percent of Leslie Fay's work force — who lost their jobs. "Wilkes-Barre is an area that's been in decline for a long time." says Susan Cowell of the ILGWU. "It used to be a major center of apparel manufacturing, but they've seen tens of thousands of jobs go off-shore."

It's easy to see why. Though the $7.80 average wage that the Leslie Fay workers were paid is modest - even low, by American standards it's astronomical when compared to the wages commanded by workers in Guatemala and Honduras - roughly 40 cents an hour.

Conventional wisdom says that displaced factory workers will enter the service sector. albeit at a substantially lower wage. Since the retail trade is picking up, and since women have traditionally comprised the majority of retail employees, it's logical to assume that our former Leslie Fay employee will head straight for the local mail.

Big government thrives abroad

Reinventing government (Rigo) is all the rage in 1995 Washington, and not just in the immediate vicinity of Vice President Gore. Everybody is for it, Republicans and Democrats, Teddy Kennedy and Newt Gingrich, But in this, as in so many other matters, deeds do not automatically match words. The bitterly resisted suggestion that America's swollen foreign policy apparatus be put through the Rigo wringer is a case in point.

Much of the coverage of the issue by the capital press corps has focused on the sexy. though inherently superficial, questions of perks and personalities. Reading the Washington Post, you get the impression the disagreement is nothing more elevated than a candbox squabble among adult prima donnas. There is at least some excuse for that interpretation. Since news about this quietly vicious bureaucratic war has not managed to pierce the beltway curtain and make it out into the country, there has been little public pretense about speaking for the public interest. Everyone here in Washington "knows" that what's at stake is either a power grab or defense of turf.

As is so often the case, what Washington "knows" is wrong. It would be in the national interest to streamline the formulation and interest to streamline the formulation and implementation of foreign policy in all its aspects. Presently, thanks to the pressure cooker excesses of the Cold War, what we have is an overlapping, frequently contradictory and well-nigh chaotic constellation of duelling flefdoms. They all claim to be singing the same score, but they frequently sound like Beturday night drunks around an untuned plano.

A look at the numbers explains why. The following agencies and departments are among following agencies and departments are among those that have overseas representation and play a direct or indirect role in America's foreign affairs: the Department of State: the Department of Defense; the separate branches of the uniformed military services; the Departments of Agriculture, Labor and Commerce, the Special Trade Representative; the United States Information Agency: the Agency for International Development: the Central Intelligence Agency: the Arma Control and Disarmament Agency: the National Security Adviser and the National Security Council staff: the Justice Department: the Federal Bureau of Investigation: the Drug Enforcement Agency, and the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Some of our larger embassies are almost exact replicas in miniature of Washington itself. At the apex is the ambassador who, like the accretary of State, is in nominal control of American interests and the official American presence. Then, working away on parallel and not always compatible tracks, there are two. three or more other federal outposts, often with separate, so-called back-channel links to Washington and invariably with separate links to the media as well. It's called a "country team." It's more like a free-for-all.

This approach did not actually make any sense during the Cold War, but each little castle of influence sustained itself in the name of the crusade against communism. What were a hydra-headed foreign policy, billions of dollars in excessive spending and inemcient redundancy when measured against the nation's survival?

But no nation threatens America's survival or is even more than a passing annoyance, relatively speaking, in the last decade of the 20th century. What was tolerable, if not sensible, in the 1970s is neither in the 1990s.

Which brings us back to the recent tentative proposal that the Arma Control and Disarmament Agency, USIA and the Agency for International Development he folded into the State Department. It is a minimalist rather than a radical suggestion, but it has been greeted in the affected agencies like the end of the world. To hear their response, you might believe that the State Department is opposed to public diplomacy, foreign assistance and arms control - all of which at one time or another have been equarely in its line of command.

Reinventing

government (Rigo) is all the rage in 1996 Washington.

That is where they should be now. The simple flacal fact of life is that we can no longer afford so many separate entities doing their work which properly belongs to the foreign service. It is as though the Commerce. Agriculture and Labor departments all maintained separate military units on the theory that national defense is every citizen's duty, or that the Interior Department had its own space program because of the possibility of park development on the moon. Arms control negotiations are properly a matter for diplomats: virtually all of USIA's areas of activity. from news and information to exchange programs abroad, require input and guidance from the State Department already: foreign aid is and should be a direct tool of foreign policy.

The windy tempest that has been stirred up in this small teapot is indicative of the difficulties that face honest restructuring of bureaucratic enterprises.

Calling home costs plenty

WASHINGTON - The next time Rep. Bill Richardson, D-N.M., conducts high-stakes diplomacy with a nuclear nation, he should call Secretary of State Warren Christopher collect.

In a strange twist to last month's downing of a U.S. Army helicopter, we've learned that North Korea refused to let Richardson cross the Demilitarized Zone with the remains of Chief Warrant Officer David Hilemon until he paid his telephone bill: $10,000 in calls to Christopher and other officials over the course of five days.

More astounding than the price, according to American officials, was the fact that North Kores demanded... payment... in cash. U.S. military and State Depart. ment officials sathered the money from government funds and paid the bill at the DMZ as Richardson crossed the border into South Koreawith

Hilemon's casket. "There was a cash transaction at the border between the U.S. and North Korea to pay Richardson's phone bill." one payment in cash knowledgeable American official confirmed. "You can't give the North Koreans a check or a credit card."

The money was exchanged during a solemn ceremony at the border that included a prayer, a moment of silence and six North Korean soldiers handing Hilemon's remains over to a United Nations honor guard.

Although North Korea remains staunchly Communist, they showed a decidedly capitalistic streak when it came to the phone bill. "They were very firm about the bill being paid," one source told us. "But they weren't being hostile. They just needed the currency.

Richardson's bill was uncommonly high because trade restrictions prohibit American companies from conducting business in North Korea. That means there are no direct telecommunications links between the two nations. The nuclear framework agreement signed last October, however, will open phone links by the end of this month.

A State Department official told us Richardson was able to reach Christopher by calling Canada, which patched him through to Washington. The astronomical rates. however, drove the bill up to $10,000 — nearly eight times North Korea's per-capita yearly income.

The payment to Pyongyang was a small price to pay for Richardson's second straight successful foreign foray. Last year, he traveled to Haiti to meet with Haitian dictator Raoul Cedras months before President Clinton sent down a delegation led by Jimmy Carter to avoid war. This time, Richardson turned a coincidence into a coup: He just happened to be in North Korea to discuss the nuclear agreement when the American helicopter was shot down.

When news of the helicopter downing broke, Richardson sprung into action as Christopher's official emissary. Richardson helped secure the release of Hilemon's co-pilot, Bobby Hall, who had been held as a prisoner. Hall says he "would have been tortured, beaten and maybe even starved" had Richardson not been in North Korea.

"Richardson's work was very important," a State Department official told us. "He wouldn't have had to call us if he had taken his normal trip. But because of the situation, Richardson was in contact fairly frequently with officials in Washington."

Richardson's spokesman told us the congressman made more than 23 calls to the State Department, plus calls to the pilots'

"There seem to be two solutions," Litton told the commissioners last Thursday. "One would involve secure demolition. which would mean raising the stage and lowering two of the floor levels," he said, "but to raise what we have to a higher level wouldn't necessarily solve the problem of the high water we have now."

"Or, it may even be constructed to go directly into Lake Mary," he added.

John Holland, the city's director of parks and recreation said no costs have been projected yet for the pop-off valve addition, but that discussions would be continuing.

"The big problem I have with this," said Commissioner George Duryes. "is who is to blame for this. Was this a design or construction error when it was first built? Was it intended to flood under certain conditions?"

Questions were also raised regarding the pop-off valve which is believed to already be in the retention pond, which would open a drainage flow when the water reaches a certain

Some citizens, including former commissioner Paul Lovestrand, objected to the move claiming the commissioners were trying to get a pay increase under the guise of calling the additional compensation expense money. Any commis sioner pay increase ordinance do not take effect until after the next general election under rules currently in effect. That measure prevents a commission from okaying a pay raise for itself until at least some of the commissioners have faced reelection. When Lovestrand asked the commission to reconsider the extra $100 a month, he noted that expense money, not verified by receipts, is considered taxable income by the Internal Revenue Service.

Forrest Gump tops the Golden Globes

By ISSE THOMAS Associated Press Writer

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. -"Forrest Gump" can add three Golden Globes to its box of chocolates

The feel-good blockbuster was named best dramatic picture Seturday night and Tom Hanks was chosen as best dramatic actor. Robert Zemeckie won as best director.

A surprise winner was Jessica Lange as best dramatic actress for her role of an angry Army wife in the little-seen "Blue Sky," which even the star called 's strange and peculiar little film."

"Gump," a retrospective of the 1980s through the eyes of a slow but goodhearted country boy. has carned $300.6 million but only mixed reviews.

By contrast, the nearly universaily acclaimed "Pulp Fiction" has earned only $70 million and took only one award at the 52nd Golden Globe Awards.

The two movies have been considered frontrunners for best picture at the Academy Awards. As the first major awards show of the season, Golden Globes are traditionally looked upon by pundits as an indication of the Oscar outcome.

Last year, Hanks won the Golden Globe for best dramatic actor for his role in 'Philadelphia," then went on to win the Occar. But Hanks declined to draw any conclusions from his second straight win.

"I think we just have an awful lot of awards and we're all going to have to slug through," he said backstage. "I think it's going to be pick 'em. I think we're all going to split them up, all the way down the line."

"Gump" was pulled from theaters Friday. Paramount Pictures said it will be rereleased on Feb. 17, three days after the Academy Award nominations are announced.

"Pulp Fiction," a bloody fairy tale from Quentin Tarantino, won him a Golden Globe for best screenplay.

Tarantino, speaking after accepting the award, said he didn't make the movie to get trophies.

GM ends strike, but still promises to make self leaner

GM spokesman Chuck Licari said GM will continue to "right-else" its operations, and its North American work force may continue to United Auto Workers union members voted Sunday to ratify an agreement that ended a four-day strike at the AC Deloo First East complex. Secause parts made at the complex are used to build most GM vehicles, the strike had forced the company to close at least 10 other plants and idle more than 30,000 employees.

The union said the deal meant OM would at 663 jobs at Flint East and invest 978 million capital improvement for new products at the plant through 1998.

"That's going to secure jobs out into the future," said Don Besuchamp, shop committee chairman of UAW Local 651.

"It's a real good deal," said Willie Polis, 47, of Flint, who has worked at the Delco complex for 25 years. "If they don't abide by what they agreed with, we'll walk again."

Local 651 president Dale Lelleau said 96 percent of the members voting favored the agreement, but the union withheld the totals.

GM would not confirm details of the deal. Spokesman Dan Dolan said "several hundred" new jobs would be added, and there would be some additional spending to develop new pro-

Meanwhile, Josiah Smith scored six of his game-high 14 points in the first quarter and Kampf Title knocked off Mutual of Omaha, 21-16, to tie the two teams for third with 2-3 records.

And while there were no upsets in the Senior Division, victories by the top four teams set up a collision course between the quartet next Saturday.

The Fleet Reserve Branch 147 (5-0) outscored ABB Power Distribution 16-10 in the final period to break away from a slim 36-35 lead after three periods and win 52-45 to set up an undefeated matchup with Calvary Apostolic Temple, which clubbed American Legion

LAKE MARY - While winning the championship of its own tournament was nice, the Lake Mary High School wrestling team was more intent on measuring itself against the rest of the field in this past weekend's McDonald's Tournament of Champions.

Coach Doug Peters was reasonably pleased with the results. "I think we've been getting better each week," said Peters, whose squad claimed the team title by eight points [167-159] over Kissimmee-Gateway. "There was great competition at the tournament, even though there only 11 teams. Every team had some strong individuals.

Few had the depth of the Rams. Led by individual champions Joe Collins (144 pounds) and Ronell Jumpp (224). Lake Mary had wreatlers finish in the top four of 10 weight classes

Ben Crawford (134) and Nate Mitchell (139) both finished second in their respective classes. Thirdplace finishers for Lake Mary were Rich Bradley (118), Greg Clayton (129), and Brad Harris (156). Placing fourth were Robby Drake (107). Brian Yang (123), and Jamill Lilly

"We're wrestling extremely well right now," said Peters, whose team will wrestle undefeated University Tuesday before facing Lyman Wednesday for the Seminole Athletic Conference championship. "I would have liked to see us have more finalists, but that shows how much better we could do at districts and regionals.

"I was real pleased with the way some of our guys came back from losses in the semifinas, worked hard in the wrestlebacks, and got thirdplace finishes. Those were important points. I think the experience made us a better team. And that's what a tournament is supposed to See Wrestling, Page 2B

Labors to organize sports shouldn't be overlooked

Does anybody care?

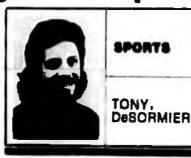

Which of us hasn't asked that question about his or her profession. wondering about our contribution and whether it has value or not?

For some, validation comes easily, the positive results easily discernible. Coaches can take satisfaction in seeing former players succeed, knowing that there's a chance they muy have had some positive impact.

But organized athletics, be it recreational or high school, is so much more than coaches and athletes. You could make a case that while coaches and athletes make up the "athletics" in organized athletics, there are other individuals who are responsible for the "organized" part of the equation.

League administrators, tournament organizers, sponsors, trainers without them, kids would be left to their own devices on sandlots. And while there's a certain innocent appeal to that, there's no denying the value of positive interaction between children and adults.

The key word is "positive."

Anyone involved in athletics has horror stories of incidents where an adult egos get in the way of children playing games, but I believe those to be the exception rather than the rule. Most adults involved in youth sports have the best interests of the kids at heart.

The unfortunate aspect is that often, these people do their jobs so well, the leagues or whatever run so smoothly, that they'e taken for granted to the point of being invisible. Since no one has to worry about something getting done, it's easy to overlook the person responsible for getting it done.

Take the McDonald's Tournament of Champions wrestling event at Lake Mary High School this past weekend, an event of impressive quality. No detail, however minor, was overlooked, resulting in a near-scamless affair.

The same could be said for the Lyman Christmas Wrestling Tournament, the Burger King/Club Soccer Classic girls' soccer tournament, or Pizza Hut Invitational boys' soccer tournament.

An incredible amount of work by selfless adults make that possible.

Getting back to the original point, most of the boys and girls who took part in those events will take away a positive experience that will stay with them in one form or another the rest of their lives. When you consider the scope of negative influences today, how important is that positive experience?

Listen to athlete talk about how he or she got to where he or she is today and invariably, a coach will be credited for having an impact on that individual. Without administrators, organizers, etc., there would be no context for that impact to take place.

AN ACCOUNT ACCOUNT AND ACCOUNT AND ACCOUNT ACCOUNT AND ACCOUNT AND ACCOUNT AND ACCOUNT AND ACCOUNT ACCOUNT.

And that extends to other support personnel. For example, Seminole County high schools boast one of the state's finest collection of athletic trainers. The combination of expertise and concern they share make athletic participation considcrably less hazardous.

But have you ever heard an athlete say, "I wouldn't be here it it weren't for the trainer at my high school. He (or she) held me out of games for a month during my juntor year and saved my career." Again, the superior execution of their tasks has the added result of their blending into the background. It takes a lot of effort to make it look effortless.

So, for those overlooked individuals responsible for organizing organized sports, take heart. Continue to fight the good fight. We may not say it - we may not even realize it but your efforts on the behalf of the kids are valued highly.

Landscape design important Put the right plant in the right place

Many of us home gardeners make a common mistake when shopping for plants. We go to our favorite nursery to buy landscape plants without ever looking at the growing conditions present in our yards or evaluating our individual needs, first!

The goal of placing plants in the landscape is a long healthy life for our plants, so that they may enhance our surroundings for some time to come. How successful we are as gardeners is greatly influenced by the conditions of the site where plants are placed. Plants should also have a function, so design is very important. In other words, it's extremely important to put the "right" plant in the "right" place,

The long term value of a landscape plant depends on how well it performs in the planting site. The planting site should be evaluated prior to plant selection. Look for characteristics such as the amount of sun or shade, salt spray, exposure of plants (north, south, east or west), drainage and soil type and pH before plants are purchased. You should also consider the plant's cold and/or heat tolerance. Some tropical plants will suffer if temperatures drop too low, while some northern species cannot make it through our hot, humid summers.

Light can seem confusing — it comes in all degrees: from full sun, part sun, indirect light, broken shade, shifting shade to full shade or any light level in between. Luckily ornamental plants can be selected for almost any light level around the home. The amount of light is important to plant growth because it affects the plants' rate of photosynthesis, water loss, degree of sun scald, and ability to tolerate dry soils and wind. Most plants adapted to shade require less water than plants that are adapted to full sun.

Plants protected by trees are less likely to experience cold damage than those in exposed loctions because the tree canopy reduces the radiant heat loss from these plants. Shade during the early morning slows the rate of thaw and can reduce the amount of damage.

Plant tolerance of salt water and salt spray has become an important consideration to homeowners that own coastal property. Many plants, if carefully chosen, can thrive in coastal areas. Selecting plants that are well adapted to the soils and exposures of coastal areas is the key to success.

Some plants are well suited to wet conditions while others require a well-drained site. Root rots are a common occurrence for most plants in poorly drained soils. If you have a wet site choose plants that are well adapted to wet areas. However, plants recommended for wet areas are usually grown in well-drained nursery soils that may compound the problem. One solution is to correct the drainage problem by altering surface or sub-surface drainage patterns with tiles, land forms, etc. or construct mounds for planting beds.

A soil test should be completed before landscape plants are selected. Select plants which are adapted to the existing soil type rather than amending or changing soil conditions to suit a particular type of plant. Adjusting the pH of the site to suit the plant material will be a continuous process that will need to be done year after year. It would be easier to select plants adapted to your

Good landscape design requires that landscape plants be used to serve a definite function. Plants should improve the appearance of usefulness of the home grounds. Limit turf areas so that you have a practical purpose for them. Use turf for play areas for children or entertaining areas. Turf is the highest maintenance planting in the landscape. It requires the most fertiliser, pesticide and pruning (mowing!), so use as little as possible. Plant trees to shade the house and conserve energy in summer. Use deciduous trees that lose their leaves in the winter so that the warm sunlight can help conserve heat. Spend that extra time and effort planning and designing the landscape around your home — it will pay off, many times over, in the long run.

Homeowners often select plants with unusual characteristics. A limited number of plants with unusual colors or growth habits can be used effectively in the landscape, but their location must be skillfully planned. Place these plants in special beds or use as accent or specimens to draw attention to an area, but remember to limit them to just a few.

Before you purchase plants from a garden center or nursery, inspect them closely. Do not purchase plants with an unhealthy appearance or with weak, poorly formed, scarred, cracked or peeling trunks or branches. Poorly spaced branches usually lead to plants with an uneven growth habit and should be avoided. Leaves of abnormal size or excessive yellowing indicate a health problem. Plants should also be examined for insects, diseases and mechanical damage. The root system of a container-grown plant should be well established, however, the plant should not be root bound. Roots should be distributed throughout the soil and not protruding through the drain hole.

Carefully choosing high quality plants that are well suited to your site and placing them according to your individual needs and taste can create a more useful outdoor space that is pleasing to the eye and less labor intensive. A well-designed landscape can also increase your property value—now there's an incentive. For more information about choosing the "right" plant for the "right" place drop by the Cooperative Extension Service for some free information. We are located across the street from Flea World on County Home Road. You may also call our office at 323-2500 ext 5558 or 5550 didn't go wrong — your grandchildren have become grand-adolescents. This is the way many teens talk to everyone except their contemporaries.

Abby, where did we go wrong? SAD GRANDFARENTS, DANVILLE, CALIF. DEAR GRANDFARENTS:

The next time you call, speak to the parents and ask for their help in bridging the age gap. If they can't help you, they can probably sympathize — since parents often endure the same treatment. The good news: It's only a phase.

Able," the man who claims that he has been driving for 70 years and never had an accident, is to be commended, but it doesn't necessarily mean that he is a good driver. It may mean that other drivers have quick reflexes, I see drivers tootling along, totally oblivious to the havoc they leave behind them. They think they are doing just fine.

Abby, the "55-Alive Mature Driving Course" is great, and it does teach one to compensate for changes in eyesight and slowing reflexes, but it has its limits.

Why should the gentleman write asking for a "neutral panel" to decide whether he should give up driving? Aren't his children neutral enough — or does he suspect they want him to quit driving so they can have his car?

I am 72, and when my daughters ask me to stop driving. I hope I will be able to accept the fact that they do it because they care about me and the other people on the road.

how to understand triglyceride levels

DEAR DR. GOTT: During re-cent cholesterol testing, my count was again under 200 milligrams per deciliter, while my triglycerides were again over 300 milligrams per deciliter. Why, when the cholesterol is good, do the triglycerides remain so high?

DEAR READER: Although they are the two major fats in the bloodstream, cholesterol and triglycerides are generally in-dependent of each other. Your cholesterol is normal.

indicating that you, like many Americans, have probably made an effort to restrict dietary cholesterol. This is beneficial. because high levels of cholesterol are associated with heart disease and stroke.

The relation between excess triglycerides and health problems is less clear. Ordinarily, the triglyceride level should not exceed 180 mg/dL.

However, levels above 200 or 300 are not rare and do not necessarily need correction. For example, diabetics often have high triglyceride levels, even though their diabetes is under good control.

Also, a diet high in fruit may harmlessly elevate the triglyceride level.

recover from your holiday.
In bridge, there are declarers who play as if they have their heads buried in the sand, and those who are eyes open, aware of all the possibilities. These differing approaches are highlighted in today's deal.

North's raise to three no-trump was correct, especially as East's opening bid had marked where the upposing cards lay.

Head-in-the-sand South won the first trick with the heart ace and immediately took the diamond finesse. However, East won with the king and cleared the heart suit. Declarer, with only eight tricks (two spades, two hearts and four diamonde). had to attack clubs. But East won immediately with the ace and cashed three heart tricks to defeat the contract. The eyes-open declarer.

realizing that East rated to have the club ace and diamond king for his opening bid, saw the right line. He crossed to dummy's spade king at trick two. Then he led a low club toward his king. East had to duck his ace, else declared would have nine tricks declarer would have nine tricks via two spades, two hearts, one diamond and four clubs. And after winning with the club king. South took the diamond finesse, setting up nine tricks: two spades, two hearts, four diamonds and one club.
