Plans to be made public

SANFORD — The latest concepts for the development of the lakefront area will be available to the general public this Wednesday beginning at 3 p.m. The display will include designs created by members of the University of Florida architectural team which has been working in conjunction with the Waterfront Master Plan Steering Committee.

The committee saw the physical models and additional drawings during a meeting last week. This Wednesday, the displays will be open for public inspection and comments beginning at 3 p.m., at the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce building, 400 E. First Street, in downtown Sanford.

Abilities testing

SANFORD — The Seminole County Sheriff's office is conducting the Physical Abilities Test until noon each day this week in the field adjacent to building 310 at the Central Florida Regional Airport.

The test is administered to all applicants for enrollment in the police academy at Seminole Community College.

The test of eight exercises is designed to evaluate the applicants' physical and motor skills. It includes a 220 yard run, obstacle course and dummy drag.

Work session cancelled

LONGWOOD — The city commission work session scheduled tonight to review the proposed adult entertainment ordinance has been cancelled due to a scheduling conflict.

City administrator Shelton Smith said he learned of the cancellation this morning when he arrived at city hall.

Smith said city attorney Richard Taylor, who drafted the ordinance, apparently could not attend tonight's meeting. When the city clerk attempted to reschedule the session for Tuesday, not enough commission members to constitute a quorum could attend. The commission may schedule a work session on the ordinance prior to their July 5 meeting.

Pagaent to be held

SANFORD — The "Junior Mr. and Ms. Pagaent" has been set for this Saturday. The event will be for children ages 10 through 13.

The pageant is sponsored by the Sanford Housing Authority in conjunction with Eleganza, Boys and Girls Club of West Sanford, and the Westside Community Association.

According to organizers of the event, the purpose of the pageant is to be a vehicle for children to build self-confidence through participation in competition, and to help build self-confidence through activity such as the dance competition for children age six through 13.

Criteria on which judging will be made include grandeur, question and response, general appearance, and talent.

The event will be held this Saturday evening beginning at 7 p.m. at the Boys and Girls Club. For additional information, phone Joyce Riggins at 321-4379 or Cheryl Knight at 328-8370.

School Board meeting

SANFORD — The Seminole County School Board will meet tomorrow evening at 7 p.m., in the board chambers at 1211 S. Mellonville Avenue in Sanford.

Dedication set for $10 million bridge, linking Seminole and Volusia counties.

New river bridge will be opened to traffic Friday

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

LAKE MONROE - Traffic on U.S. Highway 17-92 will be shifted to the new four-laned fixed bridge over the St. Johns River beginning July 1.

A single lane in each direction will be opened to traffic beginning 10:30 a.m. next Friday, according to a Florida Department of Transportation announcement Tuesday. Although bridge construction is complete, the additional lane for east-and west-bound traffic will be opened by November, said Steve Wigle, FDOT project manager.

Continuing work on the highway approaches to the bridge must be completed before both all four lanes can be opened, Wigle said. The construction is on schedule, he said.

The $10 million bridge will be dedicated in honor of former FDOT District Secretary C.A. "Bill" Benedict in a brief ceremony preceding the lane opening. Sen. Tom Jennings, R-Orlando, and Rep. Stan Dalter, R-Eustis, will be present. Jennings and Dalter sponsored See Bridge, Page 5A

Lynx bus expansion reviewed

Changes would cost $500,000 more annually

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — Expansion of Sanford's Lynx bus service would cost the county an extra $500,000 per year, according to a county report.

An expanded Lake Mary to Heathrow route would cost nearly $200,000 more each year.

County planners are recommending no changes to the county's Lynx bus service until residents and city commissions have a chance to look at the route proposals. The county may look to cities to share in the cost of expanded service in their communities. Oviedo now chips in more than $60,000 each year for a spur route.

Commissioners will review the routing proposals in a worksession this afternoon. They will take formal action on the bus service during budget approvals later this year.

The county paid $1.2 million this year for five Lynx routes. It will cost $1.4 million next year to maintain those routes. Most of the increase, $215,640, will go to pay the county's share of free service for disabled residents. The county pays for most of the amount through a penny gasoline tax. The balance is paid from property taxes.

Lynx planners have proposed to double Sanford service to half-hour stops and to replace neighborhoods routes with an expanded route using smaller "Little Lynx" buses. The Little Lynxes would then connect to the main Sanford

Sanford schedules family sports festival

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — A major event is being planned for Fort Mellon Park in August. The Sanford City Commission will discuss requests for certain street closures at tonight's commission meeting.

Called Central Florida Family Sports Festival, the two days of activities are being organized by the Orlando Road Club, a club which focuses on bicycle events. Many Sanford area residents are active members of the club.

Plans call for it to be held August 20 and 21 in and around Fort Mellon Park.

Dave Farr, executive director of the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce is serving as the local contact for the event. "The Chamber is supporting this," he said, "and we'll be helping out as well as using some of our facilities, but this is basically a bike club event not a chamber event."

Farr said he expects possibly 1,000 to 1,500 spectators, with an estimated 200 people participating in the various activities.

"The events will involve bike races around the park," he said, "as well as in-line skate races around the same course at different times, a recreational bike ride starting and finishing at the park, demonstrations of free style biking, personal water crafts and in-line skating."

The demonstration of personal water craft is scheduled to be held in Lake Monroe, just to the north of the park area.

At tonight's city commission meeting, Farr is to present a request for the closing of certain streets for the event. They would be a part of Sanford Avenue from the lakefront to First Street, First Street from Sanford Avenue to San Juan, San Juan at the eastern end of the park, and Seminole Boulevard along the lakefront from San Juan to Sanford Avenue.

Farr says the sponsors of the activities will coordinate with the Sanford Main Street organization. "We want to be certain they know we plan to have this many people coming into the downtown area for those two days," Farr said, "so they can do whatever may be required to help prepare for it."

The special event permit has been approved by the Parks and Recreation Department, as well as other required departments. The question to be brought before tonight's commission meeting is the request for street closures.

The city commission meeting is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. tonight in the commission chambers of Sanford City Hall, 300 N. Park Avenue.

Ibis on state's protection list

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — New protection for the white ibis should have little impact on Seminole County development, says a state wildlife official.

The county received notice this week from the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission of the addition of the wading bird to the state's Species of Special Concern list. Any construction which requires destroying a white ibis nest will require a state permit.

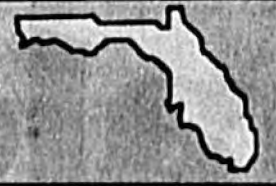

Bill Barnard, county natural resources officer, said the bird is seen in Seminole County near rivers, but no nests have been found. People who want to develop vacant land must prepare a survey of "listed" protected animals and plants for the county. Barnard said most surveys make note of all species.

Colleen Logan, county natural lands planner, said she remembers no white ibis nests on lands ranked for purchase and preservation under the Natural Lands Preservation Program.

Brian Millsap, chief of the game commission's bureau of non-game wildlife, said a survey conducted of white ibis in the late 1980s found no nests in Seminole County, but several in nearby Volusia County. Millsap See Ibis, Page 5A

Father wins custody ruling

LAKE CITY — A man who was investigated but never charged in both the sexual abuse of his son and the slaying of his ex-wife has now been awarded custody of the boy.

James Anderson Temple ran from the Columbia County Courthouse after Friday's ruling to pick up the boy — now age 7 — from a relative's house, where the child has been living for the past six months.

The boy previously was in foster care while investigators looked into the shocking death of his former wife, Vicki Lee Bergevin.

"This is kind of like a belated Father's Day. I'm ecstatically happy," Temple said. "I'm the happiest father in the world."

State Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services workers are still under investigation for their handling of the case, which drew national attention because of a botched kidnapping attempt that left Bergevin dead.

Both the Florida Department of Law Enforcement and HRS found no unlawful action on the part of social-services workers or Temple.

No support for former judge

CRYSTAL RIVER — If congressional candidate Gary Graham wins September's Republican primary he won't be able to count on his party's support against the Democratic incumbent, a top GOP official says.

State Republican Party Chairman Tom Slade predicts that Graham, a former Citrus County judge who was removed from the bench last year by the Florida Supreme Court, would not beat drag racing legend Don Garlits — who also is contending for the party's nomination.

Garlits and Graham are both hoping to be able to challenge U.S. Rep. Karen Thurman to represent District 5, which covers all of Citrus, Hernando, Sumter, Dixie, Levy and Gilchrist counties; most of Alachua; and parts of Marion and Pasco counties.

Graham would be bad for the party and the state, Slade said, adding that neither Democrats, nor Republicans can commit to supporting every candidate.

"For either party, there's got to be an escape hatch," Slade told The Tampa Tribune for an article in Saturday's editions.

Slade's remarks Friday came on the heels of a decision by the Florida Bar to file misconduct charges against Graham.

Man charged with making bomb

FORT PIERCE — A man has been charged with making a bomb to use against his ex-girlfriend.

Natalie "Nick" Butera was charged in the bomb case after witnesses told police they saw him making the bomb.

The witnesses said that Butera was planning to use it to hurt Karen Boyd, 25, of Fort Pierce and her current boyfriend, according to a police report.

"Not that any domestic dispute is routine or unimportant, but it was just another domestic arson," Sgt. Brian Humm said. "All of a sudden, when our detectives went out there to do some follow-up, we found a bomb."

Butera, 39, had been arrested Saturday night after Boyd told officers she saw him riding his bicycle away from her car right before she realized there was a fire in the front seat. Butera was charged with arson and stalking.

Deland woman captures title

ORLANDO — The new Miss Florida has her eye set on a higher goal — to become the second Miss America ever from the Sunshine State.

"I'll be working on getting everything ready for Atlantic City," said Megan Welch, 20, wiping away tears after capturing Florida's crown Saturday night in Orlando.

Miss America 1992, Leanza Cornett, was the first Miss Florida to win the national title. She emceed this year's state pageant at Orlando's Bob Carr Performing Arts Centre.

"It was an enlightening time, a spectacular time and I thank you for your support throughout that," said Cornett, who now is a reporter for television's "Entertainment Tonight."

Cornett was joined on stage by Miss Florida 1993 Nicole Padgett, who charmed the crowd with jokes, songs and the final walk of her reign. Last year, Welch lost out to Padgett, finishing as first runner-up in the pageant.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Florida overpays unemployment Benefit budget exceeded by $76.3 million

By Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Florida exceeded its unemployment compensation budget by $76.3 million last year, bringing its error rate to 11 percent, federal estimates show.

That's the state's highest error rate since 1990, when Florida exceeded its budget by 12.8 percent. The average error rate for the 50 states has been about 8 percent in recent years.

State officials last year had set aside $695 million for the unemployment compensation program, which is funded by a raised by a tax on employers.

Federal figures also show that Florida last year underpaid the 900,000 people who received unemployment payments by 1 percent, which is about the national average.

But state officials say the mistakes could've been the result of technical errors arising from complex laws rather than actual overpayment of money.

However, state officials were at a loss to explain the increased number of mistakes, except to cite continuing problems with fraudulent claims and overworked employees.

The state's Department of Labor and Employment Security has recovered $4.8 million of the overpayments, said Kenneth Holmes, director of the division of unemployment compensation.

Federal officials blamed claimants for about 41 percent of the errors and the state for about 26 percent of them. The Florida Times-Union reported Sunday.

But state officials said they were encouraged by recent estimates that show the error rate dropping in the first half of 1994 to about the national average.

"Certainly the '93 numbers — the governor does not feel they are very acceptable," said Ron Sachs, director of communications for Gov. Lawton Chiles. "I would say in the first six months of '94 the governor is very encouraged."

Massive government programs such as unemployment compensation typically have high error rates because they are complex and easily fall prey to fraud.

On top of that, Florida's growing population and large number of immigrants make it especially hard to run a low-error program, Holmes said.

"Florida is a humongous, a very diverse state," he said. "Language and cultural differences do account for some of the misunderstandings."

Overpayments typically occur when an employee or employer gives incorrect information about wages or work history or when the state interviewer makes a math error.

Sometimes an unemployed person will find work but not notify the state and keep collecting benefits.

The labor department disregarded a series of verbal requests over several days for the unemployment compensation figures, keeping the estimates under wraps until issued a written public records request, the Jacksonville newspaper reported.

Sachs said he wanted to brief his boss before turning over the records, although state law mandates that such records be made available immediately.

19 athletes chosen for state games

A group of nineteen Seminole County's Special Olympics athletes have been selected to attend the Florida State Special Olympics Games on July 15, 16 and 17 in Clearwater. Included will be fifteen members of the Lake Mary High School Senior Softball team coached by Jenny Church and Chuck Ikerl.

Team Members include: Kelly Church, Jessica Lomba, Sonya and Tonya Bush, Melissa Horenkoto, Alicia

Ceparo, Brandon Neas, James Jamork, Richard Hearn, Rodrick McCray, Jason Walker, Adam House, Mike Frederick, Isiah Robertson and Edward Yidi.

Also participating in other areas will be Tim Lambke, golf; Bradley Cochran and Frank Amanto, softball skills; Andy Engert and Meredith Kendrick, swimming.

The Seminole County Special Olympics is under the direction of Linn Bonnett.

Survivors of massacre claim promise falls short

By Associated Press

DAYTONA BEACH — The state is being accused of backpedaling on its promise to provide $100,000 in scholarships to the families of the survivors of a racial attack on the Rosewood community.

"I'm really dissatisfied and very upset about the educational scholarship fund," said Arnett Doctor, head of the Rosewood Family Advisory Committee.

"For them to say we're going to allocate $60,000 (this year) is going directly against what was legally approved by the state Legislature," Doctor said Saturday.

Lawmakers approved more than $2.1 million in compensation this spring for the survivors of the 1923 attack on Rosewood. The small black settlement near Cedar Key was destroyed by a white mob angry over an unsuccessful search for a black man accused of assaulting a white woman.

As part of the compensation package, lawmakers agreed to set aside $100,000 to provide 25 scholarships to descendants of Rosewood survivors.

But state officials say they meant to allocate $60,000, not $100,000. The provision calls for 25 scholarships for up to $4,000 to cover tuition and fees at state universities, community colleges and vocational-technical schools.

Tuition and fees at those schools are no more than $2,300 a year, meaning $60,000 will pay for 25 students, according to analyses by legislative staff.

But while writing the law, staff members mistakenly put down the higher number, officials said.

"The staff made an error," said state Rep. Al Lawson, D-Tallahassee, a leading sponsor of the Rosewood legislation. "It just slipped through."

Descendants of Rosewood survivors are to be given first crack at the scholarships, with surplus money going to fund scholarships to members of minority groups.

Legislators failed to provide money for the scholarships this spring. The Department of Education came up with $60,000 for the 1994-95 academic year from a surplus in another financial aid fund.

The compensation law also establishes a $1.5 million fund to pay up to $150,000 apiece to people who prove they lived in Rosewood during the violence that left at least six black and two white people dead. Residents who lost property are also to be reimbursed from a $500,000 fund.

Doctor also criticized state officials for setting a Dec. 31 deadline for survivors to apply for compensation before making any money available.

He said eight people, who are in their 70s and 80s, have proved they lived there and should be paid right away. Two are in the hospital, Doctor added.

Four of eight known Rosewood survivors were given certificates of appreciation during commencement ceremonies at Bethune-Cookman College on Saturday.

Low-level radioactive waste headache looms with Barnwell closure

By JIM CLARKE
Associated Press Writer

SNELLING, S.C. — Among the red clay and pine trees of this rural town lies the only place 39 states can send the low-level radioactive waste their hospitals, power plants and universities create. On July 1, however, Chem-Nuclear Inc.'s Barnwell County landfill will close to all but eight Southeastern states, including Florida.

For now, businesses and hospitals that generate the waste can store it on their premises.

But that's cold comfort for 59 workers at Barnwell who soon will be out of work. And patients who rely on nuclear medicine for things like cancer treatment could be affected as the radioactive wastes — and accompanying costs — pile up in makeshift sheds and storerooms.

Already, some hospitals are freezing waste, such as laboratory animals and tissue exposed to radiation.

"My new definition of a meltdown is what happens when the power supply goes for the freezers," said Dr. Carol Marcus, director of the nuclear medicine outpatient clinic at Harbor-UCLA Medical Center in Los Angeles.

Dr. Conrad Nagle, chief of nuclear medicine at William Beaumont Hospital in Troy, Mich., figures it will be two to six years before hospital administrators begin questioning the cost of working with radioactive material.

Hospitals produce about 1 percent of the nation's total but are likely to suffer the most from Barnwell's closure, say experts like Nagle, who also is chairman of a waste generators' consortium.

Resisting arrest charged

Thomas James Becucheane, 38, 2702 Magnolia Ave., Sanford, was charged with resisting arrest without violence on Saturday by Sanford Police.

Police said they were involved in a routine traffic stop on Magnolia when Becucheane came out of his home and complained about the flashing lights atop the patrol car. He then told police to get off his property though they were in the street.

When he refused to be pacified and cursed at the officers, he was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility.

While he was being booked, officers said he took off his shorts to expose his sexual organs and he hit a corrections officer in the face.

He was held on $500 bond.

Aggravated assault

Willie B. Lawson, 48, 27 Mullet Lake Road, Sanford, was charged with aggravated assault by Sanford Police on Saturday.

Police said he refused to pay a taxi driver a $3 fee in advance for a ride to the store. When the driver insisted, he pulled a knife out and threatened the driver, police said.

He was found a short distance away and arrested. He was identified by the driver and taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where he was held on $1,000 bond.

Police said he came home about 1 a.m. and demanded sex from his girlfriend who refused. Police said he then tried to remove her clothes and put a pillow over her face.

Officers said he stabbed the pillow several times with a butcher knife and said "I'm O.J. and they are going to find us both in the morning."

He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $4,000 bond.

Hug leads to battery charge

Edwin James Adams, 47, 527 Eldorado Way, Casselberry, was charged with aggravated battery on a law enforcement officer and battery by Seminole County Sheriff's officers on Friday.

Deputies said he approached another man at the Seminole County Landfill and hugged him. Deputies said the other man did not know him. Deputies were called and when they arrived, Adams hugged an officer, they said.

He was warned that he could not touch an officer without his consent and he grabbed the officer's shoulders.

Potts: Authorities trying to link him to state's unsolved murders

By Associated Press

BARTOW — Frank T. Potts says he has never killed anyone.

The Lakeland native and migrant laborer says authorities have it in for him and are trying to hold him responsible for every unsolved murder in Florida.

"I don't drink, I don't smoke, I don't do drugs. I've got a high school education," Potts said. "But they make me look like an illiterate because I pick fruit for a living instead of being a leech off society."

But Florida authorities believe Potts is a serial killer.

Potts is accused of killing 19-year-old Robert Earl Jines, an Indiana man missing since 1989. His body was exhumed from Potts' property in Estill Fork, Ala., in early March, and Potts was charged with first-degree murder.

But despite almost constant digging since, no other remains have been unearthed — and Potts has never been charged with murder in any Florida case.

Potts, a convicted child molester who served six years in prison, has been in the Polk County Jail since late December, held without bail on an Alabama warrant charging he kidnapped a game warden.

He later was charged in Polk County with sexually molesting a girl younger than 12.

Since March, when he was charged in Jines' death, he has proclaimed his innocence and has asked for a lie-detector test.

A trial on the child sex case is expected to begin in August. Once that trial ends, Potts faces Alabama charges of kidnapping a game officer and murder in the Jines case.

"I can't get a fair trial anywhere," he said. "There's been too much publicity."

"I don't drink, I don't smoke, I don't do drugs. I've got a high school education. But they make me look like an illiterate because I pick fruit for a living instead of being a leech off society."

—Frank T. Potts

He said the last time he saw Jines was on April 1, 1989, when the teen-ager and another man left Garrett Mountain to get beer.

Jines' girlfriend, Bobbie Lee Harrell, told Alabama authorities in 1989 she thought Potts killed Jines. The body wasn't found until last March, while Polk officials were investigating Potts in connection with the 1981 death of a Wahneeta girl.

Potts said he believes Jines was killed by someone else, adding his rugged retreat is a good dumping site for someone because there have been rumors dating back 20 years of bodies buried there. Polk sheriff's Maj. Marvin Pittman said investigators still think more bodies are on Potts' land.

"I think everyone involved here in the investigation is reasonably confident that there are more bodies in Alabama," Pittman said.

Pittman initially called Potts a suspect in up to 13 disappearances in Florida and five other states. He said Potts is no longer a suspect in as many cases as initially thought but would not elaborate.

"I have done absolutely nothing since I got out of prison in 1988 because I was afraid they'd frame me for something," Potts said.

With legal battles on several fronts awaiting him, Potts said he would not accept any plea deals.

"I won't settle for anything except for complete exoneration," Potts said. Without that, "I'll just die in prison. That's all there is to it."

"My son's dead," Potts told The Tampa Tribune for a story Saturday. "He's the lucky one. He's not got anything to worry about."

9-year-old boy survives alligator attack in creek

By Associated Press

NOKOMIS — A 9-year-old boy escaped with deep cuts in his left leg after a nearly 12-foot alligator bit him while swimming in a creek.

"The kid was screaming, 'The gator bit me, the gator bit me,'" said 14-year-old Kevin Thomas, who had been swimming with a group of friends in Curry Creek near Sarasota.

The boys had been fishing when Larry Mann and his friends decided to go for a dip to escape the day's heat. They didn't see the gator coming and all of a sudden Larry was screaming.

They have been swimming in the creek for weeks and had not seen the reptile before, they said.

Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission officials said they found the 11-foot, 8-inch alligator within 25 feet of where the boy had been attacked.

The alligator will be killed and a necropsy performed to determine if an illness prompted it to attack. Officials say there are usually 10 to 12 attacks each year in Florida and that most alligators will not attack humans.

Larry's parents said their son will have to stay in the hospital for a couple of days while his wound heals.

His father, Robert, said the wound will remain open until the boy is treated for any infections that could have been caused by bacteria alligators carry.

"He's very lucky. If that gator had been hungry, it would have ate him," he said.

Help kids stay in school

It is refreshing to learn the dropout rate is lower in Seminole County schools. Finding that there were still 487 students from the 1992/93 school year who quit before graduation however, is not good.

According to prevention specialist Jim Dawson, these students told officials they had no intention of going elsewhere to seek a diploma.

Our school system is doing as much as possible to prevent this. Vocational training is available. Seminole Community College offers the Adult High School, and many programs are available to help students who don't believe they can graduate.

Yet, in our opinion, the numbers are still too high.

Figures from the present school term won't be released until August. If they do not show a marked reduction in the dropout rate, we have ourselves, not the schools or community to blame.

Look at it this way. A total of 487 school dropouts have been added to the potential workforce. Without that high school diploma, employment opportunities are very low. Even for those who find jobs, most will end up doing menial labor which no one else wants to do.

On top of that, the pay will be low. The boss knows if someone doesn't like low pay for hard work, someone else can easily be found. This eliminates job security and any promise of advancement to a higher level.

What happens to these low-earning people? Some will resort to crime to keep their wallets full.

We suspect many dropouts come from divided homes. There may not be two parents to urge them to continue schooling. Others may have parents who have never learned the importance of an education.

This leaves the solution of this problem to others. People have nieces and nephews, neighbors and friends. Make an effort to help them if a need is determined.

Urge students to stay in school. Instill upon them the importance of at least the high school diploma, if not a college degree.

For people who lead groups of youngsters, there are many opportunities to lend a hand. Help the youngsters in studies where they have difficulty. If you know of examples of older dropouts, explain what happens to people who don't finish their schooling.

If every person accepts some of the responsibility for helping keep our children in school, we can reduce the dropout rate. We will have a better and safer community, and the potential for future success of those who receive this help will be greatly enhanced.

Thanks to police officer

This letter is about the Sanford Police Department:

Recently around 8 a.m., I was approached by a white male offering to pump my gas for me.

His eyes were on my purse and he tried to block me from pumping my own gas.

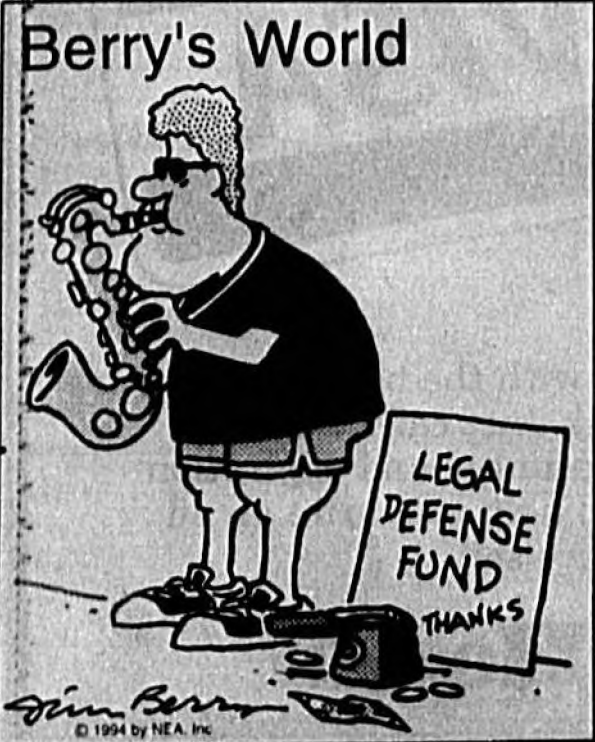

He was not going to accept the fact that I told him no thanks.

Thanks to a Sanford police officer pulling in by the gas pumps, my three-year-old and I are safe, and I still have my purse.

I do not know the officer's name, but thank you from Nicky and Mom.

He took the time to put Nick's fears to rest. Your department is the best.

A bitter lesson in Americanism

At the June graduation exercises of Riverdale High School in Murfreesboro, Tenn., 18-year-old Kathryn Sinclair was one of four valedictorians. In addition to her 4.0 average, she had been accepted in the honors program in pre-med studies at East Tennessee State University — with a full scholarship.

Yet, when she finished her speech, there was silence — by contrast with the applause for the other valedictorians. Indeed, some of the students had planned to turn their backs on her and sing the school's alma mater while she spoke. But a degree of reluctant civility had prevailed. In case of a disturbance, however, two teachers and a plainclothes county policeman were assigned to keep an eye on Kathryn and her family.

In her speech, Sinclair quoted from the First Amendment and from one of her favorite songs — "You've Got to Stand for Something or You'll Fall for Anything" by country singer Aaron Tippin. To her mostly sullen classmates, she said: "My challenge to you is not to be afraid to stand up for what you believe. If no one else supports you, know that you can support yourself."

In recent months, Kathryn Sinclair had shown how to do that. In April, she was told that as a valedictorian, she would have to submit her speech to school officials for approval. It had to meet their standards. (No other public schools in the immediate area have such a policy.)

The other three valedictorians dutifully obeyed the rule, but Sinclair objected. She had no intention, she said, of saying anything negative, but she had a First Amendment right not to subject herself to prior restraint of the content of her speech. The principal, Hulon Watson, told reporter Amy Sutton of the Murfreesboro Daily News Journal that his standards did not call for changing the content. But, he insisted that he had a right to "make sure it's not vulgar, racist or derogatory to other people." And "we would certainly not allow things in bad taste to be done." The latter term was not defined, nor was the principal's definition of censorship.

Kathryn Sinclair eventually did read her speech to the principal beforehand, but told him that she would not permit any change in its content if he found anything "negative" in it. Supporting her was an unexpected ecumenical alliance of the Tennessee ACLU and the Virginia-based American Center for Law and Justice, founded by Pat Robertson. Both groups said they would defend her if she took legal action.

The principal finally decided that despite Sinclair's defiance of his stated power to change the speech if he wanted to, she would be permitted to deliver it as written.

Afterward, she tried to get at the root of what had happened: "One of the main things they should be teaching is who we are as Americans. In four years, we had to memorize the preamble of the Constitution for extra credit, but a study of the Bill of Rights was never required."

It was not surprising, she added, that the principal of Riverdale High School never told the students during the furor that they — and Kathryn — have First Amendment rights. But, in his way of teaching Americanism, this principal is far from alone among the nation's educators.

State offers glimpse into future

Virginia's politics this year are likely to prove prophetic for the nation two years hence. As of mid-June it was all but certain there would be four senatorial candidates in the state, two of them running as Independents, all with proven vote-getting power. One will eventually win in November, but the two-party system will be the loser.

Ironic abound. The incumbent senator is Chuck Robb, Vietnam veteran, Lyndon Johnson's son-in-law, and the person most responsible for the reinvigoration of the Democratic Party in Virginia in the 1980s. He was an able governor whose record and leadership paved the way for his two Democratic successors.

But despite his election to the Senate in 1988, the sheen has come off Robb in recent years. Allegations of sexual hijinks and political dirty tricks have stuck, deservedly or not. His Senate career, in part because of the scandals, has not been particularly noteworthy. He is a priority target for a GOP which sniffs the outside possibility of regaining control of the Senate after an eight-year hiatus.

The problem with the Republicans' hopes is that they nominated a candidate whose negatives are higher than Robb's, though his followers are more committed than the incumbent's. Oliver North, the former Marine officer and White House operative who faced down the Congress' Iran-Contra investigating committee with lies, charm and patriotic rhetoric, annihilated his more conventional opponent in the Republicans' state convention. The religious and nativist right see him as an unblemished savior.

But thousands of other Republicans share the antipathy of the state's senior senator, Republican John Warner, who refuses to back a man he considers little better than a common criminal. Sen. Warner helped persuade Marshall Coleman, an orthodox Republican conservative, to run as an independent alternative to Robb and North.

No one had to persuade Doug Wilder, the second man to indicate he will offer himself as an independent. Wilder is a Democrat who in 1989 became the first black man ever elected governor of an American state. He did so by narrowly beating Coleman, as had Robb in 1981, and he proceeded to govern as a fiscal conservative. He also vigorously pursued old vendettas, including a longtime feud with Robb, and waged an embarrassing, though mercifully short, campaign for the Democrats' presidential nomination in '92. When he left the office in January, Wilder had a diminished reputation though a decent record of accomplishment in the statehouse.

What could this confused jumble of less-than-ideal candidates in a Southern state have to do with the national election in 1996? Almost everything.

Like the Democrats and Republicans in Virginia, both national parties are as fractured along deep fault lines. Numerous observers have declared, only half-jokingly, that none of the potential Republican presidential candidates has the strength to take the GOP's nomination, let alone the general election. At least as many have decided that President Clinton will never convince a majority of the nation's voters to give him their ballots.

Voters are no longer moored — or shackled — to the traditional parties. The polls indicate there are millions of people who want more options than the two parties seem able to provide. Ross Perot may be one of a kind, but in 1992 he tapped a deep well of public disillusionment with establishment politics and proved a third-party candidacy is not a ludicrous idea. He or someone like him is all but certain to run again, as will a social-issue conservative if the religious right's agenda is thwarted at the Republican convention. Nor is it inconceivable that Bill Clinton could have opposition from the left, where unhappiness with his stands on some issues is almost as intense as on the right.

What Virginia is in the process of demonstrating — and as later elections are bound to confirm — is that America's political compass is out of whack. There is no clear national sense of ideological direction. Antipathy has more effect on electoral outcomes than hope. People are voting against rather than for. The breakdown of political parties is all but complete while the rise of single-issue politics has not yet ceased.

The media have decided to treat Virginia's grab-bag gubernatorial election as something close to a freak show. It's the wrong approach. Whether or not Doug Wilder and/or Marshall Coleman actually stay in to the bitter end, their independent candidacies are indications of things to come, mimicking events in recent gubernatorial elections in states as disparate as Connecticut and Louisiana.

The religious and nativist right see Oliver North as an unblemished savior.

JACK ANDERSON

Before invading Haiti, remember Somalia

WASHINGTON — Before the Clinton administration deploys American armed forces in Haiti, it ought to re-examine the painful lessons driven home last year by Somali warlord Mohammed Farah Aaidid.

After more than two years of failed diplomatic attempts by the United States to restore exiled Haitian President Jean-Bertrand Aristide to power, the Clinton administration is now said to be considering military action to force Haiti's military junta from power.

Several members of Congress have joined the call for military action, as stiff trade sanctions have proven ineffective and the forced repatriation of Haitian refugees draws increased fire on Capitol Hill.

Two reports by the Central Intelligence Agency about the situation in Somalia, prepared last July, should serve as a cautionary tale for anyone who believes liberating Haiti would be a cut-and-dried operation.

Like the Democrats and Republicans in Virginia, both national parties are as fractured along deep fault lines. Numerous observers have declared, only half-jokingly, that none of the potential Republican presidential candidates has the strength to take the GOP's nomination, let alone the general election. At least as many have decided that President Clinton will never convince a majority of the nation's voters to give him their ballots.

The parallels between Haiti and Somalia are striking. The CIA reports — dated June 21 and July 19, 1993 — describe a nation and a leader where opportunism rules over compassion, and where violence seems to have permanently overtaken civility.

In the first report, CIA analysts label Aaidid a "canny opportunist... whose name loosely translated means 'one who will not be insulted.' (He) has been a disruptive force in Somalia since he helped oust former president Mohammed Siad Barre in January 1991."

The report makes note of Aaidid's desire "to be Somalia's paramount leader" even though "most Somalis believe he lacks moral authority, political legitimacy, or a policy agenda." Similarly, the military government in Haiti seized power even though Aristide garnered 70 percent of the vote to become his country's first democratically elected leader.

Like the efforts of his counterparts in Haiti, Aaidid's struggle for control has been waged mainly at the expense of the poor.

"Although he did not singlehandedly produce Somalia's civil war and famine..." the second report states, "he bears a heavier burden of responsibility for exacerbating and encouraging an atmosphere of criminal violence and disregard for human life that is the direct cause of the widespread suffering still prevalent in much of the country."

By initiating wars with other Somalian clans, Aaidid helped create the deadly famine that ultimately led to American intervention. It was clan warfare that led to the interruption of agricultural activity in the "southern inter-riverine region," which previously had been Somalia's heartland. Farmers were driven from their lands, and those who remained lost all incentive to plant.

When international relief agencies later tried to ease the suffering with humanitarian aid, Aaidid's thugs once again seized an opportunity to expand their reach. "By forcing relief agencies to pay millions of dollars for security and hand over large shares of donated food to his gunmen in return for permission to feed the starving population..."

Sending American troops to Haiti might solve the short-term problem of Haiti's obdurate military rulers. The real challenge would be in building a sustainable democracy in its wake.

Several members of Congress have joined the call for military action.

Accident

Whitmire, of the Sanford Police Department.

At about 6:30 p.m., Whitmire said, the 1990 Isuzu pickup truck driven by Jonathan Wayne Culver was northbound on the extension of Rhinehart Road approaching State Road 46 when he pulled into the path of the 1980 Honda motorcycle driven by Darren Scott Tillinghast.

Culver swerved slightly, but Tillinghast never even applied his brakes, the accident report revealed.

The motorcycle plunged into the side of the truck at approximately 45 to 50 miles per hour sending it head over wheels for a short distance, Whitmire explained.

He said the speed of the motorcycle was not a factor in the damage to the truck as much as the angle of the impact.

"The center of gravity is much lower on the motorcycle," Whitmire said. "Basically, he hit the truck from underneath."

Tillinghast, 33, was pronounced dead at the scene.

Whitmire said that blood was taken from Culver and a sample will be taken from Tillinghast during the autopsy to check for the presence of drugs or alcohol. He said that it is not suspected that either driver was impaired, but it is standard procedure to check the blood for such substances when a fatality occurs in an accident.

"The pickup violated the right of way of the motorcycle," said Whitmire, "but no one has been charged. The accident is still under investigation."

Patricia Tillinghast, who is the wife of the motorcyclist, was a passenger on the bike when the accident occurred. She was taken by ambulance to ORMC. Culver, 24, was cut from his truck and airlifted to the same hospital.

Tillinghast is in the intensive care unit, but she is in stable condition. She has a pelvic fracture, a left leg fracture and a right arm fracture. Culver is also in stable condition. He underwent surgery this morning to set a broken left leg.

Police units from both the Sanford and the Lake Mary police departments responded to assist with accident scene. Traffic had to be re-routed around the scene for at least an hour while the area was cleared.

There were no reports of any backups as a result of the detour.

Whitmire said the investigation should be completed later today.

Murder

at 711 Locust Avenue, witnesses told police.

Dwayne was furious, police were told and he told others that he was going back to his parents' house at 118 Scott Dr. to get a gun.

Some shots were fired before he left, police said, and when officers arrived in response to those shots they found a group of people unwilling to discuss the details and a pickup truck that had taken the brunt of the shots.

"The truck was shot up, but all they would tell investigators was that one brother had left southbound on Locust Avenue on foot and that the other had left in a vehicle," Cmdr. Dennis Whitmire of the Sanford Police Department said. "No one would identify the brothers or tell officers what had happened."

The pickup truck was processed for evidence and the police left.

Meanwhile, Whitmire said, one of the witnesses had followed Dwayne Hunter back to his parents' home and tried to talk him out of using a gun to settle the dispute with his brother.

He stayed long enough to tell the brothers' parents what was happening and then he returned to the Locust Avenue home to try to diffuse the situation there, Whitmire said.

Witnesses told police that the younger brother was standing on the porch talking to a man who had tried to stop his brother, when the older brother arrived.

Words and shots were exchanged.

According to Whitmire, Dwayne Hunter had taken a .22 calibre rifle from his parents' home and Karry Hunter was armed with a .380 calibre semi-automatic handgun.

Karry Hunter tried to run, witnesses said, but he was found behind the house, shot in the back.

Police are still investigating the incident and are not sure if the fight stemmed from the card game or from some other situation prior to the game.

Whitmire said that it was clear, however, that Dwayne Hunter had killed his brother and he was charged with the use of a firearm in the commission of a felony and with first degree murder.

Florida Blood Bank. In order to achieve this need, a massive drive is scheduled for Tuesday, June 28, designated as the 12th Annual Blood Brotherhood Day.

All 19 Central Florida Blood Bank locations will be participating.

Locally donors may make their donations at the Seminole County branch, 1302 E. Second Street in Sanford, and 448 S. Milwee Street in Longwood. Both offices will be open from 9 a.m. until 7 p.m.

In addition, a mobile unit will be available at the Altamonte Springs branch at 601 E. Altamonte Drive, from 9 a.m. until 7 p.m. (The branch inside Florida Hospital North will be closed).

According to the Central Florida Blood Bank Regional Coordinator Linda Decker, "Summer is traditionally a critical time for the blood supply, as vacation schedules hamper the number of donations while increased accidents escalate the need for blood.

"Blood Brotherhood Day," she explained, "is a day-long community drive that increases awareness and provides the opportunity for all eligible donors to give the gift of life."

Donors who register will receive a special donor appreciation bag which includes coupons to area restaurants and attractions.

Decker reminded prospective donors that it takes approximately 30 to 45 minutes. Donors must weigh at least 100 pounds and be at least 17 year of age and in good health.

For additional information on this blood drive, phone Linda Decker at (407) 260-2088.

said the birds tend to nest near water in colonies with egrets and other wading birds. White ibis nest in wetlands with limited development potential, said Millsap.

Millsap said Everglades white ibis populations declined 90 percent since the early 1900s. The South Florida population continued to decline during the past decade, Millsap said.

Scientists speculate flood controls in the Everglades reduced food supplies for the birds, said Millsap. White ibis nest in the early spring during Florida's driest season. They feed their young with fish trapped in ponds. Flood-control-keep marshlands flooded, eliminating their concentrated food supplies, Millsap said.

Many of the birds migrated into the St. Johns River system which accounts for sightings here, he said.

The commission planned to list the bird July 30, 1993, but objections from construction and agriculture industries delayed the action until this month.

In Lake Mary, Lynx would extend a new route west from U.S. Highway 17-92 along Lake Mary Boulevard to Heathrow, with a southern loop along Lake Emma Road, Greenway and Longwood-Lake Mary Road and a small loop through The Forest. The Lake Mary route would add $198,893 to the county's bus subsidy.

In Longwood, Lynx would add a route looping north along County Road 427 to State Road 434, then west to State Road 436. That proposal would cost the county an extra $466,370 a year. Frances Chandler, manager of the county's Comprehensive Planning Division, said she believes the proposed routes should be examined by the community in a series of workshops before any changes are made. To receive increased service, Chandler cites may will willing to assist the county in paying the added costs for their residents.

The full project with approaches and land acquisition will cost about $13.4 million.

The 1,845-foot-long, 45-foot-high bridge replaces the last electronically-controlled swing bridge in the state. The Improvements to U.S. 17-92 are being designed for north of the bridge to aid West Volusia County commuters. FDOT is planning to widen the two-laned road to four lanes north to Enterprise Road in Orange City. The $23 million effort is not fully funded, said project manager Wayne Waters.

Construction of the segment from Plantation Avenue to Shell Road is funded and scheduled to be under construction by May 1996, said Waters.

Men try to break cycle of domestic violence

By DEBORAH HASTINGS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES — He certainly never planned to hit her. Sometimes he couldn't even remember their fights. But there was no mistaking her swollen lips or her bruised face the morning after, telltale as a hangover.

"I would just blank out and go off on her. Sometimes I just wanted her to shut up," he says. "I was stronger, I was a man, and I knew I could win."

Ken James, a 28-year-old welder from the blighted streets of South Central, hasn't hit his common-law wife in six months.

Oh, he's felt like it. "I'm learning to express my emotions without getting physical," James says.

Good thing, because he comes from battering stock. His father beat his mother. His neighbors beat their wives.

But as the sad story of O.J. Simpson proves, even the richest and most famous of men are capable of violence. Without treatment, their cycle is almost never broken.

Simpson was sentenced in 1989 to two years' probation for beating Nicole Brown Simpson. On June 17, he was arrested for allegedly murdering her and a male friend in a savage knife attack.

Simpson never completed his 1989 court-ordered counseling, but James is making a real effort to change. Six months ago, he began mandatory therapy after spending 50 days in Los Angeles County Jail for spousal abuse.

Most batterers don't seek treatment voluntarily. Even when they're ordered to by law, it is very difficult to change their behavior, say therapists devoted to doing just that.

Men beat women for myriad reasons. Ultimately, it boils down to one issue: control.

"I never wanted to kill her," James says, speaking of the woman he has lived with for six years, a woman who has borne two children with him and is three months pregnant with their third. "I never had that thought in my mind. I just wanted to control her. I wanted her to do what I said."

Psychologist Sandra Baca runs the Center for the Prevention of Domestic Violence, which provides group counseling to about 300 men sent there as a condition of their probation for spousal abuse. James is one of her clients.

"We don't have one single man who has come of his own free will," she says, laughing. Baca has seen and heard it all and dispenses treatment with direct, smart humor.

"The only way they're going to stop is if they go to jail," she says. "Otherwise it's too easy — you're always victorious at the end. And they're not stupid. If I win every argument in my house by hitting or threatening, why not keep doing it? Especially if you can get away with it."

In counseling, she encourages her clients, who pay on a sliding scale, to stop seeing their wives as extensions of themselves. "She has her own feelings, she has her own thoughts," Baca says.

"We make them keep journals of their home life. When did they decide to hit her? What was the trigger? What were they trying to achieve?"

But she starts with the assumption that many can't be helped at all.

According to studies, up to 50 percent of arrested batterers who receive treatment will nonetheless hit, slap, kick or choke their spouses within six months.

"Not all problems can be solved by psychotherapy," says Neil Jacobson, a Seattle family psychologist at the University of Washington. "Very rarely does (the batterer) actually stop. The batterers bring home flowers and Hallmark cards, but the violence usually doesn't stop."

O.J. Simpson was no exception, as shown by police transcripts of 911 calls released last week. Nicole Brown Simpson, alternately sobbing and speaking in a weary, here-we-go-again tone, pleads for help. An enraged O.J. is heard screaming in the background.

His ravings were the antithesis of the relaxed, smiling personality known to fans and friends.

"That's pretty common. I did that. I would play that facade," says a 37-year-old Florida man undergoing treatment in Fort Lauderdale. He spoke on condition of anonymity.

"People used to say I was the perfect husband, a nice father. But at home I was a real screamer. I wanted to make orders. I didn't think anybody else had a right to say anything."

James heard the Simpson tapes. "They sound just like my wife probably sounded when she called the police on me," he says.

James was arrested in October — the first time his wife called police, but not the first time he had beaten her — after a fight in which he split her lip and bruised her ribs.

Being incarcerated sobered him.

"The system gave me another chance and I'm taking advantage of it," he says.

James was 4 when his father stabbed his mother and abandoned the family.

"There wasn't a male figure in my house," James says. "Everybody around me, my neighbors, that's the way they treated their women. They would hit them, and then they'd talk about it out on the street. I slapped that bitch. She got out of line with me."

James is weary of the cycle.

"My kids are growing up now and I've got to put the past behind me. I think it's passed on, from one generation to the next."

Counseling is his only hope. "I've learned how to communicate," he says. "I'm ashamed I hit my wife."

Why did he want to control her?

"I've got 26 more sessions to go," he says. "I hope I learn the answer to that by then."

Plain folk take a new look at health care

By TED ANTHONY
Associated Press Writer

GORDONVILLE, Pa. — At least half of Dr. Nick Dragann's family practice comes from the Old Order Amish, families who farm the broad fields of Lancaster County.

From Dragann, the Amish get homeapun, quality medical care. From the Amish, Dragann gets patients who are prompt and pay cash.

Recognizing the success of doctors such as Dragann, a Lancaster hospital has fashioned a loosely structured health referral and payment program for the county's plain people.

"Health care issues are touching everyone, and their community is not immune," said Robert E. Lee, vice president for planning and marketing at Community Hospital of Lancaster.

The plan, which started in April, is not traditional health insurance, since Amish ways forbid taking out such policies. But it does incorporate one major element of managed care — discounts for large group purchases, even though these particular patients pay no premiums.

Community General was already in the good books of the 20,000-strong Old Order Amish, the region's most conservative Anabaptist sect, because of its osteopathic approach to medicine, which focuses on the entire body's interrelationships.

The patients receive all types of treatment, from vital obstetrics care for Amish women who typically have five or six children, to treatment for Maple Sugar Urine Disease, a rare blood sickness that strikes Amish children.

Hospital officials declined to discuss further specifics of the plan, citing competitive concerns.

"I've joked that I've had managed care for 20 years and each household has its own manager," said Dragann, who sees about 125 patients a week, half of them Amish, at his office in Gordonville, 10 miles east of Lancaster.

"It just kind of fell in place," Dragann said. "They don't want to deal with anything governmental — anything that uses the word insurance — so we kind of approached it saying, 'We want more of your business.'"

Lancaster County's Amish have been self-insured longer than most health insurance has existed. Congregations traditionally offer "church aid," earmarking part of their members' tithes for health care and distributing money to ill members.

The Amish are usually reluctant to discuss internal community matters with outsiders, but when Community Hospital President Mark C. Barabas approached a group of Amish bishops in March about provisions for their medical care, things clicked.

"I don't think there are any barriers for using common-sense concepts when it comes to health care, to do what's fair and what's right for a particular constituency," Barabas said.

"I think it sort of reflects the spirit of the times," said Donald B. Kravbill, director of the Center for Anabaptist Studies at Elizabethtown College.

"Hospitals are looking for ways to develop loyalty, and the (Amish) objection historically has been to commercial health insurance, that it sort of merchandises your life," Kravbill said. "This is a middle ground."

Lou Gable, spokesman for the Hospital Association of Pennsylvania, said many hospitals in the state employ the same tactics in targeting different groups.

'Lion King' roars at the box office

LOS ANGELES — "The Lion King" took in $42 million in its first weekend in wide release, making for one of the biggest premieres in film history.

The animated Disney epic played in just two theaters last weekend and still finished No. 10 in the box office jungle with $1.6 billion. It opened on 2,552 screens this weekend.

The current record holder for a three-day weekend opening is "Jurassic Park" which debuted with $50.2 million in June 1993.

"The Lion King" debut topped that of "The Flintstones," which earned a Memorial Day record $37.2 million over the four-day weekend.

The figure for "The Lion King" is based on estimated receipts from Friday through Sunday. Official figures were due today.

The weekend's top 10 films and their receipts were:

1. "The Lion King," $42 million.
2. "Speed," $12.5 million.
3. "Wolf," $12.3 million.
4. "Wyatt Earp," $7.4 million.
5. "The Flintstones," $6 million.
6. "City Slickers II," $4.7 million.
7. "Maverick," $3.8 million.
8. "Getting Even With Dad," $3.2 million.
9. "Renaissance Man," $1.9 million.
10. "The Cowboy Way," $1.3 million.

Gas prices rise to start summer

LOS ANGELES — The average price of gasoline nationwide rose more than two cents a gallon over the past two weeks.

The price rose to 118.4 cents per gallon, up 2.08 cents, between June 10 and June 24, said Tribby Lundberg, who directs the biweekly Lundberg Survey of more than 10,000 gas stations nationwide.

Retail prices rose more slowly than wholesale prices, suggesting that the cost at the pump will keep climbing as retailers catch up, Lundberg said.

Stonewall remembered

March commemorates riot, shows pride

By CHRIS OLENT
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — They marched behind a mile-long rainbow banner, cheering and chanting and proclaiming their gay pride. They mourned in silence and screamed in rage.

Mostly, though, the tens of thousands of homosexuals and lesbians from across the country gathered here Sunday to remember the bloody bar riot of 25 years ago that is considered to mark the birth of the gay rights movement.

A quarter-decade after gays fought police at the Stonewall Inn in Greenwich Village, the anniversary celebration showed just how far the movement has come — and how far it has to go.

Participants pleaded for tolerance in a world where many homosexuals still live in fear of violence, of losing their jobs, of being shunned by their families. "We want people to know what happened here (at Stonewall) is happening in Indiana today," said Stephanie Mlnaert of Out and About Indiana.

When the parade ended at Central Park, the crowd shared a minute of silence to remember those dead of AIDS, followed by a scream of rage.

Dr. William Camerino of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., wore a T-shirt with a picture of a young man. It said "Timothy Gallups 1961-1992."

"I'm keeping his memory alive," Camerino said. "He would have loved this." Then he began to cry.

Another marcher held a sign that asked: "How many of us will be alive for Stonewall 35?"

New York City Councilman Thomas Duane, who is gay and infected with the virus that causes AIDS, was cheered loudly when he declared, "There are hundreds of us now in public office. We'll be marching and fighting until there is a cure for AIDS."

Much of the day, though, was celebratory. "Ain't no stopping us now," sang drag queen RuPaul. Liza Minelli and Gregory Hines also performed. A number of participants wore medals from the Gay Games, the sports festival that concluded Saturday.

"It's amazing that in 25 years we've come so far, from when you couldn't get out of a gay bar to where you fill the streets proudly," said Jerry Clifford, a parade participant.

Both marches were as peaceful as Stonewall '69 was violent. There were no scrapes with police.

Little Majors open tonight in Leesburg

By DEAN SMITH
Herald Sports Writer

SANFORD — On paper, this year's Sanford Little Major Baseball League All-Star team appears to be as strong as any to represent the city in several years.

Tonight, they begin the task of trying to turn potential into reality.

Led by the pitching duo of Levi Raines Jr. and Bud Bennett from the two-time city champion Sunnland Corporation Red Sox, the team will open sub-district play at Leesburg today against the host team.

The team will be led by head coach Cynthia Porter, who coached the Rinker Materials Dodgers into the city playoffs this season, and assistant coaches Ken Dryden, from the Fun World at Flea World Cardinals, and Mike Davis, from the Fabri-Care Marlins.

Other members of the team include Alex and Antoine Anderson, from the city runner-up Disabled American Veterans Royals; Brian Porter, who was on the team last year as an 11 year old, and Andrew Beatty, from the Rinker Materials Dodgers; David Brock, from the National Division champion Railroaders Cubs; and Donavan Daniels, from the Stairs Realty White Sox.

Also on the team are Willie Bennett of the First Union Bank A's; Nick Ireland (who was also on the team last year) from the Fabri-Care Marlins; Jonathan Brooks of the Freddie Howard Pirates; Joe Sondhelm from the Fun World at Flea World Cardinals; Jason Turner of the Fisher, Laurence, Deen and Fromang Blue Jays; and Brad Locke from the Cook Construction Orioles.

Last year, Sanford was the runner-up in the sub-district and carried a spot in the district tournament. This year's team hopes to take that next step and earn Sanford's first spot in the state tournament in a number of years.

Nazarene claims Fellowship title on last weekend

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — With a championship within grasp, Sanford First Nazarene refused to buckle.

The Sanford Church Softball League wrapped up its Spring Season with a four games at Pinehurst Park Saturday morning and the opening game of the day between Nazarene and Sanford Christian No. 1 typified the battles that had decided all three division titles this year.

Nazarene needed to win one of its two games while Sanford Christian No. 1 had to beat Nazarene and hope that Nazarene also would lose to the Lake Mary Nativity Catholic Crusaders to force a playoff for the Fellowship Division trophy.

Nazarene looked like it meant to end this one quickly as it took an 8-0 lead in the top of the second inning. But Sanford Christian No. 1 came back with a seven-run rally in the bottom of the second and eventually took a 10-9 lead entering the seventh inning.

Nazarene had two men on with none out. Two batters later, there were two outs and runners on second and third after one man was gunned down at the plate. But Tom Clark blasted a two-run triple to right-center field to put Nazarene on top.

Sanford Christian No. 1 had the potential tying and winning runs reach base in the bottom of the seventh but couldn't come up with the final key hit as Nazarene hung on to join the Sanford First United Methodist-Flames (Competitive) and Sanford Assemblies (Fun) as division champions.

In the other games, the Crusaders tied for second in the Competitive Division with an 18-2 clubbing of Nazarene; Deltona Trinity Assembly of God-Majesty won their seventh straight game, 18-6, over the Flames to tie the Crusaders for second in the Competitive Division; and Sanford Assemblies capped off its championship season with a 14-2 whipping of Sanford Christian No. 2.

The final Division standings were: Competitive — Flames (8-2), Crusaders and Majesty (both 7-3), Sanford Central Baptist (4-6); Fellowship — Nazarene (7-3), Sanford Christian No. 1 (6-5), Oviedo South Seminole Christian (2-8), Lake Mary Grace United Methodist (1-9); Fun — Sanford Assemblies (9-2), Nativity Disciples (7-3), First United Methodist (3-7), Sanford Christian No. 2 (1-9).

The league hopes to start its Fall Season in early September.

All-stars' record doesn't measure league's quality

What's the measure of a quality youth league?

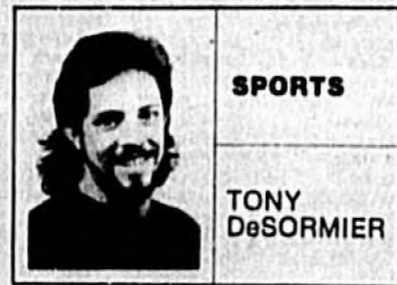

I guess it depends on what you mean by quality.

Way back when, adults created youth leagues with the idea of providing a supervised athletic activity. Instead of playing on unkept sandlots, the leagues gave kids the benefit of playing with uniforms, coaches, and umpires.

The idea has merit: teach the kids how to play the game, give them safe fields to play on, help create some order, and provide a higher quality activity for more kids.

But as it often does, participation got flat run over by competition.

The drive of coaches to win championships has resulted in leagues instituting rules that require that all players get into every game, even if it's only for one at bat. Law suits are filed over who will coach all-star teams. The selection of all-star teams is its own special brand of baseball hell.

SPORTS

We go through this every summer and every summer, league administrators and recreation department personnel suggest that maybe it's time to do away with league championships, do away with all-stars, and just let the kids play.

Interesting idea, but could we get the parents and the rest of the adults to go along with it?

Which brings us back, in a round-about fashion, to the original point: many adults have the gross misconception that a league that fields competitive all-star teams is, by extension, a quality league.

Again, define quality.

Just because a league is turning out a team or two of 12 to 14 kids that can play the game at a highly competitive level doesn't mean that it's meeting the needs of the children in its community any more than it means that the league's administration is obsessed solely with winning all-star tournaments.

In an ideal situation, a successful all-star team (not strictly in terms of wins and losses but just being competitive) is a natural outgrowth of a league where instruction and recreation blend to create children who enjoy playing the game.

Adults only seem to be concerned with the nebulous determination of their respective league's quality when another league seems to do better in post-season play instead of considering the question during the regular season, when wrestling with that self-assessment would do every child the most good.

And don't get locked into this national program vs. that national program. They all have positives and they all have negatives. Catch me out and about this summer and I'll be glad to debate whichever side you choose.

All I ask is that you do me — and your kids — a favor: decide what quality is by looking to see if your league meets the needs of your community's youth instead of pointing at what another league is doing.

If we applied the "let he who is without sin cast the first stone" standard, there'd be enough stones left on the ground to build a bridge across Lake Monroe.

Loss to Romania forces Americans to sit, wait

By BARRY WILNER AP Sports Writer

After losing its biggest World Cup game, the United States was left to play a waiting game.

It could end as early as Tuesday or as late as Thursday. It could have been much easier.

Romania beat the Americans 1-0 Sunday, winning Group A and leaving the U.S. team in third place. Only the four best third-place teams will advance to the second round. While the United States still is in good shape to get a berth, it figures to find tournament favorite Brazil or defending champion Germany as its opponent.

"We wanted to play a team like Brazil or Germany," U.S. goalkeeper Tony Meola said. "But wanted it to be in the semifinal."

Teammate Tab Ramos thought the Americans got carried away with their success after tying Switzerland and beating Colombia. He said overconfidence did them in at the Rose Bowl as much as Romania, which got a goal from Dan Petrescu in the 18th minute and held the lead.

"We thought we were going to go forward and beat this team, forgetting they're a better team than we are," Ramos said. Switzerland got second place despite losing 2-0 to Colombia, which became the first team eliminated from the tournament.

All-Stars

Continued from 1B Flieger, had come out of the losers' bracket last year at Tavara to claim the 14-15 year-old crown with an all-14-year-old team. They now head to Sarasota for the state tournament.

Flieger had gotten to the championship game by eliminating Sanford 5-2 in the losers' bracket final Sunday morning. Flieger won three straight games in the losers' bracket to earn the right to face Daytona Beach.

Sanford had its chances to win, outpitching Flieger 8-5, and leaving two runners on base in the first, fourth and fifth innings and stranding a runner on third base three times.

Defense was Sanford's downfall, five errors allowing all five Flieger runs to score. Doing the damage for Flieger against Sanford were Billy John Genovese (double, single, two runs, two RBI), Brian Savy (single, two runs), Steve Meckert (single, RBI), Tony Perez (single), winning pitcher Jon Restaino (run) and Gene Price (RBI).

Doing the hitting for Sanford were Brett Counts (triple, single, RBI), Ned Rains Jr. (double, run), Chris Louwama (single, run), J.R. Nobles (single, RBI) and Walter Bryant, Chaz Lytle and Jason Graham (one single each).

In the championship contest, Daytona Beach scored three runs in the first inning, two runs in the second inning, four runs in the third inning and a single run in the fourth inning to build the big inning and post the win despite being out-hit 11-10.

Leading Daytona Beach were Justin Barton (triple, double, run, RBI), Richard Pritch (double, single, three runs, RBI), Lee Jennings (two singles, run), Mike Juliano (triple, three runs, two RBI), Dan Castro (single, run, RBI), winning pitcher Greg Flassie (single, run), Nick Graham (single, RBI), T.J. Carter (run, RBI) and Eric Meckert (two runs).

Providing the offense for Flieger were Perez (two singles, two runs, RBI), Savy (two singles, run, RBI), Restaino (two singles, run), B.J. Babcock (single, two runs), Charles Marcheska (single, run), Jackie Reiter (single, RBI), Price and Vinnie Maiori (one single each) and Meckert (RBI).

Reader uses yogurt with antibiotics

DEAR DR. GOTT: Here's a comment in response to your column on antibiotics and diarrhea. Whenever I am required to take antibiotics, I drink cultured buttermilk or eat yogurt (with acidophilus) during the 10 days, or more, of treatment. No diarrhea! Perhaps this will help some readers.

DEAR READER: The diarrhea associated with antibiotic use stems from a depletion of "good" bacteria in the intestine that are necessary for proper digestion. Unfortunately, antibiotics don't differentiate between "good" and "bad" bacteria.

Your method of self-treating this complication is sound. In fact, replacing bacteria in the bowel with harmless bacteria (lactobacilli) is a commonly used technique that is safe, inexpensive and relatively standard. Thanks for writing.

DEAR DR. GOTT: In answer to your plea for help concerning Luft's syndrome, a disorder with which you are not familiar, I am enclosing some information that you might find useful. Signed, Dr. M.

DEAR DOCTOR: My thanks to you and the handful of other physicians who sent me material about Luft's syndrome, an affliction that a reader inquired about several weeks ago.

This rare syndrome is due to an abnormality of the mitochondria, the tiny packets of energy stored in every cell. The disease is caused by an unknown factor that disrupts mitochondrial enzymes, leading to profuse perspiration, increased thirst, thinness (despite a ravenous appetite), progressive weakness, loss of muscle mass, and other symptoms. In short, a hypermetabolic state.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a 67-year-old male and was diagnosed 30 years ago with syringomyelia. If you've ever heard of this malady, please provide information on it.

DEAR READER: This neurological disease causes progressive loss of the sensations of pain and touch over the hands, arms and shoulders, in a cape-like distribution. Eventually, this leads to weakness of the legs, face and throat. However, the course is variable.

The usual cause of syringomyelia is a congenital fluid-filled structure within the spinal canal that produces these

WIN AT BRIDGE

Oscar Levant claimed that "Happiness is not something you experience, it's something you remember." I know what he means, but after playing today's deal, South remembers experiencing happiness.

How would you play in three no-trump, West leading the club nine and East following with the two?

South's opening bid showed 20-22 points, in the modern style. Did you win the first trick in the dummy and take an immediate heart finesse? That is reasonable, but when it loses, West is bound to switch to spades, whatever his holding in the suit. (And if he has K-J-x, he should lead the jack or king to avoid a potential blockage in the suit.) That switch, which puts your contract in considerable jeopardy, is fatal here. Note that even after the second heart finesse is successful, you have only eight tricks: one spade, two hearts and five clubs.

Alternatively, after winning trick one in the dummy, maybe you played a diamond to your king. However, even if East started with ace-third, you don't have the dummy entries to establish and run the suit. Here West wins with the ace and switches to spades, one down.

South won the first trick in hand and led a diamond to dummy's queen. If East could win with the ace and switch to a spade, the contract would presumably die; but then probably nothing could have been done. However, when declarer found West with ace-third, everything was merlot and mistletoe. If West won with the ace, South would have four diamond tricks. And if he ducked, South, with the extra trick in, would take two heart finesesses. Copyright 1994, NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osoi
YOUR BIRTHDAY
June 28, 1994

You're the type of person who enjoys being able to operate independently of others, yet in the year ahead your biggest successes might be the result of joint efforts, not solo ones.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your faith might be put to the test today, but as long as you hold fast to that which you truly believe, things should work out as you envision. Cancer, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4405, New York, N.Y. 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Someone who is indebted to you might not clear up this old obligation on his or her own volition. It will be up to you to broach the matter. Do so today.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Beware of inclinations today to postpone making difficult decisions. Your chart shows you might kid yourself into believing conditions will improve if you just wait a bit longer.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Substantial achievements can be made today, provided you're willing to pay the price. If there is something you really want, it looks as though you might have to earn it the hard way.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your luck, energy and drive have their limitations today, so don't push them to the edge of the envelope. The results could be counterproductive if you do.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) A feather-light touch could be required in handling delicate domestic developments today. Heavy-handed methods will only serve to create more problems.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) When conversing with your peers today, think before you speak. There is a possibility you might unwittingly make some caustic remarks which won't be readily forgiven.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Look out for your own interests today, but don't do so in ways that would hurt others in order to get what you want. That is a formula for losses, not gains.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Even though you might have considerable reserves upon which to draw today, you may still be unable to accomplish your aims. Keep in mind there is always tomorrow.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Usually your optimism is easily aroused. However, testy situations today might cause you to think negatively instead. Don't let gloom overshadow the light.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Old objects or friends must not be allowed to suffer neglect because of your enthusiasm for new things. Each should be given adequate attention today.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) This is one of those days when your progress might not be as rapid as you'd like. Keep in mind that, as long as you're moving forward, each and every step counts.
