Longwood commission meets

LONGWOOD — Commercial solid waste and city cars are on the agenda of tonight's city commission work session and special meeting. During the meeting, the commissioners will discuss the impact of a state recycling law on fees collected by the city. The recycling and commercial solid waste topics were slated for consideration last week but the meeting was postponed until tonight so city attorney Richard Taylor could research the question. Under a new law some companies claim, cities may collect only an administrative or registration fee from recyclers, not franchise fees. The city may lose $80,000 to $100,000 in franchise fees as the result of the law, according to Mayor Paul Lovestrand. The revenue shortfall may result in some budget cutting. The commission postponed okaying the purchase of four new police cars at their regular meeting. The cars will be discussed at the 7 p.m. meeting in city hall.

Volunteers needed for survey

SANFORD — If you've ever wondered if road-kill has an intrinsic value, the Home Habitat Society may have found one. The Maryland-based environmental organization is seeking Florida residents to help conduct a survey for a year to enable the society to determine what roadway conditions contribute to vehicular deaths of wildlife. The society hopes that by publicizing the data, ways can be found to reduce the deaths which can sometimes lead to human injury and deaths. To participate, volunteers must select a section of road of at least a half mile in length, and count the number of dead animals weekly. Seasonal reports must be filed. The survey kit is $3 and must be ordered in time to begin in January. To order, write Road Kill, Home Habitat Society, PO Box 412, Taneytown, Md., 21787.

Bingo controversy

Ordinance considered for better control

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Amid a controversy over a professional bingo hall in Sanford, Police Chief Ralph Russell has asked commissioners to regulate the once-tame past-time.

"Problems are emerging about bingo not being properly conducted," Russell told commissioners last Monday. "The city needs to do something to oversee such operations."

Commissioners directed staff to prepare an ordinance for their consideration.

Area veteran's organizations have complained to police and the State Attorney's Office about Sanford Bingo, a bingo hall-for-hire business they say violates state bingo laws. Police have found no violations.

Russell said he was disappointed recent state legislation failed to tighten enforcement of bingo operations. Russell suggested a city ordinance requiring video cameras to record pay-offs, photos of checks and financial reporting.

"In the first place, if we have such a strict ordinance, it would certainly increase the (city) work load, said commissioner A.A. McClunahan. "Also, it looks like if we call for such strict requirements, it wouldn't be fair to all concerned."

"With video cameras and all those other requirements, only the commercial bingo operators would have all of that. Charity organizations probably couldn't afford it, and we'd be putting them out of business."

"I don't think that will be the case, because many of them do have those capabilities," answered Russell. "I've discussed this with a number of charity and smaller type bingo operators and they were in favor of asking that the city enact some type of ordinance to oversee the full operation to assure it will be operated legally."

FBI honors Burkett for leadership

By VICKI DeSORMIER

Dotti Burkett loves to get involved with kids. The Seminole County sheriff's department's Community Service officer spends all of her work time and a lot of her time off teaching youngsters about the dangers of drugs and about safety.

This past week, Burkett was honored for her efforts with the presentation of the FBI Director's 1993 Community Leadership Award for the Tampa Division office. That division covers most of the central part of the state.

"This is a great honor for Ms. Burkett," Sheriff Don Eslinger said. "We are very proud of her."

Burkett, who has been employed by the sheriff's office for less than a year, has already done presentations for more than 7,500.

Ex-tax collector home after heart transplant

CHARLESTON, SC — A little more than a week after he received a new heart, former Seminole County tax collector G. Troy Ray, has been released from the hospital at the Medical University of South Carolina.

While he's not exactly strutting out the door unassisted, family members said that he is doing very well for a man who has so recently undergone such a serious operation. "He's doing terrifically," said his daughter-in-law Tammy Ray of Sanford. "He's a little weak, but he's able to do some things for himself."

According to a hospital spokesman in South Carolina, Ray is recovering well and his release was on schedule.

Ray was placed on the donor waiting list on May 20 and received the new heart six months to the day after he went on the list.

He and his wife Barbara moved to Charleston in May, as soon as he was placed on the waiting list because he was required to be

1920 home mixes heart with soul

By SUSAN WENNER

A 1920's home with a contemporary flair sits comfortably on Palmetto Avenue. Owned by Lynette Woodward, it shares much of her heart and soul.

"J.C. Mitchell and his wife Velma were believed to be the first owners," she said. "The Velma Mitchell administration building is just a few blocks away. I'm told she was a principal years ago and the building was named after her." The Grady Duncan family then owned the home for 40 years.

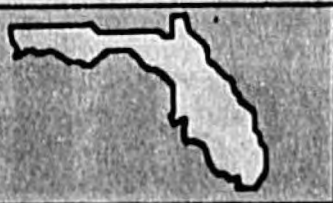

Woodward began renovations by pulling up the old carpeting throughout the house and restoring the hardwood floors. With some hired help, many other transformations took place. "It wasn't in too bad a shape," she said. "It needed some work but not a lot. It was actually a lot of fun — no horror stories like some"

Search continues for missing girl

STUART — Detectives plan to begin an unusual search this week for a body at the county landfill. They're looking for some answers in the case of a missing 10-year-old Port Salerno girl.

The fourth-grader disappeared July 11 after going to the corner store for a bag of potato chips. Despite a segment on TV's America's Most Wanted, the only lead police had was neighbor Claude Davis' report he saw several men grab Andrea Parsons and throw her into a car.

Police were skeptical of the story and after further questioning, Davis, 57, gave a different version earlier this month. He told police Andrea had gone with him to a garbage bin near her house to look for aluminum cans. When she tried to climb out of the bin, she hit her head and died, Davis said. He then dumped her body in a garbage bin.

Davis is charged with false imprisonment and is in jail, unable to pay his $250,000 bond.

If the body was in fact dumped, the landfill is where they'll find her, Martin County Sheriff's Capt. William Snyder said.

Detectives plan to begin searching the Martin County landfill Tuesday, an effort expected to take several weeks.

Thieves make off with gems

NAPLES — Two thieves made off with about $1 million in gems from a downtown jewelry store in broad daylight as window shoppers strolled by unaware of what was happening.

Stephen Crabtree said he was alone behind the counter Saturday when two men, unmasked and casual, walked into the store.

One of the men asked Crabtree if he could see the "$2,500 diamond ring" he said he had looked at earlier in the week.

"I told him I didn't remember the ring and asked him to describe it for me," said Crabtree, who has owned Crabtree Estate Jewelers for nine years. "Then he pulled out what looked like a .38 revolver and shoved it right up to my face."

The thieves then took Crabtree to the store's back room, forced him to lie down on his stomach and used hard-plastic stripping to tie his hands behind his back and his legs together.

While shoppers walked by the store, some even stopping to look at the window display, the thieves inside made off with two pillowcases full of diamonds, rubies, emeralds, gold rings and necklaces.

Anthony Mansolillo, Crabtree's business partner, said the store was fully insured by Jeweler's Mutual. The $1 million figure is Crabtree's estimate.

Adults fight after football game

TAMPA — Once the teen-agers stopped the hitting on the football field and were shaking hands after the game, the adults went at it in the stands.

Three men — one a coach — and a teenager were arrested Saturday night following a melee that broke out after a youth league football game between the Brandon Raiders and the Pinecrest Pilots at King High School.

Players' parents and football spectators "were involved in a brawl with each other and officials when deputies arrived," said Hillsborough County sheriff's Lt. John Reed.

Authorities were unsure how many of the estimated 100 people in the stands were involved. It took 20 deputies to break up the fighting, Reed said.

The exact cause of the melee is uncertain. Some witnesses told authorities that a man supporting one team went into the stands and started making trouble. A coach said intoxicated supporters of one team went into the opposing team's stands and started the mess by hitting a player's mother.

Only a few football players became involved, and their participation reportedly was minor. One coach was taken to the hospital after a player hit him in the head with a helmet. There were no charges filed.

Heart-transplant patient 'doing well'

GAINESVILLE — He spent nearly half his short life on a waiting list for a donor heart. Now 9-week-old Gary Weems is being closely monitored after becoming the youngest patient to receive a heart transplant in Florida.

"He is still in critical but stable condition," Shands Hospital spokeswoman Kimberly Jordan said Sunday. "That is typical for a heart-transplant patient at this stage. He is doing very, very well."

The Pensacola infant was stable throughout the five-hour operation Saturday performed by University of Florida surgeons, nurses and medical technicians, said Dr. Daniel G. Knauft, associate professor of thoracic and cardiovascular surgery at UF's College of Medicine.

He passed the half-way mark Sunday in what surgeons say is the most critical time period, the first 48 hours after getting the new heart.

Gary, son of Charles and Gari Weems, had idiopathic cardiomyopathy, a weakening of the heart muscle due to unknown causes.

Hope from hubble

Countdown begins for Endeavour's crucial hubble repair mission

By MARGIA DUNN
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL — The countdown began Sunday for the Hubble Space Telescope repair mission, considered by many to be NASA's biggest challenge in space since the Apollo moon landings.

The space shuttle Endeavour is scheduled to lift off on the 11-day flight in pre-dawn darkness Wednesday.

Hubble program managers and scientists were thrilled to be, finally, this close to correcting the telescope's fuzzy vision and other problems. Even normally placid launch officials were caught in the excitement.

"This is a very, very exciting mission," shuttle test director Mike Leimbach said soon after the countdown clocks started ticking. "It's been billed as one of the most important missions NASA's had in a long, long time, and we're all anxious for it to go."

Endeavour's crew will go out five and possibly seven times to work on Hubble after the bus-sized telescope is anchored in the shuttle cargo bay. No U.S. space mission to date has had more than four spacewalks.

The seven astronauts assigned to the flight — four of them spacewalkers — inspected Endeavour's cargo bay for sharp edges Sunday and got their last look on the ground at the Hubble replacement parts.

Endeavour holds 11 parts to replace or aid failed or failing telescope equipment: corrective lenses, upgraded camera, two pairs of gyroscopes, gyroscope electronics and fuses, solar panels, solar panel drive electronics, two magnetometers, ultraviolet-detector switch and computer.

The shuttle also contains more than 280 tools for the spacewalkers, who will take turns going out in pairs.

NASA isn't taking any chances. There are socket wrenches with short extensions, medium extensions and long extensions, oversized sockets, under-sized sockets, drills for balky bolts, screwdrivers of all sorts, extra batteries for power tools, and duplicates of everything.

"I can't stop what I'm doing and go run to the hardware store to pick up a tool, so I might as well take everything with me that's possible," said flight director Milt Heflin.

Virtually everyone agrees it's the most complex mission in more than 12 years of shuttle flying and arguably the most ambitious space endeavor since the last two men walked on the moon in 1972.

Way Back When

Last week the nation remembered the death of John F. Kennedy. Presented here is a list of the incredible comparison between the assassination of Kennedy with the death of Abraham Lincoln. This list was compiled from several sources by the "Way Back When" columnist Julian Stenstrom. Stenstrom was the associate editor of the Herald, under editor and publisher Walter Gielow when Kennedy was assassinated in Dallas that fateful Friday. The Friday edition had just been proofed when the newsroom teleprinters began ringing bells as never done before. Stenstrom checked the machines which read "Bulletin, Bulletin, Bulletin." There was a slight pause. As the machine began printing again, it read "Dallas * President Kennedy has been shot!" Stenstrom notified Gielow who immediately ordered the late Fred Wells, head of the printing facility, to hold page one. About 20 minutes later the president was officially pronounced dead and the Herald printed the story under the largest headline type that could be found. It read "Kennedy Slain."

Holiday plants: beauty of science at work

By Associated Press

GAINESVILLE — Years of careful breeding and research have improved poinsettias and chrysanthemums to the point they dominate holiday plant sales, University of Florida researchers say.

"Chrysanthemums are the most popular flowering potted plant sold on a weekly basis, but the $150 million worth of poinsettias sold during the holidays makes them the No. 1 selling plant of the year," says Terril A. Nell, Environmental

Horticulture Department head at the University of Florida Institute of Food and Agricultural Sciences. "Poinsettia sales actually exceed the sale of mums by about $50 million."

Long-term studies at the university also have been geared toward improving greenhouse production and retail distribution of all popular plants, Nell said.

Chrysanthemums now are shipped when 50 percent of their flowers are open and the remaining buds well developed, to avoid flower buds opening under low interior light levels. Today's plants also are shipped at temperatures that maintain low respiration levels, to minimize yellowing and increase longevity.

Nell said a study by Yoder Brothers, a major chrysanthemum distributor, indicates 75 percent of potted mums now are sold through supermarkets.

The researchers have determined that inadequate lighting, warm temperatures and irregular watering during retail display harms flowering plants. Retailers have responded by improving handling and display methods.

Floriculture researcher James E. Barrett said consumers play an equal role in getting the most out of their holiday selections.

Most potted plants have easy-to-follow care tags that usually include proper lighting, temperature and watering needs. Following these is a snap and virtually ensures consumers will prolong the life of their favorite plant.

Domestic violence charged

Helen O'Neal, 18, of 301 Franklin Arms, Sanford, and Vincent Foster, 18, of 1501 W. 15th St., Sanford, were charged with domestic violence/aggravated battery by Sanford Police on Saturday.

Foster was also charged with battery on a pregnant female. Police said Foster reported that O'Neal had hit him with a hammer, but that there were no signs of injury.

Police said he had choked her, knocked her to the ground and stood on her back.

Both were taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility. Bond was not set on either.

Man charged with domestic violence

Charles Wilson Redman, 30, 611 Oak Ave., Apt. A, Sanford, was charged with domestic violence/battery by Seminole County sheriff's officers on Saturday.

Deputies said a man and a woman were fighting in the road in the 2900 block of Sanford Avenue.

The woman said that Redman had hit her in the face with his fists and ripped her shirt.

He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $2,500.

Woman charged with battery

Lauren Yvette Blenman, 31, 209 Bamboo Dr., Sanford, was charged with battery/domestic violence on Saturday by Seminole County sheriff's deputies.

Deputies said her boyfriend had gone back to the home they shared and attempted to remove his property. He had brought a deputy with him because he expected trouble.

Deputies report that Blenman became "abusive" and shouted obscenities.

She was taken into custody and held on $1,500 bond at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility.

Criminal mischief charged

James Warren Dannelly, 37, 11613 Groveview Way, Sanford, was charged with domestic violence and criminal mischief and vandalism by Seminole County sheriff's officers on Friday.

Deputies said Dannelly had been driving the victim's car without her permission and when she demanded the keys, he pulled the car across the street and then drove at high speed across the street and smashed into another car owned by the victim.

The victim had been standing behind the other car and jumped out of the way when she saw he was not going to stop, deputies said.

The other car was pushed into the front porch of the house and was damaged on both the front and back end, officers said.

Deputies said damage was estimated at $9,000.

Dannelly was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $2,000 bond.

Man arrested for domestic violence

Emmanuel "Deek" Johnson, 34, 146 Carver Ave., Sanford, was charged with domestic violence/battery by Sanford Police on Saturday.

Police said he held his mother down and repeatedly hit her in the head and face.

They said that she reported the problem was an ongoing one. They said that he admitted to hitting her.

Johnson was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held in lieu of $1,000 bond.

Violence and battery charged

Frederick Cole, 31, 2605 Georgia Ave., Sanford, was charged with domestic violence/aggravated battery and false imprisonment by Sanford Police on Saturday.

Police said that he repeatedly hit the victim in the head with a hammer and that he also struck her on the hands feet and legs.

They said that he denied her access to medical attention or police by not letting her use the phone or leave the home.

They said she eventually sneaked away and drove herself to the hospital and called police.

She told police that he had threatened to kill her if she called law enforcement.

Cole was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $4,000 bond.

Zoo sets Education Complex dedication

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — A new Environmental Education Complex will be dedicated Wednesday at the Central Florida Zoological Park. The $100,000 complex is designed to offer children new opportunities to discover the world of animals as well as learn about conservation.

Financing for the design and building of the complex has been sponsored by Heart of Florida Capital Fund, Seminole County Tourist Development Council, General Mills Foundation, Wharton-Smith, Central Florida Pipeline Company, and the Central Florida Zoological Society.

The dedication will take place at 10 a.m. Wednesday on the zoo grounds. According to Marketing and Public Relations Manager Andrea Farmer, the zoo will, at the same time, announce the creation of a conservation and science curriculum for third grade students in Seminole County.

The General Mills Foundation will be providing a grant of $26,675 for this environmental education program.

The grant will also include financing free visits to the zoo for third graders, to bring them close to the animals for an enhanced learning experience.

The new education complex is a 1,960 square foot, fully-furnished modular building, which features a spacious classroom, wildlife library, and office space.

For information on the complex, phone the zoo at 323-4450.

HMO clinics target poor

Throughout the state, people who staff government-funded health clinics or depend on them for their well-being tell stories of HMO recruiters making fast pitches to Florida's poor in an attempt to capture the Medicaid dollars that pay their bills.

Joanna McGee of Fort Pierce said she signed up with an HMO whose agent approached her at a food stamp office. She later learned she would have to go several towns away for obstetric care she could have gotten at a local clinic.

Linda Bryant of Dade City, a pregnant woman who also was won over by an HMO sales pitch outside a food stamp office, said when it was time for her to give birth, the HMO physician told her to just "go to the emergency room." She wound up back at her regular clinic, which delivered her baby.

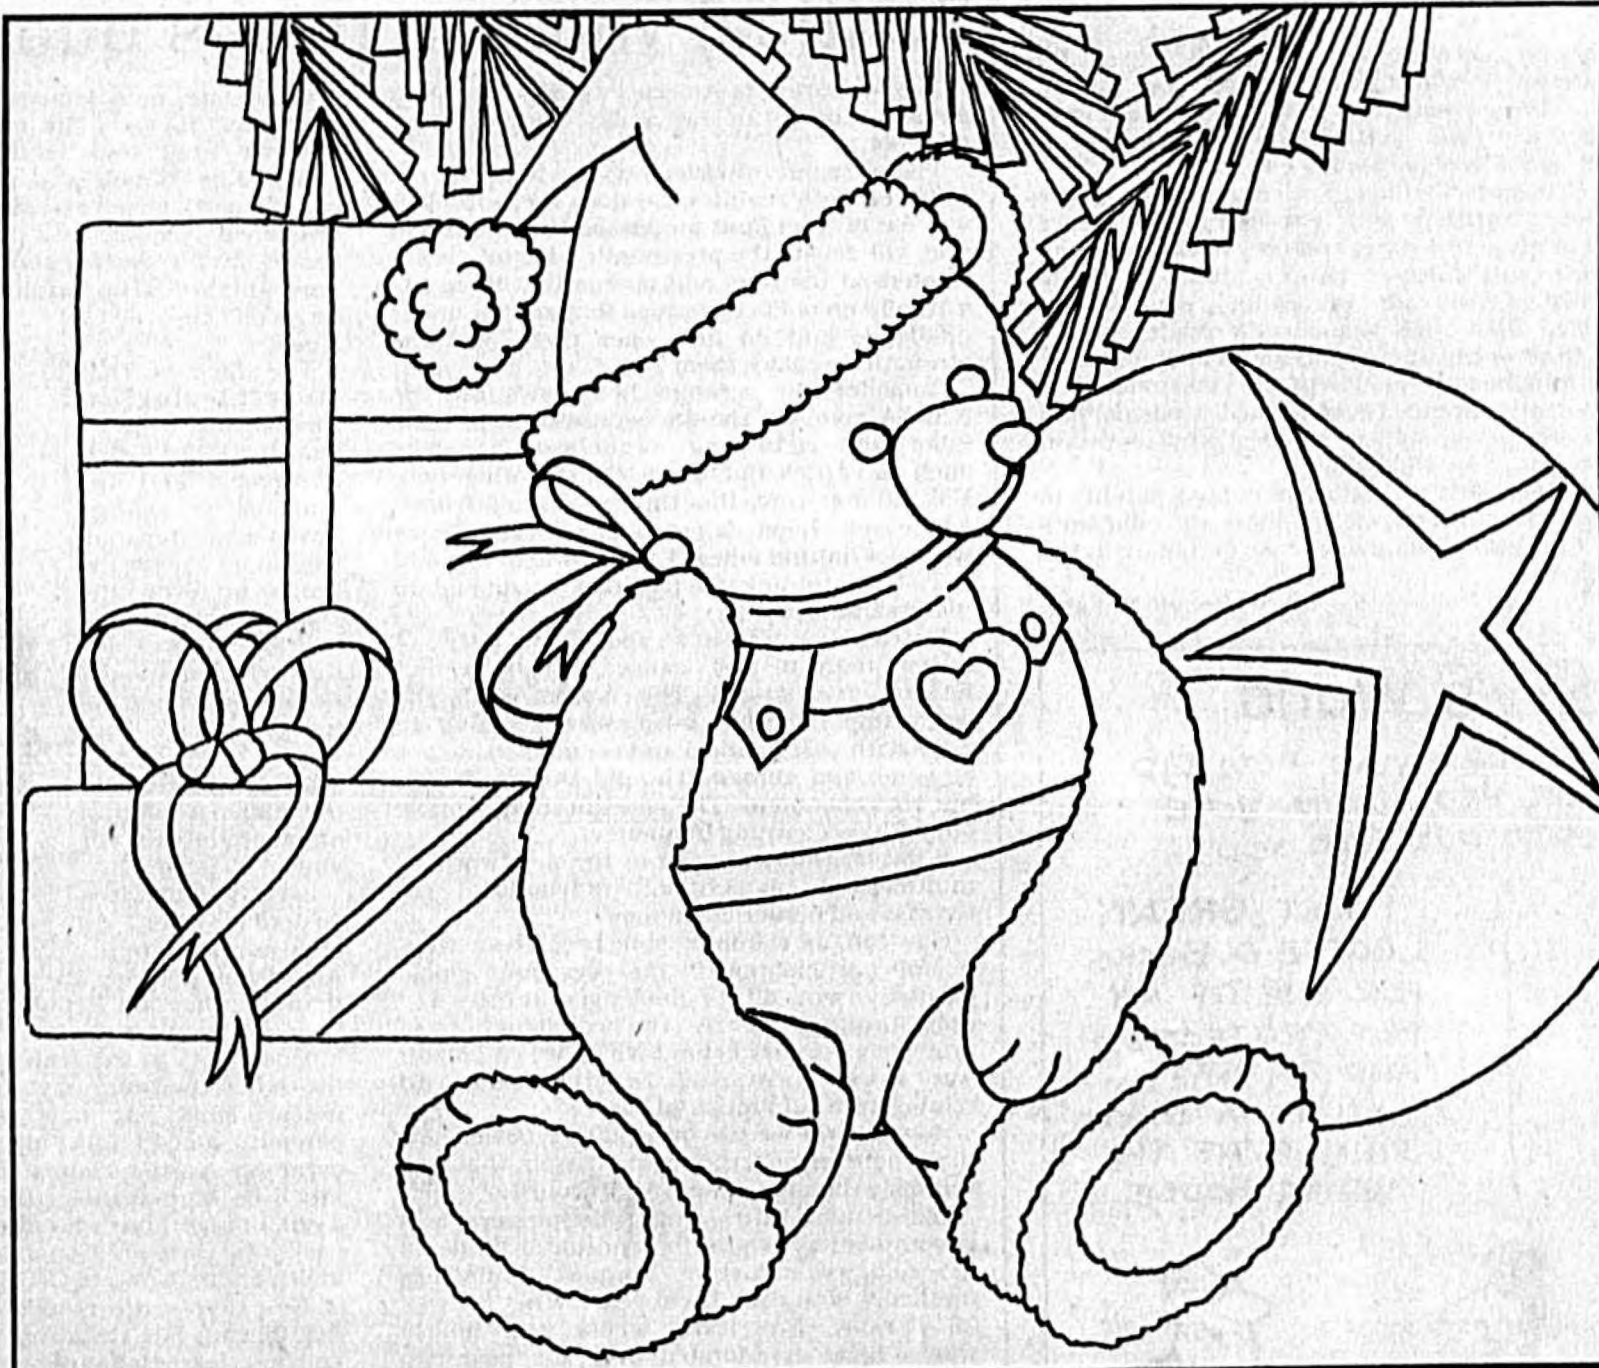

While clinic officials question the quality of care through HMOs, they say they are especially offended by aggressive sales tactics.

"That's the way you sell automobiles, not the way you promote good health care," said Ron Melancon of Health Resource Alliance of Pasco, which has clinics in Dade City, Lacombe and Zephyrhills.

Clinic officials surveyed by the St. Petersburg Times say many of the patients lured away through high-pressure sales are non-English-speaking farm workers who often wind up in plans that are so confusing or inconvenient they discourage patients from seeking even basic health care.

"We get people in tears at our centers," said Kevin Kearns, finance director for several clinics called Family Health Centers of Southwest Florida, based in Fort Myers.

Taking care of those in need

The Thanksgiving holiday weekend has ended, and many people feel good about it. They helped provide food for those who might otherwise not have any.

People donated food to churches. Students, teachers and administrators at Crooms School of Choice provided meals for over 1,200 of the city's less fortunate. Motorcyclists from Abate of Florida donated food to the Mental Health Center.

The people who received this food had reason to be thankful. Unfortunately, it only lasts for this one day. The rest of the year, perhaps with the exception of Christmas, they will continue to eat whatever is available, if anything.

What would be more in the spirit of helping people, is if concern similar to that shown this past week, could be carried over throughout the year.

There are many ways this could be accomplished. In cleaning out the closet, clothing could be distributed through such organizations as the Rescue Outreach Mission, Salvation Army, Christian Sharing Center, or others. Food, of course, is always needed.

Sanford can be proud of a number of organizations that are working diligently to help the needy. They have done an excellent job, and deserve appreciation from everyone.

Appreciation however, must go beyond an occasional handshake. It must be shown in constant support through donations of usable items.

If there is a question about who should receive such donations, information is always available at the particular centers. Pay them a visit and see personally, how a donation of a can of beans or pair of pants is used.

Let us join together and show people that Central Florida takes care of those in need.

Educating students

Parents and those of us with empty nests are helping the schools educate the children of the community. Does our contribution of tax money used to house, equip, and pay administrators, teachers, and counselors fall short of the kind of help expected by some among us?

From 1938-1948 (inclusive) my parents never attended a meeting with educators, they never looked at my report card, and they didn't even pay taxes. I will forever owe a debt to those homeowners who did finance my education. I graduated from high school with grades in the upper third of my 250 member class without ever seeing an educator outside of the classroom. The fact that my parents never formed a partnership with school personnel had no effect whatsoever on the outcome of my education.

Let us hope that the failure of today's parents to live up to the expectations of editors and educators will not be used as another excuse for failure in the classroom.

The Library of Congress surrenders

Political correctness has not yet subalbed on American college campuses. Indeed, it is getting worse. Professors, as well as students, are being brought up on charges of "insensitive" language, ideas and curriculum material.

At Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tenn., a professor has been conducting a popular art history class for years. Suddenly, however, a student filed charges of sexual harassment against him. He did not know her. It was a very large class. But she claimed that the reproduction of a painting he had shown sexually harassed her.

The university instituted a probe of the professor, questioning present and past students to see if any of them had felt sexually harassed by any art he had shown. After four months, he was cleared. His pleasure in — and enthusiasm for — teaching have gone.

Political correctness, moreover, has spread far beyond institutions of alleged higher learning. Consider how the Library of Congress, of all places, has betrayed the integrity of its film division so as not to be "insensitive."

The Library of Congress has been showing a 54-film festival of the most significant early American movies. The most significant and by far the most influential film — D.W. Griffith's 1915 "Birth of a Nation" — has been censored out of the series.

It is as if the Smithsonian's jazz department were to present a history of early jazz and decide to omit Louis Armstrong because some blacks consider him to have been an Uncle Tom. Yet without Louis Armstrong, jazz would have been deeply impoverished. And he was not an Uncle Tom. It was Armstrong who publicly excoriated President Dwight Eisenhower for not moving into Little Rock, Ark., to protect black children trying to go to school despite being surrounded by howling white racist mobs.

But even if Louis Armstrong had been an Uncle Tom, it would be denying him his powerful place in music history to act as if he had not existed. So too, with "Birth of a Nation." It is a profoundly racist movie, with a view of the Reconstruction period that reduces blacks to degrading stereotypes. However, as in Armstrong's case, the history of American movies would have been greatly diminished had it not been for what Griffith showed of the potential of film.

As Ken Ringle has pointed out in the Washington Post, "Birth of a Nation" for the first time "integrated into its narrative technique such cinematic devices as close-ups, flashbacks, multiple camera angles and parallel story lines. It shaped to a monumental degree the very concept of the motion picture."

Yet William Gibson, chairman of the NAACP's national board, says the film is "an insult to 30 million African Americans. To honor this film and its filmmaker is to pay tribute to America's shameful racial history and to encourage a repeat of that history."

The man who surrendered the good name of the Library of Congress to those insisting the film not be shown is Pat Loughney. He is in charge of the Library of Congress' film division. "Quite candidly," he says in the language of the politically correct, "it is a sensitive subject."

Political vacuum raises questions

The fracturing of America's political system gathers momentum every day. Its reordering does not.

The intraparty divisions on the NAFTA vote reflected both realities. So does the unbroken success of term limit proposals. Historians can and will debate the precipitating factors. What matters in the here and now is that there are virtually no political verities that are not under challenge and no new ones that show the strength to replace them.

Consider the strange bedfellows on the NAFTA vote. On the one side were organized labor and right-wing Republican populists such as Patrick Buchanan. On the other were Bill Clinton and the right-wing Republican whip, Rep. Newt Gingrich of Georgia. These were not natural allies. Ten years ago, it would have been unthinkable that they would end up in the same camp.

But NAFTA was a symbol — an effect — rather than a first cause of schism and temporary alliances. The nation is in the wrenching, overdue business of coming to grips with vast political and economic changes at home and abroad. The old slogans are all but void of content. The new questions tumble out with accelerating frequency.

What is America's role in the new world of multifaceted competition, transnational enterprise and borderless money?

How can our self-interest be best advanced — by full participation in the ever more global economy, with all its challenges, threats and opportunities, or by the construction of protective barriers behind which we can repair our most damaged institutions and reinvigorate our industrial base?

How should we use our military power now that there is no other great power that can seriously threaten our physical security? Within our borders, what is the proper role of government as its pre-eminent role as funder of the military industrial complex diminishes markedly with each fiscal year? What is owed to working Americans whose real hourly wages have deteriorated over the past two decades and whose prospects — even among the well-educated — are bleaker than their predecessors a generation ago? And if something should be done, by whom and how?

Is our government still of, for and by the people? How can politicians be made more accountable? Have the elites — whether financial, technological, intellectual or political — excluded the common man from meaningful participation in his own democracy? How do you make the government more responsive?

Why is there so much talk about social disintegration, crime and poor public education, and so little meaningful action? What government policies, if any, should be implemented to deal with them? Is government really an answer, or is it the problem?

These are not Democratic or Republican questions. Many of the proposed answers — whether from Ross Perot, the Democratic Leadership Council or Jack Kemp — are not old-line party responses. Meanwhile, the voters are saying, loudly and clearly, that when results aren't forthcoming, they will change horses at the first opportunity and without regard to party labels.

The fact is that most ideological guideposts have vanished. The Great Depression and the long battle against Soviet-style imperialism no longer set the limits or even the starting point for the political debate. Neither is relevant to the people's concerns today, though both were the indispensable foundation of the nation's political superstructure for almost 50 years.

Party identity is a yesterday thing. As often as not, more Americans say they are political independents than say they are Republicans or Democrats. Even allowing for the fact that many so-called independents in fact lean toward one party or the other, pollsters say the number of real independents has now reached nearly 25 percent, an all-time high. Neither of the organized parties claims the allegiance of as much as 40 percent of the adult population. Even among those who identify themselves as partisans, there are vast differences. Democratic Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia and Bill Bradley of New Jersey are not the same. Neither are Republicans like California's Gov. Pete Wilson and Sen. Jesse Helms of North Carolina.

What we have is vacuum, around which unmoored factions and interests are revolving furiously. Because he is president, Bill Clinton has the best opportunity to fill it, a fact he repeatedly indicates that he understands.

But taking on hard issues such as NAFTA, while indispensable, isn't enough. A series of cliffhangers makes for great theater but chaotic governance. What the nation needs is a comprehensive vision of a new system, domestic and international, whose workings will be beneficial to most Americans.

At the moment, neither the president nor anyone else is presenting such a vision. But politics, like nature, abhors a vacuum. It will be filled.

The fracturing of America's political system gathers momentum every day.

Low-income U.S. women are priced out of Norplant

WASHINGTON — Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., hopes that when the health care system is reformed, the government can afford to treat American women as well as it treats women in Third World countries.

Last year, the Agency for International Development spent $4.5 million on Norplant contraceptive devices for 167,000 Third World women, yet the government could not afford to provide the same device to many lower income American women. This time, however, the government is not entirely at fault: AID can purchase each contraceptive from its Finnish manufacturer for $23, yet American women have to pay a U.S. drug company $385. After medical fees are figured in, the contraceptive can cost American women up to $1,000.

Adding insult to injury is this: American taxpayers have already paid over $16 million to help develop Norplant, a contraceptive that experts estimate only costs $16 to make.

"It's one thing if a private sector company shoulders all the risk themselves," Wyden, chairman of the small business subcommittee on regulation, business opportunities and technology, told our associate Andrew Conte. "That's free enterprise and deserves to be handsomely rewarded. It's quite another when the taxpayer does much of the heavy lifting."

"It's sad when you've got thousands of women in this country who can't get access to (Norplant) while U.S. tax dollars are used to subsidize the purchase of the drug overseas at one-tenth the price," added Wyden.

The domestic price of Norplant is set by pharmaceutical giant Wyeth-Ayerst, which holds the rights to Levonorgestrel, the main ingredient in oral contraceptives and Norplant. Family planning activists argue that Wyeth-Ayerst's main contribution to Norplant's 25-year development phase was the donation of Levonorgestrel for research while the other more significant costs were covered by the government and private donations.

At a recent hearing of Wyden's subcommittee, one of the defenses for Norplant's current price was offered by a Wyeth-Ayerst representative who said that the company was afraid that the contraceptive would be seen as a welfare drug. "If the drug came to be seen simply as a product for public-sector clinics and lower-income users," he told the subcommittee, "we knew it would not be well-accepted anywhere." Wyeth-Ayerst plans to offer a reduced price for the drug to the public sector when the five-year period after government approval is up.

Until that time, Norplant remains out of reach of many potential users who are neither poor enough to qualify for public assistance nor wealthy enough to afford the drug. Organizations that support family planning once celebrated the development of Norplant as a revolutionary form of contraception, but now helplessly watch the drug priced out of usefulness. One organization that provides publicly funded contraceptives noted that for every woman who receives Norplant, five or more women are denied the service of oral contraceptives.

"I don't think what Wyeth charges (for Norplant) is reasonable," Karen Palaky, associate medical director of Planned Parenthood in Washington, D.C., told us. "Norplant represents much of what does not go right with the American drug industry."

Adding insult to injury is this.

She said that she thought the house had been modified about three times but structurally it's all original. "The kitchen and master bedroom were made larger," she said, "possibly by one of the previous owners, the Duncans." The floors, windows and fireplace are also all original. Her neighbor who is 93 years old has filled her in on a lot of details concerning her home's past. "My neighbor told me there was a butler's pantry in the kitchen," she said. "It's almost like a walk-in closet with shelves to the ceiling. The sun room was possibly added in 1970. I always hated old houses," said Woodward. "I thought they were dark and dreary." She recalled that she found that it came down to economics. Old homes gave you a lot more for your money and Sanford had substantially better prices. Even though Woodward works in another city she said, "I'm from up north so I was used to commuting 30 miles."

"Lots of decorating magazines like Better Homes and Gardens and Southern Living have given me my decorating ideas," she said. "Any opportunity to see other homes for ideas, I try to." Like many other enthusiasts who restore and furnish older homes, Woodward agreed that "many of my furnishings are from auctions; they're reproductions."

Her home is decorated with a peach and teal color scheme. The fireplace has been painted over the original bricks. The exterior doors leading into the home were replaced with a French door and glass sliding. "I've repainted, repapered and decorated all the rooms," she said.

Woodward's home was captured by a painting from a photograph her aunt created for her. She proudly displayed the painting and showed photographs of the remodeling through various stages.

An original cabinet seat shadows her dining room as well as the original corner china cabinet that's built into the wall.

The kitchen needed the most work, Woodward recalled. "I was on the road a lot for my job when I first bought the house so I could pass by that room a lot." New linoleum tiles were used and Woodward hired someone to build all new cabinets. "The most money I spent was redoing the kitchen cabinets and plumbing," she said. "New appliances were also added."

Woodward said, "A garage apartment with a two-car garage, potting shed and tool shed were added in the background possibly in the '50s. I hope to one day turn it into a studio or something."

She spoke of a visit she received once from the previous owners. "They told me that the bathroom originally had a heating unit by the tub. It had a spigot that the heated water came from for a warm bath."

"I have an eclectic mix of stuff," said Woodward. "I even re-upholstered my chairs. I tend to lean toward contemporary decorating."

A belt sander was used to strip paint from the exterior of the house. That was five years ago and it was repainted at that time. "I pulled up the wood porch and replaced the porch and screens," she said.

Contemporary tones grace this home, and the elegance of the 1920s shines in the wood. Pulling together the best of both worlds is Woodward's own unique style.

BUILDING PERMIT ACTIVITY

FISCAL YEARS 91/92, 92/93

Building

dential and commercial construction took an upswing during the 1992-1993 county fiscal year, according to a new report released by the Seminole County Building Department.

The number of residential construction permits issued increased from 961 during the 1991-1992 fiscal year to 1,041 during the year ending in September, an 8 percent increase. Commercial construction starts increased from 45 to 61, a 35 percent increase. The county tracks monthly building permit activity and summarizes them for the October-to-September 12-month period.

Homebuilder Bill Miller, president of Suda Inc., says frustration may be driving the home-buying surge. Miller has built homes throughout Seminole County, including Sanford-area neighborhoods.

"Consumer confidence is still low, but people are so frustrated that there's been no turnaround they're buying almost in defiance and taking advantage of the low interest rates," said Miller.

Overall permit activity actually declined 14 percent during the year, primarily due to the decline of roof permits. 1993 saw the completion of thousands of roof permits. 1993 also saw roof damages caused by the March 1992 hailstorm in the southern areas of the county.

Despite the numerical drop, the overall value of construction increased by 10 percent during the 1991-1992 fiscal year, per BNA's 1993-1994 national survey. Last year, $216.7 million in construction was completed by the county.

In October, overall permit activity decreased 39 percent, but the value of the construction increased 25 percent. In September, construction activity dropped 15 percent.

pre-school and elementary school students in Seminole County.

"She is very involved in the community and with spreading the drug prevention message to all students," said Ed McDonough, public information officer for the sheriff's office.

Burkett gives presentations at schools, churches and day care centers. According to McDonough, Burkett is willing to go "just about anywhere" there are young people willing to listen and learn.

Burkett told FBI officials that her schedule is erratic and that her hours are long, but that she is always ready for a new assignment to go out to meet with the children and teach them how to really "say no" to drugs.

She said she spends most of her "spare time," what little she has, searching for another audience of children with whom she can share her message of drug-free living and safety.

According to the sheriff's office, Burkett's personnel file is crammed full of letters and notes of appreciation as well as recommendations from the group she has worked with over the last nine months.

Prior to coming to work for the Seminole County sheriff's office in February, Burkett worked with students in Orange County.

There, she was honored as the Outstanding Parent in Education in 1987, 1988 and 1989. She was also honored with the Orange County Parent Teacher Association Community Involvement Award in 1989.

They have an apartment in Charleston and have made contacts with other former Sanford residents who are now in that area.

According to Julian Stenstrom, Sanford historian and goodwill ambassador, the Rays have been in touch with Alvin Calhoun, a longtime railroad man and Sanfordite who now lives in North Charleston. It was Stenstrom who brought the two families in contact with one another.

"When I talked to Alvin this morning," Stenstrom said Monday morning, "he said that the recovery was 'almost unbelievable'."

Tammy Ray said that many people from Sanford have written cards and letters to Ray to wish him well.

"I know those cards have meant a lot to him," she said. She encourages others who know and remember her to either in-law to write to him to cheer him on to full recovery.

Ray, 65, retired in 1988 after 30 years service with the Seminole County government.

He had served for six years as chief deputy clerk of the Circuit Court and then was elected to the position of tax collector, a job in which he served for 24 years.

Since his retirement, he has taken up oil painting, a field where he has become well-respected in the Seminole County art community.

He also volunteers many hours at the First Street Gallery in downtown Sanford.

His daughter-in-law said the family is not setting a specific date for his return to Sanford. They are taking, she said, a wait-and-see attitude and will let his recovery rate determine when he will come home.

"We're hoping he'll be home for his birthday in February," she said.

Elders favors comprehensive health education programs

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Comprehensive health education from kindergarten through 12th grade is crucial to reducing the numbers of children born out of wedlock, Surgeon General Joycelyn Elders said Sunday.

Schools teach drivers education, "but when we come to health education, which includes sexuality education, we refuse to teach them that," Elders said on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley."

"A major cause of children dying is really related to many of the social problems impacting their health, so I really feel we need to have a comprehensive health education program in our schools from kindergarten through 12th grade. This is the equalizer," she said.

Elders said health education must include the entire spectrum of social issues including drugs, alcohol, sex and violence. "It's not going in there and giving them a plumbing lesson. I feel that's a waste of time."

She said only 5 percent of public schools now have comprehensive programs.

Elders, who as the former top health official in Arkansas was outspoken on the need to provide condoms to sexually active teenagers, said that while contraceptives should be made available, "if you don't have the education I could go out and throw condoms up in the air and let them rain."

She noted that 85 percent of children from upper and middle-income families receive early childhood education, but only 18 percent of children on welfare. "They're the ones who absolutely need it the most."

Charles Murray of the American Enterprise Institute, appearing on the same show, blamed the welfare system for the sharp rise in single mothers. "You lift the economic burden, social stigma goes down," he said.

The Clinton administration has promised welfare reform, and the New York Times reported Sunday that one plan being considered is to give corporations up to $5,000 for every recipient.

Donna Shakala, secretary of health and human services, said no options on welfare reform have been presented to President Clinton.

During a hospital visit to promote the president's health care plan, she said that a working group has discussed giving money to corporations, but did not know whether such a proposal would go to Clinton.

U.S. SAVINGS BONDS

Economists see modest 1994 growth, stuck unemployment

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON — The U.S. economy will grow next year at a modest pace that will leave unemployment stuck just about where it is now, some of the nation's top business forecasters said today.

The National Association of Business Economists said investment spending by businesses and housing construction should be the shining stars of a generally lackluster economy next year.

"While the immediate prognosis for the economy is favorable, we remain concerned about the underlying strength of the recovery," said William Dunkelberg, NABE president and dean of the business school at Temple University.

The group's panel of 43 forecasters said they expected the economy to exhibit the same stop-and-go pattern it has demonstrated since the recession ended in March 1991 — with the economy spurring forward for a quarter or two, only to be slowed by various forces.

It blamed the protracted period of lethargic growth on a variety of forces, from cutbacks in the defense industry and weakness in non-residential construction to continued layoffs by some of America's largest corporations.

The slow growth will help keep inflation well under control and for that reason, NABE said it expects interest rates to stay low.

NABE made the following predictions.

●Economic growth: The overall economy, as measured by the gross domestic product, will expand by 2.8 percent in 1994, the same growth rate that the group is forecasting for this year. For 1992, the GDP grew by 2.6 percent after having fallen by 0.7 percent in the recession year of 1991. For the current October-December period, the group predicted a significant pickup in growth to above 3 percent, reflecting a rebound from last summer's floods and higher auto production.

●Unemployment: The unemployment rate will average 6.5 percent next year, only slightly improved from the current 6.8 percent.

●Inflation: Consumer prices should post modest gains of 2.9 percent for this year and 3.3 percent for 1994 as the weak economy helps to keep a lid of wage and price pressures. Prices were up 3.1 percent in 1992.

●Trade: The deficit in the current account, which includes trade in merchandise and services, should rise from $96 billion last year to $110 billion this year and $124 billion in 1994. The increase was blamed on weak economies overseas that have reduced demand for American exports and a rise in the value of the dollar over the past 18 months that make U.S. products more expensive in many foreign markets.

●Interest rates: Short-term interest rates will gradually creep up as the Federal Reserve begins to tighten credit conditions next year in an effort to stay ahead of any inflationary pressures. The yield on three-month Treasury bills was projected to increase from its current level of around 3 percent to 3.6 percent by the end of 1994 and to 3.9 percent by September 1995. Long-term interest rates, which are set by market forces, are currently near 6 percent. They should remain little changed over the next year, ending 1994 at 6.2 percent and then rising to 6.5 percent by September 1995.

The panel of business economists was asked to judge the employment prospects from the recently approved North American Free Trade Agreement with Canada and Mexico and the administration's health care initiative.

The biggest group, 48 percent, saw NAFTA increasing employment by up to 500,000 jobs over the next few years and 9 percent forecasting the gain would be even better than that; 34 percent saw no significant change and 9 percent said U.S. employment would be reduced by up to 500,000.

On health care, 57 percent forecast job declines from the Clinton plan with 24 percent saying the losses would be 500,000 or higher; 38 percent said it would have no appreciable impact on employment and 4 percent expected it would result in a job increase of up to 500,000.

Women in Congress

Influence more on tone than policy

By KAREN BALL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The women who came to Congress in record numbers this year didn't cause any grand policy shifts, but they dramatically altered the image and tone of a place long seen as a clubby fraternity.

Women waged legislative fights that led to small gains on abortion funding, easy passage of an abortion clinic violence bill and increased funding for attacking breast and ovarian cancer. They also helped make sure Head Start got full funding, workers got family leave guarantees and violence against women was addressed in the crime bill.

But mostly, said Rep. Karen Shepherd, D-Utah, one of the newcomers, they have brought issues women care about to center stage. "The fact that we're present and arguing changed the whole tenor of debate on the floor," she said.

Women tripled their Senate numbers in the 1992 elections, from two to six seats. They added a seventh with Kay Bailey Hutchinson's election in Texas this year to finish a partial term. In the House, women doubled their numbers and now hold 47 of 435 seats.

Still, those totals represent just 11 percent of the House, and 7 percent of the Senate.

"Because our numbers are still pitiful, it's not a great record," Shepherd said. "This Congress is 20 years behind the nation. It's nothing to crow about. I'm glad everyone of us is here, and we made a difference. But it's just one little tiny dot above being tokens."

The women brought a perspective different from that of veteran male politicians.

On President Clinton's jobs stimulus plan, for instance, while the men talked of economic theory and pointed to graphs and charts, the women spoke of families and communities.

"We put a very real face on the debate that has not been there before," said Sen. Patty Murray, D-Wash., one of the five new Senate women.

"It's much easier to vote against an economic theory than a real story about a family," said Murray, who campaigned as a "mom in tennis shoes" determined to bring a mother's outlook to Congress.

Women's rights groups had feared the newcomers would merely try to fit in to a place steeped in tradition where freshmen are taught to fall in line behind leaders with seniority.

"My worst nightmare was that because their numbers were so small, they'd just want to go along, because there is a club atmosphere," said Eleanor Smeal, president of the Feminist Majority. "But they're making it clear they're not just going to go along. They're going to do something different."

The women produced some unprecedented moments:

When Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., author of the ban on public funding of abortions, made what was viewed as a derogatory statement about women on welfare, black female lawmakers like Rep. Cynthia McKinney, D-Ga., surrounded him on the floor.

"They essentially said, 'You're not going to do that anymore. You're not going to cast aspersions anymore on the women we represent,'" Smeal said.

Heart disease does not discriminate. In fact, it's the biggest killer of American women today.

That's why it's so important to recognize chest pain as a major warning sign of a heart attack. And to know that while a man's chest pain tends to occur shortly, if not immediately, before a heart attack, a woman's can come and go for weeks, even months.

But don't think this means you have time to ignore the warnings. It's paramount to catch a heart attack before it happens. See your doctor, especially if you're past menopause. And if you feel any discomfort or pressure in and around the chest area, don't risk it. We can give you immediate attention, quick and accurate diagnosis, and all the technology and expertise of The Heart Center at HCA Central Florida Regional Hospital, 24 hours a day.

AROUND THE NATION

Packers rebound to edge Bucs

GREEN BAY, Wis. — The Green Bay Packers scored on a 2 yard pass to Sterling Sharpe with 1:16 left to beat the Tampa Bay Buccaneers 17-10.

Brett Favre shook off a hard hit on the previous down and found Sharpe to win it. That capped a 75 yard drive for the Packers (7-4) winners of six of their last seven games to tie for first place in the NFC Central with Detroit.

Tampa Bay (3-8) took a 10-0 lead with 7:43 to go when Craig Erickson found Courtney Hawkins with a 9 yard touchdown pass.

Allison inks Bown

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Bobby Allison has lined up veteran NASCAR Grand National driver Chuck Bown to replace Jimmy Spencer, who is joining Junior Johnson's team next year.

Bown, 39, becomes the fifth driver for Allison's team since it was formed in 1990.

Spencer, who finished 12th in the Winston Cup standings, signed his new deal with Johnson late in the season, when many other drivers already had made their plans for 1994.

Allison was forced to scramble for a new driver, and he settled on Bown, who was the 1990 Grand National champion and ran fourth in the points standings this year.

Anderson signs with Lions

PONTIAC, Mich. — Gary Anderson, cut by the Tampa Bay Buccaneers last week, was signed Sunday by the Detroit Lions.

The signing comes three days after Barry Sanders, who was leading the NFL in rushing, suffered a sprained medial collateral ligament. He is expected to be out three to five weeks.

Anderson, 32, carried the ball only 28 times for 56 yards. He also caught 11 passes for 89 yards and returned punts and kickoffs.

Anderson played four years for the San Diego Chargers before sitting out 1989 in a salary dispute. He was traded to Tampa Bay in 1990.

Ram gets national nod

de Bruin named to USYSA Under-20 national team

By TONY DeSORMIER
Herald Sports Editor

COCOA — Lake Mary High School senior Jody de Bruin has missed several games for the Ram boys soccer team already this season and he may have to miss a couple more.

On Sunday, de Bruin was named to the United States Youth Soccer Association's Under-20 national team.

"We found out this afternoon after the game," said de Bruin, who is staying at the Hilton Altamonte Springs with the rest of the national team this week. "I wasn't sure if I'd make it. When I found out, I was really excited."

The selections came after a round robin tournament this past weekend at the Cocoa Expo center involving regional teams from the Northeast, Southeast, Midwest, and Far West. de Bruin was one of the leading scorers for the Southeast side, collecting two goals and three assists in three games. On Sunday, de Bruin assisted on the game-winning goal in the Southeast's 2-1 win over the Northeast. Lyman High School graduate Frank Cipolla scored the game-tying goal for the Southeast.

Seven players from the Southeast Region squad were named to the 24-player national team. de Bruin, one of three Floridians on the Southeast side, was the only Floridian named to the national side.

This week, the Under-20 national team will train at the new complex at Lake Sylvan and may play a game against the Orlando Lions next weekend. Over the next 18 months, the team will come together from time to time in preparation for the 1995 Coca-Cola Junior World Cup.

"After our training sessions this week, our first trip will be to Guadalajara, Mexico, on Dec. 27," said de Bruin, who will also compete with the Southeast Region team when his national team schedule permits. "That means I may have to miss the Pizza Hut tournament."

Missing more Lake Mary games is almost as dismaying for de Bruin as being named to the national team was exciting. In fact, he credits his Lake Mary teammates for helping him prepare for the national team tryouts.

"I wasn't really in shape when we (the Lake Mary team) started training," de Bruin said. "I See National, Page 2B"

Poll: FSU gets Orange berth over W. Virginia

By RICK WARNER
AP Football Writer

Florida State played a tougher schedule. West Virginia has a better record.

So which team deserves to play Nebraska for the national championship in the Orange Bowl?

The debate intensified Sunday when Florida State edged West Virginia by 69 points in the combined Associated Press and USA Today CNN polls, setting up a probable Jan. 1 showdown between the Seminoles and Cornhuskers.

The news delighted top-ranked Florida State (11-1) and upset No. 2 West Virginia (11-0), the only undefeated team. To sidestep No. 2 Nebraska (11-0) eligible for a bowl.

You ask kids to do everything and they do it, and then they're not rewarded. It makes it difficult," West Virginia coach Don Nehlen said.

Florida State coach Bobby Bowden, who has won everything but a national championship, said he would welcome a title shot against Nebraska.

"I always said I wish we had a chance at the end of the year," he said. "Now it looks like we're finally got a chance at the end of the year."

The AP media poll ranks Florida State No. 1, Nebraska No. 2, and West Virginia No. 3. The USA Today CNN coaches' poll has Nebraska first, followed by West Virginia and Florida State.

In the combined polls, which determine the major bowl matchups, the order is Nebraska, Florida State and West Virginia.

Nebraska will play Florida State in the Orange Bowl if both teams hold their positions in the last combined poll, which will be released next Sunday. Nebraska, Florida State and West Virginia have completed their regular seasons, so there's little chance of a major shift in the polls next week.

If Florida State plays Nebraska in the Orange Bowl, West Virginia will go to the Cotton Bowl and play No. 7 Texas A&M (10-1). Since West Virginia's No. 2 in the coaches' poll, the Mountaineers might win a share. See Bowls, Page 2B

SAC parity displayed in Rotary

From Staff Reports

WINTER PARK — If the Goldenrod Rotary Bowl tournament serves as an accurate indication, there's little difference between the Seminole Athletic Conference's five Class 5A high school boys' soccer teams.

Lake Mary came out on top in the Rotary tournament, defeating Lake Brantley 1-0 on penalty kicks in the championship game Saturday night at Rollins College.

The Rams (4-0-1) also played the Oviedo Lions to a 1-1 draw during the tournament while the Lake Brantley Patriots topped the Lyman Greyhounds 2-1 on penalty kicks in their semifinal contest.

"It's unbelievable how close everyone is," said Lake

Mary coach Larry McCorkle. "The parity is really there. Everybody is so equal. It's been pretty tough in the past, but right now it's just amazing how close everyone is in this conference."

There were periods that Lake Brantley dominated play and periods where we dominated. And it went back and forth the entire game. The same thing happened in Lake Brantley's game with Lyman. Oviedo did a heck of a job against us and Lake Howell played a great game against Miami Palmetto despite missing several players."

Lake Mary opened the tournament with a win and a tie on Friday.

Patriots taking advantage of every opportunity

It was an unusual feeling for Lake Brantley football coach Fred Almon.

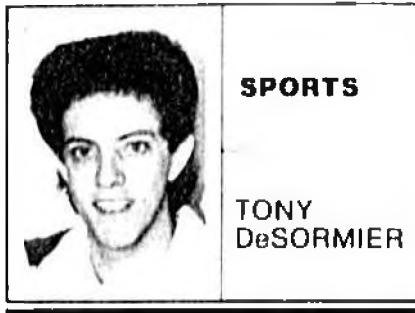

Late in the third quarter of Lake Brantley's second round playoff game with Lynn Haven Mosley, Almon looked up at the scoreboard late in the third quarter and saw that the Patriots were behind, 17-10.

"I remember thinking to myself, 'That's the first time we've been behind in a while,'" said Almon.

Actually, it had been over a month since the Patriots were on the short end of the score at any point in any game. The last time was late in the fourth quarter against DeLand on Oct. 15.

And just as they did against DeLand, the Patriots came back to beat the Mosley Dolphins 24-23 in overtime, advancing to this Friday's quarterfinal game against defending Class 5A state champion Bradenton-Manatee.

The Lake Brantley-Manatee game, which will be played at Lake Brantley's Tom Storey Field, is expected to kick off at 7:30 p.m. Friday. For the Patriots, who are on a seven-game win streak, this will be their third home game of the playoffs.

SPORTS

TONY DeSORMIER

"I would have hated to have to take an 8 1/2 hour trip to the Panhandle on Friday," said Almon. "Mosley traveled all day to get here, then turned around and headed back right after the game."

"As far as the schedule goes, we've gotten the breaks. But to win the state championship, you have to be lucky. You have to stay healthy, you have to get the calls, and it helps to have the schedule in your favor. Playing at home has been a big factor."

That factor will be to an extreme test this Friday when the Manatee Hurricanes hit Altamonte Springs.

"Manatee has probably the best football program in state and they have probably the best coach (Glor Kunnam) in the state," said Almon. "Their tradition over last 13 years is unbelievable. It's an honor just to line up against them. Coaches live for opportunities like this."

In the last decade, Manatee has won four state titles (1983, 1985, 1989, and 1992). For the Patriots, this is the second time in three years that they've made it to the quarterfinal round (in 1991, when there were only four rounds to the playoffs, Lake Brantley lost in the quarterfinals to Gainesville-Buchholz).

Despite the relative anonymity of the Patriots (they never received a vote all season in the Florida Sports Writers Association state poll) and the Hurricanes' wealth of postseason tradition, nothing his team does now would surprise Almon.

"They just keep playing and playing," said Almon. "They keep amazing me. We played an exceptional football team on Friday night. We bent a little, but we didn't break. That's the best defense we've seen. Mosley was extremely tough and extremely quick."

As a result, it took one of the Lake

Brantley offense's best performances of the season to register the victory. Led by fullback Jeff Butler, quarterback Jeff Shaw, wide receiver Brian Whitman, and placekicker Tim LeCroix, the Patriots were equal to the task.

"That was probably Butler's best game," Almon said. "He didn't have the big 200-yard game, but he did run for over 140 yards and he paid dearly for every yard. Every yard he got, he earned."

While Shaw had a season-low rushing total of 27 yards, he scored Lake Brantley's touchdown in the tiebreaker. Whitman completed a pass to Rickey Hamilton, who turned it into a 73-yard touchdown play. LeCroix contributed six points, converting three extra points and kicking a field goal, and executed a perfect inside kick to open the second half.

If the Patriots are going to go any further, they'll need more of the same.

"In our practices last week, we went over little things," Almon said. "We didn't try to put in anything new. We just concentrate on what we do and try to do it better." It's worked so far.

Santa Claus a blue ribbon winner

Retha Blankenship poses with her sculpted Santa Claus which won her a first place ribbon in the Sanford Woman's Club Annual Arts and Crafts Festival held at the club's November meeting. The Santa is eligible for competition in the District VII festival in February. During the meeting, Blankenship conducted a session on crafts.

Arts coalition kickoff set

ORLANDO — Arts for a Complete Education (ACE) is holding a kickoff meeting for its newly established Seminole County ACE Coalition — a group of arts supporters interested in adopting arts education programs in grades K-12. The coalition will discuss the current status of area school arts programs and possible strategies to strengthen them. The meeting will be held at Seminole Community College in the Fine Arts building, Tuesday, Nov. 30, at 7:30 p.m.

Dr. Burt Perinchieff and Dr. Karen Copp are co-hosting the meeting. Fred Hebert, ACE's statewide project coordinator, will address the coalition's role in stressing the importance of arts education.

Parents, business and community leaders, school board members, students, and arts educators are all encouraged to attend.

Arts for a Complete Education is a statewide project designed to ensure that each student in every Florida school will receive a well-rounded education including a comprehensive, high-quality program of arts instruction, taught by certified arts teachers. For more information about ACE, please contact Dr. Copp at (407) 323-1450 ext. 660.

Make some landscape changes

Cooler weather allows plant root development

Cooler weather has finally arrived so why not take advantage of the pleasant weather to clean up or make some changes in the landscape. This is the ideal time to straighten up shrub beds and to get rid of declining plants and replace them with new ones. Maybe even convert part of the landscape back to native plant species. Planting in the cool season allows plants time to develop new roots and become established before they begin new growth in the spring.

After determining the kind and number of plants you need, the next step is to visit your favorite garden center in search of quality plants. Native and drought tolerant plants are available — if you don't see them, ask! A listing of native and water conserving plants is available free from our office. Inspect plants closely and don't purchase any that look unhealthy or have weak or scarred branches or yellowing leaves. The root system of a container-grown plant should be well established so that the root ball stays intact when the container is removed; however, the plant should not be root-bound. Root-bound plants have a mass of roots circling near the outside surface of the container and may be difficult to establish in the landscape. Although cutting or breaking up the root ball has been recommended in the past, there is no strong evidence to support the benefit of this practice. The best recommendation is to not purchase a root-bound plant.

GARDENING

TRICIA THOMAS

After purchasing plants, you're ready to place them in your landscape. The planting hole should be dug wider than the root ball, but no deeper. Carefully remove the plant from the container. Gently place the plant straight in the hole and be sure the top of the root ball is no deeper than the existing landscape soil surface. Fill around the ball with native soil and gently firm the soil around the root ball. There is no need to amend the backfill soil with peat or other organic matter. Research has shown that adding soil amendments may actually inhibit plant establishment in the landscape. Water thoroughly while planting to remove air pockets.

The success or failure of a planting often depends on whether the plants receive enough water. The construction of a saucer-like catchment basin or water ring at the edge of the root ball, made from the extra fill soil will help hold water by keeping the water in place until it drains down into the plant's root ball. Fill the water basin at least three times to wet the entire root system.

The last step in the planting procedure is to add a 2 to 3-inch layer of mulch around the plants. Mulches moderate soil temperatures, prevent packing and crusting of the soil surface (which can cause water to run off before it penetrates the soil), conserve moisture, help control weeds, and improve the appearance of the landscape — it just looks good! Common mulching materials include leaves, pine needles, grass clippings, bark, and wood chips. Be sure to keep the mulch away from the trunk of the plant. Mulches in contact with the stem can cause crown rot (rotting of the main stem) and result in general plant decline and eventual death of the plant.

Plants require months to develop roots that extend into the surrounding soil and therefore, they should be watered as often as when they were in containers. Once the plants are well established they won't need to be watered as often, but they should not be allowed to go for extended periods without water. A good rule of thumb: two weeks without rain or irrigation should be considered a drought situation.

For more information about proper planting, plant selection and plant establishment drop by the Cooperative Extension Service for a free brochure or call 323-2500 ext. 5550.

Garden of the Month

The home and grounds of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Greene, 950 Grove Manor Drive, Sanford, has been selected by the Sanford Garden Club for the Garden of the Month award. The landscape features azaleas at the base of large trees, tall palms in planters at each side of the entrance, caladiums and neatly trimmed hedges. Patty Speer and Pat Foster of Camellia-Rose Circle made the selection.

Wallflowers should bloom at last

DEAR READERS: I have a problem. An unmarried female reader signed "What to Wear?" asked if she should wear a figure-flattering cocktail dress, with a long slit up the thigh, to her 15th high school reunion dinner dance. She said she had been a timid, nearly invisible wallflower in school. Her sister advised her to wear something more conservative, and I agreed with the sister.

Did I get letters! Here's a sample:

DEAR ABBY: Your advice to "What to Wear?" just plain stank! I am 44, and have attended all my class reunions as well as my husband's, and the cocktail dress is appropriate for the occasion.

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

A lot of us were wallflower types in high school. Some were overweight, others were skinny and flat-chested, and many were shy late bloomers. I say that those who developed into attractive, confident people should go and "strut their stuff!"

CATHY P. IN PEABODY, MASS.

DEAR ABBY: In high school, I was a tall, skinny, pimple-faced girl everyone made cruel jokes about. I was always picked last for everything.

Today, I am a successful, confident married woman with many friends. What a turnaround! I recently attended my 10th reunion wearing a figure-flattering cocktail dress, and the attention I got was overwhelming! The former "jocks" who never knew I existed, and the cheerleaders who had made fun of me in school, not only noticed me, but now wanted to know me better!

FORMER CATERPILLAR, KNOXVILLE, TENN.

DEAR ABBY: I attended my 10-year high school reunion last year. I, too, had been a wallflower who had never been invited to join any clubs. I wore an attention-getting (yet tasteful) dress, and the reaction from my former classmates (especially the men) did wonders for my self-esteem. It was well worth the price of the dress if I never wear it again.

P.T. IN LAKELAND, FLA.

DEAR ABBY: I can't believe you told "What to Wear?" to save the attention-getting dress for another occasion.

Everyone accused Scarlett O'Hara of being a "floozy" — so what? That doesn't mean she was one.

I identify with "Ms. What to Wear." I went to my 10-year reunion 40 pounds lighter, owning my own business, single, and feeling good about myself...and that's what you should have told her to do.

FEELING GOOD IN DENVER

DEAR ABBY: You were way off base with your advice to "What to Wear?" Whether we like it or not, society places a significant amount of emphasis on physical appearance. In a couple of weeks I'm going to my 20th class reunion, and I'm wearing a black mini-dress. I exercise daily and watch my diet. I'm a confident, attractive woman with a high-paying career and two fine grown children.

For work, I dress conservatively, but in the evening, I am more daring.

My advice would have been, "Wear that dress...and I hope you turn every head in the room."

HARTFORD, CONN.

DEAR ABBY: Over the years while traveling, I have had several occasions to stay as a guest in the house of someone I did not know well — the parents of my traveling companion, friends of a friend, a household of roommates, etc. sometimes these stays have lasted two or three days.

My question: What constitutes an appropriate thank-you to one's host in this situation?

Is a thank-you card sufficient, or is one expected to leave or send a gift? I have very little money and try not to spend it on non-essential things, but I would like to acknowledge the host's generosity in a correct way. Please advise.

GUESSING QUEST

DEAR QUEST! If you are staying longer than one night, a small gift is appropriate, and it need not be expensive. To save money on shipping costs, you can either take a gift with you or buy something during your stay — flowers, a box of candy or a small plant.

Ask doctor about soreness in chest

MEDICINE

PETER GOTT, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a 34-year-old female and have been taking Inderal since the age of 18 because of an irregular heartbeat. I now have a constant soreness and tenderness around the area of my heart and cannot find an explanation. I keep forgetting to mention this to my doctor, even though the problem has persisted for a couple of years. Can you offer guidance?

DEAR READER: I would be unduly presumptuous were I to attempt to diagnose your chest soreness. Rather, you should return to your doctor, describe your symptoms and follow his advice.

Having said this, I can now take a stab at what you DON'T have. Angina is unlikely: You're too young to have coronary artery disease and the pattern of discomfort doesn't fit. I doubt that you have inflammation of the heart covering (pericarditis), which causes chest soreness that ordinarily doesn't last more than a few days.

Peptic disease and gallstones usually cause a characteristic pain (burning and colicky, respectively). Similarly, the discomfort of pleurisy or a collapsed lung is sharp and intermittent. More likely, you probably have either chest wall syndrome (recurring chest pain of unknown cause), intercostal myalgia (tender muscles between your ribs), or a tender breast.

See your doctor; he should be able to sort out the cause of your symptoms by examining and testing you further (with blood tests and X-rays), and offer recommendations.

Inderal, a beta-blocker, is often used to prevent attacks of rapid pulse that may be caused by mitral valve prolapse (weakness of part of a heart valve). Neither Inderal nor MVP ordinarily cause chest soreness or tenderness, although MVP can cause period-

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Aider

Today's deal was sent in by Dr. John Sturgul, who lives in Moscow. No, not the Moscow behind the rusting Iron Curtain, but the one in Idaho. Dr. Sturgul is a lecturer at the University of Idaho.

Stayman. Then Blackwood led to the thin slam.

From West's bid, declarer expected the club finesse to work, but he saw that it could be held in reserve. Declarer won the opening lead in hand, drew two rounds of trumps, unblocked the A-K of hearts, discarding a club from the dummy, and cashed two more rounds of diamonds. Then he cast adrift with a trump.

If West had won the trick and switched to a club, declarer would have needed the finesse to work. But East had the master spade, and he was endplayed. Either he could lead a club into dummy's A-Q tenace, or he could play a heart, conceding a ruff-and-discard on which dummy's club queen would disappear.

A good example of not rushing to a premature conclusion — about the club finesse.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Nov. 30, 1983

In the first part of your annual birthday cycle, you might be doing more giving than getting, but don't let this upset you. There will be a reversal where you'll be the one who ends up the recipient.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) An agreement you recently negotiated which hasn't turned out as fair as you thought it would can be readjusted today to benefit everyone concerned. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You're now in a very good earning cycle where rewards for competent performance could be larger than usual. No one will have to tell you to do your best.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) One of your greatest assets is your ability to get along with persons from all walks of life. It isn't likely you'll be bored with anyone's companionship today, nor will they with yours.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Give as much attention as possible today to an important matter you're anxious to finalize. You're a strong finisher and you should be able to conclude things the way you envision.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) There's a possibility you might meet someone new today or within the next few days with whom you'll have a great deal in common. It's a relationship that could grow strong very quickly.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Opportunities to enhance your material security could present themselves in an unusual manner at this time. Don't feel they are too good for you and must be meant for someone else.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Today you might have to handle a difficult matter similar to one you successfully managed recently. The ingredients are essentially the same, so use tactics that worked previously.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Success is possible today in an arrangement where you'll lean on the arm of someone you help. Neither of you can progress unless you're aided by the other.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You might appear restless and impatient to others today, but, in reality, you'll be searching for sound ideas and persons who can articulate them. Other environments or groups will seem dull.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your greatest successes today are likely to come from involvements that have humanitarian elements. Focus on things that can benefit groups.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If you have a winning attitude today your thinking will be reflected in all your endeavors and relationships. Unfortunately, the opposite could be true if pessimism prevails.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You're well equipped to handle changes and adjustments today, even those you do not personally orchestrate. What you do will also benefit others as well as yourself. (C)1983, NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.
