A Fine Phrase, Anyway

"Governmental Honesty May Be Chief Isauc of Demo-crats in Campaign"—an alluring headline all good Demo-crats will agree. Good Democrats, in fact, would like to have such an issue carried to such an extent that its force would be applied to governmental office-holders all down the line.

On a "practice-what-you-preach" basis the Democratic party could do some wonderful things for their country. While exposing and rebuking monumental dishonesty of the Republicans—for vote-getting purposes—Democratic statesmen might set some machinery into operation that would act as a sort of vacuum cleaner of their own ranks.

Indeed a "practice-what-you-preach" rule of conduct for both of the major parties, not to mention the LaFollette poems, and philosophical ideas, thousands, would suddenly put government conditions in the United States in a most satisfactory condition. Governmental honesty' relentlessly demanded, though it played havoc, with many a prospering office-holder, would bring faithful stewardship into general practice, and climinate the waste and the thievery now running rampant.

And the curious results would be that the every day people, the every-day burden bearers, would then care not at all whether it was a Democrat or a Republican, a Mug-Wump or a Know-Nothing, holding the governmental offices. If honesty prevailed and politicians actually lived un to their preelection promises, the country could get along quite well without any elections—without any Democratic conventions.

But things are as they are. The campaign ending in the November election will be carried on as usual with each: side claiming to possess the cure-all for every governmental problem and every political evil...

But "Governmental Honesty" is truly a fine phrase. It might be possible for it to become a slogan for really sincere

The Degradation of the Mashie-Niblick

In the good old days in Scotland where golf had its inception and before it had become contaminated by popularity, the most important club in the bag was the mashie-niblick and its duties were two-fold. In the first place it was used then as it is today for the "chip shot to the pin." But what qualified it for a place of highest distinction in the bag save two weeks time if shipped t was entirely of different nature.

Mr. Kerr N. Fliers Will Be Ready for Flight Wednesday

BROUGH, England, July 23.— The American aviators will be ready to resume their whirl round the world tomorrow, but will wait in this tiny village until Washington says the word to go. The process of converting their three planes from the overland type into seagoing ships will be completed tomorrow, when the landing gear will be removed and pontoons placed under the fusciages. This will be the last labor of six days hard work which the fliers have put in since their arrival in Great Britain.
