The Raiders, ranked No. 8 in the state, swept a six-game homestand last weekend to improve to 19-8, but none of the six were decided until the final couple of innings and five were not decided until the final inning. Page 1B

Sanford woman killed during three-car collision

Police and emergency workers responded Wednesday to a fatal crash scene near the intersection of Mellonville Avenue and Airport Boulevard. Brenda Atchley, 62, of Sanford was pronounced dead at the scene after she was hit by two separate vehicles. According to authorities, Shaista Alidina, 20, of Lake Mary was traveling northbound on Mellonville when she allegedly ran the stop sign at Airport Boulevard. She collided with Atchley who was traveling eastbound on Airport Boulevard. The impact itself was minor, but it spun Atchley's 1994 Chrysler convertible, said Sanford police spokeswoman Cleo Cohen. Another vehicle driven by Jacqueline Turner, 48, of Sanford smashed into Atchley's driver side door. There is no indication alcohol was involved, but the investigation is continuing with charges pending.

Commission sinks swimming lessons

By Christopher Patton Staff Writer

SANFORD — Swimming lessons will be halted at Keith Cleborne's Sanford home until he can remedy the "objectionable noise" they create, county commissioners decided Tuesday evening. Bound by a single paragraph of county code that regulates home occupations, commissioners vowed to rework the law to avoid future problems. Seminole County Planning and Development Director Don Fisher said the short code had been "added to, tweaked and pulled" to the point that it's confusing.

Noise by screaming, crying infants violates 'clear as mud' county code

"I might see some problems with this code," said Commissioner Grant Maloy. Commissioner Dick Van Der Weide added, "This is not an easy decision - it's about as clear as mud." A final unanimous vote by commissioners took more than two hours as dozens of fellow swimming instructors and Cleborne's neighbors spoke in favor and against the clamorous home occupation. Cleborne teaches Infant Swimming Research lessons which helps small children learn how to float and swim. Crying and screaming are often the noisy by-product of instructions, cited neighbors. "When you hear this kind of screaming all day you're nerves are shot," said Sherri Brown who lives next door to Cleborne at Steeple Chase Circle. Vick Hernandez, another neighbor of Cleborne, said, "the traffic and noise is just unbearable. If you don't believe me come over and take a look." Cleborne reported he instructs between 20 to 25 children a day during the peak months of the summer. Others speaking in favor of the home swimming lessons, pleaded with commissioners not to regulate the valuable community service. To find similar instruction at community pools is impossible, as many such as Sanford and Casselberry don't allow children under four years of age in the water, said Cleborne. After hearing public comments, commissioners were left on trying to decide what level of noise is considered objectionable. See Lessons, Page 10A

Tobacco policy doused; more research needed

By Dan Ping Editor

SANFORD — City Commissioners tabled a tobacco abstinence policy for employees because of concerns it was too broad. The policy required all new employees to sign an agreement that they would abstain from using tobacco products. In addition, a person could not be hired if they had used tobacco 12 months before submitting a job application. Human Resource Director Joe Denaro said the intention of the policy was to curb rising health insurance costs. While commissioners agreed the city needs to look for ways to keep insurance costs in check, they expressed concerns that the policy was too broad. "I'm concerned that we're not allowing people to apply for jobs because they smoke," said Velma Williams, District 2 Commissioner.

"Right now it's tobacco, but where does it stop. Will we move on to something else?" Commissioner Whitey Eckstein noted the policy might prevent the city from hiring qualified employees who would voluntarily decline the city's health coverage. "What happens if we have someone who is retired from the military and already has health insurance or is covered under his wife's policy?" Eckstein said. "That person could not be hired under this policy, even though they do not impact the city's insurance costs." Eckstein also asked how the policy would be enforced. For example, would an employee who smoked a cigar in celebration of a new baby be penalized? "We're not out there trying to catch someone smoking," Denaro said. However, City Manager Tony VanDerWorp said one-time tobacco users would have to be penal-

State officials support plans for Sanford Farmer's Market

By Christopher Patton Staff Writer

SANFORD — Itineraries changed Friday, but the support for remodeling the State Farmer's Market didn't sway, said Sanford Mayor Brady Lessard. Lessard, Commissioner Velma Williams and City Manager Tony VanderWorp were originally slated to visit Tallahassee Friday to discuss the future of the farmers market property. A cancellation by the state didn't slow the redevelopment process as city officials participated in a conference call with state leaders instead. "They're thrilled about it," Lessard said about the reactions of officials from the state Department of Agriculture and the governor's Front Porch initiative. "They don't for see any problems." The state department is willing to donate the land at the rear of the market for a city fire and police station, Lessard said. The next step will be convincing the county commission in using 17-92 Community Redevelopment Agency funds for streetscape improvements. Lessard said the conglomerate of state and city interests are looking for anywhere between $50,000 to $100,000 from the 17-92 CRA. The funds will help improve landscaping on the corner of 13th Street and French Avenue, and "get rid of some of those crazy curb cuts," he said. Even if the state market plan fails, the U.S. Highway 17-92 improvements still need to happen, Lessard said. City officials also learned from the Department of State that the Sanford farmers market is the

Locks of Love

Neil Garlock, sitting, and Scott Turner show off their ponytails recently cut off by Sherry Turner. Turner is sponsoring a cut-a-thon this weekend at her hair salon. All proceeds will go to Locks of Love, a not-for-profit organization that provides hairpieces to financially disadvantaged children across the United States.

Sanford beautician hopes to collect hair, money during weekend fund-raising event

By Michelle Jerin Managing Editor

SANFORD — Thinking about getting a haircut this weekend? Consider giving the hair to charity. That's what friends Scott Turner and Neil Garlock did when they decided their 10-inch ponytails had to go. The Sanford men's hair will eventually be used in a wig for a child suffering from medical hair loss. "In December, they both decided it was time to lose their ponytails," said Sherry Turner, owner of A Sherry Turner Salon. "Since both had long ponytails, they decided to donate them to Locks of Love." The friends' decision to donate their hair gave Sherry Turner the idea for this Sunday's cut-a-thon at her business, located in the Bail Bond Plaza at 2621 S. Orlando Drive. All proceeds from each $10 haircut will go to Locks of Love. People who want to donate their hair to the organization will receive a free haircut. "Hair is important to people — that's the reason we are doing this," Turner said. "It's neat to think we are helping a child have hair." However, we know hair represents a person, so we don't want to pressure anybody into cutting their hair off. It's each person's decision to make." Locks of Love, established in 1997, provides hairpieces to financially disadvantaged children across the United States under the age 18 suffering from long-term medical hair loss. The not-for-profit organization also helps offset the cost of subsequent repairs after the hairpiece is donated to the child. See Locks, Page 10A

Train derails

The rails through Sanford were slowed Friday afternoon when a northbound Amtrak Auto Train derailed. Workers reported two cars unseated from the track just east of the Amtrak station on Parsimmon Avenue. No injuries were reported. The condition of the cargo was unknown at press time.

CERT helps prepare residents for disasters

By Christopher Patton Staff Writer

SANFORD — Reading all the hurricane preparation pamphlets, fliers and manuals that will flood the Central Florida area during the upcoming hurricane season will never equal the in-depth disaster training provided by Seminole County.

Started five years ago, the seven-week basic Community Emergency Response Team (CERT) course helps train local residents on how to react and perform in disaster situations. The class is hosted by the Seminole County Department of Public Safety. The Federal Emergency Management Agency and several California agencies created the class years ago after devastating earthquakes in the Bay area. It was discovered hurt and trapped residents would go unattended for hours and sometimes even days. Authorities learned from the earthquake disasters that properly trained citizens can become a

Preliminary plans presented for Heritage Festival

By Dan Ping Editor

SANFORD — Organizers of the Sanford Heritage Festival presented a preliminary plan for the event they hope to host in November. The festival began four years ago under the direction of the Sanford Chamber of Commerce and its director Ron Rose. Rose left the chamber last May, in part because of concerns the event posed too much financial liability for the chamber. A nonprofit organization, the Sanford Heritage Festival Inc., was founded last year, but the event failed to materialize after the terrorist attacks on Sept. 11. Carey Ferrell, who made the presentation during a work session of the Sanford City Commission, said a coalition of groups—including the Helen Stairs Theatre, the chamber and Sanford Main Street—agreed to form the nonprofit in hopes of continuing the festival. "The nonprofit group would be responsible for the financial aspects," Ferrell said. "That way, others are not hung out on the line." See Festival, Page 7A

Children left at library have parents who should be booked

DEAR ABBY: I am a librarian in a medium-sized public library, and I'm losing my patience about one particular issue.

Parents who wouldn't dream of dropping off their 5- and 7-year-olds at the mall or grocery store bring their youngsters to the library and let them roam freely throughout the building with no supervision, or drop them off to fend for themselves while Mom and Dad go shopping or run errands.

To those negligent parents, I want to yell: The public library is not a "safe place" to leave your child unattended! Libraries are public buildings; anyone off the street can enter. I know of at least one convicted child molester who is a regular user of this branch, and there are probably more that we don't know about.

Public libraries are a popular choice for child molesters and "peepers" to frequent and search for victims. Parents, please do not leave your little ones alone at the library. We librarians have jobs to do, and although we care deeply about the safety of your children, we are not baby sitters. Thank you for helping me get the message out, Abby.

CONCERNED LIBRARIAN, ANYTOWN, U.S.A.

Dear Abby

DEAR LIBRARIAN: You're welcome. It's hard to imagine a parent who is so irresponsible as to take a small child to a public place and leave him or her unsupervised. That said, if I were the concerned librarian, I would contact the local police and notify them that a child has been abandoned on the premises.

DEAR ABBY: We are Mothers of the Military. Our sons and daughters are the Army, Marines, Air Force, Navy, Coast Guard, Reserves and National Guard going into Afghanistan to protect our freedom. They are fighter pilots who drop bombs on the Taliban and protect the skies here at home, Navy cooks on the ships, infantry here and abroad, and the Coast Guard protecting our shores. They have many jobs, from private or seaman to general or admiral. All branches and all ranks are equally important; they are our sons and daughters.

During this time of uncertainty, we support each other in person and on the Internet. We laugh and cry together and know that there is always someone who shares our fears and joys. If you have never sent a child to war, it is hard to imagine either the cold terror that you feel or the joy at seeing them come home.

Our slogan is, "As one we are weak, together we are STRONG." We help anyone who has family in the military by networking them with others in their areas or finding someone for them to write to. There is almost always someone online on the Internet site, and we have chat rooms nightly. We would like to invite any who wish to join us — and that includes fathers, siblings, grandparents, anyone!

Thank you, Abby, for sharing our cause with others.

ETTA LOVE, MOTHERS OF THE MILITARY

DEAR ETTA AND OTHER MOTHERS OF THE MILITARY: I wish you success in your support effort. Although I have never sent a child off to war, I empathize with the stress all family members feel when they send someone they love into danger — regardless of how noble the cause.

Readers, Mothers of the Military (MOM) can be reached via the Internet at www.mothersofthemilitary.com or e-mailed at mothersofthemil@aol.com. Those who do not have computers can write the organization at P.O. Box 69015, Lubbock, Texas 79464.

DEAR ABBY: As ardent readers of your column, my wife,

Pamela, and I feel we must attest to the absolute truth about the "drunken geese" story you have printed.

It is, indeed, a true story and hundreds of years old. The geese were, in fact, ducks — owned by an innkeeper in Hawkhed in the Lake District of England. The inn is still there and is named "The Drunken Duck." It's complete with a beautiful pub sign showing the ducks clothed in fitted woolen hard-knit garments. My wife and I have dined frequently in this charming pub, which, by the way, offers superb food.

BRIAN KERR, PORT CHARLOTTE, FLA.

DEAR BRIAN: Some stories take on a life of their own. Thank you for setting the record straight. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: The person who wrote and said the drunken geese story was first told in a book by Richard Brautigan should do more research. The fact is, Jerry Clower told this story from 1957 until the day he died in 1997. I don't like it when people don't know what they are talking about.

VERY UPSET I MASSACHUSETTS

DEAR VERY UPSET! Neither do I. I wonder if Jerry had been to England.

Get out of the dark

What should have been a straight-forward project—installing lights along 1st Street—has become a snafu more daunting than finding Osama bin Laden. There's never been a doubt about the need for better lighting in downtown Sanford. The problem lies in the city's failure to make lighting a priority.

City administrators have paid lip service to the problem, only to back away when it came time to act. About 18 months ago City Manager Tony VanDerworp and Public Works Director Jerry Herman told a group of downtown business leaders that work would begin on 1st Street lighting in February—of 2001. To be fair, VanDerworp inherited the problem from previous city managers who failed to solve the problem, leading one to believe whether those in charge of day-to-day operations should be more accountable to the citizens.

That lack of leadership presents us with the current drama unfolding between the city and a group of citizens, the Downtown Business Association. On its own, DBA set about installing an electrical system which can be used to light downtown. Essentially, the system is similar to one investigated by the city previously. The difference is DBA had the motivation to follow through on its plans.

Part of that motivation is monetary. The DBA wants $25,000 to fill its coffers. To claim its offer is purely civic is disingenuous, particularly since DBA has set up its own roadblocks by failing to be forthcoming about important legal issues such as easements and certified permission from building owners.

Those roadblocks appear to be tumbling. It's crucial the city seize the opportunity, obtain the necessary legal documents and proceed with purchasing the electrical system.

Some may argue this is not the most ideal way to solve the problem; however, the city's past failures to act have left it with few options. As Commissioner Art Woodruff noted, something needs to be done now.

When was the last time you heard, 'May I help you?'

Gone are many of the mom-and-pop stores. They were wonderful in their time. You went in and were recognized - even called by name. Shopping was easy.

Now - we have those mega-stores. These are the kind that have not hundreds of items like mom and pop, but thousands - even millions. The square footage of the buildings is such that - if there were not shelves and counters - you could practically hold the Daytona-500 inside.

Therein lies the problem. The stores are so large that it is difficult to find what you want. Perhaps they plan it that way so you are forced to go through every lane and perhaps buy a great deal more than you had planned.

But people are smarter than that. Most of them know what they want when they go to a store. But how does a person find the items? The only way is to ask. This is my problem, and I doubt if I'm alone. Ask a clerk? That's often a joke.

There are several kinds of clerks employed in the stores today. First, are the invisible clerks. There are simply no clerks wandering the aisles. Second, there are clerks putting up stock but when they see you approaching, they rapidly walk the other way. If they don't run away, they never give you eye contact. The third kind of clerk attempts to respond to a question only to tell you that's another department and they don't know.

Finally, there's the clerk comes up to you, offers to help, and either gives you the aisle number where you can find the article, or even leads you to it.

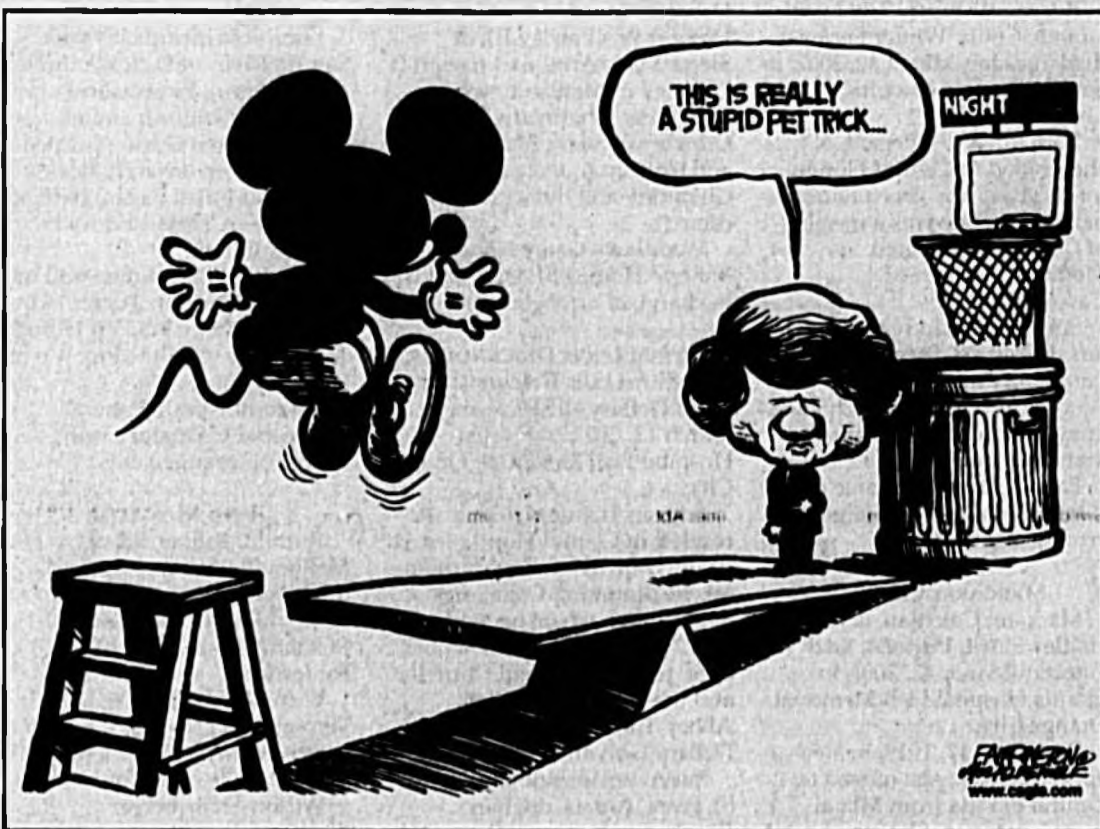

The problem is that we have too many stores with clerks of the first three types. Only a few will give you any attention at all. The fourth type is the only store that will get my business - and hopefully yours as well.

I'm not talking about all stores - but the major mega-stores such as the new Super K-mart, Super Walgreens, Home Depot, Lowes, and on and on. If the managers of these stores don't care to help the customer it won't be long before there are fewer customers to help. We all know what happens to stores without customers.

I hope the managers of these mega-stores will take heed to this and have people on the floor who know where things are and help their customers. Forget the "lower price" come-on. Give me a feeling that the people in that store WANT to help me, and that's where I'll shop.

I could name the good stores - but you know which ones they are. I'll see you there when I shop - because I'm not going to the others.

Bellamy widow said she forgives church members

To the editor:
To the members of the Saint Matthew's Missionary Baptist Church, I want to commend you on your memorial for Raymond Bellamy. If you had told him how much you loved him in 1989, he would have been well and alive today. But your ex-pastor and members took every position he held for more than 50 years. He was a devoted deacon, trustee of the board, treasurer, Sunday School superintendent and president of the BYPU. He said he did not know what to do with his life after that.

The doctor said he was deeply depressed and he never recovered. Now the Lord has brought these years to a close, including you hurting me. Raymond can not forgive you, but thank God I can and do. May God bless you all. This secret has been kept long enough. Please read Luke 6:31

Let there be light in downtown Sanford

Did you ever try to advertise an evening event in downtown Sanford? Try this — "Grab a flash-light and come onnnn down." Is it time for our City Dads to lighten up in order to light up downtown Sanford? Open up your hearts and let the lumens shine in.

The Downtown Business Association has some light to shed on this dark issue and offers resolve to the problem.

Downtown has been dark since the beginning of time. Folks talked about changing that, but nobody could figure out how to do it. The power lines that were installed on First Street simply did not offer enough power to do the job.

Various organizations have tried, at one time or another, to correct the electrical deficit. The city of Sanford has even tried, but the message was "It is not possible until we dig up the street and lay new cable. That is approximately three years away." The DBA says that what is not possible is waiting that long for a flame to flicker.

In order to accomplish the abundant and well lighted

Christmas decorations the DBA installed throughout five blocks in downtown Sanford this past Christmas, the DBA had to overcome the electrical problem.

In December 2001, the DBA successfully upgraded the electrical service on 1st Street from Sanford Avenue to Myrtle Avenue. The DBA made this a permanent installation so that everyone could enjoy light — right now, and forever. The city only needs to install a few inexpensive (maybe donated) light fixtures on the rooftops and plug them into the DBA's system. Then, there would be ample light for pedestrians and Special Events.

The DBA has offered this new electrical system to the city of Sanford so that you the people can have light. Cost of installation of the completed system was $55,000. City staff guestimated the installed cost at $36,000 and admit they could not do it for that. The DBA offered the system to the City for only $25,000 and offered to request licensed agreements from the property owners involved and to relinquish their FPL accounts to the City.

That offer was made on January 14, 2002, and three times since then. Hey, maybe when they said it was an impossible task, the power they were addressing was bureaucratic.

I don't think so! Commissioner Woodruff has championed this cause from the beginning. Commissioner Eckstein offered the motion to approve, and Mayor Lessard has promised his vote to approve at the next meeting on March 25. I, personally, believe Commissioner Williams will be a positive influence, too.

Commissioner Jones says the DBA did a wonderful job upgrading the electrical system. He compliments the large amount of volunteer time and talent that was involved, but he says volunteers have no value. The city shouldn't have to pay for all their sacrificed time, talent and materials. Bah Humbug! Lighten up Commissioner Jones — don't be the impossible link. The DBA volunteers were all wonderful, exceptional people who gave of themselves so that the people of Sanford could benefit. Let's encourage volunteerism, not stifle it.

To do wonderful things, an organization needs to have cash flow. Following the Christmas Extravaganza effort, the DBA presented a proposal to the city offering to produce six major events a year (like the extravaganza). They asked the city to partner with them at the inexpensive rate of $30,000 per year for three years. Under such circumstances over a sustained period of time, the DBA would be able to afford to be generous and consider donating efforts like the electrical system. However, they do not have that resource now, and they must keep the best interests of their members and the community in mind when they offer to sell the system.

The DBA is making a sound business proposal in offering the system to the city at half price. This makes sense for the city, the downtown business community, and the citizens at large. Monies raised in this manner will help develop a healthy treasury for the DBA that will then be invested in other wonderful efforts for the downtown.

March 25 is the big day for that decision. Count on your City Fathers' being the guiding light.

On the Street

The Herald asks people what they think ...

It's been six months since the terrorist attacks on the United States and the war on terrorism continues in Afghanistan. We asked people if they think the war has, to this point, been successful and how their lives have changed since Sept. 11.

I think, to this point, the war has been successful. There hasn't really been a change in my life since Sept. 11.

Bob Parsell Sanford

I think the war has been successful, so far. I was a military wife all my life, and that's led me to pray more for the country and the people involved.

Ann Kimmons Sanford

Yes, the war has been successful. Since Sept. 11, I've been more worried about my personal and my family's security. I was very casual about security before.

Jack Dow Sanford

I hope the war has been successful. I don't know if my life has changed since Sept. 11. I have been flying. I think I have flown three times since then.

Jean Fowler Sanford

I do think the war is working. We need to be patient and let the president do what he needs to do. Coming from New York, Sept. 11, affected my entire family. It hit close to home.

The Way We Were: History of Southern Bell in Sanford, part 2

The booklet "Sanford Telephone Pioneer History" edited by Warren F. Penners contains reminisces by approximately 40 former employees. The people are listed alphabetically, so their memories are not chronological. I have tried to give the events in time sequence as much as possible.

And, of course, there was not room to give everyone's memories, so I have selected and edited those that best tell the story of Southern Bell in Sanford.

Marjorie Lee, who began her career with Southern Bell in 1946, recalled that the telephone switchboard was manually operated. When a person picked up a phone to make a call, he heard a voice saying, "Number, please" and "Thank you." If a number was in use, the operator would say "Line is busy."

She later worked in long-distance calling. The Sanford office had only a few long-distance trunks and they were always busy. Sanford at the time was a large produce shipping center, which depended on long-distance calls for sales.

She also recalled that the operations office was in the upstairs office above the Hollywood Shop and next to J.C. Penney's in downtown Sanford.

Audrey Patterson was an operator during World War II and remembers "Air Flash Calls." Air spotters would place a call that an unidentified airplane was spotted. These calls were given top priority through Orlando and Tampa. She was the night operator and states that most of the calls were from the railroad calling people to work.

Al Drummond worked in the test center, frame, line and installation division. The job he liked best was lineman, as it was a good feeling to be able to give service when the telephone was being placed for the subscriber.

He remembered when it only took four numbers to reach a person. (I recall that our phone number was 494-J, a two-party line. I believe the other party was 494-W. Other letters were R and M. One of the one party numbers I recall was 718, belonging to the Dr. Wade Garner residence. His daughter, Rosemary, was a close friend of mine. These, of course were in the days of operator assisted calls.)

Lola Rockett remembers meetings that took place in the Operating Room between the Plant Manager and the Chief Operator. Since there was no private office and no extra chairs, the manager would turn the waste paper basket upside down and sit next to the chief operator's desk for the meeting.

Daisy Simmons recalls working at the station where the Geneva customers appeared. When a set was cranked, a small flap would fall down and the operator would plug it in to answer the call. But if there was a thunder storm, all the flaps would fall down and all had to be answered to make sure there was no call.

Something else she remembered was the dress code. Everyone dressed as if going to church.

Most of Margaret Wiggins' service was in the business office. When it was located upstairs on 1st Street, the door at the top of the stairs would be locked at night and on weekends. Customers would just slip their payment under the door. When the operators arrived at work, they would step over the mail and go into the operating room. They never lost a payment.

Britt Yates recalls storerooms located a Commercial Street and Park Avenue at the Amoco station and also a building near the Mayfair Inn. He said that he was paid 50 cents a day to teach new employees to climb poles.

Jane Hopkins has several interesting memories. She began at Southern Bell in 1951. She remembered LD20 and the gruff voice. Tommye Johnson said it was one call that no one wanted to answer. According to Jane, one year a group sent him some forget-me-nots and after that he always sent them fruit at Christmas.

Jane remembers that the plumbing in the central office was quite antiquated. Many times clothes were dampened by the spills. The company did pay for the damages.

The 1955 strike and walking the picket line was another thing, she recalled. It took place at the same time as the power company was adding two stacks at their plant and the boilermakers would come over and support their efforts.

Tommye added that sometimes those in the picket line would block the Penney's customers next door so Penney's brought out a piece of carpet for them to walk on to keep them in their place.

Glenn McKendree has penned the most memories. I'll recount a few.

An operator got a call from a customer one night who wanted the Town Pump. She had never heard of this business, so she connected him to the city waterworks.

After a hurricane, a lot of water filled the ditches and a cable was damaged. Buddy Richards went out there and called back to say that he had found the problem. But, he said, there was a 4-foot moccasin down there and he wasn't going to do anything until it was removed.

One day McKendree had to go out to the concentrator in Midway and Tom McElroy decided to go with him to see what a concentrator was. While there, Tom got into a nest of fire ants. His lips started turning blue and his speech began getting slurred. They got into the truck and McKendree raced back to the hospital where McElroy was given a shot in the emergency room.

There was one customer who complained that every time she called her sister in Kentucky, they would get cut off. McKendree got their permission to monitor the call and found that when they laughed simultaneously, the call was interrupted. Evidently the two laughers set up a frequency of 3,300 cycles and disconnected the circuit. He then explained to the sisters that they had to laugh singularly to prevent this.

There will be more of these memories next week.

Sanford hospital's Smith helps Heart Association raise $179,000

More than 200 guests enjoyed an evening of dining, dancing, auctions and fun as they participated in the American Heart Association's annual Metro Orlando Heart Gala on February 9th at the Hard Rock Hotel.

"We had a wonderful evening of food, fun and entertainment - all for a tremendous cause," said Rodney Smith, CEO of Central Florida Regional Hospital and chairman of this year's Heart Gala. "We were able to raise more than $179,000 to help fund the American Heart Association's mission of reducing cardiovascular diseases and stroke."

Committee members who helped make this year's gala a success were Craig Bair, Linda Breum, Mary Collier, Timothy Cook, H. Leroy Francis, Linda Gutermuth, Ashley Johnson, Lisa Merrick, Timothy Myers, J.P. Griffin-Rolle, Meredith Scott, MD, Rodney Smith and Laura Tischler.

"We would also like to thank our sponsors who partnered with the American Heart Association to make this event so successful," said Smith.

Central Florida Regional Hospital and Osceola Regional Medical Center were co-presenting sponsors of the Heart Gala. Other sponsors were Edwards Life Sciences, Pfizer and General Electric.

Heart Gala. Auctions featuring more than 75 items donated by area artists and businesses raised more than $43,000.

Thirteen-year-old Shane Ray, an Orlando boy who was born with a congenital heart defect spoke to guests about American Heart Heroes Week at the Boggy Creek Gang Camp. Shane has attended the special camp for children with heart disease several times and spoke about his experiences at camp and how special they are. After Shane's speech, guests bid on scholarships to send children to camp, and 14 scholarships were funded.

"I would like to thank everyone who participated in some way in this year's Heart Ball," concluded Smith. "Because of their efforts, we've moved one step closer to reaching the mission of the American Heart Association and reducing heart disease and stroke."

SEMINOLE SUMMARY

A GLANCE AROUND OUR COUNTY

Scouting report: If the Boy Scouts gave out a merit badge for acting like a jackass, Lee Corso would be its first recipient. The Scouts would never do such a thing, so The Clock Keeper has commissioned a special patch to dishonor Corso.

The ESPN commentator and Lake Mary resident was the keynote speaker at the Golden Eagle dinner, an annual fund-raising event for the Seminole County Boy Scouts. Perhaps Corso thought he was in the locker room or maybe on the set of College GameDay with his ESPN buddies Chris Fowler and Kirk Herbstreit. Whatever the case, the keynote address seemed a bit inappropriate for an event attended by several hundred Boy Scout supporters and a couple dozen actual Scouts, some just eight or nine years old.

His "speech," which was better suited for Open Mic night at a third-rate comedy club, was peppered with profanity. Nothing really vulgar, but you'd think Corso could get through an 8-minute solo without cussing a dozen or so different times.

Toward the end of his routine, er, speech, Corso did manage to throw in a couple of sentences about supporting the Boy Scouts. The delivery came across flat, though, as if he tacked on a new paragraph to the stump speech he usually gives on the university alumni club circuit.

As if he hadn't acted tacky enough, Corso embarrassed two young women serving after-dinner coffee near the front of the room. Evidently Corso the Cusser found their service distracting. He halted his remarks, told the women to stop serving coffee and shooed them away before telling another lame joke about his mediocre coaching career. (Example: "Someone asked me how I knew when to retire. Easy, when they quite asking me to coach.")

Too bad Corso never read the Scout Law, particularly the part about being Friendly, Courteous and Kind. He might have behaved a little differently and spared the feelings of two women.

Collect calls: What if they held a telethon and nobody showed-up? The Sanford/Seminole County Chamber of Commerce held an all-day membership telethon last Wednesday. The goal was 100 new memberships which would have put an end to the financial problems that have been haunting the Chamber. Perhaps the Chamber should enlist the services of Jerry Lewis. Word Around The Clock is actual sign-ups fell far below the goal. How low? Close to single digit low.

Also on the Chamber front, the Executive Board of Directors will need fewer chairs at their next meeting. Last month, long time treasurer, Linda Johnson, resigned from the board. This week vice president and incoming president Alice Wienberg said "Sayonara."

Battle of Oviedo: Forget Kandahar and Kabul. The fiercest battles are being wage just over the Lake Jesup bridge in Oviedo. Accusations are flying, lawyers are exchanging terse letters and video tapes are rolling.

The issue? A group of citizens led by Evelyn Cloniger, whose husband Phil is a councilman, think the city has an Enron situation. They allege that the books are being cooked at City Hall and City Manager Eugene Williford is the head chef. They're demanding to see the city's financial records, including the general check register, audit reports, and comprehensive financial reports.

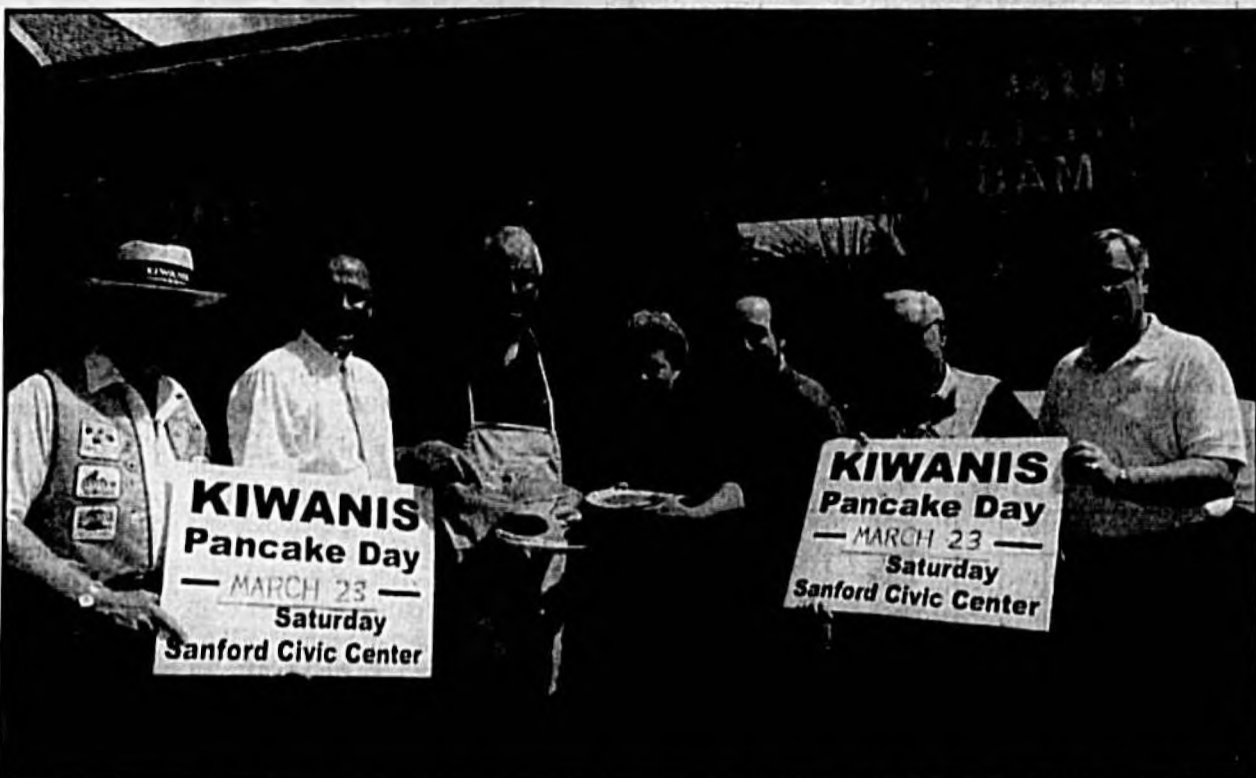

So far the city hasn't released much, which is odd considering Florida's broad public records laws. It's also a bit puzzling why the city has yet to release the comprehensive financial report since that report is on Monday's council agenda. Staff says the report is not in final form. The Clock Keeper suggests the city's attorney have the staff read State Attorney General Opinion AGO 91-26 regarding public records, as well as pages 53 and 53 in the 2001 Government in the Sunshine Manual. In the manual, the attorney general clearly states: "... any agency document, however prepared, if circulated for review, comment or information, is a public record regardless of whether it is an official expression of policy or marked 'preliminary' or 'working draft' or similar label."

Whatever the situation in Oviedo, let's just hope Arther Andersen is in charge of the audits.

Proposed layout for Heritage Festival 2002

Ferrell said the group intends to make a number of other changes to enhance the festival and downtown businesses. Key among those changes is a shift in location for many of the events and the addition of an antique, arts and crafts fair.

In the past, some downtown businesses complained that the fair decreased sales because 1st Street was blocked off for the better part of three days to accommodate booths and activities. Since festival goers had to pay an admission to enter 1st Street, business owners said customers did not patronize their shops.

Organizers say future festivals will block off 1st Street, but no admission will be charged. Additionally, activities along 1st Street will focus on an antique, arts and crafts fair that is more compatible with downtown businesses.

"It's really a better fit," Ferrell said, "and should help drive more business to those shops."

Admission will be required for the festival's traditional activities, which will be located along Park Avenue and Seminole Boulevard. The main stage for performers will be on Seminole Boulevard next to the marina and the Seminole County Courthouse parking lot.

"By moving the stages, we can showcase the waterfront and it should be a nice atmosphere," Ferrell said.

The change in location will also benefit downtown restaurants. In the past, food vendors were placed in front of the restaurants. Those vendors will be located along Park Avenue.

"We'll work with the restaurants and encourage them to do special things for the festival," Ferrell said. "We want them to be a part of this."

Ferrell also noted there were complaints in previous years about the carnival atmosphere of the festival, particularly with the midway-type rides. While organizers hope to eliminate those rides in future years, Ferrell said they do generate revenue used to fund the festival.

"Until it's financial feasible, we'll continue to have the rides," Ferrell said. "But our long-term goal is to eliminate all of them except for the most traditional fair type rides like a Ferris wheel."

Ferrell said organizers may be forced to adjust their plans along the waterfront this year because of the work schedule for the Sanford Riverwalk. Crews will replace and renovate the seawall along Seminole Boulevard, and that may make some lakeside locations unfeasible.

"That's one of the reasons why we are coming to you now," Ferrell told the city commission. "We you to know what are plans are so you can tell us what we might need to change."

Ferrell said the festival would request help from the city for police and public works assistance. Organizers would also need help establishing electrical services, depending on the location of the main stage.

Street lighting, code enforcement are top priorities for Historic District home owners Historic street lighting and improved city code enforcement are top priorities among a host of near-term and long-term goals adopted by the Sanford Historic Trust during a recent special membership meeting to determine future goals and directions.

The need for uniform historic district street lighting ranked highest in a member poll conducted during that meeting. The 200 plus member organization is looking at other options and alternatives following the narrow defeat last year of a street lighting referendum vote. That proposal called for city-installed lighting paid for by historic district property owners through monthly assessment fees.

A trust committee has been appointed to determine historic district street lighting needs and identify options that include homeowner purchase of lighting fixtures with possible financial assistance from the city or Sanford Historic Trust, according to committee Chairman Steve Myers. The committee also will recommend guidelines to ensure a consistent lighting theme throughout the historic district.

Myers said strong trust interest in street lighting goes beyond mere cosmetic concerns. "Our goal is to provide street lighting that not only improves appearances but helps reduce crime," he said.

The poll also indicated strong member interest in more consistent and effective city code enforcement, and the trust plans to work with Sanford officials on improvements. The codes regulate items such as property maintenance and noise.

Other key areas of interest include street signage, entrance markers, restoration of brick streets that were paved many years ago, a grant giving program and providing residents more information about city's S Codes that govern historic building restoration and responsibilities of those who reside in the historic district.

The Sanford Historic Trust is a not-for-profit corporation dedicated to the restoration and preservation of historic Sanford. For more information, contact Ed Kuhn: (407) 324-5053, or edkuhn@mpinet.net.

Legal Services sponsors Tax Mobile

Central Florida Legal Services Inc. (CFLS) will unveil a new aspect of its Community Tax Aid Project — The Tax Mobile.

"Individuals who have issues they need to resolve with the IRS can get immediate assistance without having to come into the office or deal with the IRS by themselves," said Sandra Piquet, the taxpayer outreach and education advocate for CFLS.

Once a client has their case opened, the Community Tax Aid Project finds them a tax professional that will, completely free of charge, help them get back on track with the IRS.

"Everything we do at the office to get the client started on the road to resolution, can be done out of the Tax Mobile," said I. Lee Olden, the attorney who's in charge of driving the Tax Mobile.

This new facet of service will be available to eligible low- and moderate-income residents in Volusia, Flagler, Brevard, Seminole, St. Johns, Putnam and Orange counties.

The Tax Mobile will be on hand at many locations throughout CFLS's service area, as well as fairs and public events on a scheduled basis. Contact them at 386-255-6573 for details on how to qualify for assistance, as well as where and when the Tax Mobile will be hitting the streets in your area.

The Community Tax Aid Project provides confidential accounting and legal assistance in disputes with the IRS in a broad range of areas, including: claiming earned income tax credits, documentation to prove head of households and dependents, innocent spouse declarations, self-employment taxes, 1099 vs. W-2 issues, and responding to letters from the IRS.

Community Tax Aid also provides for outreach to the English as a second language (ESL) population, to educate them about the Earned Income Tax Credit program, how it works and its availability to low-income families. For the 2001 taxpayers, a family of four with an income of $32,100 or less could qualify for as much as $4,008 in earned income tax credit provided two or more children live in the household. The Earned Income Tax Credit may be claimed retroactively for up to three years. This is especially important to immigrants who may have recently adjusted their status in the U.S. People who are eligible for this credit may also claim part of their Earned Income Credit payments throughout the year by filing a request to the IRS through their employer.

Confidential accounting and legal services offered through this project are provided free of charge by volunteer attorneys, accountants and other tax professionals.

Potential volunteers and clients are urged to call CFLS at 386-255-6573 and ask about Community Tax Aid.

STOP TELEMARKETING CALLS TODAY!

CONSUMERS BATTLE $600 BILLION TELEMARKETING INDUSTRY. NATIONAL DO-NOT-CALL LIST STOPS TELEMARKETING CALLS FOREVER!

Rrrrring...Rrrrring...Rrrrring...

- A working mother is cooking dinner. When the phone rings she leaves her food cooking on the stove to answer it. A fast-talking telemarketer launches into a pitch for a new credit card, offering no opening for interruption. By the time the woman hangs up the phone in desperation the dinner is burnt.
- An elderly man has just returned home after undergoing outpatient surgery. Still in pain and woozy from the anesthesia, he climbs into bed. The phone rings; he gets out of bed, struggles to the phone, picks up the receiver to hear a voice urging him to buy aluminum siding. He hangs up and crawls back to bed, only to have his rest interrupted by two more telemarketing calls, offering a "a really unbeatable new bank card" and congratulating him on winning a contest he never entered.

Telemarketers are required as per law (47 USC, Section 227 and 47 CFR 64.1200) to maintain a Do-Not-Call list, and to make it available upon demand.

The NATIONAL DO-NOT-CALL LIST is a registry of consumers' telephone numbers sent monthly from Washington DC to over 10,000 different companies, organizations, and individuals who initiate unsolicited telemarketing calls.

Register your home or cellular # today on the NATIONAL DO-NOT-CALL LIST for a low one time fee of only $12, and stop telemarketing calls forever.

This was Sanford's police force circa 1917. Identified are Police Chief Wylie A. Tills, in the center, and Jackson M. Vickary next to him on the right. A search through the 1917 Sanford City Directory provided names of three more policemen: John Anderson, Earl Coleman and LeRoy Tills. It is very probable that these are the other three men pictured. Can you put a face with any of these names? If so, contact Grace Marie Stinecpher at 407-322-4361. The directory gives us wives' names and addresses. These are: Wylie Tills (Nellie), 110 Elm Avenue; John Anderson (Mollie), 414 Myrtle Avenue; Earl Coleman, 202 Palmetto Avenue; LeRoy Tills (Marge), 202 Palmetto Avenue; J.M. Vickary (Lillian), 704 E. 2nd Street. Mr. Vickary was the father of Lourine Vickary Messenger, whose picture this was. At the time, City Hall was located at 109 Palmetto Avenue. The directory search also found 14 firemen. Evidently, there were more fires than crime in Sanford in 1917.

Chairman Daryl McLain asked Cleborne if he thought the level of noise produced by the swimming lessons was objectionable.

"I would say no it's not," he responded. "Do children scream? Yes. Occasionally it's something my neighbors can hear."

Cleborne said hearing children laughing, screaming and playing are just some of the noises one can hear occasionally in any neighborhood. Commissioner Randy Morris disagreed.

"Crying is an alert noise - it's something we respond to," Morris said.

Commissioners did say that Cleborne could reestablish his swimming lessons if he could do something to reduce the noise. Cleborne suggested after the meeting Plexiglas or Styrofoam installed around the screened pool may do the trick.

A few speakers, who were not necessarily in favor or against Cleborne's home instruction, also pleaded with commissioners not to ban home swimming lessons all together.

Although commissioners stated their decision Tuesday would not be precedent setting for disallowing home swimming instruction, Fisher said the county has cited similar infractions in the past.

"The sad thing is this one issue is going to trigger a new law that will restrict a lot of people," Morris said about all home occupations in general.

In other business, commissioners unanimously approved a "down zoning" for an 18-acre parcel near the intersection of Tuskawilla Road and State Road 426.

Originally zoned for a high intense commercial use, applicant Thomas Daly requested commissioners approve a mixed residential and retail development that would feature 168 townhouse units and two commercial parcels. Homeowners in the Trinity Bay Subdivision to the west and individual property owners to the south argued for more restrictions on the complex that would feature townhouses in the price range of $120,000 to $140,000. Before the issue was resolved, almost 20 conditions were added to the project's approval.

A few of those conditions included a fountain/aerator to the storm water collection pond, new mailboxes for the property owners to the south and vinyl coating for fences. During a debate for an elaborate security gate that would feature a telephone entry system, Daly attempted to draw the line.

"There comes a point when the developer can't continue to keep the check book open," he said.

After the meeting, Daly said he felt the numerous conditions did violate his property rights to some extent.

"When you're building infill properties you have a lot of specific needs from all the adjacent land owners," he said.

Young entrepreneurs

tremendous resource in providing disaster relief, especially when emergency crews are quickly overwhelmed, said Rick Moore, public safety operations coordinator and CERT organizer.

"The concept is to have a few in a neighborhood or apartment complex go into the training together," he said. "It's a wonderful opportunity for people that are neighbors to train together so if there is a disaster they can work together as an unit."

The class begins April 4 and sign-ups are due at the end of the month. Classes are generally three hours long every Thursday night for seven weeks. The first class is more for introductions, but the next two sessions involve disaster medical operations such as treating life-threatening injuries, triage and splinting.

In the fourth week, residents are taught how to plan and organize a neighborhood before a hurricane strikes. The instructions help evaluate available resources and identify people with special needs. Students in the fifth week learn how to fight fires and remedy problems associated with hazardous materials.

The last two weeks deal with light search and rescue operations and dealing with post storm operations. A dozen specialists help teach the course including members of the Seminole County Health Department and county firefighters and paramedics.

"Some of it's videotape, but much of it's on the floor practical work with our instructors," Moore said.

Graduates of the class include residents as old as 80 years, said Moore. Generally, teenagers under 18-years-old are restricted from the class unless a guardian is accompanying them. Participants are not required to perform each function, but attendance is mandatory to receive the CERT certificate of completion.

"People have a ball going through it," Moore said. "They never look at a traffic accident the same way. They leave with a better understanding how they (paramedics) are treating that person (injured in the accident)."

To learn more about the class or to sign-up call 407-665-5102.

ized the same as full-time users. "If we got any information from anywhere, we'd have to act on it," VanDerworp said.

Denaro said the policy was based on a similar one in North

Miami that was upheld by the Florida Supreme Court. In that case, however, the question before the court was whether the disclosure of tobacco use 12 months prior to employment constituted an invasion of privacy. The court ruled that it did not. The justices did not address whether a city could exclude someone from employment if that person used tobacco prior to being hired.

Commissioners tabled the policy and directed staff to conduct oldest in the country. Procuring state funds for the market redevelopment project could come in the way of historical preservation grants, said Lessard.

"In the next six months you're going to hear a hammered down plan on what the plan is going to be and how it is going to be funded," Lessard said.

Although preliminary, the idea is to redevelop the front of the market. It would emulate in some aspects another popular farmer's market in Winter Park. An open-air market would connect the current produce stand and State Market Restaurant. The warehouse behind the market would then be visually concealed from

Locks

According to Turner, one hairpiece, created specifically for the recipient, costs between $3,000 and $3,500.

"Most families can't afford the price of a hairpiece," Turner said. "When a child loses their hair as a result of a disease, the money is used on medical expenses. That's why Locks of Love was created. To help these children."

Anybody can donate their hair to Locks of Love. However, only ponytails 10 inches or longer are used for hairpieces, since most are donated to girls who want long hair.

Nevertheless, the organization does accept shorter ponytails, which are sold at fair market value to other companies to help offset the cost of manufacturing.

Locks of Love also uses financial donations to pay for the production of hairpieces and other expenses.

Turner has already raised more than $600 and collected eight ponytails for the charity. She hasn't set a goal for this weekend's event, which will include haircuts, free refreshments and a $5 poker run.

"I've never done this before, so I don't know what to expect," she said. "But, anything I already have is better than what I had before."

The cut-a-thon will be held from noon to 4 p.m. Sunday at Turner's hair salon. The poker run for motorcyclists begins around noon and includes stops at Foxhead in Osteen, Buzzards Roost, Lake Mary Pub and Bar Out Back.

For more information, call Turner at 407-688-0666 or visit the Locks of Love website at www.locksoflove.org

'Roloids' Raiders on a roll

SCC softball team keeps it exciting

By Dean Smith
Sports Editor

SANFORD — Edge of your seat excitement or ulcer creating stress?

Either one of those statements could easily describe the way the Seminole Community College softball team has played this season. Especially lately.

The Raiders, ranked No. 8 in the state, swept a six-game homestand last weekend to improve to 19-8, but none of the six were decided until the final couple of innings and five were not decided until the final inning.

SCC opened the homestand by sweeping Mid-Florida Conference foe Lake-Sumter Community College from Leesburg, 2-1 and 3-2, on Wednesday.

The Raiders held on to win the first game as they scored both of their runs in the bottom of the first inning and then survived a three-error fourth inning that scored the Lakers' only run and a potential seventh inning jam.

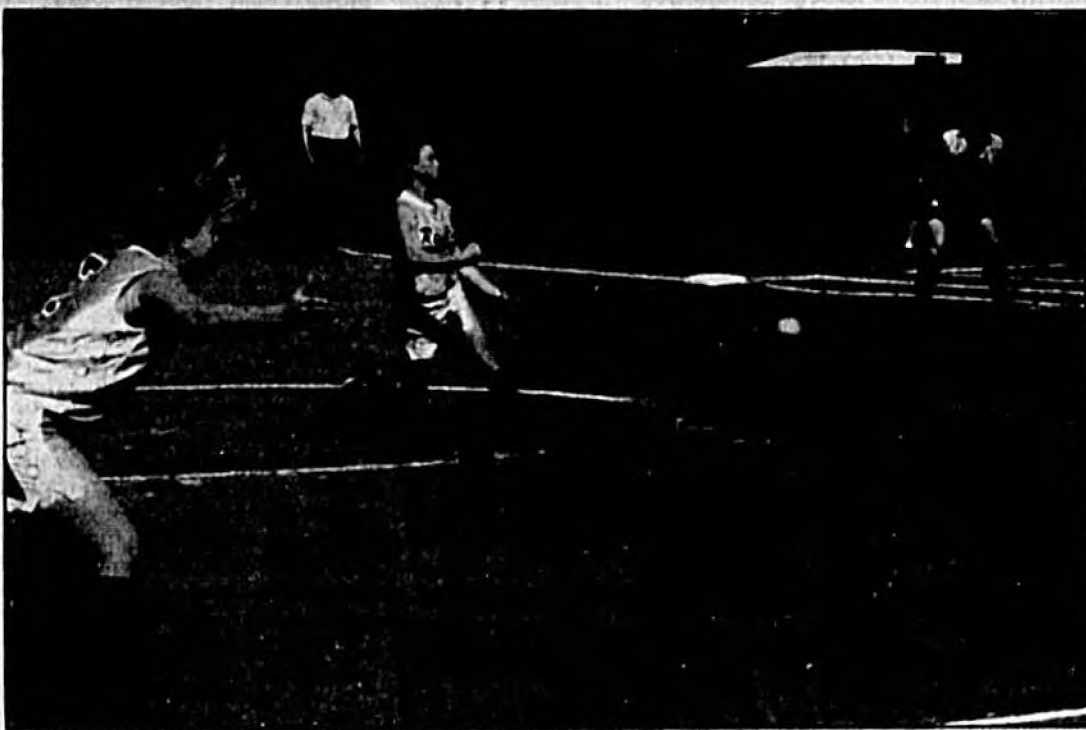

The nightcap saw SCC rally for two runs in the bottom of the seventh inning to tie the game at 2-2 and force extra innings, then won the game with a run in the bottom of the eighth.

The Raiders then hosted Grand Rapids Community College from Michigan on Saturday and won the first game by what appeared to be a rather handily 4-0 decision. But it took a three-run fourth inning for SCC to pull away.

The late game saw another nailbiter as the hosts won the game 1-0 with a run in the bottom of the eighth inning.

Then came the big rematch that the Raiders were waiting for as No. 1 state ranked Indian River Community College came calling.

The Pioneers from Ft. Pierce had swept SCC in a double-header last month when the

Herald photos by Tommy Vincent

Freshman Lacey Swarouth (pitching top) gave up 11 hits and one earned run while striking out 33 in winning three of the four games she started last week to run her record to 10-4. Sophomore Blake Hoorebeke (catching ball at first, lower left) also had a big weekend pitching, winning three games, including the final two by shutout and allowed only one run on nine hits and struck out 13 to go to 8-4 on the season. Lake Mary sophomore Rachel Bradley (lower right) had five hits, scored a run and drove in two, both game-winners as SCC went 8-0.

Raiders were undefeated and they wanted vengeance.

The first game was another bumburmer with SCC surviving 1-0 with a run in the bottom of the sixth inning.

The nightcap also appeared to be another stroll as the Raiders won 4-1, but the game was tied at 1-1 entering the bottom of the sixth inning when SCC exploded for three runs.

Following the sweep the Raiders took last week off for Spring Break and will return to the field on Tuesday when they travel to Bradenton for a doubleheader with Manatee Community College starting at 4 p.m.

SCC will return home on Thursday to host Santa Fe Community College from See Raiders, Page 2B

SCC baseball team continues roll

SANFORD — Anymore questions? When the Seminole Community College baseball team swept a struggling Daytona Beach Community College squad in the Mid-Florida Conference opening series last weekend and stretched its winning streak to eight games, local fans started to take notice.

But when the Raiders hammered Lake City Community College, 13-4, in a battle of conference unbeaten on Tuesday and then whipped Lincoln Land Community College from Illinois, 9-5, on Wednesday to run the streak to 10 games, the whole state paid attention.

SCC is now 16-11 overall and 4-0 in the M-FC heading into a huge conference series in Ocala this weekend. The Raiders were to have played Central Florida Community College in a single nine-inning game on Friday and then face the Patriots in two-seven inning games today (Saturday) starting at noon.

The locals will play another M-FC foe, Santa Fe Community College, in a 3 p.m. game on Tuesday in Gainesville before returning home to host Dundalk Community College from Maryland on Wednesday starting at 2 p.m.

Lake City Community College came to Raider Field on Tuesday having also swept its opening three-game conference series last weekend.

SCC built a 3-0 lead as Sean Greear blasted a two-run home run in the second inning and Brant Gadzicki followed John Michael Howell's double in the third inning with an RBI single.

But the Timberwolves tied the game with three runs in the fourth inning and a battle to the wire seemed imminent.

That's when the Raiders brought out the big bats.

Dan Quartararo led off the fifth inning with a tie-breaking home run and after an out, Donnie Burkhalter singled and trotted home on Howell's two-run homer.

With two out and no one on in the sixth inning, Quartararo tripled and J.T. Williamson and Burkhalter walked ahead of a grand slam off the bat of Howell and the rout was on.

After Lake City got a run back in the top of the eighth inning, SCC got its final three runs as Quartararo and Williamson walked ahead of a See SCC, Page 2B

Notes from the university's vegetable gardening guide

Site Selection

Locate the garden near the house for convenience on a site close to a source of water with at least six hours of direct sunlight. With proper care, vegetables may also be included in the landscape among ornamental plants.

tilizer per each cu. yd.

Moisten each layer, then keep the pile moist. After 3 to 4 weeks and every week thereafter, thoroughly mix the compost pile. Compost should be ready for use in two to 12 months, or when plant parts are decomposed.

Al Ferrer

Plan

Before planting, draw a paper plan, including vegetables you intend to plant, where, and when. Make a list of supplies, and then purchase your supplies ahead of time.

Fertilization

Use a balanced analysis such as 8-8-8 or 15-15-15. If compost or organic fertilizers are not used, be sure to include micronutrients if soil pH is above 6.3.

Broadcast the fertilizer 1-2 weeks before planting. Broadcast 2-4 lb/100 square feet if using an 8-8-8 fertilizer or 1-2 lb/100 square feet if using a 15-15-15 fertilizer.

At planting time, band fertilize the rows with 1/4 lb/10 ft of row if using an 8-8-8 fertilizer, half of that if using a 15-15-15 fertilizer. Additional fertilizer should be applied during the growing season. Sidedress two to three times during the growing season with half the banded rate of fertilizer.

Vegetables

A list of warm and cool season vegetable varieties recommended for Florida is included in the vegetable guide and available upon request from the Extension Office. Planting dates, spacing, yields and days to harvest are also included.

Soil Preparation

Most Florida soils need some improvement if used for vegetable gardening. Improve your soil by bringing in topsoil or a soil mix, or by applying liberal amounts of organic materials. Spade or plow the plot at least three weeks before planting, then rework the soil into a fine firm seedbed at planting time.

Irrigation

Frequency of irrigation depends upon soil type, sandy soils need water 2-3 times a week. Conserve water by using mulch, organic matter, and techniques such as drip irrigation.

Cover Crops

Off season planting and plow-down of green-manure crops is highly beneficial. During the summer legumes like cowpeas and in winter, ryegrass, and lupine can be used as cover crops.

Weed control

In gardens, practical weed control is best done by hand-pulling, hoeing, mechanical cultivation, or mulching. Avoid using chemical herbicides.

Compost

Composting is easy to do and yields a manure-like organic fertilizer and soil conditioner very useful for your soil. Construct a bin with sides made from treated lumber, concrete blocks, wire or other durable materials. Make successive 12-inch thick layers of plant waste such as leaves, lawn clippings, shredded branches, and wood chips.

Pest and Disease Control

Spray only when needed and always follow label directions. All pesticides are poisons and should be used with caution. Wash vegetable from garden thoroughly before using. Apply pesticides in early evening to avoid killing bees.

Lake Mary manager receives prestigious Ray Kroc award

aking people smile

By Michelle Jorin
Managing Editor

Holly Fazeli started working at a Boston area McDonald's restaurant 16 years ago. She never thought the part-time job would lead to a full-time career.

"I thought it would be temporary," Fazeli said. "I was working there until I got my driver's license, and then I thought I would work farther away from home."

Today, she has not only climbed up the corporation's employment ladder, she was recently selected to receive the Ray Kroc award — one of the most prestigious honors bestowed upon managers in the McDonald's chain.

When she was 16, Fazeli entered the fast food business as a crew member, and a year later, she was promoted to swing manager. After high school graduation, she continued to work at the restaurant while attending college in the Boston area.

Following college graduation, Fazeli moved to Central Florida and worked at McDonald's restaurants in Altamonte Springs and Sanford, where she continued to be promoted. In 1996, she became a store manager, and in 2000 relocated to the Lake Mary Boulevard McDonald's.

"When I started working for McDonald's, I didn't think 16 years later I would still be working at the restaurant," Fazeli said. "But, the people are friendly, and the training is good. It's a good company to work for."

McDonald's management has mutual feelings when it comes to Fazeli. Last year, Larry Harrison, owner/operator of the Lake Mary restaurant, nominated Fazeli for the Ray Kroc award — named after the founder of the McDonald's chain. The award recognizes the top 1 percent of McDonald's restaurant managers across the United States.

Only about 140 managers are chosen each year to receive the honor, which includes a $2,500 cash award, a Ray Kroc trophy and pin and a trip to Chicago, Ill., for an awards banquet with Jack Greenberg, the president of the McDonald's corporation.

"I knew I was a good manager — I was getting good results out of the store," Fazeli said. "But, I didn't expect to receive the award. It's a very prestigious award to receive."

The Ray Kroc award is based upon achieving superior results in selected area of performance, including operational excellence, people skills and building the business.

The recent honor isn't the the only performance-based recognition Fazeli has received during the last few months. As part of a new program, area store managers receive a company car and reimbursed auto insurance. In January, she was also promoted to area manager and now has three stores under her supervision.

A career at McDonald's has also benefited Fazeli's personal life.

"I met my husband at the McDonald's restaurant in Sanford," she said. "We will be married six years next month."

As for any regrets, Fazeli doesn't have any when it comes to working under the Golden Arches.

"I've met a lot of really good people and made a lot of really good friends," she said. "Just being able to see results with someone you are training, it is very fulfilling."

Seminole Girl Scouts celebrate 90th anniversary

The Kindergarten age girl picked up the small hammer and brought it down sharply on her 2 inch geode. It broke into three pieces. She picked it up and went running to the adult with her group. "Look", she shouted with excitement, "I got diamonds!"

Mary Rowell

Breaking your own geode was just one of the things girls got to do this past weekend at Seminole County's 90th Anniversary of Girl Scouts Celebration. The theme for the event was Girl Scouting in the New Millennium; Celebrating the Women of the Past, Preparing the Women of the Future. The event was a celebration of Girl Scouting and of Women's History Month. That's why this Girl Scouting event was open to all girls in Seminole County as a celebration of Women in the New Millennium. (Brothers attending the festivities were allowed to join in at each activity, although none of them tried on any of the old Girl Scout uniforms that were there to try on.)

Safety is vital now and in the future to all girls. The girls were very fortunate to have two wonderful Winter Springs police officers there for a talk about staying safe. Officers Allison Smith and Valerie Mendelsohn talked to all the girls in attendance at the celebration. They divided the girls by grades and gave age specific talks for each grade level.

In celebration of Joan of Arc, the girls also got to learn about a little old fashioned fighting. Jim Burchams from the Orlando Fencing Club demonstrated the sport of fencing to the girls. He also taught them a little fancy fencing footwork.

In addition to breaking their own geode, girls got to look at a large geology display. The geodes the girls broke weighed no more than a couple of ounces. But they did get to see an unbroken 19pound geode on display. One girl really got a kick out of it because she said it was "bigger than my brother's head and almost as hard". Since geology and paleontology go hand in hand, the Florida Fossil Hunters set up right next to the geology booth. They had an incredible amount of fossils for the girls to look at. It is illegal in the state of Florida to gather fossils from public lands without a permit. The exception is Florida's most common fossil. So each girl got a chance to sift through the sand for her own fossil, a shark's tooth.

Learning how to take care of yourself and others in an emergency medical situation is also very important. At the first aid table, the girls made their own personal first aid kit. They learned how to make a makeshift sling with just a safety pin and how to perform the Heimlich maneuver.

Our ancestors didn't have electricity. So one of the important things that girls in the past had to learn was how to make candles. If you didn't have enough candles, you didn't have light.

Looking toward the future, very few of the girls at the celebration were of driving age. But it's never too early to learn how to take care of your own car. Girls in the 4th grade and up got to take a look under the hood of a couple of cars. They were shown where the car's vital fluids are and how to check them. It's great to have gas in the tank, but the girls learned that it's just as important to have oil in the engine.

Protecting the environment is going to be a very big job for our women of the future. Recycling is one way to help. Using wrapping paper tubes, the girls learned how to make rainsticks. They also learned how important protecting the environment is for native wildlife, courtesy of a visit from the Central Florida Zoo and a few of it's 4 legged natives.

One of the really great experiences of the day for the girls was meeting women engineers from NASA. The women volunteered their time and energy all day to answer endless questions from the girls about working for NASA, what it was like to be a woman engineer and what space was like.

Of course, events like this don't take place without a lot of volunteers. Debbie Swearingen, co-leader for Girl Scout Troop 148 spent all day showing girls how to make rainsticks while children tried out the African drums and rhythm instruments nearby. Cathy Gumtow of Girl Scout Troop 262 spent the day helping girls make their first aid kit. Steve Rowell, a Girl Scout dad, spent the day showing the girls what's under the hood of a car. Nicholas Rowell, brother of a Girl Scout, manned the geology booth and helped girls break their geodes and find their shark's teeth. Brittany Bolton of Girl Scout Troop 148 spent the day showing girls how to paint spirit rocks. Peggy Wolfe, Brittany's mom, spent the day helping girls with the candle making. Stephanie Rowell, leader of Girl Scout Troop 1996, spent the day working the check-in and helping as needed, as did Mary Kott of Girl Scout Troop 504. Special thanks also go to Chelsea Rowell of Girl Scout Troop 458 for lending her extensive geology collection to the event. Financial support for the celebration was supplied in part by the Seminole County Cultural Arts Association, Inc., the Meredith Corporation and by the fundraising efforts of Girl Scout Troop 148 and the Stardust Service Unit of Girl Scouts.

Woman's club hears review on medicine

Dr. Robert J. Smith, a prominent Sanford physician, reviewed "The History of

Dona Dietrich

Medicine in our Time" for members of the Sanford Woman's Club at the March meeting.

Dr. Smith, who practiced medicine for 41 years in Sanford, asked the women if they remembered mustard plasters, Vicks and Mentholatum rubdowns and other simple remedies from years back. Hands shot up all over the auditorium. Many are alive today because of modern medicine, Dr. Smith told the women, adding that also many are alive because of the early remedies.

"Aspirin was the wonder drug then and it's a wonder drug today. It does about everything," Dr. Smith stated.

Tracing medicine back to the Civil War, Dr. Smith said, "Wartimes brought medicine forward." There were no anesthetics during the Civil War, he said, and ether was not discovered until World War II. Then, along came sulfa drug, penicillin, other antibiotics, hormone therapy, birth control pills, tranquilizers and pain killers, Dr. Smith said.

He told of the advancement of cancer and heart disease treatment and immunizations for the prevention of disease. Babies have eight shots by the time they are a year old, Dr. Smith said. Twenty-five years ago, treatment was not available for many of today's medical problems. Transplants, implants and other procedures enhance the lives of many today.

Dr. Smith marveled at the advent and advancement of scientific medical technology and modern medicine with the following summation: "The best is probably yet to come."

Introduced by Roberta Zittrower, Dr. Smith was very well received by the clubwomen, most of whom he knows. Since his retirement, he is a school and church volunteer. He and his wife, Bettye, have made their home in Sanford for 44 years.

President Bettye Jack opened the business meeting followed by Mindy Tooley giving a brief devotional program.

Ann Howland, who was reinstated as a member, was welcomed by the women. Helen Polgar, first vice president, reported the recent Italian Night netted about $1,400. DeLores Lash asked the membership to bring toiletries to the April meeting for SafeHouse of Seminole.

The president announced that the Seminole County

Federation of Women's Club contributed $200 to the club to be donated to a charity of the club's choice.

Marty Colegrove, chair of the nominating committee, presented the following slate of officers for the forthcoming season: Mindy Tooley, president; Phyllis Hodge, first vice president; Helen Polgar, second vice president; and Marty Colegrove, recording secretary. Chairmen of the club's departments are: Betty Colbert, Arts; Merian Johnson, Education; Peggy Deere, Home Life; and Carole Kirchhoff, Public Affairs.

Karns Wedding

Robert "Bob" Karns and Edith "Rodie" Auten, both of Orange City, were married Feb. 23 in the chapel of John Knox Village, Orange City.

Chaplain Jack Gates was the officiating clergyman for the 3 p.m. ceremony while his wife, Lois, presented background organ music.

The couple, both in their 80s, exchanged wedding vows in the presence of their immediate families. Following the nuptials, the entourage gathered in a private dining room at the Best Western Deltona Inn for a wedding dinner.

Bon Karns is a former Sanford resident where he was a successful insurance executive for years before his retirement. Rodie, the widow of a Presbyterian minister, is a music major with years of music directing in her background.

The happy couple are making their home at John Knox Village.

Georgia's fine

Georgia Chorpene, 98, says she is "fine, just fine" after falling and fracturing a bone in her right arm "just below the elbow." Not too long ago, this frisky, feisty female broke her hip and survived the ordeal with flying colors.

Georgia is a survivor and a champ. At 98, she is still a "pink lady" at Central Florida Regional Hospital, volunteers at the Sanford Christian Sharing Center and grades prison ministry papers. What a lady!

Sanford zoo plans Hippy Hop Adventure

Celebrate spring during the Hippy Hop Adventure at the Central Florida Zoological Park on Saturday, March 30 and Sunday, March 31.

From 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., children 12 and under are invited to hop along the Adventure Trail in search of clues leading to the Easter Bunny. At Bunny Stations along the trail, kids will answer fun animal questions and play games to win candy, prizes, and surprises. Plus, kids will receive a bunny tail to wear, enjoy face painting, and meet the Easter Bunny.

Bring a new book for Seminole County Public Schools on Saturday, March 30 from 9 to 11 a.m. and receive a free child admission to the Hippy Hop Adventure.

Admission to the Hippy Hop Adventure is included in the Zoo's regular admission.
