The Boreign Attitude

The details of our recent presidential campaign and the outcome of the election have been watched with considerable interest not only by citizens of this country, but and of also by the nations of Harope, Asia, and South America as having a vital influence on world events. World trade, international finance, disarmament, and general business conditions are all seen as depending heavily on the attitude which this country takes in its foreign policies.

It is interesting to note new these various foreign countries view the popular upheaval which took place here last Tuesday. In England, although some fear prevails that Roosevelt, on account of his former connection with the Navy Department is a "big navy man", his election Tues- support in both Houses of Conday is generally regarded as a triumph of Liberalism not only in local policies but also in fields of international lead the country slong those lines of rational and cautious advance only in local policies but also in fields of international trade and finance. The London News-Chronicle says:

Let us accept this omen. It would be a great thing, not only for the United States but for the world in geni would be a great thing, eral, if Liberalism, which has been under a cloud in Europe and has suffered much between the extremes of the Right and Left, were to achieve a revival in America.
