Man's Mysterious Injury Spurs Questions

By Tom Glordano
Herald Managing Editor

Was it a cruel twist of fate?
Was it a robbery?
Was it an attack by an unknown assailant with a twisted mind, lurking in the darkness?
Was it an act of revenge coupled with an element of mistaken identity?
Those are questions a Sanford area woman wants the answers to so she can find some relief from the emotional chaos she can't shake loose from as she ponders her husband's fate.
A Seminole County sheriff's investigator says he's convinced today it was an accident, pure and simple.

Robert Sehrer

It was shortly before 6 a.m. last Thursday when Robert Sehrer rode a bike up the driveway at the small plant in the I-4 Industrial Park. Being the foreman of the 12-member crew, he usually arrived first to unlock the doors and get things ready for the day's work.

He never made it inside, according to his wife, Virginia.
Sehrer, 42, was found by a female employee, Joyce B. Webster, 40, of Deltona, lying in the driveway on his back in a pool of blood, his head split across the top from temple to temple. Today, Sehrer is in critical condition in the intensive care unit at Orlando Regional Medical Center where he was airlifted by helicopter shortly after he was discovered in the plant driveway. Sehrer underwent several hours of brain surgery that Thursday and, according to his wife, doctors weren't sure he'd make it through the day. But he did, and today he continues to battle for his life, his wife says.

"We still don't know if he'll live. And if he does, the doctors say they don't know what his condition will be. They had to remove portions of his brain tissue, so we don't know what effect that will have on his abilities."
"He hasn't spoken since the incident, but he does respond to external stimuli. If he's prodded on his left side, his body recoils, so we know there's some sensation there. He keeps slipping in and out of consciousness."
What raises questions in Mrs. Sehrer's mind are these facts she says she's aware of: Sehrer's bike was found in the driveway upright and leaning against a pole as though he had gotten off and set it aside. Under Sehrer's neck, emergency personnel found a metal pole two-to-three feet long. Pieces of Sehrer's flesh and hair were stuck to the metal, but close to the base. The pole, according to Mrs. Sehrer, is the type municipal governments use as markers. And although the pole found under Sehrer's head had been sticking straight up from the ground before the incident, Mrs. Sehrer says maintenance people had earlier struck it with a lawn mower and bent it over while cutting grass, so it was nearly flat when her husband arrived for work that morning. Additionally, Mrs. Sehrer says she was told by surgeons that the nature of her husband's injury makes it difficult for them to believe the pole could have caused it, or that he got it from falling off his bike.

Virginia Sehrer says she and her husband and four children lived in the storage shed shown above for three months.

children — and a 2-year-old girl were living in a shed 14 feet by 14 feet in the industrial park. The industrial park is owned by Dr. J. W. Hickman who rents various sized buildings there for light manufacturing and storage. Mrs. Sehrer said she and her family have been living in one of the storage sheds for about three months. She said the family did so out of necessity and on weekends stayed in a camper trailer while trying to find a permanent home.

The shed they lived in, according to Mrs. Sehrer, is only a short distance from the plant where her husband worked — International Time Inc., 297 Power Court. The I-4 Industrial Park is located just off state Road 46 near Interstate 4 west of Sanford.

Mrs. Sehrer and Bob Rowe, the International Time company owner, insist there are others, either individuals or smaller family units, who live in other sheds at the industrial park. And while the sheds have electricity, Mrs. Sehrer says they are not air-conditioned and there are no toilet facilities or sinks, although there are toilet facilities "in the park area that we used."

Injured Girl On Long Road To Recovery

Alyssia Kreinbring, the Osteen teenager who was severely injured when hit by a van last December, made her first visit back to Sanford Saturday since the accident.

Alyssia suffered severe head injuries and was in a coma for about three months after the accident. After months of therapy in a Jacksonville Hospital, she was transferred to the New Medico Combined Rehabilitation Hospital in Wauchula today.

Between therapy centers, Alyssia, 14, stopped off in Sanford, where her mother lives, and met friends and well-wishers at the Colonial Room Restaurant, managed by her "Grandma Trudy" (Gertrude Goodall).

Connie Kreinbring, Alyssia's mother, said her daughter has made a lot of progress in the past four months and can talk again, although very softly, and can walk a few steps with assistance. But, she said, there is still a long way to go and progress is very slow.

"The doctors say it is impossible to predict how much she will recover, and that it will be about five years before she will gain as much of her former abilities as she can," Kreinbring said.

A normal, active teenager at the time of the accident, Alyssia has had to fight her way back to being able to recognize her family, learn to talk and is now beginning to regain some control over her limbs.

Kreinbring said her daughter remembers nothing of being hospitalized in Daytona, including the combined Christmas and birthday party her family gave her shortly after she emerged from the coma in March.

"She's upset that she slept through her birthday," her mother said.

She has resumed a close relationship with people she had daily contact with, such as her brother and

"I brought a friend of hers to the hospital to see her, and Alyssia didn't recognize her," Kreinbring said. "But after I told her who her friend was her memory of her seemed to come back and she asked her friend about her family."

Although her chief injury was to her head and brain, Alyssia also suffered a ruptured spleen in the accident, which has healed. She still has trouble with high blood pressure, her mother says.

Iran Vows Revenge, Surrounds Embassies

By United Press International
Revolutionary Guards surrounded the Saudi and Kuwaiti embassies in Tehran as Iran vowed to take revenge on the United States and Saudi Arabia for the deaths of hundreds of Iranians in rioting at the holy Islamic shrine of Mecca.

Tehran alleged that the United States gave a "direct order" for the rioting at Mecca and blamed the deaths on "Saudi mercenaries" working for the United States to avenge the mining of the U.S.-escorted re-flagged supertanker Bridgeton, damaged in the Persian Gulf on July 24. A U.S. State Department spokesman said the Iranian allegations were "totally baseless and the government in Tehran knows it."

"We, as the soldiers of Allah and as those responsible for implementing God's orders, feel duty-bound to take revenge on both the United States and the Saudi leaders," the Islamic Republic News Agency, IRNA, quoted parliamentary Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani as telling a rally Sunday in Tehran.

By Jane Casselberry
Herald Staff Writer

A resolution designating projects the city of Longwood would like to fund with its share of the one-cent local option sales tax if approved by the county voters in November will be considered by Longwood City Commission today at its regular meeting.

The commission will meet at 7:30 p.m. in city hall at 175 W. Warren Ave.

If the local governments fail to agree on a method of distribution, the state's formula would be used in which case Longwood would receive 4 percent of the revenue.

Proposed city projects for funding with the new tax include: paving, drainage and improvements for streets and roads; construction of water lines, wells and ground water storage facilities; purchase of land and construction of a $1 million civic center; construction of a new city hall; purchase of land and construction of additional park facilities; purchase of right-of-way and development of citywide stormwater drainage system; purchase of additional land and construction of a new public works complex; and purchase of land and construction of a new $1 million fire station.

Other items on the agenda Monday: Cliff Gullet, executive director of East Central Florida Regional Planning Council, has requested to speak to commission regarding membership in the council.

Preliminary approval of an ordinance establishing rules for fireworks displays.

Preliminary approval of amendments to the Personnel Policies and Procedures Manual that would include the city administrator, city attorney and city clerk as eligible employees for merit bonuses after one year employment.

Acceptance of an $8,000 check from Shoppes of Island Lake as a guarantee that the retention pond on the property will be properly constructed.

William F. Pascucci, director of Boston Bartenders School of America, Altamonte Springs, will discuss a proposed non-alcoholic night club for teenagers approved by Longwood Police Chief Greg Manning.

Environmentalists Hope To Block Texan's Planned Floating Casino

KEY BISCAIYNE (UPI) — Environmentalists are mounting a campaign to stop a Texas developer's $20 million plan for an offshore casino, saying the project could seriously threaten sensitive coral reefs.

The gambling house, proposed by Houston investor John A. Davis III, is just beyond the 3-mile international boundary, outside the reach of Florida's anti-casino laws.

"This is setting a questionable precedent for the use and abuse of our marine resources," said Doug Yoder, assistant director of Dade County's Department of Environmental Resources Management. "We're not opposed to the activity of gambling, but we are opposed to the idea of something that could just as easily be put into a hotel."

Davis said when completed, the offshore casino will look like "The Love Boat," with a white exterior and adequate windows, and will not block the sun to any seaside communities.

But Yoder said the casino will benefit few people and would be potentially hazardous to the natural and artificial reefs, especially if the structure were to break loose during a hurricane.

Progress Cited In Burglary Investigations

By Richard Whittaker
Herald Staff Writer

Lake Mary police say they are beginning to make progress in an investigation of a series of recent Cardinia Oaks area burglaries they are believe are related.

Police Chief Charles Lauderdale said the city has been hit with three incidents of breaking and entering within the past three days. "In all three cases the homes were successfully entered and something was taken," he said.

Two homes on Main Road and one in the Cardinal Homes subdivision have been victims of the burglary spree. Lauderdale said detectives see a pattern in the way the crimes were committed.

Lauderdale added he thinks department investigators have come up with some viable leads and a couple of suspects. "They have subjects that appear to know the area very well," he said.

Lake Mary police detective Greg Grayson said he had increased the number of patrols in the area of the burglaries. He had also talked with members of the neighborhood crime watch in an effort to work together in finding the possible suspects in the incidents. "We needed to try to see who was moving around the neighborhood," Grayson said.

The thieves who took the items from the three homes appeared to know what they were doing, according to Lauderdale. He explained that not only did they seem to know the area very well, they also took the kind of items no one would notice them walking out of a house with.

Lauderdale said most of the items taken from the homes were small articles no one would really notice. In one home the subjects left behind several shotguns they had taken out of the closet, which Lauderdale said is certainly the kind of thing a neighbor would see someone leaving a house with.

Grayson said an inspection of the homes burglarized and an investigation in the neighborhood have turned up some leads.

Family Mourns Missing Captain

CLAIR-MEL CITY (UPI) — A shrimp boat crewman is recovering from a mauling that left him stranded overnight in shark-infested waters, and relatives of the ship's missing captain say they are preparing for the worst.

Federal authorities said shrimp boat captain Philip Roush, 28, and Willie Charpentier, 21, were thrown overboard into the Atlantic Wednesday night after two crew members took over their 65-foot shrimp boat, the Leslie Rae.

Charpentier was found Thursday morning bobbing in shark-infested waters off Cape Canaveral, but Roush was not found and the search was called off Friday, officials said.

Authorities have filed mutiny charges against William "Little Bill" Rector, 21, and Billy Eugene "Big Bill" Gossett, 24. Both men also were charged with two counts of attempted murder, and murder charges are still pending, officials said.

Man Recants Guilty Plea

By Deane Jordan
Herald Staff Writer

A Longwood man who pleaded guilty to child molesting and was set to be sentenced to a 77-year probation period withdrew his plea Thursday and will be scheduled for trial in August. If found guilty, he faces life in prison.

The primary reason Earl Casperson Meggison, 45, withdrew his plea was that he would lose his $45,000-a-year job with AT&T, a circumstance that could jeopardize the financial condition of the probationary sentence, he said during testimony.

Meggison had pleaded guilty to two lewd and lascivious assaults on a child, two counts of contributing to the delinquency of a minor and one count of unlawful recording of a telephone conversation. Several other charges were dropped after Meggison agreed to plea.

While he also faced two years of house arrest and had to pay $5,000 to a victims program, no jail time was included in the plea bargaining. If he is found guilty, however, he could receive a sentence of up to life in prison.

Circuit Judge S. Joseph Davis Jr. said he was reluctant to set the case for trial but saw no evidence why he should not and allowed Meggison to withdraw his guilty plea. His trial was tentatively set for either the week of Aug. 10 or 17.

Assistant State Attorney Bob Fisher asked that Meggison be placed in the county jail until trial, citing his purchase of a gun and apparent suicide attempt as indications that he is a danger to society. Fisher said he asked that Meggison remain in custody in light of the recent shooting in Port St. Joe during an alimony hearing.

Because Meggison is under psychiatric care, Davis rejected Fisher's request. He is free on $10,000 bond.

Meggison is still employed by AT&T and receiving disability benefits for a self-inflicted wound, according to a comment made in court.

Meggison was arrested Nov. 19 after a girl told investigators that he had molested her at his home over a period of at least one year. She said he sometimes put Vaseline in her soft drink to make her drowsy. She also alleged that he offered three times to pay her to have sex with him.

IN BRIEF

Cargo Plane In Mexico City Crash Unauthorized To Fly From Miami

MIAMI (UPI) — The Miami-bound Belize Air International cargo plane that crashed at Mexico City, killing 54 people, was unauthorized to fly between Mexico and Miami, officials said.

"They should not have been making that flight," said Paul Gretch, director of the U.S. Department of Transportation's Office of International Aviation in Washington.

Gretch said an international air traffic regulation agreement states that Belize Air is allowed to serve 21 countries in the Caribbean and South America from Miami, but Mexico is not on the list.

Belize Air general manager Tony Phillips said he was unaware of the violation and that Thursday's flight was a charter, "and on a charter basis we can fly from Mexico."

Gretch said Phillips' interpretation was "absolutely wrong; it doesn't matter if it was a chartered flight. It was still unauthorized."

Guns Banned In Courthouse

FORT LAUDERDALE (UPI) — Judges and police officers today will no longer be allowed to carry guns inside the Broward County Courthouse, a result of last week's shooting in the Port St. Joe courthouse that left three dead.

"No guns. Only those in charge of courthouse security will have them," said Sheriff Nick Navarro. "Is there any other way?"

Broward Chief Circuit Judge Mlette Burnstein ordered Navarro to provide the court with a security program by 7 a.m. today or face contempt of court charges.

Burnstein's ruling came in the wake of last week's shooting in Port St. Joe, where three people, including a judge, were shot and killed by suspect Clyde Melvin during a divorce hearing.

Former PTL Minister Charged

DADE CITY (UPI) — Former PTL minister Richard W. Dortch faces fraud charges involving a homestead exemption on a New Port Richey home, shortly after Mildred Dortch pleaded not guilty in a similar case involving a Winter Haven residence.

Two counts of misdemeanor homestead exemption fraud were lodged against Mildred Dortch, and one against her husband Friday by the State Attorney's Office covering Pasco and Pinellas Counties.

Officials said the home is not the couple's primary residence. Each count is punishable by a maximum of one year in jail or $1,000 fine.

Mildred Dortch, in a similar case, recently pleaded not guilty to three counts of grand theft and three counts of homestead exemption fraud in Polk County in connection with a $179,000 Winter Haven residence belonging to the couple.

As a result of the exemptions, the Dortches paid $879 less in property taxes over three years than they should have, Polk County authorities charge.

Florida Power Closes Reactor

CRYSTAL RIVER (UPI) — The Florida Power Corporation closed down its No. 3 Nuclear Plant Sunday after an electrical short caused one of the 68 control rods to descend into the reactor's core.

An official with the St. Petersburg company said the mishap could not trigger any sort of nuclear chain reaction. He said the plant should be back in service sometime this week.

Quick-Draw Motorists Terrorize Southern California

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Law enforcement officials nationwide are following with trepidation an outbreak of gunplay on Southern California's highways and byways.

Congested freeways — the bane of a commuter's existence — have taken on a violent aura in 1987. Three motorists have been shot and killed in traffic confrontations in California and four others hospitalized by a blow-gun attacker in Texas.

Three people have been killed since June 18 by gun-toting motorists firing across high-speed lanes, and others including a spunky San Fernando Valley housewife, have chased and identified their attackers.

Other victims have ranged from truck drivers to surfers.

And the toll rises daily. "It used to be honking the horn or making an obscene gesture when you were mad. Now it's gotten violent," said Los Angeles Police Lt. Dan Cooke.

Most of the incidents occurred during everyday traffic mishaps — someone getting cut off, someone driving too slow in the fast lane — while a few have been attributed to copycat criminals firing guns "so they can watch it on the news and brag," one police official said.

Following the 15th shooting on Los Angeles' 700 miles of tangled freeways July 30 newspapers screamed, "It's Mad Max Out There." Editorials took aim at "Rambo on the Road."

The Los Angeles Police Department urged its more than 300 motorcycle officers to wear bullet-proof vests to protect against "the road warrior mentality." The area's 6 million drivers were told to avoid conflicts.

When asked by a local reporter "why here?" Los Angeles County Sheriff Sherman Block denied area freeways resembled the violent Mel Gibson movie, but joked "This is California. It all starts here."

The New York Times compared Los Angeles to the "frontier West." The San Francisco Examiner compared the freeway shooters to Old West outlaws, but "today the bad guys are saddled into two tons of steel — and they're stuck in traffic." Talk show hosts Johnny Carson and David Letterman used the gunslinging motorists as grist for one-liners on national television, as did giggling radio announcers on the airwaves.

Law enforcement officials throughout the United States weren't laughing.

Spokesmen for police departments and highway patrol offices in Chicago, Atlanta, Dallas, San Diego, New York, Denver, St. Louis and Fresno reported few traffic-related shootings over the past two years and said they were sporadic and random.

All said they hoped copycat incidents do not erupt in their cities.

Memphis Police spokesman Dan Chalk said the shootings were causing concern in the Mississippi River city.

"We haven't had any yet and we just really hope it (the shootings) doesn't move east and cause copycat killings here," Chalk said.

In Houston, which racks up from five to 10 traffic-related shootings a year, law enforcement officials were also following the California shooting epidemic closely.

The Texas city has just begun to relax since a series of seven blow-gun attacks on freeways ceased in April. Four people, mostly roadside construction workers, were hospitalized by the darts fired from a passing car.

"We have a lot of construction on our freeways. The only thing we can think of is that this was being done by someone who's sick of all the mess," said Houston Police Sgt. J.C. Mosler. "We thought this kind of thing — somebody doesn't go fast enough, somebody shoots the finger, somebody shoots a gun — wasn't unusual until we heard about what was going on in Southern California," he said.

Ernie O'Boyle, police specialist for the National Institute of Justice, said such crimes were specific to cities with congested freeways and warm climates.

"It's getting to be a problem in large municipal areas such as Miami and Houston, but on this level it seems to be a Southern California phenomenon," O'Boyle said, adding that there were no statistics on traffic-related crimes.

Some psychiatrists blamed the violence on freeway stress built up in congested traffic.

"Our estimate is that 485,000 hours daily are wasted in traffic by commuters," said Peter Hidalgo of Commuter Computer, a publicly financed ride-sharing agency.

"That represents $507 million a year in wasted time," he said. "That would make anyone mad."

Foreign Policy By Weather Vane

Last year, Sen. Robert Dole's foreign policy passion was to get the administration to offer the Soviet Union a U.S. taxpayer subsidy so that the Russians would purchase U.S. grain they already had a commitment to buy. That made no sense, except perhaps to farmers in Kansas. This year, the senator who promoted those grain give-aways is proposing economic sanctions against Angola because of its ties to Moscow. Dole has discovered toughness, but he's still a long way from sense.

Dole's proposed legislation would bar U.S. corporations from doing business with or in Angola. The main target of his wrath is Chevron, which pumps nearly $500 million worth of oil a year in Angola even while the United States supplies covert military aid to tribal rebels fighting that pro-Soviet government and its Cuban military protectors. Ultraconservatives of the Jesse Helms stripe have made economic sanctions against U.S. companies doing business in Angola a litmus test of anti-Sovietism, and Dole, a presidential candidate eager to prove his right-wing bona fides, has joined the attack.

Such a move would serve neither U.S. interest nor Western efforts to wean Angola from Moscow and end the Cuban military presence in southern Africa. To the extent that the withdrawal of U.S. trade and investment weakens the Angola economy, it would make its government more dependent on Soviet aid. But the most likely effect of U.S. sanctions would not be to weaken the Angolan regime but to provide a windfall to European and Japanese companies, which would be more than happy to pump Angola's oil and sell it goods. In this instance, sanctions are an empty political gesture, not a policy.

The Cubans have spent the last decade phoning up the Marxist Popular Movement government in Luanda against the South African-backed UNITA resistance and frequent incursions by South African troops. Angola is not likely to tell the Cubans to leave until alternative ways of protecting Angolan security can be arranged. U.S. diplomacy could conceivably help achieve that result, but U.S. military support for UNITA has damaged its position as a credible broker. Passage of economic sanctions would destroy it altogether by putting the United States completely in league with South Africa. When a normally responsible leader like Dole joins Helms in that course, he looks less like a statesman than a Kansas weather vane.

Canada's Navy

Canada's recent defense "white paper" has stirred heated debate both in Canada and between that country and its NATO allies. A number of changes are proposed, the largest being the modernization program for Canada's navy and the building of some 10 to 12 nuclear-powered attack submarines to patrol the Canadian arctic seas against Soviet and American submarines. The former threat is the real one; the latter has more to do with national ego.

Canadian defense planners are divided on how best to support the nation's commitment to its NATO allies while still protecting Canada's huge, trackless arctic north. With both a limited population and funds, neither will be easy. For Canada, defense of the arctic is a basic question of national sovereignty.

Ottawa has been particularly upset by U.S. insistence that it has a right to sail its submarines through the "international waters" around Canada's arctic islands. Ottawa views these channels (which often are ice-covered) as its own territorial waters. There is room for a diplomatic compromise that will preserve Canada's sovereignty and yet allow the U.S. Navy to operate in the area.

Poindexter's The Latest Son Of Catch 22

By Arnold Sawilak
UPI Senior Editor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Just when we were beginning to understand how Washington works, Rear Adm. John Poindexter gave us a lesson in bureaucratic creativity with his explanation of "deniability."

The former national security adviser told the Iran Contra investigating committees that he approved funneling secret arms sale profits to the Nicaraguan rebels. He said he didn't tell President Reagan in order to spare the president political embarrassment in case the scheme became known to the public.

That is the way we understood deniability was supposed to work.

Simply stated, it meant Poindexter made it possible for Reagan to say truthfully, if the deal went sour, that he didn't know what the National Security Council staff had done.

That is what Reagan has said since last November and Poindexter's sworn testimony was the best backing the president could have asked for. There was jubilation at the White House when Poindexter said Reagan never knew because Poindexter never told him.

However, Poindexter also said that he believed that Reagan would have approved the use of the arms sale money to help the Contras had he been asked. And that is when the sheer versatility of the doctrine of deniability as practiced by Poindexter became apparent.

The White House quickly denied that Reagan would have OK'd the deal had he been asked and said Poindexter had failed the president by approving the deal on his own authority.

That seemed to mean the White House was washing its hands of Poindexter and his claim that he was carrying out Reagan's wishes.

But Poindexter apparently did not believe he was being rebuked for claiming Reagan would have approved the Contra aid project.

Asked to comment on the White House statement the next day at the hearing, he calmly replied that the White House reaction was the "essence of deniability" and did not surprise him.

If the admiral is right, that could mean that under Poindexter's brand of deniability it was possible for the president to tell the truth about whether he knew of the Contra aid project and to lie about what he would have done if he had been asked to approve it.

Thus deniability is like a fish hook that has barbs at both ends and no place to tie a line. It is the antithesis of accountability for the public official with associates who, in the inelegant phrase used so often at the hearings, is willing to be the "fall guy."

Poindexter's explanation recalled a congressional hearing years ago at which James Wechsler, a prominent New York newspaperman, was accused of harboring communist sympathies.

Wechsler's defense was to produce a stack of clippings from the Daily Worker and other communist publications that denounced him fore and aft as a running dog tool of the capitalists.

That didn't bother his accusers one bit. The reason the communists were denouncing Wechsler, they said, was to conceal the fact that he was one of them. And that was a good 10 years before Joseph Heller wrote "Catch 22."

ANTHONY HARRIGAN

Legislator's Strange Company

WASHINGTON — When the voters send a man to serve in Congress, they may have no idea of the company he will keep. Certainly, the people of Iowa could not have known that their junior U.S. Senator, Tom Harkin, would end up on the 50th anniversary honorary committee of the National Lawyers Guild with the likes of U.S. Communist Party leader Angela Davis.

People in Des Moines, Cedar Rapids, Davenport, Ft. Dodge, Council Bluffs and other Iowa communities surely would be shocked to learn that their senator is listed with hardcore leftists on this committee.

The same thing can be said when the voters send a woman to Congress. Serving with Sen. Harkin on the National Lawyers Guild honorary committee is U.S. Rep. Pat Schroeder (D-Colo.), who is making noises about running for president.

To learn more about the group to which Sen. Harkin and Rep. Schroeder have lent their names, voters need only secure a copy of The Coercive Utopians by Rael Jean Isaac, a highly-respected author and contributor to Commentary magazine.

In her book, Miss Isaac states that "The Guild is the major, until recently the only, U.S. affiliate of the International Association of Democratic Lawyers, described in a 1978 CIA study as 'one of the most useful Communist front organizations at the service of the Soviet Communist Party.'"

The association of Sen. Harkin and Rep. Schroeder with the National Lawyers Guild is of legitimate concern to the entire country, not simply the people of Iowa and Colorado. They are federal legislators involved with writing laws for the nation. Thus when Sen. Harkin addresses a meeting of the Institute for Policy Studies, which The Washington Post describes as a left-wing think tank, it's of national concern. The IPS opposes a strong national defense and foreign policy and seeks the radicalization of the United States.

The American people have good reason for paying close attention to the role of Sen. Harkin and Rep. Schroeder in connection with the National Lawyers Guild. Membership on its anniversary honorary committee suggests a strong commitment to leftist goals and political action. The other people on the committee — Harry Bridges, Julian Bond, William Sloan Coffin, Ron Dellums, Robert F. Drinan and others — share a history of opposition to U.S. national objectives.

Paul Simon Is Not Afraid To Offend

By Jack Anderson
And Dale Van Atta

WASHINGTON — With his bow tie, horn-rimmed glasses and baggy pants, Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois has more than enough to set him apart from the other Democratic presidential candidates. But the important differences are of substance, not style.

While his rivals try to avoid offending any groups that might block their nomination, Simon sometimes seems to go out of his way to step on the toes of special interests that could make or break his candidacy. Call it refreshing or suicidal, it's a way of running for president that the American voters haven't seen in a long time.

Consider a few of the powerful egos Simon has bruised since he arrived in the Senate two and a half years ago:

— Television executives. Simon's campaign to reduce the violence on TV doesn't sit well in network boardrooms, where a popular

DICK WEST

Keep 'Em On Moon?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Air travel as we know it — delays, misplaced luggage and all — may soon be obsolete, if it isn't already.

According to the World Future Society, a group that must spend a lot of time gazing into the crystal ball, "travel times on Earth will be shortened by hypersonic airplanes traveling five times the speed of sound."

By the year 2002, it predicts, Americans will be hurtling through the skies "on thousand-seat airplanes."

That certainly sounds like fun. I mean, if you think supersonic transports are fast, wait until the planes become hyper. And those 1,000 seats open up all sorts of possibilities.

But what really caught my eye was the Society's prediction that "in the near future, Americans will journey into outer space in search of exotic vacations."

"Adventure trips will offer the opportunity to experience offbeat destinations — a trip to the moon being the ultimate adventure trip of the future."

Imagine the thrill of booking a flight to the moon and having your baggage wind up on Mars, or some such exotic place.

However, every silver lining must have a cloud.

The Society likewise forecasts that "videodisks and interactive computers will enable youngsters to keep up with their schoolwork." Hence, it says, "parents will be more likely" to take their children along on business trips and other jaunts "that take place during the school year."

The Society further predicts that "the aging U.S. population will create a growing market for hotels, cruises and resorts geared to senior citizens."

It says some cruise ships "will become floating retirement homes" that offer a full line of "convalescent or nursing services."

But don't let videodisks spoil the prospects of getting away from it all. Just be extra cautious about travel scams.

The Federal Trade Commission warns the public will be bilked out of "tens of millions of dollars" this year by offers of cheap vacations if they join a club or pay part of the tab in advance, usually with credit cards.

The vacations, it adds, seldom, if ever, materialize. Presumably, that includes trips to the moon.

One doesn't need look very far into the future to see it all clearly.

"Why are they sending you back to the moon this year?" your family asks. "We saw all the major rilles and craters during your last business trip."

"But the trip isn't until October," you point out. "What about the schoolwork?"

"Oh, don't worry about that," the kiddies respond. "Fortunately, our schools are equipped with the late interactive computers that enable students to keep up with their studies while away from home."

If looking after convalescent oldsters and sassy youngsters is your idea of fun, enjoy.

Intruders Threaten Galapagos

By Tim Johnson

QUITO, Ecuador (UPI) — On the Galapagos Islands, where Charles Darwin established his evolutionary theory of survival of the fittest, animals and plants brought by humans are killing endangered native species, a scientist says.

Foreign species ranging from fire ants to blackberry bushes are irreversibly harming plants and animals, said biologist Juan Black, secretary general of the Charles Darwin Foundation.

He said biological disruption caused by the arrival of the new species is proving a more serious threat than a wildfire that destroyed some 700 square miles on the Galapagos in 1985 and drew international attention.

The Galapagos, an archipelago of volcanic islands about 600 miles off the coast of Ecuador, contain unique species of birds, giant land and marine tortoises, insects and plants.

Darwin, a British scientist, visited the islands for five weeks in 1835 and collected evidence that led to his theory that species are subject to evolutionary change by natural selection.

Plants and animals introduced to the Galapagos have few or no natural predators or plagues. Black said they often spread easily, displacing native species or killing them.

Pigs, goats, donkeys and dogs brought to the islands by pirates and whalers in the 17th and 18th centuries have flourished and inflicted serious ecological harm, he said.

On the island of Santiago, experts estimate there are 100,000 wild goats, 10,000 feral pigs and 2,000 donkeys. Scientists have fenced off unique plant communities to protect them.

"The goats are turning Santiago into a desert, little by little," he said, adding that wardens have launched successful hunting campaigns but lack resources to completely kill off the intruders.

More recent introductions by tourists and some of the 8,000 permanent settlers in the Galapagos include pigeons, earthworms, fire ants and other species that fiercely compete against native animals.

Black said earthworms have changed the structure and composition of soils on the island of Santa Cruz, killing native ferns. Fire ants feed on endangered spiders, a species of scorpion and even on newborn land turtles with yolks still attached.

North, Simon disdained "finger-in-the-wind politics" and said he doesn't consider someone who fails to uphold the law to be a hero. Simon has also opposed the jingoistic de-emphasis on the teaching of foreign languages on practical grounds, he notes. Americans must know how to communicate with potential customers in a global market.

Simon's independence is also reflected in his stubborn devotion to his trademark bow ties against the advice of many political supporters — including the late Sen. Paul Douglas, D-Ill., whom Simon admired deeply.

In fact, Simon now believes his rumpled look is an advantage. "It's slick not to be slick," he explained cheerfully to our reporter Gary Clouser. His wife, Jeanne, says the senator's appearance makes him seem approachable — like "everyone's favorite history teacher."

Iran-Contra Committees To Hear CIA Officials In Closed Sessions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The congressional Iran-Contra committees will end their public hearings this week but will take private testimony from several CIA officials in an effort to tie up loose ends and to learn more about the mysterious role of the late CIA Director William Casey.

However, while some lawmakers hope the officials can clarify some nagging items, they do not expect they will answer the significant question of Casey's role in the diversion of money to Nicaraguan Contra rebels from secret U.S. arms sales to Iran.

After three weeks of hearings, the public part of the congressional probe could be completed today with a final round of testimony by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger followed by closing comments from committee leaders.

But even with the live nationwide television coverage stopped, the panels plan to meet in private session later in the week to hear from three or four present and former CIA officials.

Bork Nomination Called Insult

DALLAS (UPI) — The woman known as "Jane Roe" in the Supreme Court decision legalizing abortion told a rally that the nomination of Judge Robert Bork to the high court "is an insult to every woman who has had to face the decision about an unwanted pregnancy."

Norma McCorvey of Dallas, the plaintiff in the landmark 1973 Roe vs. Wade case, spoke Sunday to about 350 people at a demonstration by abortion rights groups against Bork, a conservative federal appeals court judge who has criticized Roe vs. Wade as unconstitutional.

Molly Yard, new president of the National Organization for Women, joined McCorvey in calling for opposition to President Reagan's nomination of Bork, adding, "We will never obey the laws if Roe vs. Wade is overturned."

Actress' Husband Freeway Victim

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A stunt driver and estranged husband of actress Lindsay Wagner was kicked and shot in the latest in a series of traffic-related shootings on Southern California highways, authorities said.

The California Highway Patrol was also investigating the report of a woman who called from a roadside emergency telephone to say she had been shot at by the occupants of a van on the Golden State Freeway in suburban Sylmar about 7:30 p.m. Sunday, CHP officer Shirley Gaines said.

Related story, 3A

Neither the woman nor her car was hit, Gaines said. The woman told officers another car was also shot at but not hit. The incident was referred to a special task force set up by the CHP to investigate freeway violence.

Henry King, 43, a stunt driver for the old television series "Dukes of Hazzard," was shot and wounded at a traffic light Saturday night in North Hollywood, the 22nd victim of a traffic-related shooting since June 18, police said Sunday.

Woman Leads Veteran's Group

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Twenty years after helping mend combat wounds in Vietnam, former Army nurse Mary Stout today is the first female president of a major national veterans group.

Stout, 43, of Arlington, Va., was sworn in Sunday as president of the 35,000-member, male-dominated Vietnam Veterans of America.

About 400 VVA convention delegates elected Stout to the presidency over two male combat veterans Saturday. She won more than 60 percent of the vote, a spokesman for the organization said.

Stout, an Akron, Ohio, native who served in Vietnam as a surgical nurse in 1967-68, succeeds Bobby Muller, 42, who founded the organization in 1978.

Experts: 2 Fighters Attacked USS Stark

WASHINGTON (UPI) — American military and government experts have concluded two Iraqi jets, not one, attacked the USS Stark in May — and some believe the incident was deliberately aimed at goading the United States into increasing its naval presence in the Persian Gulf.

Several intelligence sources have told United Press International it is clear Iraqi air force commanders sent the two pilots on the mission after being duped by doctored intelligence from a neighboring Arab nation.

The commanders apparently had no idea they were ordering an attack on an American ship, the sources told UPI in a series of recent interviews.

In addition, according to some of the sources familiar with the incident, the two airplanes may have been flown not by Iraqis but by foreign mercenaries who routinely flew special attack missions against Iranian maritime targets.

The official position of President Reagan's administration has been to accept Iraq's statements that the May 17 missile attack that cost 37 American lives was accidental and was perpetrated by a single, inexperienced Iraqi pilot.

In addition to the lost lives, the attack ended the careers of two Stark officers, Capt. Glenn Brindel and Lt. Basil Monerief, who resigned from the Navy last week with reprimands rather than risk facing a court-martial.

The administration analysts who spoke to UPI now contend the official Iraqi version is "full of holes" and "dubious." The United States acquiesced in Iraq's apology because of political expediency, these officials said.

"close ally of Iraq," one official said, referring to the current policy of providing Navy escorts for Kuwait oil tankers flying the American flag in the Persian Gulf.

Asked about the accounts provided by the sources, a Pentagon spokesman said last week, "We have no comment on that."

One intelligence source interviewed by UPI said the attack was not "the result of a navigational error," as the Iraqis insisted. "Whatever the attacking pilot saw, it matched what he was told," a Pentagon official agreed.

Several of the analysts described Iraq as "unwitting" and "probably sloppy in its maritime reconnaissance." Others suggested it may have been "set up."

Joseph Churba, a former chief Middle East intelligence analyst for the Air Force known to have excellent intelligence sources, said the attack was deliberately designed "to embroil the U.S. more deeply in the gulf crisis in order to promote an armistice that would not favor Iran."

Churba, president of the Center for International Security, a non-profit think tank in Washington, said the plan was part of "long-term Arab strategy."

One State Department analyst disagreed, saying, "Most people reject any conspiracy as too sophisticated. It was probably just an accident and the Arabs got what political advantages they could from it."

But in all, more than a half-dozen intelligence sources agreed the firing of the two French-made Exocet missiles that slammed into the American ship was not an accident and two planes were involved. All of them also agreed that the Iraqi commanders had no intention of shooting at an American ship.

Teachers Paid Less Than Private Sector Professionals

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Beginning teachers' salaries rose 7.1 percent last year, and, while still lagging behind most private sector salaries, they earned 7 percent more than other government workers, a new survey shows.

The American Federation of Teachers, a 660,000-member union, said Friday the annual 50-state study found beginning teacher salaries rose 7.1 percent to a national average of $17,800 for the last school year.

Jewell Gould and F. Howard Nelson, who conducted the study, said the $26,688 average teacher salary for 1986-87 represents a 5.7 percent increase over the previous year's average salary of $25,260 and exceeds the previous high of $26,296 recorded in 1972.

The study said accountants averaged $31,143, auditors $2,121, attorneys $50,119 and engineers $42,667.

But teachers earned 8 percent more than the average government worker in 1986.

"What we are seeing," said Gould, AFT director of research,

"is that simple dollars and cents figures don't tell the whole story when it comes to describing teacher earnings in the United States."

"Like all other professions, teaching has to compete for talent from a limited pool. Unless we can equal the working and salary conditions in other fields, there will not be enough quality teachers to fill the nation's classrooms."

The study also found that Alaska had the highest average salary at $42,063, 158 percent of the national average, while South Dakota had the lowest average salary at $18,781, or just 70 percent of the national average.

Expenditures per pupil averaged $3,669 in 1985-86, ranging from a low of $2,129 in Arkansas to $6,800 in Alaska, with New York and New Jersey also spending more than $5,500 per pupil.

The teacher salary gain is attributed to layoffs of young, low-paid teachers in the late 1970s and minimal hiring of beginning teachers over the past decade, the survey said. The average teacher now has about 17 years of teaching experience, compared to only 10 years in 1978, the survey said.

OSHA Racks Up Record

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Occupational Safety and Health Administration is emerging from a long slumber because Labor Secretary William Brock is "fed up" with the flouting of safety rules by major corporations, sources say.

OSHA has just completed a month in which it hit several major corporations with the biggest penalties in its 16-year history. Critics are pleased with the recent flurry, though they say OSHA still has big problems — particularly in formulating standards for worker exposure to dangerous chemicals.

OSHA is part of the Labor Department and has been severely criticized from several fronts for relative inactivity during President Reagan's tenure.

The recent crackdown comes amid whispers within the department that Brock could become a candidate for vice president, and an OSHA source said in an end-of-the-month interview that a frustrated Brock decided a "signal" had to be sent about corporations that are lax about following federal safety rules.

"These big fines are Brock's idea," the source said. "They're the biggest fines in history" and as a former Republican National Committee chairman, the labor secretary "can get away with it more than a Democrat could."

"Brock has decided, 'Hey, there's no reason these big businesses should be cheating like they are.'"

Rudman Roughed At Home

CONCORD, N.H. (UPI) — Sen. Warren Rudman's high-profile role in the Iran-Contra arms hearings has not won him rave reviews back home, where he has become the favorite target of New Hampshire conservatives.

The Republican leader of the Select Senate Committee investigating the Iran arms deal has been portrayed editorially in The Union Leader, New Hampshire's largest daily, as the villain to Lt. Col. Oliver North's hero.

New Hampshire's junior senator has not found much support from the rest of the state's all-Republican congressional delegation. While they have not directly criticized Rudman, they have portrayed the hearings as a "witch hunt" and a "circus."

Some conservatives are more direct in their criticism. Right-wing state Sen. John Chandler accused Rudman of having "rocks in his head" for saying he is not feeling political heat at home.

"He doesn't see the people like I do," Chandler said after Rudman made the remarks on a national television interview. "And most everybody I've talked to is disgusted with him."

Most of the criticism, however, has been generated from the editorial pages of The Union Leader. Its late publisher, William Loeb, gained a national reputation for the Manchester newspaper with his stinging editorials, often directed at the presidential hopefuls who flock to the first-in-the-nation primary state every four years.

While Rudman has been spared the newspaper's signed page 1 editorials, he has been the target of a steady stream of criticism for his behavior. Defenders of Rudman also have also felt the newspaper's wrath.

Under editorials headlined "Rudman's cheap shot" and "Rudman's treachery," the former state attorney general has been criticized for his tough questioning of former Reagan administration officials and his defense of the committee's chairman, Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii.

On the same pages, North has been elevated to biblical heights. One editorial cartoon depicts the Marine officer as Samson slaying his congressional questioners.

In the same issue, Rudman was scolded for a "cheap shot" retort to North.

Rudman, who said he reads the newspaper daily in Washington, shrugs off the paper's criticism, which he calls "the scorched earth editorial policy."

Rudman added, "I have always understood that newspapers will disagree — and sometimes vehemently disagree — with me." He said the newspaper's news accounts of the hearings have been accurate and fair.

"I have no complaints with The Union Leader," Rudman said in a telephone interview.

Cape Cod Preserves Open Space

BARNSTABLE, Mass. (UPI) — On a steep pitch near an elementary school are 180 acres of thick forests that hide white-tailed deer, fox and grouse, and peaks that offer splendid views of Cape Cod Bay and salt marshes.

Barnstable property owners are paying an extra 46 cents a week on their tax bills to keep it that way. A developer wanted to put 100 houses on the land. Local residents — in a trend that has swept the Cape — objected.

"They're putting their money where their mouths are," says Mark Robinson, executive director of the Compact of Cape Cod Conservation Trusts, which works to keep open space from being developed. On Cape Cod as well as the rest of the state, residents know if they want to spare forests, beaches or vacant lots from being overrun by housing or businesses, then they must buy it, he says.

In the past two years, more than $70 million has been spent by Cape Cod towns to protect more than 1,000 acres from development. Some of the money came from private donations or state and federal grants, but much of the cost was covered by increased property taxes.

Cynthia Cole, who spearheaded the drive to create the Jall Lane Preservation between Hyannis and Barnstable, says it is worth the expense. It cost Barnstable taxpayers "less than a cup of coffee" a week to protect a watershed, save a recreation area and spare themselves the cost of providing schools, sewers and water for 100 new families.

Discovery 'Go' For Power Up

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) — After months sitting dormant, the shuttle Discovery's electrical "power up" today marks a major milestone on the road to launch processing in September and the first post-Challenger shuttle flight next year.

"I think the team has really got it going now," John Hallmark, Discovery's chief project engineer, said in an interview. "When you've been down a year, getting started back up takes a little bit. It'll get everybody back on the console. You'll think you're doing something again."

Hallmark said about 190 shuttle modifications were ordered after the Jan. 28, 1986, Challenger accident, of which some 64 are mandatory for first flight. About 76 modifications have been completed to date.

"The main reason we're powering up at this particular time is to do the mod retest," Hallmark said. "We have modded just about every system on the vehicle a little bit and we want to get those checked out."

"The actual processing (for launch) will start in September, but we want to do the mod retest this month and get as much of that out of the way as we can."

Discovery is tentatively scheduled to blast off on the 26th shuttle flight in early June 1988. Among their other tasks, the ship's crew of five veteran astronauts plans to launch a NASA communications satellite identical to one destroyed aboard Challenger.

Hallmark said power up, normally a routine shuttle operation, is a morale booster for NASA engineers at the Florida spaceport because "we haven't had all the systems powered up in quite a while. We've been in what we call the stand-down configuration for almost a year."

"The shop people have been working all along to get these mods in, the engineers have been working to get all the paperwork written to do the mods, but this will be the first real time we've really gotten going for the next flight," he said.

Hallmark said he is cautiously optimistic that Discovery will be ready to fly on time next year, despite many major technical challenges.

"We've done a lot of miracle things before and we can probably do it again," he said. "One thing about it, we're not doing it as fast now as we used to. We're taking our time, we're making sure we do it right."

Lawmaker Defies British Book Ban

LONDON (UPI) — Excerpts from a spy novel banned by the British government were read to a receptive public audience in London's famed Hyde Park by an opposition member of Parliament.

The reading Sunday by Labor Party member Tony Benn was reported widely in the British press and attended by about 300 people in the tourist park where each Sunday speakers address crowds on any topic they wish — a custom dating back to 1855.

But most British journalists did not report the actual excerpts read from the former counter-intelligence agent Peter Wright's book, "Spycatcher," published in the United States and brought into Britain by travelers. The book contains Wright's allegations that members of Britain's MI5 counter-intelligence agency plotted to topple the Labor government of Prime Minister Harold Wilson because they thought he was a Soviet agent.

Wilson resigned in 1976 and later charged that his offices were bugged.

Benn, a former Wilson government Cabinet minister, said, "I have come here, first as a citizen but also as an elected member of Parliament, to warn that we should not accept this restriction of our liberty."

"All the democratic rights which we enjoy in Britain, including free speech, were won by a popular struggle, often by those who defied the law on conscientious grounds and were punished for their actions," he said.

Spinks Wants Title Fight

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Michael Spinks, the self-proclaimed people's heavyweight champion, Saturday implored Mike Tyson to set aside supposed commitments and schedule a bout that would finally decide the true titleholder.

"I don't want to stop boxing until it's completely over," Spinks said hours before Tyson and Tony Tucker met for the "undisputed" heavyweight title. "This fight gets me one step closer to the end of my career."

"This is the one that I think all the networks, all the people really are eager to see. This is a death-threatening fight. The outcome could be unknown. It's a very unpredictable match."

Tyson, who entered the ring as the World Boxing Association and World Boxing Council champion, reportedly has commitments for an Oct. 16 fight against Tyrell Biggs in Atlantic City, a December or January bout against an unnamed lesser opponent and a lucrative March 21 match in Japan against a boxer ranked in the top five of either the WBA or WBC.

"In the past week, I've met with two representatives from Japan and found out the so-called $10 million fight in Japan is not what it's been said," said Butch Lewis, Spinks' longtime promoter. "It's for $1.5 or $2 million."

"There's been a big turnaround in popularity since Mike (Spinks) beat (Gerry) Cooney (June 15 in Atlantic City). The Japanese have put on our table an opportunity for Michael (Spinks) to fight there on New Year's Day. They didn't get into any (other) details. I want to give it the best and utmost effort to try and get Tyson to the table."

Jim Jacobs, Tyson's co-manager, said the $10 million offer is firm.

"We are getting $10 million," he said. "Why would we take $1.5 or $2 million to fight in Japan when we could get $3 million of $3.5 million to fight at the Hilton in Las Vegas."

"We're not interested in a fight with Michael Spinks. You can put an exclamation point at the end of that sentence."

Lewis said a Tyson-Spinks bout would top the $75 million grossed by the Marvin Hagler-Sugar Ray Leonard fight. Spinks and Tyson were to have met May 30 in the final bout of the unification series, but Spinks pulled out of the tournament to fight Cooney.

"Instead of being vindictive and trying to punish us," Lewis said, "they should be patting me on the back because I've taken the promotion from where each fighter was to get $2 million to what could be the biggest box office in our industry's history."

"A lot of things have transpired in Tyson's life in the last 30 days. We just want to fight Tyson."

Mike Tyson was surprised Saturday's fight against Tony Tucker went the distance but Tyson nonetheless won a unanimous decision in the heavyweight unification championship bout.

Tyson Outduels Tucker 'Undisputed' Champion Claims IBF Crown

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Punching his way through an expected resistance, Mike Tyson became the first man to unify the three major heavyweight titles, winning a unanimous 12-round decision Saturday night over Tony Tucker.

"I'm the undisputed champion," Tyson said. "That says it all."

But he added, "I would say it was my toughest fight. I kind of took him for granted. That was a big mistake. I found that out in the first round."

Tyson added Tucker's International Boxing Federation title to his World Boxing Council and World Boxing Association championships. Leon Spinks was the last undisputed champion, in 1978, holding the WBC and WBA titles before the IBF was created.

Even with all three titles, however, Tyson is not undisputed as champion. Undeclared Michael Spinks, stripped of the IBF crown he won from Larry Holmes, still claims to be a champion.

Tyson, of Catskill, N.Y., improved to 31-0 with 27 knockouts before 7,600 at the Las Vegas Hilton. Tucker, of Houston, fell to 35-1 with 30 knockouts.

Judge Phil Newman of New Jersey scored it 119-111. Julio Roldan of Venezuela had it 118-113, and Bill Graham of Nevada scored it 118-112.

"I thought I won the fight, but I guess I didn't throw enough punches," said Tucker, who said he injured his right hand in training a week before the fight and re-injured it in the second round. "I'm looking for a rematch."

Tucker's best moment came in the opening round when a left hook to the head backed up Tyson and seemed to hurt him. Tucker fired a follow right, but Tyson quickly resumed his forward attack.

"The last thing I'm thinking about is pain, but he hit me with a good shot, he picked me up in the air," Tyson said. "He was very game, he took some shots."

Tyson did feel pain in his toe. He said Tucker stepped on his toe and broke a toenail off but did not know exactly when in the fight.

The 21-year-old Tyson was an 11-1 favorite. Tucker, 28, forced him into the best all-around performance of his career. Tyson wore down his opponent with hard jabs and body shots, and either blocked, slipped or countered most of Tucker's punches.

Tucker, at 6-foot-5, held a seven-inch height advantage and an 11 1/2-inch reach advantage over the 5-10 Tyson. Tyson was the better jabber, and continually chased Tucker around the ring. Both fighters weighed 221 pounds.

Tyson established himself as the stronger puncher in the next few rounds, and dominated the middle rounds. A right to the jaw lifted Tucker's left leg off the canvas in the fifth, and hard right to the jaw shook Tucker in the corner in the sixth.

Tyson again rattled Tucker with a left to the head in the ninth round, and a left to the jaw wobbled Tucker late in a furious final round.

Tucker tried to showboat by winding up with bolo punches and shuffling his feet. The strategy failed, however, as Tyson nailed him in return and picked up his attack each time.

Neither fighter was cut or marked, the 10th and final bout of a 10-fight, 18-month elimination series to crown one heavyweight champion.

Spinks, who watched the bout from the last row in the stands, has called for a fight against Tyson to settle the matter. Tyson said he doesn't need Spinks, who was stripped of his title for refusing to fight Tucker. Tyson has three fights planned through March 1988.

Tyson is expected to fight Tyrell Biggs Oct. 16 at a site to be determined.

Tyson earned approximately $2.5 million, while Tucker's purse was an estimated $1.9 million.

Tyson won the WBC title Nov. 22 when he stopped Trevor Berbick in two rounds to become the youngest heavyweight champion, four months after his 20th birthday.

District 14 Prepares For State Tourney Challenge

By Scott Bander
Herald Sports Writer

As a team progresses in All-Star baseball play, the competition improves at every level of play.

Now that the District 14 Big League Nationals have captured the Section I championship, manager Gene Letterio fully realizes that his team will not be in for a cakewalk in the Big League Baseball State Tournament, as the opponents will be much tougher than in the Section.

"We have got to pick up our level of play," Letterio said. "Last year, all of the games over here were very close."

"This team hasn't proven that it can win a close game. The only time that they trailed, they lost. We've still got a lot of questions to answer."

District 14, the defending State Champions, will begin its quest to defend its title as it will take on Brevard, the Section II champs, tonight at 7 at Englebert Field in Duneside.

Letterio said that either Eustis' William Thompson or Lake Brantley's Greg Ebbert will get the start on the mound for the Nationals. The Nationals will play again on Tuesday at 7 regardless of Monday's outcome. Letterio said that Lake Mary's Anthony Laszale, who led the Nationals to the Section title with a three-hitter against Jacksonville, will pitch on Tuesday.

Baseball

"I feel very confident sending William or Greg to the hill tonight," Letterio said. "Anthony has stepped forward and shown that he is our ace, so he'll pitch on Tuesday. Most of our other pitchers are not spotting the ball very well, and their control has been off."

Letterio, whose team has been scoring runs in clusters, said that he'd like to see the team have more consistent innings. "We've been strictly a rally team," Letterio said. "I'd like to see us score one or two runs in a lot of innings instead of seeing us score five runs twice."

The Nationals have been strong offensively as they have belted eight home runs in three games. The Nationals have cracked out 19 hits in their three games while scoring 30 runs.

"We've been swinging the bats pretty well," Letterio said. "But we have to swing them better. When Jacksonville pitched that one kid, (LaWhit Lizzmore) he one-hit us. I'm expecting these pitchers in this tournament to be the quality of him."

Lake Howell's Eric Martinez has been the offensive leader as he has led the offensive charge with three home runs and 9 RBI. "I'm just relaxing and having fun out there," Martinez said. "It's so much fun playing with guys that you have competed against all year."

Letterio said that he is gaining confidence in Martinez with every game. "In a pressure situation, he's the guy I want up there," Letterio said. "The kid has a great swing."

Ernest Martinez has also been productive at the plate as he has a homer and 3 RBI. "I think that if we play good defense, we have a good chance to go all the way," Martinez said. "We are becoming a closer team."

Lake Mary's Mike Schmit has a homer, and 3 RBI. "I'm not real happy with the way I'm hitting," Schmit said. "There were a few pitches that I should have crushed."

Letterio said that although Schmit may not be pleased with his hitting, he is. "Mike has come a long way since he left Florida State," Letterio said. "I remember the first day he started hitting after not having a bat in his hand for months. He has come a very long way since then, and is right where he needs to be at."

Oviedo's Glenn Reichle has also contributed as he has a dinger and 4 RBI. Laszale has chipped in with homer and 3 RBI. Eustis' Russ Adler also has a round-tripper.

After his team committed eight errors in its first two games, Letterio opted to change his defensive alignment. The result was an error-free game. "I'm going with the same lineup that ended last Friday's game," Letterio said. "I think that we have the right kids at the proper positions."

Lake Brantley's Mark Coffey, who caught the first two games, will be playing center-field. The outfield is nothing new to Coffey as his plays right-field for Brevard Community College.

Schmit, who struggled at third in the first two games, will be playing left. "I had kind of a tough time at third," Schmit said. "But I don't mind left one bit."

"That was my goal after the surgery," McMahon said Sunday. "I didn't know if I would be back this soon. I don't know what he (surgeon Dr. Frank Jobe) expected. I know he originally didn't think I'd be able to practice for another couple of weeks."

Coach Mike Ditka said McMahon is

"throwing the ball pretty accurately. He doesn't have the zip on it but he's throwing it a lot like he did before the surgery."

McMahon is not yet 100 percent. He does not throw in the morning practices at Platteville and has been warned by Jobe about overworking the shoulder.

"He told me not to push myself, not to get too excited and try to throw too much," McMahon said. "He said the shoulder is not going to be as strong as it will be in six months."

PLATTEVILLE, Wis. (UPI) — Chicago Bears All-Pro linebacker Mike Singletary participated in a few running drills during practice Sunday, a day after recovering from dehydration in a hospital.

Seven players were treated for dehydration after Saturday's two workouts at the University of Wisconsin-Platteville.

Cubs' Martinez Impressing Many

Lake Howell High Graduate Having Productive Season In Chicago

CHICAGO — The good-looking blonde just would not take no for an answer. After David Martinez left the autograph seekers in the Chicago Cubs' players parking lot, the car in which he was riding headed up Waveland Avenue.

The attractive blonde, in her mid-20s, was in hot pursuit. Aided by a stop sign, she corralled Martinez at the next intersection. After pleading her case through sparkling blue eyes, the Cubs' center fielder rolled down the window. The blonde shoved a balloon and a felt pen inside for an autograph.

Several honking horns and a few swipes of the pen later, she was gone, a dream realized. The blonde, and two acquaintances, who gawked at driver-outfielder Brian Dayett from the other street corner, marched triumphantly down the street; mission accomplished.

"That happens all the time," Martinez grinned sheepishly. "Sometimes it gets to be a problem."

All of us males should have such a problem, right?

David Martinez, a 22-year-old rookie from Casselberry Lake Howell High School, is one of those strong silent types. He goes about his job at 1060 W. Addison St. with as little fanfare as possible. This year, he has gone about it very well.

After all, it's not his fault that women of all ages wave signs: "Marry me, Dave." It's not his fault that beautiful babes chase him down city streets. It's not his fault that groupies cluster on street corners and beseege him for autographs. It's not his fault that he was blessed with dark-featured Puerto Rican good looks.

It is Martinez' fault, however, that he is hitting over .300 and playing center field better than any National League outfielder except Eric Davis. And if you give Martinez a few eight-foot fences to jump above, for spectacular catches, even the Reds' dynamic center fielder may have to take a backseat.

Veteran Wrigley Field patrons are hard-pressed to come up with an outfielder who gets a better jump on the ball than Martinez.

They marvel at his ability to take away certain base hits by breaking with the crack of the bat. His head-long dives into the alleys have become second nature. His strong, left-handed arm has gained respect throughout the league.

Gene Michael, who labeled the young phenom a "suspect" at this time last year, is now on of his biggest supporters. "We always knew he could field," the second-year Cub skipper said. "His defense has been tremendous. And his bat has come around like we hoped it would. Yes, we're very happy with Martinez."

A year ago, though, the blondes were not chasing Martinez down Waveland Avenue and Michael was not singing his praises. Martinez was still making all the plays defensively but his bat was out to lunch. The Cubbies chased him back to Des Moines (AAA) for some seasoning. He stayed down a month and recaptured his swing and confidence. He was back when the rosters expanded in September and finished out the year with the Cubs.

The left-handed hitting slasher started slowly this spring, too. Almost incredibly, he was batting .088 in late April. He was chasing bad pitches, the Cardinal Sin of a

Seitzer 6 for 6 7 RBIs

United Press International Only the temperature rose as dramatically as Kevin Seitzer's batting average on Sunday.

Kevin Seitzer tied an American League record by going 6 for 6, leading the Kansas City Royals to a 13-5 rout of the Boston Red Sox in a game played in 100-degree heat.

"I told my wife last night that it's been a great year and everything, but I haven't got a four-hit game," Seitzer said. "There were times I got three hits my first three times up but I couldn't get the fourth hit. She just said 'I know you can hit.'"

She was right. Seitzer collected two homers, one double and three singles, tying a league mark held by many players for hits in a nine-inning game.

He also drove in seven runs. Rennie Stennett of Pittsburgh, who went 7 for 7 on Sept. 16, 1975, holds the modern major-league record for perfect batting in a game.

"I caught all the breaks I could possibly catch today," Seitzer said. "Last night I had two line drives that were caught."

Jose Canseco gets a good look at his base hit. Canseco's single in the 11th inning Sunday enabled Oakland to defeat Minnesota, 6-5, and move within one game of the Twins in the American League West.

At Oakland, Jose Canseco singled home Luis Polonia from second with two out in the 11th, pulling the A's within one game of AL West-leading Minnesota.

The Twins open a three-game series against third-place California tonight in Anaheim. Gene Nelson was the winner and Jeff Reardon, 5-6, took the loss.

At Milwaukee, Bill Long, 6-6, won a start for the first time in over a month and Chicago pounded out 16 hits, for its third victory in a row.

Bobby Thigpen finished for his third save. Chris Bosio, 7-3, suffered a hyperextended left knee and left the game on a stretcher.

At Anaheim, Calif., John Moses squeezed home David Valle from third base with one out in the ninth, helping Seattle snap California's four-game winning streak.

Mike Kingery hit a first-inning grand slam for the Mariners. Steve Shields pitched 1-3 innings for the victory. Greg Minton fell to 3-2.

At St. Louis, Terry Pendleton drove in four runs and Jim Lindeman added a home run in support of rookie Joe Magrane, sparking the Cardinals.

With the triumph, St. Louis completed a three-game series sweep. Magrane improved to 6-2. Hipolito Pena, 0-3, took the loss in his first start of the season.

At Montreal, Keith Hernandez drove in three runs and Ron Darling collected his third straight victory to pace the Mets.

Darling, 7-7, has won five of his last six starts. He allowed two hits, walked eight and struck out four over 6-2-3 innings. Roger McDowell earned his 16th save. Bob Sebra fell to 6-11.

At Arlington, Texas, Bobby Witt yielded five hits over 8-1-3 innings and struck out a season-high 11 to help the Rangers end a four-game losing streak.

Davis' 30th Homer Beats Giants, 5-4

United Press International Eric Davis joined an elite group Sunday night in his usual dramatic fashion.

The Cincinnati Reds' star center fielder hit his 30th home run of the season, a towering blast in the bottom of the 11th inning that gave the Reds a 5-4 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

Coupled with his 50 stolen bases, Davis became only the seventh player in major-league history with at least 30 homers and 30 steals in the same season.

Other members of the "30-30" club are Willie Mays (1956-57), Hank Aaron (1963), Bobby Bonds (1968-73-75-77-78), Dale Murphy (1983), Ken Williams (1922) and Tommy Harper (1970).

Davis' game-winning homer cleared the left-field wall by about 60 feet and bounced against a concrete barrier on the top level of seats in Riverfront Stadium.

"It was one of the best balls I've hit in a long time," said Davis. "It was a fastball right down the middle of the plate."

Lozer Jeff Robinson, 6-7, didn't even look to see if the ball would clear the fence.

"You don't have to," he said. "You know that sound."

Steinbrenner Calls For Changes

NEW YORK (UPI) — New York Yankees' owner George M. Steinbrenner Sunday called for a revision of major-league baseball's umpiring setup that would place National and American League crews under one supervisor.

At present the AL umpires are under the direction of league president Bobby Brown and umpire supervisor Marty Springstead. NL umpires work under league president Bart Giamatti and umpire supervisor Ed Vargo.

The year (1979) Pete Rose signed with the Phillies, we (the owners) had a committee meeting about putting the umpires under one head in the Commissioner's office," Steinbrenner said. "I still have my notes, but when Lee MacPhail (then the AL president) heard about it, he got very upset and it disappeared. Chub Feeney (then the NL president) also opposed it.

Baseball

"You have to understand that the league presidents don't have that much to do and Feeney and MacPhail jealously guarded control of the umpires."

Steinbrenner, upset over numerous recent incidents between his Yankees and the AL umpires, was unhappy Saturday when home plate umpire Ken Kaiser ejected Charles Hudson for throwing behind the Tigers' Mike Heath after two Detroit batters homered.

"What is needed is the same thing the other professional sports have," Steinbrenner added. "The NFL and the NBA have their officials under one head and standard rules for all. At that committee meeting where this was discussed it was stipulated that a strike was nippled to the knees. Now we have different strike zones in each league."

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Quick Start Lifts Johnson To First LPGA Victory Of '87

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. (UPI) — Chris Johnson, the third-round leader by one stroke, laid claim to her first LPGA Tour victory of the season by picking up five strokes on the first four holes Sunday.

Johnson, who birdied three of the first four holes on the final round, shot a 2-under-par 70 for a five-stroke victory in the $250,000 LPGA Columbia Savings National Pro-Am. It was the fourth career victory for the 29-year-old from Tucson, Ariz., who led the entire tournament and earned $37,500.

"There's that tendency to relax a little bit," Johnson said. "But you just don't know when someone's going to make eagle or throw something in the hole. I just wanted to play smart and minimize my mistakes."

Shirley Furlong fired a closing-round 70 to finish second at 282. Rookie Sara Anne Timms, who fired a 69 on the final day, was third at 283, and Sherri Turner and Jan Stephenson were another stroke back.

Johnson started well with birdie putts, all less than two feet, at the first, second and fourth holes at Lone Tree Country Club. Sally Quinlan, who began the day one shot behind, took herself out of contention with bogeys on the first three holes. That gave Johnson a six-stroke advantage after four holes.

Bullets' Catledge Hurt In Crash

CALHOUN CITY, Miss. (UPI) — Washington Bullets forward Terry Catledge was injured early Sunday in a single-vehicle accident that killed another passenger, the Mississippi Highway Patrol said.

Catledge, 23, a Houston Miss., native was transferred from Hillcrest Hospital in Calhoun City along with Michael Evans, the driver of the car, to the North Medical Center in Tupelo, Sunday morning. Both were given a room and Rosemary Jarrel, a spokesperson for North Medical, said Catledge is in "stable" condition. She said no other information was available.

Earl Evans, a passenger, was transferred to the Oxford Lafayette Medical Center in Oxford. Spokesman Chuck Drummin said Earl Evans is being watched in intensive care for possible internal injuries. He described Earl Evans as being in "fair condition."

Troopers said four people, including Catledge, were riding in a 1987 Bronco on Mississippi Highway 8 south of Calhoun City when the driver, Michael Evans, lost control of the vehicle as it skidded off the road about 2:50 a.m.

One passenger, Ricky Cooper, 22, died in the accident. Catledge, Michael Evans and Earl Evans were thrown clear of the vehicle and survived. Cooper, who was pulled from the wreckage, was the only passenger wearing a seat belt. The cause of his death was not immediately reported.

The cause of the accident was excessive speed, troopers said.

Falcons Out Early At Regionals

The Seminole Falcons ran into some hard-hitting competition this past weekend and dropped two games in a row in the ASA 18 and Under Southern Region Tournament at Brandon.

The Falcons, out of the Seminole Softball Club, opened with a 13-8 loss to the Alabama Angels. Seminole built an early 5-1 lead but the Angels, who pounded out 20 hits in the game, took the lead for good in the third.

Seminole had 12 hits in the game led by Tammy Jenerette who was 2 for 2. Christy Tibbitts and Corrie Lawson added two hits each.

In game two, the Jacksonville Astros took a 13-2 lead into the seventh inning when the Falcons put on a last ditch rally. The Falcons scored nine times in the inning but the rally fell short in a 13-11 loss.

Tibbitts and Sharon Bonaventure had three hits each in the game for the Falcons while the Astros banded out 20 hits.

"We would have had to be playing our best and really crushing the ball to have won," Falcons' manager Gigi Switzer said. "The other teams were just pounding the ball."

Gymnast Sims Fatally Shot

RICHARDSON, Texas (UPI) — A champion gymnast who worked with children because he "loved the innocence of the world" died from a point-blank gunshot wound while pursuing two purse snatchers, one a teenager.

Glenn Michael Sims, 25, of Garland, Texas, a three-time Big Eight Conference gymnastics champion for the University of Oklahoma, was shot through the heart and killed Saturday afternoon near busy Central Expressway north of Dallas.

Sims was to meet today with his former coach, Greg Buwick, to interview for a job as Oklahoma's assistant gymnastics coach.

Police said Sims was killed after a car chase with two women who snatched a purse from a Dallas woman at a suburban shopping center. Sheila Ann Hill, 17, and Sylvanna Quiroga, 23, both of Dallas, were held today without bail for investigation of capital murder and burglary of a motor vehicle.

Lendl Levels Gilbert; W. Germany Downs U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ivan Lendl is 12-0 against Brad Gilbert dating back to 1982 and has dropped just three sets in those five years. Sunday night, the world's No. 1 player completed his easiest match to date against Gilbert.

Lendl needed only 56 minutes to dismiss the 25-year-old American 6-1, 6-0 in the final of the $293,400 D.C. National Tennis Classic Sunday night for his 65th career singles title and third championship of the year.

"I wanted to climb under a rock, but you're a professional and you have to finish it," said Gilbert.
Lendl, with a near-flawless serve and masterful return, dominated the fourth-seeded and 17th-ranked Gilbert, holding serve throughout the match and surrendering just nine points off his serve in the match.
Gilbert upset Boris Becker in three sets in the semifinals.

"He gets intimidated and psyches himself out before he plays me," Lendl said.
Both players knew it was going to be a rout from the first points of the match.
"I thought there would be a good chance of (a rout) after the third point of the match because I saw the way he was hitting his serve and I saw the way he was moving. When he is nervous, he does not move well and he pushes his serve," Lendl said.
Gilbert added: "He put pressure on me off the first return. He nailed the first return and got me running right off the bat."
Lendl added the $39,440 first-place check to his record

Stocks Plunge On Opening

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices opened sharply lower Monday in active trading of New York Stock Exchange issues on a flurry of selling prompted by heightened conflict between Iran and its Arab neighbors.

The Dow Jones Industrial average, which soared 88.74 last week, was down 20.56 to 2551.50 shortly after the market opened.

Losers led gainers 729-285 among the 1,342 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape.

Early turnover amounted to about 28,757,000 shares.

Traders said Middle East conflict had thrown the market off balance but that it already was prepared for a correction.

Referring to recent clash between Iranian pilgrims and Saudi police in Mecca, in which 400 people were killed, Peter Furniss, vice president in the equity trading department at Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co., said the market "is sensitive to good news but hypersensitive to bad."

"The Dow had an eight-day rise and was poised for a correction," said Furniss.

With higher bond market yields, the likelihood of increased inflation fears due to rising oil prices, and the awareness that the bull market is five years old, Furniss said it is not surprising that "buyers have stepped away from the market."

Furniss cited minor support for the Dow at 2550 and major support in the 2510 to 2530 area.

Tokyo: Dollar Closes Higher Europe: Dollar Opens Up

By United Press International

The dollar gained against key foreign currencies Monday in trading marked by fears that Middle East tensions will worsen. Gold jumped.

The dollar closed higher against the Japanese yen in Tokyo, regaining the 150-yen level. The dollar closed at 150.15 yen, up 0.90 from Friday's closing rate of 149.25 yen.

Dealers said the U.S. currency rose on buying triggered by escalating turmoil in the Middle East, but then gave back some of the gains when investors took profits.

In European trading, the dollar rose at the open in Frankfurt to 1.8585 German marks from Friday's close of 1.8554, in Zurich to 1.5400 Swiss francs from 1.5375, and in Paris to 6.1845 from 6.1768.

In Amsterdam it rose to 2.0940 guilders from 2.0890.

and in Milan to 1,345.5 lire from 1,344.

The one exception to the dollar's upward trend was in London, where the pound strengthened marginally to $1.5930 from $1.5925.

The price of gold surged to open in Zurich at $471.50 from $462.50, and in London to $471.25 from $461.75. The London morning gold fixing was $473.24, up $1.50.

Earlier in the Far East, gold closed at $470.25, up from Friday's close of $464.50.

Silver rose in Zurich to $8.45 an ounce from the previous $8.30 and in London to $8.495 from $8.28.

In early trading on New York's Comex, gold jumped $10.70 to $474.80 from Friday's close of $464.10. Silver was up 54 cents to $8.74 from Friday's closing of $8.30.

June New Construction Down

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Construction spending nationwide slowed by 1.1 percent in June despite a small increase in residential building, the Commerce Department said Monday.

The government estimated spending at an annual rate of $390.1 billion for all residential, commercial and public construction activity in the United States last month. The rate reflects what spending would total for all 1987 if every month were like June and seasonal factors in the June report were taken into account.

The nation's building pace slowed because people spent less money on private non-residential buildings and for public projects, the Commerce Department said.

Non-residential building dropped to 4.7 percent to $84.3 billion, with industrial, office, hotel and such commercial projects all contributing to the decline.

The public construction rate, meanwhile, slid 3.2 percent to reach $72.2 billion because governments spent less on educational buildings and road projects.

In contrast, the spending rate for residential construction and improvements was up 1.2 percent to $195.5 billion. In spending just for new housing, the rate slipped fractionally to $138.9 billion.

Mrs. Sehrer says she wonders today if her husband was assaulted and if the person or persons who did it were in fact after Rowe with a personal vendetta and mistook her husband for him. Rowe himself says if Sehrer was attacked, "it could have been a disgruntled former employee or any one of the other people who live in the industrial park."

Another question raised by information furnished by Mrs. Sehrer and Rowe is that the pole found under Sehrer's head that morning is gone. Rowe says someone drove up to the spot some time after the incident and broke off the pole and took it with him.

Rowe said he believes there are at least 20 people living in storage sheds in or about building 224 on Hickman Drive in the industrial complex. Rowe also said he has seen at least one boy walk from the sheds daily and catch a bus to school.

James Hickman, Dr. Hickman's son who manages the park, says he thinks Rowe's estimates "are quite exaggerated. This is a common problem for people who rent out sheds. Usually, the people who live in them are transients and when we see signs of people living in them, we throw them out. But we can only police it to the extent the law allows. We rent a shed to someone who says they want it for storage, we have to take them at their word. We look for signs, but if they aren't there, we don't know if anyone is living there. We can't go around at night opening the sheds and looking in. We have to follow the same rules the county or police have to. The problem is much deeper than that, though. Some people rent those sheds and use grow-lights to cultivate marijuana plants. How can we know what they're doing in them?"

As to who might have removed the pole after the accident, James Hickman said, "I certainly did not and while I can't speak for my father, I don't think he would have had any reason to do that, so I don't believe he did."

Rowe said Sehrer and his family were living in the shed trying to save money so they could buy a house.

"I'm trying to find them a place to live. The Holiday Inn (on Lee Road in Winter Park) is donating them a few nights," said Rowe.

"He was my right hand. I'll have to hire two people to replace him," he said. Mrs. Sehrer said today is the last day she'll be at Holiday Inn and "I don't know where I'm going from here, but I'll try to find something." She said she and her family had been living in a camper trailer in Bunnell in Flagler County, "but that was when my husband didn't have to open the plant so early. Then he had to be there by six in the morning and that meant having to get up around three-thirty to get ready for the hour and a half drive."

Mrs. Sehrer said the company had no health insurance for her husband and she is in trouble financially, looking at the prospect of filing a workman's compensation claim. She said his take-home pay was about $300 a week. Webster gave this account of what she saw that morning when she found Sehrer lying on his back, spread eagle:

"His head was next to a metal pole that had been bent near the ground. His body was lying north to south in the east-west driveway and his bicycle was leaning against a short post nearby. He was unconscious."

Said Rowe: "Sehrer's skull was cracked from temple to temple."

Seminole County sheriff's investigator Dan Prast said today he is convinced Sehrer lost

Bob Rowe points to the spot where Sehrer was found. A metal stake that was there has since been broken off and taken.

control of the bike when it hit some gravel near the post. Sehrer, Prast said, was thrown from the bike and struck his head on the top end of the pole. The pole, Prast said, had apparently become "sharpened" by a lawnmower blade as that area had been mowed.

Sehrer's head just happened to hit the raw end of the pole, which cut open his head, Prast said. Prast said investigators left the pole in the ground. The bottom of it was embedded three feet deep. Investigators photographed the pole, which had blood, skin, hair and other matter on it, Prast said.

Prast said he did not know someone removed the pole, but said if it has been removed it might be in anticipation of a lawsuit. The pole, he said, was on private property and is like the poles used to hold stop signs. The pole does not belong to Seminole County, Prast said.

Prast said he explained the law enforcement theory of the incident to a doctor who earlier had heard inaccurate reports of the incident. Prast said after hearing the results of the investigation, the doctor said he then understood how Sehrer was injured in an accidental fall.

Seminole County Code enforcement officials received a complaint several months ago about people allegedly living in storage sheds at the industrial park, but an investigation failed to turn up evidence the sheds were being used as residences, according to John Dwyer, Seminole County's land management coordinator. Dwyer said Hickman told him no one was using a shed as a dwelling.

"We inspected, but were never able to confirm people were living there," Dwyer said.

County records show Dr. Hickman served as a member of the Board of Adjustment from September 1981 to January 1982 and from February 1983 to January 1986. The board is responsible for reviewing and acting on requests for exceptions and variances to regulations on land-use, zoning and building.

James Hickman said today in view of what's happened and what "I've been told, I certainly will look into it. But I can't do, as I said, any more than the law allows in monitoring this thing."

The Wauchula center is the only one of its kind in the state which has a pediatric section, Kreinbring said. She had other choices of rehabilitation centers in other states, but this one will allow her to visit on weekends.

"I visited her in Jacksonville every weekend and Alyssia wanted to call me every night, but we limited it to one call on Wednesday nights," her mother said. "She has such low volume when she speaks that she is difficult to understand on the telephone and she has trouble pronouncing some words. I have become quite adept at reading lips," Kreinbring said.

Although the progress has been slow, she said she is happy that she can see the changes. Alyssia can now turn her body in the car by herself to position it to get into the wheel chair, and is beginning to be able to wheel her chair herself.

Kreinbring is also relieved that her daughter seems to be always in good spirits. "She's always smiling and happy," her mother said. "The nurses love her and like to give her hugs because she scratches their backs when they do. I'd like to see her more often, but she has had three hours of therapy in the morning and three in the afternoon, so she is tired afterward, and her day is quite full."

The Wauchula rehabilitation center will offer Alyssia both physical and mental therapy, she said.

"It's a long-term rehabilitation center and she could be there for several years," Kreinbring said. One of its goals will be to lengthen Alyssia's attention span.

"Her attention span is only about five minutes now and we have been working with card games and other games to try to lengthen it," her mother said.

"We know that Alyssia will never be the same as she was before the accident," she said.

"but we have hopes that she will regain her full mental and physical abilities."

"It has been quite an ordeal, not knowing for so long whether she was going to live or not, and now the progress that she makes is slower than I expected, but I have come to realize that recovery from a brain injury takes a long time, and there are no promises how much recovery there will be."

Mom Throws Wet Blanket On Nudist Wedding Plans

DEAR ABBY: I am 27 and getting married in September to a wonderful young lady named Julie. She and I are nudists, as is her whole family. We have always wanted an outdoor wedding, and want to have the ceremonies at the nudist camp where we met three years ago.

So far, all our invitations have been accepted — except one. You guessed it — the reluctant one is my mother. The non-nudists understand that they will not be required to be nude. My 23-year-old sister and I have tried unsuccessfully to persuade Mother to attend. She refuses to budge, saying if we want her to attend, we will have to change our plans.

Shall we give her an ultimatum and stick with what we want? At this point, I feel like telling my mother we will miss her. What do you say?

BOBBY IN NASHVILLE
DEAR BOBBY: It appears that your mother has already given you an ultimatum — either have a conventional wedding or count her out. Knowing how your mother feels about nudity, if you stick with your plans, it will clearly show her that you don't give a fig (leaf) about whether she attends or not.

P.S. Where will your best man carry the ring? I hope this covers everything.

DEAR ABBY: I'm considering changing my name. It's not that I'm ashamed of my name, but it's very long, hard to spell and hard to remember, which could be a disadvantage for a young man hoping to make it in the business world. What do you think?

C.J. IN BUFFALO

DEAR C.J.: I'm reminded of a very bright, ambitious young man who faced the same dilemma. He concluded: "The harder a name is to remember, the harder it will be to forget." Thank you, Arnold Schwarzenegger.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for printing the letter from the woman who objected to her pastor's habit of dropping in unexpectedly. We clergy are under the same general rules of courtesy as everyone else. Surely a phone call to say that we intend to visit is not only courteous, but may result in a more productive call as well.

From our side, may I express a complaint? Must I compete, when visiting in someone's home, with soap operas, game shows or whatever might be on television? I was under the impression that when a visitor came to the door, the TV was turned off before answering the door so that the caller would know that he or she was welcome.

So, there I sit, trying to carry on a conversation, with no offer from my parishioner to turn off the intrusive TV program. Lately I have been refusing to stay longer than a minute or two if the TV has been left on.

Perhaps you readers have a gracious solution to this little problem.

A REVEREND FROM ARIZONA

DEAR REVEREND: The TV should certainly be turned off before opening the door to an expected visitor. However, unexpected guests should not be offended if they drop in on someone who is watching TV and the surprised "host or hostess" simply turns the TV down "listening with one ear and watching with one eye." Not all people prefer drop-in company to their favorite TV program.

DEAR ABBY: Help! I will be entering high school this fall and desperately want to go out for football, but my mother doesn't want me to.

Abby, I am 6 foot 2 and weigh 210 pounds. All of my friends think I should play football, but my mother is afraid I'll get hurt.

Don't you agree that an A-B student should be allowed to be involved in sports if he wants to? My mom says wrestling is OK, but not football.

BIG GUY

DEAR BIG GUY: In view of your scholastic standing, I think this decision should be yours. But remember, every sport has its risk.

Denial Of Situation May Prove To Be Fatal

Dr. Gott

DEAR DR. GOTT — My father, 69, has just been diagnosed as having cancerous lymphoma. He says he feels fine and thinks it's a hoax. (He also has diabetes and is a chronic alcohol abuser.) May I have your thoughts on his "hoax" idea? I am having trouble dealing with his attitude and my fears for his health.

DEAR READER — Lymphoma, a tumor of the lymph glands, is usually malignant. It originates in lymph nodes — causing painless swelling — and then spreads to other organs, notably the liver and spleen. Of all cancers, lymphoma is probably the most successfully treated; chemotherapy and radiation produce remission, even cure, in a high percentage of patients.

This malignancy produces few, if any, early symptoms. Of course, this is precisely the time in which treatment will be most effective. Therefore, your father has a greater chance of cure if he begins therapy as soon as possible, before the tumor has had a chance to spread.

Unfortunately, active alcoholics rely on the emotional defense mechanism called denial. They deny that they have a drinking problem, they deny their own responsibility and — often — they deny their vulnerability. Denial is part of the disease of alcoholism.

If your father is denying his lymphoma, I suggest that you recommend a second or third opinion. Although the pressure of proof may not change your father's mind, you will know that you are doing everything you can to help him. I doubt that his diagnosis is a "hoax." However, if the doctor is mistaken, another opinion would be valuable.

You have no control over your father's attitudes or behavior. If he remains obstinate, I think that you can feel free to make a statement such as: "Dad, I love you a lot and I am really worried about your health. The doctors agree you have a condition that can be treated successfully. You have a right to refuse treatment, but I want you to know that the family wants you to get well and we believe that this treatment is necessary. We will help you any way we can, but the decision is yours." At that point, you've done what you can. Be informed about prescrip-

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby
When you have a long minor suit to run in a no-trump contract, nine tricks are frequently there, provided the opponents don't take five tricks first. In today's deal, South did not open with a pre-emptive bid in first position, feeling that his K-8-6 of spades represented too much outside strength. In response to North's one-club opening, he bid one diamond and then jumped to three diamonds after partner's rebid of one heart. That gave North the responsibility of deciding whether to go further.

What might North do? In these situations the three no-trump game is usually best, but where was the spade stopper? North certainly could not count on his 4-3-2 to do the work. The answer is what has come to be called a western cue-bid. North bid three spades. And what did that say?

Simply "I've got enough to bid over three diamonds, and if you can stop or partially stop the spade suit, let's try for three no-trump." South was happy to oblige, and happier still to find that North had the K-J of diamonds as part of his high-card values. In the current instance, it is logical that the spade bid asks for a stopper or partial stopper. (When North holds controlling values in the suit, he can bid no-trump himself.) But don't blame me if you try out the western cue-bid some time and find yourself in game with no play and no semblance of a stopper in the key suit.

Since the contract was played from the right side, declarer had an overtrick when West led from his strong suit. Had North been declarer in three no-trump, the jack of spades lead would have quickly set him.

HOROSCOPE

What The Day Will Bring... YOUR BIRTHDAY AUGUST 4, 1987

In the year ahead, you will have more time and financial wherewithal to spend on situations that fulfill your pleasurable needs. You're in a cycle that portends happy conditions.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You'll be competent at managing difficult situations today, but the credit you'll deserve may go to another just because this person is more flamboyant. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker set instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A misunderstanding could put a damper on what should be a good day for you. Be mindful of how you say things and to whom you say them.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Have fun and enjoy yourself today, but put limits on your spending or else pals might draw you into activities that overtax your finances.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You have the rare gift today to turn a little into much if you follow your logical instincts. Don't let your feelings or emotions lessen this force.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) This is an excellent day to undertake assignments that pique your imagination. However, if you get others involved, they may impede your ingenuity.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) There is no in-between with you today. You'll either be a dynamo who gets things done, or a dud who merely misinforms. Strive for balance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Members of the opposite sex will find you especially appealing today. Complications could ensue, however, if your innocent flirtations are taken seriously.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) The motivation you need today is not of the ordinary variety. Rather, it will be something very special for which you will have to fight.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You have what it takes to make it in the commercial world today, but unfortunately, you might waste too much time and effort on the wrong prospects.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) A beneficial change you've been wanting to make can be accomplished today. It will happen in spite of the lack of cooperation of people who said they would help.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You can't be all things to all people today. Don't be disturbed if a co-worker doesn't see the same virtues in you that your friends do.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Financial conditions look promising for you today, but there's a possibility you might not develop them in ways that could provide you with the greatest returns.
