KAZARIAN BEATS THE PRICE!
 IF YOU'RE UNDER 25, if you own a van or a pick-up, or if you just need immediate auto insurance coverage — you need to call me.
 Yes, according to Ralph Kazarian, "You may be paying too much for your auto insurance."
 Mr. Kazarian is fully aware that we, as drivers, are tired of reading deceptive ads about how we can beat the high cost of our auto insurance, but there is something definite that sets him apart — specialization. He's an unusual man in his line of business, for he is willing to give hard-luck YOUNG DRIVERS a more-than-fair deal on their auto insurance.
 "I feel that young people, in many cases, are unjustifiably charged high rates, and I know that many may be short on cash. That's why monthly payments are our specialty. Furthermore, there are a large number of drivers under 25 that are paying high rates due simply to their age; others are penalized because of their personal tastes in automobiles. Finally, customers who need minimum insurance coverage are turned away repeatedly. To overcome these situations is my whole reason for being in business."
 Yes, this all sounds quite promising, but just how can Ralph Kazarian afford to offer a truly better price to you and me?
 "I've shopped for years to find companies who offer the best possible rates for my particular customers. As a result, I represent 35 to 40 different companies who target their efforts to the specialized automobile and truck insurance market. This allows me to give my customers the insurance they need at the price they want to pay."
 And Mr. Kazarian has proved himself to be quite successful in his approach. After 15 years in the business, he's established himself as an institution within the auto insurance industry in Florida. To prove his ambition and determination, he's opened new offices in the last two years in the Central Florida area and has just recently remodelled his new Sanford office, which is located between Burger King and Flagship Bank on Orlando Avenue (323-2454).
 So...if you're really interested in finding out how to get the insurance you need...at the price you want to pay — stop by one of Ralph Kazarian's auto insurance agencies...ADV.

Area Poles Feel Pride, Fear Over Events In Old Country

By JANE CASSEBERRY
 Herald Staff Writer

Pride in the striking workers, distrust of the communist regime and fear of what might happen are the reactions of area residents of Polish heritage to the recent crisis in Poland.

President of the Polish National Alliance Lodge 218, Jane Adriatico, who lives in the Goldenrod area of southeast Seminole County, visited Poland last year. Both of her parents were born in that country and she has relatives there.

She described the Polish people as "iron-willed, hard working and very religious." "That's (religion) about the only thing they had to hold on to," she added.

"I'm just afraid there are going to be repercussions," said Mrs. Adriatico. "Many of the Polish-Americans here are far removed from events in Poland, but some of the older ones just glum when you speak about Poland. We're all feeling sorry for the Polish people and happy that by sticking together they have won a victory. I'm afraid they may even suffer worse than before now."

"The people have very much hardship. My cousin, who lives outside the city, doesn't have an indoor toilet. My cousin stood in line for three hours to buy a ham because we were coming, but when she got in they were sold out," said Mrs. Adriatico. "The government was building high-rise apartments for them who have better-paying government jobs."

"Another cousin is a school teacher. She makes $60 a month and half of that is taken out by the government. They are merely subsisting, just enduring. Each family has a little patch of garden in the country to provide food," Mrs. Adriatico said.

"My aunt has a one bedroom house and she took in an old lady who had no place to live. She sleeps on a cot in the kitchen," said Mrs. Adriatico. "There is nothing new to the Polish people. Mrs. Adriatico said her relatives live near the German border, and in World War II the Germans forced Polish men to build their bunkers. Her aunt hid her husband in the attic of a school house and moved him, hidden

After A Year Of Hikes, Gas Prices Falling

Some area service stations have lowered their gasoline prices, interrupting a 12-month series of price increases.

According to the American Automobile Association (AAA) of Florida, motorists have enjoyed stable prices in most areas of the state and on all grades of gasoline since Memorial Day after a 22 percent increase in the last year.

Some local stations recently have lowered the price of regular gas to $1.99 and $1.109 a gallon and $1.15 for premium, considerably lower than the $1.218 for regular in Panama City, and Gainesville reported by AAA to be the lowest price for any grade of gasoline in the state in August.

Reporting an average price of all grades of full-service fuel as of $1.268 in the latest AAA fuel gauge survey, the association noted motorists could save 2 to 3 cents per gallon by using self-service pumps.

Florida gasoline retailers reported a good supply of fuel for the Labor Day holiday weekend and 72 percent remained open; 50 percent are staying open on Sunday now and 64 percent stay open after 6 p.m. on weekdays. On Saturdays, 64 percent of the stations remain open after 6 p.m. in contrast to the limited hours and short supplies of the past.

Average price reported by the survey for the Orlando area in August was $1.209 for regular, $1.251 for no-lead and $1.279 for premium.

Highest average price for regular was $1.263 per gallon recorded in Cocoa. Naples had the top price for unleaded at $1.416 per gallon.

Texaco, Arco Gulf Lower Their Prices

By United Press International

New York. Texaco Inc. Friday lowered its wholesale gasoline prices between half a penny and 1.5 cents a gallon regionally and Atlantic Richfield Co. dropped its prices by 3 cents a gallon in most U.S. markets. Gulf Oil Corp. Thursday cut its wholesale prices for regular leaded gasoline by 3 cents a gallon.

Washington. The Energy Department has cited Atlantic Richfield Co. for $1.3 million in alleged overcharges on its refined products, a spokesman said Friday.

Washington. Tenneco agreed Friday to make cash payments and forego future price increases in settlement of a $22 million gasoline overcharge citation brought against the firm by the Energy Department.

Syracuse, N.Y. A federal judge in Syracuse today threw out the major part of a state law to help mass transit — a law that prohibits oil companies from passing along a new 2 percent tax on their profits to customers.

Hoffman 'Cracked' During Exile

By JANE CASSEBERRY
 Herald Staff Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Former Yippee leader Abbie Hoffman says he suffered two nervous breakdowns in his six years on the run from the law, including one in which he thought people were watching him through holes in a ceiling.

That occurred in Las Vegas, Hoffman said in an interview Friday. "I thought it was the safest city in the world to crack up."

Hoffman surfaced Thursday after six years on the run from drug sale and bail jumping charges. In his time under ground, he changed his identity several times, underwent plastic surgery, and changed his speech and walk.

His second emotional collapse, he said, occurred after a magazine article "blew my cover."

He went to Montreal and wandered around the streets "strung out like a wino."

A man who ran "a movement-type apartment building" took him in. The man had a copy of Hoffman's book, "Steal This Book," and Hoffman told him, "You see this man. I'm him."

"I collapsed. He didn't know what to do. Finally, he got a Marxist psychiatrist to see me. The psychiatrist said he had seen me give a speech. We hung around together and worked things out."

There were a few unexpected surprises at Friday night's prep football jambores. Fighting Seminole High students Miami Bonets (left) and Mary Higgins really got into the spirit of the football season by donning war paint and Indian garb. Despite the encouragement from the spirited Seminole fans, the Fighting Tribe dropped both ends of its jambores scrimmage. A complete wrap-up of Friday night's action is on page 5A.

Thieves Take Silver From Sanford Home

By DAVID M. RAZLER
Herald Staff Writer

Burglars broke out the window of a Sanford home Friday night and made off with an undetermined amount of silver and jewelry, deputies report.

Eliwood Smith, 402 Villen Road, Sanford, told deputies the burglary occurred between 8:45 p.m. and 9:30 p.m.

"The thieves smashed out the glass then ripped out a window screen to gain access to the home, then carried off the silverware and gold-plated jewelry."

BURGLARS HIT CONSTRUCTION SITE

Thieves broke into a structure owned by a Sanford construction company and a construction trailer parked outside the Sanford site Thursday and Friday and made off with a large battery and air conditioner unit, police say.

"The burglars occurred at the corner of Hidden Lake Drive and Wildwood Drive between Thursday and Friday afternoons, police say."

A $126 battery was stolen from the trailer and a $50 air conditioner condenser from the garage of the building, police say. Both are owned by Complete Interiors, Sanford.

POLICE EQUIPMENT STOLEN
An Orlando police officer had his service revolver, handcuffs and other police gear stolen by burglars from his Longwood home Tuesday, police say.

Robert Dobbs, 300 Robert St., Longwood, told deputies his gunbelt and police equipment worth $450 were taken from his home between 7:15 a.m. and 8 p.m.

Deputies say the burglars forced open a utility room door after trying unsuccessfully to force a window.

They took only the belt, .38 caliber pistol, handcuffs, mace, ammunition and holsters, they say.

The same burglars are believed to be the ones who broke into a home at 1540 Marvin St., Longwood, during the same time period.

At the home of Jan Hanningan, the thieves took $150 worth of silver coins, then poured themselves drinks at her bar, deputies say.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Polish Central Committee Removes Glierek From Post

WARSAW, Poland (UPI)—Communist Party leader Edward Glierek, his power battered by striking workers and a corruption scandal, was ousted from office Saturday and replaced by Politburo member Stanislaw Kania, a surprise choice.

Glierek's sudden fall from power followed an announcement Friday afternoon that he suffered a heart attack and had been hospitalized.

The ruling Central Committee met in plenary session in their drab Warsaw headquarters from 11 p.m. Friday until shortly before 1 a.m. Saturday to decide Glierek's fate.

An official announcement by the state news agency PAP said Kania, 53, had been "unanimously elected to the post of first party secretary."

Ghobtzadeh Raps Leaders

LONDON (UPI)—Sadegh Ghobtzadeh, Iran's once powerful foreign minister, said the crisis over the U.S. hostages must be settled but charged the nation's new hard-line prime minister is an incompetent doomed to failure.

Ghobtzadeh, looking drawn and tired but retaining his familiar outspoken manner, said the remarks in an interview with UPI in Tehran Friday.

He warned that Iran would remain an outlaw nation in the world unless it quickly resolved the problem of the 52 American hostages, who spent their 300th day in captivity today.

"What is extremely important is to end the confrontation with the United States," Ghobtzadeh said. "We have to resolve this problem, get rid of this problem, in order to have Europeans and Third World countries on our side. As long as we have this problem of the hostages they are not on our side — they are not even indifferent or neutral."

Guatemala Bomb Kills 8

GUATEMALA CITY (UPI) — Leftist guerrillas detonated a high-powered bomb in front of President Romeo Lucas Garcia's office Friday, killing eight people and wounding 20 others, including some 23 government employees, police said.

Lucas Garcia was not in his office when the bomb exploded at 9:15 a.m. in front of the National Palace, shattering windows and scattering debris for 15 city blocks from the building in downtown Guatemala City, the police said.

The eight dead included a 12-year-old boy, a car washer, two employees of the Agricultural Ministry, a newspaper vendor and unidentified passersby. Police spokesmen denied earlier reports that two foreign diplomats were killed in the blast.

Chinese Defend Repression

BEIJING (UPI) — Chinese lawmakers, seeking to explain why less is more, claimed the constitutional guarantee of their big freedoms "undermined" rather than strengthened democracy in China and so must be abolished.

The Official Xinhua news agency said Friday that delegates to the country's rubber stamp parliament, the National People's Congress, urged vigorous support for deleting the "four big freedoms, which became tools of oppression in hands of the 'Gang of Four.'"

The parliament began the process Tuesday to ban the four freedoms — the right to speak out freely, air views freely, hold great debates, and write protest posters.

The new Chinese leaders consider the rights relics of the now-discredited Cultural Revolution.

WEATHER

NATIONAL REPORT: High winds drove torrents of rain onto the Gulf Coast in Louisiana and Texas, dumping more than a foot of rain in some spots. Flash flood watches were posted following predictions for up to 8 more inches today in southeastern Texas. Flash thunderstorms and high winds battered the Midwest from Iowa to Illinois. Heavy rainfall on the upper Texas coast Friday was blamed on Tropical Storm Danielle, located just south of Houston. Sheets of rain backed by 50 mph winds hit Beaumont, Texas, dumping 7 1/2 inches of rain in only six hours. Bridge City, located near the Louisiana-Texas state border, received 13 inches of rain and 9 inches poured on Nederland, Texas.

15 Hospital Employees Receive Scholarships

The Seminole Memorial Hospital auxiliary has awarded educational scholarships totaling $2,500 to 15 hospital employees and one Candy Stripper.

For the first time in Auxiliary history, scholarship funds have been earmarked for employees in addition to Candy Strippers.

Jane McKibbin, chairman of the Auxiliary Educational and Enrichment Program, and her committee, Doanle deGanah, Muriel Brumbaugh and Stella Ortit, presented the checks to the recipients, who are all enrolled at Seminole Community College this term.

The lone Candy Stripper, Debbie Russell, received her second grant.

Patricia McGovern also received a second grant to assist her in obtaining a bachelor's degree in Radiologic Technology. She was a recipient of an Auxiliary grant to attend SMH's Radiologic Technology School while she was a candy stripper. She graduated in 1978 and is now working full time at the hospital as an X-ray technician.

A husband and wife team, Robert and Carol Lombardi, both Licensed Practical Nurses, will continue their education to become registered nurses while working full time at Seminole.

Others receiving grants were: Diana Weiss, Phillip Stallworth, Angela Stone, Adine Church, Norma Bowen, Lynn Hanes, Mary Cocuzza, Sally Mills, Marese Parrish, Christine Mills, Pat Lee, and Meryem Stanek.

Previously, funds cumulated by the Auxiliary through sales in the hospital gift shop and 24-hour snack bar have been given to the hospital for equipment or when needed.

Mrs. Grace Smith, Auxiliary president, said: "We intend to continue to provide these funds for employees to further their education. We know many of the employees are eager to do so and we all are thrilled to contribute to such a worthwhile program."

Hospital Plans Sensitivity Workshop

"How would you feel?" "How would you like to be treated if you were handicapped or one of a number of elderly who have many of the impairments of the physically handicapped?"

To find out, and to gain insight and understanding through experiencing the loss of sight, hearing and physical mobility, Seminole Memorial Hospital has scheduled an Awareness-Sensitivity Workshop for 1 and 7 p.m. Monday in the hospital auditorium. It is free of charge.

Open to the public, the workshop is designed to help business people, the general public and hospital employees be more aware of and sensitive to the feelings of the handicapped and the elderly.

Blanche Dordy of the Fleury Foundation will conduct the workshop. Participants will undergo a range of exercises using goggles simulating levels of visual impairment, plugs to create deafness and gloves and wheelchairs to force physical disabilities. They will also go through an obstacle course. An instructor for Valencia Community College's CITE program, and Woody Wilson from Southern Bell Telephone, who will display and explain the TDD, a Portable Telecommunications device for the Deaf.

To register, call the hospital at 322-4511, extension 712, or 864-8533.

Reagan, Carter Camps Spar Over Anti-Radar System

United Press International

The war of words between the campaigns of Republican Ronald Reagan and President Carter over the no longer secret "stealth" anti-radar system continues with no cease-fire apparent.

Jody Powell, Carter's spokesman, Friday said Reagan's statements on the issue violated even the most partisan of political ground rules.

A Reagan aide quickly refuted Carter's crew was trying to change the subject. "The fact is," said Lynn Nofziger, "he has not been a good president and we're going to keep telling the people that."

After leaks about the program to make U.S. aircraft invisible to enemy radar, the administration confirmed the program's existence. Reagan said that violated national security.

The administration said the secret would not have been kept much longer anyway and not commenting would have been taken as a confirmation and would have caused more leaks as reporters searched for information.

Oswald Exhumation Urged

FORT WORTH, Texas (UPI) — The widow of accused presidential assassin Lee Harvey Oswald is urging a judge to allow exhumation of Oswald's grave, and has departed from earlier statements by saying she no longer is sure he is buried there.

"I strongly believe in the possibility of the body not being there," Marina Oswald Porter said Friday in court. She asked permission to dig up Oswald's grave at Rose Hill Burial Park "as soon as possible."

Cons-Tried To Con Abscam

NEW YORK (UPI) — The government's two-year Abscam probe was almost exposed by a band of swindlers who tried to con a company that was used as a front in the FBI investigation of official corruption.

The revelation of what, in essence, appeared to be a scam trying to outwit the government's scam, came late Friday with the disclosure of previously sealed court documents.

"They revealed that a non-existent bank, International Bank and Trust Co. of London, tried to sue Abdul Enterprises — the FBI-created firm that supposedly was looking to invest millions of dollars of an Arab bank.

The government affidavits also included a detailed report of efforts by Camden, N.J., Mayor Angelo Errichetti to secure bribes from undercover agents posing as representatives of a wealthy Arab sheik seeking political favors.

Garwood Faces Sex Charge

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (UPI) — Marine Pfc. Robert R. Garwood, facing court-martial as the only U.S. soldier accused of collaborating with the enemy in Vietnam, has been charged with sex offenses against a 7-year-old girl he was taking home from Cambodia.

Garwood, 34, was arrested at 8:30 p.m. Friday on two felony warrants charging him with attempting to commit a sex offense with a 7-year-old female and with committing a "lewd and lascivious act upon the body of the child, who is a 7-year-old girl."

Garwood, who is undergoing psychiatric treatment, was accompanied by a civilian lawyer when he surrendered to police, and denied both of the allegations.

Auditor Criticizes Firestone, Office Rental by Firestone

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — Secretary of State George Firestone's frequent business trips to his Miami hometown without proper documentation, and rental of $1,400 of unoccupied office space in Orlando, drew criticism Friday.

Auditor General Ernest Ellison said some travel is essential, but it must be sufficiently detailed to assure the taxpayers public funds are being spent only for official state business.

In a report covering Firestone's first year in office and part of the terms of two of his predecessors, Bruce Smathers and Jesse McCarty, Ellison said Firestone made 23 trips and Assistant Secretary of State Ron Leavitt 28 trips that resulted in one or both being in Miami on Friday and staying in for all or part of the weekend.

Ford Attacks Damage Award

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — The Ford Motor Co. says a judge gave improper instructions to a jury that awarded $1.7 million in damages to a man paralyzed in an accident involving a Ford truck.

In what could be a landmark case, Ford lawyers appeared in the Florida Supreme Court Friday to set aside the award and decide just what responsibility a manufacturer has for damages resulting from the design of a product.

The appeal stems from a Broward County Circuit Court case.

Many Drivers Receive No Registration Reminder

By DAVID M. RAZLER
Herald Staff Writer

Did you receive a ticket because you forgot to renew your automobile registration? If so, you might want to blame a "forgetful" computer.

For three-quarters of the owners of cars in the county, a reminder to renew their tags comes about a month before renewal is due.

The notification is also a pre-registered form which saves time at the motor vehicle line at the tax collector's office.

But in estimated 30,000 people in Seminole County have to remember to take care of the registration without the state reminder system. It's to be replaced with one which will correct errors faster, local and state officials say.

County Tax Collector G. Troy Ray says his office receives from Tallahassee and mails about 100,000 pre-registration forms each year. But because more than 12 percent of the population is always changing registration — either moving or changing cars — plus an assortment of errors created because numbers and addresses of each owner have to be typed in each county office then retyped in Tallahassee, only 70 to 75 percent of the county car owners are receiving the forms he said.

Ray said Seminole will be one of the first counties on the new state computer system. As of December 1981, registration documents and titles will be checked and typed in the county courthouse. Data for the state's central file will be transmitted by phone line. It should take care of about a third of the errors in the system, making it 85 percent efficient.

Ray said Seminole managed to get in to be the first of the counties going into the new system because of his work with the tax collector's committee which designed it. Until that system goes into effect, residents who have problems with their registrations have to go to the county offices and get a corrected form sent to the state. There it should be put on the computer Ray said.

But Kelly J. Harbison, assistant director of the Department of Motor Vehicles said some errors will

Heavy Local Voter Turnout Predicted

There's no doubt about it, this is going to be an exciting election year, despite the persistent claim by some that voters have a meagre field from which to choose.

And there's some exciting news from the office of Seminole County Supervisor of Elections Camilla Bruce.

For Tuesday's primary there are 67,814 registered voters eligible to state their preference, that's an all-time record number of registered voters for this county. Two years ago, there were 54,000 registered voters.

Mrs. Bruce is predicting a record turnout of voters Tuesday—50 to 55 percent, she opines. She bases her prediction, she says, on the unusually large number of requests for absentee ballots—almost 1,000, about double the usual figure.

In the last presidential election year, 1976, 31.3 percent turned out at the first primary and 14.6 percent at the second primary.

Those voters already registered can vote Tuesday in the primary, as well as the Oct. 7 primary and the Nov. 4 general election.

Those who have not yet registered, may do so right up to Oct. 4. Absentee ballots can be picked up any day up to and including each election day, so long as the ballot can be filed by 7 p.m. election night, Mrs. Bruce advises.

It's encouraging to see the interest displayed in participating in one of our most precious rights—right to vote.

The record number of registered voters this year speaks well of the Seminole County citizenry.

Quiet In Tehran

Washington has been very quiet about the 52 American hostages in Iran since the humiliating failure of last April's rescue attempt. As the embassy staff passes the 300th day of captivity, we trust that this politically convenient official silence does not mean their plight is being ignored behind the scenes.

Since the Iranian zealots who control the fate of the Americans have shown a real aptitude for managing the news concerning them, it is as well that the issue has been low-keyed publicly by the administration in recent months. Although it is now to Mr. Carter's political advantage to divert attention from his failure to free the hostages, nothing was gained by the air of crisis that surrounded the early days of their captivity.

The calmer atmosphere now is far more conducive to diplomatic negotiation to free the hostages than was the hysterical climate in Tehran last winter, when daily demonstrations were whipped up in front of the occupied embassy. But this presumes the Carter administration is making serious efforts through diplomatic channels to reach some agreement for their release.

By command of the Ayatollah Khomeini, the fate of the hostages rests with the new majlis, the Iranian parliament that has now fallen under the control of the Islamic fundamentalist clergy. The most radical among them speak of trying the hostages as spies.

What such a trial would mean is far from clear, and it might represent, at best, a face-saving means of expelling the prisoners after gaining some propaganda advantage from their public arraignment. It is to be hoped this is the case. The United States certainly could not stand idly and allow its Foreign Service personnel to be sentenced to death or prison by an Iranian kangaroo court. The use of force in such a case would be fully justified.

These are points that the administration should be making in private conversations with whatever authority exists in Iran.

BERRY'S WORLD

WASHINGTON—Not far from one of the country's busiest tourist attractions, colonial Williamsburg, Va., is one of the government's most secret installations—Camp Peary, the Central Intelligence Agency's training facility.

Known in the agency as "The Farm," the 10,000-acre installation housed German prisoners of war during World War II, and was then turned over to the CIA as a place to train recruits in the black art of international espionage. Tourists who blunder onto it will never get past the front gate, which is posted "Armed Forces Experimental Training Facility."

Camp Peary is rich with the memory of long-departed spies who trained there. It is home to all the strange classes that materialized in the pages of this column during its history. They gave new meaning to the old term, "90-day wonders."

The curriculum was the usual spy-school stuff: world politics, espionage techniques, demolitions, weapons, mapmaking, mail-order tactics, dry fighting and parachute jumping. Their equipment wasn't exactly the best, and many of the heavier recruits practically bounced like rubber balls when they landed with chins intended for lean mean paratroopers.

CIA sources told my associate Dale Van Alta that the Class of '32 has the dubious honor of being the worst group ever to graduate from Camp Peary. They began

The persistent ringing of the telephone brought me inside the house on the main floor. "If you can answer the following question, a well-nurtured voice stated, 'you will win yourself a nice prize.' 'Okay, I recognized the voice. 'Natural, I like.' I said with curiosity cooing through my sweetest purr. 'What new holiday is coming up Sunday?' the voice stammered. 'Why Grandparents Day,' I answered with pride. 'Right,' the voice roared. 'And for being so knowledgeable, you have just won yourself a day with Laurie while we go to the beach. 'But-but,' I stammered. 'That is not the prize I had in mind.' 'A few hours with the active Lauries of the world might result in a loss of business for agas and other pampering spots. There is no way to be lazy and out of shape around a 4-year-old.

A grandchild who has left a banquet five minutes previously is always hungry at just the sight of Grandmother's house. 'Please, Laurie, now watch the gooey chocolate. Don't get it on your frilly dress.' 'Why?' 'My Lord, Laurie, just look at the mess you've made on your new dress. Your mother is gonna kill us.' Here, Laurie, let's skin off your dress, so I can wash it. Hurry.' 'The first step is to spray the chocolate and say a few prayers that the dark brown stain will completely fade. She's not supposed to have candy in the first place. 'Laurie, don't just stand there. Run put on your play clothes.' 'What do you mean you guess you left them in the car?' 'Well, then you'll just have to work on your art gallery until your dress dries. No, no, no, Laurie, don't paint the wall. Paint the paper. Then you'll hang it on the wall. Run get the spray quick and let's see if we can get these marks off the wall.' 'Okay, you can water the plants while we're waiting for your dress to dry. No, no, no, Laurie. That's a silk arrangement and doesn't need water.' 'Why?' 'Cause.' 'Yes, you may feed the cat. Watch it, Laurie, that's not cereal. Oh, well, it's too late now. No, no, no, Laurie. That's cat food, not yours.' 'Your dress is dry now. Come on, let's jump back into it. Thank goodness, the chocolate is gone. Phew!' 'Yes, Laurie, you may have the little can of grape juice.' 'But let's take off your dress so you won't stain it. Just a minute while I dry my hands.' 'Oh, my goodness, Laurie. Just look at the grape juice all over you.' 'And Happy Grandparents Day to the qualified!

I used to know one of Coca-Cola's undercover operators and envied him mightily. He had what I still regard as the most glamorous, exciting and fascinating job I ever heard of.

His assignment was to travel about the country ordering Cokes in establishments where soft drinks were sold. Then he surreptitiously collected specimens of whatever he was served and sent them back to the home office for analysis.

If the boys in the lab determined a sample was something other than pure Coke, the company would have a basic for legal action. It came to that, to stop the deception and protect its trademark.

My friend specialized in collecting specimens in bar rooms. Or at least that was the only aspect of his job he talked about when I was around.

His modus operandi, he once confided, was to belly up to a bar and order a shot of hooch with Coke on the side. When the bartender wasn't looking, he would whip out a small syringe and suction off a portion of the chaser.

For a time, I was told, Coke agents customarily tossed down the hard stuff so as to avoid suspicion. But legal complications arose.

Coke agents occasionally had to give evidence in court and attorneys advised that if the defense could prove they had been drinking on the job it might discredit their testimony. So my friend became a two-syringe drinker.

One day he would he would suck up enough cola for testing against the secret Coke formula. With the other syringe he could drain the shot glass, thus being in a position to swear under oath that no liquor had touched his lips.

Once back in his hotel room, my friend would empty the booze syringe into a bottle that already contained various brands of spirits from other parts of the country. He even gave it his own private label—"Old Syringe."

Many of the evening I have spent sipping "Old Syringe" and listening spellbound as he recounted his adventures. After a few hours in his thrall it was tough going back to the work-a-day world I then, as now, inhabited.

As to whether Coca-Cola still employs secret agents who stock their liquor cabinets in this manner, I cannot say. But if ever you attend a private party at which the host serves run-flavored Scotch, laced with booze that has a tequila after-taste, you'll know it's the real thing.

Julian Bond Ups And Downs Of Polls

For nearly a year, I've been favored by the George Gallup Organization to receive weekly copies of its famous poll.

These readings of the nation's popular pulse are an always fascinating charting of changing public attitudes and the rise and fall of our political heroes and villains.

(The most surprising reports can be those which confirm the obvious, like a July 24 announcement that "Whites, Blacks Had Different View on Status of Blacks in U.S.," which disclosed that 7, in 10 whites believe blacks are treated equally in their communities, while only 1 in 10 blacks hold the same view.)

Most interesting in a recent series of reports are Gallup's August surveys of the American political mood before the Democratic Convention, which reveal a public unsure of the caliber and quality of its leaders and subject to mercurial shifts in its approval or rejection of them.

The series begins with the now famous August poll demonstrating a lower rating for President Jimmy Carter than for any president since Gallup began charting presidential popularity more than 40 years ago.

Carter's 21 percent approval rating was 40 points below a high he secured in December 1975, the month after the seizure of American hostages in Iran. His lowest low was Richard Nixon (24 percent approval) on the eve of his resignation and lower than Harry Truman (23 percent approval) during the Korean War.

Gallup next reported, Aug. 3, another aspect of the plunge in presidential popularity. The Republican Party did better among a sample of 1,548 voting-age Americans than it had done since October 1972, just before Richard Nixon outscored

Not surprisingly, a major effort is underway to make Ronald Reagan look bad over his position on relations with Taiwan. He himself has helped with some backing and filling, but his position is perfectly reasonable.

The essence of Reagan's position, spelled out in numerous statements over several months, is that we need to do better by Taiwan.

The buzz word in all this appears to be "official." Reagan has been saying that we ought to have "official" relations with that island government. Of course, we already do. Our agency there was established by an act of Congress, and is financed by the U. S. Government; and nothing could be much more official than that.

Maybe we should do more, maybe not, but Reagan is saying, very clearly, that there is no need for us to be ashamed of having relations with a nation which has a freer and more prosperous society than any nation in Asia with the exception of Japan; and, further, that we could upgrade our representation there. There is nothing absurd about that, that, that threat from Peking notwithstanding.

For its own reasons, Peking chose to make a big deal out of all this during the recent visit of George Bush. Perhaps, for its own internal political reasons, it has to. But U. S. foreign policy is not made in Peking, and Peking had better be wary of interfering in a U. S. presidential election.

In point of fact, the behavior of the Carter administration toward the Chinese government on Taiwan represented the most disgraceful U. S. treatment of an ally since the Senate cut off assistance to the government in Saigon.

Carter, overnight, abrogated a solemn treaty commitment to the Taiwan government and embraced Peking.

There existed solid power-political reasons for opening relations with Peking, but Carter did all this purely on Peking's terms. He did no better to advise Peking that those Soviet divisions and missiles were on their border, that we had tanks and that they therefore were in a poor position to lay down arrogant terms.

Reagan's desire to reassure Taiwan represents good policy. In line with his general policies, it is assisting that we need to firm up our position in the world, and reassure allies. Indeed, the Peking government itself would have more respect for an American government that does just that.

Sadly, the major media—the first time in 1960, to my knowledge, that they have exhibited such a failure of analysis with regard to the presidential race—has been treating all of this as a Reagan "flip."

Elect 'Fresh' Faces

Why are so many large home builders, developers and a large billboard company pushing so hard to get Norman Floyd elected to the Seminole County Commission? I suspect part of the answer lies in his past voting record and actions, and the other part lies in future promises made.

I believe we need to get new, fresh faces into public office. We need people who aren't tainted by controversy while in public office or backed by powerful special interests.

David Best Campaign Aide Encouraged By Poll

The David Best (Democrat for Congress) campaign, has released statistics from a poll conducted in the Florida's Fifth District in mid-August by Hamilton and Staff.

The poll showed Best with 48 percent support; Dick Fischer with 15 percent and 36 percent undecided.

By region, Best did better in the west and central part of the district than in the east.

In the west defined as West Pasco and Oklawaha counties, Best received 51 percent; Fischer, 9 percent; and 38 percent were undecided. In the central portion defined as east Pasco, Hernando, Citrus, Sumner and Lake counties, Best received 64 percent, Fischer 15 percent, and 21 percent were undecided.

In the east, defined as west Orange and

County Planner Urges Support For Land Purchase

The Seminole County Board of County Commissioners has proposed that the Florida Department of Natural Resources acquire the environmentally sensitive area popularly referred to as Spring Hammock. The help of citizens is needed in convincing the state to protect this irreplaceable asset for the citizens of Seminole County and Florida.

Spring Hammock is located on the western end of Lake Jessup and runs westerly across State Road 419, U.S. Highway 17-92 and County Road 427, just south of the Five-Points area.

Please note that developed areas, including those that appear to be in active agricultural production, have been excluded from the proposal.

Numerous proposals have been made over the last 20 years to purchase the area for a variety of reasons ranging from environmental values, to urban growth shaping, to recreation, to aesthetics. The current proposal emphasizes valued environmental functions including growth shaping; recreation would be limited to low intensity activities such as hiking. Acquisition of fee simple title at fair market value is the method to be used, if the state determines that the proposal is sufficiently important according to their criteria. Acquisition at fair market value of something less than fee simple, such as development rights or a scenic easement, will be considered providing preservation of the natural character of the area can be accomplished.

I am cautiously optimistic about prospects for the state selecting Spring Hammock for purchase. Of the 120 sites submitted state-wide for acquisition, the Spring Hammock proposal was one of 43 selected for more intensive review. Indications are that funds are available for purchase of less than 10 sites. The area recommended for acquisition will be forwarded to the governor and cabinet in mid-September.

Obviously, the competition is stiff. A crucial consideration for the six state agencies making final recommendation for purchase of proposed sites is community support. Contact from concerned local residents is likely to be far more effective than reams of documentation or official communications from elected officials. The assistance of a local resident, significant finds were made: an Indian shell mound dating from at least 2000 B.C. to after 800 A.D.; a very early (Suwannee) projectile point (arrowhead) dating from 8000-9000 B.C.; and a historic dump, possibly a lumber camp, dating from the 1850s. The archaeologists conclude that other sites may also exist in the Spring Hammock area.

Working hours are so sweeping and inaccurate that they're ridiculous, the official to get them something they want—and usually this involves a lot of indirect cost to the taxpayer since taxpayers ultimately pay all the bills.

Voters should be very careful in their voting habits. They should find out which of the candidates is "endorsed" by whom and then vote for the other guy.

My attention was drawn to an article in the Aug. 23 edition of an area newspaper in which the city of Lake Mary was belittled and unduly criticized only this time it was someone of the Galint name. I just could not believe that it was the same person who is consistently preaching about Lake

Mary and its officials; neither could I believe that this Galint would seek broader coverage of his vendetta against Seminole County's fastest and most orderly growing municipality in another newspaper since the Sanford Herald has been so good to him by printing his articles no matter how void of substance some of them were.

Let's hope this person - Galint - doesn't get so carried away and sends his weekly articles to any other newspaper or the Washington Post as these newspapers are a little expensive in this area and not widely read.

I would hope that this Galint person would not hide behind an alias name since he was so happy to associate me as being the Carter clan and accusing me of contributing to the ruination of America. Those who know me might better.

I understand that Lake Mary has a "gripe box" at City Hall for those who have complaints and will answer all its citizens. Back-tickers who live outside Lake Mary should send a reasonable donation with a SASE for a complaint to be answered. The rate Galint is progressing, we may expect him to mouth off his hate against Lake Mary on the national television God Show.

Voters Should Be Wary Of Endorsed Candidates

As a taxpayer for over 50 years in many different countries, as an employee of various governmental entities and as a close observer of the body politic, I have learned a few things.

One of the things that I have learned is that whenever an employee's union endorses or works for the election of a particular candidate, the taxpayer must be on guard.

The quality of the voting membership of the union with the willing cooperation of the candidate, if elected, is definitely not in the general taxpayer's interest.

Therefore, whenever I find that any candidate for public office has been union endorsed, I generally vote for his (or her) opponent. This is regardless of party affiliation nor is it an anti-union bias.

I have negotiated with many different labor unions starting in 1943 and have learned more about the "United States" experience and have received that respect from the unions. Incidentally, my definition of a labor union includes such organizations as the American Medical Association, the Association of Trial Attorneys, and the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America.

I understand that Lake Mary has a "gripe box" at City Hall for those who have complaints and will answer all its citizens. Back-tickers who live outside Lake Mary should send a reasonable donation with a SASE for a complaint to be answered. The rate Galint is progressing, we may expect him to mouth off his hate against Lake Mary on the national television God Show.

Voters Should Be Wary Of Endorsed Candidates

As a taxpayer for over 50 years in many different countries, as an employee of various governmental entities and as a close observer of the body politic, I have learned a few things.

One of the things that I have learned is that whenever an employee's union endorses or works for the election of a particular candidate, the taxpayer must be on guard.

The quality of the voting membership of the union with the willing cooperation of the candidate, if elected, is definitely not in the general taxpayer's interest.

Therefore, whenever I find that any candidate for public office has been union endorsed, I generally vote for his (or her) opponent. This is regardless of party affiliation nor is it an anti-union bias.

I have negotiated with many different labor unions starting in 1943 and have learned more about the "United States" experience and have received that respect from the unions. Incidentally, my definition of a labor union includes such organizations as the American Medical Association, the Association of Trial Attorneys, and the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America.

All these groups endorse candidates

My attention was drawn to an article in the Aug. 23 edition of an area newspaper in which the city of Lake Mary was belittled and unduly criticized only this time it was someone of the Galint name. I just could not believe that it was the same person who is consistently preaching about Lake

Mary and its officials; neither could I believe that this Galint would seek broader coverage of his vendetta against Seminole County's fastest and most orderly growing municipality in another newspaper since the Sanford Herald has been so good to him by printing his articles no matter how void of substance some of them were.

Let's hope this person - Galint - doesn't get so carried away and sends his weekly articles to any other newspaper or the Washington Post as these newspapers are a little expensive in this area and not widely read.

I would hope that this Galint person would not hide behind an alias name since he was so happy to associate me as being the Carter clan and accusing me of contributing to the ruination of America. Those who know me might better.

Hopefuls Give Voters Wide Variety Of Choices In Tuesday's Primary

By DONNA ESTES
Herald Staff Writer

The most popular office listed on the ballots of both major parties Tuesday is the U.S. Senate seat, currently held by U.S. Sen. Richard Stone, D-Miami.

Stone will have five opponents for the Democratic nomination and six persons, including one woman, are seeking the Republican nomination for that office.

Stone, 51, was born in New York and moved to Florida in 1928. He attended Georgia Military College and graduated from Florida State University in 1948. An attorney, he served as State Senator from 1967-70, was secretary of state from 1971 to 1974 and was elected to the U.S. Senate in 1974. He is married and the father of three children.

Other candidates listed on the Democratic ballot for that office include:

- John B. Coffey, 50, of Moore Haven. He was born in north Georgia and moved to Florida in 1970. He is a retired Air Force officer and a farmer. He is married and the father of three children.
- Bill Gunter, 46, of Orlando, is a native Floridian, born in Jacksonville. He graduated from the University of Florida and served in the state senate from 1966-1972 and was a member of Congress from 1972-1974. He is married and father of four children.
- Kenneth H. "Buddy" McKay, 47, lives in Ocala. He attended Davidson University, the University of Florida and the University of Florida Law School. He is a businessman, cattle and citrus grower and an attorney. McKay served in the Florida House of Representatives from 1968-1975 and in the Florida Senate from 1975-1980. He is married and father of four children.
- James Miller, 48, is from Lutz. He is a service station operator.
- Richard Pettigrew, 49, is from Miami. He is an attorney and was speaker of the Florida House of Representatives from 1971-1972. He also served in the Florida Senate.

Listed on the Republican ballot as candidates for the party's nomination for the U.S. Senate are:

- André Cranshaw, 35, lives in Jacksonville. He graduated from the University of Georgia and the University of Florida Law School. He is an attorney and served six years in the Florida House of Representatives. He is married and the father of two.
- Lewis E. Dinkins, 40, is from Ocala. Born in Dunsen, he attended Central Florida Junior College and graduated from Sigman University College of Law. An attorney, he is also a radio personality.

On the Republican ballot is a race for the GOP nomination for County Commission District 3 between School Board member Robert G. Feather and Tom Kanelis.

Feather, 34, a resident of Seminole County for the past 10 years, has been a member of the Seminole County District School Board for the past eight years. Born in Northfield, Minn., he was reared in Morgantown, W. Va., and Gainesville. He graduated from the University of Virginia. Married, he is the father of five children.

Kanelis, a past president of the Seminole County League of Civic Associations is also vice chairman of the Seminole County Board of Adjustment. A teacher in Seminole County from 1973-1980, he graduated from the University of Maryland and received his master's degree at American University. He is a veteran of 20 years of military service. He is married.

The more than 5,000 persons who are members of splinter parties as well as Republicans and Democrats will choose a new judge for the 18th Judicial Circuit — Seminole and Brevard counties — to replace Judge Joe Cowart, who was appointed to the Fourth Appellate Court several months ago. The person elected will likely be appointed to fill the remaining three months in Cowart's term.

Candidates are Gill Goshorn and Perry West.

Goshorn, 45, of Titusville, has practiced law in Brevard County for the past 25 years. Elected to the Canaveral Port Authority in 1978, he was its vice chairman until he resigned to run for the judiciary. He was elected twice as president of the Titusville Chamber of Commerce and has served on the 18th Judicial nominating committee and the bar's grievance committee. He is married and has three children.

Perry West, 33, of Cocoa Beach, is a native of that city. He graduated from Florida State University at Tallahassee in 1968 and served as intelligence officer in the U.S. Army. He received his law degree from the Florida State University Law School in 1974. Married and the father of three, West is a member of the various bar associations, including the American Trial Lawyers Association and practices in Cocoa Beach.

Elections Head Predicts 50-55% Turnout

Seminole Elections Supervisor Camilla Bruce is predicting a 50-55 percent turnout of the county's 67,814 qualified voters in Tuesday's statewide first primary election.

She says 33,907 to 37,297 persons will go to the 67 polling places in the county on election day or vote by absentee ballot. Mrs. Bruce's office has already issued nearly 1,000 absentee ballots for the election.

The elections supervisor said one of the reasons for her estimate of turnout is the large number of absentee ballots requested in the last presidential election year, 1976, 31.2 percent of the registered voters turned out locally in the first primary election.

In 1978, 37.1 percent turned out at the Seminole polls in the first primary.

More voters are qualified to cast ballots in Tuesday's election than ever before in Seminole County's 67-year history Mrs. Bruce said. Previously the largest number of qualified Seminole voters for an election was 64,000.

Of the registered voters, 33,946 have designated themselves Democrats and may vote the Democratic ballot and the non-partisan ballot.

Some 26,659 have designated themselves Republicans

Zoo To Open New Home For Squirrel Monkeys

The Seminole County Board of Realtors is providing spacious new quarters for the Central Florida Zoo's colony of Squirrel Monkeys. These fun-filled creatures will go on public display for the first time when Realtor Board President Layana Kish cuts the ribbon at 3:30 p.m., Monday to officially open the new attraction.

The Seminole County Board of Realtors provided $1,500 for the construction of the new exhibit from funds generated at their White Elephant Sale and Auction held on the 2nd June 21.

The six-sided enclosure, 12 feet across and 12 feet high, contains a denning box for inclement weather and an abundance of tree limbs and large vines on which the squirrel-stuffed primates can climb, run and play. The use of "tree through" wire will permit the zoogeop easy viewing of the monkey colony. The dense foliage behind the enclosure seems to blend into the exhibit, lending a very natural effect.

Jamboree

Seminole got decent running performances from Vince Edwards but missed Jim Voltoline at halfback and defensive back due to the flu bug. Seminole County's fifth prep team also saw jamboree action Friday night and came away two-time losers.

The Oviedo Lions trekked to Kissimmee to take part in the Orange Belt's final tuneup. The Lions were turned back by Bishop Moore 6-0 and were shutout by St. Cloud 8-0.

The surprising Hornets notched a pair of victories on the night by coming back for a 6-0 win over Leesburg. Other action saw St. Cloud and Osceola deadlock at 0-0 while Kissimmee blasted Leesburg 20-0 in its second quarter of play.

The injury plagued Seminole County squads have little time to make offensive adjustments. Lyman opens against Boone, Seminole faces a highly touted Evans squad next week, both without their starting quarterback.

Other season openers involving local teams have Lake Branley meeting Colonial (the Grenadiers split in Friday night's jamboree), Lake Howell tangles with Orange Belt member Bishop Moore while the Oviedo Lions travel to Polk for Taylor.

With Sippo up for what looks like a minimum of four-to-five games, Seminole's quarterbacking duties will fall on the shoulders of Jeff Litton who also punts.

Lyman's Jon Haas tried to get the Greyhounds on the scoreboard but sailed this 27-yard field goal attempt wide to the right during jamboree play at Oak Ridge Friday night.

Lake Monroe Site Of "OSTMOR" Racing

Great Britain has the O.S.T.A.R., Hawaii has the Trans-Pac, Australia has the Sydney to Hobart Race, and the New York Yacht Club has the America's Cup. But only in Central Florida can you sail the "OSTMOR," The Open Singlehanded Trans Monroe Race.

Seventeen grueling miles around treacherous Lake Monroe, sometimes referred to as the "Solent of the South," is for the first time in history this arduous race is open to all America's Cup sailors. A "run what you bring" regatta to those who have what it takes to meet the OSTMOR challenge.

OSTMOR is open to any monohull sailboat. Boats will be divided into two classes: racing and displacement. Any sail or combination of sails may be used. Only one human being on any boat. USYRU rules prevail. Portsmouth yardstick will provide handicap. Official race instructions will cover course, distance, special rules, etc.

Stovall agreed the game could be decided by which team sported the strongest defense. "They are a quality football team. They have nothing but juniors and seniors on defense," Stovall said. "I think Florida State is one of the most underrated teams in the country. Bobby Bowden has had three great recruiting years and those efforts are starting to pay off."

Record Crowd Expected For LSU-Seminole Opener

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) — An overflow crowd was expected Saturday for the season opener between Louisiana State's Tigers and the Florida State Seminoles — a game both teams' head coaches said would be a hard-fought defensive test.

"This one is going to be a dog fight," said Bobby Bowden, head coach of the Seminoles.

The Tigers meet Florida State at 7:30 p.m. tonight before a sell-out crowd in 70,000-seat Tiger Stadium. The Seminoles left LSU 24-19 last year en route to an 11-5 season and a 6-4 national ranking. This year, the Tigers are unranked and FSU holds the No. 16 pre-season spot.

Bowden predicted a defensive struggle and said the game probably was "the toughest opener" he'd faced in his 14 years as head coach at FSU. LSU's rookie head coach Jerry

Stovall singled out FSU's all-America nose guard Ron Simmons, who finished ninth in the Heisman Trophy voting last year, as "a quality quality player."

"We're catching this football team that has played together four years," he said. "I think we've got young going against a football team that is totally unopposed."

Offensively, the teams had "question marks," Bowden said.

"By looking at both rosters, one could anticipate that each of us is going to be strong defensively and our question mark comes on offense, especially at quarterback," Bowden said. "Both teams will have inexperienced folks on offense, but we also have some pretty good speed with players who could break the game open quickly."

The Tigers' defensive starting lineup included cornerback Alvin Thomas and James Britt; linebackers Tom Joiner, Albert Richardson, Lawrence Williams and Lyman White; tackles Leonard Marshall and Benji Thibodeaux; noseguard George Atiyeh; safety Steve Marcus; and a free safety Chris Williams.

Sanford's Jack Schirard To Head Citrus Committee

Jack Schirard of Sanford has been named to another term as chairman of the Florida Citrus Harvesting Research and Development Committee.

Elected vice chairman was Jim Simpson Jr., of Mount Dora.

Other members of the committee are Charles Collins of Avon Park; John D'Alora of Vero Beach; Richard J. Green of Clermont; Dr. Chan Hannon of Haines City; and Richard Tombrink of Dade City.

The committee reviews and makes recommendations for conduct of the program to develop methods and machinery for the mechanical harvesting of citrus fruit.

For Eyes Optical Co., a national marketer of high-value eyewear, is expanding its Florida operations with the opening of a new store in Casselberry.

"This will be our first Florida store outside Miami, where we are headquartered," Phil Wolman, president of the eight-year-old firm explains. "We selected this area to launch our Florida expansion because of the region's stability and steady, sensible growth."

In celebration of the opening, fashion consultant and eyewear designer Bernard Kayman will be in the Casselberry store on Sept. 12 and 13 to offer tips on selecting frames according to facial features. Kayman, winner of the Neiman Marcus Award for graduate of the Paris School of Fashion, joined For Eyes early this year.

The Casselberry store will offer a full range of eyeglasses, including fashion and designer line frames, plastic and glass lenses, invisible and blended progressive bifocals, trifocals, ultra-thin, cataracts, thin-lites and other optical special needs.

John Youngflesh, an Orlando licensed optician, will manage the new Casselberry store, at 400 Semoran Blvd. (State Road 48).

Rustay, Howard Join Firm

James Rustay, formerly with Wausau Homes in Kansas City, has been named regional sales manager for Cardinal Industries Inc., a Sanford-based producer of factory-built single family and multi-family modular housing.

Rustay is a native of Buffalo, N.Y., and a graduate of the University of Buffalo. His primary activities will be associated with Cardinal's multi-family product lines.

In another appointment, Blar Howard, formerly senior loan officer for Charter Mortgage in Orlando, has been appointed district sales manager for Cardinal's single-family housing division.

Howard, a native of Baltimore, is a veteran of the U.S. Air Force. He attended Ohio State University and Florida Southern. He is a resident of Winter Park.

Quiet Wallace Return To Power?

By BESSIE FORD

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — Gov. Fob James appears to be treading water politically as voter admiration for ex-Gov. George C. Wallace seems to be swelling.

During his past 30 months in office, James has tried to excite the people with a variety of programs and come up with an empty bucket.

Wallace is quietly watching and waiting. He has plenty of time to make his move if he wants to challenge James in the 1982 gubernatorial race.

When James and Wallace greeted President Carter in Tusculum last week, the crowd enthusiastically applauded Wallace and was noticeably cooler toward James.

James' aides refused to concede there were some jeers from the Tusculum crowd. They said they were pleased with the governor's reception.

His loyalty to the Democratic Party is still debatable although he voted in the Democratic primary last week. Some people at the Tusculum gathering questioned his alleged partiality to Republicans (James was once a Republican) and wondered why he won't endorse President Carter for re-election.

Wallace, 81, will not say whether he would consider running for a fourth term. He was constitutionally prohibited from seeking re-election in 1978 when James convinced the voters it was "Time for a New Beginning."

Although Wallace backed former Attorney

ANALYSIS Wallace is quietly watching and waiting. He has plenty of time to make his move if he wants to challenge James in the 1982 race.

General Bill Baxley in his bitter Democratic runoff battle with James in 1978. Wallace said after the election that James had the potential of being the best governor Alabama has ever had.

But since James' inauguration, Wallace has been silent on the James administration.

Wallace aide Elvin Stanton won't say whether he expects his boss to run in 1982, but he said people are trying to interest Wallace in the race.

"It is certainly too early to make a decision like that," Stanton said. "He has to be affected to some extent by the large number of people who have contacted him. He is not doing anything one way or another."

James confessed recently he is the most isolated man in Alabama and wondered out loud what he could do about his predicament.

His admission was strange because he has the resources to control political decisions and make key politicians indebted to him.

James said he knew he had played havoc politically when he failed to stroke political figures, but he promised when he ran for governor that his administration would not be influenced by politics.

He has dipped repeatedly into the Auburn-Opelika area, where he got his start, to make key appointments, which some politicians say was an unwise move to build a statewide base.

The 4-cent a gallon gasoline tax he persuaded the Legislature to pass to beef up highway construction seems to be bothering him although he stubbornly defends it. He was confident at first that the tax increase and not hurt him, but apparently he is feeling a backlash.

And First Lady Bobbie James' activities are haunting her husband.

Mrs. James has become a heroine to the "Moral Majority," the coalition of religious groups that was responsible for Republican Jeremiah Denton's landslide nomination in the U.S. Senate race.

But she has riled some Alabama voters who blame James for failing to keep a tight rein on his wife. His attempt to poke fun at her use of the state aircraft for personal and religious purposes fell flat.

Dr. Paul Hubbert, lobbyist for the Alabama Education Association, suggested last week that "Bobbie might run stronger than Fob" if the "Moral Majority" does not disintegrate before 1982.

Former Alabama Gov. George Wallace (left) will not say whether he would consider running for a fourth term. He was constitutionally prohibited from seeking re-election in 1978.

Arts Council To Hold Annual Presidents' Luncheon, Awards

The Council of Arts and Sciences will hold its 13th Annual Presidents' Luncheon Sept. 15, at noon, at the Harley Hotel, downtown Orlando.

This yearly event, which brings the leadership of the cultural community together to kick off the fall season, honors the outgoing and incoming presidents of the Council's 30 member organizations.

The theme for this year's luncheon is Hispanic Arts. Visual artist Catalina Garcia and the singing-doctor Alfonso Saniz will be showcased during the luncheon.

Another traditional feature of the luncheon will be the presentation of the 1979-80 Arts Awards. Individuals and organizations will receive recognition for excellence in the arts and outstanding contributions to the arts during the past year.

Reservations should be made by Sept. 10. For more information or to make reservations, call the Council of Arts and Sciences at 845-2787 (THE ARTS).

Museum Needs Volunteers

The John Young Museum and Planetarium needs volunteers to adequately staff the programs for Central Florida young people during the coming school year. Even if you can only spend two or three hours a month the museum needs you, according to Mark E. Sinclair, director.

Call Hazel at 886-7151. Volunteer orientation will take place Sept. 17, 18 and 19 at the museum.

Layser To Address Sorority

The Kappa Sigma Omega Chapter of the Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority Inc. will hold its first fall meeting Sept. 13, at the Sanford Chamber of Commerce at 4 p.m. School Superintendent William Layser will speak on his position in seeking re-election. Questions will be taken from the audience.

Other interested citizens or groups are invited to attend.

LWV Updates Election Data

"Directions and Dimensions — 1980" will be the theme for the Seminole County League of Women Voters general meeting on Sept. 18, at 7:30 p.m. at the Altamonte Community Church Educational Building on Highway 406.

The meeting will be an update on the league activities and programs with pertinent information available. Also literature on key issues and the upcoming election will be available.

All interested persons are asked to attend to learn more about League participation and how, as citizens, they can become more involved in local government.

For information, call: Susan Warren, president, 869-5881.

Personal Growth Scheduled

The Office of Community Services at Seminole Community College will offer a class in "Personal Growth and Transactional Analysis" beginning Sept. 17. Class will meet for eight consecutive Wednesday evenings from 7-10 p.m.

The instructors are Peter and Margaret Gray, they are members of the Central Florida Study Group and have taken advanced training with Dr. Kenneth Sowers, former director of Mental Health Association.

The $15 registration fee may be paid in the registrar's office at Seminole Community College. For information call the Office of Community Services at Seminole Community College 223-1456, ext. 304.

Choral Society Needs Singers

The Choral Art Society will begin rehearsal for its 10th season at Asbury United Methodist Church in Maitland on Sept. 15, at 7:30 p.m.

According to Dr. George McLoughlin, musical director of the Society, a December performance is planned which will feature the "Requiem" by Johannes Brahms.

The Choral Art Society is a community chorus formed to offer residents of Central Florida an opportunity to hear and perform significant choral music. David E. Matthews is accompanist and organist for the group.

Singers who have had some experience in school, college, community, or church choirs are invited to join. Further information can be obtained by calling Adult Education at 422-8900, ext. 465.

The Choral Art Society is a member of the Council of Arts and Sciences for Central Florida, Inc.

The ABCs Of Starting To School...

First Graders Face A Big Adjustment

By TOM NETSEL
Herald Staff Writer

In their first week of school many Sanford first-graders are already settling down and adjusting to being away from home.

Reading and writing lessons have replaced play and television, new friends have been made and some subjects have been found to be more enjoyable than others.

"It's a big social adjustment," said Betty Boatright, a first-grade teacher at Hopper Elementary School. "They have to get along with others and they have to learn to work independently. As soon as they can do that, the better student they'll be."

Of course, before the young students can master good study techniques, they have to learn to stay in their seats. That too is a big adjustment, said Mrs. Boatright.

While the students start off learning simple things like numbers and letters, and which word rhymes with another. These tasks are building the necessary skills that will prepare them to meet the challenges yet to come. Learning to read well at this age is much easier than taking remedial courses later.

"If a child leaves first grade with everything we have to offer," said Mrs. Boatright, "I think they will be good students."

Many students already have favorite activities plus they have discovered a few things that are not so much fun. Anthony Roberts said he liked, "jogging and playing and eating," but he didn't like fighting, though he had not been in any fights at school. "I like P.E. (physical education) best," he admitted.

"I like art and I like the teacher," said Heather Wirrick. "I don't like running around the playground, especially when the boys chase me. I chase them back."

Herman Eason, right photo, takes time out to adjust a shoe that may be hurting his foot. In the photo, children demonstrate that staying in their seats can be difficult since most children that age seem to have a natural case of "fidgets."

South American Trip Only Whetted Travel Appetite

Jack Godwin with native beads from Peru where he spent 102 days in the mountains and jungle.

Jack Godwin wanted to get away from the usual this summer. At age 19 he wanted to do something different and go someplace where there were not many tourists. So after leaving Sanford he spent 102 days in the mountains and jungles of Peru.

"I heard you could live cheaper in South America," said the Seminole Community College philosophy major, "and I wanted to learn the language better. I'd always been interested in the Amazon and Peru is where it starts."

Since several friends regarded the jungles of South America as a place a bit more dangerous than they cared to visit, Godwin decided to go by himself. As it turned out, the airport in Lima was the "scariest part" of his trip.

The five-and-one-half-hour plane flight from the United States to South America gave Godwin little time to adjust to the cultural shock he experienced upon his arrival in the Peruvian capital. The airport was swarming with arriving and departing passengers, all yelling and talking at once in rapid-fire Spanish. "I was totally lost," Godwin recalled, "though I knew little Spanish."

He was to stay with friends of his brother and had planned to call them from the airport but most of the phones were out of order. "Only one or two out of 20 worked," he said.

Before Godwin could go through customs, someone asked him if he wanted a taxi. He grabbed his bag and ran through the line with only a wave at his friend, the customs agent. Godwin found himself in a taxi heading out of town without even showing his passport. "They were just waiting for Gringos who don't know what they're doing," he said.

Staying with a local family was an ideal way to get to know the country, said Godwin. They showed him the sights, the museums filled with Inca gold, the old Spanish churches, and parts of the city the usual tourist would never see.

A local election was taking place when Godwin arrived and the walls of the city were filled with political graffiti. A garbage strike also greeted him and the streets were filled with trash which included dead animals. "It was so filthy, I couldn't believe it," he said. The strike was later settled and the streets were cleaned before he left.

Developing a taste for the local cuisine took some time as well. His new-found friends took him around and showed him what and what not to eat. "I never got sick at all," he said. "You just watched what you ate. They sell food on the streets but you don't eat that, that would be death! You get a little paranoid from the streets. The meat and food is different. It's not McDonald's and Burger King—none of that good stuff." He did sample a tiny piece, only the smallest of bites of an eye-watering, tongue burning chili pepper that he judged as being the hottest thing he had ever eaten in his life.

Movies seemed to be very popular with the local people and long lines would form outside movie theaters, Godwin reported. There were several American films showing with Spanish subtitles.

Driving, as in many Latin countries, seemed to be the national way of death, at least for the unwary. Godwin said he saw no speed limits, no stop signs and recalled seeing two buses racing each other until one of them ran into a sign. The traffic rules is also something to be reckoned with. "It's horns," he said, "totally horns, horns, horns!"

Beer — if you stayed away from the tourist establishments — could be had for about 40 cents a quart, but whiskey cost $3 and $4 a drink.

After several weeks in Lima, Godwin was ready for some wider scenery and he flew from Lima to Iquitos on the Amazon River. There he was "adopted" by a local tour guide who spoke English and for the price of several meals, proved invaluable to the young man from Sanford.

Godwin said the weather was nice. The temperature was just what he needed to get the itch to do but the people were friendly. For entertainment in the evenings, the people would go for walks. "They don't do anything," Godwin said, "they just walk. They're not going anywhere; they're just walking."

Parents Proud Of 'Cartoonist Of Year'

Sam and Betty Day are bursting with pride these days. Their son, William, better known by his Seminole High School classmates as "Bill," has been hired by the Philadelphia Bulletin as head cartoonist now with the New York Post.

Last year he was named "Cartoonist of the Year." Bill attended Daytona Beach Junior College and Florida State University prior to going to New York. Congratulations have been pouring in from leading cartoonists all over the country. We add our congratulations to a young man who set a goal and seemingly has reached it.

With his guide, Godwin managed to meet local people and get invited to several parties. Meeting the people of the country and getting to know them proved to be more exciting than visiting the sights, he said. Though they are poor by American standards — $70 a month was a typical wage and 60 hours was a normal work week — most everyone Godwin talked with said he was happy with his job and his way of life. "I couldn't find one person who didn't like his job," he said.

"They are happy people in the jungle, poor but happy." Leaving the jungle town of Iquitos and its touches of civilization, Godwin and his guide went into the rain forest. Here, the people were different. With little education, many were but a step removed from a primitive tribal way of life. Everyone carried a weapon and foreigners were looked upon with suspicion.

Godwin said a party of three Europeans had disappeared on a canoe trip on the river shortly before he arrived. After an investigation, some jungle people admitted to killing "three Gringos" and dropping their bodies into the water. The foreigners were thought to be dangerous, was their only excuse or motive.

The insects and snakes were constant companions with Godwin on his five-day hunting trip into the jungle. About a hundred inch-long ants bit Godwin's leg before he realized he was standing on their trail. His leg still shows their marks. Closer to civilization they visited one village where the people make a living dressing as Indians for tourists who do not want to brave the jungle to see the real thing. The blowgun demonstrations were very popular but it was just a job for the people there, who lived in another village at night.

Godwin flew from the hundred-degree weather of Iquitos to the freezing temperatures of the Andes mountains when he went to visit the ancient fortress city of Machu Picchu near Cuzco. Though he liked the architecture of the Indian ruins, Godwin said there were too many European "bums" laying around the streets dressed in ponchos, on drugs and being a nuisance.

He decided to go back to the friendly jungle town of Iquitos where everything, even rallies, stopped at noon for a three hour siesta.

Godwin said he was at one rally with about 1,000 other people when he stopped and realized he was being eaten. He was tall that he was lowering over everyone else. His clothing was much more colorful than the jungle people's and being an American made him stand out. Still, the people were friendly and Godwin is now corresponding with several new friends he met there.

He said he would like to go back and spend more time in the jungle but it was the people he met who made the trip especially remarkable for him.

His trip to South America has perhaps only whetted Godwin's appetite for travel to exotic places. The North Pole and Bombay, India are the next places he said he would like to visit when he gets the chance. "I hear Bombay is very exciting!" — TOM NETSEL

Expert Gives Tips On Handling Grief

DEAR ABBY: As a professional counselor, I encounter many people who don't know how to handle grief or the loss of a loved one. They are grieving alone because their friends are afraid to visit them. Why do friends stay away? Because they don't know what to say.

I have learned more from dying and grieving people than I have from books. Perhaps these tips on how to give support to those who are terminally ill or are struggling to cope with a tragedy or loss will be useful to your column.

PHYLIS W. HENDERSON, STAUNTON, VA. 1. When there is a terminally ill person in the family, everyone asks the family, "How is he?" Those who must live with that person need to hear, "How are you?" The family is hurting, yet they're treated as if they were invulnerable.

2. Don't worry about what to say. Speak from the heart. Or say nothing. Sometimes just hugging or holding someone can convey more than words.

3. Don't worry about what to bring someone who is very ill. Bring yourself. And give yourself. Don't be like the person who runs in and says, "I've come to cheer you up...I'm double-parked. Gotta run. Bye!"

Dear

4. Be there later. Chances are, their numbness will wear off long after the crisis or a funeral, but by then, everyone's gone home. Anniversaries, birthdays and holidays are hard times to be alone.

5. Don't shut the children out. If there are children in the family, listen to them, and don't hide your tears. You should teach them that tears are healing. (They are.) Ask each child if he/she wants to attend the funeral, and accept each answer as right for that child.

6. Don't stay away. Go even if you have a knot in your stomach. Go even if you're afraid you may say all the wrong things. Chances are they won't remember your words, but they'll feel your touch and remember that you came when they needed someone.

DEAR ABBY: What is the difference between a mule and a donkey? What exactly is an ass? Is an ass the same as a jackass? And have you ever heard of a hinky? And which of these is stier?

STUPID CITY KID. A mule is the offspring of a male ass and a female horse (mare). A mule is almost always sterile. An ass is a donkey. And a jackass is specifically a male donkey.

A hinky is the offspring of a she-ass and a stallion. A hinky is also usually sterile. (Class adjourned.)

DEAR ABBY: Is it true that men never make passes at girls who wear glasses?

NEARSIGHTED DEAR NEAR: It depends on their frames.

Clark Clan Gathers For Week-Long Family Reunion

Friendship, love, happiness and togetherness was the theme for the Mannie Clark family reunion held recently at the home of the Clarks with a full week of festivities. A fish fry was held at the home of Mrs. Claudette Clark Hutchinson, followed by a Sunday cook-out at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Willie Cash.

Then came a two-day trip to Carolyn Clark's home in West Palm Beach.

After returning to the Sanford area, the group visited Disney World and Rock Springs. To climax the week of fun and visits, the family members gathered for an evening with a buffet and cocktail disco party, held at the Knights of Columbus Hall where over 75 persons gathered.

The Clarks of Sanford serving as hosts were Mannie Clark, Claudette Clark Hutchinson

...THE HOPE OF OUR COMMUNITY...

The Church... OUR NATION!

Think Safety... Think Christianity

We can't miss them — these signs along the intersections of our streets. They protect our school children from physical harm. We see the sign... and slow down.

Most of us are deeply concerned about the safety of our youngsters... and these signs can be a reminder of a further obligation our society has to its youth. There are dangers in life for which only religious training and faith can prepare us.

Boys and girls approaching maturity deserve the spiritual protection which Christian education provides. Whenever you approach a school crossing, slow down! But, just don't think safety — think CHRISTIANITY.

Crooks And Cupcakes Co-Exist

Church Is In Casino's Shadow

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (NEA) — When legalized gambling was introduced in this storied Atlantic Coast resort town two years ago, clergymen were nearly unanimous in their worry. They predicted the casinos would lure irredeemable to the area, who in turn would impact moral and religious progression. They were right. By any measure, gambling has had a deleterious effect on the church industry here. Attendance has declined sharply at services, and collection revenue has suffered deep lacerations. The crisis is so grave for those churches nearest the casinos that a few may soon have to close their doors. But there is at least one place of worship that seems to have weathered the storm of change in Atlantic City. In fact, the 113-year-old St. James Episcopal Church, located a few hundred feet from the largest casino in town, is enjoying something of a spiritual, economic and philosophical revival. St. James pastor Russell Gale says gambling has been, well, a godsend for his ministry. Accordingly, he may be the only cleric around who warmly supports the gaming activities. To be sure, Rev. Gale has not always felt so kindly toward gambling. Nor has his church always profited from its presence. When the casinos were newly arrived here, the manifestations almost blew St. James into oblivion, and its priest came very close to losing both his flock and job. St. James' early problems were largely the result of its address. The church is little more than a block down the street from Resorts International. Resorts was the first casino to open under the new municipal gaming laws, and St. James got caught in the path of the stampede to its tables. "It was terrible," Rev. Gale recalls. Prostitutes would hawk their wares of the church sidewalk. Muggers would drag their victims to the rectory lawn. "Saturday nights were the worst, of course. I can't tell you how often I have prayed for rain on the weekends, because that would ease the raffish away." But it couldn't rain all of the time. Eventually, the crime and corruption had a telling effect on St. James. Alfred of the ruffians, prisoners began staying home. Sunday attendance dropped from 40 to no more than eight or nine regulars. Rev. Gale says the collection averaged $10 or less. Soon the church heard the point of the episcopalian equivalent of bankruptcy. Diocese authorities suggested that St. James be closed. The diocese officers believed it would be prudent to rebuild the church in the wealthier suburbs — away from the gambling influence. Naturally, Rev. Gale did not want to close. Nor did he wish to admit defeat. So he instituted an unorthodox defense against the forces eroding his ministry. He decided that rather than condemn the gaming conditions, he would accept them and use them for good. First, with the help of two women in the parish, he began selling cupcakes and cookies on the street in front of St. James. The idea worked. The gambling crowds responded with steady purchases, and the merchandising gave the priest an opportunity to talk to the prostitutes and derelicts as well. Prostitutes need God's attention too, Gale says. "The greatest mistake a church can make is to not love its neighbors. We have to extend our concern and help where it's needed. I don't say I'm converting the cooks and the pimps, but I do say that some of them have started to come to our services." As for the cupcakes? As the church has gotten $7,000 from them this year alone. The church has also gotten money from Resorts International this year. This because adjusting the casino has been the second part of Rev. Gale's accommodations. He has befriended Resorts' managers, and even attended some of the club's shows. The response has been a $2,500 gift, and the promise of more to come. Today, Rev. Gale says the St. James church is no longer on the ropes. Attendance is higher than it was before the casino came, and "while we never have our normal revenue we can at least pay all our bills." The priest claims the church has not been so flush in a quarter of a century. There are still concerns, certainly. The derelicts continue to relieve themselves in church shrubbery. Beggars sleep on the steps. In addition, someone has taken the copper cutters from St. James' roof and Gale says hoodlums have all but broken the rectory door in two. And yet the church is still here. Its work goes on. Some local critics say that by catering to the gaming elements, Rev. Gale has compromised on morality. But he points out that St. James is prospering, while many other churches are not. "So maybe that means that the Lord thinks we are on to something."

Baptists Dedicate Church

The First Baptist Church of Longwood will conduct a "Victory Day" celebration, this Sunday, as members dedicate the new 17,000 square foot auditorium-education complex located on State Road 434 in Longwood. Special dedication services Sunday will culminate two years of active planning and work under the church-sponsored "Together We Build" program. The new church plant, which joins the existing Family Life Center on an eight-acre tract just west of SR 434 and U.S. 17-92 intersection, was erected at a cost of more than $500,000. New construction includes a 300-seat sanctuary, offices, library, choir room, nursery and other facilities. Educational classrooms in both the new building and renovated portions of the Family Life Center will accommodate approximately 400 persons. Special activities of "Victory Day" include Sunday School at 9:30 a.m.; a slide presentation on the morning worship hour at 10:45 a.m.; a churchwide dinner in the Family Life Center at 12:15 p.m.; and a slide presentation on the construction program at the 7 p.m. evening worship. The Rev. James Hamrick, pastor, will bring the dedication message, entitled "Tabernacle or Temple," choosing as his text, II Samuel 7:1-7. Special music will be provided by the church choir through two moves and a presentation on the construction program at the 7 p.m. evening worship. Invitations have gone out to all former pastors of the First Baptist Church of Longwood requesting their attendance at the dedication service. The church, founded in 1906, and first located on West Warren Street, has gone through two moves and a construction program at the 7 p.m. evening worship. The Rev. James Hamrick, pastor, will bring the dedication message, entitled "Tabernacle or Temple," choosing as his text, II Samuel 7:1-7. Special music will be provided by the church choir through two moves and a presentation on the construction program at the 7 p.m. evening worship.

Religious Malpractice?

This is a story about Matthew, a year-and-a-half-old baby in Grose Point Park, Mich., who died of meningitis in 1977. His parents were Christian Scientists. When Matthew became ill they consulted a Christian Science practitioner (or healer). The baby's condition worsened. On the 12th day he "broke loose" from the practitioner and took Matthew to the hospital where he died a few hours later.

The parents are now suing the Christian Science Church for negligence (malpractice). The mother has taken the case to the nationally televised Phil Donahue Show (what the Christian Science Church has called a "trial-by-talk show"). She has also written an article which appears currently in A.D. magazine, the national publication of the United Presbyterian Church. The article is entitled, "Christian Science—Threat To Children." The mother appears to feel that the practitioner was negligent for not telling her and her husband that the Christian Science treatment they requested was not working in Matthew's case and for not strongly suggesting that they take the boy to a hospital.

While it might be said that nobody was keeping the parents from seeking medical treatment if they so decided, the mother says in her magazine article that "Christian Science has many of the characteristics of a cult which inhibit independent judgment." The Christian Science argument for the Donahue show left the strong impression on many viewers that Christian Scientists are forbidden to seek medical help. Two other points should perhaps be made in the Christian Science Church's defense in this case.

HOROSCOPE

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL
For Sunday, September 7, 1980

YOUR BIRTHDAY SEPTEMBER 7, 1980
Those who are single may form a new relationship with lasting qualities in the year ahead. An exciting cycle both socially and romantically is set for all born today.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Cooperation is prevalent, important one-to-one relationships can sort out the example by doing your part to be a contributor.
PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) It isn't likely you'll make this a day of rest, because of the projects you put your hand to will reflect your talent.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) An upsurge in your popularity will still be noticeable today. Your natural charm and congeniality remain in full gear, drawing others to you.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Family or home interests may dominate your attention today. Don't mistakenly think outside interests are more important than domestic activities.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) The gift of gab has always been yours, and today you can use it most skillfully to charm your listeners. This is a good time to go after something you want.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) It isn't likely you'll feel poor today, even if you don't have a lot. You wisely manage to make the most of what you have so that everything looks good.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) This is a good day to do things that interest you personally. You'll find very little interference or opposition coming from others.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Oswald Jacoby
For Monday, September 8, 1980

major suit singleton or void you should follow up your transfer by bidding that short suit. Example: S: 2 H: 4 D: 3 C: 3
Your determination will finally pay off and you'll begin to experience the success of your labor this coming year. Don't be the time to quit, so reinforce your efforts.
PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Hard, cold facts may be what you have to work with today, yet you'll take these ingredients, put them to good use and come out smelling like a rose.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) You can put your week in great shape if you tackle your tough jobs today and get them out of the way. You'll be proud of what you accomplish.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) A bond very vital to you could be strengthened today through a serious conversation. A better understanding can be reached.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Even though certain household duties can be a drag, you'll feel a real sense of satisfaction for the discipline you display in getting them done.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) You're quite communicative today, but you have no time for idle chatter. You're interested in talking to those who can aid you in learning, developing or finishing projects.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Excellent bays for the home can be found by first calling or shopping around to check out the prices. There are bargains for those who select wisely.

Southward Plucks Longwood Sign, But Other Candidates' Remain

By DONNA ESTES
Herald Staff Writer

A billboard, touting the candidacy of legislative candidate Pat Southward, was up on State Road 434, west of State Road 427, for two-to-three days last week before it was ordered removed by the city of Longwood, said Andy Anderson of Peterson Outdoor Advertising today.

Anderson said he received calls from the Longwood city clerk (Donald Terry) and city administrator (David Chacey) saying the billboard was in violation of the city's sign ordinance which allows political signs of only four square feet, Anderson said. He added that Mrs. Southward ordered the sign removed "because she preferred not to be in violation of the law."

However, "there are many political signs throughout the city that are larger than the four-square-foot limitation."

But, Mrs. Southward is the only political candidate against whom the four-square-foot political-sign limitation is being enforced, according to Terry.

Noting that conviction of violating the sign ordinance is a misdemeanor punishable by a $200 fine and/or six months imprisonment, Terry said he was instructed by Chacey to order the sign removed after Chacey received a complaint.

"I don't believe there will be any effort to enforce the law on any other candidate," Terry said, adding that Mrs. Southward's billboard was in clear violation of the law.

Terry said the city council two years ago noted in its minutes of a meeting that the size limitation would be waived for political candidates in that particular election. He said he would have to research the record to find what the new sign limitations are. He added that the city ordinance banning political signs larger than four square feet has not been amended to permit larger signs.

City Commissioner J.R. Grant said today that the sign in his opinion should have been allowed to stay up. "I'm not against billboards anyway," he said. Grant said no waiver on the size of political signs has been given by the commission this year.

Commissioner June Lormann said she had heard that the city received some complaints against the billboard, but was unaware of any other signs being up which were in violation of the city law. "Someone should drive around and see who's violating the law," she said. "I'll bring it up at tonight's city commission meeting."

Chacey was not available for comment at city hall.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Southward said today she doesn't wish any controversy concerning the sign or its being ordered taken down to detract from her campaign against incumbent State Rep. Bobby Brantley, R-Longwood.

Brantley said today he made no complaint about the sign and didn't ask anyone else to complain. "I hoped the sign would stay up. I'm disappointed it was taken down. If the ordinance is being enforced on one, it should be enforced on all," Brantley said.

Brantley added that he has no signs posted within the Longwood city limits.

The billboard sign said: "Pat Southward Can Do A Better Job Than Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Brantley. Vote Pat Southward."

City Officials To Consider Ballot Issues

Sanford City Commissioners, at a 7 p.m. meeting today, will discuss a series of four questions which may be placed on the Dec. 2 election ballot.

Three of the four questions call for a change in the method of selecting city commissioners. The vote of the people on the issue would be advisory.

One of the four questions concerns the method recommended by a black citizens committee, led by Rev. Amos Jones, are expected to give their input on each of the questions at tonight's meeting.

In other action, the commission will discuss the county's proposal to drop a road tax which is distributed in part to the county's seven cities. Under the plan, Sanford would lose $9,273.

City Attorney Vernon Mize is to discuss a proposed ordinance creating a municipal code enforcement board. The board would have authority to enforce city ordinances dealing with zoning, signs, occupational licenses and fire codes.

Continued five-member commission

Clerk Gets Petitions Against Paulucci Plan

Seminole Elections Supervisor Camilla Bruce Wednesday will begin certifying a petition from Lake Mary requesting the repeal of zoning granted by the city council a month ago for Paulucci Enterprises.

The city council rezoned the 23-acre parcel at Paulucci's request to permit construction of three acres of commercial and 20 acres of apartment and townhouses on a tract at Lantana Lane and 46A in the city. Their plan is to build 140 multi-family units at the site.

Lake Mary City Clerk Connie Major said today a committee led by Councilman Gene McDonald turned over petitions containing 202 signatures, seeking repeal of the rezoning ordinance. City law requires 174 signatures of registered voters.

Mrs. Major said she received the petitions at 1 p.m. Friday and delivered them to Mrs. Bruce's office at 2 p.m.

Mrs. Bruce said her office will begin the certification work on the petitions beginning Wednesday. "It shouldn't take too much time," she said.

Mrs. Major said after the petition is certified, city law provides that the council may reconsider its action and repeal the ordinance or the question of repeal will go on the Dec. 2 city election ballot.

'Poor Richards' Kelly, Stone Face Tough Tuesday Primaries

MIAMI (UPI) — The political futures of U.S. Sen. Richard Stone and Congressman Richard Kelly may hinge on the outcome of Tuesday's Florida primaries, or the runoff primaries that follow Oct. 7.

State elections director Dorothy Glisson predicts only about 40 percent — or 1.7 million — of the 4 million registered voters will cast ballots Tuesday. Balloting begins at 7 a.m. and ends at 7 p.m. local time, with northwest Florida's central time zone being an hour behind the rest of the state.

Stone's freshman record in Washington was considered so vulnerable that five Democrats — three of them with strong political credentials — jumped at the chance to challenge the millionaire Miamian's renomination. And six Republicans are bidding to take a shot at the job in November — three of them with statewide recognition.

Kelly, under federal indictment in the "Abecan" case, has an uphill climb to win a fourth term from central Florida's eight-county 5th District. Besides two strong Republican primary challengers, he faces a scheduled Oct. 21 trial for accepting a $25,000 bribe from FBI agents posing as representatives of favor-seeking Arabs.

Stone has drawn the ire of labor organizations, who have picketed his few campaign appearances in the state. He also drew sharp criticism from conservatives for favoring the Panama Canal treaty and perceived inability to respond effectively to the immigration crisis that has flooded south Florida with 122,000 Cuban seafarer refugees and more than 15,000 Haitian "boat people" this year.

Stone is predicted to be pushed into the Oct. 7 runoff by either state Treasurer Bill Gunter, who fell 10,699 votes short of beating him in 1974, or popular State Sen. Kenneth "Buddy" MacKay of Ocala. President Carter adviser Richard Pelt-

Sanford Phone Service Interrupted

Long distance phone service in and out of Sanford was disrupted Saturday night and Sunday morning when a cable from Sanford to Jacksonville was cut just west of the Sanford.

Southern Bell Sanford Manager C.E. Wilson said a backhoe operator working on Upsala Road sliced through the cable at 6 p.m.

For several hours it was impossible for residents of Sanford and Lake Mary with phone prefixes of 321, 322 and 323 to either make a long distance call or get an operator.

Late Saturday evening, rerouting of calls enabled some long distance traffic to get through, Wilson said. The cable was repaired at 4 a.m. Sunday.

Wilson said the problem caused by the back hoe operator was made worse, because the unidentified man digging the trench refilled the hole over the cut cable with trash and dirt. Wilson advised anyone doing any digging near buried phone lines to call Southern Bell first to prevent future cable breaks.
