Alaska Pipeline Oil

Reaches Port Of Valdez

VALDEZ, Alaska (AP) - The first gush of "black gold" arrived here from Alaska's Prudhoe Bay oil field, ending a journey that began nine years ago with the discovery of the oil, which took 38 days, 12 hours and 56 minutes to travel through 800 miles of pipeline. The oil arrived Thursday at 11:02 p.m. Alaskan time (4:02 a.m. EDT)

Carter Delays Radar Sale

WASHINGTON (AP) President Carter is giving in to congressional pressure to delay the sale of $1.5 billion in radar air-defense technology to Iran. A few hours after the House International Relations Committee adopted a resolution disapproving the sale of the controversial Airborne Warning and Control System (AWACS), Carter agreed to a month's delay, and accepted a list of six conditions to ease congressional concerns about security.

Pension Plans In Tax Limbo

WASHINGTON (AP) - Do pension plans for city and state workers have to file with the Internal Revenue Service for tax-emempt status? The IRS says yes, but there appears to be no pattern to whether the nation's 6,000 governmental pension plans do file. As, a result of uncertainty over what the law is, the IRS is going after some governmental pension plans but ignoring others.

Welfare Reform Under Study

WASHINGTON (AP) - The 60-page welfare reform outline HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. prepared for President Carter is being discussed at the White House, but apparently no decisions have been made yet. Although Carter ordered aides to hold down the cost of a welfare plan the first year, he is hinting that the plan may cost more in the

Optimism Is Seen For Mideast Peace

Professionals in the State Department are ontimistic about the possibility of a Geneva Conference on the Middle East being held this year. They see a geniune desire for peace among people on both sides of the Israeli-Arab conflict and a determination in the United States that will harness the emotions.

So far the public has not been privy to the information that makes the professionals so sanguine. A great many of the public attitudes will be shaped by the meeting of President Carter and Israeli Prime Minister Menaham Begin which ended July 20 in Washington.

The meeting was critical. A former undergound leader in Israel's fight for independence from the British, Mr. Begin is trying to establish the image of a flexible, moderate and reasonable leader, willing to talk to Arabs without preconditions. He couldn't have picked a better platform for projecting his new personality than a summit in the

He might have hurt his cause this week by ordering the legalization of three new settlements on the West Bank of the Jordan. This move, President Carter conceded at his Thursday news conference, "increases the difficulty" of finding peace. But, he added, it is not an "insurmountable

Mr. Begin proved at once that he has a sense of stage and drama. His "secret plan" undoubtedly was inspired to develop maximum world attention on the Washington summit, and his self-effacing mien should do much to dispel the picture of a reborn Irgun terrorist, which his opponents claim

A shrewd leader, Mr. Begin certainly is aware of these objections. Why then did he develop and present the secret plan? Given his shaky political position in Israel, the plan probably was as far as he could come toward the Arabs. Moreover, his plan does represent concessions and flexibility if it is measured against his beliefs when he was the Israeli challenger instead of the prime minister. His proposals must be framed by practicalities, not academic ideals.

President Carter appears to have recognized this pragmatism in his call for a Geneva summit this year when his talks with Mr. Begin ended.

He is seizing the moment. Genuine peace in the Middle East isn't likely to come in a dramatic swoop, but in painstaking and often microscopic progress. Those pursuing it must grasp every

The Carter -Begin talk was one of those opportunities. It did not assure a Geneva convention, or success if one is held. The initial format may turn out to be something like the Rhodes Isles talks in 1949 that brought an armistice in the Middle East, or the 1972 discussions in New York that quelled another uprising. We hope not! Face to face discussions have been established and resorting to a messenger type of negotiations would be

In any case, a hopeful sign that the talks will be held is that, even without knowing whether Mr. Begin had any rabbits in his hat, he has given the United States some specific proposals to present to efficiency experts are turned loose, in government or in private industry, there is a risk they will cut into vial organs as well as bureaucratic

The dangers of over-enthusiasm are vividly illustrated by proposals of several top White House officials for "reforming" the troubled Occupational Safety and Health Administration. OSHA, a part of the Labor Department, is a sitting duck for the boys with the long knives. Since its creation in 1970, it has become the most hated agency in the federal government, a horrible case study in superfluous paperwork, nit-picking regulations and mindless harassment of the private business community.

Created by Congress to insure a safe and healthful work place for America's employes, OSHA became the scourge of small businessmen. All but ignoring major en-vironmental health problems, the agency focused its energies on drafting and enforcing an enormous array of detailed, picayune safety regulations that drove businessmen to President Carter correctly decided, shortly after his inauguration, that OSHA was a prime target for regulatory reform. Labor Secretary Ray Marshall and the new agency director, Dr. Eula Bingham, wholeheartedly agreed and set out to clear away the red tape.

But as Marshall and Bingham started shifting and towards major hazards, some of Carter' efficiency experts decided to go farther.

In a May 27 memo to the president, Budget Director Bert Lance, chief economics adviser Charles Schultze and domestic affairs adviser Stuart Eizenstat urged Carter to consider "totally eliminating most safety regulations."

Instead of attempting to define what constitutes a safe working environment, these officials said, OSHA and the rest of the government should make it more costly for business to operate unsafely - "for example, an improved worker's compensation program or economic penalties tied to the injury rate."

The Lance-Schultze-Eizenstat memo took production rose more slowly than expected and Marshall and Bingham completely by surprise. Labor Department officials say that both the secretary and the OSHA director vehemently disagree with the suggestion that all work safety a general tightness of supply in the first four regulations be abandoned.

Sen. Harrison A. Williams Jr., D-N.J., chairman of the Senate Human Resources Committee and principal author of the original OSHA legislation, has fired off a blistering letter to Carter protesting the thrust of the "reform"

Believers in the Tooth Fairy will love President Carter's "citizen rate" for postage. Having been endorsed by the board of governors of the Postal Service, the proposal to charge "citizens" 13 cents an ounce for first class mail and businesses 16 cents now goes to the Postal Rate Commission for hearings. # Ole! He's The Guy In The Magazine Ads-

TIJUANA, Mexico (AP) - "He looks laminar co me, "says one builtight fan. "Yeah, I'm sure I've seen him somewhere." says a second. "Why sure, he's a dead ringer for the guy in the magazine ads," says a third.

The profile of Diego O'Bolger, the Gringo matador, is so familiar because he indeed is the guy in the clothing ads in the magazines. But on Sundays in Madrid or Tijuana, he dons an outfit probably more expensive than any ever offered for sale by the clothing maker: the goldbraided, embroidered and handmade uniform of the matador. It costs.

by conservative estimate, $2,000. He's good at this Sunday job — one of only seven Americans to achieve the title Matador de Toros and the only one in the rings at this

"Anyone can learn the basics of capework in six months," said O'Bolger, who will headline the fights in the Bullring by the Sea Sunday "To really get to know the bulls, to learn all of the skills and perform with artistic grace takes 10 to 15 years, sometimes longer.' At 6 feet tall and 157 pounds, the experts say the Tucson-born O'Bolger, 33, has the perfect build for a bullfighter. In reality, neither dressing in the matador's uniform nor the high-fashion men's wear are O'Bolger's main business. He spends most of his time as a public relations representative for a wine and brandy outfit.

But most of all, he said he loves the ring, and possibly the adulation of the rose-throwing senoritas, and the bulls, of course.

"The paradox is that to be a bullfighter, or for that matter, even an aficionado, it's important to love animals," said O'Bolger, who saw his first bullfight at 10 in Nogales. "I have all kinds of pets, including an opossum, a sloth, and an ocelot," he said. "Once, I had a black bear and a lion, plus all kinds of dogs and cats."

Bulls are different, he concedes. "The bull is a violent, noble animal with a tremendous instinct to attack. The matador must transform the bull's brute strength into something slow, graceful, and almost choreographed," said the man whose six hospital stints indicate the art is hard to master.

The most serious injury came in Torremolinos, Spain, as leaders of that nation's government watched.

"He was a sleeper. He flicked his head at the last instant and caught me. I got up and knew something was wrong," O'Bolger recalls. "I went on to kill the bull, walked over to salute the president and then went to the hospital," he added.

Whotta Story She Has To Tell!

(Bob Orrell is pinch-hitting for Herky Huffman today)

James C. Fisher of Altamonte Springs took his wife, Mary, on a half-day fishing trip to Red Fish Pass last week. And therein, fellow anglers, is the makings of another "Fish story." Mary hooked, played, and landed a tarpon which hit the scales at an even 150 pounds and it took her just 48 minutes to subdue the

The Fishers landed three other tarpon, in addition to getting their limit of snook. Their guide commented "Best half-day trip in years." That should tell us something about the fishing on the Gulf er.

In the Daytona Beach area Wayne Brady of the "Fishin' Hole Tackle Shop" relayed the information that drum and sheepshead are biting off all the bridges, some good sized trout are being taken at the Haulover Canal, surf fishermen are getting good catches of whiting, and lots of Pompano are hitting on sand fleas proached Lucchesi prior to an and clams.

Kent remarked that fishing had been slow due to the extremely warm water inside in the river and various creeks and ocean fishing had felt the effects of a cold current. River fishing produced the average run of jack crevalle, ladyfish and a few mangrove snappers.

A spokesman at Inlet Harbor had an explanation for the slow down in ocean catches. It seems that about every three years a cold current known as a Labrador Current moves in close to the 31.5 score to win the Mayfair each of the first three innings, Florida Coast. Question: I remember hearing my mother say, "Don't be moody." I think that's good advice, but I still can't follow it. I find my moods fluctuating day to day, even hour to hour. Shouldn't a Christian have control over his emotions?

Answer: I don't know anyone who has complete mastery over emotions. . . myself included. Feelings and moods seem to come and go, without a person's having much choice in the matter. The thing to remember though, is that experiencing the sway of your emotions is different from acting out what you're feeling at the moment. You may not have direct control over your emotions, but you can control your will, which is your real self. God created you with a free will, and He intended your will to be Popular with the men of Sanford was the First Methodist Church Sunday School over your emotions. Let me give you an example of a young mother I counseled with whose marriage was going to pieces. After much prayer, she was able to surrender the whole family situation to God and stand firm, believing that God was working everything out for good. Even so, there were times when she felt hopeless or indifferent times when she wanted to run away and never look back. But deep down inside there was an anchor of hope, hope in God, that kept her steady in the midst of her own turbulent and rebellious moods. That's the kind of control you can have over your moods. Yes, they will come, but you can ride out the storm of emotion. . . you don't have to act on your feelings or be controlled by them. Why A spaghetti supper will be not?
