On your way to The Secret Garden this weekend, you may want to stop in and view the exhibit of artwork at the First Street Gallery. Located at 207 Magnolia Avenue, the exhibit serves as a compliment to the current play. According to gallery director Kay Bartholomew, the collection was gathered to create a mood for The Secret Garden and to further highlight Preservation Week.
The work of local talent Bettye Reagan, Jill Elkinton and M.E. Raulerson is featured in the gallery. Reagan's watercolor, Thelma and Louise, depicts two ladies in period dress with an enchanted forest as a setting. The exhibit

5-month sweep by cops ended today at schools

By VICKI DeBORMIER
Herald Senior Staff Writer

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — On a regular Friday morning the cafeteria at Lake Brantley High School is fairly quiet before the first lunch group breaks in.
This morning, however, the place was jumping with activity.
CCIB agents were hustling through the room. Handcuffed juveniles and adults stood, impatiently awaiting processing. And, in the background, the crew moved steadily through their daily routine.
Sheriff Don Eslinger said the arrests this morning were the culmination of a five-month undercover operation at Lake Brantley in Altamonte Springs and Lyman High School in Longwood, as well as at the Adult High School at Seminole Community College in Sanford.
"We had two agents out there for five months," the sheriff explained. "They were in the schools posing as students. That operation culminated in 42 arrest warrants being served this morning."
In addition to making arrests at the schools, warrants were served at several local homes, including ones in Sanford and Altamonte Springs.
According to Eslinger, there were 91 charges against the 29 juveniles and 13 adults who were arrested. Of those arrested, 35 were students at one of the three facilities.

Sheriff awards cars to deserving students

By VICKI DeBORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

Sheriff Don Eslinger paced slowly between the cars, flicking dust from the roof of one, adjusting the antenna of another. Occasionally he consulted his watch.
When Adam Jones and his parents arrived fashionably late, the sheriff threw a hand out to them and welcomed them to the celebration and declared the games open.
Adam, a Lake Mary High School senior, joined a select group of lucky 12th graders in a drawing to determine the winner of a car compliments of the Seminole County Sheriff's Office. Adam was excited, darting quickly from car to car before settling on the blue 1988 Mercury Tracer at the far end.
"This one," he whispered loudly to his mother as the sheriff began gathering the contestants around him to explain the ground rules.
Adam and the others were winners in the Good Student Incentive program.
Each year, the sheriff's office provides six cars (one for each of the county's high schools — there will have to be seven next year when Winter Springs High opens) that have been seized from felons or purchased from area dealerships with money from the Law Enforcement Trust Fund, which is money seized by the sheriff's office in criminal cases.
Sheriff Eslinger established the Good Student Incentive Program two years ago to reward graduating high school students for their performance in school.
The students must have had perfect attendance for their whole

Lake Mary narrowly OKs study for government TV channel

By NICK PFEIFAU

LAKE MARY — The request before the Lake Mary City Commission appeared to be simple: Approve a resolution authorizing CALNO (Council of Local Governments in Seminole County) to develop an interlocal agreement for the establishment of a local government access television channel in Seminole County.
It was subsequently approved, but not without controversy.
The item had been discussed during a previous Lake Mary commission meeting but no decision was made. It was requested that the matter be brought back again.
Commissioner Gary Brender, the city's representative to CALNO led off the proposal by explaining that it would provide all citizens of Seminole County with access to the workings and

Hard work brings victory for CECF

By COURTNEY LEFFEW
Herald Correspondent

Hard work and determination brought Seminole High's Cooperative Education Club of Florida (CECF) nothing but victory.

Last month, CECF club members left for a four-day state competition in Kissimmee. The six members who placed first at districts were able to attend along with the club's advisor Mary Cragar.

State competition started bright and early Friday morning. The difficult part was making it through round one. By 3 p.m., Seminole had gotten the news that all six members had made it into finals in their individual categories. The mutual feeling among the group was excitement just to be chosen out of categories which included 40 to 50 students from other schools.

Of course, winning first place was not far from their minds either. "The only way of knowing whether competitors left with a trophy or just memories came at the awards banquet Saturday night."

Dana Wheaton brought home a first place trophy in Word Processing and placed third in Dental.

Wheaton, president of the CECF, said this about her performance in the dental category. "That was the one I wanted to win first place for, considering that's the field I'm going into. The hard thing was not knowing what you were up against. I had to take the test very early in the morning and then go to my other events and I feel that played a part in not winning first."

Cheri Cerce took home two third place trophies in Accounting and Word Processing.

Kristen Diener got honorable mention in Child Care and Courtney Leffew received honorable mention in Public Speaking. Both also received plaques for their accomplishments.

Seminole High also took home a superior ranking on their club video. "The whole trip gave the club a chance to meet new people, work on their business skills, and get away from the pressures of school."

Feast in honor of a good event

Today is...
NICK PFEIFAUF
Staff Writer

Here's a look back for Friday and Saturday, May 16 and 17.

But, first of all, don't forget the Taste of Oviedo, this Saturday, sponsored by the Greater Oviedo Chamber of Commerce, adjacent to Oviedo City Hall. It runs from 10 a.m. until 7 p.m. Of historical significance? Well, this is the third annual event of its kind in Oviedo, and each year is better than the previous year, so eventually, we can call this an historical event.

Here's a nasty story from the past (At least I think it is). On May 16, 1862, Gen. Benjamin

Butler, military governor of New Orleans after the capture of the city in the war, issued a statement which became known as "Woman's Order."

He said, "As the officers and soldiers of the United States have been subjected to repeated insults from women (calling themselves ladies) of New Orleans, when any female shall show contempt for the United States, she shall be regarded as a woman of the town, plying her avocation."

Not even his own troops thought the edict was in good taste, and through their efforts, the general was dismissed as military governor within seven months.

Saturday, the third Saturday in May, is officially Armed Forces Day, by presidential proclamation. It was originally Army Day back in 1936 but it has been the combined event since 1950.

Saturday is also the beginning of Safe Boating Week. And here's an observance many people relish from year to year.

Friday begins International Pickle Week.

As I have said many times in the past, to get people to come to a particular city, all it takes is a relatively unusual event conducted year after year, and publicized throughout the nation. Case in point Saturday in Webster Springs, West Virginia, a relatively small town, they expect a turnout of possibly 10,000 to 15,000 people. The event is the annual Webster County Woodchopping and turkey calling championships.

And as another example in Intercourse, Pa. lives there is such a town! Saturday is a Rhubarb Festival, with contests for rhubarb recipes and rhubarb pie tossing competition. They expect 12,000 to 15,000 people.

An event such as this takes organizers' committees funding and space at which to gather the people, but above all it takes a good publicist. If you can't get the word spread, no one will know about the event, and no one will show up.

In historical birthdays, actor

Henry Fonda was born May 16, 1905, and Hutton Gwinnett was born May 16, 1735. He was a signer of the Declaration of Independence, born in England. His gravesite is in a park in Savannah, Georgia, one of the city's historic sites.

Wladziu Valentino Larianec, pianist with a candlabra and a brother named George was born May 16, 1919. Baseball player and manager Billy Martin was born May 16, 1928.

For present birthdays, on Friday, actor Pierce Brosnan turns 45, singer Janet Jackson is 31, Olympic gold medal gymnast Olga Korbut turns 42, tennis player Gabriela Sabatini turns 27, actress Debra Winger turns 42 and Studs Terkel turns 85.

For Saturday, Sugar Ray Leonard, former boxer, turns 41, basketball player Danny Manning hits 31, and actress Maureen O'Sullivan turns 80. Did you know she first came to prominence playing Jane in the old Tarzan movies.

A movie to make you think things through

David Frazier
Screen Tests

Night Falls on Manhattan (R): I took an ethics course in college that was one of the most difficult and fascinating classes I ever had. There were no right or wrong answers. It tested and tasked the mind to thoroughly consider all facets of a given situation always with an open mind. Sean Casey, the distraught main character of writer-director Sidney Lumet's Night Falls on Manhattan, is confronted with a situation like the ones dealt with in Ethics class. Yet for Sean it could only be as easy as a class, but it's not.

What looks to be an open and shut case for the young attorney working for the New York City's D.A. office turns out to be a trial that could change his whole career let alone his life. Casey (Andy Garcia), in a career making case, must convict a notorious drug dealer/cop killer. On the surface, this case seems too easy, but looks can be deceiving. The defendant's attorney, Sam Vigoda (Richard Dreyfuss), believes that his client was involved with dirty cops and they tried to apprehend him because the dealer would not accept an increase in security payment.

Casey wins the case, but the subject of dirty cops still lingers. The unfortunate heart attack of D.A. Morgensen (Ron Leibman) jettisons Casey as his successor for the candidacy which Casey, still gleaming from his major victory, wins easily. Once in office, the Internal Affairs Department opens and asks Casey to pre-sue it as his first course of action as D.A. Names come up and the list eventually leads to the partner of his 37 year veteran father (Ian Holm). Casey is devastated to learn this bit of news, but the line is not drawn there. Ultimately, Casey will have to choose between his work ethics and loyalty to his family. He finds that he must either sacrifice his ideals or his soul.

Sidney Lumet (The Verdict) creates a solid piece of entertainment here. It is familiar yet reliable ground for him. The law and Lumet go together much like mobsters and Scorsese. He examines loyalty, morality and ethics here posing the question to his audience what would they give up in order to make the situation right. There is supposed to be no correct answer here. I am sure that Lumet is also making some statement about the law system in general, but that is not as significant. I mean we already know that the system is flawed without it being rehashed in every movie about the subject. Lumet does not pound the point; he merely suggests that flaws exist.

Andy Garcia (When a Man Loves a Woman) overacts here. In fact, I think he does his best impression of Pacino. Like Al, Garcia likes to punch his yelling sequences. Ironically, Lumet has worked with Pacino in Dog Day Afternoon.

Now Lumet gets to work with his shadow, Lena Olin (Havana) plays Casey's love interest, but it is a lean character unsuitable to her talent. The treasures are veteran actors Ian Holm, Richard Dreyfuss and Ron Leibman all of which deserve supporting nods from the academy. Holm (The Fifth Element) dawns a Brooklyn accent and his scene in the hospital intensive care unit could be his most moving scene in the movies. Dreyfuss (Mr. Holland's Opus) --looking like a facsimile of real life attorney Alan Dershowitz-- is wonderful as an attorney tired and sick of the questionable law system he has dedicated his life to. And Leibman (Norma Rae) is a rocket of energy as D.A. Morgensen.

Ethical situations saturate ever day life. It is part of our maturation as human beings as to how we handle each problem. There may be no correct solution. It is a matter of individual character. Night Falls on Manhattan asks us to weigh its main character's actions but not to pass judgment. Hats off to Lumet. Like a good ethics teacher, he has a tendency to make you think. Three stars (out of four).

Work is under way to build clinic

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — It was a gala event Thursday morning when ground was officially broken at the site of the new Community Health Care Clinic, on SR-415 just north of E. SR-46.

Construction of the new 20,000 square foot primary care medical facility is expected to take approximately 10 months. It is designed to serve Sanford, Seminole County, Southwest Volusia County, East Orange County, Lake County and West Brevard County.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture is leading $2,363,000 to help the program. Acting State Director for USDA Rural Development Ronald Whitfield said the effort is part of USDA's ambitious national program to help rural areas build and enhance essential community facilities.

"Buildings such as hospitals and health care centers provide more than just the service they house," said Jill Long Thompson, Under Secretary for USDA Rural Development. "In rural areas where neighbors often live miles apart, these facilities help build a sense of community and enrich the lives of everyone, adults and children in the vicinity."

The Central Florida Family

Officials at the groundbreaking for Sanford's new Community Health Clinic Thursday, left to right, Ronald Whitfield, State Director of Rural Development with the Department of Agriculture, Dennis Cahill, Gretchen Mason, chairwoman of the Central Florida Family Health Center board of directors, and Sanford Mayor Larry Dale.

Health Center, formerly the Central Florida Community

Clinic has reportedly outgrown its present facility on S. Park Avenue, and the new facility on SR-415 will allow them to provide medical services to a larger number of low income families.

Can't we all just get along

It's an old line. You get more flies with honey. Yet people seem intent on trying to nail that flyswatter through the air. It may make them look more impressive but they often accomplish nothing.

Try swinging at a wasp or hornet. They'll turn their aim toward you immediately and you end up only making it more angry.

We're talking about the way people are often conducting themselves during commission and board meetings.

Many citizens believe the only way they can get government to act is to attend a meeting, find an opportunity to speak, then shout and yell.

Unfortunately, such action often comes bouncing back in a similar manner.

On the other hand, there are times when persons sitting at the main table or behind the commission bench, have a tendency to get irritated and lash out at someone in the audience. This, as well, most often comes bounding back.

It's almost impossible to control one's temper all the time, especially in periods of stress such as during a government meeting. But if we ever expect to see logical action taken, which will serve the general public in the best possible way, people had better learn to exercise better control.

Even without the expressed anger, there is also a problem with "butting in." When someone is making a presentation, allow them to finish rather than attempting to respond in the middle of a vocal sentence or paragraph. While this is not a direct expression of anger, it often leads to it. "Don't interrupt me, I have the floor." We have heard that from people in the audience, and people at the podium.

Another action which often produces anger is making demands. We hear members of the public tell a commission, "I DEMAND to know what you are going to do. I want an answer right now."

In response, we hear members of our commissions tell people who speak on a subject, "You don't demand anything. This matter is not on the agenda and we are not going to discuss it."

What we are suggesting is that people, government officials and members of the public, exercise a better attitude. Be ladies and gentlemen, and act in a civilized manner toward each other.

Let our government meetings take place without shouting, the flailing of hands, angry words, interruptions, and uncalled-for demands.

We would all be better off if this could be brought about.

Innocence lost in Edenton, N.C.

A law book publisher ought to commission a casebook illuminating the worst systemic violations of due process in American courts since the denials of fundamental fairness to labor unions decades ago. When that happened, some unions were broken. In these current cases -- defendants charged with sexually abusing children in day-care centers -- individual lives are broken. Anyone accused of that crime will never be the same, whether he or she is acquitted or not.

A prototype of this unchecked prosecutorial zeal is the Little Rascals case in North Carolina -- now in its eighth year in the courts. Little Rascals was the name of a day-care center in the once idyllic town of Edenton. Interviews with the defendants and hostile townspeople -- and events in the courtroom -- have been documented by Orla Bikel for PBS' "Frontline" in two riveting programs, "Innocence Lost" and "Innocence Lost: The Verdict." A third, "Innocence Lost: The Plea," will be broadcast on "Frontline" on Tuesday, May 27.

The trial of the day-care center's owner, Bob Kelly, lasted more than eight months. By the end, as the Bikel documentary points out, "There had been no conclusive medical evidence, no physical evidence and no eyewitnesses." And no basis for a child's charge that Kelly had shot a baby in the day-care center.

The police officer who was the first to interview the children testified that "she had destroyed, lost or erased every original document or tape she had, and she seldom remembered what questions she had asked the children to elicit their responses." Bob Kelly was sentenced to 12 consecutive life sentences.

"Innocence Lost: The Plea" details what has happened to all the defendants since then. As time went on, some were offered plea bargains, a strange development, as one of them said. If he was the monster described by the prosecution, why would they let him loose on the streets?

One reason for the plea bargain may have been that the increasing publicity -- particularly Orla Bikel's "Frontline" series -- had created some doubts, inside and outside North Carolina, as to the fairness of the trials.

While the prosecutions went on, marriages were torn apart, children lost a parent for long periods of time, and were shunned by former friends in Edenton. One defendant, after 3-1/2 years in prison, was able to get out on bail. Others stayed behind bars. Even Bob Kelly, convicted of 99 sexual abuse charges out of 100, was offered a plea bargain. He refused. "I have to raise my children by example," he said. "I did nothing wrong."

In 1995, the Supreme Court of North Carolina affirmed a decision by the Court of Appeals that overturned the verdicts of Bob Kelly and Dawn Wilson, ordering a new trial for them.

America's banking industry has undergone a near revolution during the Clinton presidency.

Bill, Hugh rewrite the banking rules

WASHINGTON--America's banking industry has undergone a near revolution during the Clinton presidency. But hardly anyone seems to have noticed.

So it's rather surprising that June 9, 1997--the day landmark interstate bank branching laws will become effective--approaches with little fanfare. Interstate banking will allow banks to shed the restrictions of state lines and expand nationally. Financial institutions will be able to operate a single, national bank rather than independent branches in each state.

With branches already in place in multiple states across the country, several bank holding companies are poised to become lucrative "national" banks when the new law kicks in next month.

Whether or not this will be good for consumers is still open to debate. What is certain, however, is that the mammoth national banks will make a fortune. And no financial institution stands to benefit more than Charlotte, N.C.-based NationsBank, whose president and CEO, the wily Hugh McColl Jr., is largely credited with engineering this quiet revolution.

Since 1992, McColl, a former supporter of both George Bush and Ross Perot, has forged a close relationship with President Clinton. The president has been the banker's main ally in pressing for major banking legislation, such as interstate bank branching, which passed in 1994.

McColl was once called "the most enlightened banker in America" by Clinton. Banking sources have referred to him as "Clinton's right hand," an 800-pound gorilla, and "the first person" Clinton calls when he "wants to talk to banker."

McColl has made several visits to the White House, shared a sky box with the president at the 1994 NCAA championship basketball game in Charlotte, stayed up, according to Clinton, "half the night" discussing banking issues with the president, and, more recently, attended one of the controversial fund-raising coffees held at the White House during the 1996 campaign.

Back in the summer of 1992, when the Bush-Clinton-Perot presidential campaign was in full gear, it would have been nearly impossible to predict the relationship that would develop between McColl and Clinton. During those summer months, McColl made phone calls to several select individuals, encouraging them to support Perot. The previous spring, the influential banker, who had been an occasional dinner guest at the Bush White House, donated $1,000 to the Bush/Quayle campaign.

It wasn't until October of 1992, in the final weeks of the campaign, that McColl became a Clinton supporter. After a breakfast meeting between the two that month, the banker gave Clinton an 11th-hour endorsement. According to the Center for Public Integrity, McColl quickly donated $1,000 to the Clinton/Gore campaign. Once Clinton was elected, McColl gave the maximum allowable donation of $5,000 to the Clinton/Gore transition team.

It's impossible to know exactly what was said at the breakfast meeting. Suffice it to say Clinton, who had previously hedged on interstate banking, has been an ardent supporter of the banking legislation ever since. And McColl, in turn, has been a devout supporter of the President.

Bailey Marie is going to Harvard

BOSTON--Bailey Marie Theresa Maggore is going to Harvard next fall.

This announcement does not come from the college admissions office. The 10-month-old girl isn't quite that precocious.

It comes, rather, from a California courthouse. Last Tuesday, a family law commissioner in Long Beach ruled that Bailey could move to the Cambridge campus with her mother, Gina Ocon, even if it meant traveling out of easy visiting range from her father, Tommaso Maggore.

Bailey's custody case has become the media event of the moment--argued over from the "Today" show to "Dateline" to talk radio--because it fell smack dab into the wrestling ring of post-family life.

It raises the issues and the ire inherent in tales so common these days that they are known generically by divorce lawyers as "move away" cases. Doesn't a custodial parent, usually a mother, have the right and responsibility to pursue a separate, better, future for herself and children wherever it leads? Doesn't a noncustodial parent, usually a father, have the right and responsibility to maintain connections with his kids?

How do we reconcile these rights? And how on earth do we assess something as elusive as the best interests of the child?

No one case is wholly typical. Gina and Tommaso, both 21, were never married. The daughter of a teen-age mother, Gina achieved her way to a full Harvard scholarship. Back home after her freshman year, she had a romance with Tommaso, the son of restaurant owners.

When Gina became pregnant, she dropped out of college and lived with Tommaso and his family. But three months after Bailey was born, the couple broke up. Mother and daughter went on welfare.

Tommaso, a waiter for the family restaurant who had steady contact with his daughter, had a few strikes against him in any court of public opinion. He hadn't paid support. He had a couple of drinking arrests.

But when Gina decided to return to Harvard, this father felt sure that she was "trying to leave me out of the picture." He sued, claiming that he and his parents could care for Bailey better than Gina and her day care.

In such cases, the belief that single mothers should be free to follow their opportunities conflicts with the equally fierce belief that single fathers should remain connected to their children. Single mothers feel that it's wildly unfair to have their freedom limited by the old ties of dead marriages. Single fathers feel outraged at being turned into "Disney dads."

When these angry parents turn to the courts the results are often as confused as our feelings. In California, the law now seems to favor the custodial parent's right to decide where to live. In New York, on the other hand, the courts seem to favor the noncustodial parent's right to visitation.

But judges everywhere are expected to make decisions that would give Solomon a headache. How hard is it for the noncustodial parent to visit? Is the custodial parent moving for good or frivolous reasons? Will "the best interest of the child" be served by moving for a new job, school, or second marriage? Or by staying in closer contact with the other parent?

In Bailey's case, moreover, the court essentially ruled that Harvard fare was better than welfare. A mother's Harvard degree would be in the daughter's best interest.

There was some sense in this, but just enough elitism to give the most supportive single mother pause. After all, most custody decisions that hinge on class--a bigger house, a better neighborhood--are biased toward dads. I would not like to compare the apples and oranges of a Harvard educated mother against, say, proximity to grandparents.

Any way you look at it, the courts are too often asked to micromanage the lives of families that have fallen apart. "Move away" cases are now part of this escalating demand.

But in reality, the law can't force a noncustodial father like Tommaso to visit. It can't order a father to stay in the city with his child. It can't force him to relocate to another city to join the child. Why then should it be able to force a custodial parent to stay put?

In the same sense, the courts can't keep parents under the same roof, even in "the best interests of the child." How can they keep them on the same coast for the sake of that child?

It's not easy to be a long-distance father. Nor is it easy to be a single mother juggling school and child care on her own. Over the long haul we hope for some rough sharing of the pleasures and duties of parenting. But sometimes parents need traveling papers.

This is such a time for two 21-year-old parents. Gina Ocon has been and is the primary and responsible parent.

meetings of various committees and boards of local government including the county and the school board.

"What this is," he explained, "is a request for the various entities to look at the feasibility of the project. If the feasibility proves that it's not worth it, the whole proposal will be dropped."

He continued, "Between all of these governments and the county, there is a tremendous amount of equipment which will be needed, and together we could do this."

Brender added that in addition to commission and board meetings, the special TV government channel could also have scrolled information regarding when meetings will be held and what may be on the agendas.

if we don't like it, we will have the ability to deny it."

"The government has no business being in the television business," Sawyer said. "And if the school board finds this would be so valuable, let them pay for it."

Brender again responded, "The school board cannot possibly fill the entire 24 hours a day of programming. The idea is to spread it out to all local governments. Maybe with the cooperation of all of us, we could provide this day-long programming."

Sawyer responded that she could still not support the request until more facts concerning the proposal were revealed.

Commissioner Thom Greene also objected to the concept of asking the city to support a resolution, even though it only called for a study of the concept at the present time.

In a document prepared for the meeting, Lake Mary City Manager John Litton had reported that, as of the meeting, the cities of Altamonte Springs, Longwood and Winter Springs had adopted the resolution, Casselberry postponed the matter and Oviedo has denied it.

The Sanford City Commission has not yet taken it under consideration.

When Commissioner Gary Brender moved to approve the resolution for the feasibility study, Mayor Dave Meador suggested it be done by roll-call.

Meador joined Brender and Commissioner George Duryea in voting in favor of the resolution, while Sawyer and Greene voted against it.

Brender said he would pass the information along to CALNO, but at the commission's request, would indicate the split vote and the objections which were made.

Music recital

SANFORD — Two Sanford residents will appear in a joint musical recital this Sunday afternoon at Rollins College in Winter Park. Morgan Aiken, a Rollins Junior, a voice major, will present eight selections. She is the daughter of the late Dick Aiken, a prominent soloist for many years in Sanford and throughout Central Florida.

Presenting a piano sonata by Beethoven as well as other selections, and accompanying Miss Aiken, will be another Sanford resident, Roderick Gorby.

The recital is scheduled to begin at 4 p.m. Sunday, May 18, in the Rogers Room of Keene

Hall, on the Rollins campus.

There is no charge for admission and a reception will follow.

Planning meeting

LAKE MARY — The Lake Mary Planning and Zoning Board will meet Tuesday, May 20. Items on the agenda include matters pertaining to a proposed park west of I-4, Crystal Lake Winter Homes, Suntech Commerce Park off Lake Emma Road, expansion of St. Peter's Episcopal Church, a site plan for a Petaluma store on Lake Mary Boulevard next to Home Depot, and sidewalk requirements along un-paved roads.

The meeting is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. in the commission chambers of Lake Mary City Hall, 100 N. Country Club Road.

senior year. They must have at least a 2.0 grade point average. They must have had no disciplinary action taken against them. They must have no felony or misdemeanor convictions involving moral turpitude. And their parents must have attended at least one PTA meeting during the school year.

The only other proviso is that the parents must pay the insurance on the vehicle their youngsters drive home. The sheriff's office pays the registration fees.

The students made their selections from the Tracer, a 1988 Dodge Dynasty, a 1988 Cadillac Coup de Ville, a 1988 Chevrolet Cavalier, a 1986 Mitsubishi pick up truck and a 1987 Grand Am.

The students bounced nervously in their spots as Dede Schaffner, representing the Foundation for Seminole County Public Schools, reached into the blue light cover to select a name.

"Adam Jones, Lake Mary High School," Schaffner read from the first piece of paper.

News straying from the Tracer, he accepted the key from the sheriff and went to his car and started it as the other students remained for the ritual drawings.

One at a time, the students' names were drawn and the cars were selected.

- Talia Marder from Lake Brantley High School took the Dynasty
- Joshua Murdock of Lyman High School chose the Cavalier
- Nicholas Roy of Lake Howell High took the Grand Am
- Claudette Rambissoon of Seminole High School selected the Cadillac

- Andrew Buffington of Oviedo High took the pick up truck

Adam said he'd never even heard of the Good Student Incentive Program until Under-sheriff Steve Harriett walked into his classroom last week and congratulated him on winning a car.

He said he is an average student with a 2.1 grade point average who takes part in band activities.

"It wasn't like I was working toward this," he said. "This was totally and completely unexpected."

Why the Tracer?

"I was just looking for something with a manual transmission for better gas mileage," he explained.

Claudette Rambissoon, who will graduate from Seminole next week, also had her hopes set on the Tracer, but took the Cadillac when it was practically the only one left.

"It's so big," she whispered when she slid behind the wheel for the first time, making a face that was a cross between a grimace and a smile.

She also had no idea that the sheriff's office had such an incentive program for students, but she said she was glad for the "nice graduation present."

Her 3.5 grade point average put her well above the minimum requirements for the program, but she said cars certainly didn't figure into her hard work.

"It just happened," she said. Her father Steve, who describes Claudette and her sister Suzette, a college freshman, as "the best kids I've ever seen," said he had planned to buy Claudette a car to take to college.

"Now I don't have to," he said. According to Estlinger, over 100 students met the criteria for the program this year. One student was selected from each school to participate through an earlier drawing.

during the five month operation have already been expelled from school, he said.

The operation was part of a "security audit," Estlinger explained.

"We wanted to get into the schools to take a look at weapons, gang activity and drugs in the schools," he noted.

The undercover agents have been in the schools posing as students for five months. They blended in with the students and took part in many activities with them.

The CCIB agents purchased marijuana, cocaine, LSD and Ecstasy from the suspects. Most were charged with sale and delivery of a controlled substance.

One Altamonte teen and his father were also charged with cultivation of marijuana when a search warrant was served at their residence and a small crop of the plants were discovered in an indoor grow room.

Estlinger said the agents made 48 drug transactions both on and off school property during the time of the operation. Some of the drug dealers were students and some were parents.

No teachers were arrested in the operation.

The sheriff said he was pleased with the way the operation was conducted and with the way in which school district officials cooperated with law enforcement officials.

"I think this was a very successful operation because we had such cooperation from school administrators," he said. "I was very pleased with the way this worked out."

NASA airs how molecular gears work

From Staff Reports

A technical paper sponsored by NASA and recently accepted by the journal "Nanotechnology" explains how molecular-sized gears might work.

"Thanks to stimulation of molecular-sized gears by a NASA supercomputer, hope is growing that products made of thousands of tiny machines that could self-repair or adapt to the environment can ultimately be constructed," said Al Globus, a co-author of the paper.

Authors are Jie Han, Al Globus, Richard Jaffe and Glenn Dearsdorf of NASA's Ames Research Center, Mountain View, CA.

Researchers have simulated attaching benzene molecules to the outside of a nanotube to form gear teeth, explained Globus. Nanotubes are molecular-sized pipes made of carbon atoms. "You also need a cooling system for gears. We used a supercomputer to simulate successful cooling of molecular-sized gears with helium and neon gases," he explained.

To "drive" the gears, the computer stimulated a laser that served as a motor. "The laser creates electric field around the nanotube. We put a positively charged atom on one side of the nanotube, and a negatively charged atom the other side. The electric field drags the nanotube around like a shaft turning," he said.

"These gears would rotate fast at about 100 billion turns per second or six trillion rotations per minute (rpm)," he added. The gears that Globus and others have simulated with computers would be about a nanometer across. A nanometer is one-billionth of a meter.

One practical use of nanotechnology would be to build a "matter compiler," said Creon Levitt, a Globus colleague at Ames. "We would give this machine, made of nano parts, some raw materials, like natural gas, for example. A computer program would specify an arrangement of atoms, and the matter compiler would arrange the atoms from the raw materials to make a macro-scale machine or parts," Levitt added.

"A matter compiler is not just science fiction. In the biotechnology industry, there are already 'peptide synthesizers' in use. You give them a sequence of amino acids you want produced, and the machine will create those peptides. But you can't make rockets out of peptides," he said. A peptide is a sequence of amino acids.

"A step along the way to make an aerospace matter compiler is an even smaller hypothetical machine, the 'assembler/replicators,'" said Globus. "The replicator can make a copy of itself, just as a living cell can duplicate itself."

"We would like to write computer programs that would enable assembler/replicators to make aerospace materials, parts and machines in atomic detail," he said. "Such materials should have tremendous strength and thermal properties." Further information on these materials can be obtained from the researcher's Internet page at URL:

http://www.nas.nasa.gov/nanotechnology.
An image of the nanogear from a computer simulation is available at the following URL: http://ccf.arc.nasa.gov/dx/bas ket/atonesetc/Nanpix.html.

A long range goal, according to Globus, is to make materials that have radically superior strength-to-weight ratio. Diamond, for example, has 60 times the strength-to-weight ratio of titanium. A second goal is to make "active" or "smart" materials.

"There is absolutely no question that active materials can be made," Globus explained. "Look at your skin. It repairs itself. It sweats to cool itself. It stretches as it grows. It's an active material," he said.

Globus strongly emphasized that making real nanomachines may be decades away, but he said that computer simulations suggest the tiny machines are possible after engineers learn to build nanoparticles and to assemble nanomachines.

The nanogear and other related Ames research is a collaboration between the Ames Numerical Aerospace Simulation Systems Division and the Ames Computational Chemistry Branch.

Nutrition critical for astronauts

Thirty years ago, astronauts pumped applesauce from a toothpaste-like tube, popped gelatin-coated cubes, mixed freeze-dried powders and squeezed various semi-liquid foods from aluminum tubes for dinner.

Today astronauts enjoy many of the same foods in the same form as earth-bound diners. Through the work of NASA food scientists and nutritionists, today's space shuttle astronauts eat scrambled eggs, yogurt, chicken cacciatore, spaghetti, fresh bread and brownies. Some of these foods must be prepared using special processing techniques. No refrigerator or freezer is on board the Space Shuttle, yet even higher standards of food safety must be met through uses of other technologies such as irradiation. Intermediate-moisture foods, thermally-stabilized foods and rehydratable foods.

"Intermediate-moisture" is a method of preserving dried fruits and beef by restricting the amount of water available for microbial growth, but retaining enough moisture to give the food a soft texture. These foods are ready to eat without having to rehydrate.

CONSUMER FOCUS

Puddings, fruits, tuna, salmon, and other foods that would be eaten out of cans, or from the flexible retort pouches are heat processed to destroy harmful microorganisms and enzymes. Irradiation of frozen, packaged meats for NASA programs has been approved by FDA.

All foods chosen for space missions are thoroughly analyzed by the staff at the Food Systems Engineering Facility at the Johnson Space Center in Houston. Foods are added to the menu only after they have undergone all the necessary research and development and are approved for flight.

Nutrition is critical. "In space, your body is under a lot of stress", according to Charles Bourland, Ph.D., subsystem manager for space station food at NASA. Astronauts can have problems with motion sickness, dehydration and weight loss during the first few days of a mission. Diets are designed to supply each shuttle crew member with the Recommended Dietary Allowances (RDA) of vitamins and minerals necessary to perform tasks in the environment of space.

Astronauts going on a mission select their menus from a standard food list. The foods are then prepared and packaged for the mission. Astronauts are allowed to take along some of their favorites in a fresh food locker. However, foods that crumble easily, such as one favorite - pecan shortbread cookies, are not allowed. Imagine the problems floating food crumbs could cause during scientific experiments!

The effects and risks involved in space flight include changes in body composition. Motion sickness occurs in a substantial percentage of astronauts. This usually lasts from 3 to several days. Food and fluid intake are decreased. Water losses from the body occur partly from this initial decreased intake and also from headward shifts of fluid in weightlessness and subsequent loss.

Weight loss occurs, partially due to this water loss, but also due to fat and protein loss. The protein loss occurs partly due to atrophy and postural muscles in zero gravity. If fat loss occurs it is due to calorie deficit (output is greater than intake).

Calcium loss from bones in weightlessness is a complex process. The Soviets have proven that with several measures, weightlessness up to 1 year can be tolerated without fractures from bone loss.

As you can see, food and nutrition is a food science that is not only challenged with meeting the needs of those on Earth's surface, but those who travel out from the planet. You might be interested in choosing this as a career or telling others about the different facets of family and consumer science.

Addicts need space, time for recovery

Dear Readers,

Last week we heard from the wife of an alcoholic who keeps falling for the line. "It will be different this time." Several of you asked, "How can you tell if or when they (alcoholics) really mean what they are saying?"

The best thing you can do is give the person with the problem both space and time to create and learn new behaviors. As Craig Nakken, author of THE ADDICTIVE PERSONALITY says, "For recovery to be genuine the recovering person must dedicate his or her life to achieving honesty, which is the opposite of addiction. Practicing addicts fear honesty. Recovering addicts may not like

FAMILY COUNSELOR

honesty, but they accept honest criticism."

Honesty allows us to have intimate relationships with others. Honesty is not about finding someone or something to blame for our misbehavior. It's about self-monitoring and sharing ourselves with others.

Dishonesty causes isolation as the alcoholic attempts to hide his or her dishonesty.

Honest people work toward and ultimately learn to be open and genuine. They will seek help when they want to act out. Honesty does not involve blame. It allows the sharing of beliefs and ideas in a non-judgmental way.

In early recovery, honesty is very hard work. Most of the challenge lies in being honest with oneself. As people recover, they learn they are victims of their own lies. As recovery continues, people aim for progress, not perfection. They learn that it's OK to make mistakes and to be honest with themselves and others about it. When we are honest with ourselves, we see the world as it is.

The pay-off for recovery is in finally being able to form healthy relationships. If the alcoholic/addict does not learn to form healthy relationships based on honesty, both with themselves and others, they will most likely return to their addiction or replace one addiction for another. Either way, the alcoholic/addict will continue to cause grief and pain to the people who love him.

Adopted son of gay dad is tired of comments that hurt

DEAR ABBY: I am 11 years old. I'm in the sixth grade and I'm adopted. I don't have a mother, but I have two dads. My dad adopted me just after I turned 1 year old because my mother took drugs and didn't take care of me. My dad met his lover when I was 4, and we have lived together since I was 6.

The reason I am writing is for all the people who say bad things about my dad and me. It's usually not the kids at school, it's their parents and some of my teachers. They ask me if it bothers me that I was adopted by a gay man and don't have a mom. Well, it doesn't bother me — only their questions bother me. I love my dad and he loves me. I have a godmother I see every couple of months and she's kind of like a mom to me.

Some people say that living with my dad is going to make me gay, but his parents raised him to be straight and he isn't. My dad was born gay and he can't change who he is. He says you either are or you aren't. He has never told me to like boys (or girls). He says when I am older, I will feel love for somebody, just like he loves John, just like my godmother loves her husband and just like my uncle loves his wife.

Abby, I know a lot of people read your column. Please print my letter so maybe people will think twice before they say hurtful things to people like me. Just because my family is a little different doesn't mean I'm not happy. The Bible even says you should not judge other people.

HAPPILY ADOPTED IN ORLANDO, FLA.

DEAR HAPPILY ADOPTED: Thank you for a wonderful letter. There is an incredible amount of wisdom in that 11-year-old head of yours. May God continue to bless you.

DEAR ABBY: Per your recent request for examples of acts of kindness:

A Washington, D.C., man recently cleaned up and repainted a rusting and neglected police call box in front of his house. He was arrested for defacing government property!

A woman in the Midwest put a quarter in the parking meter of a total stranger. She was arrested for violating her town's parking laws.

A store owner on eastern Long Island put a sign in his window advertising the sale of pumpkins grown in his garden. He was arrested for violating some obscure zoning ordinance, and since his case has generated publicity, police and local officials have engaged in a campaign of harassment against him.

A public-spirited Chicago man who purchased an electric car to fight pollution is now engaged in a legal battle against the state motor vehicle officials, who claim that electric cars can't pass the required emissions test because they don't produce any emissions.

Who was it who said, "No good deed goes unpunished?" P.M. IN HICKSVILLE, N.Y.

DEAR P.M.: According to Brewer's Quotations, "No good deed goes unpunished" is attributed to Oscar Wilde.

I agree that on the face of it, the reactions of the authorities appear unjust. However, before I render a judgment, I would have to know more of the details.

DEAR ABBY: This letter is in response to "Brokenhearted Mother," whose obese son died in his sleep. I want this dear woman to know that the very day after her letter was published, I started attending Overeaters Anonymous meetings. I am in my early 20s and extremely obese. I am painfully aware that without help my life is in serious jeopardy.

Food is an addiction like no other. You can't get away from it, hide it or go cold turkey. It follows you day and night. I have an addiction and I know that I always will have. My only hope is to seek help and support. Hopefully, over time, I will become a thinner, healthier person, but there are no guarantees. I like to say that it is not just about lightening up your body, but also about lightening up your soul.

Again, to "Brokenhearted Mother," I am so sorry for your loss. You did a good thing, however, by getting out the message — "Obesity does kill!"

On a final note: The next time you see a fat person on the street, please show a little compassion. We already know we are fat.

GRATEFUL IN ONTARIO

DEAR GRATEFUL: I hope "Brokenhearted" sees your letter. For those of you who would like to contact Overeaters Anonymous, there are chapters in almost every city. If you have difficulty finding one near you, send a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Overeaters Anonymous World Service Office, P.O. Box 44020, Rio Rancho, N.M. 87174-4020.

PHARMACY TOPICS

By: Abi J. Fakays, R.Ph.

Late nights can raise your blood pressure, the American Journal of Hypertension reports. Staying awake past one's usual bedtime raises blood pressure then--and in the morning, too.

For faster action against genital herpes, Canadian researchers found that famciclovir--taken in double dose at the first sign of a flare-up and for four days following--eases pain and makes sores less contagious.

New diagnostic test can spot mild heart attacks that might otherwise be missed. Testing for cardiac troponin is said to be more precise than EKGs and blood tests alone.

Nitroglycerin and other angina pills work better if the patient's mouth is moistened first. A sip of water--even saliva--helps.

You always get good advice from the pharmacists at Park Avenue Pharmacy. When your doctor prescribes the best, we do the rest.

Remembering past stars of SAC baseball

SANFORD — Watching the high school baseball talent that was on display this year in the Seminole Athletic Conference got us thinking about the early 1990's when Oviedo, Seminole and Lake Brantley produced some awesome players.

It is obvious that players like Matt Krot, Chris Harney, Tanner Brock, Shaun Child, Jay Signorelli, Andy Neufeld, Mike Halaychick, Phillips Eubanks, Brad Jenkins and Chris Louwama all have futures in this game at either the college or professional level.

And you can be assured that there will be scouts everywhere the next couple of years with underclassmen like Bryan Chancellor, Justin Harris, Brian Boehko, Felipe Lopez, Robbie Siltz, Matt Allegra, Josh O'Brien, Scott Ferrell, Jorge Hernandez, David Devito, Jeremy Frost, Ben Knapp, Tim Raines Jr., Paulo Silva, Josh Blanton, Clyde Williams and Chaz Lytle returning.

But let's look back a little bit at some of those young men that started Seminole County toward a resurgence in baseball respectability around the state and nation.

After an ultra-successful career at Auburn University, Oviedo's Mark Bellhorn appears ready to make the next step up to the pro's as he is playing very well at the Triple-A level. And his younger brother, Todd, appears to be following in the same steps at the University of Central Florida. The sophomore was recently named Second Team All-Trans America Athletic Conference.

Lake Brantley grads Jason Varitek, Greg Thomas, Brad Rigby and Jerry Thurston are either playing, or have played, as high as the Double-A level in professional baseball, with Rigby probably ready to make the jump to the Oakland Athletics soon.

But Seminole High School had the most players make an impression.

• David and Rick Eckstein both starred at the University of Florida.

• Scott Ferguson was elected captain of the Georgetown University baseball team this year and was 5-for-9 with four doubles in a career ending season against Notre Dame last weekend.

• Demy Beamon was a starter at Florida A&M University.

• Jeremy Chonat is at Brewton-Parker in Georgia.

• Robbie Morgan is at Stetson.

• Matt Diemer capped a successful senior season with a hit in his final at bat for Taylor College in Indiana.

• Matt Freeman is at Florida Atlantic University.

I know there is a lot of players from Lyman, Lake Mary and Lake Howell that I have not mentioned, but these were the guys that carried their teams to the state tournament.

Speaking of the Eckstein brothers, Florida head coach Lopez gives Rick a lot of credit for the excellent play of the Gator's infield this year. This is Rick's first year as the first base coach for Florida after graduating last year and is expected to get added experience by either coach in the minor league's, the summer college leagues, or run Florida's baseball camps this summer.

And David is closing out his Florida career in outstanding fashion, hitting over .350 again this year and recently set the school record for hits, in addition to being the school leader in getting hit by a pitch and also near the top, if not leading, in all-time stolen bases.

Once again though, the diminutive second baseman was slighted by the Southeastern Conference coaches as he was not selected to the All-SEC first team. In all the time I've been watching baseball I have never seen a better second baseman, well maybe Roberto Alomar, but David doesn't have to take a back seat to anyone.

And when this summer's draft rolls around no one will probably take David. But I will make a bet with anyone that if he is given a shot by someone, he will make it to the major leagues.

No one works harder than him, he runs on and off the field more than Pete Rose used to and he is a team leader. There may be some question about using a wooden bat, but we here that he hit well over .300 last summer swinging the lumber in one of the top summer league's in America.

Diamondbacks rally to eliminate Royals

The Fisher, Laurence, Deen and Fromang Diamondbacks look confident prior to Thursday's game with the D.A.V. Royals and the confidence was well founded as the Diamondbacks edged the Royals 4-3 in seven innings to complete a two-game sweep in the semifinals of the Bambino City Championship Series.

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — The Disabled American Veterans Royals appeared poised to square the semifinals of the Sanford Recreation Department Babe Ruth Baseball Bambino League City Championship Series when they took a 3-0 lead in the top of the third inning at Lakeside Field.

But the National Division champion Fisher, Laurence, Deen and Fromang Diamondbacks did not want to play a third and deciding game on Saturday and rallied to pull out a 4-3, seven-inning victory to eliminate the Royals in two games.

"A good team effort won this game," said Diamondbacks assistant coach Bobby Breum. "We also have the deepest pitching staff in the league that carried us this season."

The Diamondbacks will now face the Enterprise Trucking Braves, which completed a two-game upset sweep of the Railroaders White Sox Thursday night. The first game of

Braves finish off White Sox

By COURTNEY LEFFEW

SANFORD — Backing the underdog has always been a big deal with American sports fans, but being the underdog seldom pays off in a victory.

But the Enterprise Trucking Braves became the exception to the rule Thursday night in the semifinals of the Sanford Recreation Department Babe Ruth Baseball Bambino League City Championships at Roy Hollar Field as the National League runner-ups completed an amazing two-game upset of the Railroaders White Sox 9-8.

The Braves, who won the first game of the best-of-three series 3-0 on Tuesday, were only 9-7 in the regular season and had to win a make-up game just to get into the playoffs, while the White Sox had a league-best 15-1 record during the regular season.

What made things even more amazing in the finale was that the White Sox led 8-0 heading into the bottom of the third inning and still held an 8-4 advantage before the Braves mounted a five-run rally in the fifth inning to pull out the victory.

"Coming into game one having to play a team with such a good record I was very nervous," said Jason Poloski, who had a two-run double in the big fifth inning. "I got on my knees on the field and thanked God because this (win) was a miracle. I had faith in the pitcher though. I was

Gorman saves Pirates in Senior Babe Ruth

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Jobe Gorman came up with the big pitches when he needed to as the Sanford Sports Image Pirates edged the Sanford Florida Sport Wear Braves 5-4 in Sanford Recreation Department Senior Babe Ruth Baseball League action at Zinn Beck Field Thursday evening.

With runners on first and second and only one out and the numbers two and three hitters in the lineup coming to bat for the Braves in the final inning, Gorman got himself together in time to strike out those final two batters and close out the win.

In Senior League action on Saturday, the Altamonte Springs Brewers take on the Sanford Yankees at 3:30 p.m. at Chase Park and the Altamonte Springs Rays battle the Sanford Braves at 4 p.m. at Zinn Beck Field.

The Pirates broke a 0-0 tie in the bottom of the second inning when Gorman doubled in Tomas Berrios, who had reached on an error.

Florida's best lacrosse teams to face off at Disney complex

Special to the Herald

LAKE BUENA VISTA — The top two boys and girls prep lacrosse teams will meet in back-to-back matches at the Florida High School State Lacrosse Championships, Saturday at the Sports Fields at Disney's Wide World of Sports complex. This year's competition marks the first time lacrosse has held varsity sport status in Florida and conducted a state championship.

The girls match will be held at 5 p.m. and will feature undefeated Blahop Moore (17-0) against Cypress Creek (15-2). Blahop Moore doubled the score on Winter Park, 12-6, on Wednesday night to advance to the finals, while Cypress Creek edged Lake Howell 7-6.

The boys championship will match Boca Raton's Saint Andrews School against Lyman High School, which earned a pair of one-goal victories in last weekend's Central Florida qualifier.

"The state championship is a dream come true for all the people who have volunteered their time over the last seven years, teaching the great sport of lacrosse," said Dave Shrum, Lake Brantley head coach and director of the Orlando Lacrosse Foundation.

"Dreams really do come true at Disney," added Shrum. "And it is appropriate that our inaugural championship is being played at Disney's Wide World of Sports complex. I am most excited for the kids. Being a part of this game is something they will never forget."

While the history of lacrosse within the state of Florida is somewhat brief, the sport continues to gain enormous popularity, particularly in the Orlando where the number of high school players has increased from 14 to more than 650 over the last seven years.

In 1990, the Central Florida High School Lacrosse League started with one boys club team at Lake Brantley High School. After a pair of schools added programs in both 1991 and 1992, six more followed suit over the next two years. Since 1990, the number of lacrosse teams has grown to 12 boys and 10 girls varsity teams and six boys and four girls junior varsity squads.

Numbers are expected to rise even further once Winter Springs and Seminole high schools add programs in 1998.

General admission ticket prices for the Florida High School State Lacrosse Championships are $8 for adults ($6.75 for children ages 3-9). With this one low admission price, spectators will also have the opportunity to attend the USA Gymnastics Boys Junior Olympic National Championships, the NBA Jam Van and the Celebration of Softball grand opening event, all exciting events scheduled for competition at Disney's Wide World of Sports complex throughout the weekend.

Tickets for these and all other Disney's Wide World of Sports complex events may be purchased through TicketMaster by calling (407) 839-3900.

Lifting their voices to heaven in Rome

Betty Carter-Gilmartin
Herald Correspondent

SANFORD — Dear Msgr. Colino, "On behalf of the All Souls Catholic Church Choir, I respectfully request that we have the honor of singing the Solemn Mass as the principal choir at the Chair Altar at St. Peter's Basilica in the Vatican at 10:30 on Sunday, April 27, 1997 during our visit to Rome."

Thus began a two year long Pilgrimage for the All Souls Catholic Church Choir, initiated by choral director, Elizabeth Jennings. A response arrived just weeks later.

"September 11, 1995. Dear Ms. Jennings, Thank you for your recent request...I am pleased to confirm that the choir is now scheduled for this opportunity, where the Ordinarium is sung in Gregorian Chant..." This acceptance was received in Sanford from an office in the Vatican by fax.

For the next 19 months the choir sold t-shirts, held dinners, sold raffle tickets and accepted donations to raise $1,995 per person for the trip to Rome. Although individual parishioners supported the choir, the parish itself did not fund the trip. Neither did the Orlando diocese contribute. They were able to raise more than half of what was required.

Along the way, All Souls gathered seven choir members from St. Stephens Catholic Church in Winter Springs, who were relatives of All Souls parishioners. St. Clair Catholic Church in Deltona was to send a choir two weeks before, but the trip was cancelled when that choir couldn't finance a large enough group. They merged with the All Souls group.

All Souls Catholic Church in Sanford is a parish of about 1,300 families, led by Fr. Richard Trout.

The choir that travelled to Rome had representatives from the five adult choirs.

The final choir had a total of 31 members.

Jennings was assisted by her husband, Phillip, a band director at Stonewall Jackson Middle School in Orlando.

Also assisting was Bruce Croteau, who is director of music at St. Francis Assisi in Apopka. Croteau was a third of a three-man tenor group.

Jennings directs the choir with precision, warmth, humor, imagery, repetition, instruction; whatever works to teach the singers to achieve the desired effect.

At a recent rehearsal there was an intense discussion of how to "s-t-r-e-t-c-h 'Alleuia' like silly putty, pulling it out" and instructions to "mark it on your music."

On April 24, the choir left for Rome, returning home May 1. During their stay in Europe, they performed on the 26th in Florence at Holy Trinity Catholic Church, sang at the scheduled high mass on the 27th at the Vatican and sang a formal concert on the 30th.

Perhaps the highlight of their trip was the briefest. They were given 60 seconds to perform accapella for the Pope himself, before an audience of 50,000 people. Given the time constraints, the lack of accompaniment and Europe's love affair with Gospel music, they selected "Promised Land," to perform. This spiritual is fast paced and immediate in grasping the audience.

As with everything exciting, it seemed to end before it began. One of the non-singing members of their group watched the Pope's face during the performance. The choir was pleased to learn later, that the Pope appeared captivated during their performance.

The choir did decide they would travel again, in two years, to Germany or Austria, but each member will pay their own way. No more fundraisers, with one exception, the sale of cassette tapes of their performances.

June 10, a cassette tape of their concert in Rome, plus four other numbers, will be available for $10.

For more information or to order a tape, call the church office at 322-3795.

Is snoring remedy effective

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm an 82-year-old woman who — I am told — snores very loudly. My doctor wants me to use "Breathe Right" nose strips. Should I see a specialist?

DEAR READER: Snoring has many causes. Often it is the result of sagging tissue at the back of the throat. Sometimes it is worsened by mouth-breathing at night.

In such instances, plastic adhesive nose strips (which hold the nostrils open so that there is less mouth-breathing) can reduce the severity of the snoring.

I suggest that you try your physician's remedy, which is safe and inexpensive. If the strips don't work, then see an ear-nose-and-throat specialist.

To give you more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Medical Specialists." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10154. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My gynecologist recommended a hysterectomy, because — according to his office notes, which I have read — I have a second-degree cystocele and rectocele, a retroverted uterus, and impalpable adenexae. What on earth is he talking about?

DEAR READER: A cystocele means that your bladder is not suspended properly and is sagging into the vagina. This can cause urinary incontinence and, if severe (third or fourth degree), difficulty with sexual relations.

A rectocele indicates that your rectum, too, is bulging into the vagina. This could cause constipation.

A retroverted uterus is merely tipped backwards. This common condition causes no symptoms or health consequences.

Impalpable adenexae means that your ovaries and Fallopian tubes are not enlarged.

I suspect that your gynecologist advised hysterectomy because your pelvic organs have dropped too low and will, over time, cause you to have the symptoms I mentioned.

Should you feel uncomfortable about facing major surgery, you can obtain a second opinion. From the limited information you supply, however, it doesn't appear that the operation is a necessity.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My healthy 68-year-old husband has a hiatal hernia that causes him flat, even though his doctor has prescribed a variety of medications, including Pepcid, Prilosec and Propulsid. The doctor claims that the hernia is "refractory," and he wants to operate by wrapping muscle around the hernia. Is this safe?

DEAR READER: The area where the esophagus joins the stomach is actually surrounded by two sphincters (muscular valves) that prevent gastric acid from backwashing into the esophagus. In the presence of a hiatal hernia, these sphincters may malfunction, leading to heartburn, indigestion, bloating, and cough.

In most instances, these symptoms can be relieved by prescription acid-reducers, such as the ones you list, in conjunction with simple "tricks," including elevating the head of the bed about 4 inches, staying clear of foods that worsen the heartburn and avoiding large, heavy meals in the evening.

Nonetheless, some patients do not respond satisfactorily to these measures. In such instances, surgery must be considered. The procedure involves tightening the sphincter muscles and repositioning the stomach so that it doesn't protrude through the hernia opening.

Although your husband appears to be a candidate for surgery, I could not recommend this option without becoming more familiar with his case. In general terms, the operation is safe and effective; most patients who have had it are grateful to be free of the symptoms I mentioned.

If your husband's doctor is someone you trust, take his advice. If not, a second opinion (from a gastroenterologist) is in order.

WIN AT BRIDGE

Tricks, not points, win contracts

By Phillip Alder

Students often want to know how many points are needed for a strong two-bid. Really, it isn't so much a matter of points as winners. Ask yourself these three questions: Am I only one trick (or perhaps two tricks) shy of game? If partner tables one well-placed honor, do I want to be in game? Do I have enough defensive tricks that I don't fear the opponents? If you answer in the affirmative to all three, you are worth a two-bid.

Yesterday, I mentioned Martin Emmett, from Hobe Sound, Fla. Today, here is a deal played carefully by his wife, Alice.

Look just at that North hand. What would be your plan for the auction, given that the opponents will retain a respectful silence?

After beginning with a strong two hearts, Martin heard his wife make the negative response of two no trump. Rather than rebid in his four-card suit, Martin — correctly in my view — repeated the main feature of his hand, the virtually solid seven-card suit. However, when Alice showed spades, Martin took control with Blackwood and bid the grand slam.

West led the club king. Alice won with her ace and played a trump to dummy's queen, expecting to claim. However, East's discard meant that play had to continue. Needing a hand entry, Alice cashed dummy's heart ace and ruffed a heart. She continued with a spade to dummy's 10, drew trumps, and tabled her cards as the dummy was high — or if you prefer, dummed her cards as the table was high.
