City Bankrupt Act Is Upheld By Judge Long

Federal Judge Rules Wilcox Law Is Constitutional As Applied To Cities

2 Florida Towns Aided By Ruling

Judge Holds Law Is No Invasion Of The Rights Of State

GAINESVILLE, Apr. 23.—(AP)—Federal Judge A. V. Long, in an opinion on the amended Municipal Bankruptcy Act, today held the act constitutional as applied to Florida municipalities.

Although the opinion was rendered on a petition of Fort Lauderdale for the composition of a plan to refund its bonded indebtedness, Judge Long asserted the decision also applied to a petition by the city of Fort Lauderdale.

He asserted the municipalities were not political subdivisions of the state and hence the act did not invade the sovereignty of the state.

The creditors had attacked the refunding petition on the ground that the act invaded the government of the state, impaired contractual obligations and permitted property to be taken without due process of law.

The amended Municipal Bankruptcy Act was drafted and introduced in Congress by Mark Wilcox of West Palm Beach after his original Municipal Bankruptcy Act had been declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court.

The new act provides that over-bonded cities and counties may obtain relief from excessive indebtedness by going into bankruptcy and affecting settlements with bondholders on an ability-to-pay basis, subject to the approval of the court.

The decision of Judge Long upholding the amended act, it is expected will be appealed.

County Officers Press Campaign On 'Moonshiners'

Pressing a campaign against moonshiners, two men were arrested and a still destroyed near Chuluota Thursday afternoon. Sheriff C. A. Hand said today.

Deputies R. J. Hickam and C. E. Williams, together with O. P. Sloan, Orlando constable, conducted the raid Thursday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock, seizing still and capturing the operators, Leroy and Leon Long, brothers.

The deputies and constable destroyed seven barrels of mash and the still which had about a 50 gallon capacity, Deputy Hickam reported. A small quantity of liquor was also confiscated, he said.

The still was located between Chuluota and Orlando about two miles west of Chuluota. Deputy Hickam stated.

The Long brothers are being held pending trial.

Celery Control Group Lifts Restrictions

350 Cars Estimated Ready To Harvest; Decline In Market Follows Holiday

Since only 50 cars of celery have been estimated as available for shipment from the state during next week, members of the Celery Control Committee last night recommended to the Secretary of Agriculture that no restriction be placed on shipments for next week.

However, all the largest of growers and shippers in the Okeechobee area from which most of the celery will be shipped in the coming weeks, estimating of the available supply of the commodity will be continued through next week.

A number of the top market houses on celery in principal terminals from $1.25 last week to $1.50 in the latter part of this week was characterized by growers and shippers present as a normal return of the market following the holiday season. However, the final movement to market this week is expected to produce a favorable reaction in the price trend.

With truck holdings reported as 200 cars in 16 principal cities yesterday, the market was reportedly dull in most markets with price ranging from $1.00 to $2.50 per crate depending on the quality of the stock. However, this market was seen as more active than the conditions existing Wednesday when holding around 300 cars and continued improvement is anticipated next week.

A break down of celery shipments from various sections of the state showed those to be far the heaviest shipper next week. The estimated shipment from the mucklands in that section was 240 cars with 110 estimated as available in Sarasota, Manatee and Bradenton, only 10 cars estimated as available in the sandlands in the Sanibel section.

Shipments in the Sarasota-Manatee area are expected to fall off considerably this following week which will probably be the clean up week for all celery growers there and will leave the Okeechobee district the sole shipping center, besides the 200 acre in the Oklahoma mud lands near Wewoka.

The condition of the crops for the coming week were reported fair to good since the winds and lack of rain has caused the remaining muckland to no great extent. Approximately 150 cars of celery will roll from Florida this week, with the heaviest shipment posted for Tuesday when a total of 102 cars rolled to market from the different sections, followed Wednesday by shipment of 50 cars. However, daily shipments toward the end of the week declined considerably.

The trend of the market for celery will continue to fluctuate in an effort to clean up the market.

TO SLEEP

Of all the thoughts of God that are
Born inward unto souls afar.
Among the Psalmist's muses deep,
Now tell me if that any is,
The gift on grace, surpassing this—
"He giveth His beloved sleep?"

"Sleep soft, beloved!" we sometimes say,
But have no tune to charm away
Sad dreams that through the eyelids creep;

But never doleful dream again
Shall break the happy slumber, when
"He giveth His beloved, sleep."

O earth so full of dreary noise!
O men, with wailing in your Voices!

O delved gold, the wailers heap!
O strife, O curse, that o'er it fall!
God makes a silence through you all,

"And giveth His beloved, sleep."

And friends, dear friends, when it shall be
That this low breath is gone from me,

And round by bier ye come to weep,

Zot one, most loving of you all,
Say, "Not a tear must o'er her fall!"

"He giveth His beloved, sleep."

Drive More Carefully

Though thoughtful people everywhere are taking cognizance of the rapidly increasing toll of automobile accidents and are adjusting their personal speed limits accordingly, the frightful carnage continues, largely, we believe, as a result of persistent carelessness on the part of a comparatively few people.

Because 76 persons were killed in Florida in highway accidents during the month of March, the largest fatality list for this month in the history of the state, Asher Frank, director of the Florida Safety Council, says "March was truly a bloody month for Florida."

The age of the casualties ranged from a 15 months old baby in the arms of its mother to a pedestrian 76 years old who was killed as he stepped from a bus. Seven died in collisions with trains, and several more when bicycles they were riding were struck by automobiles.

In addition to those killed, more than 2,500 persons in Florida during this one month were injured in traffic accidents, more than 400 of them permanently. Such accidents, if they mean nothing else, mean pain and suffering for the injured, doctor and hospital bills, loss of working time, perhaps of employment, and financial privation for the rest of the family.

Not everyone is going to drive at a reasonable rate of speed. Not everyone is going to drive carefully. Appeals in the press or over the air will never reach everyone. Nor will even stringent laws check everyone. There will always be those that reckless ten percent ever ready to risk their own necks and those of their fellows.

So it behooves those who wish to avoid accidents to drive with such care that they not only do not run into others but also do not let others run into them.

Why The Panay Attack

On board the Panay when it was sunk by Japanese planes was Jim Marshall, Far Eastern correspondent for Collier's magazine, who was seriously injured in the attack. Writing on this subject in the current issue of the magazine, Marshall says that it was deliberate and cold-blooded attack designed to demonstrate to China that the white man is afraid to fight.

"Mid-December, 1937, marked a turning point in world history," Marshall writes in an article called "Farewell to Asia." "What the world heard about and talked about was the bombing and sinking of the U. S. S. Panay and three American merchant ships; the shelling and bombing of three British river gunboats and several merchant ships on the Yangtze.

"But these acts of deliberate warfare—for that is what they were—really marked the end of white-American and British dominance over one-third of the world's people, and the definite triumph of Japan's long fight for the rulership of Asia and nearly one billion Asiatics.

"The attacks on Britain and America war and merchant vessels were nothing less than cold-blooded, calculated actions, designed solely for two purposes: to destroy the remnants of white prestige in the Orient, and to demonstrate to all Asia, that America and the British Empire are afraid to fight Japan."

Marshall states that in keeping with this policy of "humiliation" Japan allowed Americans to visit the Hongkew section of the International Settlement—only at stated hours, and required that even then they must not smoke while passing a Japanese sentry, but must bow to him and say "Good day!" "Even in the main settlement," he adds, "which has been international property for decades, American women are shooed off the narrow sidewalks by strolling Japanese soldiers and civilians, while mobs of Chinese look on and laugh."

Marshall makes it clear that he does not believe the United States should fight for its rights or its commercial undoubtedly being against such a course, and soundly so. "But on the other hand," he says, "we ought to stop talking about 'upholding American rights' in China—first, because the only way to win back our former rights is by war. Being firmly against war, we must realize that, as Americans, we have fewer rights in Asia than the Japanese have on the North American continent."

I WONDER whether it may not be normal and desirable to have some fear in one's life. Civilization has deprived us of so many of the primitive causes for fear that perhaps we are living with one side of our nature unsatisfied. I remember visiting an alligator farm in Florida. The gray reptiles lay shamming sleep, ready at any moment to whack us at with their tails.

"You sho' better take care, mam," our colored guide crooned. "That ol' feller there, he snap you if you don't move quick."

One got an authentic prehistoric fright, trickling all the way down one's back. It felt good.—Clare Leighton, Country Matters (Macmillan)

CANDLELIGHT
By NINA OLIVER DEAN

"What theatre am I in?" There have been many famous last words, some of them really said by great men as they reached the journey's end, others manufactured by clever biographers. There is Stonewall Jackson's "Let us cross over the river," Caesar's "And you, too, Brutus," and Ingoldsby's "Oh God, if there is a God, have mercy on my soul."

I have heard none so strangely striking as those uttered by the giant Russian basso, Feodor Chaliapin, who died in Paris last week. His family gathered around his bed, his once powerful frame wasted by pernicious anemia, his mind clouded as the end approached, suddenly his voice came urgent and strong. "What theatre am I in?" Then, he put his hand to his throat where that great voice used to do his bidding and whispered. "I can't sing here."

"Yes, what theatre are you in, Chaliapin?" Perhaps you hear the music of the spheres. Perhaps you can sing here.

At any rate, there will always be an echo of four singing down the winds of the world. There is a memory of you that still stands triumphant in the center of many stages—six feet four of Russian strength, a huge deep chest, arms like a blacksmith's, a head like a lion's, and that great voice that boomed, and roared, and shook theaters and the hearts of men. To those who heard him, Chaliapin, at the Metropolitan in New York, in the French opera house in London's Covent Garden, in Berlin, Vienna, or Milan, in South America, or in your native Russia, you will still sing here!

Marie said God gave us memory so that we might have "roses in December." Have you ever stopped to think how many of these "roses" have bloomed behind the footlights, and how many lovely moments you owe to the people of the theatre? Do you remember that first play you saw—and that magic breathless instant when the curtain went up with that peculiarly exciting whirling noise, and there beyond it was a new world, a beautiful incredible world of make believe? Do you remember when Jack climbed up the bean stalk into the blue canvas sky and the moon smiled and said, "Good luck?"

Do you remember Christmas pantomimes, the Tony Berg marionettes, and "Little Lord Fauntleroy"? Do you remember when your mother urged you to hear "Madame Butterfly," when the chief thing that you noticed consciously was the baby on the floor waving the American flag, but subconsciously you were drinking in the golden pattern of the music? And now that you are older, don't you cherish many adventures in what Alexander Woollcott calls the "enchanted aisles" of the theatre?

Do you remember Winifred Lenihan in Shaw's "Saint Joan," standing slim and boyish in shining armor in the center of the old Guild Theatre stage—John Barrymore in the black robe and gold chain of Hamlet in the soliloquy speech—Walter Hampden making you forget the grotesque "nes" of Cyrano with the beauty of the Hampden diction and the rhythm of the Rostand lines—and Eleanna Duse, small, and pale with no make up, in "The Dead City," lighting up the curtain with the white flame of her magic?

Do you remember how you heart bounded with Nijinski when he made a great flying leap into the air in "The Spectre and the Rose," how your pulse beat with Pavlova's when her proud little head sank low in "The Swan," and how you stood motionless, praying when you listened to Errol Flynn's "Kouzene" as an echo in the dark after the lights had been turned out in Carnegie Hall?

All of us have had moments when we have been excited by the sweeping force of an artist who lifted us to new heights of emotion, heights that we probably could never have reached alone. These are our theatrical "peaks of Darius." But there is something else too—there is the precious gift of laughter that echoes in the wings of the theatre. Don't you smile, now as you remember a genuine古今 comedy, with a twinkle in his eye, his hat on the back of his head, his jacket like a wild animal, his face furrowed, and his eyes gleaming in the mirth of the audience?

And it isn't just the great stars that bring us joy. How often we have been moved by the quiet, simple, unassuming, and modest man who has a kind word for us, a smile, a touch of his hand, his hat on the back of his head, his jacket like a wild animal, his face furrowed, and his eyes gleaming in the mirth of the audience?

Under the Salic law in force under the French monarchy, women were barred from succeeding to the throne.

TRANSATLANTIC RACE
Strange as it seems, the first two vessels to cross the Atlantic ocean entirely under steam power left Europe a week apart yet arrived at their destination—New York on the same day, exactly 100 years ago today.

The voyages of both ships were brilliant triumphs, as far as expectations were concerned. Neither ship stopped for fuel or for any assistance during the crossing. Both arrived on April 23.

Builders of the Great Western, The Great Western Railway of England, proclaimed their vessel's crossing a financial success.

Disembarking at New York, the Great Western's passengers were greeted with flags and brass bands. Crowds were still on-hand after witnessing the earlier arrival of the Sirius.

One week later the faster Great Western, carrying 152 passengers, left Bristol, England, and set out to overtake its rival.

While the remarkable 12-day trip of the Great Western was considered a fast crossing 100 years ago, now crossings of less than five days are customary.

THE CHAIN DIARY . . .

It's a great gift that theatre folk have—the ability to lift people out of themselves. Jeritza can do it in "Tosca." So can "Grumpy" in "Snow White." In this troubled, distracted world with men of science busily inventing new and wholesale ways to kill men, and nations seeking to climb to a place in the sun over the ravaged wastes of other nations, the importance of escape for a brief moment into a new world cannot be overestimated, a new world that contains both inspiration and laughter. So here's a message of "roses in December" that once bloomed in many theatres for those people across the footlights who can make us cry for the beauty of life and laugh in spite of its tragedy.

Do you remember how you heart bounded with Nijinski when he made a great flying leap into the air in "The Spectre and the Rose," how your pulse beat with Pavlova's when her proud little head sank low in "The Swan," and how you stood motionless, praying when you listened to Errol Flynn's "Kouzene" as an echo in the dark after the lights had been turned out in Carnegie Hall?

All of us have had moments when we have been excited by the sweeping force of an artist who lifted us to new heights of emotion, heights that we probably could never have reached alone. These are our theatrical "peaks of Darius." But there is something else too—there is the precious gift of laughter that echoes in the wings of the theatre. Don't you smile, now as you remember a genuine古今 comedy, with a twinkle in his eye, his hat on the back of his head, his jacket like a wild animal, his face furrowed, and his eyes gleaming in the mirth of the audience?

And it isn't just the great stars that bring us joy. How often we have been moved by the quiet, simple, unassuming, and modest man who has a kind word for us, a smile, a touch of his hand, his hat on the back of his head, his jacket like a wild animal, his face furrowed, and his eyes gleaming in the mirth of the audience?

THE BABE CHANGES MIND—SEES ANOTHER BALL GAME*

Maneuvered by fate into foregoing his pledge never to witness another ball game, Babe Ruth (right) sat in a box at the Polo Grounds in New York and watched the Giants slap the Boston Bees around in the opening game. The Babe had vowed he would boycott baseball because he felt some major league club should hire him as manager. But his appointment to the Sports Committee of the World's Fair made it necessary for him to attend the opening. And here we see him with Col. Jacob Ruppert (left), owner of the Yankees, and Grover Whalen, head of the fair.

IDAHO FLOOD PLAYS JACKSTRAWS WITH LOGS

Huge logs were piled up like jackstraws against an open drawbridge at St. Maries, Idaho, after heavy rain turned the St. Joe river into wild, raging torrents. The log jam was dynamited repeatedly to save the bridge which was swung open to reduce the danger of the logs crushing it. This aerial view was made by the 110th photo section of the Washington state national guard.

You stole two dollars, that would be 24 minutes and that is your sentence." Justice Hicks is shown at right.

Peace Terms Set Out By France, Italy

Valencia region counter-attacked the insurgents on a 16-mile front from Alboacer to Alacsa de Chivert.

The loyalist government at Barcelona, its spirits buoyed by war office bulletin of the stubborn stand below Franco's 47-mile wedge, drafted nearly 180,000 civilians to build fortifications along the "Negrin line" of last defense east of the Ebro and Segre rivers.

Upon this line of steel and concrete, forming a wide arc around all of Catalonia remaining in loyalist hands, will rest the government's hopes of holding Franco from a final victory.

Behind the line, named in honor of Premier Juan Negrin, will be massed 20,000 troops and Catalonia's school-boy recruits of 15 years of age who have been summoned to report for army service. Thus, every able-bodied Catalan from 18 to 45 will be in the last stand defense.

The loyalist resistance at the southern extremity of Franco's coastal hold was fiercest at the outskirts of Alcala de Chivert on the coast and a one mile stretch, 12 miles inland to Alboacer, loyalist advance base which the rebels have been attempting to capture for four days.

BLUEBEARD'S EIGHTH WIFE

Russell Patterson, the internationally famous artist, gives his impressions of "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife," the new comedy, produced and directed by Ernst Lubitsch, which comes tomorrow to the screen of the Ritz Theatre. Claudette Colbert and Gary Cooper head the cast which included David Niven, Edward Everett Horton and Elizabeth Patterson.

Hopalong Cassidy Takes To Trail Again In Effort To Capture Band Of Rustlers

Another fast-moving and exciting Cassidy outdoor action picture, "Cassidy of Bar 20," will play Saturday at the Ritz Theatre, and again, hard-riding William Boyd plays the leading role in a colorful story of romance and rustlers.

In this story, filmed against the beautiful natural background of the plains country, "Hoppy's" old sweetheart, Nora Lane emerges from his past to start him on the road to adventure and peril. Her security and very life are threatened by a notorious cattlerustler, Robert Flake, boss of the wild ranch country in which they live, who is taking advantage of her weakness by gleaning her prize cattle.

Accompanied by his two saddle-mates, Russell Hayden and Frank Darion, "Hoppy" rides into Alamogordo and challenges Flake in his own stronghold. The answer of the rustler chief is to murder Nora's foreman and summon a band of Texas outlaws to help him carry out his plans. Although they know no law but the bullets from their own six-shooters, they meet their match when "Hoppy" sends for his own boys from Bar 20.

The story winds up with an exciting gun-fight around an old Spanish mission. The invading outlaws fight off the boys from Bar 20 until Hopalong discovers a secret underground passage and surprises the Texas bandits from the rear.

Wealthy American Loves Woman Who Spurns Advances

"Mr. Deeds gets taken to town by a gal who met him in Paris!" That, in a nutshell, is the new Claudette Colbert, Gary Cooper comedy, "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife," Paramount picture, which has its local premere tomorrow at the Ritz Theatre.

Set, against the background of Europe's greatest pleasure spots, the picture tells the mad story of an American millionaire who runs through a series of seven wives in rapid succession. He meets his match in a lovely French aristocrat who frankly marries him for his money and tempts her "show" with the most unexpected access.

Cooper, in his role of the blasé Croesus who does not become interested in his wife until he almost loses her, is a new person and bears out the predictions of many admirers that his ideal part would be that of a man-of-the-world. Miss Colbert, playing the urbane and resourceful daughter of the French aristocracy, tames her one man as she tamed her two in "I Met Him in Paris."

Throughout their hectic honeymoon in Nice, the Tyrol, Vienna, Paris, Mrs. Bluebeard makes it clear that it is only a business relation. She pays no attention to her husband, brooks him, repulses his advances, and generally remains as cold and aloof as the Alps. It works like a charm. Bluebeard, accustomed to having his own way with every woman, falls madly in love with the one who spurns him.

In the belief, however, that her husband will ultimately divorce her, Miss Colbert still refuses to give in, and realizes that she has carried her game too far when she allows Cooper to "surprise" her in her room with David Niven, hoping to make him more jealous than ever. This proves the last straw, and Cooper goes ahead with his plans to make her his eighth ex-wife.

With the tables turned, Miss Colbert realizes she is in love with her husband and chases him frantically about Europe in the hopes of winning him back.

NEWCOMER

'Gaiety Girls' Is First Musical Of Alexander Korda

"The Gaiety Girls," the first screen musical of the distinguished Alexander Korda, comes to the Ritz Theatre Thursday and Friday and proves that the producer, whose name is usually associated with more serious fare, also knows his swing.

Patricia Ellis, the charming Hollywood star, and Jack Hubert, that jovial gentleman of the jutting chin and the flying feet, are the dancing and singing stars of the film, and the whole occasion is a gloriously happy one.

The story, which set in Paris, casts Hubert as one Rene Martin, a conservative young millionaire, who stays at the office after hours to brush up on his tap dancing for the approaching stockbrokers' amateur show.

Martin is erroneously rumored to be in love with Jeanette DuPont (Miss Ellis), a beautiful chorus girl, who is made star of her show on the strength of her non-existent friendship. When Martin sells backstage to track down the annoying Hubert, Jeanette mistakes him for a reporter. He falls in love with her, continues the pose, and a delightful romance develops, with Jeanette constantly on the jump lest her credit-hound producer discover that she (as she believes) has never even met the wealthy Martin. At one hilarious point in the story, as a matter of fact, the producer insists that Jeanette bring the millionaire to dine with him in public to quiet his creditors. The frantic girl begs her "reporter" boy friend to pose as the millionaire for one evening, and the amused Martin finds himself in the strange position of impersonating himself.

In the eleventh hour, he saves the show by presenting the producer with a large check. On opening night, Jeanette is accidentally locked out on a fire escape backstage and Martin makes a Nijinsky leap from his box to fill the wait with a really ingenious show of dancing. And, of course, the story ends happily with Jeanette learning that she is the adored of a real live millionaire, after all.

Does money burn a hole in your pocket?

"Honestly, I don't know where the money goes. It's spent, but what I spent it for is more than I can say!"

Are these your sentiments too?

Take two quick hints from those who have learned to spend wisely and well:

(1) Budget.

(2) Read the advertisements.

Keep a strict, accurate account of every dollar. You spend so much for food, for rent, for clothes, for amusement. Write it down. And stick to the budget!

The second hint is a favorite plan of thrifty buyers. Each day, go over all the advertisements in this newspaper carefully. Find out in advance what things will cost you, what needs, where you can buy them, what you want to buy. The advertisements give you that information.

Life is hard work to worry any more than you can help about financial problems. Get the budget-advertising hints.

President Asks Ban On Income Tax Exemption

Congress Asked For Prompt Action On Taxing Incomes Of Future Bond Issues

Simple Statute Declared Needed

Roosevelt Would End Tax Exemption For Federal Employees

WASHINGTON, Apr. 25.—(AP)—President Roosevelt today asked Congress to remove "promptly" tax exemptions on income from all future government bond issues, federal, state and local, and on all government salaries.

Excluding exemptions, he said, resulted from judicial decisions, and could be eliminated by a "short and simple statute" which he predicted the courts would uphold.

Some advocates of ending such exemptions have claimed a constitutional amendment would be necessary because of judicial decisions holding the Federal Government could not tax state bonds nor the State Government tax federal bonds.

The President and recent decisions indicated the courts were following a different role from that which produced earlier holdings.

The President's action came as a surprise to many legislators and added to the problems of administration leaders trying to reach agreement by the latter part of May.

The President asserted the exemption of securities from taxes had created a vast reservoir of wealth (Continued on Page Two)

High Tribunal Okays Wilcox Bankrupt Act

Supreme Court Holds Law Providing Settlement Of Bonds By Cities Constitutional

WASHINGTON, Apr. 25.—(AP)—The Supreme Court ruled constitutional today the revised Wilcox Municipal Bankruptcy Act which permits cities and improvement and school districts to agree with creditors to reduce their indebtedness in federal bankruptcy courts.

Chief Justice Hughes delivered the opinion in which Justices Myron T. and Butler dissented. Justice Cardozo did not participate.

Hughes asserted the "bankruptcy power may be exerted to give effect to a plan for the compromise of the debts of an insolvent debtor."

The Court on May 26, 1936, held unconstitutional a similar act permitting reduction of indebtedness. The revised measure was passed by Congress in an effort to meet Supreme Court objections.

Today's decision applied specifically to a plan for the adjustment of debts of the Lindsey-Brownwood Irrigation district of Tulare county, California.

The amended Municipal Bankruptcy Act was drafted and introduced in Congress by Mark Wicks of West Palm Beach after his original Municipal Bankruptcy Act had been declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court.

The new act provides that overbonded cities and counties may obtain relief from excessive indebtedness by going into bankruptcy and effecting settlements with bondholders on an "as-payable basis, subject to the approval of the court."

In these latter reports, Senator Claude Pepper showed he had spent $7,000 in his campaign for re-election to the Senate seat. He listed contributions of $1,000 each from Leon County and Gainesville; "Pepper for Senator" clubs since filing the first reports.

Judge Frank J. Miller will hold a session of Municipal Court at the Police Station this afternoon at 4:00 o'clock.

Driver Testing Equipment To Be Here Apr. 26-27

Scientific Apparatus Uncovers Faults Of Auto Operators

One of the features of the national drive for safer highway conditions is the scientific driver testing equipment which will be in Sanford April 26 and 27 for the purpose of enabling motorists to check their driving habits as a means of learning driving faults that may jeopardize their own safety and that of others according to the Police Department and the Florida Power and Light Company which are sponsoring the appearance here of the testing equipment.

Owned and furnished by the American Automobile Association, the driver testing equipment is now on a nation-wide tour. It was stated and the equipment comprising a series of tests designed to meet situations that arise on the road, will be displayed on First Street.

Prior to the development, said Chief Roy G. Williams, drivers were without a scientific means of learning driving faults. As a result, many believed themselves to be good drivers when their safety and that of others was threatened and that of others to defective eyesight, inability to react quickly to an emergency, nervousness or some other factor contributing to faulty driving.

"Of particular value is the 'drivometer' which simulates actual driving conditions. This is fitted up in an automobile with steering wheel, brake, clutch, gear shift and so on. In front of the driver is a roadway painted on a continuous revolving belt and a miniature car which is guided over the road by operating the steering wheel. The person taking the test must keep the car on the road, observe traffic lights, change gears, back up and perform all sorts of maneuvers. An automatic attachment registers the number of errors and checks them off for the driver.

A number of Sanford scouts attended the annual session of the council at the Borgia House under the leadership of W. E. Kader, Scoutmaster of Troop 11.

He asserted that the people of Florida wanted to know and were entitled to know all the facts surrounding the details of all WPA charges.

Shots roared here yesterday but will leave today for Key West where he will visit friends and supporters and speak tonight.
