GENEVA — The first Florida Airboat Federation Airboat Jamboree, held in portions of the St. Johns River and Lake Harney in Seminole and Volusia Counties this weekend has drawn up to 1,000 airboat buffs, sheriff's deputies said Saturday.

The festivities which began Friday with boat races, is scheduled to continue through Monday, with participants dancing, camping, partying and examining airboats and related gear from a Volusia County base south of Lemon Bluff.

Pregnant victim hospitalized

SANFORD — A 20-year-old woman who is five months pregnant apparently went into labor at the Sanford police station Saturday morning after she fled from a man whom she said raped her twice at about 1 a.m. Saturday in Sanford.

David Lee Anderson, 32, of 217 Holly Ave. # 2, Sanford, was arrested at the police station at 9:17 a.m. Saturday on charges of two counts of sexual battery, use of a firearm in a crime, and criminal possession of a firearm. He was held without bond at the county jail.

The woman told police the suspect, whom she knows, picked her up on Southwest Road, Sanford and took her to the lake front, where he allegedly threatened her with a gun and twice raped her in his car.

The woman said she broke away and ran to a passing car. The occupant of the car took her to the police station.

Remains not clerk

SANFORD — Seminole County sheriff's Capt. Roy Hughey said Saturday that investigators and the county medical examiner have determined that remains found in southeast Seminole County Aug. 26, are not those of a missing Orange County convenience store clerk.

Hughey said dental records were used to determine the remains are not Debbie Poe, 26, of Orange County who disappeared Feb. 4, from a Goldenrod Circle K, two miles from where the remains were found.

Savage killer smears bloody fear over once easy-going community

GAINESVILLE — The murderer suspected of stalking and killing five college students did more take their lives. He left his bloody mark on the whole city, formerly a happy, easy-going college town.

By day, the signs were not so obvious. Thousands of University of Florida students, the killer's apparent targets, continued to walk and bike to class, but by night, many of those who had not fled town huddled together, six or eight to an apartment, hoping there was safety in numbers.

And University Avenue, a funky strip of restaurants, bars and bookstores that normally teems with night life, went dead.

Bug warning issued

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — Six reported cases of St. Louis encephalitis, some in counties surrounding Seminole, prompted a warning Saturday from Florida health officials for residents to protect themselves against mosquitoes that carry the disease.

Six cases of the virus in humans were confirmed late Friday in three central Florida counties by laboratory tests, the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services said. HRS officials said it was the first confirmation of the disease in four years.

Indian River County had three reported cases, Lake County two cases, and Highlands another, officials said. Three suspected cases were reported in Orange County, and one case was suspected each in the counties of St. Lucie and Okeechobee.

Encephalitis is caused by a virus spread by the mosquito species Culex nigripalpus, which breeds in woodland pools and roadside ditches, officials said.

In humans, the disease can cause inflammation of the brain, a coma and in some cases, death. It can affect the central nervous system, often producing flu-like symptoms such as headaches, high fever, a stiff neck, excessive sleepiness and See Bug, Page 2A

Both sides edgy for provocation

'Accidental' war with Iraq unlikely; deliberate fight remains possible

By ELIOT BRENNER
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Military analysts say it is unlikely a U.S.-Iraqi conflict could start by accident but believe both sides are prepared to turn a minor incident into a provocation that would warrant a fight.

"It will be no accident. You can rule that one out," said Bill Taylor, vice president for international security programs at the Center for Strategic and International Studies.

"The chance of an inadvertent war is slim," added Jay Kosminsky, deputy director of defense policy at the Heritage Foundation.

What is more likely, should the situation in the Persian Gulf region turn into a shooting match, is the deliberate manipulation by one side or the other of an incident that SANFORD — As the searing Saturday afternoon sun settled into the west past the rooftops in Midway, a crowd gathered in the parking lot in front of the Midway Community Center. It has been cleaned, but is still boarded up and padlocked. Some were dressed for a night on the town, most were in shorts, T-shirts and athletic shoes.

Johnell Jackson, the president of the Midway Citizens Against Drugs, supervised a party in the making.

A group of ladies poured condiments into paper cups while several men oversaw the cooking of hot dogs and hamburgers.

"We're just trying to familiarize people with our group," Jackson said.

He called out to a young lady who was preparing a sugary orange drink in a large cooler donated by McDonald's, telling her to add more water to the syrup.

Last night's street party was the second of the summer sponsored by MCAD. The July 7 party attracted about 363 people.

Growth prompts concern over boat safety

By BOB PRYOR
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — As population increases in Central Florida, recreational boating is also growing rapidly on the St. Johns River and its many lakes. Authorities are becoming more and more concerned over safety on the waterways, and novice boat operators who take to the waterways without knowing their responsibilities.

Florida law mandates a boating safety course for any on-water law violator, especially multiple offenders. The law specifies that any boater convicted of negligence in a boating accident or two minor safety offenses during a 12-month period is required to attend a state-accredited program such as those offered by the Coast Guard Auxiliary.

Safety offenses could mean not having the proper life jackets aboard or simply failure to carry required safety equipment.

E.A. Carlson, vice captain of Division 4, U. S. Coast Guard Auxiliary, is very concerned over the increasing boat safety violations. "Sooner or later," he said, "we'll get to the point where people will have to have a boat driver's license." Requirements could be strict and require instruction, similar to obtaining an automobile driver's license.

Carlson is especially concerned over problems created with rental boats. "When people who don't know how to operate a boat, much less know boating safety, get out on the river or Lake Monroe." Another area of concern to Carlson is the high performance speed boats.

For on-the-water violators as well as private citizens who need boating instruction, Carlson said the Coast Guard Auxiliary will begin a new series of classes Sept. 17 at Hidden Harbour Marina, at the Port of Sanford.

Migrants may head south for more work

United Press International

DADE CITY — Seasonal migrants may find less work in the state's citrus belt and more jobs in the vegetable fields of south Florida, a state agriculture official said Friday.

"My best estimate now is that the Florida vegetable crop in the southern part of the state will be as healthy as ever," said Oll Hill, chief of Florida's Bureau of Agriculture Programs in Tallahassee.

"Citrus will have some diminished crops up in the central part of the state because of the damage to trees caused during the December freeze," he said.

Migrant workers who are almost finished with harvests in the northern United States may avoid Florida this season because of rumors of a poor citrus yield, said Gary Adams, training specialist for the U.S. Department of Labor in Washington, who works with seasonal farm worker programs.

"When times get tough — and they're going to get tougher — migrants are going to be hit especially hard," he said.

Migrant worker advocate Margarita Romo disagreed that the workers, who are largely from Mexico, will skip Florida.

"Of course, when things get tough, the poor suffer the most, but we'll be able to adjust. People will commute across the state and find work if they have to," said Romo, director of Farmworkers Self Help, a Dade City agency helping migrants.

Hill said he does not foresee a problem because the numbers of migrant workers who come to Florida fluctuate. "Sometimes there's more and sometimes there's less. I can't say whether they will avoid Florida this year," he said.

On average, about 300,000 migrant farmworkers make their way to Florida in late October.

A lack of jobs is nothing new for migrant workers, said Carlos Saavedra, manager for the state Department of Education's seasonal and farmworker programs in Tampa. "The growers believe there aren't going to be enough workers, but there are usually more farmworkers than there is work," he said.

Bob Sturm - A Record of Achievement

Through the 1980's, Bob Sturm has been the conservative Republican voice on the Seminole County Commission. With an independent view, he has held the line on taxes, pushed for quality development and fought for funding for our roads. He is recognized as one Commissioner that listens to the people.

Since he originally beat an entrenched Democrat, Bob Sturm has been re-elected by overwhelming margins.

With our support, Commissioner Sturm will continue to work to slow the growth of local government and its cost to the taxpayer.

Let's keep Bob working for us. Please vote for Bob Sturm on September 4.

Who Are The Business Leaders

After an intensive review process, Bob Sturm was easily the top choice by the review board for the over 2,000 members of the Greater Seminole County Chamber of Commerce and the Board of Realtors.

County commission: Sturm and Glenn deserve your votes

On the Republican primary ballot this Tuesday are two countywide contests for Seminole County Commission.

In District 3, incumbent Bob Sturm faces challenges from Dick Pasa, former mayor of Lake Mary, and Bob Dammond, who earned an impressive although losing vote when he campaigned against Sturm four years ago.

In District 4, incumbent Sandra Glenn is opposed by former commissioner and former school board member Robert "Bud" Feather.

Challengers, in our judgment, bear the obligation of proving why an incumbent deserves to be ousted from office.

District 3

Neither Mr. Dammond — whose campaign tactics have leaned toward the sensational and misleading — nor Mr. Pasa — who has served well as the mayor of Lake Mary and whose campaign has been thoughtful and articulate — have presented a convincing case for retiring Mr. Sturm.

We may not agree with everything that Mr. Sturm has done as a commissioner during the past four years, but in judging the entire body of his service during that period — and in the absence of a persuasive argument to the contrary — we believe he deserves to be returned for an additional four years.

Not to be overlooked among his credentials is his 15 years of commission experience, during which time he has built up a knowledge of the complex issues of growth, transportation and finances that will serve him and his constituents well over the next four years.

That government has indeed been scrutinized and criticized is well known. He consistently works for areas of unnecessary spending, regularly has made informed proposals for reductions, and — when he deemed it appropriate — voted against tax increases.

We approve of that attitude although we caution against penny-wise, pound-foolish strategies that may stretch county services so thin as to become inadequate.

Last but not least, we look forward to Mr. Pasa continuing to seek public service, whether elective or appointed, should that suit him. He is of the high caliber that is needed to make representative government work well.

District 4

Mr. Feather, though his low-key campaign, has failed to make a convincing case for the forced retirement of Mrs. Glenn, who herself says she will retire voluntarily at the conclusion of one more term.

Mrs. Glenn has distinguished herself as a public servant during her 13 years on the commission through work on state and national groups in addition to fulfilling responsibilities to her constituents in Seminole County.

She shows her performance in providing leadership. On the major issues of growth and its management, roads, and taxes, she is satisfied with the county's performance.

As in the case with other public officials, we do not always agree with her. But, on balance, Mrs. Glenn has earned the right to represent her party in the general election in November when she would face Democrat Larry Furlong. He has no opposition in this week's primary election.

Perry works to renew Longwood

Political pundits predict the entry of more women into the political arena in this decade progressed and we enter the twenty-first century.

John Perry was elected Longwood city commissioner for District 1 last November. We were told that persuaded Perry to venture into politics. He advised that his neighbors suggested that he seek the District 1 seat. They supported his candidacy and he was elected. Years of increasing the neighborhood and writing to his neighbors about issues important for their neighborhood and detrimental to their quality of life had made her known to them.

The Commissioners are excited about Longwood's possibilities. Longwood has frequently functioned as a dormitory, which many Seminole County residents view as their way to Lakeside of Lake Mary and Sanford. The long-range planning process will enable Longwood to remain its rightful heritage. There are old structures in Longwood that rival those in Sanford in terms of antiquity. Consequently, Longwood is seeking recognition as a historical district. Historic downtown redevelopment is being planned. Landmarks architects have developed concept plans for a community, with a pedestrian walkway. The structure where the current City Hall is located will be involved in the project. These are Wilson, Warren and Church Street. A new City Hall is to be constructed and a new recreation center.

The recreation center is needed to serve citizens of all ages. Senior citizens have no programs if there was a center, programs would be provided. Longwood had a youth camp this summer with approximately 100 to 125 youth enrolled. The youth did not have a building to accommodate them. Many of their activities had to be covered around taking trips.

The Commissioners have appointed a city beautification task force. The task force has and is working to improve Longwood's image. Their next final plans will be beautifying the median strip of State Road 434 and County Road 437.

Citizen participation is encouraged as Longwood moves boldly to reestablish its identity and revitalize neighborhood associations.

Longwood is located on the east by CR 437, west just short of I-4, south to Charlotte Street (slightly north of Lakeside Middle School) and north to the industrial center.

A state grant of $120,000 was received for a park. Concluded Park, east of Ocean Street and 437 has been completed and will be dedicated soon. A new fire station is also part of the plan.

Perry treasures the fact that Longwood is a small town unconquered by a great deal of bureaucratic red tape. If there is a problem, citizens have access to their commissioners and city workers. Perry values and desires to revitalize and preserve Longwood's character.

As Longwood's delegates to the East Central Florida Planning Council, Perry reviews all proposals that will impact Seminole County.

Perry is a professional educator with a Ph.D. in administration and supervision and a minor in reading from the University of Florida. Naturally, she is concerned about education and housing which affects everyone's quality of life.

Civil War sites losing battle

CHANCELLORSVILLE, Va. — Directly across the road from the Chancellorsville battlefield — long the sacred and protected site of one of the fiercest clashes of the Civil War — stand a recreational vehicle campground and a miniature golf course.

To the west is the equally revered location of the Battle of the Wilderness. Directly adjacent to it is a sprawling new residential development whose entrance is an ugly, massive brick wall thoroughly incompatible with its historic surroundings.

In addition to these tract houses and their "Arnold Palmer-designed golf course," a shopping center is planned on a site across the road from the Wilderness battlefield. That's probably not what President Abraham Lincoln had in mind when he referred to Civil War battlefields as hallowed ground.

On the east stands the Salem Church building, carefully preserved for more than a century because it was the site of a Civil War battle and later served as a field hospital for the victorious but wounded Confederate forces.

It's difficult to see, however, because of its location — obscured inside a multi-lane shopping strip that includes scores of retail outlets such as Wal-Mart, Best Buy, Toys R Us, Home Depot and Cedar Tree as well as countless service stations, motels and fast food outlets.

What's happening here is matched throughout much of East, West, South and Maryland: the majority of Civil War sites long preserved in the face of development. It's threatened by the forces of profit and industry. These sites are being sold off to private developers and are being converted into recreational areas, shopping centers, and other commercial developments.

Now, however, attention is on the fact that the National Park Service is in the process of reviewing the National Historic Preservation Act to protect Civil War battlefields. As a result, the federal government's policy has been to preserve only nationally and very significant sites.

Now, however, attention is on the fact that the National Park Service is in the process of reviewing the National Historic Preservation Act to protect Civil War battlefields. As a result, the federal government's policy has been to preserve only nationally and very significant sites.

The clash was resolved only when the federal government agreed to purchase from the real estate developers a tract of more than 100 acres, at a cost estimated to be at least $100 million.

Other efforts mounted by historians and preservationists have attracted far less attention. Typical of them is the current campaign to keep residential and commercial development from impinging upon the Brandy Station battlefield in Culpeper, Va.

Brandy Station, Cedar Creek, New Market Heights, Fort Republic, Cross Keys and the Wilderness are among the more than 20 Civil War sites in Virginia recently identified by the Interior Department as sites in need of protection.

Other sites on that endangered list include two sites in Alabama, Georgia, Kentucky, Maryland, Mississippi and Tennessee as well as one each in Arkansas, Louisiana, Missouri, New Mexico, North Carolina, Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

The Pennsylvania site is the Gettysburg battlefield, among the nation's sites known to great masses because of Lincoln's address. But for years under state and federal government ownership, it has been a national shrine. In 1963, however, the state gave the site to private developers.

Only a lack of security has prevented a similar fate from befalling the Chancellorsville battlefield, but it already is on the way to being sold off to private developers. The state has already sold the site to private developers.

'Rolodex' searches threatened at AID

WASHINGTON — American workers are opposing the idea of invasion of privacy by their bosses. With drugs, embarrassment and other offenses becoming a fact of life in the workplace, employees are turning to drug tests and extensive background checks to make sure the people they hire are clean.

But some critics at the State Department have been threatened with a new brand of shake-down — a "Rolodex" search to make sure they are honest with the right people.

The proposal for a search of the desktop telephone directories was announced at the Agency for International Development (AID) last week.

The U.S. State Department that handles U.S. assistance to Third World countries. The agency has offices around the world.

Top State Department officials think AID employees spend too much time schmoozing with foreign government officials and not enough time schmoozing with private business people.

AID has set a goal of getting the private sector more involved in creating jobs in financially strapped nations. So a cable went out recently from a top AID official to the various missions. It urged employees to start spending more time with bankers, business people, investors and manufacturers.

That's good advice. But one disgruntled recipient of the orders feared AID went too far when it suggested that the proof of a productive worker was in his or her Rolodex and that big brother might be thumbing through the cards to see if AID workers were using the advice.

That's a fair point. But the cable with this note: "What it will mean is that people will go to the local Yellow Pages and spend an inordinate amount of time poring over Rolodex cards. Is it any wonder the U.S. government doesn't function well?" An AID spokesman told our reporter that that's the cable was sent. "Rolodex is clean," that the memo didn't read that way and apparently not everyone got the job.

How do you know? "Of all the mistakes I've made in my career, the biggest one is not getting on the cable. You know that you have committed what you're doing and you can't get the 'Rolodex' out. As I said the mission in the year ahead I will be talking with you and you will know how the process is moving. Right now it's a game at your feet."

If the cable was a joke, it was a long one — nearly a full page of fine-print instructions about making "background" checks in the process of hiring. The government was the warning about hanging out with the state old crowd, or "vendors of national disaster" — that's the name of the game.

The cable was signed by Secretary of State James Baker, but the AID spokesman said that neither Baker nor the cable was it. Many of the AID instructions do not under Baker's name, but are only changes from his instructions to their subordinates.

Democrats to choose between population and new generation

Chiles, Nelson fight for chance to face governor

By MICHAEL COLLINS
United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — Florida Democrats must choose in their Sept. 4 gubernatorial primary whether their claim to the future lies in their populist tradition, or in promises of a "next generation" of leadership.

Former U.S. Sen. Lawton Chiles, with his reputation as the big money campaigner that have become the norm in Florida, represents the first alternative. U.S. Rep. Bill Nelson, best known for his 1986 spin aboard the space shuttle, promises the latter.

The winner will mount a general election challenge to Gov. Bob Martinez. The former Tampa mayor is struggling to win back the public confidence he admits he squandered when he embraced a $1 billion tax increase within weeks of his election four years ago.

Nelson's campaign literature portrays him as the symbol of a "new generation of leadership."

"Today we have a leadership at the highest level focused only on the next election, and not at all on the next generation," Nelson, 47, said.

"I can't tell you that if I become governor I'll please everybody, because I won't. But I can tell you this: I will not intentionally and cynically mislead the people of this state."

Chiles, 60, argues that in accepting campaign contributions up to the legal limit of $3,000, Nelson is not putting enough distance between himself and Martinez.

"People don't have an equal voice today," Chiles said. "The people's business is being conducted based on how much money has been given to candidates. Money buys access and power, power that should belong to the people."

Lawton Chiles

"I believe principle and commitment must be a part of public service. But in Florida these past few years, principle has given way to politics, the politics of money."

The fact that there is a race for the Democratic nomination is testimony to the failure of Nelson's initial strategy. He had hoped to corner enough cash and endorsements early enough to scare off any challengers, thus sparing the party a repeat of the debilitating primary fight of 1988.

The Melbourne congressman was seen by many Democratic officials as a perfect foil to Martinez, neither too conservative nor too liberal. He favors the death penalty and tough penalties for crime, but also has campaigned for gun control and against new restrictions on abortion.

But critics said he had little to show for six terms in Congress except for his 1986 ride aboard the shuttle Columbia. Florida Trend magazine labeled Nelson an "empty suit."

There were also some embarrassing stumbles, such as the disclosure that Nelson, a member of the House Banking Committee, had accepted $55,000 in campaign contributions from the failed ConTrust bank of Miami. He eventually returned the money.

Nelson's supporters said he had found strength by overcoming his setbacks.

"It takes a lot of character to look into the abyss and come out of it and spur people on," said state Rep. Mike Abrams, D-Miami, an early supporter.

Chiles entered the race last spring with an attack on the very heart of Nelson's strategy — early and substantial fundraising.

Chiles, 60, was one of Florida's most popular elected officials when he abruptly announced his retirement from the U.S. Senate two years ago after three terms, citing "burnout."

As he eventually disclosed, Chiles's problem actually was clinical depression which, according to his doctors, was being controlled with the prescription drug Prozac.

Chiles said that as his health improved, his attention was captivated by the resurgent democracy in Eastern Europe. He decided that the big money election campaigns that were becoming the standard in Florida were undermining the democratic process here, and announced he was imposing a $100 limit on contributions to his own campaign to dampen the influence of the special interests.

Chiles and running mate Kenneth "Buddy" McKay, a former congressman who narrowly lost the race for Chiles's senate seat, immediately left to a double-digit lead over Nelson in the polls, more more

County commissioner Glenn offers sign-damage reward

SANFORD — Seminole County commissioner Sandra Glenn has offered a $5,000 award for information leading to the arrest and conviction of anyone defacing her campaign signs.

"We have no place for those persons who resort to vandalism and destruction to express their political ideas," Glenn said in a statement.

Glenn said about 60 of her signs throughout the county have been spraypainted with anti-Glenn slogans, such as "For sale."

Glenn said she did not believe Republican primary opponent Robert "Bud" Feather or Larry Furlong, the Democrat who will face either Glenn or Feather in November, were involved with the defaced signs.

District 3 commissioner Bob Sturm, who is also seeking re-election, offered a $500 award in July for anyone convicted of stealing his signs. Several dozen Sturm signs have been stolen, campaign workers said.

Primaries first battle in historic war for congress

By STAN...
United Press International

The first vote has not been cast in the 1990 Republican and Democratic congressional primaries, but already history has been made.

There's something different about the names on the Republican primary ballots. Never before has the word incumbent described so many of the GOP congressional candidates.

The Republican Party holds 11 of Florida's 19 seats in the U.S. House of Representatives, giving it control of Florida's congressional delegation for the first time in modern history.

And if the prospect of defending 11 incumbents isn't a strange enough spot for Republican Party regulars, there is always the case of the 11th Congressional District.

In that race, GOP voters are faced with an unexpected plethora of candidates. Six Republicans are vying to represent the party in the race for the seat vacated by Democrat Bill Nelson, who is hoping to reach the governor's mansion.

The winner will face Democrat Jim Bacchus, who finds himself in an unlikely position for a Democratic candidate with no opposition in the primary and a $1,000,000 campaign war chest that is the envy of office seekers.

nationwide. "The opposite of what is normal in Florida is occurring this year politically," said Stan Smith, spokesman for the Republican State Party. "Especially in that particular district (the 11th) this year where you usually have a lot of Democrats running who are short of money. Usually, we seem to be well financed and they have the numbers."

Of the six Republicans, Bill Tolley, who has the support of anti-abortion activists and the endorsement of Pat Robertson, appears to be the front-runner. Former Democratic leader John Vogt is running as a Republican and could force a runoff, as could Bonnie Wharton of Orlando.

"This year's races are awfully important, given there are very few examples in southern politics where Republican politicians have controlled congressional delegations," Smith said.

Democrats have just one message for their political opponents — savor it while you can, because come November, Republican dominance of the Florida congressional delegation will be, well, history.

To make that happen, Democrats have to emerge from the primaries with candidates that are largely uncathed and with enough money on hand to give the three Republican incumbents the Democrats feel are the most vulnerable a close race in November.

"Definitely we need to keep the 11th and to get (U.S. Rep. Craig) James' seat, District 2, which is (U.S. Rep. Bill) Grant, and (U.S. Rep. Clifford) Stearns' seat," Democratic State Party spokeswoman Gayle Andrews said.

Wins in all four of those districts along with the return of the seven Democratic incumbent congressmen would give Democrats control of the delegation by the same 11-8 margin the GOP now maintains.

"Defending, we're a safe bet all the way down the line," Andrews said. "They could use mortar on us in these other races and still don't stand a chance."

Smith acknowledges that the seven Democratic incumbents are probably safe, barring some scandal, while some of the Republican held seats will be more hotly contested.

"Grant (who switched parties in 1988 even though District 2 is a Democratic stronghold) has fallen under the Democratic radar scope, but we don't see him as vulnerable. The Democrats have targeted District 4 (James) too, but that's to be expected when you capture a traditionally Democratic seat in what people see as an upset."

In District 2, which includes Tallahassee, the Democratic race is between Bob Boyd and Pete Peterson, who has been endorsed by the Tallahassee Democrat.

Peterson, who spent six years as a POW in Vietnam, is making his first run for public office. His campaign polls show him way ahead of Boyd, said Jon Ausman, his campaign manager.

"We're looking forward to going after Bill Grant," said Ausman. "Grant has 80 percent name ID to our 40 percent name ID, but right now we're just 8 points down 42 to 34, according to our polls."

James has no Republican challengers for the seat he won in 1988, while three Democrats are fighting for the right to oppose him. Political watchers give Reid Hughes the edge there over David Lee Davis and Bob Gray.

"Craig James is the most vulnerable in the whole state as far as incumbents. Any one of our candidates can beat him. It's just a matter of time. It comes out of the primary and hopefully they avoid a runoff," Andrews said.

tions of Brevard and St. Lucie counties. Deratany, the Republican incumbent, will face Democrat Patry Ann Kurth in the November general election.

Stun guns not popular in Seminole

By SUSAN LOREN
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Stun guns may be popping up on shelves of Dade County convenience stores next to the cans of pop, but Seminole County is slower to adopt this self-protection device.

Shane Smith, manager of Seminole Sporting Goods in Sanford, said he carried stun guns for one year and only sold one. He's dropped stun guns from his line, but said "they make a good weapon because you don't have to use ammo."

In Miami greater restrictions on handguns may have promoted stun guns to the status of a weapon favored there for self-defense, Smith said.

"Judge, jury and executioner, only it doesn't kill anybody," said Rod Harpp, who sells stun guns in Dade County.

In a month, Harpp has sold out one shipment of the $89 devices, which look like a hand-held smoke detector but give a 120,000-volt charge to anyone they are used against.

"It sounds like a rattlesnake and affects them (would-be attackers) as if it were one," said Harpp. "You take your life in your hands around here."

He calls it "the finest little scare-away for panhandlers and worse."

Ed Haines, of United Police Equipment and Supply in Lake Mary, said in six months he has sold about 15 stun guns, most to women. He advises women if they are going to carry these protection devices to have them at the ready. "You're not going to be able to get it out of your purse in time," he said.

You have to be at least 18 years old to buy a stun gun, and stun guns that emit a lethal shock or fire darts are illegal, Haines said.

price from about $35 to $100 and may be carried openly, legally, Haines said.

Sanford Police Chief Steven Harriett, whose officers rely on these "electronic restraining devices" to "humanely" gain control over a violent suspect without using deadly or excessive force, said if carried concealed a stun gun could be classified as a concealed weapon. The offense is a misdemeanor, since the stun gun isn't considered a firearm, he said.

Citizens, Harriett said, have a right to arm themselves with stun guns, if they choose, and he is often questioned about the weapons by crime-conscious citizens, he said. He recommends training in use of the weapon before adopting it for self-defense.

Before Sanford police are issued their electronic restraining devices, Harriett said, they are trained in use of the weapon and must experience what it's like to be stunned with the gun. Harriett said the charge has little or no impact on some who have a high tolerance to electricity.

Experts say the stun guns have the same impact as wasp sting.

"It will not cause you to pass out," said Dr. Robert Stratbucker, a professor of nuclear medicine at the University of Nebraska, where the guns have been tested.

He described the impact of the zap as "somewhere between unpleasant and downright painful." A stun gun has such low amperage, the voltage produced has no power and no heat.

Bert Nelson, of A & N Sporting Goods in Sanford, said, "They're very simple to use. You just stick it to the person and pull the trigger. It's not like he's going to be electrocuted. You'd better be ready to run. All he's going to do is fall down and come back up."

Stratbucker said the shock may blister the skin for a short period.

"If you don't know what you are doing, you had better be prepared for a counter attack," he said.

WORLD BRIEFS

Judge finds police unjustifiably killed 11

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — A judge determined Saturday that police acted without discipline and without cause when they fatally shot 11 black anti-apartheid protesters and wounded as many as 281 others during a day of demonstrations last March.

The report by Judge R.J. Goldstone, appointed as a commission of one to investigate the violence, recommended an unspecified number of policemen be investigated on possible criminal charges, including a sergeant held responsible for four deaths alone.

Goldstone, appointed by President Frederik de Klerk to probe police action March 28 in a cluster of five townships south of Johannesburg, said one death by police gunfire is unresolved.

The judge found police acted with "complete lack of discipline and control" in the main shooting, in Sebokeng township, killing five people and wounding at least 161 — 84 from behind — during an illegal protest march.

Pope begins African tour in Tanzania

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania — Pope John Paul II arrived Saturday evening in hot, coastal Dar Es Salaam, chief city of Tanzania, to the cheers of hundreds of thousands of people of all races and religions.

The huge crowd greeted the 70-year-old pontiff as he appeared at the exit of his plane and waved, marking the start of an 11-day, four-country, 11,500-mile African tour.

To deafening applause, the pope knelt and kissed the warm tropical tarmac after his nine-hour journey from Rome.

He was greeted by Tanzanian President Ali Hassan Mwinyi, former President Julius Nyerere, who is a devout Catholic, and by Monsignor Josephat Lebulu, head of the Roman Catholic Church in Tanzania.

Mohawk standoff continues

OKA, Quebec — Mohawk Indians and Canadian soldiers remained in place Saturday at the site where a seven-week standoff began despite an easing of tension at a second reserve and hopes that peace talks would soon resume.

Army spokesman Capt. Marc Rouleau in Oka, west of Montreal, said there had been "no change, no movement in the last 48 hours."

He said army troops had not changed their positions and that Mohawks at the Kanessatake reserve were not dismantling their barricades.

While Rouleau said the army's mood in Oka was "fairly relaxed," radio reports said the area was "as tense as ever."

Her path to home is legal now

By VICKI DeBORNIER
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Ella Beasley's easily won approval for her request for a license that would permit her to have access to her home at 1813 South Olive Ave., Sanford, which is directly behind Goldsboro Elementary School, 1301 S. 16th Street.

Beasley can get to her home only via an alleyway that is on school property.

According to Beasley, she commissioned Doudney Surveyors, a land surveying company, to research the matter. They determined that there is no access way to the Beasley home other than the road in question which runs along the northeast boundary of the school.

"These people have been using the road for years," said Richard Wells, assistant superintendent for facilities. "We do not presently need the land so I don't see any reason why she should be denied access to the road."

Wells said that the easement in question is a 15 foot long alley.

Beasley said her family has lived in the house since the early 1940s and they have always used the road as access to their property, even before the construction of the school.

Wells said the district was not willing to give up rights to the land in case it is needed by the school in the future. He added that at such time, the district would work out an alternative arrangement with the Beaseleys to give them access to their home.

"We're very happy that they understood our problem," Beasley's son George said following the board's unanimous approval at last night's meeting.

George Beasley said his mother's house is being rebuilt using grant money that is provided for revitalization of the Goldsboro neighborhood. He said receipt of the money is dependent on having proper access to the home.

"The school board was very helpful to our cause," he said.

Veterinary hospital license suspended after inspection

SANFORD — The Sanford Veterinary Hospital will remain closed for at least a week following a state inspection Friday.

Laurie Cain, spokesman for the Florida Department of Professional Regulation, said veterinarian Alex Freyman had corrected many problems found during a DPR inspection in April. Cain said the hospital still used wood-framed kennels that could not be properly sanitized against the spread of disease. Cain said inspectors also determined the kennel floor could not be adequately cleaned.

The emergency suspension of the hospital's operating license won't be lifted until proper sanitary conditions can be maintained in the kennel area, Cain said.

Cain said Freyman pledged cooperation with the state.

DPR investigators found a bloody glove on an x-ray machine, uncapped dirty syringes and dried fecal matter in the hospital during an April investigation.

Ornament society group files suit

SANFORD — A group calling itself the rightful officers of the Seminole Ornament Society has filed suit against another group that says it's the true leaders of the group.

The SOS group headed by Bonnie Manjura claimed Jim Stelling, Harry Hagle and Randall Morris had no authority to spend $2,318 of SOS money in July. The civil suit filed Friday in Sanford claims the action was done "in bad faith and with a malicious purpose." The action is seeking $6,948 plus legal costs in the suit.

Stelling, Hagle and Morris, declaring themselves a voting majority of SOS leaders said they met in July to dissolve the charitable corporation which had been shattered by political infighting. They said they used $87 of the SOS money to pay legal costs of dissolving the organization and donated the remaining $2,228 to the Seminole Children's Village.

Morris declined comment.

Hawks off and running

Smith, Sales carry Howell past Rams

By GAIL KERRICK
Herald correspondent

WINTER PARK — Boosted by 130 yards on just three carries by Marquette Smith and a pair of interceptions by Frank Sales, Lake Howell barreled past Lake Mary 20-0 in the second half of the pre-season high school football jamboree at Lake Howell Stadium on Friday night.

In the first half, DeLand blanked Lake Brantley 10-0.

New Lake Howell's Silver Hawks can turn their attention to next week's season-opening game at home against local rival Winter Park.

"They get themselves geared up," said Lake Howell Coach Mike Stoggin of his Hawks' ability to get emotionally prepared to play. "It all starts next Friday. This was just a warmup."

Lake Howell, conference, district and regional champions a year ago, set the tone early with touchdowns in their first three possessions. Smith, Sanford Herald Player of the Year in 1989, cut across the field and outran the pack for a 45-yard touchdown on the Silver Hawks' first drive.

The Silver Hawks' second score was set up by a consecutive pair of runs by Pat Jorgenson for 33 yards. Quarterback Ryan Thomas then broke free from the defenders and scampered 41 yards for a 14-0 lead.

See Hawks, Page 2B

Marquette Smith carried the ball just three times for the Lake Howell Silver Hawks in Friday night's football jamboree at Lake Howell, but the senior running back candidate showed why he is an All-American candidate when he gained 120 yards and scored two touchdowns on runs of 45 and 42 yards. The Hawks defeated the Lake Mary Rams 20-0 in the second half after DeLand topped Lyman 10-0 in the first half.

Bulldogs shutout Patriots in jamboree

By PAUL SMITH
Herald Correspondent

WINTER PARK — The DeLand Bulldogs' victory over the Lake Brantley Patriots at Lake Howell High School on Friday night.

It was easy to tell that it was a preseason contest as both teams looked shabby on offense.

The Patriots fumbled five times, losing four of them, while the Bulldogs turned the ball over twice, all in 24 minutes of action.

The Patriots started the contest by controlling the ball with a strong ground game spearheaded by David Sprinkle and Robert Seymore. But Seymore, the Patriots' starting quarterback Friday, fumbled after getting hit in the backfield. Fred Taylor scooped up the ball and scampered 80 yards for a DeLand touchdown.

Eric Sternacki added the extra point to give the Bulldogs a quick 7-0 lead.

On the ensuing kickoff, Chris Burton jarrred the ball loose for DeLand and Keith Williams recovered the fumble to give the Bulldogs first and 10 at the Patriot 43-yard line.

"I was pretty happy with the way our team played against an option team like Lake Brantley," said DeLand coach David Hiss. "John Bowman had a great game for us defensively."

The Lake Brantley defense held DeLand to three plays and out with Jason Peary sinking Craig May for a touchdown.

DeLand got together their only sustained drive in the second period after Mike Curley recovered another Patriot fumble. The Bulldogs drove 34 yards on 9 plays, using 6:35 of the clock, largely on the running efforts of Jeff Edenfield and Chris Brown.

However, DeLand had to settle for a 23-yard field goal by Sternacki to up the score to 10-0 with 6:14 remaining.

The Patriots put together one more drive late in the game but they ended the game the way it started, fumbling on the game's last play.

"I'm proud of the way our offensive line played, but we can't put the ball on the ground like that anymore," said Almon.

Lake Brantley will open its 1990 season with a non-district game at Apopka next Friday night while the DeLand Bulldogs will open its 5A-District 4 schedule with a game against the Mainland Buccaneers.

The Patriots and Bulldogs will meet for their district and conference game on Oct. 12 at DeLand's Spec Martin Stadium.

UCF knocks off Troy State in opener

By TONY SACCOMERI
Herald Sports Editor

ORLANDO — Willie English scored on a 4-yard run and Jimmy Roberts intercepted a pass with 26 seconds left to give the University of Central Florida Knights a 16-10 win over the Troy State Trojans Saturday night.

The win, UCF's first in its initial season as an NCAA Division I-AA school, came before 22,463 at the newly-renovated Florida Citrus Bowl, UCF's largest audience since last season's opening game.

Troy State, currently a member of NCAA Division II, is scheduled to follow UCF's lead into Division I-AA next year.

English's touchdown capped an 11-play, 80-yard drive with 45 seconds remaining and erased a 10-0 Troy State advantage.

Talking over at the 50 after the ensuing kickoff, Trojan quarterback Steve Summers tried to pass Troy State upfield. But Roberts picked off Summers at the Troy State 39, sealing the victory.

"Our offense had to play for us to win," said UCF Coach Gene McDowell. "They didn't do anything in the first half. Troy State didn't use any crazy formations, which helped. We didn't know what to expect.

Our defense played extremely well. I have the utmost confidence in (defensive coordinator) Dick Folland. The way the defense played was extraordinary. We tried our best to self-destruct, but we had enough to overcome that."

Until English scored, placekicker Franco Orilla was all the Knights' offense, kicking field goals of 26, 27 and 30 yards.

Orilla's first field goal came with 6:35 remaining in the first quarter. The kick was set up by Junior Penn Holsapple, who partially blocked the punt attempt by Troy State's

Capriati, Graf set to meet in U.S. Open

United Press International

NEW YORK — Before she begins the ninth grade of school in a few days, Jennifer Capriati has another tennis date with the best women's player in the world.

And if Capriati somehow is successful Monday against Steffi Graf, as she thinks she can be, one of the records would be a delay of her school year.

"I hope I miss a couple more days" was the glibulous way she expressed her feelings.

Capriati, the most exciting new talent to join the tennis tour in recent years, moved into the fourth round of the U.S. Open Saturday with a routine 6-1, 6-4 victory over Maria Strandlund. At the age of 14, she has compiled a match record of 35-5 as a pro, and has yet to drop a set in the Open.

Graf, the defending champion and No. 1 seed, meantime stumbled to a 6-4, 6-3, 6-1 decision over Elena Resnack, and expressed unhappiness with her game.

In the day's biggest upset, eighth seed Brad Gilbert fell to Israeli Amos Mandonlik, 5-7, 5-7, 6-3, 7-5, 6-1.

Gilbert registered 15 aces, but was unable to retain his stamina in the four-hour duel.

The other seed to lose was No. 15 Goran Ivanisevic, who admitted he gave up in the fifth set of his match with Australian Darren Cahill.

When Capriati and Graf meet in the fourth round the Florida teenager will carry high hopes for an upset.

"You always want to go in and think you can come close or beat her, otherwise what's the point," said Capriati, the 15th seed.

Graf, who has been through this buildup with other young rivals, is taking a low-key approach to the match.

Andre Agassi, colorful and controversial and also wearing an earring, cruised into the fourth round with a 7-5, 6-4, 6-0 victory over Franco Davis. While his behavior was impeccable on the court, Agassi stirred another storm by saying later that the chair umpire in his last match had a grudge against him.

Agassi was fined $3,000 for obscenity and spitting on the umpire. Wayne McKewen, during his victory over Petr Korda.

World Track Championships conclude with world record

SPLIT. Yugoslavia - A world record by France in the men's 4 x 100 meters relay final Saturday and Yugoslavia's first gold medals of the week highlighted the final day of the European Youth and Field Championships.

The French team of Max Marinier, Daniel Sangouma, Jean Charles Trouabal and Bruno Marie Rose broke the 37.83-second world record in the men's 4 x 100 meters final set by the American national team of Sam Graddy, Ron Brown, Calvin Smith and Carl Lewis at the 1984 Los Angeles Olympics.

Suzana Pajkic, the reigning European Junior Champion, won Yugoslavia's first gold in the women's 1500 meters and Dragutin Topic, who won the World Junior title in Plovdiv, Bulgaria earlier this month, won the host nation's second gold in the high jump with a 2.34m clearance.

Since the United States took the world record from Germany in 1980, the American national team or American college teams have held it ever since, with the exception of one day.

That was on October 19, 1988 when the Jamaican national team set two world records on one day at the Mexico Olympics. Americans have held the record ever since.

"It was a crazy race," said Trouabal. "We are especially happy for getting revenge on the British."

The French victory was marked by a congratulatory telegram from president Francois Mitterrand.

Pajkic's victory in the women's 1500 meters final, was unexpected. Sandra Gasser of Switzerland set the pace for the first three laps, but Ellen Kiesling of East Germany looked set for the gold when she took the lead on the run-in to the line.

Pajkic, at 20 the youngest competitor in the field, was not even rated in the top 20 Europeans this season. But she broke wide and swept to the line with the local crowd going wild.

Her time of 4:08.12 was a Yugoslav record, with Kiesling clocking 4:08.67 and Gasser 4:08.69.

Doana Melinte of Romania, the 1984 Olympic silver medalist who has run all over the Grand Prix circuit this season and had nothing left in the closing stages and finished sixth.

Rodney Glass, UCF recovered at the Trojan 24 and, three plays later, Grilla gave the Knights their first lead.

For the rest of the half and into the third quarter, UCF crossed midfield just twice. With 8:30 left in the third period, McDowell sent in Ron Johnson to replace starting quarterback Rudy Jones. Johnson immediately engineered a 65-yard drive that Grilla capped with his second field goal.

"Ron Johnson doesn't look pretty, but he gets the job done," said McDowell.

Less than a minute later, Bill Stewart intercepted a pass for UCF and set up the Knights at the Troy 55. Grilla's kick made it 9-0 UCF.

"France Grilla is a great kicker," said McDowell. "He will play in the NFL some day. He's the best kicker I've been around."

Then, in the fourth quarter, Troy State suddenly came to life. Taking advantage of a fumbled punt, the Trojans got on the board when Tony Lancaster kicked a 31-yard field goal with 1:58 remaining.

After holding UCF to three downs and out, Troy State took over at its own 47 with

The Lake Howell Silver Hawk defense also had a big night in Friday night's jamboree at Lake Howell. Here a mob of Hawks gang up to bring down Lake Mary runner Chris Haney. Frank Sales was the big man for the defense as he intercepted two passes in the 20-0 shutout of the Rams.

Smith topped the scoring with a 48-yard touchdown run. "We knew we needed improvement," said second-year Lake Mary coach Doug Peters, whose team was beaten 70-14 by Lake Howell last year. "Marquette Smith is a great back, as you'll be hearing all year. "We were competing against one of the best teams in the state. I think we've made quite a bit of improvement."

The Rams' only solid drive followed Lake Howell's third touchdown. Starting from their own 28-yard line, running back Anuah Collins carried the ball twice for 11 yards. Quarterback Joe Meleno then hit Bill Kanasky on 45-yard pass play to Lake Howell's 16. But Sales ended the drive with the first of his two interceptions in the end zone.

Collins led Lake Mary's offense with 11 carries for 30 yards. Menello, in his varsity as the Ram quarterback, completed five of nine passes for 43 yards and two interceptions. Blacoglia saw the Rams' effort for what it was.

"Lake Mary ran real well against our first defense," said Blacoglia. "They gave us something to work on."

Fishermen may forget a lot of things but never September 1

Anglers may forget birthdays and anniversaries, but one date they will all remember is September 1 — the opening of snook season.

The snook is one of Florida's most popular gamefish, and can be found all over the state — from the keys to as far north as Jacksonville. Some of the best fishing in our area takes place at Sebastian Inlet and Ft. Pierce.

Sebastian Inlet is a popular spot because snook fishermen do not need a boat in order to be successful. The rock jetties provide a good casting platform and easy access to a healthy snook population.

Beyond a doubt, the best snook bait at Sebastian is a fat live shrimp, with finger mullet or pinfish running a close second. One-ounce jigs and a wide variety of lures such as Rebels, Rapalas, Bombers and Mavericks will also take plenty of lineades.

Ft. Pierce is a real sleeper for giant snook, and few anglers are aware of the potential of this inlet. The Coast Guard station and the Worm Reef, located at the beginning of the north jetties, are excellent spots to catch snook in excess of 20 pounds. The docks that line the inlet also shelter many fish.

A medium pinfish or a 8-10 inch silver mullet is the ticket for lunker Ft. Pierce snook. If live bait is not for you, try a one-ounce jig or an oversized Rebel or Rapala with extra-strong hooks and snap rings — snook will straighten ordinary hooks and snap rings.

When snook fishing, make certain to use a two-foot length of 40-60 pound monofilament leader — snook have a razor-sharp plate on the back of their gills.

There is a limit of two snook per person, and all snook must be at least 24 inches long. A person may keep only one snook longer than 34 inches in length.

SHUPE'S SCOOP
Plan to lose some sleep if you want to catch snook. These fish feed primarily at night, or very early in the morning.

FISHING FORECAST
Expect record crowds on the river this weekend. You might want to plan your fishing trips early and late in the day.

George, from George's Bait and Tackle, reports good action with brown in the shade of lily bridges. Look for best under floating mats of water hy-cinths or other types of shade. Steve Gard at the Osteen Bridge Fish Camp reports good action with brown and catfish. Brown are hitting crickets around the new bridge and in the old river channel. Catfish love cut bait and can be caught in deep holes.

Sebastian Inlet will be packed this weekend with opening of snook season. It will be elbow-to-elbow on the jetties, so you might want to stake out your spot early in the evening. Most of the snook will be on or near the bottom, so fish your baits accordingly. If you don't get hung up every once in a while, you aren't fishing correctly.

Captain Jack at Port Canaveral reports spotty offshore action with dolphin and wahoo. King mackerel are the most consistent, and are hitting on 8-A reef and Pelican Flats. The busy line is dead slow, and inside the Port is not much better. Guide Troy Paves reports excellent action with redfish on the flats of the Banana and Indian Rivers.

Ponce Inlet has been crowded with all of the calm, beautiful weather. Jetty jammers are catching sheepshead, drum, flounder, redfish, jack crevalle and small bluefish. Use live or dead shrimp for more action. The tip of the north jetties is still the best spot to fish.

Weather affects Southern 500?

DARLINGTON S.C. — Besides competing against each other in the race track, drivers in the NASCAR Southern 500 may be battling the weather at Darlington Raceway.

Temperatures are expected to hover in the 90-degree range with a chance of showers, which means high humidity. Drivers fear temperatures inside the 40 cars starting on the 1.366-mile track will soar to well over 100 degrees. That means they will also be battling fatigue and dehydration.

A week ago at Bristol, Tenn., three drivers — Richard Petty, Davey Allison and Brett Bodine — needed relief because of the intense heat inside their cars. Petty and Allison received cold towels and oxygen in their respective pits. Bodine was taken to the infield hospital where he received an IV as well as oxygen.

Bodine was dehydrated and has spent the last week trying to replenish the fluid in his body. However, that race was at night in the east Tennessee mountains, not during the hottest part of the day in South Carolina's upstate.

Some drivers, including Rusty Wallace — one of three drivers eligible for a $100,000 bonus — have said they plan to wear a cool suit Sunday.

"We have enough weight in the right side of the car that we can take it out and put the cool suit in," said Wallace, who must win the grueling event if he expects to take the $100,000 home. "It keeps you pretty fresh. You just have to make sure there's (air) ducts in the car and make sure you can get some air moving around."

Derritte Cope and Dale Earnhardt, who also are in contention for the $100,000 bonus, don't plan to use a cool suit.

"This is one of the toughest races we run every year and if you're not ready for it and you don't have air (channeled into the car) to stay cool, you are going to be in trouble," said Earnhardt, who earned the pole position for the 367-lap race.

"I think the heat will be a factor in the way the race is run, the way the cars work, and the way the drivers run their cars."

Cope, who qualified ninth, said his crew planned to put extra ducts in the car.

Jarrett wins Gatorade 200; second Busch race victory

United Press International

DARLINGTON, S.C. — Dale Jarrett led the final 19 laps in Saturday's Gatorade 200 at Darlington Raceway to win his second Busch Series race this year.

Jarrett, 33, took the lead on lap 129 of the 147-lap event at the 1.366-mile track when Michael Waltrip was forced to pit his Pontiac for fuel.

"We should be in victory lane instead of sitting here at the gas pumps," Waltrip said.

After inheriting the lead, Jarrett merely had to concentrate on not making a mistake. With two laps remaining, Jack Sprague spun in turn one and the race finished under caution.

"Today was a day when I had to say, 'Be patient! Be patient!' and everything came to us. We didn't pick up as much as everybody else allowed down a little," said Jarrett, who led twice for 22 laps.

Jarrett started 28th, making him the first driver to come from that far back in the starting field to win a Busch Series race.

Gualdi, Marsal capture world road race titles

By JAMES RASA
United Press International

UTSUNOMIYA, Japan — Mirko Gualdi rode nearly 45 miles alone Saturday to win the men's amateur road race title and give Italy its third victory at the World Cycling Championships.

Gualdi, 22, completed the 174-kilometer (108 mile), 12-lap course in 4 hours, 39 minutes and 17 seconds. Compatriot Roberto Caruso was second, 54 seconds behind and France's Jean-Phillipe Djwa was third, two seconds behind Caruso.

Lance Armstrong, 18, of the United States, competing in his first world championships, was the leading U.S. finisher in 11th place.

Gualdi was mobbed at the finish line by 100 chanting and flag-carrying compatriots, who had flown to Japan to witness the championships.

Earlier in the day, Catherine Marsal continued a five-year French domination by easily winning the 75-kilometer (46.6-mile) women's race in 2:00:07.

American Ruthie Matthes, the reigning national road race champion, outperformed a pack of about 20 riders for second place in 2:03:51. Luisa Seghesi of Italy was third, less than a half-wheel length behind Matthes.

The women's race began Saturday morning in 86-degree temperatures and with a humidity of 80 percent. The temperature rose to 92 degrees during the men's race, but the humidity dropped more than 20 percent by the end of the day.

Last year, Gualdi finished 15th in the world in Chambéry, France, after leading for three laps during the middle stages.

On Saturday, he shared the lead with 10 others following seven laps through the pine forests near Shinin Park. But he then broke from the group while climbing a 1.2 mile (2.4 km) ascent early in the circuit.

Gualdi joined Walter Brugna, who won the professional motorpace, and tandem winners Gianluca Capitano and Federico Paris as Italy's gold medalists.

Marsal, who finished second last year to compatriot Jeannie Longo, was only briefly challenged after taking the lead while climbing the circuit's 1.2 mile hill less than three miles (4.8 km) into the race.

Longo retired following her 1989 victory, her fourth consecutive world road race title.

Marsal was the pre-race favorite and she was expected to be challenged by Holland's Leontien van Moorsel. But last week's pursuit victor and anchor of the winning team time trial squad did not start because a virus and sinus condition that left her bedridden Friday.

Dickinson takes lead at LPGA Fall

By DAN CRONIN Jr.
United Press International

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. — Judy Dickinson played her best round of the year during the first round of the LPGA Fall Charity Classic, but two of the hottest women golfers in the world are right at her heels.

Dickinson's 6-under-par 66 on Saturday put her one stroke ahead of Beth Daniel and two strokes ahead of Betsy King. Daniel has won three of her last four tournaments and finished second to King in the other one. King has three victories this year.

Dickinson, wearing a straw hat because of temperatures in the mid-90s, played a bogey-free round that included a 90-foot putt for a birdie on the par-4 11th hole. On the par-3 13th hole, she hit an eight-iron within a foot of the hole and sunk the putt for a birdie.

"I have been hitting the ball well but haven't been scoring," said Dickinson, who is president of the LPGA Players' Council. "It has been a little frustrating because I have been playing well, but finally today the putts started falling."

Ray Stewart hangs on to lead at Greater Milwaukee Open

By MICHAEL V. USONAN
United Press International

FRANKLIN, Wis. — Ray Stewart, a 36-year-old pro still seeking his first win on the PGA tour, fired a 5 under-par 67 Saturday to take a three-stroke lead after three rounds of the $900,000 Greater Milwaukee Open.

Stewart, of Vancouver, B.C., was at 18-under par 200 and led three golfers by three shots. Scott Verplank and Morris Hatalaky, who won the GMO in 1983, both bogeyed the final hole and finished with rounds of 67. Billy Haysair shot a 68 and was also at 203.

At 204 were 1986 GMO champion Corey Pavin (68), Hal Sutton (66) and Brian Claar (69).

Another 17 golfers were one or two shots further back including defending champion Greg Norman, who shot a 69 and was at 10-under 206, which means Stewart will have a lot of golfers in striking distance on the final day.

Stewart tied 1985 GMO champion Jim Thorpe for the first round lead with a 9-under par 63 and shot a 70 in the second round for a one-shot lead over Ken Green, who won the GMO in 1988. He bogeyed the first hole, a par 4, when he dumped his tee shot in the bunker but came back with six birdies for a 67.

Stewart, who never has held a third-round or even a second-round lead, said "it's great" and did not think the pressure of leading would bother him on the final day.

"I think I had a lot of pressure today and handled it well," he said.

Stewart, who came on the tour in 1983 but twice lost his card before finally winning $133,000 last year, sees a victory as a turning point in his career.

Asked what it would mean, Stewart, who has struggled this year to earn $88,000, said: "$162,000. A two-year (tour) exemption. Peace

Douglass leads seniors at GTE North Classic

United Press International

INDIANAPOLIS — Dale Douglass shot a 5-under par 67 Saturday, taking a one-shot lead over Mike Hill in the second round of the GTE North Classic seniors' golf tournament.

Douglass fired six birdies, one eagle and three bogeys on the way to a two round total of 12-under 132. Hill, who also shot 67 Saturday, was at 11-under 133.

Bruce Crampton's 67 gave him a two-day total of 135 in the 54-hole tournament at Broadmoor Country Club. Posting two-day totals of 6-under 136 were Dave Hill and Harold Henning.

Don Beis tied the tournament record with a 7-under par 65. Beis, who shot 74 in Friday's first round, posted eagles on a pair of par 5s, the 527-yard ninth hole and the 452-yard 13th.

Tied at 7-under par 137 were John Paul Cain, Charles Owens, Bobby Nichols, Reyes McBeck, Agim Bardha and Terry Dill. Two-time defending champion Gary Player shot his second straight 70 for a 140 total, and Arnold Palmer also was at 4-under following an even-par 72.

of mind. Job security for two years. It would be great."

Hatalaky, who at one time had a two-shot lead over the field at 15-under par, bogeyed both the par 5 16th and par 4 18th to fall off the lead.

Sparks fly for engineer

LAKE MARY — Charlie Wolff is charged by electricity.

Under his shock of white hair he flashes a grin. Sparks do fly when he's around his girl, Mary, who is also his wife of 53 years. And Wolff, before retirement, was a pioneer for Florida Power and Light, coaxing electric power from a humble crackle between steam powered generators, then from oil and finally from nuclear energy.

"FPL was expanding so rapidly at the end of WWII that they doubled the system every five years. Anybody that had the gumption to jump in, could. I jumped in on power plants from their conception to when they were running smoothly," he says.

Wolff, a registered engineer who earned his degree in Chemical Engineering from the University of Florida, is also registered to practice Mechanical, Electrical and Nuclear Engineering, which he did "for the fun of it."

Wolff married the diminutive Mary in 1937, just before his college graduation. They met at school in the summer of 1935, when Mary, a teacher in Oviedo, took a course at UF. She attended a dance, where Wolff spotted her and vowed on the spot to win her heart.

"I knew she was the girl for me," he says. "I told her on the first date that I was going to marry her."

"I laughed and told him he had quite a line," Mary, hands on hips, says. "He wasn't shy of girls. There aren't any wings sprouting on his shoulders!" she affectionately adds.

The couple settled in South Florida where Mary began raising the couple's children, Bette, now 52, Charlie Jr., 49, Robert B., 44, and Barbara 39. Wolff began his career with FPL.

"Mr. Keck was in charge of all power plants in the state. I was at his elbow," Wolff says.

Charlie Wolff embraces Mary, the only girl for him since 1935.

Graduating from steam to bunker 'C' oil plants, in use today, Wolff sat in on and contributed his expertise to all design meetings. He directed start-ups all over the state, including the plant currently on Lake Monroe in Sanford. Wolff even invented a system for power plants which eliminated the loud Claxton horn used to

Drummer snares an audience for charity

By JOAN KING

SANFORD — Tom Miller of Sanford, a classical snare drummer, has had a close relationship with his drums for more than half his lifetime. Miller, at 25 has been beating out rhythm for 14 years.

"Learning to play the drums accurately has given me the opportunity to learn to read and write music in addition to playing," he says.

Miller, who is single, is a sturdy-looking man. Although he is handsome, tall with dark hair, he is not contemplating marriage in the near future.

"Too busy," he says. Miller is indeed busy. He works at Publix in Sanford as a front service person, instructs Aikido on his front lawn and gives private drum lessons.

However, he is not too busy to give of his time and talent where it will be appreciated by the Muscular Dystrophy Association. Starting at 7 p.m. tonight, Miller and eight of his buddies will hold a drum-a-thon for MDA. They will play for 24 hours until 7 p.m. on tomorrow, September 3.

"Last year the best audience gathered to watch us at 2 a.m.," he says.

The nine drummers include two other Sanford residents, Scott Metts and Jimbo Speer. Donation containers will be nearby for contributions to benefit MDA.

When asked why he chooses to perform for charity, Miller asks and answers a question of his own.

"Why help people?"

Give children roots, wings on their way to adulthood

By LAGY DOMEN

LONGWOOD — Teresa Langston doesn't look like a mother who has coped with her daughter's falling grades, bouts with drugs and alcohol and deliberate disruption of the family.

Langston, who lost her first husband in Viet Nam and married Herb when her daughter Heather was 3, is a pretty, articulate woman with a toothpaste ad smile. She gestures happily as she talks about her family, which was once dysfunctional because of the manipulative daughter who "could charm the skin off a snake."

"I couldn't stand this kid!" Langston says of Heather from age 8 to 14. "She was an angry young person who wanted to call her own shots. She just kept telling me to chill out and stop nagging her."

Langston says her home became an emotional battleground, complete with screaming matches, slammed doors and angry accusations.

"We established rules and Heather was so good at outmaneuvering us. She would do as she pleased and then say she hadn't understood what we asked of her or she just forgot," Langston says.

Years later, Langston says Heather shared with her just how bad those years really were for her.

"Heather said, 'Mom, every time I got off the school bus, I would feel sick and want to throw up.' I knew exactly how she felt because every time she got off the school bus, I, too, felt like I wanted to throw up. What a horrible mess we were in!" Langston recalls.

Langston admits that the first step to recovery in her family's case was to get excellent counseling for Heather and for the family. After she and Herb understood what they needed to do with Heather, they were still faced with how to do these things.

Langston was completing course work at the University of Central Florida at the time. Working with her sociology professor, William R. Brown, Ph.D., she began to formulate her ideas into a parenting workbook.

"Herb and I realized we never developed a strategy for raising our kids. Success doesn't just happen. Just because we were a happy, middle class couple we assumed our children would turn out OK," she explains.

Langston calls her workbook "Parenting Without Pressure." Its focus is to help parents 'depart' their children; move them from dependence to independence, teach them what they need to know to function well as adults.

Langston eliminated subjectivity in child-raising and learned to deal in tangible things.

"If she broke a rule, we left no room for Heather to say 'I didn't understand.' We wrote everything down," Langston says.

The subtle shift from a nega-

Traits teens should learn on their way to maturity

1. Responsibility. Realizing your actions always have consequences and making yourself accountable for what they are.
2. Self-control. Stopping to think what is a useful and suitable reaction in a given situation instead of just "popping off."
3. Looking ahead. Planning your life, not just around today's pleasures but in terms of next week, next month, next year.
4. Understanding. Learning what others think and feel, and having concern for their welfare.
5. Motivation. Developing goals in your life, as well as the desire to work hard for them.
6. Decision-making. Learning to judge a situation and make an intelligent and appropriate choice by evaluating both the positives and negatives, including your own values.
7. Love. Learning to give as well as receive love, and to share closeness and true concern, tenderness and loyalty.
8. Self-reliance. When you have developed the other traits, you will have enough faith in your own judgment and ability to run your life well, without dependence on your parents or other adults.

One last item seems especially important in today's world:

9. Confidence in oneself as an individual. Mature people value their own selves enough to believe strongly in their own values and goals. They care what other people think but not to the point where they can be pressured into behavior they don't truly approve of for themselves. Mature people don't slavishly follow the crowd. They feel strongly enough to be a little different sometimes. They can say "no" when asked to do anything contrary to their values. These are the people others admire in the long run: the ones who have the integrity to stick to what they know is right.

Excerpted from "Parenting Without Pressure" by Teresa Langston tive to a positive family atmosphere was accomplished in stages. Langston and her husband established rules and clear discipline techniques for Heather. They discussed with her the concepts of accountability and responsibility because Heather did not have a clear understanding of the important relationship between her behavior and its consequences.

"Parents must be consistent every time," Langston says.

Teresa Langston, left, discusses children's issues with Joan Thompson, director of the Missing Childrens Center in Longwood.

Discussing consequences when a rule is broken usually results in an argument, so often parents just back down and the child has gotten his or her way.

Because everything was tangible: written down so Heather could see she had broken a rule and what the consequence would be, household arguments began to subside. The Langstons held arbitration sessions with Heather every week. Rules could be discussed and consequences changed with Heather's input. The changes made were not one-sided.

"Heather had repeatedly said I nagged too much, so I took a look at myself and told her she was right," Langston says.

WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. James Everett Shepherd, V.

Brenda Sue Chunn weds in Durham N.C. ceremony

DURHAM, N.C. — Brenda Sue Chunn and James Everett Shepherd, V are announcing their marriage today. The wedding was an event of August 11, 1990 at Duke University Chapel, Durham, North Carolina. Reverend David O. Jenkins performed the double-ring, Methodist ceremony at 1 p.m.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald W. Chunn of Millersville, Maryland and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. James E. Shepherd, IV of Longwood.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose for her vows a candlelight gown of silk linen shantung with v-neckline, large, puffed short sleeves, and chapel-length train. The bodice, embroidered with pearls and sequins, featured a dropped waistline. Her ballet-length veil was held by a Juliet cap of pearls and sequins. She carried a cascading bouquet of cream-colored roses, stephanotis, white carnations and baby's breath.

Miss Melanie Collard attended the bride as maid of honor. She wore a tea-length suit dress of teal green raw silk. She carried an arm bouquet of purple iris and cream-colored roses and her hair was French braided with cream-colored, sweetheart roses.

Bridesmaids were Miss Amy Berginski, Miss Shari Buckner and Miss Laura Day. Their gowns and flowers were identical to the honor attendant's.

Junior Bridesmaid was the groom's sister, Miss Virginia Shepherd. She wore a long dress of teal green raw silk. Her puffed short sleeves and v-neckline were identical to the bride's gown, and she carried a nosegay of purple iris and cream-colored roses.

The groom's father, Mr. James E. Shepherd, IV, served as best man. Ushers were Mr. Gerald Grant, Mr. Norman Petty, and Mr. Tyler Treat, cousin of the bride.

A reception followed the ceremony at the Washington-Duke Inn in Durham, North Carolina. Miss Catherine Mairs served as assistant at the reception.

Following a trip to Callaway Gardens in Pine Mountain, Georgia, the newlyweds are making their home in Durham, North Carolina. The bride is an engineer with Northern Telecom and the groom is a second-year law student at Duke University Law School.

Have you ever waltzed in Vienna?

Labor Day signals the end of the lazy, hazy days of summer and calls for falling, or plunging, if you like, into the busy autumn season. School bells have loudly rung in another year and socialites are gearing up for a festive social season.

Many ask, "Where has summer gone?"

Memorable trips have been taken, including a trip to Europe led by Jean McLain, seasoned world-traveler at this point. Everybody knows Jean from Mama Jean's Preschool and Child Care.

Jean and her entourage toured Czechoslovakia, Germany, Austria and Switzerland. "We had such a super time," she said.

Included on the tour was Jean visiting a friend in Munich. She marvels at the gentle folk and the cleanliness of their countries. In Munich, they enjoyed the gaiety and camaraderie of a genuine beer garden and later were "very depressed" after touring a concentration camp, now a memorial, at Dachau, outside Munich, where the ovens are still intact.

Also, Jean discovered a Woolworth's in Munich and couldn't resist some of the excellent bargains offered by the American-owned five-and-ten cents store.

Before leaving for Europe, Jean called Sen. Bob Graham's office in Washington, D.C., and arranged for an appointment with Shirley Temple Black, ambassador to Prague. But the tour became reversed and the Sanfordites didn't get to meet the former child superstar.

The group visited a cheese factory in the quaint village of Gruyeres, Switzerland and, of course, ate their share of Swiss chocolates.

In Vienna, after attending an outdoor dance concert, the audience participated in dancing. After Jean had waltzed a round or two with a school teacher from Pennsylvania, her daughter, Deborah Bowlin, became carried away and excitedly asked, "Mother, did you ever think you would waltz in Vienna?"

Also, in Vienna, the group rode on the largest ferris wheel in the world.

Accompanying Jean and Deborah on the two-week tour were Matt Bowlin, Deborah's son; Jean Bengel; Susie Dickie and children, Jeffery and Lynn; Betty Freer; Elizabeth Gallant and her grandson, Nathan Gallant; Florence Gilmartin; Marianne Linnemann; Madeleine Luttrell; Ruth Mason; Marian McVay; Eileen Picheco; Mary Schmitt, and 83-year-old Anna Olejar, the life of the party.

Jean is already planning her next trip, to Alaska.

Group studies in Germany

Another group of 18, including members of the Seminole Community College humanities class, spent a delightful nine days at Trier, Germany where they studied on an educational tour that offered three academic credits.

The group, taught by Michael Murphy, stayed at a 15th century Benedictine abbey at Trier, birthplace of Karl Marx. According to Connie Bennett, adjunct professor of English at SCC, Trier is in the middle of the wine country and reeks with history dating back to 2000 years B.C.

Among the other 18 taking the tour were Michael's wife, Lorraine, a secretary at SCC, and Kay Bartholomew, who recently retired as director of marketing from Central Florida Regional Hospital.

Couple back from vacation

Winifred "Bill" and Walter Gielow have returned from a three-month tour in their motor home that took them as far away as Mackinaw Island in northern Michigan where they stayed at the Grand Hotel.

The Gielows left Sanford on May 10 and arrived in South Bend, Indiana in time to attend a birthday party for Dr. George Green, husband of Walter's sister, Ruth, Dr. Greene, a former surgeon for the Notre Dame football team, and Ruth make their winter home in Sanford.

The couple visited in Maine; Lancaster, Pa.; Jacksonville, N.C.; Helen, Ga., and back to Panama City to see their son, Dr. Charles Hunter and children. "We visited relatives all the way across North Carolina," Bill said.

Accompanying the Gielows to South Bend was Walter's sister, Frieda Gielow of Sanford.

Knee-deep in misery

At least two dear people we know are knee-deep in misery. Catherine Wheelchel fell in the supermarket and broke her left knee cap. At the last account, she is doing as well as can be expected although she is highly immobilized. The energetic and vivacious Catherine hopes to be back on the go soon.

Dr. Frank Clontz is the victim of knee surgery for bursitis and has been on the other side of the fence. And it's not funny to the genial Sanford surgeon. He hopes to return to the operating room soon, except this time, to wield the scalpel.

Cruise benefits festival

Kay Bartholomew is back from Europe and raring to go on her pet project, the Saint Lucia Festival scheduled for December. Founder of the event honoring the Swedish Saint, Kay said, "We are working like mad on the festival. There's a whirlwind of festivity — lots of exciting things."

On Sept. 30, the Downtown Sanford merchants are sponsoring a cruise aboard the Grand Romance to benefit the second annual festival.

Revelers can cruise up the St. Johns River on the luxury liner from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. during which time complimentary hors d'oeuvres will be served. Music for the patrons' dancing and listening pleasure will be under the command of Nick Pfeiffauf and the Starlighters.

Other entertainment will be provided by the Georgetown Folk Opera under the direction of Pat Hitchmon who is putting together vignettes of the colorful, historic production just for this cruise.

Tickets are $16.50 each and are available from any downtown merchant. Friendly Travel, the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce or the St. Lucia Headquarters, 205 D First Street.

Dr. Helfrich honored

Congratulations are in order to Dr. Norman A. Helfrich Jr.

The Winter Park pediatrician, who makes his home in Sanford, will be honored October 5 by the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation in Arlington, Virginia during the Fourth Annual North American 1990 International CF Conference.

Dr. Helfrich will be recognized for his lifelong commitment to people with cystic fibrosis and 20 years as a CF Center director.

Personality yours

My aunt in Montgomery lovingly accused me of breaking my leg in Austria to get attention. Well, not exactly.

But I did get lots of attention. I deeply appreciate the cards, calls, flowers and food. Although the advice was a tad late, I appreciate that, too.

I am doing fine except for chronic cabin fever. Hopefully, this bulky, cumbersome cast will be replaced soon by a lighter version so that I can get back with the program.

Thanks to all of you. Love ya!

At 83, he's got a lot of living to do

One of Lake Mary's nicest guys turned 83 last week. Happy birthday, Harry!

Harry Terry and his wife Mary have lived in Lake Mary for 20 active years. Mary said she doesn't think she'll see Harry slow down a bit now that he's entrenched in his '80's.

"He's so young in spirit, I think he'll live to be 100," Mary said of her husband of 35 years.

When asked how it felt to be 83, Harry quipped, "I don't know, I've never done it before."

He also shared his secret for a long healthy life.

"Live it," he simply said.

Harry was a city commissioner for 10 years, serving as deputy mayor part of the time. He is an active vegetarian and served on its Board of Directors. He is currently on the board of the Community Improvement Association. He is a past president of Optimists Club. Harry is also very involved as chairman of the Building Committee for the First Presbyterian Church of Lake Mary, whose new building is under construction on Longwood-Lake Mary Road.

Harry did take time out to travel to Daytona where Mary's sister Rebecca Furlough threw a birthday party for him.

Mary said living with this involved, wonderful man is delightful.

"I'm grateful for each year we have together," she said.

Help is on the way

Lake Mary resident Betty Jane McClune will soon find out just what special neighbors residents of this town can be. Betty has a problem with the roofs of her shed and garage, which she must repair under city codes according to Building Official Stan Welling. She'll have a little help from her friends, though. Frank Liberator is organizing volunteers to assist the older lady on a Saturday in the near future. Lake Mary Police Officer Paul Legge was one of the first to volunteer his time.

"Stan Welling was very cooperative when I spoke to him," Frank said.

"We're here to help," Stan said.

To volunteer a few hours on Saturday for Betty, call Frank at 323-4120.

Get involved with the arts

Don Steedly, chairman of the Volunteer Committee of the Lake Mary-Heathrow Festival of the Arts, is looking for adults, students, teenagers, fraternities, sororities, businesses and civic groups to assist staff committees between the hours of 9 a.m. and

Seniors feel safe

Alta On.brea said the program presented to Lake Mary Seniors by Maria Chirnaide, a representative of Citizens Against Crime "was very dramatic, especially after recent events in Gainesville."

Lake Mary Seniors listen to Maria Chirnaide, crime consultant for Citizens Against Crime.

Alta said to remember one word: awareness. Keep your eyes open to circumstances. Don't go out alone at night. Look around for trouble, she said.

The seniors were amazed when Maria pulled a gun from the waistband of her skirt. She discharged it in the building after distracting the group with her gestures. "We never even saw it in her hand," Alta admitted. "It shows you how quickly things can happen."

Alta did say Maria shot blanks.

Dr. Richard Albury, the new pastor of the Grace United Methodist Church in Lake Mary dropped in Tuesday to meet the seniors in his effort to get acquainted with community members. The seniors gave him a warm welcome to the area.

Alta also said things are gearing up for fall.

"We have line dancing scheduled for October and many more exciting events in the works. We'll be back in the swing as soon as all our members return from summer vacations," she said.

Happy birthday, Charlie

Lake Mary resident Charlie Wolf turned 78 last week. Happy birthday, Charlie! He admits only to being 39 the second time around.

Teen's reason to join convent is nunsense

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Abby is on a two-week vacation. Following is a selection of some of her favorite past letters.)

DEAR ABBY: I am 15 and I want to join a convent. The problem is, I am not Catholic. I'm not really anything, but I want to become a nun because I've never had a date and I'll probably never have one, and if I were a nun in a convent I wouldn't have to make any excuses. After all, who ridicules a nun for not having a boyfriend?

How does a girl go about signing up to be a nun? Please answer in the paper because I don't have any privacy here. If anyone in my family found out I asked you such a question, I'd never hear the end of it.

FUTURE NUN
DEAR FUTURE NUN: Sorry, dear, a convent is not a place for a girl to hide because she thinks she needs an excuse for not having a boyfriend. Women become nuns because of their deep religious convictions and desire to dedicate their lives to the service of their church. You need a mature friend with whom you can talk frankly about your feelings. Counseling from a Catholic priest could be extremely helpful.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 34-year-old woman earning a top salary as an executive, but when it comes to managing my personal life, I'm a dummy.

For the last two years, I've had this 28-year-old fellow living with me. I'm hooked on him. He can't hold a job because he hates to get up in the morning, so I've been supporting him. My friends tell me to kick him out, but I can't bring myself to because he's wonderful company and I really enjoy living with him.

He admits to seeing other girls while I'm at work and insists that there's nothing wrong with it as long as we're not married.

Abby, he wants to marry me, and says that once we're married he'll shape up, get a job and work steady, but I'm leery. Half of me says, "Marry him" and the other half says, "Don't." What do you say?

TORN APART
DEAR TORN: Listen to the half with the brains in it and don't marry him.

FROM ARIZONA: I am a wife and mother of two fine sons. In 1987, I made a whopper of a mistake and committed a crime for which I was convicted of a felony. I was a paralegal in a law office and embezzled a considerable amount of money. I was caught and sentenced — but was placed on probation for at least five years and must now live for the rest of my life with a felony conviction. By the way, I lost my right to vote until my sentence is completed, and can never work in law enforcement or be a security guard.

Wolff

page workers in the 1950's. Individual beepers didn't work because iron and steel in the plants played havoc with the electromagnetic fields.

"There was no range. The alternative was a radio with a console, which someone had to operate. My system converted the beeping horns into radio code which eliminated the use of the console," Wolff explains.

He did not patent his revolutionary idea.

"Once I got something working in the plant, I wanted to move on and be done with it," he says.

PPL eventually created a special title for Wolff: Coordinating Engineer.

"I didn't like paperwork, so I told them thank you very much, but I wanted to be in on design, repair and start-ups. I wanted to work with the machines," he says.

Wolff "was excited to learn about nuclear power" when it emerged in 1970.

"It was ultra-secret," he says. "You could actually use power plants to make atomic bombs," he remembers.

After FBI clearance, eight people became the nucleus of the entire nuclear program. Wolff included.

"I was in on all meetings of every kind," he says.

The closest Wolff says he ever came to a nuclear disaster was "when a safety valve blew off the line. If fuel had been in the reactor, well, all safety equipment would have come into play."

But Wolff says nuclear power is safe.

"There is no such thing as absolute safety. I'm not half as leery of walking into one of the nuclear plants as I am about what we'll do with spent fuel from nuclear reactors. It will be here for a millenium," he says.

Wolff retired in 1978. He and Mary moved back to Lake Mary last year. Wolff, who turned 78 last week, is now content to stay home and play with his computer.

"Actually I've just finished my second 39th birthday he chuckles and says. I bought Mary this house and turned her loose. My chief aim now is to do absolutely no useful work."

Mary, a political and social activist, breezes in to fix Charlie's lunch. He embraces her in a big bear hug. Sparks fly. The electricity is magic.

"She's my girlfriend," he says. "He's cute," she answers.

Parenting

"When she realized I would give some, she did too."

Heather earned privileges and increased freedom by becoming accountable for her own actions. Langston also addresses a mistake many parents make with their children.

"We set them up to be successful failures," she says, explaining that too many parents are quick to point out negative things. "We say things like 'Why can't you be more like your sister?' or 'That was sure stupid!' and after awhile, the child lives down to what you've said."

How is Langston's troubled little girl today?

Heather is a senior at Stetson University and doing just fine, according to Langston.

"She has wings and roots. She's such a neat kid!" Langston, bubbling with pride, says. "Now there's laughter where there was nothing but tears."

'Billy' sheds light on abductions

By Whitley Strieber
 Putnam's, 288 pp., $19.95

Whitley Strieber writes books that shock, including "Communion" and "The Wolfen." But perhaps his most shocking will be "Billy," the dreadful story of a very sick man, Barton Royal, who gets his kicks from abducting little boys and torturing them to death.

Royal, of course, justifies his actions by believing he can, at first, be a better parent to the boys. But it's clear his own upbringing created a devious, deceitful, dangerous monster.

Lucky for 19-year-old Billy Neary of Sevensville, Iowa, that he's a bright boy with a father, mother and sister who will move heaven and Earth to bring him home from his "dungeon" in California's Hollywood Hills.

Parents of missing children will cringe as they learn, from Strieber, that police agencies are not well prepared to deal with "stranger" abductions. They will also, most likely, get very angry with Strieber for providing what is basically a blueprint for stealing a child. And they will probably become physically ill when they read that Royal's acts of sadistic brutality claimed the lives of 13 young boys before Billy.

Strieber tries to balance all his well-written horrors with Billy's rescue and a final author's note urging his readers to recognize the problem of child abduction.

But this is a book that should not have been written and once written should not have been published. This book, while a good read, is truly nasty.

Drummer

Miller easily relates how his father died in New York while helping someone in distress.

"My father was murdered while helping someone who was being mugged. He went to the victim's aid and the mugger killed him. I was just a little kid but I remember. He did not die in vain. It was an honorable thing to do, to help someone. I think he was here."

Continuing, Miller speaks of his own efforts.

"Helping out is easy for me as I'm very religious and it fits my personality. Also, I've been influenced by my father," he says.

There have been others who have influenced Miller's life, especially those in the music world. He has met famous drummers and musicians who have impressed and encouraged him to study, practice, and enjoy his music. In 1966, he met Buddy Rich. As a youngster, Miller met Steve Smith, a drummer with the rock group, Journey Rock. Billy Cobham, a fusion drummer who plays rock jazz, and Gregg Bennett who plays with the David Lee Roth band, are also with whom he has met.

Miller wrote to Bennett after he found the famous drummer's address in a magazine. They corresponded, met and became friends. Bennett previously criticized Miller's drumming technique. In 1968, Miller met Don Falshaw at a drum clinic where Falshaw taught him different patterns in drumming. Miller also knows Joe Morris, who drums for Whitney Houston; Steven Phillip; Dennis Chambers and Vinnie Colavita, who showed Miller stick patterns.

Miller is grateful for the help he has received in the past and more recently while planning the benefit. Help comes from people like Pat Brown, spokesman for Pro-Mark of Texas, which has donated all of the drum sticks. Sandra DeConti, spokesman for Ramco Inc. of California, arranged for donation of all drum heads to be used for the benefit.

Miller was grateful to other people.

"Cory Sharow works very hard; he has taken charge of everything we do. He makes the calls and gets things going," who he says works equally hard and also offers moral support.

"Eric Charles and Curtis Donahou and everybody else who helped, I thank them. And of course my family is always for me," he says.

Tonight and tomorrow every visitor to the Wal-Mart Plaza will have an opportunity to listen to Miller and his friends as they beat the drums for AIDS. From the first drum roll, enjoy a thundering treat from a young man who learned about helping others from his dad.

Do parents care about education?

In Seminole County parents are involved

By WENDI BOHANNON
Herald staff writer

While national trends show that parents are apathetic toward their children's education, Seminole County parent groups show that that is anything but the case in this district.

Ingrid McCollum, president of the district wide Local School Advisory Committee said that while membership has increased steadily, it has become more and more difficult to find consistent leadership for some groups.

"With more and more moms going back to work," McCollum said, "some groups have a little trouble finding a president, especially if they meet during the day."

Judy Smith, president of the Seminole County Council of PTAs agreed.

"I think that the number of very active people in the PTA has dropped," she said. "That's probably due to the increase of women in the workforce who were traditionally very active in the PTA."

Smith said that in Seminole County however there are many parents who view the PTA as a way of voicing their opinions on local issues that are key to education.

"We have the bond issue that failed earlier this year," she said. "There's the issue of growth, the funding problems...all of these things bring parents out and get them involved in the schools."

McCollum said that the Local School Advisory Committees were designed to get the parents involved in the schools in an advisory capacity. She said the groups are made up of both men and women at a more equal ratio than the PTA, but women have still traditionally been in leadership roles to the LSACs.

"Parents still want, very much, to be involved in their children's education," she said. "The problems have come in finding the parents who have enough time to take on leadership roles."

Smith said that Seminole County parents are extraordinarily involved in the schools and in the educational process of their children.

"Seminole County may be unusual," she said. "We have parents looking for any way that they can get involved in the betterment of education here."

Smith said the PTA has a "core group" of parents who are leaders in the school groups, but there are a "healthy number" who join and are "at least minimally active" in the PTA.

There are various other ways in which parents get involved with their students' education.

The district offers parents an opportunity to be involved on committees which offer recommendations on such issues as text book selection, year round education, student conduct and report card design.

According to district officials there has never been any trouble recruiting parents to serve on the committees.

"Parents are always anxious to get involved in making their students' education better," said Dick Hofmann, the district's community relations coordinator. "The people of Seminole County are always prepared to get involved."

Recent national studies have shown, to the contrary, that parents are failing to play a crucial role in their children's education, the American Association of Parents and Children, said last week.

A survey of 3,000 teachers conducted by the group in all 50 states and Washington, D.C., asked the teachers if they viewed parental apathy as a serious concern. Other questions involved the pupil-teacher ratio in each state, average teacher salaries, expenditures per pupil, high school graduation rate and college entrance SAT or ACT test scores.

"When nine out of 10 school teachers report parental apathy as a major concern it is obvious that changes in the classroom will only go so far in turning around the national crisis in education," said Scott Stapf, the association's executive director.

"For the sake of their children, parents should not make the mistake of assuming that the improvement of U.S. academic achievement is a matter in which they have little or no role," Stapf said.

Geneva's Stone named a Kellogg Fellow

By WENDI BOHANNON
Herald staff writer

GENEVA — Dr. Stanley H. Stone, a resident of Geneva since 1977, who chairs the vocational programs department at Valencia Community College in Orlando, has been selected as a Kellogg Fellow in the Kellogg Leadership Fellows Program.

Stone, who has been at Valencia Community College for 10 years, came to Seminole County a dozen years ago after graduating from the Howard University Law School in Washington, D.C.

After a year and a half as an attorney with Central Florida Legal Services in Sanford and a year in the same capacity with the City of Sanford, he went to Valencia as a program director in the legal courses department.

After two years he began his current position as department chairman, where he oversees courses in the vocational department where 23 associate degree programs are available.

He still teaches two law-related classes per semester at Valencia.

The Kellogg Leadership Fellows Program is sponsored by the League for Innovation in the Community College and the University of Texas at Austin.

A national panel selected the 30 participants in the fellows program from a pool over nearly 300 applicants from across the country.

"It's a very prestigious honor to be selected for this program," said Myra Archer, communications assistant at Valencia.

The year-long program is designed to assist the selected fellows in developing their leadership skills for advanced leadership positions in the community college system.

Stone and the other project participants will participate in a series of seminars at community colleges around the country that will culminate in a capstone seminar at the League for Innovation in Community Colleges annual convention next summer.

Dr. Stanley Stone of Geneva received a Kellogg's fellowship.

Getting students in default to pay up

United Press International

The federal Guaranteed Student Loan program provides low-interest, long-term loans for post-secondary education to students in financial need. However, loan defaults, many of which involve trade schools, are expected to reach $2.4 billion in fiscal year 1990, about 44 percent of the Education Department's entire $5.5 billion budget for the program this year. According to the U.S. Department of Education, about $12 billion will be loans to about 5 million students during fiscal year 1990.

In the handbook called "Reducing Student Loan Defaults: A Plan for Action," Congress said all those involved must accept a share of the blame for the student loan default crisis and take responsibility for resolving the problem.

It said that "only through such cooperation" can the problem be reduced to the student loan program. Defaults are a waste of valuable student aid money and must be stopped.

The Higher Education Assistance Foundation, or HEAF — one of the largest guarantors of student loans — is being urged to coordinate efforts with other guarantors. HEAF, like other guarantors, issues student loans by paying bank lenders 100 percent of a defaulted loan.

The Education Department, in turn, releases the guarantors from all or a large amount, usually 60 percent, if defaults reach a certain level. HEAF is on the brink of collapse because it is losing the other 20 percent.

In the last few weeks, the Student Loan Marketing Association, known as Sallie Mae, came to HEAF's rescue by extending an additional $600 million in credit. Education Department officials said negotiations continue for a more permanent solution for HEAF.

Among the recommendations in the handbook, which grew out of 1989 Education Department proposals on default reduction:

- Four-year institutions should counsel students on loan responsibility, work closely with lenders, improve the quality of education, improve retention programs to keep students in school, reduce defaults by dropouts, teach students to budget and manage their personal finances, keep in touch with lenders after they leave school and analyze the default problem at the institution and laboratory.

- Guarantors agencies should monitor lenders and post-secondary institutions and fully enforce existing laws and regulations, help institutions in default reduction efforts, help lenders collect payments before loan money default and return collection agencies.

Congress and the handbook is not intended for students. If they have questions, they should call the Student Loan and Information Office at 1-800-854-5850.

Caesarean once, maybe not twice

By KEN STEIN
UPI Science Editor

WASHINGTON — More than half of women who undergo a Caesarean section to deliver a baby can successfully avoid the costly, risky surgical procedure for their next pregnancy, a survey showed recently.

The survey also found younger doctors were more likely to encourage pregnant patients to try natural, vaginal deliveries after previously having undergone surgical deliveries.

But the survey showed many women still resist the idea and are more likely to be swayed by younger, female physicians.

"The results are encouraging in that they show that six out of 10 pregnant women who try ... vaginal birth after Caesarean successfully deliver vaginally," said Dr. Mary Jo O'Sullivan of the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, which commissioned the survey. "They also suggest, however, a need to further educate women about this option."

Caesarean sections involve surgically removing the baby from the womb rather than delivering the child naturally through the vagina. The procedure is designed for when problems develop during delivery that threaten the mother or baby. But Caesarean sections are more expensive than normal vaginal deliveries, carry greater risks of infections and other complications for the mother and add to recovery time.

Studies have shown too many women undergo the procedure, especially after having undergone a Caesarean once. Although it had been standard medical practice to routinely perform Caesareans on women who had previously had one that practice has been shown to be unnecessary.

But despite efforts to reduce the number of Caesarean births in the United States, the rate has continued to skyrocket. About 967,000 Caesarean sections were performed in the United States in 1980, representing more than a quarter of all births. Much of the increase has been blamed on repeat Caesareans.

The new survey of 2,313 obstetricians-gynecologists, conducted by Opinion Research Corp. of Princeton, N.J., found 95 percent of doctors under age 40 said they encouraged women who previously had had a Caesarean section to attempt a vaginal birth compared to 84 percent of doctors over age 55.

The survey found only 58 percent of women whose doctors suggested they try a vaginal delivery agreed to do so, even though more than 63 percent who tried a vaginal birth after a previous Caesarean section succeeded.

"While it is encouraging that many doctors, especially younger doctors, appear to be advocating (vaginal births), the fact that 40 percent of patients are not choosing the option suggests that we need to do a better job educating women about this possibility," O'Sullivan said.

"One has to accept that not all women are going to choose (vaginal births) either for personal reasons or because of a previous rather long and difficult labor," she said.

L-tryptophan ingredient probed

By KEN STEIN
United Press International

ATLANTA — Government researchers may have identified the substance that contaminated the dietary supplement L-tryptophan and caused a potentially deadly blood disorder in at least 1,500 Americans, a report said Thursday.

An analysis of an agent suspected as the cause of the muscle-weakening disease eosinophilia myalgia syndrome or EMS shows it is similar in structure to the amino acid itself, a U.S. Centers for Disease Control report said.

The researchers found the substance, called 5-hydroxytryptophan, by analyzing samples of L-tryptophan taken by people stricken by EMS, the CDC said in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report.

Symptoms of the rare disorder include severe muscle pain, fatigue, breathing difficulties, cough, skin rashes, swelling of the arms and legs and fever. Some symptoms disappear while others persist or reappear, in some cases, patients have signs of heart failure and paralysis.

The over-the-counter supplement was commonly taken for insomnia, premenstrual syndrome, stress reduction and other ailments before the FDA ordered it off the market after the EMS outbreak surfaced.

As of Aug. 24, 1,536 EMS cases had been reported in the United States and Puerto Rico. Twenty-seven people have died from the disease.

Minnesota and Oregon health officials found earlier this year that EMS cases only occurred among people who had ingested the supplement manufactured by one of six Japanese producers, a company called Showa Denko K.K. of Tokyo.

The researchers concluded the disease was caused by a substance used in the company's unique method of processing L-tryptophan or a byproduct of that process.

Such since that discovery has been focused on locating and reprocessing the substance in the contaminated supply as it can be tested in animals to determine if it, in fact, causes the disease.

"It may be the causative agent or it may only be a marker of the process that produces the causative agent," said Larry Needham, a CDC chemist working to confirm that the L-tryptophan derivative causes EMS. "Until we take this compound and test it in animals to see if it produces EMS or EMS-like symptoms, we cannot definitely be sure it is the cause."

Dr. Michael Osterholm, Minnesota state epidemiologist, said researchers in his laboratory, have arrived at similar conclusions about the same substance.

"It is statistically very strongly implicated as the one chemical constituent that differed in its presence in products used by cases versus product used by healthy people," Osterholm said. "And when it was present, it was present in higher levels."

The Minnesota Department of Health, working with researchers at the Mayo Clinic, reported Aug. 9 that the mystery agent may have been introduced by a 1986 change in the company's manufacturing process.

From noon to 2:30 p.m. families can enjoy a variety of activities including relay games, orienteering artists and friebes design and demonstrations, plus have their photograph taken with Universal Studios cameras.

Then at 2:30 p.m. the fun moves to the Lake Eola amphitheater where Peter Yarrow of Peter, Paul and Mary, will perform in concert.

KNEE INJURIES

The knee is the most frequently injured joint in many sports, and they are the leading cause of long-term disability from sports. However, any type of physical activity can lead to a serious knee injury. Knee injuries are the main reason for early retirement for young athletes as well as for many years of disability for children and adolescents. The American public has become involved in various activities ranging from gym classes for preadolescents to competitive Olympic games. Many of us tend to ignore our knees when they are working normally. When a problem knee causes discomfort and pain with normal activities, we realize how important the knees are. Certain symptoms are often warning signs for knee problems. Pain is the most common complaint ranging from vague discomfort to sudden severe pain with inability to bear weight. Swelling, locking, limited motion and grinding and creaking are all symptoms due to knee problems. If you have any persistent pain or a combination of these problems, it is important to see your Orthopedic Surgeon as soon as possible. Knee problems tend to worsen when the knee is not fully used because of injury or disuse. Since there are many causes of knee problems, an Orthopedic Surgeon's evaluation will give you the best opportunity to become pain free and return to your level of activity.

The key to keeping your knee functioning well is to recognize a problem knee that is present and have it treated early by a physician who is able to diagnose as well as correctly treat the knee problem.

Revenues for the quarter amounted to $9.6 million, down from $10.3 last year. For the six months ended July 31, Quadrex earned $151,000, or 2 cents a share, compared with a loss of $5.4 million, or 70 cents a share, for the same period last year. Revenues from continuing operations totaled $17.8 million, down from $21.6 million for the like period last year. "We are very encouraged by the trend which began in the first quarter," said Chairman William B. Derrickson. "More importantly, our level of orders at this time offers an indication that positive results will continue."

Wrong address spurs lawsuit

United Press International

AUSTIN, Texas — A couple's antique furniture, family photographs and other possessions accumulated in 36 years of marriage were hauled to a landfill and bulldozed over due to a management company's clerical error.

"At first it was such a shock," said Marjorie Glaser, 53, who discovered the house that she had lived in for nearly 35 years was virtually empty. "We had our things here, our memories and stuff. That's why it's so upsetting."

According to a federal lawsuit filed last week by Glaser and her husband, Kenneth, 55, workers from a company that had the wrong address cleaned out their home and dumped their possessions in a landfill.

Those possessions included antique furniture, family photographs, a set of silver they got for their 25th wedding anniversary and nearly every other item in the house. The couple pegged the loss at $60,000.

The lawsuit, which seeks actual damages plus $3 million in punitive damages, was filed against the J.B. Goodwin Management Corp., whose employees threw away the couple's belongings.

The company has a contract with the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development to take possession of homes that HUD has foreclosed on when owners fail to make their house payments.

HUD notified the company last year that a house at 5319 Harmon Avenue in north Austin had been foreclosed on and needed to be secured. According to the lawsuit, J.B. Goodwin employees took down the Glaser's address at 5311 Harmon.

Kenneth Glaser said he knew something was wrong last Dec. 8 when he found an FBI sign on the house saying it belonged to the government and that he could not enter the home. Glaser had paid off the loan on the house 25 years ago.

Barclay Place wins design award

From staff reports

HEATHROW — Described by one judge as "the most distinctive and architecturally sensitive apartment community I've ever seen," Barclay Place at Heathrow has earned the highest design honor — the Golden Aurora Award — in the 1990 Aurora Awards of the Southeast Builders Conference.

The crowning achievement in this prestigious 11-year-old design competition, which covered an 11-state southern region, goes to a Winter Park-based architect, Fugleberg Koch, and a team that includes builder/developer Epoch Properties, Inc. of Winter Park and the Orlando land planning firm of Herbert Halback, Inc.

Top overall architect was the Evans Group architects of Orlando, Arvida/Palm Beach and Palo Alto, Calif., interior merchandiser Karen Butera with two awards each followed by The Architects Studio of Tampa and Miami architect Barry Sugarman with three each.

Major corporate sponsors for the Aurora Awards are the American Hardboard Association, BOSE Corporation, Florida's investor-owned electric utilities, Hughes Supply/Ejler Plumbing Products, Monitor Roof Tile, Sears Contract Sales, and WILSONART/Ralph Wilson Plastics Company, according to Aurora chairman Ken Hall, KR2H Marketing/Media Relations, Orlando.

Conceived as an executive rental community, Barclay Place is a single-story and townhouse development that focuses on the executive relocation and "single-again" markets. Rents range from $650 to $945. Small buildings with flexible footprints permitted an animated building placement on a heavily wooded site. Simple, but distinctive geometric forms became the icon of the project's architecture and program. The low, archway and other apertures unify the product into a total community statement.

Privacy walls and entry courtyards coupled with the single-story approach produced very proprietary images and character. Volume ceilings with open stairwells, plant ledges and transom windows gave stately values to an otherwise simple plan geometry. Extensive use of glass, particularly in corner applications, provided for openness and brightness characteristically not found in most rental developments.

"Finally, apartments with a real feeling of home," said an Aurora judge. "They achieved a human scale in architecture. They provided a buffer from the main road. The property is so clean and refined. And it can serve as a model for others because it's on the kind of infill site you'll find in every market in the country."

Other Grand Award winners are: Baths: Builder Bill Silliman, Silliman Homes, Inc., Maitland, captured the top honor for the bath in "The Boca," a custom home in Mulrfield Village, Heathrow. Hunnam & Associates, architects, Winter Park, and interior merchandiser Wendy Kessler of Design Specifications, Maitland, combined their talents to produce a bath that featured an electrical closet carousel, mirrored doors accentuating a dressing area, a Roman tub deck with sculptured polished brass fixtures, and a 18-foot long glass block wall that is the masterful centerpiece of the room.

Residential development: The Lake Forest community in Sanford took top honors for the work of builder/developer NTS Florida Properties, Inc. of Longwood, landscape architects/land planners Glatting Lopez Kercher, Anglin, Inc. and Post Buckley Schuh & Jernigan, Inc. of Orlando and Maitland-based architects Charlan Brock & Associates. The 529-acre community was master planned in an environment of towering, mature palms, pines and oaks that were carefully preserved and a 55-acre man-made lake. The clubhouse has a great room, dance floor, and full-service kitchen and bar area. The architectural standards allow for individual creativity but maintain the overall ambience and quality of the community where lots range from $50,000 to 150,000 and homes $200,000 to $700,000.

State seeks to bar penny stock dealers

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — The state comptroller is seeking to bar five penny stock dealers from doing business in Florida for allegedly fleecing consumers through boiler-room sales operations, officials said Thursday.

The cease and desist orders filed against the dealers also target 40 individuals identified as principals of the companies. The orders would bar those individuals from participating in the securities business in Florida.

The state is also seeking to impose unspecified fines on the dealers.

The state Office of the Comptroller said two of the five firms — First Eagle Inc. of Colorado and Princeton Financial Group Inc. of New York — continue to operate offices in Florida.

First Eagle operates offices in Boca Raton and Longwood, while Princeton Financial maintains an office in Sarasota, officials said.

The three other companies — Wellshire Securities Inc. of New York, Hampton Securities Inc. of West Palm Beach and Dean Johnson and Burke Securities Inc. of Boca Raton — have ceased operations in the state.

State Comptroller Gerald Lewis said the firms allegedly defrauded customers by charging excessive fees on stocks they sold.

Federated, subsidiaries to talk with IRS

United Press International

CINCINNATI — Federated Stores Inc. and two subsidiaries say they will negotiate with the Internal Revenue Service on IRS claims for $585.6 million in additional taxes sought as part of the companies' bankruptcy reorganization.

The subsidiaries are the Allied Stores Corp. and Federated Department Stores Inc.

The companies said the IRS filing, which had been expected by the Sept. 4 bar date for the IRS's submission of claims, was an important step in expediting emergence from Chapter 11.

The companies said they dispute and will vigorously defend against the $585.6 million in claims compiled by the IRS, but they noted the IRS staff had been extremely cooperative in helping to expedite the Chapter 11 tax claims process.

The companies said they with IRS representatives on hoped to negotiate a settlement most of the issues.
