Serious Thinking Should Be Given Civil Defense Questions, Problems

In the event of a nuclear bomb attack, a population would have two choices of action to increase its chances of survival: it could seek shelter. If shelter was available, or it could evacuate target areas. Thus far the Civil Defense Administration's emphasis has been largely on evacuation of big cities and other targets.

There is a rather strong body of opinion which holds that evacuation plans have been made obsolete by the development of super-bombs whose radio-active fallout casts a deadly shadow far beyond the blast area. This point of view has been given a new boost by the House government operations committee, which now recommends a vast system of air raid shelters costing 20 billion dollars or more.

There is little doubt that the ideal situation, other things being equal, would be to have adequate bomb and fallout shelters linked to broad escape routes so that the great majority of the population could get away and safely underground. Such shelters stocked with supplies, would greatly reduce the hazards.

The matter is complicated, however, by many serious questions. One must ask, for example, to what extent the nation's resources of funds, manpower and materials should be strained to put through such a program. Should some of our military funds be diverted for such a project? What would be the psychological impact of honeycombing the nation with underground shelters? As a practical matter, is it even sensible to think in terms of giving the entire population a measure of protection against nuclear attack, or should effort be concentrated in key industrial areas?

These and many other related questions must be dealt with. The problem, including its psychological aspects, its probable effect on our economy, and its relation to military defenses, must be considered as a whole.

Florida citizens and civil defense administration officials will remember, as they mull over the questions that must be considered, that the area in which we live is one that has been pointed to as vulnerable.

The degree to which our Florida area is susceptible to being vulnerable compared to industrial and heavily populated areas should be a matter of consideration, too.

All of us want to feel that each citizen is being protected in every way possible with no one being given any greater consideration than the other.

Bomb shelters? Evacuation areas? Or an educated citizenry? The question must be taken seriously in light of developments from day to day.

Show Appreciation To Teachers

Those who teach our children in the public schools are among the most important citizens in the community. This does not mean that they are always recognized as such. In all too many cases neither their financial rewards nor their prestige fits the contribution they make to society.

Although teachers' salaries have gone up, their real income in terms of purchasing power has not kept pace with the rise in business and industry. A recent study shows that financially speaking, it is not now as attractive to be a teacher as it was in the years just before World War II.

In Florida, teachers' salaries have been increased by a substantial margin even though in other states' salaries will not soon be boosted to catch up with the gains made by workers in business and industry. Our teachers are now in an enviable position momentarily, yet a higher goal must be looked forward to if we are to attract teachers of high quality in sufficient number to assure a good education for our children.

In the meantime, there is one thing that any community can do to improve the situation which now exists. Groups and individuals can make a point of demonstrating their appreciation of the work that teachers are doing. They can show that they recognize teachers as citizens whose good work is fundamental to the community's future. Such recognition is no substitute, remember, for adequate financial rewards. But it will go a long way toward showing the teachers that their efforts are understood and appreciated. This, too, is a reward worth having.

In retrospect, however, there is a goal for teachers to reach. William G. Carr, executive secretary of the National Education Association said, in a recent address before the general session of the NEA Centennial Convention, "As quantity was the primary goal for the first century, so will quality be our chief aim for the second. We have been concerned that every child get into school. Now we must ask how much each child gets out of school."

As citizens strive to place the teacher in his or her proper importance in the community, teachers will heed the admonitions of Mr. Carr when he said of schools . . . "they will never be finishing schools; they will always be beginning schools; their chief aim will be . . . to launch young people upon a career in life-long learning . . ."

And he continued: "our schools will turn with renewed diligence and skill to the task of preparing for citizenship in the world of today and tomorrow. We shall realize . . . it is not sufficient to take all the tricks in the diplomatic card game, or to win the race for intercontinental missiles, or to train more engineers than Russia if in doing so we fail to teach by precept and example the skills and duties of responsible citizenship.

We have a very good case for properly financing high-quality education. That case rests, first, on high ideals, the stubborn conviction that every human being should have a fair chance through a high quality of education to develop to the full whatever capacities he may possess . . ."

Citizens will be looking toward the teacher for all that they have dreamed for in education for their children because of the extra burden which has been placed upon them through the channels of taxation.

The coming year, 1957-1958 should be the biggest year in the history of our schools—for the teacher, for the parents, and for the children.

TODAY'S THOUGHT

"And he go blind see in no number tender-hearted, forgetting each other, even as food give in Christ forgive you."

Foreign News Commentary

UNITED STATES CORRESPONDENT

Premier Habib Bourguiba is getting ready to set himself up as the "strong man" of Tunisia in Northwest Africa.

It seems as if he intends to throw Bey Siou Mohammed el-Amm of the throne on Thursday and proclaim a republic.

Apparently the only way Mohammed can avoid being ousted forcibly is to beat Bourguiba to it by abdicating.

Bourguiba became the head man in Tunisia after his country, long a French protectorate, attained its independence on March 20, 1956.

Ever since he became premier, he has been building up his personal authority.

Key Virtually Prisoner

For a long time the 75-year-old Bey, nominally Tunisia's ruler, has been virtually a prisoner in his palace near Tunis, juggling with his self-made clocks and his do-it-yourself cabinet making tools.

Bourguiba decided last week that the time had come to make his supreme leadership official. He announced in his weekly radio broadcast that the government was going to "take mea-

Call M. D. If Widow Bites

By NORMAN M. BUNNIM, M.D.

A VACATION menace in many sections of the country is the black widow spider. Children especially are likely victims of this dangerous insect whose bite is sometimes fatal.

In many cases, the site of the bite might not be seen, and worried parents might lose valuable time trying to figure out what made their youngster ill. So it's extremely important to be able to recognize the symptoms in order to begin proper treatment promptly.

Produces Sharp Pain

The bite produces a sharp pain which usually disappears pretty rapidly. Occasionally, it will linger for as long as four or five hours. For the next 15 minutes or half an hour the victim might feel perfectly comfortable.

Then local muscular spasms will set in. The victim will be extremely weak and probably will complain of excruciating pain in the limbs. Most likely he'll develop a very tender and rigid abdomen.

Labored Breathing

Speech may become difficult and his breathing labored. The pulse will be feeble and the heart beat slowed. There may be a rise in temperature, an increase in blood pressure, headache and vomiting.

Small children may get convulsions.

There's not much you can do for the victim. Best thing is to call a doctor as quickly as possible.

Despite its rather violent symptoms, a black widow bite seldom is fatal. Most of those that are, are caused by the female of the species.

The black widow is oval black and about 1/2 inch long.

Additional Markings

The mature female has one red or orange hourglass marking on its belly. The immature female has three additional spots of similar color on its back.

The spiders prefer dark and damp places. That's why they often are found in basements, garages and around country homes.

A good way of getting rid of them is to spray their haunts with a 10 per cent solution of DDT in benzene.

We have many medicines which provide us with an effective way of dealing with spider bites.

To Kill Pain

Morphine and phenobarbital sodium can be used to kill the pain. An intravenous injection of sodium gluconate usually produces dramatic relief. Local anesthetic novocaine rounds out the treatment and symptoms usually subside within a couple of hours.

Cotton Consumption Predicted

WASHINGTON — The Agriculture Department predicted that cotton consumption during the 1957-58 marketing year beginning Aug. 1 would range between 13 1/2 and 15 million bales.

The center of this range would be more than 2 million bales below 1956-57, but larger than in any other season since 1951-52.

Economists writing in the department's publication, "The Cotton Situation," forecast domestic consumption in the new marketing year at "slightly above" the 8,750,000 bales consumed domestically in 1956-57.

Exports for next season were forecast at 4 1/2 to 6 million bales. Exports for the 1956-57 season which closes July 31 were estimated at about 7,800,000 bales. This compares with 2,200,000 bales a year earlier and is the largest since the 1932-33 season.

The department estimated the carryover of cotton on Aug. 1 would be about 11,400,000 bales. This is more than 3 million less than the record high of a year ago and compares with 11,200,000 bales in 1955.

The first production estimate of 1957 cotton will be made in August. On July 1, about 14,200,000 acres of cotton were in cultivation. This compares with acreage allotments for all kinds of cotton of about 17,700,000 acres and acreage in cultivation a year ago of about 18,800,000 acres.

The 1957 figure is smaller than harvested acreage in any year since 1918. About 3 million of the 17,800,000 acres as allotted for upland cotton were deposited in the 1957 oil bank.

Since Aug. 1, 1956, the average spot market price for middling, one-inch cotton has remained close to the 1956 average loan rate at these markets. In recent months, however, the average spot market price has increased slightly and on July 16 was 31 1/2 cents.

Science Runs Amok In 'The Unearthly'

Beauty in distress—a handsome but quite mad medical scientist—imbecilic Neanderthal giants doomed to live forever—are wrapped in a spine chilling package at the Ritz Theatre where "The Unearthly" opens Friday.

The film might be loosely lumped in the "horror" category, but this is only part of the story. Horrific things go on all right, but Producer-Director Brooke L. Peters has handled his plot and cast in such a consummate manner that the result is an action and thrill-packed entertainment piece that keeps the audience gasping on the edge of their seats from opening to close.

That splendid actor, John Carradine, stars as the addled scientist. He has a fine idea—a fifth giant to add to the human body's normal 16 glands—which he figures will give the recipient eternal youth and life everlasting. But he doesn't know when to quit; from scores of such gland transplants, he and his lovely assistant, played by Marilyn Buford, have produced only monsters.

Into his "nest home"—a gloomy old structure miles from anywhere—comes beautiful Allison Hayes, curvaceous Sally Todd, husky Myron Healy and jittery Arthur Hatanides, all except Healy provided by a physician. Romance also enters—among these participants—and by the time a man is buried alive and Miss Todd has been inadvertently aged a hundred years—there develops a ghastly race between a scientist's surgical skills and exposure.

Performances of all are excellent—and clear-up scenes of the pulsating 17th gland as it is being transferred to Miss Todd's anesthetized neck produce chills of terror the likes of which the screen seldom sees.

The original story for "The Unearthly" was written by Jane Mangan and the screenplay is credited to Geoffrey Dennis and Miss Mann.

Rancher Doubles As Weekly Editor

HARRISON, Neb.—George Clark, 30, operates a ranch that usually runs 200 head of stock and is editor-publisher of the Harrison Sun, the only weekly in Sioux County.

Clark said he finds that work on the weekly is tougher than the ranch work, with much more pressure. He also has a difficult time keeping help on the paper. He has had some rewards besides pride in "a job well done." At the Nebraska Press Association convention this spring he won two of the top service awards—for community service and service to agriculture.

'Gunfight At O. K. Corral' To Open At Ritz Sunday

One of the major action dramas of all time, Hal Willis' production of "Gunfight at the O.K. Corral" opens Sunday at the Ritz Theatre.

Starring Burt Lancaster and Kirk Douglas, the Vista Technicolor film is the huge-scale story of the partnership between Dodge City's famed U. S. Marshal Wyatt Earp and the gun-slinging, law scoring ex-convict Doc Holliday, who joined forces to rid Arizona of the Clanton gang.

Rhonda Fleming, Oscar-winner Jo Van Fleet and John Ireland co-star, with Lyle Bettger, Frank Faylen and Earl Holliman in support. John Sturges directed the Paramount picture and the title song, sung by Frankie Laine, is by Neal Washington and Dimitri Tiomkin, Oscar-winner for "High Noon." Leon Uris, of "Belle Garry" fame, wrote the screenplay.

Burt Lancaster as Wyatt Earp, Kirk Douglas as Doc Holliday in the epic film "Gunfight at the O.K. Corral," due Sunday at the Ritz Theatre. Rhonda Fleming co-stars.

Matrimony Still Prime Objective

BUFFALO, N. Y.—White technological and scientific advancements have completely changed society in less than a generation, the college coed of today remains confident that, like mother, she can bag a husband and a degree almost simultaneously.

Dean Jeannette Scudder, dean of women of the University of Buffalo, said recently that the persistent matrimonial aspirations of the coed in the face of a changing world devoted a salute.

The primary purpose of a liberal education for women therefore, Dean Scudder added, "is to provide training for later employment."

She also noted that by the time the co-ed is 32, she will have three children, all of them of school age, and will then be ready to "make further contributions to society."

Our hope is to graduate a well-integrated and reasonably happy individual who will be able to make her contributions to society to the best of her abilities," she concluded.

To Vote Again

MEMPHIS—Luther Lee, who said he "missed" registering to vote in the last two presidential elections because of illness, is back on the permanent registration rolls. Lee is 94 years old.

Picnic days are rolling 'round again and chances are you'll be looking for new ways to pep up the traditional hamburger. For tops in enjoyment, add just the right amount of Tabasco, the famous liquid pepper seasoning from down south, to the ground meat before you grill it.

Another hint for giving a new look to this year's picnic is by adding spark to your potato salad. Here again, Tabasco does new interest to an old favorite. In fact, you'll want to use Tabasco in many other picnic favorites this year for happier eating.

2 pound potatoes (8 cups diced)	1 cup mayonnaise
1 small onion, chopped	1 tablespoon prepared mustard
1 1/2 cups diced celery	1 tablespoon vinegar
1/2 teaspoon salt	1 teaspoon Tabasco

Cook potatoes in skins until tender. Peel and dice. Add onion and celery; sprinkle with salt. Mix together mayonnaise, mustard, vinegar and Tabasco. Add to potato mixture. Mix lightly with a fork before you grill it.

Ivy Says Lives To Help People

By DELOS SMITH United Press Science Editor NEW YORK (AP) — The AMA's anti-Krebloren report would have shaken a man of less faith than Andrew Conway Ivy has—in God, in himself, in the results of his own scientific investigations. He regards himself as "a dedicated personality." He told this reporter: "I live for one reason—to help people." That has nothing to do with whether he is right or wrong about Kreblosen, but it is a measure of the man. There he was, a top man of medicine and science, with his world threatening to collapse. His friends told him to accept the report and resign. Otherwise he would be destroyed. He pulled back not one iota. And this despite the fact that Dr. Durovic had dissolved the only existing supply of the white powder in mineral oil and had divided the oil into 200,000 ampules. That meant it would be extremely difficult if not impossible to obtain the kind of minute chemical analysis which would reveal what Kreblosen was, chemically, and what exact science requires—as a matter of course. Ivy said this was the only time he was tempted to "pull out." Durovic said he had done it "thoughtlessly," with the idea of preserving the powder's potency.

Storm At University The Chicago Medical Society, a constituent part of the AMA, was moving to punish him for allegedly violating a cardinal medical ethic — promoting a "secret remedy." A storm was rising at the University of Illinois whose president, Dr. George D. Stoddard, was displaying a lively interest in Ivy's activities. Stoddard appointed a committee of medical professors versed in cancer, to evaluate all Kreblosen-treated cancer cases which now numbered several hundred. It reported Kreblosen had "no curative value," which Ivy had never claimed, but "we cannot state logical activity." It said the prime question was "the nature of the material" and until that question was answered, no further attention should be given to it. Stoddard appointed another committee to undertake as thorough a chemical analysis as was possible of a substance dissolved in one of its own solvents, which meant it was utterly dissolved. As they have consistently, the Durovics insisted upon iron-bound protection of their commercial rights which this reporter does not imply is wrong—that is pirating in the highly competitive pharmaceutical industry. The Durovics judged the protection offered as insufficient and they did not supply ampules for analysis. Ivy Makes Appeal Stoddard's reaction was to restrict further Kreblosen research on university premises. Ivy appealed to the Illinois Legislature on the grounds that Stoddard struck at academic freedom. A legislative commission began an investigation of what by now was "the Kreblosen affair" in March, 1953.

The Ivy - Durovic side put into the commission record this charge: Dr. J. J. Moore, treasurer of the American Medical Assn., conspired with the two businessmen either to get commercial control of Kreblosen or suppress it by ruining the Durovics. Moore, it was charged, had influenced Wermer into distorting and even "faking" parts of the AMA's 100-case report. Stoddard, it was added, was drawn into the "conspiracy." As set forth in the record, this charge struck the reporter as exceedingly flimsy. But only the commission was qualified to judge and the 12 of 14 members who attended the final meeting, unanimously cleared Dr. Moore and Wermer of the conspiracy charge, as well as the businessmen and Stoddard.

The commission had high praise for the integrity and selfless devotion to mankind of Ivy who, meantime, had lost his post as university vice president. Stoddard had had it abolished. As to the Durovics, the commission found that in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, it could not conclude that they were men of good character. Only Stoddard was criticized — for having been "unlucky" — A few months later the university trustees forced him to resign.

Note In Report But all this is what Ivy calls "a side-show." On the scientific side, Ivy opened a hole in the 100-case report by showing that 24 of the 100 cases came from a young physician who said he was a "cancer expert" but had been in practice less than three years, and be-

Drive To Finance Demos Launched

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. — Former President Harry S. Truman will receive starter sustaining membership card No. 1 today to launch a big nationwide drive to finance the Democratic Party by small contributions. The campaign opens when Paul M. Butler, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, presents the card to the former President at the Truman Library in Independence. Democrats said the drive is the biggest such campaign in the nation's history. "The Democratic Women's Club will sponsor this drive in Florida for us," James M. Milligan, Chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee of Florida, said this morning.

"We will coordinate our efforts through the Democratic Women's Club," Milligan said "and leave such solicitations up to the local committees." He said that committee appointments were set up at a recent meeting of the Democratic Women's Club in St. Petersburg. William H. "Bill" Stemper is State Committeeman from Seminole County and Mrs. Ralph Austin Smith is State Committeewoman James Lee of Oviedo is the Seminole County Democratic Committee chairman. Butler said the charter sustaining membership program is the first step of a campaign to finance the Democratic Party by regular small contributions from rank and file members. "We believe that a healthy political party must be financed by widespread grass roots contributions," Butler said. "This drive will be followed by a door-to-door solicitation of funds on Oct. 11-12, called Dollars for Democrats Day. It and the sustaining membership plan will be national events."

Sustaining members will give a minimum of $10 yearly. Invitations to become charter sustaining members are now being mailed by the committee. Butler said the intensive mail campaign from Washington will be followed by mail and personal solicitation by state and local Democratic committees. He said this is the first time a major political party has conducted a sustaining membership campaign on a national basis.
