Tallahassee, Fla., Jan. 4.—An inaugural ball without the presence of the guest of honor and a governor's reception without "punch" took place Tuesday. The inauguration of Gov. Sidney J. Catts was made along the general lines of former occasions of this nature in Florida, but was distinctive for several novel features, among which was the absence of members of the governor's family from the ball.

The inaugural ball was held with the consent of the governor who, at first requested that it be eliminated from the inauguration day program. However, as arrangements had been made he was prevailed upon to rescind his request. Governor Catts is a regularly ordained Baptist minister, and is opposed to dancing in any form.

Jefferson B. Brown of Key West, elected a member of the supreme court at the fall elections, administered the oath of office to Governor Catts before one of the greatest crowds ever seen in Tallahassee. The weather was threatening but did not interfere with the ceremony.

At the last moment the supreme justices decided to enter the parade and to sit on the platform at the inaugural. They accepted the offer of Attorney Flournoy to ride in his car in the parade. Jefferson B. Browne, selected by lot a few minutes before twelve administered the oath of office to Mr. Catts, Mr. Amos and the other officials who took office.

Mrs. Catts held a reception at the mansion yesterday afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock, which was the feature of the social events of the day.

In Gov. Catts' address he stressed the importance of the drainage of the Everglades. Recently Mr. Catts entered into negotiations with Col. George W. Gouthals with a view of having him direct the state's operations toward such drainage and recently declared he believed the eminent engineer would undertake the work. The prohibition problem also was touched on, the governor declaring it would be like Banquo's ghost, "until the people of the state and nation found what was best for them."

Among the new governor's first recommendations to the legislature is expected to be the statute for police inspection of parochial schools, convents and nunneries. "In his address Governor Catts recommended police inspection of parochial schools, convents and nunneries."

Governor Catts spoke in part as follows: Citizens of Florida: This is the supreme hour of your triumph to have gained this victory over all the forces of opposition so masterful and strong as were those that stood arrayed against you; and to have withstood them and conquered them places this hour of your success with the historic ones, when the people of England raised Cromwell to peer, or when the citizens of France desolated the feudal system in the rejection of the kingcraft of that age, by the French revolution, or when the colonies of America stood by Thomas Jefferson as he gave to the world the supreme bill of man's rights, the Declaration of Independence.

You have withstood the onslaughts of the county and state political rings, the vast corporations and the railroads, the fierce opposition of the daily and weekly press, and organization of negro votes, the judiciary of the state partisan to your needs and the power of the Roman Catholic Hierarchy against you. Yet over all these the common people of Florida, the everyday masses of the cracker people have triumphed. The day of your apotheosis has arrived.

I had rather stand here today as your apostle in these great political doctrines than to live in any other age of the world's history. Give me the God of our fathers will give me the grace, wisdom and judgment to serve you and Him, and make you the governor I desire to be, and like Solomon of old I lift my voice to the

There are few instances in the history of the banking business where a new bank attains the prestige and business that has been accorded the Seminole County Bank of this city starting in business on the 27th day of September, 1913. The Seminole County Bank, the youngest in the county sprung into prominence and imbued with the optimistic spirit of its creator, Hon. Forrest Lake, forged ahead with a rapidity that surprised even the officials and the figures of this remarkable growth are best illustrated in the following statement of deposits:

December 31, 1913.	$101,016.97
December 31, 1914	$170,347.64
December 31, 1915	$244,518.68
December 30, 1916	$408,249.47

The Seminole has been in business three years and three months, has declared an eight per cent dividend each year and laid aside surplus and undivided profits amounting to $10,000. The resources in the statement show $524,288.93 or more than a half million. But figures are dry reading at the best and this article was not started with the idea of giving the Seminole Bank a statement that has already been published in this paper. What concerns the city most at the present time is the fact that the Seminole County Bank has just moved into one of the handsomest buildings in this section of the state, barring none, and every citizen of Seminole county takes a real pride in this building. The Seminole started this business in the Welborne block that is now being used as a court house and although the quarters were a bit crowded the bank attained its present record in that building and did not move down town with the idea that such a move would double their business but the move was made primarily in order that the bank could have its own home and be identified with the commercial interest and growth of Sanford in every way.

The purchase of the DeForest building at the corner of Magnolia and First street several months ago was the start. This building while one of the best in the city as far as construction went was also one of the ancient buildings in architecture and the best architects and artisans in the business were called in to remodel and make over the brick building. How well these workmen did the work is best shown by the cut in this paper and those who remember the old building and now gaze upon the new one can hardly believe their eyes and those who have been away from the city any length of time claim that the new building must have sprouted overnight. There is a touch of magic when such a magnificent edifice can be erected in such a short space of time and look the part. The front of the building is the plan being followed by the large banks of the country, four large pillars or columns supporting the broad coping of the second floor and the up to date style of windows with the small panes of glass and arranged to open for plenty of ventilation. The entire exterior is finished in concrete with a granite tinge that gives the building the appearance of a marble finish with a painted relief. The doors and sash are painted green that gives a most artistic touch to the appearance. But when you step across the threshold of the bank you realize that an artist planned the interior for there is a perfect blend into a beautiful ensemble with no discordant feature to clash. The area is tiled and the first office is for the president and the cashier and from this opens an other private office for the president both of them being large and such perbly furnished with mahogany furniture, beautiful rugs and office fixtures of the best.

The next window can be appropriately termed the "bridge of sighs" being the window for notes and drafts and then comes the paying teller and the bookkeeper and all the many departments of the bank, all fitted up in the best of modern appliances for quick and accurate service in every particular.

The tiled floor leads direct to the safety deposit boxes and when you enter the alarm rings and when you leave the alarm rings and the employees can tell who is in the vault at all times. There are 111 safety deposit boxes all finished in oxidized steel and made especially for the benefit of the patrons. The large vault is in the center of the building, built of brick and steel and is as near burglar proof as can be made. On the other side is the book department where all the ledgers and books are kept in a fire-proof and burglar proof vault and in the rear of the building is an elegant room fitted up for the directors, with mahogany chairs and tables, etc.

The fittings of the bank proper are of imported marble in the brown effect and the netting is of especially designed Verdi antique green bronze copper giving a most pleasing effect and was designed to stand exposure of the Florida weather and the hard usage to which bank fixtures are subjected. Desks of the new designs with large plate glass tops are placed for the convenience of the patrons and the walls are tinted in restful

Chit-Chat of the Play Houses in Sanford

Lyric Tonight
Synopsis of "The Murderer at Bay," Chapter 15 of "Gloria's Romance." Cast:
Gloria Stafford, Billie Burke, Dr. Stephen Royce, Harry Koker, Richard Fremont, David Powell, David Stafford, William Rowell, Pierpont Stafford, Wm. T. Carleton, Lois Stafford, Jule Power, Judge Frank, Henry Weaver, Gideon Trask, Frank McGlynn, Stass Cramer, Maury Stewart.

Gloria, Stafford, upon being taken prisoner aboard Gideon Trask's barge, after she has followed the man she believes to be the murderer of Richard Fremont, her fiancé, watches and waits for an opportunity to escape. She assists Nell Trask about her household tasks and when the two girls are folding up a tablecloth, Gloria suddenly flings the cloth over the head of Nell and later helps her to a chair. Gideon, who has been on deck hears the noise of the struggle below and comes down to investigate. Gloria attacks him with a red hot poker and finally succeeds in tying him up also. Jud, a deck hand, comes to the rescue but Gloria trips him up. "Wastons o' deck, slams down the hatch, and donning an oil skin coat and hat leaps down into a dinghy attached to the barge by a rope and makes her way to shore. Arriving on shore Gloria commands an automobile and speeds away toward her country home. Doctor Royce and Pierpont Stafford, meanwhile, grown nervous over Gloria's absence from home, imagine that she may have gone up to the Stafford home in the country and motor there to seek her. Lyric tonight.

Presbyterian Church
The auditorium of the Presbyterian church was filled to its limit Sunday with chairs in almost every available space. Half of the morning service was taken up by the deacons in speaking of their financial plans for the coming year.

The music was better than usual. Miss Shelton played a solo in the morning and the chorus and quartet gave special selections. At the night service Mr. Earl Paxton who is home for the holidays gave us a selection on the violin which was enjoyed very much, and the chorus sang.

For the closing Sundays of the year we have been receiving members on profession of faith each Sabbath and we are hoping that this may continue through this entire quarter.

At the service Wednesday night the new Efficiency chart for Sunday Schools is going to be studied with a view of making the Presbyterian Sunday school a Gold Seal School. This new standard is one of the best possible tests of a Sunday school's work. Our trained men have prepared this after a broad and careful study of the whole situation. The educational history of the Presbyterian church leads us to expect this to be one of the best possible outlines of Sunday school work. Sunday school workers of the city are invited to this service. The service begins at 7:30 p. m.

Apopka Postoffice Robbed

The Apopka postoffice safe was cracked by burglars Saturday night, the crackmen using dynamite to get into the strong box. A sum estimated at between $50 and $80 was taken. Only a day or two previous Postmaster Eldridge had purchased a thousand dollars worth of stamps, but had placed them in his store safe and not in the postoffice safe. The explosion was heard by several but no clue to the burglars has been found. About two years ago the Bank of Apopka was robbed of about $1,500, the burglars using nitroglycerine.

Self Rising Flour at Dutton's—12's, 65c; 24's, $1.25.

Catts Goes in Today

Tallahassee, Fla., Jan. 2.—The appointment of J. V. Burk of Jacksonville as secretary to Gov. Sidney J. Catts was the only announcement the governor-elect would make today, saying he had decided upon no others. Visitors are here from all parts of the state. Every public building and business house, the capitol, executive mansion, city hall, county courthouse are decorated, with the exception of the supreme court building, which does not even fly the stars and stripes.

Gov. Park Trammell has moved his family to a hotel, and Rev. Catts and family are already in the executive mansion. All arrangements are complete for the inauguration to-day and the present during the inaugural ceremonies of mementoes to Gov. Park Trammell and to W. V. Knott, with speeches of presentation by H. Clay Crawford, secretary of state, and W. A. McRae, commissioner of agriculture.

With the drawing by straws by the several justices of the supreme court the new chief justice will be chosen, the choice becoming known when he walks forward to administer the oath of office to the new governor.

Ladies, if you love to see beautiful dresses see Lind at the Lyric Thursday and Friday.

Attractive Home Wedding

Adorned with quantities of white flowers and green, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wight was beautiful today for the marriage of her daughter, Miss Margaret Louise Wight to Mr. Clarence Roy Kirtley of Chicago. The charm of an elegant simplicity characterized the wedding in all its perfect details and it was surrounded by the unusual interest of familiar associations.

In all of the rooms of the lower floor which was thrown ensuite over the doors and windows and veiling the cabinets and bookcases were graceful sprays of plumosa spenger, and in the reception hall the balustrade was entwined with it, terminating in a basket of beautiful white narcissus. Bowls and vases of the same fragrant flower were placed upon tables and stands. The mantle in the living room was covered with fern, in the center of which was a bowl filled with narcissus and oh low stands and the cabinets were baskets of asparagus ferns, holding dozens of narcissus. The doorway

The many wedding gifts were displayed on the second floor and included among them besides several large checks and quantities of silver-cut glass, china and furniture was a hand painted dinner set in exquisite china, the gift of the bride's parents and a chest of flat silver from an uncle of the bride.

After the ceremony which was witnessed only by relatives Mr. and Mrs. Kirtley left for their wedding trip, going directly to Panas, Iowa to attend the golden wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. William Kirtley, the groom's parents, which takes place January 6th. It is a coincidence that this is also the wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wight.

After January 4th Mr. and Mrs. Kirtley will be at home at 328 East 70th street, Chicago, Ill.

The narcissus used for the wedding will be sent today to the Georgia friends of Mrs. Wight residing in Sanford and the bride's corsage bouquet of orchids will be sent to the mother of the groom to be used at her golden wedding anniversary on the sixth.

English Dinner

Among the many enjoyable Christmas Day festivities the typical English dinner at which Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Jones were hosts was one of the most delightful.

The decorations of table and rooms were lovely and suggested the Christmas season. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Hall of Sanford, Mr. and Mrs. Will Lee of Maitland, Miss Alice Hayden and Mr. Geo. Nodgrin of Orlando. After dinner guests called continuously throughout the evening to enjoy the informal dancing.

Christmas Bridge Party

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Miller entertained with a charming card party last Wednesday evening at which Mrs. W. E. Watson won the ladies prize and Mr. F. J. Gonzales carried off the honors for the gentlemen. Holly and cedar beautifully adorned the rooms and poinsettias gave a brilliant touch of color suggesting the spirit of Christmas. A delicious salad course was served at the conclusion of the game. Others enjoying the game were Mr. and between the living room and library was draped with spenger plumosa, curtain fashion and caught in place with narcissus and white ribbons. In the library where the ceremony took place was grouped tall palms behind which gleamed many lighted candles in their brass candelabra and candlesticks. The mantels in all the rooms were filled with the same attractive arrangement of lighted candles, forming a pleasing background for the delicate white blossoms. Hundreds of these beautiful flowers came from the gardens of Mr. and Mrs. Wight's old homes in Cairo and Thomasville, Ga.

The wedding music was played by Miss Adelaide Higgins. To the strains of Lohengrin's "Bridal Chorus" the bride party descended the stairs, the groom with his best man, Mr. Hal Wight entering through the dining room. The bride was preceded by her little brother, Thomas, carrying the wedding ring in the heart of a calla lily and after him walked the bride with her only attendant, her young sister, Miss Sarah Wight, coming in through the parlor to the far end of the library where the beautiful ring ceremony was impressively performed by Rev. J. A. Davidson of the Congregational church. A charming bit of sentiment was embodied in the wedding ring which was wrought of the engagement ring of the bride's parents.

The bride was girlishly pretty in her traveling suit of mole-colored broadcloth which was finished with collar and cuffs of otto and a braided belt of self material. Her blouse was of flesh colored Georgette crepe. The small hat which fitted close to the head was a French model in black velvet and trimmed with black novelty flat leather in black. With the modish costume was worn a corsage bouquet of delicately tinted lavender orchids, the young bride's favorite color.

The winsome maid of honor was Miss Sarah Wight who wore a lovely little frock of white organdie, ruffled from hem to waist with inch wide ruffles. The low round neck and tiny puffed sleeves were finished with the same frilling. With this was worn a broad white sash, white shoes and silver hose.

Master Thomas Wight, the attractive little ring bearer was a manly young figure in a white suit.

Mrs. Henry Wight the bride's mother was gowned in white net.

The bride, whose winsome charm and pleasing personality have won for her a wide popularity in the most exclusive society circles of Florida is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wight. The groom is a graduate of Grinnell University. A man loved for his sterling qualities and high principles by those who know him best. He is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Kirtley of Iowa.

Nothing could be lovelier than the breakfast at half past nine o'clock on Saturday morning given by Miss Gretchen Schultz in honor of the popular young bride elect. In all of the rooms the pretty arrangement of full blown roses in large cases and buds in the bud vases with graceful sprays of fern was lovely. In the dining room white violets and pink roses formed a fascinating color scheme, the effect being particularly pretty. On the mantel were vases of pink roses, centered by a crystal bud vase holding one exquisitely lovely pink bud. The vase and bud was a gift to the honoree at the conclusion of breakfast. The table was beautiful with its centerpiece, a brass basket filled with violets and tied with a big fluffy bow of lavender tulle and crystal candlestick with their lighted candles, on the side of which poised a violet butterfly at either end of the table. A large bow of lavender tulle was caught at the edge of the table with violets, and the dainty little place cards were a single Dorothy Perkins rose tied with lavender, the miniature corsage being worn by the guests at breakfast. Violet and lavender tulle shaded the lights above the table. The guest of honor was lovely in a dress of wisteria charmeuse satin. Miss Schultz wore lavender and Miss Olga Schultz was in white with corsage bouquet of purple violets. Mrs. Julius Schultz' gown was violet in color. The three course breakfast consisted of fruit cocktail with grape juice; escalloped oysters, cheese fritters, bacon cruller, hot biscuit with honey, coffee with whipped cream; raisins, salted nuts.

Violet Breakfast

In honor of Miss Margaret Wight a number of pre-nuptial entertainments were given last week that were marked by a charming simplicity.

Book Lovers Entertained

On Friday afternoon Mrs. Roy Symes charmingly entertained the members of the Book Lovers Club and a few other friends. The attractive home was prettily adorned with Christmas bells and red roses with bowls of pansies and nasturtiums and asparagus plumosa completing the charming effect. Guest of the club were Mrs. T. D. Hayes, Mrs. F. E. Dutton and Mrs. R. J. Holly.

Farmers and Fruit Growers

Items of Interest for the Man Behind the Plow

Develop a New Chicken Market
Farmers who have a number of brooding chickens ready to sell to commission men might get a better price for them by selling to town city dwellers. Such prospective buyers can be found readily by using a little advertising space in the home town newspaper and a good business developed.

Many city dwellers have a small yard and a house for poultry where they keep a few birds to fatten on table and kitchen scraps. Such people prefer birds of the roasting variety, keeping a small flock of them so they may pick out a bird when needed. They usually buy a half-dozen or more at one time and will pay more for them than the farmer can get from the commission man ordinarily.

The University of Florida Extension Division recommends this as a good way to dispose of surplus cockroaches at a time when the open market might be over supplied.

Good Blood in Live Stock Will Pay the Farmer

Since the opening of good markets for livestock of all kinds in the Middle West, and Jacksonville, Fla., packing houses, farmers are beginning to learn from experience the lesson that good blood in live stock brings the greatest financial return. No matter how much information is afforded farmers through the various educational agencies, bulletins and farm papers, there is nothing that brings this subject home to some farmers as quickly as a touch through the pocketbook nerve.

For years packers have paid better prices for cattle and hogs that show evidence of breeding for beef and pork production, and that are uniform in size, quality and condition. Packers will continue to make these differences in prices because they have by experience it pays them better to select animals that will produce the highest percentage of high priced meats when slaughtered.

It will pay the farmer to follow these demands of the market. C. L. Willoughby, professor of animal husbandry at the University of Florida College of Agriculture relates the experience of a good farmer near Newberry who sold a car of well-bred Duroc Jersey hogs last week in the Jacksonville market for $7.30 per 100 pounds. Another carload of hogs sold in a large proportion of Duroc Jersey blood sold the same day for $8.00 per 100 pounds, though they were lighter weight.

The sale convinced the farmer that he should grade up his herd with improved blood, and he immediately bought two purebred Duroc Jersey sows to use on his best made sows, and also bought two purebred Duroc Jersey sows to produce Duroc Jersey boars for future use. He expects to be marketing in less than 10 years nothing but Duroc Jersey blood.

and is confident of getting the higher prices offered by the market. The same rule holds good for any other well-known breed that suits the farm conditions of Florida.

Fertilizer is Cheap When Produced on the Farm

Fertilizer may be produced on the farm in either of two ways; by growing legumes, such as vetch beans, cowpeas and beggar weed, or by feeding crops produced on the farm to livestock, saving the manure produced and returning it to the soil. Either of these records is WWW. Either of these methods is recommended by J. M. Scott, animal industrialist at the University of Florida Experiment Station.

The legume crops have the power to take ammonia from the air. Therefore, by growing vetch beans, cowpeas and beggarweed the ammonia content of the soil can be increased. Such is not the case when corn and cotton are grown; they take ammonia from the soil. When vetch beans are grown, and the vines left in the field to be plowed under the following winter, they will add ammonia to each acre equal to an application of more than $20 worth of cottonseed meal.

An acre of cowpeas will produce a good crop of hay, and after this has been removed, the shattered leaves and the roots remaining the plowing which follows will add ammonia to the soil equal to an application of 400 pounds of cottonseed meal. When crop rotation is practiced the fertility of the soil can be increased. By the old method of continuous cropping in cotton or corn, the soil is depleted of available ammonia, phosphoric acid or potash, and the crop must depend on almost wholly commercial fertilizer.

By feeding farm crops, to either beef or dairy cattle, much manure will be produced, which should be saved and returned to the soil. A good cow or steer will produce in a year's time from six to seven tons of manure. The quality of it will depend entirely upon the quality of the feed. Feeds rich in ammonia will produce manure rich in ammonia. The body of the animal retains only about one-fifth of the ammonia in the feed; that is, for every hundred pounds of ammonia fed to an animal eighty pounds are excreted by growing legume crops and feeding them to livestock on the farm, large quantities of manure, rich in ammonia can be produced. It follows then that by growing the legume crops, feeding them to livestock and returning the manure to the fields, the fertility of the land will be so increased in a few years' time that potash and phosphoric acid—the cheaper elements in commercial fertilizer will be the only ones that must be bought.

When it is necessary to buy ammonia it should be bought in the form of cottonseed meal and the manure produced be used as a fertilizer. This gives the meal a double value; first, as a milk and meat producer, and second a fertilizing value. Every general farmer should arrange his crop rotation so that no ammonia in fertilizer need be bought.

If Milk Shipping Does Not Pay Try Butter

Farmers who are so far removed from transportation facilities that it is impossible for them to cool and ship properly their milk to large towns or cities every day, must turn to other lines of dairy work, selling either sweet cream or butter, says C. L. Willoughby, professor of dairying to the University of Florida College of Agriculture. The relative profits in these different lines of selling can be figured readily on the basis of one gallon of milk weighing 8.6 pounds and containing 5 percent butterfat, at the usual market rates for the different products.

If a price of 30 cents can be had for this gallon of milk in wholesale quantities, it will usually pay best to ship milk. If the gallon of milk is run through a cream separator the resulting product will be one-fifth of a gallon of 20 per cent commercial cream, which will sell on most markets for at least 20 cents, or at the rate of $1.00 a gallon. If the milk is used in making butter, the product will be about a half pound of commercial butter worth 17 1/2 cents at the wholesale rate of 35 cents a pound.

In both cream and butter production, the farmer will have left four-tenths of a gallon of skim milk or buttermilk as an extra product. If this can be marketed for human use, it is worth eight or ten cents, and if kept for feeding young live stock on the farm will be worth three or four cents, in addition to the returns from cream or butter. Prices for sweet cream are more steady the year round than are butter prices.

It is plain therefore that selling milk at thirty cents for more a gallon rather than in not profit, shipping 20 per cent cream at $1.00 a gallon ranks second; and selling butter at 35 cents a pound ranks third in the list of profitable dairy activities.

Some Progress Made in Work of Eradicating Ticks

The University of Florida Extension Division calls attention to the report of the U. S. Department of Agriculture showing progress made in the work of tick eradication from July 1, 1906 to December 31, 1916. This report shows that, with the exception of Louisiana, fewer counties have been released from quarantine in Florida than in any other state affected by the tick.

Fifty Florida counties were infected on the first day given in the report and forty-eight were still infected on the last date named. The total area released from quarantine in the ten year period is 3,700 square miles, or 7 per cent of the total area under quarantine in 1906.

California, Missouri, Kentucky and Tennessee have been wholly released from quarantine. Georgia, starting with a greater infected area than Florida has cleaned up 29 per cent of it. Mississippi's infected area has been reduced 69 per cent, and Alabama's 42 per cent.

This report gives proof that the ticks can be wholly eradicated, and the time required in which to accomplish the work depends to a great extent on the amount of cooperation given the Federal and state agents who have the work in charge.

Varieties of the Peanut.
Roughly speaking, three varieties of peanut are grown in this country—red, white and Spanish. The white, the most important variety, has a nut with two kernels; with pink skins; its vine spreads along the ground, in this respect unlike that of the red variety, which grows more upright and in a bunch. The pod of the red nut holds three and sometimes four kernels, and has a deep red skin. The Spanish is a much smaller nut, with a lighter skin and milder flavor than either of the others possesses. The entire crop is shelled and used especially in the confection known as nougat.

Education Not Worth While.
"You can't make a man believe a college education gets you anything," said the young man who had won two medals for fox trotting. "Still I always thought college fellows was awful swell," replied the girl. "Nothin' doin'!" We got one of them in our office that always says "whom" and "notwithstandin'," and say, I heard the boss callin' him down today the worst I ever been. "What's the use knowin' them kind of words if you can't talk back?"—Judge.

A Hero to His Wife.
"A man who is happily married has an enthusiastic audience of one, and that isn't so bad," says old Uncle Pen-wythe.

CURBSTONE GLEANINGS

BUDGET OF OPINION "JUST BETWEEN YOU AND ME."

EVEN THE GATE POST NOT IN IT

A CHIEF IS AMONG YE TAKING NOTES AND FAITH. "HE'LL PRENT 'EM"—SO SAYS SAUNTERER.

My old fossilized friend who several thousand years ago was an Egyptian mummy in Egypt or the Everglades but who is now the presiding genius on the Palm Beach Post and goes under the assumed name of Thorndyke, gets off the following truth that can be read and digested with profit by Sanford people:

If I was in the meat business in this community and was putting up a fine brand of sliced bacon at 40c the pound as ever grunted in a big pasture I should think that the folks who would not patronize me—or the bacon—and thus help me build up a business which would continue to enlarge, were not doing the fair thing by the city and the county. Yes, I would.

Right along on the same line I think the people who consume cigars—I don't mean these little tissue trifles which come in a 5c box and which are smoked by folks who don't know any better, but the real cigars—ought to buy the cigars designed, rolled, boxed and stamped in this city. I know there are those who have become wedded to some other weed; whose tastes would be changed with difficulty and who would not, probably, be satisfied with even a better brand than they are accustomed to; and if I was one of those fellows I'd stick to my love. Yes, I would.

But where a smoker is one of those "I'll take same as you fellows"—likes a good smoke but has no special brand—can tell when the smoke is good and when it is rotten. I'd like to know what difference it would make to him if he chose a cigar made here or one imported from New Jersey? Always provided that each cigar was a good one. Yet the choice made each day at the rate of a hundred an hour in all of the cigar parlors in the city would make the difference that might enable the plants here to add an extra man to the force, and would make one more family in the city to add to the business done.

I wish that the people would look at this matter in a business light. I wish that I might impress upon all the importance of this selection of the West Palm Beach brand of cigars. I'm not interested, financially, in the plants here. They patronize the printer less, probably, than any other industry in the county. It is not their money that I'm after. Nossir. It's merely with the effort to build the business to better proportions, that I'm pleading; for I reckon that the more business they will do, the more money there'll be in the city to spend, and the more people there will be to spend it among the shrewd business men who use The Post as their publicity promulgator. Them's some language ain't it? But you get me, don't you? Get this perforated for your piano-player, run it a few times, and see if it doesn't listen good. I thank you.

Having called the attention of the people many times to the idea of a public market in Sanford it is high time that we were thinking it again, especially when eggs, butter and everything else is soaring. If we had a public market in Sanford and held market three days in the week the country people could bring in their vegetables and butter and eggs and get cash prices for them and the housewife could get bargains that she will never be able to get in any other manner. To many who have talked with me the idea of a public market is repugnant and yet I would call your attention to the fact that some of the finest ladies in the land attend the public markets in the big cities in their autos and order all the stuff for their tables themselves experiencing a certain delight and great interest in knowing that they are not only getting the best but they are saving money on it. The following from the Memphis Appeal advises people to buy all their goods personally and not depend upon the telephone:

We are growing lazy. There is no use denying the fact. If we desire a nickel bag of salt we telephone for it. The day when our mothers used to go to market and buy in a day of the past. If we do not order by telephone we buy from truck wagons.

The fallacy of this system has been emphasized in the report of the Chicago diet squad in its endurance test.

The result of the test is altogether interesting and the final report worth remembering.

One significant fact is pointed out. It is simple and logical. Watch your paper for food bargains. When you see a certain article advertised at a reduced price, even if you do not need it at the time, but will need it in a few days, buy it. Pay cash. If you read the advertisements of food-stuffs necessary in every household from time to time the chance is open for you to save.

For instance, in one advertisement in the Commercial Appeal yesterday there was an offer of sixteen pounds of sugar for $1.00, when other places were selling twelve pounds.

Why buy twelve pounds when opportunity is offered to buy four more pounds for the same price? You may not have needed the sugar yesterday but you will need it next week.

There is another mistake we make today which is another indication of laziness. We order our Sunday dinner, as a rule by telephone, and are generally disappointed.

Buy yourself. Pick out what you want, get the best. You cannot see what you buy over the telephone, and the butcher and the grocer is going to give first choice to the man or woman who looks over his stock. In filling telephone orders he cannot be blamed for sending you what he feels will attract the least attention on the counter.

See what you buy. Avoid the credit system where it is possible. Take advantage of reduced prices, and above all things watch the advertisements in the newspapers. Something attractive may not present itself for possibly a week, but it will come, and when it does come take advantage of it. You may not be able to save more than five or six cents a pound on an article, but above all things remember that it is the penny that counts, and when you begin to save pennies you will soon acquire the habit of saving dollars.

The more I see of the sea wall and think of its wonderful possibilities the more I praise the city council and the men who have made this great work possible. No man can tell at this time just how much of benefit will accrue to the future generations from this great piece of construction. Had General Sanford bulkheaded the lake front when he laid out this city in the wilderness we would now be reaping untold benefits from it. But General Sanford had troubles of his own in splitting up the wilderness into fifty-foot lots and he was not worrying about the lake front. He was going farther out and neglecting the most valuable part of his possessions. In those days the waters from the lake would rise and take part of the town and sickness would follow but the people of that period never knew the value of a bulkheaded lake front and municipal dock and other improvements. They were not looking ahead or thinking of posterity. We people of today are prone to live in today but it is to the everlasting credit of the council and Messrs. Mahoney & Walker that they thought of the future and while at this time few of us can see the wonderful vista opening from the development on the lake front it is certain to take place even in our time and every cent spent on the sea wall will return one hundred fold. I hear that Mahoney & Walker have lost money on the contract for the bulkhead. I do not doubt it. They certainly had the worst bunch of hard luck that ever befell two good citizens and the very fact that they went ahead and mortgaged their property to carry out the contract shows their faith in Sanford and the bulkhead. Their dredge burned up, they had innumerable delays, they had untold hardships and yet they finished the job and it is one of the finest in the state. If they have lost money it should be made up to them in part at least. We owe it to them and we should not repudiate the debt if there is any way in which to assist them.

In a certain New York apartment building dogs are allowed the privileges of the front elevator but children have to go in by the garage entrance. Evidently dogs are more in favor in that establishment than children. Perhaps the owner of the building is married to some society woman or to some popular actress who lavishes her affection on poodles rather than upon children. There is no accounting for tastes, especially when it comes to folks who haven't a soul above dogs. And that reminds me again that too many worthless curs are allowed privileges in Sanford. You see them in the theatres and other gathering places, evening the churches. Dogs have their place and should be kept in them and dog owners should not expect other people to go crazy about their canine friends.

The beautiful new home of Mr. and Mrs. Seth Woodruff on Lucerne Circle was the scene of a brilliant assembly last evening, the occasion being a reception and house warming attended by over two hundred and fifty guests. The affair marked the twentieth anniversary of the wedding of the host and hostess and many and sincere were the congratulations showered upon them by friends both new and old, accompanied by hearty wishes and happiness during the coming years.

In the receiving line were Mr. and Mrs. Woodruff, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hoffman of New York city. Assisting the hostess in the reception hall were Mesdames W. R. O'Neal, G. H. Edwards, S. V. Straley, S. G. Dolive and L. S. Dolive in the refreshment room; Mesdames J. S. McEwan, Sylvan McElroy, W. D. Rogers, W. M. Glenn, L. B. Fort, S. W. Howe, W. E. Shine, Miss May Kilmer and Miss Mollie Ray; while the punch bowl on the east porch was presided over by Mrs. Forrest Lake of Sanford who assisted Mrs. Woodruff in the same manner at her wedding twenty years ago last evening. Mrs. Lake was assisted by Miss Mary Robinson and Miss Margaret Hart.

PEOPLE AND EVENTS

The Woodruff Anniversary

The beautiful new home of Mr. and Mrs. Seth Woodruff on Lucerne Circle was the scene of a brilliant assembly last evening, the occasion being a reception and house warming attended by over two hundred and fifty guests. The affair marked the twentieth anniversary of the wedding of the host and hostess and many and sincere were the congratulations showered upon them by friends both new and old, accompanied by hearty wishes and happiness during the coming years.

In the receiving line were Mr. and Mrs. Woodruff, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hoffman of New York city. Assisting the hostess in the reception hall were Mesdames W. R. O'Neal, G. H. Edwards, S. V. Straley, S. G. Dolive and L. S. Dolive in the refreshment room; Mesdames J. S. McEwan, Sylvan McElroy, W. D. Rogers, W. M. Glenn, L. B. Fort, S. W. Howe, W. E. Shine, Miss May Kilmer and Miss Mollie Ray; while the punch bowl on the east porch was presided over by Mrs. Forrest Lake of Sanford who assisted Mrs. Woodruff in the same manner at her wedding twenty years ago last evening. Mrs. Lake was assisted by Miss Mary Robinson and Miss Margaret Hart.

The decorations were most artistic, vases of gorgeous pink and white roses alternating with beautiful potted palms and ferns, while the exterior of the mansion, glowing with electric lights was reflected in the waters of Lake Lucerne, making a picture never to be forgotten.

Mr. and Mrs. Woodruff have resided here since the early village days and have seen the wonderful growth of Orlando and Orange county from early pioneer days of the ox cart and slab horse to the present enlightened and prosperous days of this city of automobiles and brick mansions, their own prosperity being measured by that of their home county. As Miss Shine, Mrs. Woodruff in the early days was one of the popular belles of middle Florida, as well as at Tallahassee, and her winning ways still continue to cause her friends to be numbered by the ever growing circle of her acquaintances. Mr. Woodruff is perhaps one of the best known men in this part of the state, through his life long experience in state and county politics, and he was recently honored by being elected to represent his home county in the legislature which assembles at Tallahassee next spring. Their new home is already one of the most beautiful spots in the county, and improvements under way will add still more to its attractiveness.

Many of the out of town guests were in attendance, among them being Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Lake of Sanford, Mayor and Mrs. W. C. Temple of Winter Park, Dr. and Mrs. W. C. Blackman of Wekiwa Ranch, Miss Higgins of Sanford, Mr. and Mrs. Lee of Kissimmee, Miss Bessie Rainey of Monticello, and Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Follett of Winter Park.

Seek Aid From Books

There is a growing tendency in modern business to make the utmost use of reference books and authoritative publications. This attitude is not only reflected by the management of large organizations, but even among the men themselves, who look to books and periodicals to aid them in their work. Many of the more progressive manufacturing firms have installed reference libraries in charge of skilled librarians for the use of their staff.

The Smile of Serenity

"What may be solely an optimist," "How do you know?" "He smiles contentedly." "Maybe he's an optimist and maybe he's a diplomat."

Growing

People say that growing "relieves their nerves." On the contrary, it doubles the strain by fixing the grower's attention on annoyances, and increasing his power to do mischief.

The Habit of Thrift

"Each county superintendent in the United States," the announcement said, "is today receiving an urgent request from the National Education Association asking him to assume the leadership and perfect the organization in his county."

Buttermilk is going up along with the high price of sweet milk and cream. It is a question about the cause of the rise—whether it is the high price of feed or the daily consumption of Clarence Woods of the East Lake Region, who is said to take a bath in buttermilk every day.

In the death of Brush Walker at Orlando the editor of The Herald feels that he has lost a good friend. He was our friend when we lived in Orlando and our friend when we left Orlando and every one who ever knew him will feel the same keen loss of a big hearted, honest, square American citizen. The world can ill afford to lose men of the Brush Walker type and we sincerely mourn his departure.

There is no better way to advertise your products than in a big Land Show and now that Atlanta is holding the first one in the south next month it would be well for some of our enterprising citizens to attend and get some valuable pointers. This city—Sanford—should hold a Land Show for all of Florida and should hold it next year. The lake front could be made a beauty spot and every county in Florida could be represented in one of the greatest Land Shows the south ever witnessed. Atlanta and the cities north could not compare with it for we have the matchless lake.

The Herald wishes to commend the Sanford Lodge of Elks and the Semole County Bank upon the completion of their elegant new banks. Such buildings are a credit to a city twice the size of Sanford and demonstrate the progressive spirit that will make our city the greatest in central Florida in the years to come. It is the builders of these fine buildings that are builders for the future and Sanford needs more of them to supplement the great work already done by Nature. Our city in time will become beautiful beyond compare and the men who are starting these big things should have the everlasting gratitude of the citizens. Beautiful buildings are more than a mere accumulation of brick and mortar—they are monuments of lasting fame.

start from the newspaper office the editor of The Herald has resolved that he will not purchase anything during the year 1917 unless he has the cash to pay for the same and he will endeavor in the year of 1917 to pay every account that is standing against him. He also would like to have those who owe him to meet him half way on the same proposition and endeavor in so far as is possible place all business upon the cash system. This will be a difficult matter in the face of a life long system of credit and in a city where it seems the majority of the merchants favor the credit system and the buyers have fallen into the habit, but a resolve to make 1917 a CASH YEAR will go a long way toward the ultimate object to be obtained and this resolution is framed with the understanding that from this time henceforth there will be no credit slips marked against R. J. Holly. If every citizen of Sanford will make the same resolution and stick to it there will be a great difference in our business circles in the coming year.

RISE IN MILK

Something Besides the Cream Rises These Days of High Living.
 Sanford dairymen are forced to raise the price of milk on account of the high cost of living and the subsequent high cost of feed stuff. A notice in another part of this issue calls attention to the fact that hereafter Sanford people will be obliged to pay 14 cents per quart for sweet milk and 60 cents per quart for cream and even old friend Buttermilk has gone to 6 cents per quart.

Prices for all grain used in feeding live stock have been increasing so rapidly the last six months that many sorts of feed now cost nearly twice as much as they did a year ago. This heavy expense for feed is being keenly felt by many dairymen of the south, particularly those located near the large cities, who have been buying all their stock feed. The present situation emphasizes the need for all dairymen to become dairy farmers and produce most of the feed for their animals upon their own lands, says C. L. Willoughby, professor of animal husbandry in the College of Agriculture, University of Florida.

The basis of profitable dairy feeding is unquestionably plenty of legume hay and plenty of corn or sorghum, either cut green in summer or preserved in the silo for winter use. These essential feeds can be produced cheaper in Florida than in some other sections, yet many dairymen are not making proper use of them. As the cities grow in size and land increases in value, such dairymen find themselves compelled to move their farm and dairy operations far enough away from the city limits to secure land at $50 to $100 an acre for growing feed crops. Modern methods for transporting milk are now so perfect that milk can be shipped forty or fifty miles by train with as little trouble as hauling it by wagon five or ten miles.

Make Home Attractive.
 There is no panacea that will cure the yearning for city life evidenced by the country boys and girls of today, but there are certain conditions which, if established, will add materially to the attractiveness of life in the country, and should therefore prevent them from flocking to the cities merely to avoid life on the farm.

Were Able in Four Hours at Verdun to Regain Nearly All That It Cost the Germans Five Months and Appalling Loss of Life to Win.

By ARNO DOSCH-FLEUROT.
 (Correspondent of the New York World.)

Paris.—In four hours a portion of the French mobile army under General Nivelle has regained nearly all the ground won by the crown prince before Verdun during five months of continuous attack. It is a great French victory—such a victory as the Germans at this stage of the war would make the occasion of a celebration, but here in France it has been received almost without demonstration.

More remarkable even than the victory is the way it has been accepted by the people of France. It has given a feeling of satisfaction and reassurance, to be sure, and it is very timely, as France has been having an hour of nervousness over the fate of her newly acquired Roumania; but, far from being any shouting about it, there has been simply the ordinary interest in how it was accomplished.

Nothing could express more plainly how the French feel about themselves and about the war. It reveals an unconscious attitude of success that characterizes all French thought at this stage of the war. It is a new phase in the absorbing question of French morale. There has certainly been no other time during the war when so signal a victory would have been accepted so calmly. To me, living here in France and watching the state of feeling more closely than anything else, it is entirely unexpected.

Went Off Like Clock Work.

The whole story of this attack is, in fact, extraordinary. The time of it was known to a day two weeks in advance. The preparations were made with hardly any attempt at secrecy. Visiting correspondents were told by the commanding generals just what was going to happen. Here in Paris it has been the talk of the boulevards. The Germans were so well informed of details that they were able to bring up reinforcements against the point whenever attacks took place, and it is to be presumed they did their best to check it. But the advance went off like clockwork as scheduled.

It will be recalled that the Germans a few months ago were able to do that kind of thing pretty much where they pleased. Now they are able to do it only against green troops such as Roumania brought into the war. To go no further back in the history of the war, the Verdun advances were themselves heralded from time to time, and except for the half-dozen announcements made from Berlin that Verdun itself was about to fall, they usually made good on their prophecies. They were able to do so because they knew what their preparations were and that the French had nothing to withstand them.

"Tother Way Round" Now.

Now it is cutting the other way. The French had such preparations that they knew the Germans could not stand against them. And no one wants to be deceived by the Berlin claim that the French have retaken the ground at frightful cost. It may have cost one-third what it cost the Germans to take it, not more. At this stage of the war human cost can be figured accurately on the basis of shell-fire and the number of hours the attacking army fought in the open. Ground taken in a few hours is bound to cost much less than ground captured after months of ceaseless attack.

The cost in lives has not entered into the discussion here at all, though the question of man-power is the catchword of the day, and there is a reason for it. Everyone in France knows now that French troops are not ordered out of the trenches until the opposing German trenches have been wiped out by shell fire. When the Germans cry "This is not war, it is slaughter," the French people simply rub their palms in self-congratulation. They know they have the job of driving the Germans out of France a jump at a time, and if the Germans will jump back ahead of their shell fire they are content. They have reached the cheerful state of mind where they are willing to go on making shells in larger and larger numbers for an indefinite period.

Verdun Front Secure.

Things may go ahead for a while on other fronts, but there is hardly a Frenchman living who thinks anything disastrous can happen again on this front. I am with them in that belief, and so is everybody who knows anything about the present strength of the French army in men and shells. My confidence in the situation, gathered from contact with the French people, is such that I am willing to write this and confide it to the slow-going mails when the French advance at Verdun is hardly more than under way, and I have no fear anything will happen meanwhile to contradict it. There is a common-sense reason for this, too. For the first time there is an adequate supply of big new modern artillery before Verdun. The Germans nearly took Verdun because France did not have a sufficient number of heavy fieldpieces to protect it. It was saved by the small 75-millimeter guns, the same guns that turned the Germans on the Marne, and the Germans were stopped only when the French succeeded in bringing up fortress guns from the forts on the Italian frontier; the French army was that badly off in artillery. There was new artillery enough for the Somme, but not for both the Somme and Verdun, so they advanced with the new on the Somme and held the Germans at Verdun with the old. Now the French have enough new heavy artillery for both the Somme and Verdun, so they are advancing at both spots.

Artillery the Big Factor.

It takes time to make artillery, but it takes longer yet to remove fixed ideas, and even the brilliant men who have turned France's military fortunes could not foresee what the war would be like at this stage and did not provide against the present necessity for heavy fieldpieces. It was Verdun that stirred things up. Verdun stands for many things, but in close-in military and political circles in France it means the point where France began to go in for heavy artillery on a big scale.

There are several different factions in France just now claiming the credit for France's growing artillery superiority, and without casting any discredit on the high command of the army it is generally conceded that the French parliament had an important hand in it. It is but a too, to the feelings of French parliamentarians, for they were certainly snubbed at the beginning of the war, and they can point out now with perfect propriety, especially the senators, that they ordered and voted the funds for heavy artillery when many military men in high position were inclined to think the thing was being overdone. The credit for the new Verdun advance—at least that part due to the soldiers and the brilliant French artillerymen—will have to go to a senatorial committee that got busy months ago, when it was not very much encouraged, and made the new supply of big guns possible.

This whole matter is not talked about much here; it is simply accepted. One no longer hears scornful remarks from military men about "meddling politicians." And the members of parliament and all the civil side of the government they represent are wearing their regained prestige rather modestly. But anyone who ever feared a military dictatorship in France can now definitely put that fear aside.

"Rained Grape on France."

At this time last year the more nervous Parisians were just beginning to believe that the Germans would never get to Paris. That had, in fact, been obvious since the battle of the Marne. Nevertheless, they had more confidence, and the army itself had more confidence, than the facts justified. The Germans could not break through perhaps, but they showed at Verdun that they could make it very expensive for France to hold its line.

Verdun, as a whole, the loss and regaining of its outer circle of forts, has cost the French nowhere near so much as it has cost the Germans; but there is not a French village, hardly a French family, where mourning is not worn for someone lost at Verdun. Those families that escaped owe it to unusual luck. On the whole, Verdun has been a very bloody business—much worse than the Somme. The best proof of this is the comparatively few deaths on the Somme among one's personal acquaintances and connections. Verdun rained grape on France. The Somme has been no such slaughter house for the French. But it was there the Germans first began harping on the phrase, "This is slaughter."

It was slaughter, because the French for the first time opposed them with as much artillery as they had, and French artillerymen are superior to any others. At the battle of the Marne itself, before the artillerymen had had all the experience the last two years has given them, they showed themselves thoroughly capable. At every point where the Germans tried to make stands on the Ourcq and the Marne the French artillery cleaned them out by the most systematic fire. They dropped their shells as regularly as the squares on the checker-board, and blew the German batteries all to pieces, so that immediately after the battle, when I passed that way, the fields were littered with wrecked fieldpieces and limbers and dead artillery horses.

French Superiority.

In those days France had one piece of artillery to Germany's ten. Germany still has three or four to France's one, but, opposed to the French themselves, Germany can afford to spare only cannon or fannon. The fact that the French have consistently gained on a fair field with an even distribution of equipment shows the French to be not only superior artillerymen but better in the infantry attacks.

In an article last May I called attention to the construction of the French mobile army under General Petain, made up of divisions and corps which had particularly distinguished themselves in attack. This was the army which paid so heavy a price in saving Verdun, but was still in shape to make the Somme offensive. Some of the best of these corps happen to be having just now a well-earned rest. They have not been in either the later successes on the Somme or at Verdun. It has not been necessary to use the very crack troops.

The football team of one of the most distinguished, the Twentieth army corps, recently played a hot match in Paris. It was an excellent team, hardly a member of which did not wear every possible decoration, but the leaders of the Twentieth who came along were a sight in themselves. They had been through Verdun and the Somme—eight months of continuous attack—but they were the fittest-looking men you could ask for. There was not one who to use our own phrase, did not look as if he could "lick his weight in wildcats." And men of this kind, in the midst of two big offensives, are right now taking their ease. It shows that many other divisions have proved their mettle. The mobile army of crack troops that numbered, perhaps, 500,000 last May comes nearer being a million today. It is not that the French army has grown in proportion—the new men who have come into action since last May number under a quarter of a million. The growth of the mobile army has come from men who have seen action since the beginning of the war. The whole army is showing a tendency to grow in fighting power. It is something in the French race. Napoleon made himself by developing the same characteristic.

ALL VICTIMS OF DISCONTENT

Absolutely Satisfied Person Is Hard Indeed to Find, and Perhaps It Is Well It Is So.

Nearly every fellow is in hopes that some day he will be able to quit the kind of work he is doing. If it is hard work, he wants to do something easy, and if it is easy he wants a position that isn't so confining. If he has a job where he works in an office part of the time and on the street part of the time, he wants to get into something where he won't always have to be running in and out.

The clerk in a store thinks he would like a place where he wouldn't have to work regular hours, and the man whose time belongs to himself thinks he would like to be a clerk. "When you are through with the day's work," he says to the clerk, "you're through, but I have always got something to worry me."

Husband thinks that doing the housework and talking to the neighbors is a snap, and wife feels that she would be perfectly happy if she could go out and work like a man does.

Almost everybody is dissatisfied with his job, and is determined that his son shall not do that kind of work. Even the fellow who draws an enormous salary isn't contented—he feels that he ought to be doing something.—Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

TRIFLES THAT MEAN MUCH

Overlooked, They Cause Unhappiness Among Married Folk—Woman's Two Commandments.

Married folk make desperate efforts to be interested in each other's affairs, and sometimes they succeed, for they manage to stand each other's dullness. They assert their egotism in turns. He tells the same stories several times. He takes her for a country walk and forgets to give her tea, and she never remembers that he hates her dearest friend Mabel. Where the rift grows more profound is when trifles such as these are overlooked, and particularly where a man has work that he loves, or to which he is used, which is much the same thing. In early days the woman's attitude to a man's work was a good deal, but she generally suspects it a little. She may tolerate it because she loves him, and all that is his is noble. Later, if this work is very profitable, or if it is work which leads to honor, she may take a pride in it, but even then she will generally grudge if the time and the energy it costs. She loves him, not his work. She will seldom confess this, even to herself, but she will generally lay down two commandments:

1. Thou shalt love me.
2. Thou shalt succeed so that I may love thee.—W. L. George, in the Atlantic.

Burned Priceless Documents.

A new broom sweeps clean, and there is nothing a young wife sets about more energetically than cleaning up the relics of her loved one's bachelor days. This has led to the untimely destruction of a number of valuable records at Buckten, Switzerland, where a newly married woman unacquainted with the nature of the documents, which she took for worthless old paper, set fire to the minutes of Swiss railway-building in the early days of the steam engine, mostly dating from 1850. Apart from their historical interest, most of the papers were stamped with the rare "Dove of Peace," much sought after by stamp collectors, and worth $30 apiece for good specimens. Close upon $5,000 worth of them were made away with while the minutes themselves are estimated to have been worth fully as much, if not more.

Safeguarding the Mules.

Ludicrous as it may seem, necessity has demanded that a Los Angeles driver equip his mules with tail lights, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. Without being facetious, it may not be amiss to point out that the devices he employs are literally the first real tail lights ever used. Some time ago when a number of the man's mules were being driven along a highway at night, a motor car plunged into the drove with disastrous results. This caused the dealer to resort to the warning lights so as to avoid similar accidents in the future. The devices, which are identical to those used on many bicycles, are strapped to the mules' tails. When the glare from the beams of a motor car strikes them, beams of ruby light are reflected. Incidentally, if a mule swings his tail, the warning signal becomes all the more noticeable.

Lesson of the Dead Nations.

We can know nothing of any nation unless we know its history; and we can know nothing of the history of any nation unless we know something of the history of all nations. The book of the world is full of knowledge we need to acquire, of lessons we need to learn, of wisdom we need to assimilate. Consider only this brief sentence of Polybius, quoted by Plutarch: "In Carthage no one is blamed, however he may have gained his wealth." A pleasant place, no doubt, for business enterprise; a place where young men were taught how to get on, and extravagance kept pace with shrewd finance. A self-satisfied, self-confident, money-getting, money-loving people, honoring success, and hugging its fancied security, while in far-off Rome Cato pronounced its doom.—Agnes Repplier, in the Atlantic.

Saved-Off Sermon.

It's easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than it is for a Chinaman to get through the need of an idol.

Important Industry.

It is said that 20 per cent of all the 2,500,000 automobiles now in this country is scrapped each year. This calls for 500,000 new autos each year, at an expense of not less than $300,000,000, to say nothing of the increasing demand on the part of those who have not heretofore owned a machine. This gives some idea of the importance of an industry that a quarter of a century ago was practically unknown. Apparently it has not yet anything like reached its full development.
