Help The Garden Club

The New Year is already proving a fruitful one for Sanford, for the first week in January saw the birth of the Sanford Garden Club. Just a year ago, a Garden Circle was organized under the Welfare Department of the Woman's Club. We have only to look around us to see evidence of its splendid work. The Garden Circle will merge with the Garden Club and continue its program of beautifying Sanford.

The Garden Club will be a great benefit both for Sanford as a community and for individuals for it will do much to encourage civic planting as well as to stimulate an interest in private gardens. Also it will no doubt lend its sheltering arms to plants indigenous to the state and to wild flowers.

Of course, any town anywhere is made lovelier by flowers, shrubs, and neatly kept lawns, but in Florida we are rather under contract to live up to our reputation of being a "land of flowers." There is a magic in flowers. Ask any tourist what draws him back to Honolulu year after year. It is not just the opalescent waves on Waikiki Beach or the excellent cuisine of the Moana Hotel, or the outrigger canoes, or the hula, or "Aloha Oe", or the gentle strumming of steel guitars. It is all these things plus the leis, the wreaths of living flowers that are hung around the necks of departing guests. And it is a safe bet that the fragrance of white ginger flowers lingers in his memory long after the taste of Hawaiian pineapple is forgotten. We want this flower magic in Sanford, not only for its very obvious commercial value in its appeal to visitors, but because we want the mellow beauty of it to be added to our community for the home people too.

The club will undoubtedly foster an interest in planting trees also. Think over the most beautiful towns you know and you will find they are "tree towns" which owe much of their charm to their trees. Savannah, Georgia with its aged oaks, New Haven, Connecticut with its characteristic elms, and our lovely neighbor, Winter Park with its semi-tropical variety of fine old trees.

A city must have imposing public buildings, expensive hotels, and luxurious homes, but if it doesn't have well kept parks and gardens, it will look like a woman in a handsome gown with run down at-the-heel slippers and untidy frowny hair. Let us help the Garden Club keep Sanford well groomed and beautiful.

A Long Way Off

Professor Irving Fisher of the Economics Department, Yale University, predicts that 1927 will be a bad year for wet propaganda and legislation, not only in the various state assemblies, but also in the national congress. Declaring that last year represents a "high water mark" in wet propaganda, he says 1927 will see the complete defeat of anti-prohibition activities.

"In the present House," Professor Fisher declares, "the wets have hardly ever mustered more than sixty votes. Next winter they will be confronted with a newly elected House in which 321 Representatives out of the total of 435, by their prohibition records and pledges, are satisfactory to the Anti-Saloon League."

"In their efforts with Congress this year," he continues, "the wets will be beaten as decisively as they were beaten last year. The first attempt during the present session of Congress to cut off prohibition appropriations mustered only twelve votes. During the year their many bills and joint resolutions, aimed at the Volstead act, will meet the condemnation voiced in the report of the Senate Sub-committee on the Judiciary, that they are 'contrary to the spirit and intent of the Eighteenth Amendment.' They will be defeated in their attempt to prevent a decided strengthening of Federal prohibition this year by the creation of a separate Bureau of Prohibition under one head."

Professor Fisher has made a careful study of prohibition conditions, and sentiment and knows whereof he speaks. There can be as little doubt that the Eighteenth Amendment is with us as a permanent institution as there is that the sun and stars will remain in the Heavens. While the propagandists may seem to be, or at least say they are, making considerable headway among the citizens of the land in showing the fallacy of Volsteadism at the same time they are steadily losing strength where strength is needed most, in the law-making bodies of the country.

It may be a long time, another generation perhaps, before prohibition enforcement has reasoned the stages of perfection so sorely needed, but as far as return of the open saloon or a modification of the Volstead law goes, that too is in the dim distant future. In fact so far in the future, that coming generations will have forgotten what it was their forefathers drank, which dogs, horses and frogs turned away from in disgust.

As Brisbane Sees It

One Title Enough. Hunting the Wild Ass. Mice Chase Cats. The Poor Are Scarcer. By ARTHUR BRISBANE Copyright 1927, by Star Co.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE positively declines to become a Moose, because he has other wood to saw. In addition he is not an Elk, a Redman, an Owl, a Woodman or an Odd Fellow. There are many things that he is not. Perhaps plain "American citizen" seems to him a sufficient membership badge.

A SCIENTIFIC expedition is bound for Central Persia to capture the fleet wild ass, "whose home I have made in the wilderness." You can overtake it, running. It drinks enormous quantities of water once a day. Then when you pursue it, galloping gives it pain, it falls down with cramps, and you catch it. Many men, before prohibition, were caught in that way, by fate.

CATS NEAR BAKERSFIELD, California, can sympathize with Midas, who changed into gold everything he touched, and nearly starved. California's cats were cheered, then horrified, by rolling waves of migrating mice. First they ate some, then ran from them in horror. Too much, even of mice, is too much.

POISON GRAIN MAY do what cats couldn't. Once when field mice threatened the alfalfa crop farther north, after owls, coyotes and other animals had eaten all they could, sea gulls came flying far inland, in huge flocks, swooping up the mice and ended the plague. Nature keeps things balanced. Ten shad in 10 years would fill the ocean with their descendants, and one cabbage house, in 10 years would produce young enough to outweigh the earth, if all the young ones lived.

JOSEPH D. BANNON, New York philosopher, whose business is to read the signs of the times, says "there is no use writing editorials about the poor any more. There are none of those people left. They all have automobiles. That isn't literally true, unfortunately, although it will be true some day. But there has been improvement."

THE WIDOW AND 17-year-old daughter of Tony Pagliughi, organ grinder, killed by an automobile in New York, are suing for $75,000 damages. They swear that his grinding, or delirium, which always played cheerful tunes, earned $150 a week. That's a little more than Uncle Sam pays a congressman or senator.

MR. DODD, PRESIDENT of the National Association of Book Publishers, says Americans will buy 10 years hence, twice as many books as are bought today. That's good news, if the right books are bought. What book publishers need is more and better advertising and a lower selling cost. How many automobiles would be sold if a car costing $500 in the factory cost $1,000 on delivery? That's how it is with books.

MADRID REPORTS that 20 children were slaughtered when a Chinese orphan's home and attack chimes at Foochow were struck by Chinese students. Rage against the Christians in China has been increased by circulation of stories telling how Christians gouge out the eyes of Chinese babies.

That sort of it stimulates murder. It is also the sort that was printed and told about the Germans in the big war, not so long ago to stimulate "patriotism."

GERMAN CHEMISTS still lead the world to the horror of American manufacturers of wood alcohol. The President last November increased the tax on wood alcohol to protect manufacturers. But German manufacturers cynically "manthanol," which does all that wood alcohol will do, and the President increased the tariff they have sent in 500,000 gallons. Americans must compete or quit.

BECAUSE MEN talked across the Atlantic at $25 a minute, the price of telephone and telegraph stock immediately went up. Now stock in cables under the oceans drops, stockholders fearing telephone competition. They need things suddenly.

There is greater tonnage of sailing vessels on the water today than when the first steamship was built.

ITS GOOD TO HAVE ships at sea if, like Great Britain, you have an empire. Yesterday the British admiralty took the ocean liner, Macantic from the White Star Line to be fitted for transporting troops to China. Britain will not drop her Chinese rights and future profits without a struggle.

Here, we hope to have no further use for ships carrying American soldiers across the ocean. But we ought to have a few ships just in case.

MR. FOKKER, who knows how to build flying machines, is now building a big one that will go 2,600 miles on one supply of fuel and fly from California to Hawaii and 1,400 miles farther. That should interest the navy department. It might hire Mr. Fokker.

'Twas Once A Thing Of Beauty

WHEN IS A BOOK NOT A BOOK

NEW YORK HERALD-TRIBUNE

It is scarcely needed the annual gathering of the book publishers to proclaim the extraordinary prosperity of the book business. What Mr. John McRae and Mr. Frank C. Dodd observed by way of review and prophecy leaps to the eye on every table in every home. Not only the public libraries but the subscription libraries reflect the new activity. Books have arrived from the far corners of entertainment and information for all sorts of people. Where a generation ago a book held a high brow connotation it is now as popular as the radio or the movies. The old classics to frequently gathered dust on parlor bookshelves. The new books are not pieces of furniture. They are bought to be read—novels, books of biography, history and travel, books of ideas, that not only make as newspapers are read as part of the daily routine, the interesting staff of life which nobody wants to miss. Here is, we think, the answer to those conservatives who view the present torrent of books with apprehension. They would preserve the old view of a book as something sacrosanct, to be put on a shelf, reread and preserved from generation to generation along with the family portraits and silver. Most of the current output of books is nothing of the sort. It is plain journalism, and to assume lasting literary quality in it because it happens to be in book form is to miss its whole point. The one fair criticism that can be made is the price of these journalistic volumes. The pity is that the public cannot be persuaded to read the first issues of its books in prochnre. Perhaps when the new book reading public has grown a little wiser it will welcome this reform. In the mean time, we can see chiefly a healthy freedom of mind in the present activity of publishing and reading. As for the future, homes never smaller or library shelves shorter And there are always bonfires.

LAWYERS AND EXCUSES

GAINESVILLE SUN

Wholesale continuance of criminal cases in the courts of Florida, and perhaps of other states prompts us to ask ourselves whether the best of modern legal talent lies in the practice of law or the making of excuses. It seems that the defense lawyer who can successfully keep his client from the bar of justice for a long enough period of time has the odds in his favor in the end, while it is more or less a "break-even" proposition for the attorney who cannot find some apparently logical excuse and who thereby is forced to argue his case before the court and jury within a short time after the crime is alleged to have occurred. Memory is a forgetful thing. It serves us fairly well as regards something which happened yesterday, but less accurately as to something which took place a week ago. The same is true as regards something which happened two months ago and something which took place two years ago. It has also been found that folks take a keener interest in something which is related to them as happening in the immediate past, while they find it difficult to concentrate on an occurrence more remotely in the past. Thus it is with juries and officers of the court. If the case being tried still seems of the freshening nature, they can center their minds and attention on it more religiously than if it is old. Lawyers today have developed the art of taking advantage of this fact to the finer points. They have almost reduced it to a science. Such is the predicament in which we find ourselves.

CUTTING EXPENSES

LAKELAND

J. S. Blitch, superintendent of the state prison farm at Raiford, announced from the Jacksonville hospital where he was recovering from wounds received in the taking of Al House and the two others who escaped from state's prison with him, that he will recommend a pardon for Marion R. Highsmith, sent up from this county for life on a murder charge, because of the valuable aid he rendered upon that occasion. Beyond any doubt of question, Highsmith is entitled to great consideration because of his part in that affair. Whether heroes are born or made has never been satisfactorily determined. It is easy to determine that Highsmith was the real hero of that occasion. Superintendent Blitch then proved his own courage. But Highsmith, physically hampered by being blind of one eye, displayed even more courage. Had it not been for him and his loyalty to Blitch might now be dead. Had he not acquitted himself as he did Al House would, in every probability, now be at liberty. Highsmith risked his own life for the life of Blitch, and against escape for Al House. So doing, he rendered the state of Florida in particular and society in general a valuable service. When his application for clemency comes on for action this should be considered at its worth, and if his sentence is reduced or he is pardoned outright the order announcing that action should specifically state that it was for distinguished service—for service that was not compulsory but which conspicuously demonstrated what is commonly designated as "a man." One who did what Highsmith did evidently has all the makings of a good citizen in him, even if he has done something that brought him to be classed as a bad citizen.

FOR DISTINGUISHED SERVICE

TAMPA TIMES

Discussions of economy in municipal governments in Florida may turn to Daytona Beach for illustrations. That city practiced economies last year with such good results that it closed 1926's books with unspent appropriations aggregating $32,600 for the first year of operation for the triple cities of Daytona, Daytona Beach and Seabreeze as one municipality, consolidation having been effected the first of last year. Now with the expiration of 1926 in mind, the city commission has adopted a budget for 1927 that is $243,681 less than last year. The budget for 1926 was $1,010,386; for this year it is $776,705. It is very patent that the thing to do from now on is to consolidate for Florida cities and counties to their winnings, cut expenditures, had maintain credit at top place, keeping down bond issues to the lowest possible notch. The question of taxation has become one of immense interest.
