NATION IN BRIEF

Ford Considering Plan

On School Desegregation WASHINGTON (AP) - President Ford is adding a new wrinkle to the school desegregation issue, saying he is considering a plan to allow school districts to escape court supervision after three years. Ford said Friday he will propose legislation requiring the courts to relinquish jurisdiction over school cases after three years. But he did not make clear whether his plan would lift court supervision in all desegregation cases or only those cases that involve busing. Ford said his plan would apply to school systems that have been found guilty of illegal segregation and that have been ordered to implement court-approved desegregation Ford said it would apply to future court cases and that he expects Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi to tell him whether the same plan could apply retroactively to school systems already under court orders. Earthquakes Kill 24,000

WASHINGTON (AP) - The 21 significant earthquakes recorded so far this year have killed some 24,000 people worldwide. That makes this the deadliest year for quakes since 1970, says the U.S. Geological Survey.

The 21 significant earthquakes do not represent an unusual number for the first five months of the year, the agency said. But the death toll is up dramatically from 1975 when a total of 1,350 persons were killed in quakes. Survey scientists said Friday the 24,000 deaths so far this year make 1976 the deadliest year for tremors since earthquakes wracked Peru and Turkey in 1970, killing more than 67,000 people.

Most of the deaths this year came in the Feb. 4 quake in Guatemala, which killed an estimated 23,000 persons. On May 6, another earthquake hit northeastern Italy and took

Scandal Force Appointed

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Ford says he warned the House five years ago not to grant control over staff salaries to Wayne Hays' administration committee, but Majority Leader Thomas O'Neill says Ford was wrong then, wrong now, and "just taking a cheap political shot." With the congressional payroll-sex scandal spilling into the political arena, Speaker of the House Carl Albert appointed a task force of three Democrats to study misuse of public funds by members of Congress. One of the triumvirate, Rep. Lloyd Meeds, when asked if it wouldn't be a good idea to have Republicans on the task force, replied bluntly, "How many Republicans have come under scrutiny so far?"

Air Fare Hike Requested

NEW YORK (AP) - Airline fares have gone up nearly 10 per cent in the past seven months, but a group of major domestic carriers were pressing last week for a new two

The latest request for a rate rise that would take effect in July if approved by the Civil Aeronautics Board was made by seven of the top 10 domestic airlines. It was made at a time when the industry was reporting a 12 to 13 p cent overall increase in air traffic during May.

The traffic increase represented an encouraging continuation of a year-long improvement in the air travel picture. It was particularly welcome since May normally is not a heavy air travel month.

Wallace Visits California

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - There were no cheering crowds, no waving placards, no bands playing for George Wallace when he arrived for a five hour visit to campaign for votes in the Democratic presidential primary here.

Later, sitting on a bed in a unlit hotel room near San Francisco International Airport and speaking only to reporters instead of the usual exhuberant crowds, the Alabama governor complained that other presidential candidates are reaping votes with ideas he proposed a

Gas Transport Ruling Sought

WASHINGTON (AP) - The president would decide how to transport natural gas from Alaska to the lower 48 states under a compromise measure introduced in the Senate. But Congress could overrule his decision.

The legislation, introduced Friday, seeks to bring a final decision by the end of next year on how the gas will be transported - whether via an all-American pipeline through Alaska, a pipeline that crosses Canada, by tankers or through some other method.

It would also sharply abbreviate judicial review of the decision, removing potential obstacles in much the same manner that a 1973 bill cleared the way for construction of the trans-Alaska oil pipeline.

Cocaine Cache Destroyed

MIAMI (AP) - Officials say U.S. Customs agents watched as the captain of a three-masted Colombian sailing ship destroyed six kilos of cocaine that two crewmembers had tried to bring into the country. Customs spokesman Jim Dingfelder said Friday that agents supervised destruction of the contraband after it was reported aboard Thursday by the training ship's captain, Rafael Martinez.

"We went aboard, took samples and then supervised destruction," Dingfelder said. He said Customs had no plans to bring charges in the case because there was no actual attempt to bring the cocaine ashore.

Land Fraud Bill Passes

TALLAHASSEE (AP) - Legislation to aid the state's fight against a multi-million dollar land securities fraud has been passed by the legislature and sent to Gov.

The Senate gave the 17-bill package final approval

The omnibus measure expanded to six-months the requirement for refunds on land sales made over the telephone. It also tightened other disclosure and auditing laws on land sale companies.

Canal Study Scheduled

JACKSONVILLE (AP) - Army Engineers will be studying a bulky file of reports during the next month to draw up an environmental impact statement on the longdelayed Cross-Florida Barge Canal. The reports from government agencies and consulting firms were released Friday and will provide the base for the statement. District engineer Col. Donald A. Wisdom said it will be ready in draft form by July 9. The waterway, planned as a link between Jacksonville on the Atlantic and Yankeetown on the Gulf, has been in legal limbo since work was halted in 1971 when it was onethird completed. It now awaits a decision by Congress on whether it will be revived or killed.

Killing Statement Released

TAMPA (AP) - A judge has released a statement in which a man charged with murdering former vice squad Detective Richard Cloud tells of the killing. 'I think I shot three times," Benjamin Foy Gilford says n the statement, adding he later shot two more times. Hillsborough Circuit Judge Charles H. Scruggs III ruled Friday against a motion to suppress the statement by Gilford, who now contends he made the two-hour taperecorded statement under duress.

Libel Suit Dismissed

FORT LAUDERDALE (AP) - A $2.5-million libel suit against the Hollywood Sun-Tattler filed by a former Hallandale city attorney in 1975 has been dismissed.

Visiting Broward County Circuit Judge Victor O. Wehle said his dismissal of the suit brought by Charles Finkel was based on a 1964 U.S. Supreme Court decision in a libel suit against the New York Times.

In that ruling, the high court held that the newspaper cannot be convicted of libeling a public official unless it can be proven that the offending article contains calculated falsehoods with intent to harm.

Let's Bring Back Our Picnic Tables

That's the battle cry of many travelers, tourists and Sanford-area residents alike since it was discovered more than a week ago that the Florida Department of Transportation (DOT) had removed all picnic and wayside park areas along the waterfront of Lake Monroe on US 17-92, north of the Sanford city limits.

The Sanford-Seminole Jaycees have made a concerted pitch to have the tables and benches restored, but Jack Sellers, district roadway engineer for the DOT, said Friday that he had only had a cursory telephone conversation with the local Jaycees and that he needed something in writing before any decision could be made by his superiors.

Sellers said the DOT removed the concrete tables and benches because the department found it too costly to maintain them, especially since the during the days of the activist "Warren Court." majority of the benefit was being derived by local to lead the fight for the enlargement of individual citizens rather than having the facilities used by travelers and tourists.

So what's wrong with that? Who pays those roadway taxes that go to pay for the maintenance of the roadside parks? You do, every time you pump gasoline into the family go-

Granted, our of-of-state, yes, even our out-oftown, visitors help by buying gasoline at the area service stations, but that doesn't mean they carry the bulk of the load. Last week, Sellers said removing the facilities is part of a statewide DOT policy intended to get the department out of the recreation business.

He went on to say that a policy approved in January 1975, called for the deletion or lease of all authority. The reason the court became so inwayside parks not used 'exclusively' by the volved in civil rights in the Warren years was

However, the DOT will continue to maintain rest areas on interstate highways and in some remote

The DOT says there aren't sufficient funds to maintain the parks and facilities. Too, Sellers said DOT offered to turn the facilities along the waterfront over to Seminole County, but county officials weren't interested.

County Development Director John Percy said, "You're kidding," when told the picnic tables and benches had been removed. He also said, "I thought it was a bluff," when the DOT said that it was going to remove the facilities unless the county agreed to the maintenance of same. Now he knows they weren't bluffing. The tables, benches and trash barrels have been removed and all that remains is a concrete slab - and an ugly one at that.

We hope the Sanford-Seminole Jaycees will follow through on their efforts to have the picnic areas restored.

According to Sellers, all that is needed is a letter of intent as to what the Jaycees propose and how they plan to maintain the areas. Then it's up to the DOT brass as to a final decision

Right now, the tables and benches are in storage - they haven't been destroyed as first

It might seem rather trivial to some and a waste of money to others, but there are people in our area, as well as many tourists and travelers. who enjoyed those wayside picnic areas. Let's do all we can to help BRING 'EM BACK!

BERRY'S WORLD

"You're lucky! You grew up during the time when people were still shockable!"

There's a neat little mathematical formula in existence today. It goes like this. As the value of your property increases, so does the amount o Around taxes you pay the tax collector.

A constant in the formula, however, i homestead exemption remains the same, regardless of what happens to the other values. A statewide move is afoot, however, to change the constant and provide for an increase in the amount of homestead exemption.

The effort would increase the homestead exemption from $5,000 to $10,000 for most property owners and from $10,000 to $15,000 for senior

What this means to the homeowner is lower property taxes. Before it becomes a reality about 300,000 to 400,000 signatures across the state must be gathered and the issue must be placed on the November ballot. If it passes, the Florida Legislature may then amend the law. If all goes smoothly, lower property taxes could go into effect

Randall Priest of Sanford is busy gathering signatures. He feels it will be a great help to homeowners if the higher exemption becomes a reality. Seminole Countians interested in signing a petition or circulating petitions should contact county Tax Appraiser Terry Goembel. Goembel says he's set June 15 as the deadline, and he says he'll be happy to mail a copy of the petition to in-

The reason the process is so involved is because the change requires an amendment to the Florida Constitution, thus the requirement for the referendum before lawmakers can vote to effect the

There is one hooker. That is the money returned to homeowners must be made up someplace. So, if the change becomes a reality and the amount of homestead exemption increases look for the legislature to ask for higher taxes on other commodities, perhaps cigarettes, liquor - or maybe even an increase in the gasoline tax.

When the state giveth it also taketh. And if homeowners receive a tax break — and it seems fair since evaluations are on the rise while the exemption remains constant - you may rest assured those tax breaks will be made up -

One option, of course, would be to decrease services. But taxpayers don't want that. In fact the current trend is for more and more services. And additional services mean only one thing - higher

There is another option. But it's doubtful state government would choose it. That option is to trim some of the bureaucratic fat out of the system, especially at the state level. But then to trim bureaucratic fat means a loss in patronage for politicians. And politicians don't cotton to that, not

So, if lower property taxes are voted in look for cost increases in other areas. You can bet on it.

Rent Controls Don't Work

from one of his aldermen following a rent increase of several per cent last month, Chicago Mayor Richard Daley has named a committee to "examine all aspects of rent controls to determine whether they are needed or desirable." Now, it is with great trepidation that one gives advice to Mayor Daley about anything. But as regards rent control, the mayor should forget it, unless he desires to inflict on the Windy City a mess that by comparison will make the damage caused by Mrs. O'Leary's cow seem minor. The history of the way rent control has not worked in other cities clearly demonstrates that it is neither needed nor desirable. In a report on the New York City federal loan program, issued last month by the Senate Banking Committee, it was found that the New York rent control law "is a major cause of the decline of New York City's housing stock and the erosion of its real estate

The committee, which recommends that rent controls be phased out, says the case for such action is compelling. Since 1960, 300,000 rental units have been abandoned, and abandonments are currently running at a rate of 30,000 units a year. In the last 10 years, the city's housing stock has increased only two per cent.

"Interestingly enough," says the committee," there is no evidence to show that rent control benefits the poor. Quite the contrary, it helps a small, privileged group of long-time residents, largely middle-class, while driving up rents in uncontrolled units."

In the nation's capital, Washington, D.C. which has had a rent control law since mid-1974, this experiment has proved similarly disastrous. The liberal Washington Post has editorialized that these controls have been "an administrative nightmare;" the more conservative Washington Star has also criticized controls, noting that abundoned properties are up to 3,000 and housing starts have dropped from the pre-control level of 1,792 per year to only 410 last year. The Star quotes William Shenkel, chairman of the department of real estate and urban development at the University of Georgia, as saying:

"While rent control may be rationalized on egalitarian grounds, gross inequities - as the record shows - follow from its administration. In short, rent control leads to further housing shortages and a lower quality of housing; they work to the disadvantage of both tenants and property owners. In the final analysis, rent controls appear to add to the problem they purport to solve."

Celtics Win Frogstrangler In Triple Overtime

Tommy Heinsohn felt ill and begged off the usual post-game interview. Jo Jo White slumped in a chair and asked no one in particular: "Would you believe we've got another game in Phoenix Sunday?"

That was the atmosphere in the Boston Celtics' dressing room early today, 3 hours and 8 minutes after they had tapped off in a pivotal game with the Phoenix Suns Friday night at the Garden.

The Celtics, bidding for an unprecedented 13th National Basketball Association cham-

Seminole Community College captured the all sports championship in Division 2 for the eighth consecutive year, edging runnerup Florida JC by a wide margin. The Raiders finished first in tennis and track and had second places in baseball, basketball and cross country. Women's tennis and golf finishes were third and fourth - still not bad in an eight-team division.

the All-Star game? - Mike Stanoch, Anaheim, Calif. Yes, I think the present system of popular voting for predetermined candidates is ridiculous and inequitable. I can't fault the managers for the way they handle their unwieldy squads. It's only an exhibition game anyhow - and not a true test

Q. Will Archie Griffin make it in the backfield of the Cininnati Bengals in spite of his size? - L.M., Cincinnati, Ohio. Archie's size isn't going to be the criterion. He proved at Ohio State his squat 185 pounds can take the pounding of a running back. But a pro halfback also has to catch the ball, and that's an area Archie has never had the chance to explore.

Q. One simple question: what happened to the almighty Warriors in their playoff series with Phoenix? - J.T., Oakland,

In their seventh and deciding game they forgot to play team basketball. My inclination is to criticize Al Attles, who got (and deserved) all the credit for championship leadership last year and had them riding the crest during the past regular season. But in the last two decisive losses he completely forgot rookie Gus Williams, his fourth leading scorer and third on the team in assists. Especially in the clincher, the Warriors desperately needed a man to bring the ball up the court, and Gus is the only guy on the club with that kind of talent. Phil Smith, a brilliantscorer, played one-on-one basketball. He never passed the ball to baitfish all day long. Cane pole fishermen are getting plenty of Rick Barry. And the Phoenix Suns took over the Warriors' patent bream in the same area with crickets the best bait.

Q. What is the condition of Jim Langer, the Miami Dolphins all-pro center, who was rumored to have a heart attack during the winter? - D.S., Panama City, Fla.

The 28-year-old center collapsed mysteriously while making a speech in South Dakota. But several days of tests in the hospital showed nothing organically wrong. He's passed his physical with the Dolphins and has already been working out. Langer told Monte Clark, his former line coach, that he almost passed out last season after a tough game against New England in which Patriot middle guard Ray Hamilton pressured him severely.

Q. Do you think it's right for Catfish Hunter to spend four hours in the sun making a TV commercial when he's supposed to be the starting pitcher for the Yankees that night? - L.M., Rah-

Yeah, if he's the winning pitcher. As it turned out, Catfish was clobbered for four runs in the opening inning and went on to lose the game. So I think the Yankee management, which 's paying him handsomely, has a legitimate beef in asking he conserve his energy on a working day. Pitching is still his primary job. Q. Cantrell, who seems to be in a war wherever he goes, came to Pete Ashlock because he "wanted to give it one last shot and to Denier. see if he could really go someplace in boxing." The South Carolina fighter has been a journeyman boxer for several years. But he has always been the "opponent." He is the guy who always goes to the other guy's turf and usually get ripped Cantrell felt that with Ashlock he could fight on a regular basis and establish himself in the boxing world as many of Ashlock's other fighters have done. Since coming to Pete he has gotten a lot of fights but everyone has been tough and now with his injured ear, Bruce may feel that there must be an easier way to make a living.

Water Level Up, So Is Bass Fishing

Bass fishing continues to improve with the rise in the water survey of the work required to remove the weekend cabins and level of the St. Johns River. At Lemon Bluff Ben Grunloh, Merritt Island, landed seven on Thursday and George Further downstream around Marina Isle most of the action has been limited to bream. C. O. Penney landed a limit Thursday and earlier in the week, his son, Jim, had a nice catch of 35.

Around Osteen Bridge Camp, bank anglers are taking bream from the deep water around the bridge but bass action has been The severe storms slowed bream fishing on Lake Jessup but Lowell Hiley listed several good catches made early in the week. The Conley party of Orlando fished the lake for three days landing a total of 175 bream. Mr. and Mrs. Cravers, Winter Park, had 40, Tom Norwood and son, Junior, and George Alderman got 60. Next to truck drivers, few other segments of the two-way radio community are as active users of CB as farmers. Indeed, the entire Class D service was specifically created just for small businessmen such as farmers who had a clear need for inexpensive, reliable radio communications.

Simply because the FCC has now eased its restrictions and opened CB up to hobby use by the general public, the need has not diminished. But, because of the growing popularity of CB and the resultant air congestion, it's become increasingly difficult for farmers to communicate via CB. In an effort to insure the usability of CB, farmers across the nation are banding together, using CB to carry their message. Just as the truckers have Channel 19 informally set aside as their own national transportation channel, farmers are seeking their own frequency. The channel they're trying for is 8. And already, in many parts of the U.S., CBers who use 8 for idle chitchat, 10-36s and radio checks are politely being asked to move on to another frequency and leave the "farmers' channel" open. The drive to get 8 set aside as a national agriculture channel began early this spring by a group of 150 CB-equipped farmers in four Illinois

Most farmers now have CB radios on their tractors as a timesaving means of contacting other field hands or the wife back in the farmhouse. Many fertilizer and farm machinery dealers are similarly equipped and, much as some gasoline service stations monitor Channel 19 to provide quick aid to stranded motorists, they are available for help in rushing extra lots of seed or equipment to the field. The drive is to get as many farmers as possible to use Channel 8 as their standy-by and to get their city and subdivision neighbors to help keep the the hours of 6 a.m. and 9 p.m.

Crooms' Form Is Misleading

belong. Or at least busy yourselves with needle and thread.

This appears to be the message of the Crooms High School registration form which parents received recently. Under the heading 'Required courses', the form states clearly: 'Home economics (required for girls) child care, clothing, foods and housing (choose 2). Further down, under 'Electives,' boys are asked to choose four subjects; girls may

The message of this form has confused some parents, who understood that under the Title 9 requirement, all such sexist discrimination must be eliminated from school curricula. True, secondary schools have until July 21, 1978 to comply with Title 9 But the Office of Civil Rights does expect the interim period to be one of working toward sex equality - a period of adjustment, rather than of waiting for the boom to fall in two

But Crooms is adjusting, says Principal E. L. Blackshear. Although the registration form states that girls and boys now have identical curriculum choices, that's not what it means. Why, for the coming year, almost one third of the female students have opted to drop home economics for alternative courses - particularly foreign languages and music. There have also been a few boys over the past couple of years who have selected one of the home economic courses instead of the usual shop or band.

Nevertheless, the forms which the students carry home contain no correction to indicate that Crooms students - like all other ninth graders in Seminole County -- are being given the opportunity to change with th times. Their parents — or at least those I have spoken to - accept at face value what is contained in the forms.

Blacksheare explained that the forms are outdated; that next year new forms will be printed. Fair enough. But it might have saved some confusion on the part of several parents (not to mention the insidious imprinting on tender eighth grade minds the linked words 'home economics - for girls' if some sort of corrections could have been made on the current form. Just a line drawn through the outdated phrases is all it needed, and the word 'four' inserted where it says girls' selectives are limited to three.

Blacksheare also commented that home economics for girls is still "strongly recommended" by his guidance department - probably out of "tradition or habit." Tradition and habits are changing. It is finally being recognized that there is no natural law which determines girls shall be cooks and bottle washers, and boys technologists, linguists, farmers or musicians. Contemporary lifestyles no longer reinforce the adage that "a woman's place is in the home." Today's woman gets married laier (11 21 all), is usually employed outside the home and has fewer (if any) children. And as she shares more of the breadwinner's burden, so men share more of the homemaking tasks. The responsibility for preparing our children for tomorrow's lifestyles lies heavily with our educators - guidance counselors included. Adhering to old habits and defunct traditions is not the most realistic approach.

Jerry Ford's done it. He's learned to coordinate chewing gurn with his other daily activities. Now I'd like to see the new multitude of CB radio fans learn to drive while talking on their radios.

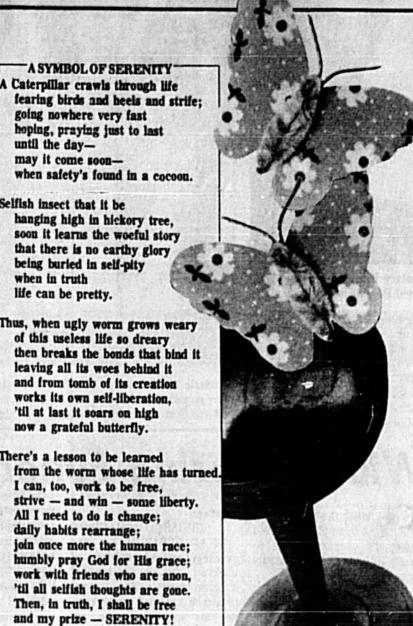

I happened to get behind several CBers over the Memorial Day weekend, both in city traffic and on the freeway. They're easy to spot. They're the ones who are so busy talking they don't notice the lights have changed to green. Or they're so engrossed in decoding conversations while cruising down the highway, that their speed in the accelleration lane dwindles to an aggravating 30 m.p.h. They're using their "ears" alright, but what about their eyes?

Perhaps when the novelty wears off, CBers will go back to using their radios just for business or emergencies — and get their minds back on driving and their eyes back on Until then, that CB aerial bending back in the breeze ought to have a red flag tied to it. The message: 'Danger! This guy's "ears" may be covering his eyes.' -You read me?

Action stations! The prophecy contained in those signs you've seen in Sanford shop windows proclaiming, "It's Happening!" is about to become reality. At least that's the prediction of Sara Jacobson, chairman of Sanford's Downtown Development Cor-

On June 14, the DCC board, along with a number of local supporters and Harvard town planning consultant Cy Paumler, will meet for a workshop to develop the initial action projects. The following evening, June 15, a general assembly of property owners and merchants from Sanford's historical district will be called upon to give the go-ahead on those projects they believe will best initiate the downtown redevelopment plan.

Al-Anon:

A Lifeline For Families Of Alcoholics

Women's News Director

Butterflies, so says the song, are free. The women who were baring their souls to me over th formica lunch tables of a local hamburger joint all wore butterflies - pretty, lacy lapel pins; pendants; rings. Not showy, not obvious....but there. The unofficial symbols of their new-found freedom through Al-Anon, a group for the families and close friends of alcoholics. "Before, it was like being shut in a hellish dark cocoon," said Stella, a lively, forthright person, mother of two, who has never known life away from alcoholics. Her grandfather, mother, father and husband all had drinking problems. "But now," she continued, "I've broken free. I've become something beautiful, and like a butterfly, I've spread my wings

The other women (using only first names or nicknames) old their stories, with humor and with an occasional quiver of

All so different. All the same.

Al-Anon, for all of them, was their saving grace; a haven for women suffering the depths of degredation and desperation. They all trod the same path to Al-Anon. How well they knew the steps of reasoning, pleading, threatening. . . . They had been beaten, humiliated, deserted - and time and again had believed all the promises about starting anew. Until the next drinking bout.

"I became as crazy as he was," said Mary, a quietspoken slip of a woman, recently divorced after 24 years of marriage. During the last three, her husband had no job, was gone from home for days and weeks at a time. One night his frantic wife actually tried to beat him up - "All 200-some pounds of him!"

she can now recall with a chuckle, adding, "Al-Anon saved my sanity and probably my life."

Jean was desperate, too. "I had it planned how I would send my three kids to their grandparents and then just do away with myself. I was suicidal," admitted the woman who in professional circles is known as one of the coolest, most con Stella plotted murder. "Scheming how you're going to get rid of him becomes more fun than the actual event - the real thing would be over once and for all, but in your mind you can do

Mary was right. They had all become sick and crazy from another persons's disease. They were driven to Al-Anon not to find a cure for their alcoholic husbands, but to save themselves. The first step is the most difficult. The individual must accept that she is powerless to control the alcoholic's drinking:

the alcoholic, but there is plenty she can do for herself to find serenity — even happiness — in spite of husband's problem. Al-Anon is not only for women, of course. In fact, the male membership is growing as changing attitudes toward alcoholism encourage more female alcoholics to seek help that it is not her responsibility. There is nothing she can do for through Alcoholics Anonymous - and their mates find support Like the AA, Al-Anon is an anonymous fellowship. Downtown Kick-Off Still In Political Style County's Mental Health Budget Meeting June 15

Sanford's Downtown Development Corporation (DDC) will call a general assembly meeting June 15 so property owners and merchants in Downtown Sanford can voice their opinions about kick-off projects for the revitalization of the historic district. Proposed projects will be discussed at a workshop session

The workshop and general assembly meeting were scheduled for today and Tuesday, but have been postponed until next week.

"From now on, we will be action-oriented," said DDC Chairman Sara Jacobson. Also attending the workshop will be Cy Paumier, a town planning consultant based in Maryland who has been invited by photographer is around - providing they're in the mood to the DDC to recommend specific projects to start the redevelopment drive. Paumier will also meet with local government officials to discuss downtown development. Projects discussed at the workshop will be presented to the public at an evening meeting June 15 for comment and action. "We have created the vehicle for redevelopment," said Miss Jacobson. "Now it's up to the property owners and merchants to climb aboard the driver's seat." The DDC board will travel to Lake Wales Tuesday to meet the downtown development group in that city, and to tour the rejuvenated section of the town.

Miss Jacobson said Lake Wales is a town similar in size and historical heritage to Sanford, where redevelopment efforts had turned a decayed downtown area into a charming and thriving center. A tour of the town would help DDC board members conceptualize what Sanford could look like once its plans for redevelopment become reality, she added.

FLORIDA IN BRIEF

Inventories May Lower

Juice Concentrate Prices

ORLANDO (AP) - Prices for frozen orange juice concentrate probably will be forced down by inventories millions of gallons larger than first reported, citrus industry spokesmen say. Industry experts said understated inventories could cost growers as much as $8 million, with wholesale prices falling as much as 15 cents on a dozen six-ounce cans of the frozen concentrate. That could mean a drop of a penny a can or more at the supermarket. The Florida Canners Association announced the new inventory figures over the weekend and said it would conduct an immediate inquiry.

"Based on statistical data reported to us, it appears the inventory of bulk (frozen concentrated orange juice) may have been between two million gallons and five million gallons greater than our past reports have shown," the association said. "We have initiated steps to enable us to determine the correct figures."

Some Lawmakers Unhappy

TALLAHASSEE (AP) - Some lawmakers are grumbling because their pet proposals died in House and Senate budget committees when the clock ran out on the 1976 legislative session.

Among the hundreds of measures which died without a hearing were proposals to provide restitution for the victims of violent crimes, to give a $35-million tax break for some contractors and to build a 100-acre park for the

As in past years, the sponsors are unhappy. But legislative leaders say the Senate Ways and Means Committee and the House Appropriations Committee are just doing their jobs when they bottle up measures designed to tap the state treasury.

Infant Centers Slated

TALLAHASSEE (AP) - Centers to provide tensive care for newborn infants who are ill will be established around Florida under a bill signed into law today by Gov. Reubin Askew. Funds are in the state budget for centers in Pensacola.

Gainesville, Orlando, Tampa, St. Petersburg and Miami, The law also authorizes additional centers in Broward, Palm Beach and Dade counties when funds are available. The centers will be under supervision of the state Health and Rehabilitative Services Department.

Fontainebleau May Be Sold

MIAMI BEACH (AP) - The Fontainebleau Hotel, one of the most famous hostelries in the world, owes almost $1.3 million in property taxes and could be put on the auction block as early as November.

"We don't have the money to pay the taxes," Fontainbleau owner Ben Novack told city council last week. But after a good tourist season this year, Novack said arrangements were being made "so we can pay our taxes very soon, I hope." He declined to elaborate.

Even Tom Edison Could Be Wrong

The attacks on nuclear energy have spawned the wry witticism that electricity itself would still be under attack if the electric chair had been invented ahead of the light bulb. Certainly the number of otherwise rational people who cannot separate in their minds the peaceful atom from the terrible mushroom cloud over Hiroshima is surprisingly large.

It is a little-remembered fact that electricity was widely assailed as an evil genie by the fearful when it was first introduced as a source of household lighting in the early 1880s. Critics charged that this mysterious and invisible "fluid" carried in copper wires would burn the cities down. Some insurance companies refused to supply fire insurance for any home wired for the outrageous Equally bitter was the controversy toward the end of the 1880s when the fledgling electric utility industry sought, for economy reasons, to replace low voltage direct current with the higher voltage alternating current that is universally used and taken for granted today. What is really remarkable is that the inventive giant I homas Alva Edison threw his great reputation into the fight to ban commercial use of alternating current.

Edison was the unchallenged authority of the time on electricity. His invention of the incandescent light bulb and development of the central power station had ushered in the Electricity Era that has brought so much ease and richness to our lives. Writing in the November 1889 issue of The North American Review he charged that alternating current was unreliable as well as dangerous and said, "There is no plea which will my the use of high afternating current, either in a scientific or commercial sense. . . (such) systems should be prohibited."

It is hard to exaggerate the magnitude of Edison's influence at the time. For modern equivalent, it is as though the 34 leading American scientists, including 11 Noble Prize winners, who last year joined in stating that nuclear power and coal offered the nation its only hope of energy salvation, had instead roundly condemned nuclear

Yet time rather quickly proved the great Edison to be utterly wrong.

We do not question the sincerity of those who today are trying to ban the generation of electricity in nuclear power plants and are expressing arguments reminiscent of Edison's opposition to alternating currents. Nor do we belittle the major problems associated with nuclear energy.

But we believe that those problems will be solved, just as Edison solved major problems to make electricity our household servant, and just as others tamed the high voltage alternating currents that Edison so honestly feared.

We suggest that the opponents of nuclear energy should have the humility to recognize that if the towering Edison could be wrong in a matter of great moment, so can they. If they are wrong, and prevail, they will have done their country a massive injury.

on the 200-year decline of American liberty than the story from Philadelphia of Mayor Frank Rizzo's financial plight. Not his personal plight; but the plight of Philadelphians, with Rizzo in charge of the city budget, must face. The mayor is looking desperately for ways to erase this year's budget and balance

This is especially poignant since Philadlephia is the Bicentennial City itself, the cradle of American liberty, the birthsite of the Declaration of Independence. The colonists who authored that ringing statement were protesting the impingements of faraway King George on their personal pocketbooks. In those days a 5 per cent tax was enough to kick off a storm of colonial rage. Today we pay more than a third of our incomes to Washington.

Boston's Busing

BOSTON - A policeman warned me not to go into Roxbury, as he might warn me not to go into Brookline, and Roxbury was on the way, and it is free country, is it not? I drove into the Boston

It is actually not so bad for a slum. Harlem has more people, the South Bronx has more rats, and, for that matter, the park adjacent to the White House in Washington may cater to more stumbling burns. But Roxbury leads in tension at least, brought about by the endless school busing dispute, and particularly in recent weeks the sight of a white man's auto is enough to bring made strange noises. I nodded, scowled and turned up my radio. Suddenly two of the lads were on my hood, and the third was pouring Pabst on my windshield.

They replied with equal eloquence. And since my window was down, and my door now opened, I had no choice but to get out and continue the debate on what was for me, old Whitey and a stranger to these parts, decidedly alien turf.

I was more than apprehensive about the turn of events. After two years of busing boycotts and racial friction, the Boston dilemma has gone from bad to worse, with violence emerging ever more often as the settlement of arguments. In April there were 100 reported "racial incidents," according to the careful language of police statistics. Other fights and thumpings and rumbles are accomplished without recording. Being beat up in Boston is getting to be the habit.

Even as I stood there with the kids, a victim of this tension was in grave condition in a hospital following an almost unbelievable nightmare in Roxbury. The man had been driving through and was pulled out of his car by several people. He was hit, knocked down, and then kicked by a crowd. At length somebody began striking him in the face with a cinderblock, while a gathered audience cried for blood. Even if the man does live, his face will not quite survive.

It is not one-sided brutality here by any means. Blacks and whites have been equally guilty and irresponsible as regards the city's social humiliation. White simpletons have been known to stand on the edge of the black communities spoiling for quick skirmishes. Black children have formed into gangs whose intention is to seek revenge for real or imagined white violations. Both sides have organized "marshall" forces, which in essence - and I am not being rhetorical - are little more than private and self-serving militias.

All of this madness has presumably affected 2.5 cents apiece.

Benchwarmers Have Big Day

AP Sports Writer

There had been plenty of time on the bench for Cincinnati catcher Bill Plummer and Atlanta outfielder Tom Paciorek to think about having big days at the plate, winning baseball games for teams that seemingly had forgotten them.

Sunday, each made the best of his chances. Plummer, in the lineup only 19 times in the Reds' first 51 games this National League season, paced Cincinnati's 13-2 rout of St. Louis by driving in seven runs with a home run, a triple and a single.
