Teacher-Student Ties Unethical, Officials Say

By Kathy Tyrity Herald Staff Writer Last in a series

Some top Seminole County school administrators say if teachers are getting too personal with their students - in or out of the classroom - as described by some high school seniors, it is unethical, unprofessional and diminishing respect teachers should command.

They were commenting on the revelation that some high school teachers share personal matters with their students during regular classroom

"I'm talking respect," said schools Superintendent Robert Hughes. "These things are wrong because they're bringing unrelated personal situations into the classroom setting that are not appropriate for a particular class. They have lost sight of the code of ethics. A teacher-student relationship has to be based on respect. They (the teachers) are trying to get on the students' level without maintaining a professional level — the barrier is broken down. You might have the respect of friend-to-friend, but that's not what you're trying to achieve."

When told of comments made by students and teachers regarding so-called loose classroom teaching techniques in which there is an informal setting, School Board Chairman Joe Williams said, "That would cause you to wonder what is going on. I think the principals should take it seriously; and I can promise you we will do something about this. I thinks it's probably a nationwide problem."

Although he said it was difficult to draw conclusions based on news reports. Hughes said there should be a limit to teacher-student relationships. Some informality, he said, is a good thing, but such things as teachers telling students about "urinating into the ocean:" their conflicts with the administration; and about problem students are definitely out of line. And such things reported as a teacher who ackowledged he gets off the subject - "and sometimes it might take up the whole period" should get administrative attention. "If it continued, we would need to have administrative intervention," Hughes said.

Williams said his main concern is that valuable class time is being lost. He teaches at Seminole Community College and says public school See TEACHERS, page 6A

Verbal Barrage Directed At Gunter, Dennis

Manning Backers Spew Charges

By Jane Casselberry Herald Staff Writer

Supporters of Longwood Police Chief Greg Manning were allowed by Mayor Ed Myers to take verbal pot shots at will at City Commissioners Dave Gunter and Lynette Dennis during a rowdy commission a personal vendetta against meeting Monday night following Manning, fired questions at action on other business.

Myers, who said he backs Manning 150 percent, failed to use his gavel even when Land Planning Agency Chairman Bernard Linton interrogated Gunter about his background, including a question about involvement with prostitution.

After Linton leveled innuendos and charges about Gunter's past, City Commissioner Harvey Smerlison asked City Administrator Ron Waller to investigate the background of each of the commissioners including himself.

"If a single commissioner can request an investigation of an employee who doesn't come under her control, why can't one commissioner request the commission be investigated?" Smerilson asked.

Waller said after the meeting he didn't hear a second to the request to investigate all the commissioners. Mrs. Dennis, who has asked for an investigation of Manning's "unprofessional behavior" was asked to define the term by Smerilson, Smerilson and Myers both said they did not hear or see any unprofessional behavior on the part of the police chief at a Jan. 19 workshop where Mrs. Dennis said Manning "lost control" after a discussion with Gunter.

Linton, who accused Gunter of Gunter in the style of a prosecuting attorney about Gunter's employment as an Altamonte Springs Police Department captain and why he resigned.

"Did you ever apply for a job with the Longwood Police Department? Were you involved in any nefarious activity when you worked for Altamonte Springs? Were you ever involved with prostitution at the Why Not Lounge?" Linton queried.

Gunter said he resigned from the Altamonte Springs Police politics in Seminole County. As for other charges, Gunter said, "The Florida Department of Law Enforcement exonerated me of anything whatsoever."

Gunter said there had been 'bad blood" between him and a former Altamonte Springs police chief and that is the reason for chief when he (Gunter) applied to former Longwood Police Chief Douglas Keller for a job as part-time police officer. The letter was mentioned by Linton.

Brutal Rapist Escapes

By Deane Jordan and Susan Loden

An Orlando man escaped from a Lake County prison Monday, three years and two days after he raped and stabbed a grandmother on Valentines Day in Seminole County.

At large today is Keith Lambert, 34. He was discovered missing at 8 a.m. Monday at the Lake Correctional Institution in Minneola, north of Clermont. Prison guards and tracking dogs searched for Lambert and a car was reported stolen in the area. Whether the theft is linked to Lambert was not known early today. Lambert escaped by cutting through two chain-link fences surrounding the prison, officials said. He is described as 5-foot, 6-inches tall, 130 pounds, of medium build and ruddy comle has a black rose and skull tattoo

Lambert was sentenced Sept. 5, 1984 to 40 years for rape, 30 years for burglary with assault and battery, 30 years for arson and 15 years for attempted murder. Those sentences were to run concurrently. Under sentencing guidelines, Lambert was facing about 22 years in prison before becoming eligible for release.

He was convicted May 22, 1984, of breaking into the home of a 67-year-old widow on Valentines Day that year and raping her. He also stabbed her, ransacked her home, stole heirloom jewelry, then set the house aftre and left the woman bound and bleeding on the floor.

After he fled, the wounded woman freed her tied hands - she testified she had no idea how she managed that - then tried to put the fire out. Failing that, she went to a neighbor's for help.

'The Tree Will Be Preserved'

Developer To Reroute Road

By Genie Lindberg Herald Staff Writer

Lake Mary commissioners were faced with a standing-room-only crowd at their work session last night when Cardinal Oaks II residents turned up to question whether the 250-year-old oak tree in their neighborhood could be saved and if the storm water pump system in Lake Mary Woods II, which is adjacent to their development, can work as well as its developer claims.

The Lake Mary Woods development will come up for final approval at Lake Mary's regular commission meeting beginning at 7:30 p.m. Thursday.

Monday citizens waited for two and a half hours, from 7:30 p.m. until 10 p.m., before the commission inched its way down their long agenda and addressed the subject of the Lake Mary Woods development.

Don McIntosh, owner of Mcintosh &

Associates, the engineer and surveyor who represents Terry Hagen, owner of Lake Mary Woods, assured the city hall audience that the proposed extension of Webster Street would be postponed and rerouted and "the tree will be preserved." MeIntosh said the decision to change the planned extension came as a result of the Cardinal Oaks residents saying how much the tree meant to them. They have agreed to participate in trimming the tree when necessary and in helping to nourish and care for it, he said.

Webster Street was supposed to be extended five or six hundred feet to Sprucewood Road which would have taken it directly behind some of the Cardinal Oaks backyards and would have caused the tree to be removed.

Tom Mahoney, a Cardinal Oaks resident, said "I went out of my way at the last meeting to put pressure on because we didn't have a legal foot to stand on; the developer could have gone ahead and done it (extend Webster St.) but the issue of 'save the tree' was involved and they went along with it. We're very pleased and we'll all sleep well tonight."

He said that citizens turning out made the difference. "I don't know if that's true anywhere else, but it sure is true in Lake Mary."

Convincing the Cardinal Oaks residents that the storm water pump system proposed for Lake Mary Woods Il would work was a tougher job for the developer and his consultants. Residents repeatedly asked "What if it doesn't work? Who will be accountable?" and they reminded the commission to consider the pump system carefully and "be sure it's going to happen like it's supposed to happen."

Board Votes To Block 'Erotic Emporium'

By Kathy Tyrity Herald Staff Writer

The Seminole County Board of Adjustment withstood threats of a lawsuit Monday night to deny by a 4-1 vote a special exception for an adult video and paraphernalia store called "Erotic Emporium" proposed for 1520 U.S. Highway 17-92 near Longwood.

They told the petitioner, Nomen Deferre Limited, Inc. and its attorney Neal McShane of Orlando, such an establishment complete with a proposed nude dancer would be inconsistent with the development of the area and a detriment to the

The applicant has 15 days to appeal the board's decision to the Seminole County Commission.

The denial came after two hours of objections from more than 100 residents who packed the hearing room; fire marshalls closed the doors at 6:10 p.m. because the room was overcrowded. No one except the petitioner spoke in favor of the request. While the mood was definitely against the emporium, board member Alan Robinson voted in favor of it because he said not to would be "buying into a lawsuit, and some court will dictate where this will occur."

There were plenty of hoots and snarls from the audience when someone said something favorable or insinuated threats of a lawsuit. And there was plenty of dealening applause when one of the ministers or law officers spoke against the emportum. Lake Mary Police Chief Charles Lauderdale received thunderous applause after his statement: "I have been a law officer for 20 years and fought crime in three states and nine foreign countries. If there is to be further argument over whether the emporium exists, I, for one, would rather see that battle fought in the courts than in the streets."

The petitioner stated his client had the Constitutional right to open such a store if it met all the qualifications. "The law permits this; this location meets the law. (To deny it) presents some very severe Constitutional problems," McShane said.

He said his client had been looking for two and a half years for a location in Seminole County that met all the requirements. He also said Seminole County has the strictest ordinance

Drug War Funding Wrong Place For Federal Cuts, Chiles Says

Senator Vows Congress Will Restore Programs

By Kathy Tyrity Herald Staff Writer

Last fall, all-out war was declared against illegal drugs by the nation's leaders, but just two-and-a-half months later the war seems to be losing its ammunition.

In October, Congress passed a $1.7 billion anti-drug bill. With fanfare the President endorsed it. A "major victory" in the war on drugs, he proclaimed.

At the time, some wondered if pre-election politics was at work. Sen. Lawton Chiles said for those who had long been frustrated in efforts to strengthen drug laws and enforcement, "It was not the motivation but the results that counted. We welcomed the politics of the moment.

"But now, to my great dismay, the administration's 1988 budget proposal seeks to replace the big guns aimed at the drug problem with capshooters," Chiles million in cuts for drug law enforcement and abuse, prevention, education and treatment programs, Chiles said. "In all, it would reduce the federal drug fight budget by 23 percent."

Under the proposed cuts, Florida would drop $39 million in drug-fighting assistance next year. Chiles sald, including $7.5 million in law enforcement grants, $3.5 million drug prevention and treatment

Shot Fired At Couple, Suspect Jailed

A 39-year-old Sanford man who allegedly fired a single shot from a .22 caliber pistol at Johnny P. Hall, 34, and Daiscy Bell White, 34, both of 2480 Chuck St., Sanford, outside their home at about 4:55 p.m. Sunday has been nabbed by Seminole County sheriff's, grants. $3.1 million in drug education grants, and about $25 million reduction in drug interdiction efforts by the U.S. Customs Service.

Last fall, the President promised a government-backed war on drugs that would reach from shore to shore and into the living rooms of every American, Chiles said. "I don't doubt his good intentions, but an investment must be made.

"The administration speaks of drug education and prevention that begins at home and in the community, as well it should. Unfortunately, in the real world we have youngsters with parents who don't recognize the signs of drug use, some even with negative parental influence. What about those without parents? They should not be penalized so early in life for something out of their control. The truth is that there is an illicit drug society out there that preys on our young.

As chairman of the Senate Budget Committee. Chiles said he is acutely aware that the federal deficit requires cutbacks. "But this is the wrong place to do it. We have made a strong national defense a top priority to provide us peace of mind and freedom secured. We must invest in the war on drugs for the same goals.

Recently, two young Floridians told him in a Senate hearing of their experience with drugs at school and how federally supported drug programs help them steer a clean

Vegetables May Cut Colon Cancer Risk

CHICAGO (UPI) - A study of eating habits of colon cancer patients and those without the disease indicates a lifelong diet rich in fats increased the chance of developing intestinal cancer and an emphasis on vegetables reduced the risk.

in reporting the findings Monday. Theresa Young, associate professor of preventative medicine at the University of Wisconsin at Madison, said a biological explanation for the diet-cancer association is not known. "This is just another small piece in the puzzle." Young sald at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. "And for colon cancer, it really is a puzzle.

She said the dietary effects appear independent of related health risk factors such as obesity or blood pressure.

"As an objective scientist. I don't want to overplay the significance of these results." Young said. "But I guess there's no harm in telling people to eat your vegetables."

Scientists know very little about the causes of colon cancer, which strikes 98,000 people in the United States every year and kills 51,800, according American Cancer Society estimates. Genetics appears to play a role in its development. and earlier studies have suggested diet might also be a factor. Studies of Japanese dietary habits, for example, have shown that rural Japanese who eat a low-fat, high-fiber diet have a low incidence of colorectal cancer. But when they move to big cities or move to the United States, their diet changes and risk of colon cancer goes up. Young and her colleagues attempted to investigate the possible dietary link by determining the lifetime eating habits of 366 colon cancer patients and 663 people who did not have the disease.

Winter storms and bitter cold blamed for 12 deaths chilled the eastern half of the nation today, closing schools, knocking out power and laying deadly sheets of ice across roads in Kentucky, the Virginias and the Carolinas.

The storm spread sleet and snow in the Appalachians, the Carolinas and the Virginias. with up to 10 inches of snow in Floyd County and Lynchburg. Va., 9 inches in Roanoke, Va. Eight inches of ice and sleet fell in Person and Granville counties of North Carolina, the National Weather Service said.

"We're advising motorists not to travel unless it's an emergency," said Nancy Baker of the North Carolina highway patrol. "The roads are just extremely hazardous. The whole state is in pretty bad

However, the weather service advised by mid-morning that the storm system was dwindling down to flurries and rain as it headed off the coast,

"The worst is likely over for residents in the Carolinas and the Virginias as the storm which brought freezing rain, sleet and heavy snow to the region is beginning to move out to sea," weather service spokesman Hugh Crowther

Winter storm warnings remained in effect for the eastern shores of Virginia, where an additional 4 inches of sleet and snow were expected. Rain and gale-force winds continued over the coastal regions of Virginia and North Carolina. To the west, light snow, freezing drizzle and sleet glazed parts of Texas.

Cold temperatures that packed shelters in the Northeast also continued today with readings as low as 13 degrees below zero in Watertown and Glens Falls,

The cold and storms have been blamed for at least 12 deaths since Sunday — four in North Carolina, two in New York and one each in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New Jersey, Kentucky, Missouri and Louisiana.

In the Virginias and Kentucky, road crews worked into the night to clear ice and snow that triggered hundreds of accidents Monday, including 200 in West Virginia's Kanawha County.

"All the trucks are out and we're still salting the roads but everything's still slick," sald Harry Silverman, street commissioner in Charleston, W.Va. "Everything seems to be freezing back over." Thousands of students in more than two dozen county school districts across Kentucky received a second straight holiday today and many other districts, colleges and universities opened late. Morehead State University in Morehead, Ky., also canceled classes.

Ice on transmission lines caused an outage that left 20,000 people without electricity Monday night in Virginia Beach, Va., and officials said they did not expect service to be restored until today.

The airport in Huntington. W.Va., was closed Monday night, and flight delays were reported Monday in Roanoke, Va., Charleston, W.Va., and Louisville, Ky.

Ice paralyzed much of Kenand universities and sending many workers home early.

Sanford Lawyer Suspended For Neglecting Case

A Sanford attorney has been suspended from practicing law 10 days by the Florida Supreme Court starting March 3.

'After reinstatement, James Tr Golden will be on probation for one year, with his law practice subject to review by the Florida Bar, according to David G. McGunegle of the Florida Bar. Golden declined to comment.

Golden, according to the Bar, was found guilty of violating attorney disciplinary rules relating to neglecting a legal matter, falling to seek the lawful objective of his client and failing to carry out a contract of employment.

The Bar said Golden was hired in November 1984 by a James White to probate his deceased brother's estate. His brother. George White, who died without leaving a will, had lived in Broward County but owned property in Seminole County. White signed a contract with Golden and paid a $750 retainer fee plus cost. When White attempted to contact Golden several times and Golden told him at one point that pleadings in the case had been filed when, in fact, there was no evidence Golden did any work on the case. Golden did not refund the fees he collected until the matter reached the Bar's grievance

A court-appointed referee had recommended, and the Bar concurred, that Golden be suspended for 30 days and receive a public reprimand. However, the Supreme Court reduced the discipline, citing the 10-day suspension as "more appropriate" and the public reprimand "re-

Golden is required to pay disciplinary costs of $2,032.54.

The suspension order is not final until time expires to file a rehearing motion and, if filed, determined. The filing of such a motion does not alter the effective date of the suspension.

Golden, born in 1947, was admitted to the Bar in 1975.

Understanding The ABM Accord

An esoteric semantic quarrel, of the sort that occurs only inside the Washington beltway, has the White House, the State Department, the Pentagon and a number of key lawmakers tied up in knots. Common sense would allow thoughtful Americans to turn a deaf ear to this arcane debate, were it not for the fact that its outcome will have a strong bearing on the nation's security for years to come.

At issue is the 1972 Antiballistic Missile Treaty, which severely restricts testing and deployment of strategic defenses against nuclear attack. Supporters of the ABM pact hall it as the crown jewel of the superpower arms-control process. Skeptics view it as an outmoded impediment to President Reagan's Strategic Defense initiative, which seeks to build a space-based missile shield.

The ponderous deliberations gripping Washington are not, however, over the merits and liabilities of the treaty, but rather over its meaning. Not only months but now years of lawyerly probing have been devoted to the question of what kind of testing of ABM systems is permissible and what is prohibited. Opposing factions within the Reagan administration interpret the agreement in starkly different ways.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and other ardent advocates of SDI argue, with considerable support from the documents signed by Richard Nixon and Leonid Brezhnev, that testing of exotic technologies such as lasers, particle beams, and kineticenergy weapons is allowed. The issue is critical because continued development of SDI rests squarely on such emerging techniques. Agreed Statement D to the treaty does, in fact, permit unrestricted testing of defensive systems "based on other physical principles" than those existing in 1972.

Nonetheless, SDI's opponents, staking their case largely on statements by the pact's negotiators and more-recent comments by Soviet and American delegates at the Geneva arms talks, contend that exotic testing is forbidden. For its part, Moscow sides completely with the American opponents of Mr. Reagan's missile-defense plan.

Consequently, the Pentagon is being forced to jump through legal hoops to prove to SDI's domestic critics that the American research program is being conducted in full compliance with the ABM accord. As the SDI managers try to advance their testing program, the burden is on them to prove that each new experiment is allowed by the 1972

What makes this situation so ludicrous is that the Kremlin already is flagrantly violating the ABM agreement. At Krasnoyarsk in central Siberia, Moscow is constructing a multibillion-ruble radar complex capable of tracking incoming warheads for missiledefense purposes. Moreover, virtually every American critic of the president's SDI program acknowledges the Soviet violation. Yet, they are willing to overlook the Russian infringement while adamantly challenging the American right to conduct tests that are arguably allowable. Lost in all of this absurdity is the much more important question of whether the ABM restraints reduce or enhance the risk of nuclear war. A growing number of decision-makers — chief among them is Ronald Reagan — question the logic on which the treaty is premised. It holds that building defenses will encourage an enemy attack, while remaining totally vulnerable is the only way to assure the nation's security. History does not buttress this notion. Indeed, the central fallacy of the treaty is recognized by the document itself, because it allows each side to build an ABM system to defend its capital. Only Moscow has chosen to exercise this option.

The inner-beltway arguments are particularly academic when one considers that to deploy space-based missile defenses, the United States must at some point exercise its right to void the ABM pact upon six-months notice to the Kremlin. The serious question, then, is not whether laser testing is allowable, but rather how soon the United States should declare that the ABM accord has outlived its usefulness.

Tearful Solution For The Lachrymose Tube

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Television news programs are reported to have fallen on relatively hard times. If this be true, you don't have to be a station manager to figure out one of the reasons why. It's because there aren't enough relatives of disaster victims who can cry on camera.

I can remember a time when much of the content of the evening news depended on where the camera crews were deployed that day.

If a crew was assigned, say, to film a luncheon whose speaker's remarks were less than newsworthy, several reels would be shown anyway

The reason was that the news producers didn't want to waste the film the crew had taken. And that was understandable, considering what commercials sold for at that time and how hard it was to sell them.

If another speaker at a luncheon down the street said something certain to sel the airwaves quivering, these remarks might be quoted but without film clips.

Then came college sporting events. Fans could be assured of getting on camera if they stripped to the waist in cold weather, painted themselves with their colors, wore funny faces or otherwise engaged in antic behavior.

"Say, I saw your son on television the other afternoon," a friend or neighbor might comment, confirming what the parents themselves had seen. "He was holding up a 'send more money'sign."

Whereupon the parents would raise the student's allowance.

Nowadays, camera crews more likely are assigned to film anniversary observances of assorted disasters. No wonder young viewers

We oldsters tune in mainly to see if relatives or other survivors of an disaster that happened a few years ago still are distraught enough to shed a few tears while being interviewed by a television reporter.

If I were a college student, stripped to waist. daubed with paint of the homeschool's colors or otherwise trying to get my allowance increased. I would learn to weep on camera.

It doesn't matter whether the home team has won the game or is far ahead. Sobbing over the score is certain to get you more air time than flinging up your arms and waving at the cameraman ala Winston Churchill or holding an index finger aloft while lip-synching the words

"We're No. 1." A student who is able to shed a few tears over a victorious team is a cinch to have his allowance raised, whether or not he asks for more money. The article I read quotes television executives to the effect that audiences for news shows are older and smaller than once was the case. They said younger women especially tend not to watch the news. Weil. I've never seen a coed stripped to the waist at televised outdoor games, no matter what the weather, but I'm perfectly willing to believe there are such things.

A female student bared halfway down probably is an even better bet than her male counterparts to have her allowance increased. I might even send her a few bucks myself.

A Case Of Political Espionage

WASHINGTON (NEA) - The National Right to Work Committee, a strident right-wing organization, appears to have devised a unique method of undermining, if not destroying, the integrity of the nation's political process.

Here's how it works: A special interest group uses private detectives to infiltrate and spy upon the campaign organization of a presidential candidate it opposes, ostensibly to gather evidence of violations of federal law.

The NRWC did exactly that in 1984 when it hired investigators to probe the campaign of Democratic presidential nominee Walter Mon-

The NRWC, whose hallmark is shrill anti-union rhetoric, says the espionage was necessary to advance its "nationwide investigation into force-dues politicking by corrupt union bosses."

The investigators, it says, traveled for seven months to "document more than 25 instances in which power-hungry union officials... violated federal election laws in an effort to plump Big Labor marlonette Mondale into the Oval Office."

Sworn affidavita document the activities of the NRWC investigators who infiltrated Mondale campaign organizations from Alabama to California, posing as volunteers who usually were assigned to work in telephone banks calling prospective voters.

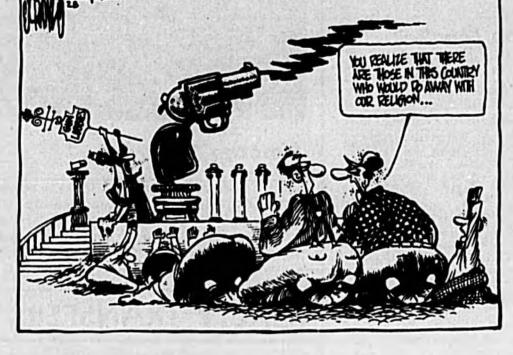

In several instances, those telephone banks allegedly were funded or operated by state or local affiliates of the National Education Association. Now, the NEA is seeking to have the NRWC punished for

In a formal complaint filed with the Federal Election Commission, the NEA does not deal directly with the NRWC's ethical lapses but alleges that the spying violated federal law on technical grounds.

The law prohibits corporations from making any contributions or expenditures in connection with elections to federal office. Because the NRWC is incorporated, it must abide by that restriction.

But the NRWC paid for the private detectives who, in turn, provided their services to the Mondale campaign, the NEA complaint notes.

In response, the NRWC insists that it was engaged only in "vigor-. ous citizen enforcement efforts... to assist the FEC".

'Tip' Led To Arrest

MIAMI (NEA) — Officially, Drug Enforcement Administration of ficials say a "tip" led to the recent south Florida money launderers arrest of drug kingpin Carlos Lehder Rivas in Colombia and his subsequent extradition to the United States, where he was already under indictment. But sources within the lawenforcement community here say the arrest arose from a deal between the DEA, the Colombian government and Colombian drug lords tired of Lehder's outrageous public

According to drug-enforcement officials, cocaine traffic into this country is controlled by a ruthless, loosely organized crime organization known as the "Medellin Cartel," named after the Colombian city where the drug trade is head-

The cartel is actually a coalition of some 20 different Colombian drug rings. Each ring is, in a very real sense, a "family," tied together by blood relationships.

It is widely believed that four men currently run the cartel: Pablo Escobar Gaviria, who controls many of the individual cocaine families and who is called "the single richest criminal in the world" by drugenforcement officials: Jorge Ochoa Vasquez, current head of Colombia's No. 1 cocaine family: Jose Rodriguez Gacha, a Mexican who controls Medellin cocaine flowing to the U.S. West Coast; and, finally,

The cartel is actually a fairly recent phenomenon, the final product of a series of bloody drug wars between street hoodlums in the U.S. drug officials were not even aware of the extent of its activities netted two Medellin currency traffickers. Between them, they had pushed more than $200 million through Miami banks in less than a year. This gave investigators the first real inkling of the cartel's size.

According to law enforcement sources, Lehder's specialty was shipment of refined cocaine into the United States through Florida and other Southeastern states. He made hundreds of millions of dollars over the last decade transporting cocaine via a series of small airstrips he established in the Bahamas.

Of all the cartel leaders, Lehder was the most flamboyant and

He had come to the United States as a young man, became a petty criminal in New York and later in Miami. He spent two years in a Florida jail and came away from that experience with a pronounced hatred of the United States.

He freely gave interviews in Colombia. He often said he viewed cocaine as Latin America's nuclear weapon aimed at the United States and saw dumping tons of the drug on America's streets as a semipolitical act. Lately he had gone so far as forming his own political party. Its avowed aim was taking over the Colombian government.

Reportedly Lehder has been behind many of the most outrageous acts in the war between cocaine traffickers and the Colombian government. These acts have included an attack on the Colombian Supreme Court building that left the country's chief justice and three associate justices dead,

Electorate Will Shun Labor Left

LONDON - Most political commentators in this country say that the Conservative Party will be returned to power when the British people go to the polls this year.

Neil Kinnock, the leader of the Labor Party, has not done a good job of convincing the British electorate that Labor can be trusted to manage the British economy or national defense. The public is less enthusiastic these days about Prime Minister Thatcher, but it also fears Labor policies, especially Labor's defense policies. The Labor Party's anti-nuclear stance would undermine the NATO alliance and leave Britain dangerously exposed.

Mr. Kinnock is aware of this and endeavors to appear moderate. However, the voters know that an influential segment of the Labor Party is emotionally committed to untlateral disarmament and regards the United States as the world's chief villain. Middle-of-the-road Britains are concerned that a post-Kinnock Labor Party would be in the hands of the real extremists.

the so-called Looney Left. This' distrust comes from the Labor Party's profound interna changes in recent years. Pro-defense Labor types have been squeezed out of the party. Those opposing defense and private property, Marxists and neo-Marxists, are playing larger roles. They would like to turn Britain into something resembling an Eastern Bloc country, and adopt policies favored by the Soviet Union.

Visitors to "tourist" Britain often don't see this threat. The political and Ideological crisis is brewing in inner city areas of London, Liverpool, and othe major municipalities. A number of hardline leftists are likely to be sent to Parliament from these areas in the next election. Local government councils often are in the hands of radicals who campaign against the police. In several of these areas. local authorities have distributed cards to school children, urging them not to cooperate with the Radical Unions are also encouraging violence. The London Times has been the target of union violence on a massive scale in the past year, ever since it adopted the new technology and moved into new quarters. Hundreds of policemen have been injured in the

Our 50-Year Moscow Embassy Haggle

By Jack Anderson And Joseph Spear

WASHINGTON - Anyone who thinks the flimflam of U.S. negotiators by the Iranians was an unprecedented embarrassment can take some small comfort in a State Department report that chronicles more than 50 years of failure by U.S. negotiators on the relatively simple matter of getting a proper embassy building in Moscow.

The Foggy Bottom report, prepared for internal reference and the enlightenment of select members of Congress, was obtained by our associate Lucette Lagnado. Its sardonic title is "Inching Toward a New Embassy in Moscow: An Historical Perspective of Soviet-American Negotiations."

Congress is already aware, of course, that the new Soviet embassy in Washington is almost ready to move into, while the new U.S. embassy in Moscow is a hollow shell, six years behind schedule with cost overruns of more than $100 million so far.

The chairman of the new suband international communications, of war in 1939.

Sen. Edward Zorinsky. D-Neb., will review the Moscow embassy situation as part of a broad investigation of U.S. diplomatic security problems around the world.

But few members of Congress are probably aware how far back the dickering goes. Here are highlights from the State Department historians' stroll along the street of broken dreams:

- In 1934, things got off to a grandiose start. Josef Stalin promised the first U.S. ambassador to the Soviet Union, William C. Bullitt, a new embassy site in the Lenin Hills overlooking the Moscow River. The patrician Bullitt, a former newspaper reporter, was more than equal to the occasion; he "envisioned a replica of Jefferson's Monticello" on a hill overlooking

But Jefferson hadn't had Uncle Joe to deal with. "For the next five years, we negotiated," the report laments. Use of American and other foreign workmen? Nyet. Duty-free import of construction material? Nyet. Quality assurances on the building material? Is to laugh. The - This left the Americans in a crumbling, pre-revolutionary building directly across from the Kremlin with a grand view into Red Square. It became the gathering-place of choice for Western embassy staffs to watch the elaborate May Day and Nov.7 parades. But the location irritated Stalin, who "frequently complained that he woke up mornings seeing the British Union Jack and the American Stars and Stripes outside his windows." He ordered both embassies moved, and in 1953 the Americans occupied a new. Soviet-built office building far away from the Kremlin. The British, incidentally, managed to stay put in their elegant old embassy, on the river embankment that is a favorite for American television correspondents' stand-up reports with the Kremlin in the background.

- The U.S. embassy quickly outgrew its new chancery, which was crumbling from Day One. In Washington, the Soviets were equally cramped in the old ezarist embassy five blocks from the White House. Negotiations began in 1963 ment - and only six years later concrete.

were successfully concluded.

To the dismay of some U.S. security experts, the Soviets got a hilltop overlooking downtown Washington: the Americans got a spot behind the existing embassy but "not, as legend has it, in a swamp," the report notes.

- "Reaching agreement on conditions of construction was like building a house of cards during a windstorm," the report adds. "The haggling over conditions grew so acrimonious that both sides ... considered giving up the negotia-

Height was a major sticking point. Limited to 12 stories by Washington zoning restrictions, the Soviets retaliated. They got their revenge by building a "Stalinist Gothic" apartment building," which overshadows the American embassy.

- Most important, the U.S. negotiators caved in to the Kremlin's insistence that Soviet construction crews build the Moscow embassy. Not surprisingly, an electronic committee on terrorism, narcotics negotiations were called on account on an "exchange-of-sites" agree- revealed bugs implanted in the WASHINGTON (UPI) - Israel's role in the Iran arms-Contra aid controversy will not be a point of discussion this week when President Reagan meets with Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, the administration says.

With Shamir arriving today for his first state visit to Washington since the Iran-Contra scandal erupted three months ago, administration officials sought to play down the Israeli connection despite persistent reports involving

"There are a lot of other things of bilateral nature to discuss," one U.S. official said Monday in describing the agenda for Shamir's scheduled meetings with Secretary of State George Shultz today and Reagan Wednesday.

Reagan has kept his distance from news reporters this year to avoid questions about his worst political crisis, and Shamir followed suit in New York Monday, refusing to answer questions about his country's role in the controversy.

Shamir: Soviet Policy Unchanged

NEW YORK (UPI) - Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, avoiding comment on the Iran arms affair during the first day of his nine-day U.S. visit, said the recent release of Soviet political prisoners fell short of "a real change in policy.

Shamir arrived in New York Monday, a day before he was to fly to Washington for his first visit to the capital since the secret U.S. arms sales to Iran and the diversion of profits to Nicaraguan rebels were disclosed in November.

Shamir, who took office as prime minister a month before the Iran arms-Contra aid scandal was revealed, was to meet with Secretary of State George Shultz today and with President Reagan Wednesday.

The Israeli government has rejected U.S. claims it initiated the American weapons sales to Iran and that it proposed funneling money from the sales to the Nicaraguan rebels, called Contras. Israel has insisted it acted at the United States' request as a go-between in dealings with Iran.

Claims Focus Of Medicare Suit

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Three congressmen and several health care groups suing the federal government contend Americans are dying nationwide because too many Medicare claims for home health care are being denied.

Reps. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., Harley Staggers, D-W.Va., and Doug Walgren. D.Pa., say restrictive and arbitrary government rules regarding Medicare coverage are preventing homebound recipients - some of whom are confined to wheelchairs - from receiving necessary nursing and other care.

Attorneys said the lawsuit, to be filed today in U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia, claims the intent of Congress is being countermanded.

Home health care involves many aspects of nursing and rehabilitation, and the Medicare rules covering it depend on the mobility of the recipient, how many hours of care the recipient gets each week and a definition of "intermittent" care - which is what Medicare is supposed

City Officials Call For Aid

WASHINGTON (UPI) - City and small town officials think the federal government's top housing priorities should be financial help for renters and rehabilitation of single and multi-family dwellings, the National League of Cities said today.

In a report titled "A Time to Build Up," the league identified concerns from a survey of 444 cities and towns that was timed to coincide with the start of Senate subcommittee hearings on federal housing assistance.

"For many Americans, finding shelter has become more urgent, more difficult, more costly and more frustrating. Mayor Mike Roark of Charleston, W.Va., said in remarks accompanying the survey. "These needs are not isolated. They exist in all parts of the nation, in communities large and small.",

ABA Rejects Tobacco Ad Ban

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) - A ban on tobacco advertising could violate the constitutional guarantee of freedom of the press, says the American Bar Association in refusing to join the nation's doctors in supporting such a ban.

The ABA's governing body, the House of Delegates, voted down the measure proposed Monday by members of the New York state bar. It would have thrown the association's weight behind the call for a tobacco ad ban.

Senate Panel Focuses On Iran-Contra Affair

CIA Director Confirmation Hearings Open

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Robert Gates, nominated by President Reagan to head the CIA, promised lawmakers today to provide untarnished intelligence to the president and to inform Congress about covert operations.

In a statement prepared for his confirmation hearing. Gates told the Senate Intelligence Committee he intended to provide intelligence information to the administration that is "the good and the bad," and "professional and objective."

"I can assure you that I will hesitate neither to present unwelcome news nor say what I think to policymakers or to Congress." Gates said. "Nor will I hesitate to make whatever personnel or organizational changes are needed to ensure both high quality intelligence and adherence to the rules."

Gates was nominated by President Reagan to replace William Casey, a pivotal figure in the Iran arms-Contra aid scandal, who resigned after undergoing surgery for a brain tumor.

Gates's own role in the worst scandal of the Reagan presidency was expected to be the No. 1 subject at the hearing.

But Gates's 12-page opening statement did not mention the secret sales of U.S. arms to Iran or the possible diversion of profits to the Nicaraguan Con-

However, Gates said congressional oversight is now "fully accepted within the American intelligence community."

"It is a record of reliance on private individuals, foreign nationals, and naive amateurs in the making of policy and a failure to seek the expertise available within our own government." Boren said.

Begun Still In Prison As Son Announces Hunger Strike

MOSCOW (UPI) - The son of imprisoned Hebrew teacher Yosif Begun, saying he feared his father would not be freed. announced today he would go on a hunger strike until the dissident returned home.

The dissident's wife, Inna, who Monday expressed fears the government and the KGB secret police had not coordinated their actions in the case, telephoned officials to find out if her husband would be freed.

"I wait." she said. "There is nothing left to do but continue to call the MVD" — the Ministry of Internal Affairs, which oversees the penal system.

After a week of protest for the release of the Hebrew teacher, sentenced in 1983 to 12 years in prison and exile for anti-Soviet agitation. Soviet Central Committee member Georgy Arbatov told CBS News Sunday that Begun "is now free."

But the family said today that Begun apparently was still at Chistopol prison, about 500 miles cast of Moscow.

Militiamen, Guerrillas Fight

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) - Shilte Amal militiamen and Palestinian guerrillas fought with machine guns and grenades today around a beleaguered Beirut refugee camp where thousands of people face starvation, security sources sald.

However, Amal leaders approved the partial lifting of their siege of the Palestinian refugee camp at Rashidiych. about 46 miles south of Beirut near the port of Tyre, a Palestinian source said.

Iranian mediators persuaded Amal to allow Palestinians to leave the devastated camp for several hours a day to buy food and seek medical care, the source said.

The mediators also supervised the dispatch of more relief aid for Rashidiyeh's estimated 18,000 inhabitants Sunday despite Amal's military blockade, the source said. The camp has been under siege for four months.

Amal gunmen and Palestinian guerrillas fought sporadically with machine guns and grenades early today around the capital's besieged Burj Al Barajneh refugee camp. There were no immediate reports of casualties.

Irish Go To Polls Today

DUBLIN, Ireland (UPI) - Irish voters were urged to give a clear verdict today in selecting a new government to fight Ireland's deepest economic crisis since independence from Britain in 1922, but analysts predicted a cliff-hanger.

Leaders of the parties contesting today's general election appealed for a heavy voter turnout in a contest that analysts and pollsters said was not likely to give any party a majority in parliament.

A 70 percent turnout of the nation's 2.4 million voters was predicted. Voters were electing 166 deputies to parliament, known as the Dail, from among 448 candidates in 41 multi-seat constituencies.

Prime Minister Garret FitzGerald's Fine Gael party looked for a governing coalition with new partners, the Redgling Progressive Democrats.

Charles Haughey, leader of Fianna Fail, the country's largest party, sought an overall majority to give him an unchallenged run at the premiership.

Vote counting begins Wednesday with final results emerging by late Thursday, along with possible interparty bargaining if the result is as close as expected.

Sakharov Applauds Gorbachev Speech

By Jack Redden

MOSCOW (UPI) - In an event reflecting the dizzying social change in the Soviet Union, dissident physicist Andrei Sakharov stood in an ornate Kremlin hall and applauded the words of Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, two months after leaving exile in the closed city of Gorky.

While Gorbachev's speech Monday was the official highlight of a peace conference arranged by the Kremlin. Sakharov, 65, sitting 24 rows away, was the Soviet leader's prime exhibit for the new society he says he is building.

For 15 minutes before the speeches began, delegates from 80 countries streamed to Sakharov's chair, seeking autographs and a few words with the man who has fought official repression for two decades.

American scientist Frank von Hippel stood a few feet from Gorbachev in the hall that normally is home to the Supreme Soviet and simultaneously praised Gorbachev's reforms and Sakharov's call for greater liberalization.

"Sakharov underlined the importance of openness for international relations," von Hippel said. "We consider the process of democratization taking place in the Soviet Union very important.

Gorbachev released Sakharov Dec. 23 from exile in Gorky, an industrial city 250 miles east of Moscow. Sakharov. known as the father of the Soviet hydrogen bomb, was jailed in 1970 when Leonid Brezhnev's regime would not tolerate his open dissent.

"You have come to the Soviet Union at a time when transformations which are revolutionary in their essence have unfolded in this country." Gorbachev told the foreign

The audience, boasting celebrities ranging from Sakharov to U.S. author Norman Mailer, endorsed that view with applause.

At a time when the U.S. administration appears in disarray over the Iran arms-Contra aid scandal, the Soviet government has begun to appear creative and dynamic. The nation's formerly drab newspapers daily reveal shortcomings that were concealed for decades, some political prisoners have been released and efforts are under way to give meaning to the Soviet Union's traditional rubber-stamp elections. "I've got great admiration for what Mr. Gorbachev is trying to do and I'm sure something really important has been set in motion here." British author Graham Greene said earlier in the conference. American author Gore Vidal joined in the praise, saying, "The only interesting political moves in the world right now are being made by Gorbachev.

"I admit I came to the forum with a certain degree of skepticism." Greene said. but his doubts seemed to fade when he saw Sakharov in the audience.

Hezbollah Denies Holding Waite

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — The pro-Iranian movement Hezbollah denied an accusation by Druze militia chief Walid Jumblatt that it was holding hostage negotiator Terry Waite or other Westerners captive in

The denial by Hezbollah, Arabic for Party of God, came two days after Jumblatt called on the Moslem fundamentalist group to release Walte, missing since he left took leave of his Druze bodyguards four weeks ago to meet the kidnappers of two Americans.

"We strongly condemn the accusations by Mr. Jumblatt concerning our involvement in the abduction of the so-called Terry Waite," Hezbollah said in a statement. "We would like to believe that this was an unintentional error made to satisfy the need of the Western media, which is anxlously after anything new concerning the hostages in Lebanon," the party said. "We appreciate Mr. Jumblatt's discomfort and displeasure about Waite's disappearance." it sald. "He fully realizes that we do not know any more than he does about the kidnappers said to be negotiating with the Angli-

Jumblatt, who heads the powerful Druze Moslem Progressive Socialist Party militia, indicated Hezbollah was holding Waite after he met last weekend with British Ambassador John Grey.

Militia sources have said Watte was taken prisoner when a deal for the release of at least one American hostage collapsed.

The Hezbollah denial followed talks in London between Lebanese President Amin Gemayel and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher in which Gemayel said he had no new information about the whereabouts of Waite.

...Teachers

teachers "should have items to cover throughout the day. A lot of preparation needs to go on before class. And it's kind of strange that a teacher would have that much time for (personal) discussion if they have done the preparation.

"It's a problem if teachers are delving into items out of their realm - such as an English feacher discussing kidney infection," Williams said.

on the positive side, Williams said, Lake Mary High School should be commended "for getting right on it and making corrections." In a previous story in this series. LMHS Principal Don Reynolds said he disapproves of too informal an atmosphere in the classroom and vowed to hold work sessions with teachers to clear up what is appropriate and inappropriate teaching tech-

Hughes said there are two things incumbent upon teachers to do: "They must conform to the code of ethics, and their focus must have to do with effectively thicking the subject matter in high school level in the appropriate atmosphere. There's a fine line between relating and identifying with students and removing the professional barrier to get on a personal level with the "Younger teachers are most vulnerable to .making mistakes," he added. "While nothing here really shocks me, I think there's an undefinable barrier here we are trying to maintain. If the same instances keep recurring and get reported to the principals, we (the administrators) will have to deal with it."

He was sure the eight to 10 examples given by students which showed a decline of professional "distance" between teachers and students were isolated cases and not to be considered the majority. "Our record has been that Seminole County has enjoyed strong respect and reputation with parents in the professionalism of our educators in comparison to other large counties. We have had very few problems dealing with unprofessional, unethical conduct that led to involvement of the Professional Practices Board," he said.

The teacher who confirmed students' reports that she announced to the class her urine was "so cloudy" she thought she must be pregnant. according to Hughes, was breaking the barrier between professional relationship and student relationship spelled out by the Code of Ethics. "She could have, instead, come into the class and announced she had some 'happy news' to share with the class. The problem has to do with the manner in which the information was shared."

As far as students developing friendships with teachers. Hughes said that may not be all bad. "Some very healthy friendships grow out of the teaching experience," Hughes noted.

"In a student-teacher relationship, if a teacher is open and honest, and relates to students' problems and deals with students as students and not numbers, it produces a more productive environment in that school. That teacher is people-oriented and student-oriented. The most successful teacher rated highest by everyone would be the one most skilled in personal relationships dealing with students."

In fact, he pointed out, the state is trying to get counties to implement "teachers as advisers" programs, in which the teacher plays a major role in guidance of all kinds. Particularly now, when the school population is largely from broken homes, teachers are playing a larger and larger part in "parenting."

Hughes said the points of the Code of Ethics that impose on teacher "chit chat" and revelations of other personal situations have to do with embarrassing the students and detracting from their respect for teachers.

Here is how some of the ethics principles are worded for teachers to follow:

· "Aware of the importance of maintaining the respect and confidence of one's colleagues, of students, of parents, and of other members of the community, the educator strives to achieve and sustain the highest degree of ethical conduct."

• (The teacher) "shall not exploit a professional relationship with a student for personal gain or advantage."

• (The teacher) "shall keep in confidence personally identifiable information obtained in the course of professional services...' • (The teacher) "shall take reasonable precautions to distinguish between personal views and those of any educational institution or organization with which the individual is affiliated. • (The teacher) "shall not use institutional privileges for personal gain or advantage."

• (The teacher) "shall not intentionally expose a student to unnecessary embarrassment or disparagement." Another educator who also sees a problem with loosely run classrooms had a somewhat simple explanation and solution: Jack Heisler, who was an assistant principal at Lyman High School before coming to his present job as director of secondary education in Seminole County, said he has a son who is a senior at Lake Mary High School who tells him about classroom problems. "I don't want to exaggerate a problem, but I know we do have somewhat of a problem. It's a naive type of thing that tends to lessen after the teacher gets some experience. I would hope that they learn from experience, because students tend to be manipulative and play on the teachers." If he were a principal at Lake Mary or Seminole High, he said he would "not be pleased and it would disturb me greatly.

Remarking that there are some 2,000 teachers in the county school system, he added that "overall, we have a good system and I'm proud to be associated with it. I hope and believe these are isolated incidents. Even in my day we had teachers who went a little beyond being friendly. There may be more of it now because of circumstances, but I hope we are on guard and aware of it so we can work with these teachers so we know where they are with their relationships in the classroom. Being friendly is one thing. But you have responsibility with the students; you've got to maintain a certain level of professionalism. Discussing personal life in the classroom is not the appropriate place. Befriending and discussing personal problems either in or out of the classroom is inappropriate and not professional." As to why such behavior is bad, he said, "A teacher is a professional person, and talking about their personal problems with students is not what I consider professional. First and foremost, their concern should be education and the well-being of their students, and that's not what's happening if they're talking about other

He commented that the problem is probably more widespread than just Seminole County. We live probably in a less restrictive society than we used to, and it has had some impact on student-teacher relationships at school. While teachers should be earing people concerned about their students and certainly have a desire to be friendly, there is a barrier between the student and the teacher. And I think if that barrier is broken down, then it has an effect on teaching that goes on in the classroom."

A plaque that adorns Heisler's office at the board of education, inscribed with the words of M.E. Jenkins, addresses teachers directly: "No assembly of people, whether scientists, spacemen or statesmen, could be more impressive or important than the members of America's teaching profession, for no group wields greater power and influence over the future than you. Every pupil you have carries in his mind or heart or conscience a bit of you. Your influence, your example, your ideas, and values keep marching on - how far into the future and into what realms of one spacious universe you will never know."

The suspense has left the Seminole Athletic Conference title chase but there are still team and individual accomplishments on the line as the county teams prepare for the final week of the

Each county team has two SAC games remaining tonight and Friday while Lake Mary (New Smyrna Beach), Oviedo (Eustis) and Lake Brantley (Orlando Bishop Moore) have nonconference games scheduled for Thursday.

Tonight's slate has Seminole hosting Lake Brantley, Lake Mary entertaining Lyman and Oviedo welcoming Lake Howell. Seminole, as expected, wrapped up the SAC title by beating Oviedo Friday. The Noles are 8-0. Lyman (5-3), Lake Mary (4-4), Oviedo (3-5), Lake Brantley (3-5) and Lake Howell (1-7) complete the order after eight weeks.

Although coach Bill Klein's 'Noles won their second consecutive SAC crown, they still need one victory in their last two games to secure the No. 1 seed for next week's district tournament at Bill Fleming Memorial Gymnasium.

Seminole has a 14-2 district ledger which is determined by records against Class 4A opponents, excluding tournaments. "We should get the No. 1 seed," Klein said, "But Lake Brantley is not coming over here to lose. They played us tough at their place.

Tonight will be "Sentor Parents Night" in Sanford and Klein said he hopes his six seniors will get the bulk of the playing time. Two of those seniors - Jerry "Stick" Parker and Roderick Henderson - are chasing Brantley senior Brent Bell in the county scoring race. Bell is averaging 17.6 points per outing while Parker (15.9) and Henderson (15.7) are next in Seminole's other seniors include Michael "Spud" Edwards, Steve Hathaway, Brad Baird and Mike Franklin. The senior parents will be introduced prior to the game and the mothers will be given a rose.

The rebounding race is also up for grabs. Lake Mary's Oscar Merthle (9.9) has moved slightly ahead of Seminole's Craig Walker (9.8). Walker, though, has not played for two games and is "doubtful" for tonight. The 6.8 junior was hit in the mouth against Lyman last Tuesday and needed stitches to close the inside gash. Klein said Walker practiced "lightly" Monday but he probably will not play until Friday.

While the scoring and rebounding races are fairly close, it will be tough for anyone to catch Seminole's Andre "Smooth" Whitney in assists or steals. Whitney, a 5-11 34 Junior guard. is averaging 6.5 assists and 3.6 steals. Lyman's Robert Thomas is averaging 5.3 assists and Ovtedo's Brian Wilson is averaging 2.6 steals.

Thomas, a senior guard, made up some ground on Lake Brantley's Joe Nolff last week in free-throw percentage. Notif still leads at 77.4 but Thomas has pulled within .3 at 77.1. Parker (76.5), Whitney (76.4), Bell (74.1) and Ovledo's Robb Hughes (72.5) are also factors.

Although the games are of little consequence tonight except for determining second place. there are some interesting matchups. Here is a look at tonight's SAC schedule:

● Lake Brantley at Seminole: This one has the defensiveminded Noles will try to throw a net around Bell since Parker and Henderson have an outside shot at the scoring title. Bell, though, has excellent offensive moves and is usually able to lean past his defenders or pull up for a jumper to get his shots off. Parker, meanwhile, has been especially explosive, throwing in 28 last Friday. The lightningquick swingman has games of

26, 27, 28 and 29 this year. • Lyman at Lake Mary: This one is a point guard's delight as Thomas squares off againt Lake Mary's Terry "The Cat" Miller. Thomas enjoys passing the ball more than "The Cat" but both are splendld at going to the hoop

Talk about perfect defensive position, Oviedo's Brian Wilson (No. 11) has it as Seminole's Roderick Henderson goes airborne. Wilson took the charge and Henderson the foul. Raines Enters Florida Sports Hall March 16

LAKE MARY (UPI) - Five prominent Florida sports figures will be inducted into the Florida Sports Hall of Fame and two athletes will receive special recognition at a banquet scheduled at the Racquet and Swim Club at Heathrow, March 16.

Pat Summerall, CBS television sportscaster and a previous inductee into the hall, will be master of ceremonies.

The 1987 honorees are ex-Seminole High standout Tim Raines, professional baseball: Don Wallen, high school basketball: Charlie Owens, progolf: Hal Smeltzly, college baseball, and "Old Timer" inductee, Pete Cooper, pro golf.

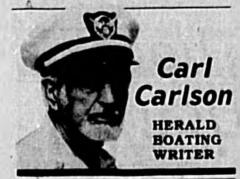

Wade Boggs, Boston Red Sox third baseman, will be honored as the 1986 professional athlete of the year, and Vinnie Testaverde, University of Miami quarterback, was chosen amateur athlete of the year.

Selection of the seven was made by balloting members of the Florida Sports Writers Association and the Florida Sportscasters Association.

The Florida Sports Hall of Fame has honored 97 Floridians during its 30 years of existence. The hall, with memorabilia on each of the inductees, is located temporarily at the Mystery Fun

House in Orlando. The 1987 ceremonies will begin on Monday, March 16 at 6 p.m. with a reception for the honorees followed by a banquet and the induction ceremonies. Tickets are $50 and can be secured from the Florida Sports Foundation, P.O. Box 509, Orlando, Fla. 32802.

Many of the previous inductees are expected to attend. according to Steve Doyle.

Boats Required To Carry Visual Distress Signals

Every year boatmen require assistance in some form or another. Most requests for assistance are the result of simple mechanical breakdowns. All too often though, requests for help are serious. In most cases, loss and discomfort can be minimized if the skipper has a means of alerting someone to his predicament.

It is important to understand three basic facts about distress

• First, they are used to alert another person or vessel that someone is in trouble:

 Second, they are used as locating devices;

• Third, not all devices are effective for both day and night or for all weather and visibility conditions.

There is a common misconception among boaters that they are required to carry flares (pyrotechnic devices). Not true. Recreational boats are required, in most cases, to carry Visual Distress Signals. The boater can choose between approved pyrotechnic or nonpyrotechnic devices. Most boaters use pyrotechnic devices because they are easy to obtain and have proven to be effective.

The only Coast Guard approved non-pyrotechnic device for daytime use is a flag that is 3 x 3 feet with a black square and a ball on an orange background. It is most effective if flown from a mast, outrigger, or antenna.

The approved non-pyrotechnic device for night use is an electric lantern that automatically flashes the International SOS signal in Morse code dot-dot-dot. dash-dash-dash, dot-dot-dot (...) four to six times each minute.

Most boaters select pyrotechnic devices such as hand-held flares, hand-held or floating orange smoke, aerial meteors, and parachute flares. When pyrotechnic devices are selected, a minimum of three must be carried. Any combination can be carried as long as they add up to three signals for day use and three signals for night use.

Three combination day/night signaling devices meet both requirements. Pistol launched or self contained rocket propelled red meteors can be used by day, but are most effective at night. Red parachute flares, either pistol launched or hand held rocket propelled, are good signals for both day and night because of their altitude, slow descent, and brilliant intensity.

Hand-held or floating orange smoke devices are excellent day signals, especially in calm clear weather. The effectiveness of smoke signals is diminished in high wind because wind tends to disperse the smoke and keep it close to the water - making it hard to see.

All pyrotechnic devices contain an expiration date printed on the device. This date cannot exceed 42 months from the date of manufacture. Although outof-date devices can't be counted for your legal requirements, they should be kept and used for

No single signaling device is ideal under all conditions. You should consider carrying several types. The minimum number of flares that you are required to carry may be three, but in an entergency you'll wish you had dozens.

A visual distress signal of any kind works only if there is someone around to see or hear it; Conserve your signals until you are reasonably sure of being detected. Wait until you see or hear a vessel or aircraft before you ignite a flare or any "onetime" device. For additional information contact Carl Carlson, 323-9416.

BOATING TIP - Flares: Hand-held flares and smoke devices are ignited by striking an abrasive cap against a flammable compound (the reverse of striking a kitchen match against an emery board). When stored in a high humidity area, such as a boat, the compound becomes soggy and won't ignite. The solution: Check all hand-held flares and smoke devices two or three times a season. If they're damp, take the caps off the flares and let them dry in the hot sun. Be sure to keep them away from children. Store these devices in a scaled container or plastic bag to field. munimize the absorption of moisture.

Spencer 'Wheels' To 100-Lap Win

NEW SMRYNA BEACH - Jimmy Spencer literally drove "the wheels off the Cicci Cavaller to win the Second Annual 100-lap Richic Evans Memorial Championship on Saturday night at New Smyrna Speedway.

The annual finale, which turned out to be the best race of the Series, marked the end of the 21st Annual World Series of Asphalt Stock Car Racing for 1987.

With three wins and three runner-up finishes. Reggie Ruggiero took the overall high point modified champion-

In the 100-lapper for the Mod Squad. big Tom Baldwin led the first 21 tours after starting up front. At that point, Spencer came up from the top six to outpower Baldwin and move up on the Spencer then maintained the lead through two cautions. During the second caution period. Ruggiero pitted for four fresh tires, while the Series point leader Jamie Tomaino pitted with overheating

This heating problem cause Tomaino to lose the point chase. Tomaino needed to finish no more than eight spots behind Ruggiero to take the title, and because of mechanical problems, he did not finish

The final 20 laps were loaded with aggressive wheel-to-wheel, extremely close competition. Ruggiero tried everything, but Spencer held on to the checkers. Third to fifth were Tony Jankowiak. Baldwin and Jerry Marquis. The first SK finisher was Jack Ely.

Lee Faulk, 30, who has owned a race car since he was 15 years old, drove the Champion TV Rentals 1987 Firebird to victory in the 25-lap late model feature. besting Rick Bickle, David Rogers, Dick Trickle and Butch Miller, who drove the Pro-Power/Fuge Race Cars 1987 Thunderbird.

got to the front right at the start. and unless they knocked me out, I knew I could stay up there," Faulk, whose sixth fastest time put him on the pole at the start, said.

Still hot from his 38 feature wins last season, David Rogers took the high point title, while Faulk and Canadian Russ Urlin tied for the runner-up spot.

The point chase was extremely close all week, and the late model, modified and thunder car titles were not decided until the very last night of the competition on the high banked, half-mile asphalt oval.

Pete Starr was the Thunder car champion. The IMCA Modified high point man was Curt Hutchens. Jeff Fuller completely dominated the New England Mini Modified Competition. as he won all the races and the points championship.

Over 200 race cars from five racing divisions jammed the infield on every one of the nine nights. With the car count up, the fans supported the Series very well with packed grandstands and wall to wall people in the pits.

Disappointing '86 Accelerated Elliott Blueprint Redesign

DAYTONA BEACH (UPI) -The frustration and disappointment of 1986 forced Bill Elliott to redesign his blueprint for the stock-ear driving cham-

In NASCAR's season opener Sunday, Elliott's plan came together perfectly as the softspoken, Dawsonville, Ga., driver won his second Daytona 500 in three years, reviving talk about Awesome Bill from Dawsonville."

But Elliott's method of victory was a bit different than his 11 superspeedway wins in 1985, where his Ford Thunderbird was by far the superior automobile on the big tracks and usually pulled away from the field. Sunday, Elliott won the race with a 6.3-second fuel stop with 13 laps remaining, and his pit crew will play a major role in any attempt by the popular driver to capture his first Winston Cup championship.

In 1986, Elliott was hurt by the absence of his brother. engine builder and crew chief crew Ernic, who missed several months of the season because of illness. With Ernie gone, the Elliott team was in disarray and the team that had 15 top 5 finishes on superspeedways in 1985 managed only seven in 1986, and the victory total fell

In the off-season, Elliott revamped his team, streamlining It and removing himself frem many of the day-to-day chores he had been handling. He said the result is a better organized and more talented crew, that with the return of Ernie Elliott. strong run at the championship.

"I just feel with the good crew we've got now and everything going in the right direction, we can keep the momentum going,' Elliott, 31, said. "In '85, I felt like we had a lot to learn, and '86 taught us a lot. I think it (the Daytona 500 win) shows that Ernie was a strong force on our team in 1985 and he'll continue to be a strong force as long as we're together.

Elliott began racing on the NASCAR circuit in 1976, but it wasn't until 1983 that he ran a full schedule. Just having another year of experience under his belt has given Elliott a fresh perspective on racing.

"This (the win) has got to be a whole lot sweeter" than the 1985 victory, he said, "Because I

"It just thrilled me to death racing across the finish line

Elliott also said he is able to think back to the 1985 season. when Darrell Waltrip passed him late in the year to win the championship, and see that losing the driving title then can help him now.

"Anytime you win a race, a championship is what you're looking for," he said. "Still, I feel I'm more prepared to win a championship than I was in '85. I think losing it taught me a lot. Without a little bit of luck and being consistent, it's hard to win a championship.

The one area Elliott needs to

"Our team has been lacking on the short tracks, but I think we can get that one," he said. "I do feel it's a disadvantage to run a Ford product on a short track. There's also a lot of other good cars out there, and they're also getting better. Racing is more competitive than ever right

But the man to beat on the superspeedways is Elliott, who won his third straight pole at Daytona, shattering the qualifying record with a lap at 210.364 mph.

"Last year, we had to get better," Elliott said, then was asked if 1987 would be a better year than 1986. "If it's not, I'm going to be very disappointed."

Coach Howard Mabie's Lions, ranked No. 3 in the first Florida Sports Writers Association Poll, return to action Thursday night at 7 against the winner of today's Eustis-Daytona Beach Mainland game.

In Lyman tournament action Monday, the Seminole-Titusville Astronaut and Lyman-Leesburg double-header was postponed due to wet playing conditions. They will be played today at 5 p.m. and 7:30 p.m., respectively.

"Crockett did a heckuva job for a freshman," Mabie said about his young left-hander who bailed out winner Bowers in the sixth inning. He allowed just one run after taking over a basesloaded and no-out situation.

Bowers hurled five innings, struck out six, allowed just one hit and one earned run while walking five. Crocket struck out three while getting the last six outs for the save.

Center fielder Mark Merchant walked, stole second, went to third on a groundout and scored on a short passed ball for Oviedo's first run in the opening

In the fourth, Belflower tripled over the center fielder's head and scored on Glenn Reichle's single to right. Reichle was gunned down trying for a double but Alan Greene walked to restart the inning. When Jon Cox reached on an error, Greene moved to second and then stole third. He also scored on a passed ball. Jon Cox then singled home Lake Mary's Rams, who finished as runner-up in last year's Class 4A state tournament, were ranked No. 2 in the 4A poll released Monday.

On the night he became Indiana's all-time scoring leader. Steve Alford missed 3 critical shots that could have won a game for the second-ranked Hoosiers.

Indiana, the Big Ten leader, still managed to subdue last-place Wisconsin 86-85 Monday in three overtimes in Madison. Wis. Alford made just 4 of 19 shots from the floor and finished with 13 points.

The senior guard broke the Indiana all-time scoring record of 2.192 on a 3-point field goal at 14:43 of the first half, but missed shots at the end of regulation and the first two overtimes.

Alford missed a 10-foot jumper just before the buzzer in regulation, misfired on a shot with seven seconds left in the first overtime and his 15-footer at the end of the second overtime bounced off the rim.

Indiana finally won when Dean Garrett grabbed Joe Hillman's missed shot and scored with four seconds left in the third extra period. It marked the 15th straight time the Badgers had fallen to the Hoosiers.

Gooden was asking for $1.8 million in arbitration. The Mets had offered

Flames Douse 15-Game Losing Streak With 5-0 Win At Philly

Oct. 22, 1978 — when the franchise was based in Atlanta. "Nobody in that locker room had ever won a game here as a Calgary Flame." Coach Bob Johnson said. "We've now completed a cycle. We've now won in every building Joe Mullen scored his 35th and 36th goals of the year, and Rejean Lemelin stopped 23 shots for his first shutout this season to lead the Flames to their fourth straight "We hadn't won here in nine seasons, and today we won it with class," Lemelin said. "They didn't get too many chances and we played a very good game. "This is not a place you come in and expect to win. You have nothing to lose so you can go out a little looser, do your best and see what happens."

Mullen gave Calgary a 1-0 lead at 8:51 of the first period. The Flames were on the power play when Paul Reinhart skated around Philadelphia goaltender Ron Hextall and passed the puck across the crease to Mullen, who tapped it

Stocks Open Higher

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices opened higher today in active trading of New York Stock Exchange issues, pushing the Dow above the 2200 level as trading resumed in carnest after the long holiday weekend.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which slipped 3.52 last week, was up 17.58 to 2200.93 shortly after the market opened.

Advances led declines 685-393 among the 1,508 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape.

Early turnover amounted to about 19,188,000

The stock market posted its first weekly loss of 1987 last week, breaking a five-week advance. Trading was brisk, but slowed considerably from the heavy pace that has prevailed since the start

Profit taking and a weak bond market weighed on equity prices Monday and Tuesday. Profit taking was also a factor in Thursday's modest decline. Buying in the oil and technology sectors boosted the market Wednesday and renewed interest sent it up 17.57 points Friday. But the buying did not quite overcome the profit taking motive, and the market finished narrowly lower Crew members from the Orlando based Quest Studio arrived in Sanford at 7 a.m. and left around 2:30 p.m. Part of First Street was closed to traffic for a while during the filming.

The shots involved Bottoms driving up on a motorcycle and buying the book "Before God" in Rhodes' shop. Sanford extras were Cary Smith, son of Sanford's mayor Bettye Smith, Smith's wife, Terri; David Thomas, son-in-law of Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce Executive Director Dave Farr: Jennifer Gross, Shaun Briggs and Rhonda Warren.

Four of the young people were cast by Rhodes before Monday's filming. The two others were selected by production staffers during the shot.

"I think everybody had a blast," Rhodes said today, "So many people turned out for the filming. There were probably

First Street was closed from Park Avenue to the Magnolia Mall for the motorcycle scene with Bottoms.

"They had him pulling up to store, looking in the window then coming inside." Rhodes said. "As he was going in, Cary and his wife were coming out. The other extras were outside in the mall area."

Rhodes said the studio's selection of Sanford for the shot 'is another plus for the city.

"The studio people said they'd love to do more filming here because of cooperation they received from the city, merchants and townspeople.'

Bottoms has appeared in numerous films, including Apolcalypse Now. Rhodes said Monday's shot "definitely wasn't a college project. It was serious stuff, a major motion pleture that's going to feature Sanford and be released all over the county."

Manning is being investigated by the FDLE because of allegations that a report of 1983 boating accident in Lake County involving Manning, which was filed with the Longwood Police Department, apparently the wrong agency because Longwood has no jurisdiction where it occurred, was falsified.

Criticism against Gunter and Mrs. Dennis first arose toward the end of the meeting when she questioned a letter sent out by the police department soliciting funds from city businesses for various projects and the fact the donations were kept in a separate police department account. The criticism continued through the public participation period and commission reports. Former mayor Larry Goldberg said, "Let's get off of Greg Manning's and the other department heads' backs. The campaign is over, do what you were elected for."

Gunter defeated Goldberg in a run-off election in December.

Lambert was arrested on those charges while in jail after being picked up on a separate prowling charge. While in custody he made a suicide attempt by jabbing tweezers into his wrist, records show. His conviction, according to the prosecutor at the time, Steven Brady, was based upon good detective work. Lambert was linked to the scene by a fingerprint, a shoe print and identified by a good follow-up description.

Lambert's case also gained notoriety when an Orlando television station, WFTV Channel 9. identified the rape victim when she testified in court. The station later apologized to the woman and law enforcement officials for the on-air identification. The woman has since moved to another county.

Lambert had a mother and half-brother in Orlando at the time of the trial and an 11-year-old daughter, who testified on his behalf. According to his statements in court documents. Lambert was in the Marianna Reform School from the age of 11 to 18 and did not have a regular high school diploma though he had an equivalency diploma. He was discharged from the army - honorably. he said — after serving only 13 months at the height of the Vietnam War between Nov. 1971 and Dec. 1972. Whether he served overseas is not known. He was born in Troy, Ohio, and prior to his 1984 arrest had lived in Houston. He had been drifting in and out of Orlando since 1981 and was under treatment at a Pine Hills mental health clinic, records show.

Just days before his arrest on the rape charge a Seminole County jury found him not guilty of aggravated assault. In that case he was accused of holding a switch blade against the throat of a woman who refused to dance with him at a bar. records show. After that arrest, Lambert had to be taken to an emergency room for treatment because, according to court records, he beat his head against the backseat cage of the patrol car. cried and threatened suicide.

When he was arrested he was on probation for a marijuana possession conviction and was suspected in being involved in burglary, shoplifting, escape, narcotics, credit card fraud and dealing in stolen property.

Lambert appealed his conviction and sentence stating Circuit Judge S. Jospeh Davis Jr. denied a motion for a new trial after the prosecution made a comment in the presence of the jury about a witness that could have testified but did not. He also argued that there was not sufficient evidence to justify the charge of rape with force nor enough evidence to identify him as the assailant.

On April 18, 1985, the 5th District Court of Appeal in Daytona Beach upheld his conviction.

Commissioner Paul Tremel explained that the commission, along with the city manager, city engineer and the developer and his consultants, went down Monday morning to the site area where the pumping system would operate. "We assure you, we're concerned," he said.

Commissioner Charlie Websier said earlier Monday morning during the commissioners site trip that the purpose of the visit was "to see if what the developer is saying is feasible is, in fact, feasible." The pumping system will be used to relieve the storm water retention area in Lake Mary Woods II and will put filtered water into Lake Bingham because during the last few years it has experienced a very low water elevation.

Jim Morgan, an environmental specialist working for the developer explained the basic route of the pumping system. He said that from the Lake Mary Woods II development, the storm water runoff would be carried to the retention area by way of pipes and gutters. When the water reaches a certain elevation in the retention area (39.2 feet above sea level), the water would enter a sand filter bed and then be pumped through a four-inch pvc pipe to Lake Bingham. At any time that Lake Bingham rises to a flood stage, he said. which is "once in a hundred years." due to excessive rainfall, the pump system would be turned off and flood waters would exit Lake Bingham through an 18-inch pipe through Lake Mary Woods Phase II to the other side of Cardinal Oaks II and pour into Soldier's Creek.

The vegetation has become stressed, he said, because some of it is not suited to the amount of water that has accumulated there lately and is being replaced with more suitable vegetation such as cypress trees and sod grass which is being put along fringe areas of the discharge point because it serves as a good filter. Cardinal Oaks II developer Larry Dale asked again, on behalf of his residents, "What if it doesn't work, that's what they're asking you," he said. "What if the re-vegetation and redesign doesn't work. who's responsible?" No answer was provided from the commission.

Board

In Central Florida - one that he didn't think would stand the test of time. And he said at least 20 other video stores in Seminole County dealt in the same types of videos his client would be offering.

But the board listened, instead, to the arguments of the people.

David Miner, for instance, told the board he had visited other 'erotic emporiums" in Orange County on Orange Blossom Trail, where the petitioner has other establishments, and he was astonished.

"It is not an adult bookstore at all," he said. "They have one room specifically designed for men to come in and watch the nude dancer and masturbate. In one of the viewing booths I saw two gay men performing oral sex on one another. And I don't believe we have any right letting that open up here.'

McShane replied there is no 'Erotic Emporium' by that name on Orange Blossom Trail.

Wives whose husbands worked close to the proposed location pleaded that they did not want to come by with their small children "to pick Daddy up and have them ask, 'What's that place?"

People blamed erotic bookstores for wife abuse, child abuse, pedophilia and drug and alcohol abuse.

Pastor Robert Clark from Winter Park brought copies of graphic nude magazines and passed them around. He held up centerfolds and asked if people knew what kind of material was under discussion. "God called us to be soldiers and this is what we're opposed to." He said there would be material and equipment for "masochism and beastiality" at a stor- ke that.

But the $p_{\tau} = 0$ r persisted. "You have a Co.....utlonal right to view adult materials and this is the way to do it," McShane said. He said the new code in Seminole County had allowed no adult emportums to open up so far, and that was soon to be tried.

He said the proposed location is "one of the most commercial areas in the county, and If that's not a permissible location, I don't believe there is any in the

"You're right," hollered a woman from the audience. Radio-TV preacher George

When told there were many such places in the county already selling adult videos, he sald, "Since we have cancer we need more cancer? I think we need less cancer." And the auditorium rocked again with applause.

Crossley added that his group was prepared to get involved legally if necessary.

One business owner next door to the proposed emporium location said if the emporium goes in he wants the county to build a block wall between them. The emporium was called "an upholstered sewer," and a 'pervert store" with only clientele who are "sleezebags and degenerates." It was called a "garbage pit with sickness, diseases, rodents and maggots that would only attract the same."

The staff's recommendation was that the emporium would be all right if the joint access and parking could be worked out with a legal instrument. In answer to a question by board member Ben Tucker, McShane acknowledged that his client had been arrested a few vears ago in connection with managing such an adult store, but those charges were dropped. He said three employees had also been arrested for having no adult entertainment permits, and those cases are pending.

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter from "On the Outside Looking in," the graduate student who's shy and insecure. He described himself as "nice looking, personable, intelligent, sensitive, with a good sense of humor." Well, I have the same qualities as this male, only I'm 23, not ugly, tall with long blond hair, and I'm female. I also have trouble connecting with members of the opposite sex, but I think it's the way I dress.

. I dress like a "biker" - black leather jacket and black kneehigh leather boots. Guys. especially the clean-cut ones the kind I like - usually get the wrong impression of me: they think I'm a "tough" girl and they don't bother to talk to me. I'm not "tough" - I have very high moral standards. I just like the look of leather.

Very often when my friends and I go dancing at a bar, we get offers from a lot of weirdos who try to pick us up and take us outside to tango in the back seat of their car. Meanwhile, we try to think of a nice, polite way to say, "Leave us alone."

Here's a message for "Looking In": Don't give up. I'd love to meet you, but I know that's impossible because Abby isn't running a dating service. So next time you're at a bar, or walking down the street, if you see a tall blonde in a black leather jacket, please stop and get acquainted.

DEAR GIRL: You say clean-cut guys don't bother to talk to you because you dress in black leather and look like a "biker." The guys whom you call "welrdos," who want to pick up you for immoral purposes, may just look like weirdos - their moral standards might be as high as yours.

The way a person dresses is a statement he makes about himself. If you don't want to look like a "tough girl," don't dress like one. And don't you judge another person's character and motives until you get to know hlm, and if you're lucky, no one will judge you before he gets to know you. But start with yourself.

DEAR ABBY: So macho Al In Santa Barbara says he hates pants on women because he can't tell the women from the men. How about when you're driving down the street and the driver in front of you has a nice head of hair down to her shoulders, and when you pass her, you notice that "she" also has a beard and moustache.

Now that is what I call ridicu-LIKES PANTS ON WOMEN tragic or world-shaking, but I would like your opinion and possibly the opinion of your readers.

I just discovered that my college-age daughter does not wear underwear (panties). I was shocked, and told her I thought it was indecent. She replied, "I don't want panty lines."

She is a hard-working student. works part-time in a department store and does not drink, smoke or use drugs. I am very proud of her, but this really bothers me. Am I hopelessly old-fashioned? Or is this a common practice among young women today? SHOCKED

DEAR SHOCKED: Old-fashioned? Not really. But in your daughter's case the absence of panties has more to do with vanity than "decency."

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I have been married for 20 years. It's the second marriage for both of us. She has two sons from a previous marriage and I have two daughters from my first marriage - all are adults.

Recently we made out our wills. I think we should look over each other's wills - If only to change them to each other's satisfaction.

Is this unusual? And what do you think of the idea? NO CITY OR STATE, PLEASE

DEAR NO CITY: I don't know how "unusual" It is, but I think it's a good idea. It's sort of an adult version of "I'll show you

Art Works Claimed Center's Most Prestigious Exhibit

A collection of the art work of Milton Avery will open at the Mattland Art Center on Feb. 21 and continue through April 5. This is the most prestigious exhibit ever displayed at the Art Center, according to Ethel Scures, art center spokesman. The work will include paintings, drawings, watercolors, and prints chosen by the late artist's wife from her personal collection.

Because of his bold use of color, Milton Avery is recognized as one of the finest and most accomplished colorists of the 20th Century. During his lifetime. Avery was known for his mastery of color, however, only recently his work is receiving the critical acclaim and rise in popularity he deserved.

The Art Center founder, Andre Smith, invited

Milton Avery to come to Maitland Art Center where there were studio and living quarters available for artists. Artists were encouraged to experiment and be innovative with their art. During his Fellowship, Avery began working with the printing process of monotypes, and monotype prints from this period are included in this exhibition.

The Maitland Art Center is located at 231 W. Packwood Ave., Maitland. The gallery is open from 10:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m., Monday through Friday, and 1:00-4:00 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday, Admission for this exhibit is $3 for the general public, and $1.50 for students and seniors. For further information call the Maitland Art Center at 645-2181.

More Problems For Pension Fund

By Craig Webb
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The federal pension insurance system, overcommitted by $4 billion and headed for default, will inherit 100 more pension funds this year, some ranking among the worst failures in history, the agency's chief predicts. Kathleen Utgoff, the executive director of the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corp., also says Congress is showing a change of heart toward making high-risk companies pay bigger insurance premiums into her agency.

Without the changes, the system will run out of money within 10 years, she predicts.

"It's not the people getting their checks now who are at risk," she said in a recent interview with United Press International. "It's the people who have to pay for this whole thing - they're the ones who ought to be scared."

The reform effort already has begun with speeches to members of Congress and preparations for a bill expected to reach Capitol Hill around April. Utgoss warned, however, quick change is unlikely despite the new-found interest. The last set of changes took five years to move through Congress.

"I think just a few months ago we had people saying 'We just finished this. Please, I can't go back into this," she said. "Now I think there's an almost pervasive agreement that we've got to deal with it and that this is a serious problem."

Some companies are expected to balk at the idea of paying higher pension insurance premiums, particularly since rates more than tripled less than 15 months ago. And the labor force with the biggest stake in the agency's future, the United Steelworkers Union, cannot be counted on for support. Steelworkers lobbyist Jack Sheehan said the union was "pretty teed off" last month when Utgoss took over the pension plan of bankrupt

LTV Steel, America's No. 2 steel producer. Utgoff said slie had to do it because the plan's commitments exceeded its assets by $2.3 billion and because the company was not putting money into the fund.

The steelworkers union had been bargaining with LTV to keep the plan. It particularly wanted to retain a $400 monthly supplemental pension that was to tide over some LTV workers who took early retirement. That supplement ended when the Pension Guaranty Corp. took over, so the steelworkers sued Utgoff's agency to fight the Taking over LTV meant the Pension Guaranty Corp. had $3 billion in assets from its terminated plans but $7 billion in commitments - overextending the pension system by $4 billion. The agency will pay about $650 million in benefits to 150,000 retirees this year.

Utgoff said the Pension Benefit Guarantee Corp. has taken over an average of 100 pension plans in each of its last 13 years and is likely to do the

"But the size and underfunding of those plans has changed radically." she told UPI. "When I got here there were a couple of $60 million terminations," in which promises to pay benefits exceeded assets by that amount.

"They were considered way out of title," she said. "And then the week I arrived in August 1985 was Allis-Chalmers (a farm equipment company) at $165 million. Right after that was Wheeling-Pittsburgh (another bankrupt steel producer) at $465 million and then there was LTV at $2.3 billion" - the three largest terminations to date.

Asked how probable it was that the guaranty corporation will get another plan this year costing at least $165 million, she replied: "Quite likely."

She has proposed shoring up the corporation by revamping the cost of premiums charged to companies with pension plans. At least 80 percent to 90 percent of the nation's 112,000 pension plans have enough money in them and are run well, she said, so those companies would see little change in the current annual premium of $8.50 per employee.

Young Engineers Likely To Get Raises

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) - Young engineers with at least three years experience will be in greatest demand in 1987 and will reap the biggest salary increases, according to a recent survey of engineering companies.

The study by Fox-Morris Personnel Consultants also suggested environmental engineers will be hot commodities this year because of toxic waste-cleanup projects and tough regulations on hazardous wastes.

Fox-Morris, a national engineering recruitment firm headquartered in Wayne, Pa., based its findings on analyses of recruiting assignments from more than 400 companies.

The survey released Saturday said engineers with the "magic combination of youth and experience" - usually between three and 10 years on the job — can expect raises of between 4.5 percent and 11.7 percent this year.

Jeff Zinser, senior vice president of Fox-Morris. explained that engineers in this category are considered "ideal in terms of both proven ability and reasonable salary expectations.

"In fact, the very most sought-after engineers are those with three to six years of experience,"

Engineers on the ends of the experience scale entry-level employees and senior managers - are expected to receive relatively small raises of between 3.6 percent and 5.4 percent, Zinser said.

On one hand, entry-level engineers are "an untried entity" for whom salary offers tend to follow a more mederate growth trend. And senior engineers' salary increases are being held down by "the recent rash of mergers, consolidations and layoffs among engineering-intensive compa-

Of the eight classifications of engineers examined, job prospects appear to be highest for environmental engineers, mainly because of the Superfund toxic waste cleanup program, and for industrial and mechanical engineers, the survey

Demand also is expected to be high for civil engineers, as low interest rates continue to encourage development of commercial and large-scale industrial projects.

Job openings are expected to be fewer in the computer and electronics market, which continues to feel competition from abroad, and in the chemical market, where low oil prices have slowed the demand for petroleum engineers, the

CHICAGO (UPI) - stroke treatment theo-Recent discoveries about the basic chemistry of the brain have opened the way for drugs that may reduce damage caused by strokes, which strike half a million Americans a year, a researcher reported

A drug that may mitigate stroke damage is already being tested in humans, and far more specific and potentially effective drugs are in development, sald Dr. Robert DeLorenzo. chairman of the department of neurology at the Medical College of Virginia in Richmond.

"What's exciting about this is that stroke has been an area that's like a desert as far as treatment is concerned," he said. "But these drugs could have a very major effect in improving the outcome of stroke victims."

Strokes kill 155,000 people in the United States annually and cause partial paralysis or other neurological damage in many others. The most common kind of stroke is precipitated by a clot cutting off blood flow to a group of brain cells, although some strokes are the result of a burst

DEAR READER - There is no way to increase your height once the growing portions of bone have fused in the teens. Many people tend to grow shorter with age, however.
