DUI crackdown

Seminole sheriff's deputies conducted a traffic stop attempting to identify drunk drivers Saturday night near the intersection of S.R. 444 and Magnolia Avenue west of Altamonte Springs. Eight persons were arrested in separate stops. Several DUI charges were made, and several were cited for license violations.
• Joseph Alex Bednarczyk, 40, of Apopka; Clifford Edward Beaudin, 31, of Orlando; Thomas Anthony Bern, 32, of Altamonte Springs; and Fred Christopher Curti, 50, of Altamonte Springs, were all charged with driving under the influence of alcohol.
• Jose Gomez, 37, of Altamonte Springs was charged with driving without a valid drivers license.
• Three others, arrested during the same check point stop were reported in the Police Briefs list on Monday.

Main Street calendar out

SANFORD — The Main Street Sanford program is moving ahead. The latest project is publishing a community calendar.
The one page calendar contains a list of events which may be of interest to visitors and residents alike. It has dates, the name of the event, time, location and the name and phone number of the person to contact.
The July edition is now available, free of charge, at the Main Street Welcome Center, 101 W. First Street, the First Street Gallery, 203 E. First Street, Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce office, and numerous businesses in the downtown area.
This is the beginning of what we hope will be a continuing listing, said Ray Bartholomew, curator of the First Street Gallery. We want visitors and the people of Sanford to have this so they will be aware of the many things that are going on in our city.
The list was printed by Seminole Quick Print who has a member of the Main Street program.

Sheriff offers classes

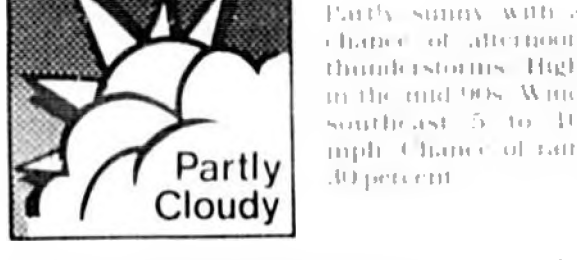

SANFORD — The Seminole County Sheriff's office is now presenting safety classes. They are being offered free of charge, on request.
The informational program is being arranged by Bonnie Summers, victim services coordinator with the Sheriff's office, through the Victim Services Division.
Classes presently available include women's personal safety, sexual assault prevention, date rape, domestic violence awareness and teenage sexual harassment.
These programs can be presented to your class of students, church or women groups or in the work environment, Summers said. Just call us and make arrangements.
Summers can be reached at the Seminole County Sheriff's office, 430-6650.

County creating jobs

Proposal: largest staff increase in five years

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer
SANFORD — Thirty new employees for the Sheriff's Office lead the list of new hires suggested by County Manager Ron Rabun in his $276 million spending plan for next year.
Rabun is seeking a total of 81 new employees, most to be hired next January or later. The county's year begins Oct. 1, 1993. The total last year cost of the new employees will be more than $1.7 million, although many of the employees will be hired until January or later.

If there is a sticker shock with the budget, that will be commented on Rabun last week.
County commissioners will discuss the hiring recommendations beginning July 19 in a series of day-long reviews. They will hold public hearings on their version of the plan in September.
Of the 81 employees, 6 percent of them are for Estlinger slots. Another 47 percent will be hired for the Public Works Department. The remainder will be scattered throughout several departments.

If commissioners approve hiring all 81 new employees, the county will employ a total of 2,012 people, a 4 percent increase from the currently authorized staff of 1,931 and the largest increase in staff in five years. Personnel costs represent 27 percent of Rabun's $276 million spending package.
Rabun has recommended hiring 30 of the 36 employees sought by Sheriff Don Estlinger.

Citizens irked by airport noise

Group: 20,000 local residents affected

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer
SANFORD — Citizens turned out today to continue objections about aircraft noise. Approximately two dozen attended this morning's Sanford Airport Authority meeting.
While the Authority members listened patiently to spokesmen for the group, they proposed that most complaints could be voiced during a public meeting on the noise problem, scheduled for late August.
Representing People for Responsible Airport Development (PRAD) Frank McDonald of Lake Mary voiced concerns for the increased aircraft noise over eight Sanford and Lake Mary residential communities.
I want you to know, he said, we are pro-airport development, but we are against the large commercial jet aircraft noise which affects our communities.
He explained that the noise problem affects approximately 20,000 residents, and almost all schools in the Sanford and Lake Mary areas.
Tim Connery, also a Lake Mary resident, suggested the Airport Authority give more consideration to utilizing approaches from and take-offs to the east, where most of the property is undeveloped. I also think you should give

Violence mars parties, 'Sick Boys' blamed

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer
SANFORD — Two thirteen-year-old gang members are scheduled to appear in court this afternoon on charges stemming from weekend party crashing incidents in Longwood, Winter Springs and Altamonte Springs that turned violent.
Anthony R. Spurlock, 19, 181 N. Oleander Street, Longwood, and Richard A. Moore, 19 Apt. 104, 364 Wymore Road, Altamonte Springs, along with two juveniles are charged with aggravated battery and throwing a deadly missile.

The four are members of an Altamonte Springs area gang called the Sick Boys. A series of events beginning Sunday night prompted the arrests in Longwood at 4 a.m. Monday morning. According to a police report, about 15 to 20 gang members crashed a party in Altamonte Springs and a fight broke out.
When the party moved to Winter Springs, another fight broke out when the Sick Boys arrived. A SANFORD — Banner signs along the lakefront will be considered at the next meeting of the committee charged with guiding waterfront development.

The seventh meeting of the Lake Montic Waterfront Master Plan Steering Committee will be held on Wednesday, July 14. It will be the first meeting since the group was officially established as a Standing committee by the Sanford City Commission.

According to City Planner Jay Marder, who has been organizing the meetings, a number of projects are already being undertaken.
Signs in the form of banners are to be established to identify the lakefront area. Two prototype banners are presently being considered. One was prepared by the city's Public Works Department, the other by Bill Swanner, who designed the

Money now being raised for Christmas parade

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer
SANFORD — A fund drive to raise $5,000 was launched recently in Sanford to help pay expenses incurred by bands participating in Sanford's annual Christmas parade.
Billy Higgins, parade chairman for the St. Lucia Festival, commented

Much is the cost of a good parade. Bands give color, sound and excitement to the event.
The fund raising got underway at a seafood dinner for members of the committee last week at the home of Meta Brooks, who cooked the fish reeled in by Higgins.
Letters have now been sent to high schools in Seminole, Orange and Volusia counties, inviting the bands to march in the parade on Dec. 21, which will be the highlight of the St. Lucia Festival.

Approximately 40 members of the committee are now beginning to fan out to sell boxes of mint chocolates during the upcoming months to continue the fund raising efforts. Some of the money may also be used for trophies and other parade entries such as floats and dance trams.
We wanted to upgrade our parade, Higgins said, but we realized we had to help reimburse travel costs for the multi-member bands in order for them to strut their stuff.

Island city fighting McDonald's

SANIBEL — Residents of this island city have a beef against McDonald's. They say Sanibel — a city with half of its land preserved for wildlife and multimillion-dollar beach homes — is not a McDonald's kind of place. In fact, some of the island's 5,700 residents opposed to the golden arches have formed the group McSPOIL — McDonald's: Sanibellians Protecting Our Island Lifestyle. People have sent in checks totaling more than $25,000 to pay for things like printing, legal expenses and paper: paper for letters to the editor, petitions to McDonald's directors — and paper for petitions, which bear the signatures of more than 14,000 residents in Southwest Florida. Vice Mayor Wally Kain said the controversy has taken over the island. "Mention the word 'McDonald's' anywhere and heads turn, conversation goes silent until they learn your stripe. It's an emotion-filled issue." He predicted the city council will give McDonald's two hearings on the issue — July 20 and Aug. 5 — followed promptly by a unanimous vote against the corporation. For a politician to vote otherwise, he said, would require a "kamikaze gene."

Pressure from company led to suicide

WEST PALM BEACH — A widow of a U.S. Sugar employee who killed himself is suing the company claiming its executives forced him to take his life. Tanya Redd filed a $3 million wrongful death lawsuit, which goes to trial today. The lawsuit claims U.S. Sugar pushed her husband, Hugh Redd, to suicide after company executives forced him to make a painful choice: take responsibility for environmental abuses and go to jail, or tell the truth — that the illegal dumping was company policy — and lose his job. "U.S. Sugar was perhaps one of the important things in his life," Redd's wife, Tanya, said last year. "I truly felt like they were his parents." Federal authorities began probing in 1990 U.S. Sugar's illegal disposal of toxic waste, according to a suit Tanya Redd filed in November 1991. On July 23, 1991, Redd bought a box of bullets, drove to a cane elevator near the Bryant sugar mill where he had worked for 29 years, sat down on the ground and shot himself in the heart.

Lovesick Russian sailor jumps ship

MIAMI — A lovesick Russian sailor jumped ship on high seas near the Bahamas, floundered for hours in shark-infested waters in hopes of returning to Cuba to his girlfriend, authorities said. Carol Chase of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service said Igor Bajenol, 21, told authorities he jumped overboard from a military ship Sunday because he didn't want to go back to Russia — or leave his Cuban girlfriend. "He's trying to seek asylum in Cuba, not the U.S.," Chase said. "We'll detain him because he's not an admissible alien. Then we'll figure out what to do with him." The seaman was taken to Krome Detention Center in Miami. A passenger on the cruise ship Royal Majesty saw someone swimming in the dark waters and alerted the crew, said U.S. Coast Guard seaman Paul Coleman. He was spotted about 8.5 miles off Great Stirrup Cay, a tiny atoll about 100 miles east of Florida. The cruise ship and the Bahama Sky, a passing 185-foot freighter bound for Port Lauderdale, joined in Bajenol's rescue. "It takes a lot of guts to jump out a ship when you're that far out to sea," said Bob Shovick, captain of the Bahama Sky. "He had no life jacket. He still had his shoes and pants on, which doesn't make it any easier to swim. He's damn lucky he's alive."

Former circus performer sets new record

ORLANDO — Jorge Ojeda-Guzman may have broken the high-wire endurance record set 20 years ago but he's got no plans to come down soon. The former circus performer said he hopes to stay aloft until 3 p.m. July 25 after 200 days on the high wire. Fewer than a dozen spectators witnessed the event Sunday afternoon when Ojeda-Guzman broke the 185-day record set in 1973 by Frenchman Henri Rochetais. The Orlando Sentinel reported Monday. Ojeda-Guzman marked the occasion by walking, with the assistance of a balance beam, to the center of a cable wire where he stood on one foot, tossed a hat and bandana into the air, and yelled: "Whoop Whoop!" He said sitting on a high perch during the summer is "not something I would recommend others to try, especially in Orlando. There is too much lightning here." Not to mention a dearth of creature comforts. Food and clothes — and a portable toilet — are raised from the ground. Home is a small shelter. Water comes from a hose.

State's rabies problems worsen

By Associated Press
LAND O' LAKES — The state's rabies cases are on an upsurge, especially in west-central Florida, where the disease is on track to equal or surpass last year's caseload, experts say. A year ago, there were 124 cases confirmed statewide and 53 in the region lying south of Citrus County and north of Sarasota County. The state had about 80 cases a year in the two previous years. So far this year, a third of the states 73 cases have been recorded in that west-central area, state rabies specialist Rob Mullen told The Tampa Tribune for a story published Monday. Rabies is a nervous system disease, spread through the saliva and blood of infected animals. Fatal if untreated, it can be stopped in exposed humans through a series of shots. Animals contracting it usually must be destroyed. To prevent its spread, pet owners must vaccinate dogs and cats for rabies or risk

"If I'd have known there were that many rabies cases in my area, I would have been very careful. Now, when I go out, I carry a baseball bat. I don't want this to happen again."

-Kyle Skloff

Pin. Pet owners in some areas — such as Hillsborough County — must confine their animals, including cats, to their property. Tampa Bay may be a center for the disease because its rapidly growing urban areas encroach on woodland homes of wild animals harboring the disease, said John Dame, Polk director of environmental health services. They then infect dogs and cats, posing a direct threat to humans. In Pasco County, health officials declared a rabies alert June 22 after a rabid fox attacked 22-month-old Kyle Skloff and his mother, Michelle Skloff, in their Westley Chapel back yard.

"If I'd have known there were that many rabies cases in my area, I would have been very careful," Skloff said after the attack. "Now, when I go out, I carry a baseball bat. I don't want this to happen again." Pasco, Hillsborough and Polk counties are three of Florida's four leading counties for rabies, and had seven of the 13 cases recorded statewide in June. The fourth leading county, Jackson, is in the Florida Panhandle.

Pasco County has had five cases so far this year. Hernando County declared an alert June 3 after two cats turned rabid.

A rabies quarantine is in effect in Hillsborough. One more case was confirmed last week, bringing the year's total to nine. "We've had a steady influx of positive rabies cases," said Cindy Morris, Hillsborough environmental health supervisor. "That's why we haven't lifted the quarantine."

Blowing whistle on sea-trash dumping can gain rewards

By Associated Press
FORT LAUDERDALE — Passengers who reported illegal dumping from a cruise ship may reap the financial benefits of their environmental concerns. A federal ruling is expected soon on whether an award should be given to the five passengers on board a Princess Cruises Inc. ship who witnessed, reported and in one case videotaped bags of trash being thrown overboard. Their reports to federal authorities in 1991 makes them eligible for at least a share of $250,000 — half of the fine paid by the cruise line in the first case of ocean dumping prosecuted under a 1987 anti-pollution law. The witnesses who came forth said they'd been startled by the clatter of glass and metal as they watched the Florida Keys shoreline lights from the Regal Princess. As they looked down, they saw "large plastic bags being thrown out of the ship from a lower deck," witnesses Cynthia and Michael Bush of Winfield, Mo., wrote. The Bushes, Cynthia Bush's sister Melinda Schowengerdt and brother-in-law Mike Scott weren't the only ones watching. Al Levett of Ypsilanti, Mich., saw the bags being thrown into the ocean, grabbed his video camera, taped the dumping and later reported it to authorities. The tape not only made the case but induced the cruise line to settle in April, federal officials said.

"The videotape speaks 1,000 words," said Assistant U.S. Attorney Angel Cortinas of the U.S. Attorney's Office's environmental crimes division. "Once they were on videotape, there really was very little defense they could offer."

Officials with the Los Angeles-based cruise line, which advertises as "The Love Boat," have said they prohibit employees from illegal dumping. They agreed to settle the case by paying the maximum allowed under law to end the ordeal, they said.

The passengers were on the final night of a seven-day cruise from Fort Lauderdale to Cozumel, Mexico, on Oct. 25, 1991.

"We watched approximately 20 of these bags being discharged and heard the sound of glass breaking and cans rattling as they impacted the water, and we watched them disappear into the darkness behind the ship," the Bushes wrote in February to the Coast Guard Marine Safety Office in Miami.

Cynthia Bush and Schowengerdt question ship authorities about the dumping. An employee insisted they must be mistaken — the cruise line only dumped food scraps, which is legal.

Bush and Schowengerdt weren't satisfied. "I sincerely hope that someday soon a clear message can be sent to these shipping companies that such incidents of environmental abuse will not be tolerated," the Bushes wrote.

Marion County couple run primate-breeding ranch

By Associated Press
EUSTIS — Central Florida is home to one of the largest primate-breeding ranches in the country, but the business keeps a low profile, advertising in trade magazines and forgoing local promotion. From the highway below the Marion County ranch owned by Justin and Yvonne Finser, little indicates that beyond the stout fencing are some of the world's rarest and most endangered animals. The ranch is home to more than 40 species and sells some 50 animals a year. Nobody knows for sure how many primates are kept as pets. Since 1975, federal law has banned imports of wild primates as pets to help slow their disappearance from native habitats. Other hurdles are finding and affording a primate. Some cost thousands of dollars. Apart from smugglers, about the only source now is a breeder, such as Finser Exotics, possibly the nation's largest. It legally may sell the offspring of primates imported before 1975. Finser, a builder by trade, got started in his new line of work a decade ago when, during a building lull, he helped trappers trying to catch wild monkeys along the Silver River in Marion County. The monkeys were descendants of animals that escaped from a circus group more than 50 years ago and have been targeted at various times for removal by state wildlife and health officials.

POLICE BRIEFS

Meat theft

Sanford police arrested Alphonso Bradshaw, 33, of 144 Academy Avenue and Vergia H. Sutton, 34, of 130 Academy Avenue, Sanford, on Sunday. The pair had been identified as having taken $73.24 in meat from a store in Longwood. Longwood police obtained the license number on the vehicle reportedly used by Bradshaw and Sutton, and a search got underway by Sanford police as well as Seminole County Sheriff's deputies. The two were located on highway 17-92 near 20th Street by Sanford police. Each was charged with retail theft.

Bat beating

Sheriff's deputies arrested Raymond Walter Hartsfield, 26, 2028 Alexander Avenue, Sanford, on Saturday. Deputies said he is allegedly one of three men who broke into a rooming house on Southwest Road, and struck the occupant with a baseball bat. Hartsfield is the only one of the three who has been apprehended at this time.

Handcuffing difficulty

Robert Thomas Soper, 35, 326 Sir Lawrence Drive, Sanford, was arrested by sheriff's deputies near his home Friday. Deputies said they followed him after seeing him drive his vehicle in an unsafe manner. A deputy reported having difficulty in placing handcuffs on Soper, and called for assistance from Sanford and Lake Mary police officers. A search of his vehicle uncovered what officers called a brown leafy substance, and several items normally connected with drug use. Soper was charged with driving under the influence of alcohol, resisting arrest without violence, possession of marijuana, possession of drug paraphernalia, possession of an illegal weapon, failure to maintain a single lane, and refusal to accept or sign a summons.

Man arrested at bar

Sanford police arrested a man listed as John Doe, Sunday night, at a bar in the 2600 block of S. Park Avenue. Police said they were responding to a call regarding a theft, and when they arrived, saw a man attempting to run into another man with a pickup truck. When they apprehended the man in the pickup, they reported he resisted attempts to place him in the police vehicle. The man was charged with battery on a law enforcement officer, resisting arrest with violence, and aggravated assault. A computer check revealed the truck had been reported stolen in Casselberry, and the man was given the additional charge of grand theft auto.

Money stolen

Sanford police arrested Debbie Ann Blake, 29, 1316 Sanford Avenue, on Saturday. Police report a resident of the 500 block of 7th Street said Blake had stolen $23 in cash and a pack of cigarettes from an apartment. They said they chased the suspect, and eventually called police who apprehended Blake at 8th Street and Sanford Avenue. She was charged with burglary, but police said they were unable to locate any of the reported property said to have been taken from the apartment.

Indecent exposure

Phillip Wayne Mackey, 31, 611 Park Avenue, was arrested by Sanford police Friday. Officers said he had been accused of revealing himself during a disagreement with a woman, in the presence of a child. He has been charged with indecent exposure, and indecent exposure in the presence of a minor.

Warrant arrests

Richard Theodor Davis, 22, 1215 Magnolia Avenue, was arrested Sunday by Sanford police at 13th Street and Magnolia Ave. He was wanted for violation of parole on a conviction of battery.

Tony L. Harris, 26, 1110 E. 11th Street, was arrested by sheriff's deputies Friday. He was wanted on a warrant for dealing in stolen property.

Horace Knight, Jr., 25, 1103 Willow Avenue, was arrested by Sanford police Thursday in the 1500 block of French Avenue. He was wanted for failing to appear on a charge of driving with a suspended/revoked license.

Domestic violence

Edward Allen Yancey, 47, and Donna Ann Wilcox, 54, of 1922 S. Palmetto Avenue, were arrested by Sanford police at Wilcox's residence Friday. Police said they had been in a fight over a rent payment. Each was charged with battery, domestic violence.

Gregory Wade Schmidt, 26, 3202 S. Orlando Drive, was arrested at a restaurant by Sanford police Saturday following a fight with a female. He was charged with aggravated battery, domestic violence, and false imprisonment.

Darryl Craig Tate, 34, #8 William Clark Court, was arrested at his residence by Sanford police Friday following a fight with a female. He was charged with battery, domestic violence.

Incidents reported to Sanford police

Twenty 300 watt light bulbs and several tools were reported taken Friday during a business burglary in the 2600 block of Airport Blvd.

A pickup truck was reported stolen late Thursday or early Friday from a driveway in the 100 block of Mayfair Circle. Police said the vehicle was found Friday morning at the Park Avenue Trailer Park with minor dents and scratches on it.

$205 in lottery tickets and the ticket dispenser were reported stolen from a convenience store Saturday in the 4000 block of S. Orlando Drive.

A number of tools were reported stolen Sunday from a business in the 800 block of W. 13th Street.

Several items were reported missing Sunday, when the owners of a home in the 100 block of Country Club Circle returned from a two week vacation.

$480 in stereo equipment was reported stolen from a residence in the 1000 block of Silver Lake Drive Sunday. Police said a fire extinguisher was apparently used to break open windows.

A burglary attempt was reported Sunday in the 300 block of Mellonville Avenue. Police said someone had removed three glass window panes, but apparently ran when they set off a burglar alarm.

HIV-infected man to stand trial

Charge of attempted murder in attack of three boys

By The Associated Press

MIAMI — Florida's rape law is being tested in a case of an HIV-infected man charged with attempted first-degree murder in the attacks of three boys.

The case is believed to be one of the first in the country in which a defendant is accused of using the HIV virus as an attempted murder weapon, prosecutors said.

A few similar cases have been tried or are pending elsewhere in Florida or the nation. But Florida, unlike some states, has no specific laws prohibiting HIV carriers from attempting to transmit the lethal virus.

So prosecutors have begun putting the attempted murder charge to test rape cases, such as in the trial of Ignacio A. Perea, which is scheduled to begin today in Miami.

"If someone is HIV-positive and goes and rapes somebody, there is sufficient intent to bring attempted murder charges, but this is a developing legal area and a new application of the law," University of Miami law professor Bruce Wintick said.

Perea, 31, was employed at his father's bird-supply store when he was arrested in November 1991. He is accused in the attacks on three boys — two age 11 and one age 13 — who were pulled into a car, blindfolded and driven to either a warehouse or private home where they were raped.

He is charged with one count of attempted murder, three counts of sexual battery, and one count each of kidnapping and lewd assault.

Neither prosecutors nor defense lawyers have commented on whether the boys have tested positive for HIV.

An attempted murder conviction in the Perea case may provide an important precedent for South Florida prosecutors to bring such charges in other cases against HIV-infected rape suspects.

Seven months ago in Portland, Ore., a man was convicted of attempted murder and sentenced to nine years in prison for knowingly exposing a 17-year-old girl to the AIDS virus through sex.

In a similar case that has not gone to trial, a 21-year-old Jacksonville man arrested in March is charged with attempted murder for knowingly exposing a woman he was dating to HIV. In Oregon, a HIV-positive man is in jail awaiting trial on 26 counts of attempted murder and sexual abuse of neighborhood children.

Perea's lawyer, Jay Levine, asked Dade Circuit Judge Michael Chavies to try the attempted murder charge separately, but the judge refused.

Levine argued his client could not get a fair trial on the sexual battery and related charges if the jury knew he was HIV-positive. In a trial without the attempted murder charge, jurors would not be told about the virus.

"Like leprosy, AIDS carries a stigma so corrosive that a jury confronted with evidence of one's infection might well be inclined to return a verdict for that reason alone to ensure one's isolation and removal from society at large," Levine wrote.

Other defense lawyers agree. They say prosecutors scored an early victory by trying Perea on all charges at once.

"Because of the uniqueness of the attempted murder charge, the HIV aspect is going to be played up by prosecutors and become the feature of the trial," said lawyer Ed Shohat. "This will very likely hurt the defendant on the other charges."

Since the late 1980s, attempted murder charges have been brought against HIV-infected prison inmates or citizens accused of biting law enforcement officers. The cases have had mixed results.

In February, an appeals court upheld the conviction of an HIV-positive prisoner in New Jersey who bit a guard in 1989.

The attempted murder charge added 25 years to the prisoner's five-year sentence for robbery.

In Broward County, inmate Kelly Dobbins was acquitted on an attempted murder charge for biting a detention deputy on the finger. The jury said medical evidence did not prove the deputy would get AIDS from the bite.

Wrongly arrested man's lawsuit against police is ready to go to trial

By CHRISTINE HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — Tony Golino has vivid memories of the long, tortuous ordeal he says he endured after being named as the prime suspect in one of the city's most notorious homicides.

He says his life didn't get much better even after prosecutors conceded they arrested the wrong man in the July 1973 stabbing death of Penny Serra. "You're talking about a guy that has come a long way. But I'm still being treated like I'm the criminal," Golino said. "I've been vindicated to a degree but not to the extent I want to be."

Two decades after Serra was stabbed in a downtown parking garage, the case remains unsolved.

But Golino, the only person ever arrested in the case, may finally get his day in court.

A jury has been selected to hear his $40 million malicious prosecution lawsuit against four police officers. Opening statements are set for Wednesday.

Golino, 42, filed his lawsuit in January 1988, claiming police hid evidence of his innocence on arrest affidavits.

He claims police framed him because another suspect in the case, Serra's boyfriend Phillip DeLieto, married the niece of Blagio DiLieto, who served as a police chief and mayor during the long investigation.

"The fix was in here," Golino contends. "This was all planned." Blagio DiLieto denies the allegations.

Named in the lawsuit are Sgt. Robert Lillis, detectives Anthony DiLullo and Leonard Pastore, and officer Mary Fish MacDonald. Three of the officers still work in the department. Pastore is an investigator with the state's attorney's office.

The officers had argued the lawsuit should be dismissed because they made the arrest after a judge issued a finding of probable cause.

But the U.S. Supreme Court in June 1992 upheld an appellate court decision denying the officers immunity, ruling that probable cause might not have been found if vital information had not been concealed or misrepresented on Golino's arrest warrant.

Golino was under police surveillance for nine years before he was arrested in July 1984. He was released on $150,000 bond after spending a Fourth of July weekend in jail.

Police began investigating him in 1975 after his girlfriend, Joyce Carasone, told police he beat her and threatened to do the same thing to her as he had done to Penny Serra.

A successful Fourth of July

Another July 4th Independence Day observance has come and gone in Sanford. While there may have been a few flaws, the overall celebration was well received by possibly as many as 25,000 people.

Some of the tiniest toddlers may have been startled by the fireworks' loud bangs, but people of all ages were thrilled as the sky lit up with the explosions of gold and red, white & blue.

An event such as the one held in Sanford Sunday was not an easy celebration to arrange.

Without assistance from many area business leaders and hard work by members of the Sanford/Seminole Jaycees, it could not have taken place.

Fireworks exhibits not only require a great deal of expense, but require licensed pyrotechnicians to put on the display.

Arranging for the salute to the National Guard also required much work and advance preparation, as did the various shows such as the classic car exhibit, and many other events during the day-long festivities at Fort Mellon Park.

A great deal of the credit, for the fourth annual year, goes to Steve Alford, who again led the drive for fund-raising, for what he calls "People's Fireworks."

In addition to Alford, credit must also be given to the members of the Greater Sanford/Seminole Jaycees. They beat the streets in seeking donations from various merchants, business owners, and private residents. Their work should not go unheralded.

Last year, there were several problems in launching the fireworks, and the program started late. This year, everything went as scheduled. According to persons interviewed during and after the program, the fireworks were a delight to all who were on hand.

Orlando and Daytona Beach both had giant fireworks displays. But for a city with the population of Sanford, what was presented stands well above accomplishments by similar sized cities.

Like the initial signing of the Declaration of Independence, the observance of our nation's 217th anniversary went off with a bang. Thanks to everyone who made it happen.

County-wide law enforcement agency?

Ref. Julian Stenstrom's recent letter to the editor. "Would one law enforcement agency work county wide?"

Several months back I wrote that a one-law-enforcement agency would not only not work, but would be highly undesirable for the citizens as a whole.

There have been studies done that show that counties that do go metro do not save money, but in the long run end up spending more. Response time to calls goes down, and the political turmoil that becomes ever more evident tends to pit officers and former agencies at odds with each other. This does nothing constructive for morale; it only worsens it.

I don't know what little bird put this inspiring idea into Mr. Stenstrom's head, although I do have an idea who it might be, but if such a thing were implemented, it would be at the expense of good law enforcement protection. It is quite evident that there are only two people who really want this proposal to take off, and both of them run the Sheriff's Office.

Folks, you have to remember the old saying that "power corrupts, and total power corrupts completely." This is a truism, for human nature has proved this quote time and time again.

Fortunately, I don't believe that the citizens and the different city commissions want something like this (county-wide law enforcement) to take shape. Talking about it would be a waste of time, precious time that could be spent on more meaningful topics. Believe me, folks, if this were such a great idea it would've happened a long time ago. I believe that the people are smart enough to know the real motive behind this idea and that is power.

TV must curb violent programming

Coming soon to your local cable system: VTV, violent television, 24 hours a day of carnage and mayhem.

Sound absurd? Well, it's not far from reality. If you spent a 24-hour stretch channel surfing between regular and cable TV, you could immerse yourself in non-stop violence.

This was the finding of a study last year by the Center for Media and Public Affairs, a Washington, D.C., research outfit. The center was commissioned by TV Guide to monitor one day of programming to ascertain its violence content.

The center surveyed 10 channels — network, cable and independent — and recorded an average 100 acts of violence an hour. Most disquieting, the single most violent programming appearing on television was found in cartoons directed at children.

In fact, according to a study by the American Psychological Association, the average American child will view 8,000 murders and 100,000 other acts of violence before finishing elementary school. The average 27 hours a week kids spending watching TV — much of it violent — makes them more prone to aggressive and violent behavior as adolescents and adults.

Of course, TV executives have known this for a long time. One of the most comprehensive studies of the impact of violent TV was commissioned by CBS back in 1978. It found that teen-age boys who watched more hours of violent TV than average before adolescence were committing such violent crimes as rape and assault at a rate 49 percent higher than boys who watched fewer than average hours of violent TV.

So what did CBS and the other networks do about it? They put even more violent programming on the air.

In a provocative article in the spring issue of the quarterly journal, The Public Interest, Dr. Brandon Canterwell of the University of Washington makes a compelling case that television bears much responsibility for the level of violence in American society.

"There are many factors other than television that influence the amount of violent crime," he writes. "Nevertheless, the evidence indicates that if, hypothetically, television technology had never been developed, there would today be 10,000 fewer homicides each year in the United States, 70,000 fewer rapes, and 700,000 fewer injurious assaults. Violent crime would be half what it is."

The TV industry is finally starting to get the picture: It is putting too much violence on the air. On Aug. 2, there is to be major powwow in Hollywood, at which executives of the major broadcast and cable networks, as well as independent TV producers, will discuss the violence issue.

But it's just a big front. As recently as last December, the networks pledged to adhere to a list of voluntary guidelines on television violence. Here it is six months later and TV is as violent as ever.

TV execs lament that they would like to put more quality, non-violent programming on the air, but that the unwashed viewers will turn away from the tube in droves.

SARAH OVERSTREET

Judge Ginsburg is a symbol for us

President Clinton wasn't the only one with tears in his eyes when Ruth Bader Ginsburg finished her speech accepting a Supreme Court nomination.

It was so nice to hear a Supreme Court nominee not only credit the influence of her mother, but also use the opportunity to honor the generations of women who could only lay the foundation for the success she can actually experience. "I pray that I may be all that she would have been had she lived in an age when women could aspire and achieve and daughters are cherished as much as sons."

Her words touched me particularly because the older I become, the more I recognize my own mother's talents and realize how the date of her birth defined the narrow parameters of her life. But it was also gratifying that this woman poised to assume one of the most powerful positions in the country chose to focus our attention on all the unsung women who made it possible.

Friends of mine in higher education and corporate life have groused lately about the lack of historical perspective among some of the young women they come in contact with. Some of these women have little or no knowledge of the women's movement, and others believe it happened so long ago that they needn't bother with it. They don't see a need to be involved themselves, nor even keep informed about what's happening now with women in the world, in Washington or in their own states. It's all ancient history.

So the more women in power use their positions to direct our attention from whence we came, the more likely we can keep complacency from robbing us of what we've gained.

Another of Ginsburg's statements didn't get as much press, but it also served as an eloquent reminder: "I am indebted to so many for this extraordinary chance and challenge — to a revived women's movement in the 1970s that opened doors for people like me, to the civil rights movement in the 1960s from which the women's movement drew inspiration...."

I'm embarrassed to admit that when I think of the women's movement, my thoughts are most often of recent history, of the times I knew. I lose sight of the early periods of the movement, perhaps most importantly the times when it was dormant and we took a step backward.

Thanks, Judge, I needed that. In case you missed a great sidebar to the Ginsburg nomination, The New York Times carried an article on the judge's husband, Martin D. Ginsburg.

When Martin Ginsburg graduated from law school 35 years ago, his new wife transferred to another law school so she could follow him to his first job.

In the ensuing years, he returned the favor. Thirteen years ago, he left a successful law practice and tenured professorship to follow his wife to Washington, so she could become a federal judge. At the same time, Ginsburg sold all his stock so that his wife wouldn't have to worry about cases coming before her involving companies in which the family owned an interest.

Ruth Bader Ginsburg must feel like the luckiest person on Earth: standing on a pyramid formed by a husband as supportive of her career as she is of his, and the shoulders of generations of strong, courageous women.

I recognize my own mother's talents and realize how the date of her birth defined the narrow parameters of her life.

EPA campaign: Cut electricity use

"Basically, we're good capitalists." Paul Miles says in explaining why Nestle USA Inc. signed on to the Environmental Protection Agency's Green Lights program.

Green Lights' aim is to cut pollution by cutting the use of electricity for industrial and business lighting. The lower demand translates into less carbon dioxide, sulfur and nitrous oxides emissions from fossil fuel-fired electric power stations. The attraction that has drawn some 900 firms into the program to date is its voluntary emphasis on profitable investments in efficient lighting. The cost of upgrades to energy-saving fixtures is paid back by lower energy bills and, in many cases, rebates offered by electric utilities.

That's where firms like Nestle come in. "We were looking at Green Lights from an environmental side," says Miles, Nestle's energy program manager. "But we were looking at it even more strongly from the energy savings side."

Since joining Green Lights in November 1991, two of the lighting upgrades Nestle has completed include a beverage factory in Freehold, N.J., and an office building the company owns in Purchase, N.Y. At the factory, "we got rid of a ton of inefficient lighting and replaced it with very new, state-of-the-art, literally the best lighting technology available," Miles says. And the electric utility picked up the entire tab through its rebate program.

At the office building, a $160,000 upgrade was completed early this year with Consolidated Edison providing a $100,000 rebate and an estimated reduction in lighting bills for Nestle of $30,000 per year. Not a bad return on investment.

The two projects together are expected to lower the firm's electricity use by some 1.6 million kilowatt hours annually, with corresponding cuts of 2.3 million pounds of carbon dioxide, 20,000 pounds of sulfur dioxide and 8,500 pounds of nitrous oxides every year.

A similar story emerged from Columbia University's adoption of the Green Lights program at its Morningside Heights campus on New York City's Upper West Side. The job there mainly entailed replacing incandescent light bulbs with new compact fluorescents. The project cost $800,000, but with a $275,000 rebate and an annual savings of $200,000 on the lighting bill, the investment is producing a 33.8 percent internal rate of return.

According to an EPA accounting last January, Green Lights projects around the nation were lowering the demand for electricity by 95 million kilowatts annually and producing energy savings of $9.4 million.

Overall, the EPA estimates that the nation's electricity needs could be trimmed by 10 percent if efficient lighting were installed at all locations where it could be done at a profit.

That could help on several environmental fronts. The president has committed the nation to holding its greenhouse gas carbon dioxide emissions to 1990 levels by 2000. Sulfur dioxide that causes acid rain and nitrous oxides that threaten human health are both targets of 1990 Clean Air Act reform.

"From a public policy standpoint, we were looking for areas where EPA could offer a voluntary program for pollution prevention that would have a significant impact," says Bob Kwartin, the agency's Green Lights program director. "Lighting, because it's so wasteful and because the returns on lighting upgrades are so lucrative, was an obvious first place to turn."

Firms that sign on to Green Lights agree to survey all their domestic locations, to upgrade lighting where it is profitable and to complete the upgrades within five years.

Green Lights has been successful enough to prompt expansion of the idea into two new areas. One is called the Energy Star building program that addresses heating, ventilating and air-conditioning systems. "There's a lot of energy efficiency to be obtained in those systems as well and it's typically again profitable to do so," Kwartin says.

The second is the Energy Star computers program that has already enlisted over half of the domestic market. Under the program, manufacturers agree to produce computers that use two-thirds less electricity without sacrificing performance or increasing costs. The individual units will carry an Energy Star label.

The EPA also plans a residential program working with existing Green Lights partners to inform people in the workplace how they can take advantage of energy efficiency at home. "People are much more finicky about lighting in their homes than the typical office worker is about lighting in the office," Kwartin says. "So there's a lot of education that needs to go on just to deal with people's concerns."

If it saves money while reducing energy demand, you can bet a lot of people will be willing to learn.

Green Lights projects around the nation were producing energy savings of $9.4 million per year.

Cities prepare for Operation Rescue demonstrations locally

BY PATRICK DOLAN
Associated Press Writer

CLEVELAND — The anti-abortion organization Operation Rescue is planning 10 days of protests at several sites across the nation and Florida, beginning later this week.

The 10-day "Cities of Refuge" demonstration is designed to shut down abortion clinics in Cleveland, the Minneapolis-St. Paul area, San Jose, Calif., Philadelphia, the Dallas-Fort Worth area, Jackson, Miss., and several cities in Central Florida, including Melbourne.

Activists plan to demonstrate outside the Aware Woman Center for Choice in Melbourne, which has been the scene of repeated protests and more than 100 arrests.

The demonstrators have been jailed for violating an injunction that orders them to stay 36 feet from the clinic.

Our focus is going to be Aware Woman and I'd expect some of us will be breaking the injunction," said organizer Bruce Cagle. "It will be an incredibly positive event and a very exciting time for Melbourne."

Last spring, more than 600 protesters were arrested during Operation Rescue protests in Buffalo, N.Y. In the summer of 1991, police in Wichita, Kan., arrested more than 2,700 people during a 46-day clinic blockade. Some people were arrested more than once.

As plans for this summer's protests unfold, the target cities are making plans of their own.

Two Cleveland suburbs last week banned picketing on residents' driveways, obstructing traffic or pathways and disturbing the peace at a residence. Abortion opponents often demonstrate outside the homes of doctors, nurses and other clinic staff members.

The San Jose City Council approved a similar measure after doctors complained they had received threatening letters from abortion protesters.

Eric Johns of Operation Rescue and his wife, Michelle, have been in Jackson, Miss., since May.

"We hope to put these places out of business, expose abortionists to their community, embarrass them for what they do, expose staff workers at these places and eventually shut down the whole grisly abortion industry in the state of Mississippi," said Johns, 21.

"I think I have a biblical responsibility and am commanded by God to do what I'm doing."

Johns expects the protests to be non-violent but confrontational.

In Texas, Operation Rescue spokesman Tom Cyr said his group has targeted 13 clinics and some doctors' homes in Dallas and Fort Worth. Activists will pray, protest and offer

"sidewalk counseling."

Staff members at abortion clinics around the nation are getting set for the demonstrations.

"People should think about what Operation Rescue is going to cost them in taxes to pay for the extra police officers and security on duty. And then maybe the people would help keep these people from coming to our city," said Carol Westfall, Cleveland Surgi-Center spokeswoman.

"They will not close us down. If a patient wants an abortion, we will figure out a way to get them in the clinic," said Jeanette Hollis, spokeswoman for the Mississippi Women's Medical Clinic in Jackson.

Diane Straus, director of the Cherry Hill, N.J., Women's Center near Philadelphia, said she fears violence.

"These are not peaceful people," said Straus, whose clinic was the target of one of Operation Rescue's first demonstrations after it formed in 1985.

Much of the fear centers on the March 10 shooting of Dr. David Gunn, 47, outside a Pensacola, abortion clinic. Michael F. Griffin, an abortion protester, has been charged with first-degree murder.

According to an arrest report by Longwood patrolman K.J. Shea, a teenage girl was shot in the face with a pellet gun during the fight in Winter Springs.

Early Monday morning, some of the party goers were traveling on Seminole Avenue in Longwood where bottles, rocks, bricks and under blocks were thrown. Police were called to a convenience store on SR 434 because a girl was reported injured. One girl suffered several broken teeth when she was hit in the mouth with a bottle thrown into her car. Another girl received a severe facial cut caused by a thrown block which required plastic surgery, according to Shea. Most of the victims were 16 and 17 years old.

About 25 gang members were lined up by police and the four who were arrested were identified by the victims in the Longwood incident.

Sporlock and Moore were jailed Monday and held on $2,000 bail each.

The investigation into the incident is continuing.

Signs

city welcome signs, which will soon be installed at main artery entrances to the city.

The exact locations for the placement of the signs proposed by the waterfront committee have not been determined, but the signs are expected to dot the waterfront along Lake Monroe.

In addition to the lakefront area, they may be posted along a scenic drive to incorporate portions of the downtown commercial district and the historic residential district as well.

The committee is also working with the Florida Department of Transportation regarding the possibility of incorporating the welcome logo into the historic signs on Interstate 4.

The master plan established by the committee with input from public meetings is presently under study at the University of Florida, primarily with the Department of Agriculture. It has been considered as similar to other plans submitted by other municipalities, and may involve landscape architecture and planning as well as architecture.

Marder said the project would involve significant preparation and lead time over the course of the coming year. He said the results of the plan may be submitted to the Regional Bicycle and Pedestrian Committee.

The next meeting of the steering committee is now scheduled for July 14, beginning at 4:30 p.m., in the City Manager's Conference Room of the Sanford City Hall, 300 N. Park Avenue.

People for Responsible Airport Development representative Lance Markley told the Airport Authority this morning that they were not supplying the people with enough information regarding airport development which may increase noise problems along landing and take-off areas.

Noise

serious consideration to installing an instrument landing system, (ILS) from the east," he said.

"Also, if aircraft at times are forced to use the western area for take-offs," he added, "a north turn-out should be required."

Lance Markley also commented "I know the board is going to consider a general statement in planning and noise-related activities at this meeting," he said. "It is very broad however, but it may be a good start."

"We want an ad-hoc committee set up to discuss expansion of the airport's operational guidelines," he said. "We also want to have some improved communications. There is not enough information being supplied to the people by the Airport Authority."

Markley said he had been in touch with city and county governments as well as Senator Bob Graham's office, which promised to help the group in examining Federal Aviation Authority guidelines.

Airport Aviation Director Steve Cooke explained the authority and FAA are conducting a study of the situation which is not complete. "We will be holding a workshop at the end of August on this," he said, "and we expect to have a response on most of your concerns by that time."

The FAA's Rick Alberts explained the intent of the study is to identify how aircraft operate in conjunction with land use at the present time, as well as plans for the future. "Right now," he said, "about 70 percent of the aircraft approach the airport from the east because of the landing system and the location of the ILS. But we are certainly considering the south and eastern areas because there is more open land."

Commenting about the people in neighborhoods which were established when the airport was already in existence, Connery said, "I will agree the airport was here before the people moved in, but it was only for general aviation then."

"Now," he continued, "the commercial aircraft are beginning to use the airport, and the people were here before that started."

Cooke said the study is expected to be completed within the next two months. "It won't be set firmer at that time," he said. "Local governments and the people will still have the opportunity to give input into the plan, that's the main reason why we are bringing this to a public hearing."

"I believe we are actually all on the same wave-length," he added. "From the meeting, we will be making recommendations to the FAA for a number of things including an additional ILS system for approaches from the east, and funding with which to do some of these changes."

The Authority voted unanimously to accept the recommendations made by the People for Responsible Airport Development, and consider incorporating them into the master plan which is to be developed.

The Authority also approved sending letters to Lake Mary, Sanford and Seminole County, asking that the Authority be given consideration whenever land use changes are presented.

The general statement of the airport's commitment in planning and noise related activities and recommendations was also unanimously adopted.

In addition to representatives and spokespersons for PRAD, a number of Lake Mary officials were also on hand for this morning's meeting. They included City Commissioner Gary Brender, City Manager John Litton, and City Planner Matt West.

trimming four neighborhood deputies and two corrections officers from the sheriff's shopping list. After the trim, the total first-year cost of the sheriff's employees will be $591,000.

Eslinger said he will review his funding request to see what spending can be shifted to the six employees in an effort to retain them.

"The thing we hear more than anything else is we need more deputies in the neighborhoods," said Eslinger. "It's awfully important to us to accomplish these programs."

Eslinger wants to continue his efforts to increase community service and "civilianize" his force to free more sworn deputies for law enforcement duties. Four of his proposed hires are field service officers, which are non-sworn uniformed civilians to take reports in non-hazardous situations.

Eslinger reports that in 1992, the six FSOs hired last year responded to 7,289 calls, freeing sworn deputies to perform 5,367 hours of patrol and response duties.

Salaries for the four FSOs, along with their equipment and benefits, will cost about $87,000, compared to more than $192,000 to hire four community policing officers. The CPOs are sworn deputies assigned to one community. Two such deputies are now assigned to Midway and Eslinger had sought eight more to be assigned to eight other neighborhoods.

Other positions sought by Eslinger include two criminal investigators, one drunken driving traffic deputy, two City-County Investigative Bureau agents and two corrections officers. Eslinger had sought four COs.

In the Public Works Department, Rabun is seeking a six-man ditch-digging crew for the Roads Division to help maintain drainage systems. The county is under a state requirement to improve drainage systems and a federal requirement to clean up stormwater flowing to lakes and rivers. The six-man crew and equipment will cost about $521,000 during the first year, which includes $366,000 for equipment.

Rabun is also seeking a three-person flagging crew to provide traffic control for the 15 Roads Division work crews. The county now has one flagging crew. When traffic control is needed and the crew isn't available, work crew members are delegated for the task.

In the Solid Waste Division, Rabun is seeking five employees to man the Small Materials Recovery Facility at the Central Transfer Station. The SMRF allows recyclables from apartments and businesses to be separated for sale. The facility is now operated by transfer station staff when time allows. County officials hope apartment and business recycling will allow them to reduce their garbage flow by 30 percent next year.

Staffing requests in other departments include:

- six firefighter-paramedics to man a transport unit at Station 41 in Midway.
- an administrative aide for the two deputy county managers, who share one aide now.
- a six-person construction crew to perform renovations and repairs at county buildings.
- a coordinator to schedule teams and leagues in the Parks and Recreation Division.
- two operators to staff the Yankee Lake sewage treatment plant, expected to be in full operation next year.
- two building inspectors to provide better roof inspection and complaint follow-up, and
- two probation officers to meet the growing demand to supervise released county inmates.

Sibling shoots stepsister

By Associated Press

FRUITLAND PARK — A 14-year-old shot his younger stepsister while baby-sitting, leaving a note taped to the door for his parents before running for help, police said.

The teen-ager shot the 10-year-old girl once in the head with a .22-caliber rifle and then ran for help, leaving the note, the Lake County Sheriff's office said. Fruitland Park police found the boy running toward the police station and returned him to the house, where the dead child lay in a bedroom.

"I've done something wrong. Babies fine. (Name withheld)" not, I'm at police station, sheriff's Lt. Chris Daniels said the note read.

Two other children, a 2-year-old boy and 3-year-old girl, slept through the shooting, the sheriff's office said.

The teen was interrogated overnight by sheriff's investigators and was charged with first-degree murder early today, Daniels said.

"We're not releasing details about the motive right now," Daniels said. "We believe we know the motive, but we are awaiting results of forensic tests and still investigating."

He said the case would be presented to a grand jury, which will determine whether the youngster will be tried as an adult. He is now charged as a juvenile and has been placed in a detention facility run by the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services.

It was the second time in less than two weeks that a Central Florida teen-ager shot and killed a child while baby-sitting.

A 9-year-old boy died June 24 in Volusia County when a 16-year-old baby-sitter shot him accidentally with a .44-caliber Magnum revolver. The older boy, who was not related to the victim, removed the gun from a locked cabinet, investigators said. That case also remains under investigation.

Hog Heaven

Twinkies, Snickers and Big Macs from your own kitchen

By MARY MACVEAN
AP Food Writer

NEW YORK — As a true-blue American given the chance to get in on just one top-secret secret, you would choose the recipe for the special sauce on a Big Mac, right? Or maybe for Snickers bars?

Sit back. Hog Heaven is here. In "Top/Secret Recipes," Todd Wilbur speaks to the cravings of the masses who have made wealthy the makers of Big Macs, Snickers and 40 other yummys, including Reese's Peanut Butter Cups, Kahlua Coffee Liqueur, Aunt Jemima Maple Syrup and Kentucky Fried Chicken Original Recipe Fried Chicken.

It takes work, of course, to make this food at home. But it took five long years for Wilbur to figure out recipes that imitate the taste and appearance of popular brand-name foods.

The hardest item to nail down for the 29-year-old Wilbur, who's not a professional but says he's been cooking since age 9, was the filling for his version of Hostess Twinkies. (He provides a detailed drawing for getting the cream into the cake.)

"I did a lot of the sleuthing for this by reading ingredient labels," Wilbur says, adding that on Twinkies the listing for natural and artificial flavors didn't leave him many clues.

"Obviously it had vanilla, but there was something else," which turned out to be lemon flavoring, he says.

To find the key to Wendy's chili, he bought some, dumped it in a sieve and rinsed off the sauce. The surprise ingredient was celery.

His biggest disappointment? He couldn't perfect Oreos. The white filling was satisfactory, he says, but the fudgy, slightly burnt taste of the cookies eluded him.

He considers his best recipe his Mrs. Fields Chocolate Chip Cookies. They are made, he says with all due immodesty, from "the best chocolate chip cookie recipe ever put to paper."

He thought the base of Mrs. Fields Peanut Butter Dream Bars tasted like a cookie, so he called a store and asked, Sure enough, an employee told him, crumbled cookies.

Otherwise, he says, he contacted no companies, and none has contacted him.

"I did not swipe, heist, bribe or otherwise obtain any formulas through coercion or illegal means," he writes in his foreword.

In fact, he says, the companies should be flattered.

Burger King spokeswoman Cori Zywtow agrees.

"There are 1,023 ways for a customer to order a Whopper," she says. "Hats off to Todd for trying to re-create one of the ways."

With 700 million Whoppers sold a year, the company isn't exactly worried that home cooks will take over the business.

Neither do candy companies need worry: They sell 3 billion pounds of candy a year to sweet-toothed Americans.

Still, Wilbur is climbing some best-seller lists with his $10 Plume paperback and having a great time in the process, even fooling Regis Philbin in a televised taste comparison.

Wilbur quit his job as a television reporter in Allentown, Pa., about a year and a half ago to work on the book. He may never go back.

"Top Secret Recipes: The Sequel"? "That might be a possibility. That might very well be a possibility," he says.

After all, this is a man whose eyes go dreamy when he recalls eating frozen Ding Dongs as a child, picking off the chocolate icing. "Oh, man ..."

'The Firm' knocks 'Jurassic Park' from top spot

By JENNIFER BOWLES
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES — In "Jurassic Park," a lawyer gets eaten by a dinosaur, but this weekend the legal thriller "The Firm" gobbled up the dinosaur adventure, debuting at No. 1 at the box office with $26 million.

However, "Jurassic" set yet another earnings record.

"The Firm," starring Tom Cruise as an attorney whose job is outsmarting his employer, the mob, led in ticket sales from Friday to Sunday, industry sources said Sunday.

Final box office figures were to be released Tuesday.

"Jurassic" was No. 2 with receipts of about $20 million, pushing the film's four-week take to more than $200 million.

"Jurassic" surpassed the $200 million mark on Saturday, only its 23rd day of release, beating the industry record of 32 days set by "Batman" in 1989.

The romantic comedy "Sleepless in Seattle," starring Meg Ryan and Tom Hanks, came in third with $12 million in ticket sales, while "Dennis the Menace," starring Mason Gamble as the pint-sized pain, was No. 4 with $7.8 million.

The re-released Disney animated classic "Snow White" placed fifth with $6.9 million, followed by the Pauly Shore comedy "Son-in-Law" which debuted in sixth with $5.2 million.

Arnold Schwarzenegger's "Last Action Hero" continued to plummet, earning only $4.8 million in its third week. The $80 million film opened with $15.3 million and earned only $6.1 million in its second week of release.

"What's Love Got To Do With It," the high-energy life story of singer Tina Turner, earned $3.8 million for the No. 8 spot, followed by Sylvester Stallone's "Criminager" with $2.5 million.

The inner-city drama, "Menace II Society" came in 10th with $1.2 million.

Clinton's shield daughter after TV wisecrack about her looks

By The Associated Press

BALTIMORE — A sketch about Chelsea Clinton was cut out of a recent rerun of "Saturday Night Live," and an actor involved apologized to the White House for remarks about the 13-year-old's looks, a newspaper reported today.

In a "Wayne's World" sketch, characters Garth and Wayne suggested Chelsea isn't as attractive as Vice President Al Gore's daughters.

Mike Myer, who plays the part of Wayne, wrote an apology letter to the Clintons. The (Baltimore) Sun reported.

"We felt, upon reflection, that if it was in any way hurtful, it wasn't worth it," executive producer Lorne Michaels said. "She's a kid, a kid who didn't choose to be in public life."

The moves reflect how zealously the Clintons guard Chelsea's private life. President Clinton decided against taking Chelsea and her friends with him to a summit meeting in Japan this week.

"She didn't want to be a big object of public interest," he said at a luncheon Friday.

Michaels said his show treated then 9-year-old Amy Carter "a little rougher" during the 1970s.

Mary Hoyt, Rosalynn Carter's former press secretary, said the Carters' policy was to try to tell the press as much as was appropriate about their daughter.

Clinton pledges summit will attack economic woes

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
AP Economics Writer

TOKYO — World leaders converged on Tokyo today to attack the vexing problem of chronic unemployment around the globe as President Clinton expressed optimism that progress could be achieved on a trade agreement with Japan.

But wide disagreements on a host of economic issues and the weak standing of the participants in this year's seven-nation summit raised serious questions about just how much Clinton and the other leaders will be able to accomplish.

Clinton and the other leaders landed in brilliant sunshine at Tokyo's Haneda Airport where they were greeted by officials of Japan's Foreign Ministry.

Neither Clinton nor the other two early arrivals, Italian Prime Minister Carlo Ciampi and Canadian Prime Minister Kim Campbell, made any statements.

Also scheduled to arrive today were British Prime Minister John Major and Germany's Helmut Kohl. French President Francois Mitterrand was not arriving until Wednesday, the day the summit officially begins.

The administration had originally hoped to use Clinton's trip to Tokyo to pressure Japan to make its markets more open and set goals for increasing foreign imports as a way of shrinking America's huge $50 billion trade deficit with Japan.

But Japanese Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa is now regarded as a lame duck with the possibility that his party could lose its 38-year grip on power in elections scheduled for July 18.

In a clear recognition of political realities, Clinton was scheduled to hold discussions with Japanese opposition leaders immediately following his talks with Miyazawa.

Still, the administration insisted that it had not given up hopes of reaching a trade agreement with Japan. Although talks last week broke off with both sides far apart, the United States sent its negotiating team back to Tokyo after Miyazawa indicated Japan was willing to compromise.

Asked about the chances that a framework agreement could be reached, Clinton said he believed progress was being made in the talks and he praised Miyazawa's proposal as a "very good letter."

Miyazawa said negotiators were "working very hard" and "if there is a meeting of the minds there is no reason" why an agreement could not be completed.

Talks were also being held on a second divisive trade issue — a seven-year effort to rewrite the rules of global trade. The leaders at the economic summit have pledged repeatedly to wrap up these discussions, being held under the auspices of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

GATT General Director Peter Sutherland sent a stark message Monday, saying the Group of Seven summit nations must make headway this week to have any chance to complete the talks, which involve 114 nations, by a Dec. 15 deadline.

Speaking to reporters in Geneva, Sutherland said progress was critical "if the G-7 are serious about attacking the root of chronic long-term unemployment, about reigniting growth and prosperity."

In a San Francisco address before leaving for Tokyo, Clinton sounded a similar theme, warning of a "global crisis" because of the inability to create jobs. He said he would use his first overseas trip as president to search for ways to expand trade and international economic cooperation.

The annual gathering of the world's seven richest industrial countries — the United States, Japan, Germany, Britain, France, Canada and Italy — was scheduled to get under way Wednesday with elaborate arrival ceremonies at the ornate Akasaka Palace.

In addition to discussing trade, the summit leaders were expected to devote their three days of talks to exploring other ways to bolster global growth, with pressure expected on Japan and Germany, the world's two other economic superpowers, to do more to stimulate domestic demand.

Russian President Boris Yeltsin was scheduled to meet with the summit leaders on Friday to discuss the status of a promised $28.4 billion Russian aid package.

Security in Tokyo was extremely tight, with 36,000 police called out in an effort to avoid a repeat of the problems the last time Japan hosted an economic summit in 1986. The outdoor arrival ceremonies that year were marred when extremists fired homemade rockets over the heads of then-President Ronald Reagan and other dignitaries.

Crisis: Migrating humans

By EDITH M. LEDERER
Associated Press Writer

LONDON — The unprecedented growth in migration "could become the human crisis of our age," the U.N. Population Fund said today.

People are moving from rural areas to cities on a scale unknown in history, and more than 100 million migrants have left their home countries in search of a better life, the fund's annual State of World Population report said.

"Migration has always been a feature of development," the report said, "but today's migrants are pushing into territory occupied by others."

In world trade, the $66 billion in remittances sent each year from workers overseas to their families at home are second in value only to oil exports, the report said.

Yet the movement of millions of people annually is now straining both industrialized and developing countries, the fund concluded.

"Concern with migration extends from developing countries, faced with bursting cities and a neglected rural sector, to industrialized countries, faced with the potential for an uncontrollable tide of people from poorer countries," the report said.

But pressures encouraging migration are growing.

According to the United Nations, rural poverty, high fertility and environmental deterioration continue to drive 20 million to 30 million of the world's poorest people annually to towns and cities.

By the year 2000, the report said, 90 percent of the poorest in Latin America and the Caribbean will be city-dwellers, along with 40 percent in Africa and 45 percent in Asia.

With an estimated 100 million international migrants worldwide, the proportion of people living outside their country of birth approaches 2 percent of the world's population and will grow, the fund said.

That total includes an estimated 37 million people who have fled violence, drought, environmental destruction and other disasters, the report said.

Global media also continue to lure migrants to richer countries, the fund said.

As these pressures increase, however, it said "the options for migrants become more limited" because cities in their own countries are bulging, and many industrialized nations are shutting their gates.

The result is an "atmosphere of crisis," the fund said.

Easing the pressures that drive migrants into big cities and across international boundaries should become a top international priority, it said.

"The only effective means to reduce migration pressure over the long term are to slow population growth; to stimulate economic growth and job creation at home, and promote the development of the individual and the family as the basic economic and social unit," it said.

The world will add a record-breaking 98 million people per year this decade, the vast majority in Africa, Asia and Latin America, it said.

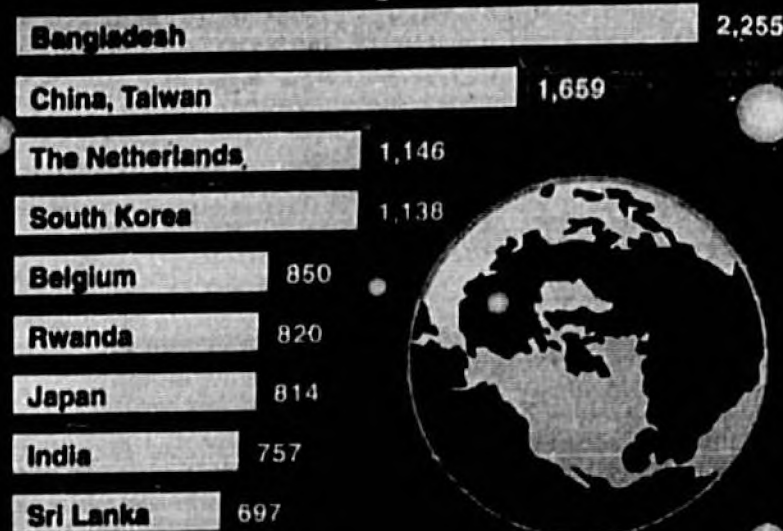

The 1993 global population of 5.57 billion is projected to increase to 6.25 billion in 2000, 8.5 billion in 2025 and 10 billion in 2050, the fund said.

Women make up almost half of all those who move.

Investments in improving the status of women and such services as health, education and family planning would "help to create an atmosphere in which migration becomes one choice among many," the report said.

It's a small world

World's most densely populated countries or areas, 1991. Persons per square mile

Note: Figures exclude densely populated countries with populations below 5 million.

Bangladesh was by far the most densely populated major country in 1991, with well over 2,000 people per square mile. Taiwan was a distant No. 2.

Fed meets to plan monetary strategy

By DAVE SKIDMORE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Federal Reserve policy makers once keen to hike interest rates probably will hold off in the face of new evidence that economic growth paused in June, analysts say.

The Fed's key policy making group, the Federal Open Market Committee, was to meet behind closed doors today and Wednesday to shape its monetary strategy for the rest of the year.

At its last meeting on May 18, the committee shifted from a "neutral" policy stance to one biased toward nudging rates higher, according to published reports.

However, it never actually raised rates, and now many economists believe that won't happen until the end of this year at the earliest.

Recent statistical reports show inflation pressures abating and suggest the economy entered a bit of a lull in June — conditions that do not argue for higher rates.

"There is nothing on the immediate horizon, meaning the next month or two, that would cause the Fed to tighten," said economist Stuart G. Hoffman of PNC Bank Corp. in Pittsburgh. "But ... there will be upward pressure on short-term rates developing sometime in the fourth quarter."

Consumer prices rose just 0.1 percent in May, a third of the average monthly increase during the first four months of the year.

In June, unemployment edged up to 7 percent from 6.9 percent. Consumer confidence, according to a Conference Board survey, slipped to a 10-month low. And manufacturing activity, as gauged by the National Association of Purchasing, suffered a third straight decline, falling back into recessionary territory.

Meanwhile, a cut in German interest rates last week took some pressure off U.S. rates.

Short-term rates — which the Fed has the most influence over — have been remarkably stable. The federal funds rate, the interest charged between banks on overnight loans, has been 3 percent for 10 months, and the discount rate, which the Fed charges on its own loans, has been 3 percent for a year.

Meanwhile, long-term rates, which key off the bond market, are falling again after a temporary increase in May. Mortgage rates are cheaper now than at any time in the past 21 years.

In the face of faster growth and an accompanying increase in loan demand, which economists predict for the second half of this year, there could be upward pressure on both long- and short-term rates.

But the Fed probably will be cautious for now because there are too many factors that could cause growth to fall short of expectations, including the weak economies of key trading partners, Japan and Germany, and expected federal tax increases to reduce the deficit and expand health coverage.

"There's an underlying impulse for expansion in the economy but it's frozen and stopped in its tracks by all of the tax increase talk in Washington," said economist David

Jones of Aubrey G. Lanston & Co. in New York.

Democrats in Congress who just voted for higher taxes are well aware of the dampening effect that could have on the economy and want the Fed to compensate by keeping interest rates low.

"I have been concerned ... about the impact of the president's deficit reduction program on our economy," said Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee. "I think it's doubly important that the Fed pick up the slack and that we move forward without unduly alarmist concerns about inflation."

Sasser's comments came last week at a Senate Budget Committee hearing at which Paul A. Samuelson, a Nobel Prize-winning economics professor from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, spoke of "the Fed's vital duty to lean against the winds of a self-aggravating recession."

"I told him it was time to cash it in. He started to tremble. Then he realized I was talking about his Watt-Saver Certificates."

He didn't know what he had coming to him.

After FPL's free Home Energy Survey, they gave him Watt-Saver Certificates. Those tell him the amount FPL will contribute towards contractor-installed energy-efficient window treatments, ceiling insulation, a solar water heater or a heat recovery unit. I told him to call 1-800-DIAL-FPL now for a list of FPL participating independent contractors, so he could make the next move.

LAKE MARY — What a difference...

The Marlins' (the summer team from Oviedo High School) scored three runs in the fourth inning and four runs in the fifth inning to overcome a 1-2 deficit and were able to best the Mudcats (the Lake Mary High School summer team) 4-1 in the opening game.

In the night game Saturday, Marlins had hits and home runs...

The sweep was a nice send-off for the Marlins, who will leave early Thursday morning for Tallahassee...

Despite allowing two runs in the first inning and three runs over the first three innings, Mike Ruginius was the winning pitcher in the opener. After the slow start, he outgave up one more run in the fifth inning before giving way to...

Mudcats/Marlins continue a July 4th holiday tradition

In years gone by, Major League baseball teams always played a doubleheader on the Fourth of July. But that tradition has gone the way of geonics and team loyalty.

But if you still enjoy a day at the ball park, Lake Mary High School was the place to be Monday evening as the Lake Mary Mudcats hosted the Oviedo Marlins in an NABF (National Amateur Baseball Federation) twinbill.

While the Marlins pulled off a doubleheader sweep, the Mudcats did have their moments. In the above photo, Bryan Schumaker (No. 22) slides in safely ahead of a tag by the Marlins' John Salas.

Monday night at Deleonia, the Americans again got good production from its offense...

From Staff Reports

Altamonte will remain on the road tonight as the Americans of manager Rick Alexander and coach Gary Warden will travel to Ocoee to take on the winner of Monday night's contest between Appleton and the Cassberry Americans at Oviedo. Game time is 8:30 p.m.

Nick Alexander was outstanding against Deleonia as he struck out 11 and did not walk a batter in the seven-inning outing. The full season record was discontinued.

Tom Alexander paced the Altamonte Americans to a 4-0 victory Monday night. He went three for four, struck out and drove in three runs.

Tom's contributing were Nick Alexander...

two for four, one sacrifice fly, one RBI, Josh Bond one for two, three walks, one RBI, Danny Grandori one for two, one walk, one RBI, Andy Staples one for three, one RBI, Sean Reese one for four and Brian Tomlinson zero for two, three walks.

Doing the damage in Saturday's win were Reese, two for three, one double, two walks, Joe McCreight, two for four, two RBIs, Bond two for five, one home run, two RBIs, Nick Alexander, two for five, one double, two RBIs, Brian Young two for five, two RBIs, Shawn Kirsch one for two, one home run, one RBI, two walks, and Dominic Shaw one for four, one home run, one RBI.

Lake Mary Summer Track Series opens

While only 17 runners showed up Monday night, there were still a lot of spectators in the stands and a lot of people helping on the meet.

A lot of parents and friends showed up, said Gibson. And a lot of people helped a helping hand to get the meet going. A crowd of about 100 people was in the stands, and about 100 people were helping on the meet.

When Piniella needs a hitter he just calls on his cousin

By JIM COUN AP Sports Writer

SEATTLE — When the Seattle Mariners needed another hitter, they stayed in the family.

"We know Dave ever since he was born," Seattle manager Lou Piniella said of Dave Magadan, the Mariners' most recent acquisition. "We haven't been in constant contact, but I've followed his career very closely."

The 30-year-old Magadan happens to be Piniella's cousin and godson.

The Mariners' trade with the Florida Marlins for Magadan on June 27 — for outfielder Henry Cotto and minor-league pitcher Jeff Darwin — wasn't all about family business, though.

"We needed another left-handed bat in the lineup and somebody who is professional like Dave is," Piniella said. "He gives us a professional bat."

With 1992 AL batting champion Edgar Martinez out with a pulled hamstring, Magadan will play third against right-handers and be the designated hitter against lefties.

The Mariners believe they can challenge in the second half of the season and win the AL West — a division in which no team has dominated.

"The last week and a half have been so surprising," Magadan said. "I'm just happy to be here right in the middle of a pennant race. Hopefully, I can help us win some games and get us on top."

Both Magadan and Piniella were born in Tampa, Fla. Magadan remembers traveling with his parents in the summers to different cities to see Piniella play.

"I wouldn't say we're close," he said. "Close enough, I guess."

Magadan played six seasons with the New York Mets. Piniella was in New York for some of that time managing the Yankees. Later, Piniella managed against Magadan's Mets in Cincinnati.

When Piniella left the Reds and became manager of the Mariners after last season, he attempted to lure Magadan as a free agent. Instead, Magadan signed with the expansion Marlins.

A .292 hitter in six seasons with the Mets, he signed a two-year contract with the Marlins for $700,000 this year and $800,000 next year.

Magadan thought he could grow old gracefully in his home state and then retire. In 66 games with the Marlins, he hit .286 with four home runs and 29 RBIs.

"I figured it was finally the time in my career when I was going to be stable," he said with a laugh. "I was always the subject of trade rumors in New York. I really thought, for the first time, that I'd be able to settle down."

The Marlins changed plans when they were able to acquire third baseman Gary Sheffield, last season's NL batting champion, from San Diego.

"I understand why they did it," Magadan said. "Gary Sheffield is one of the best players in the game and they had a chance to get him."

"But I was still disappointed. I thought they were going to commit to me for a couple of years and it was my understanding that they didn't have the money to get somebody like that. I guess you live and learn, though."

Magadan hit .250 in his first seven games with the Mariners, but doesn't know what will become of him when Martinez gets back.

"I'm sure if I'm swinging the bat good then, I'll still get my at-bats," he said. "If not, then I'll have to accept whatever I get."

Piniella has installed Magadan as the No. 2 hitter in the Mariners' lineup.

"Dave is a patient hitter," he said. "He allows our leadoff hitter to steal a base. He'll allow us to get in a lot of running situations. He's got a great on-base percentage."

"So he'll get on base for Griffey and Buhner and the rest of the guys in the middle of our lineup. Plus he's really improved at third base."

Sampras, Graf can't enjoy wins

By STEPHEN WILSON AP Sports Writer

LONDON — This year's Wimbledon champions had little chance to savor their victories. Steffi Graf got sick and Pete Sampras got no respect.

While Graf left town because of a stomach problem and missed the Champions' Dinner, Sampras may have felt ill when he saw some of the headlines describing his four-set triumph over fellow American Jim Courier.

"It's Pete Samprazzzz," cracked the Daily Mirror. "Bored on the Fourth of July."

"Samp-Prazzzzz," blared the Daily Star. "Big Bore Pete is Chimpily the Best."

While some commentators praised Sampras for his smooth, serve-and-volley game, the prevailing opinion was that Sunday's match and the players were dull and uninspiring.

"It is hard to embrace a young man with the demeanor of a gloomy robot," the Daily Express said of Sampras.

"Sampras, claiming his inheritance on an unrivaled stage, should have been the stuff of legend," wrote columnist Michael Calvin in the Daily Telegraph. "He conspired with Courier, his childhood friend, in reducing a game of infinite variety to the level of tractor-pulling."

The Guardian said, "It is true that the absence of atmosphere at the final was partly that these two young men ... do not inspire much passion in the ordinary spectator ... They do not have John McEnroe's magnificent torment nor (Andre) Agassi's flair for self-promotion."

Graf, meanwhile, was reported recovering at home in Germany after missing Sunday night's traditional dinner with stomach troubles.

"I think it was the effect of all the painkilling pills she took during the tournament," Graf's father, Peter, was quoted as saying in the Evening Standard.

Graf said his daughter played with terrible pain in her right foot during the tournament, flew home to Germany for treatment and received an injection just before beating Jana Novotna in the final for her fifth Wimbledon title.

Graf has suffered from an inflamed tendon in her right foot since the French Open last month. Peter Graf said the injury was worse than previously acknowledged.

"She was more injured than people knew, and if it was up to me, she wouldn't have played Wimbledon," he told British newspapers. "I wanted her to pull out. I was more concerned about her being able to play two years from now than winning another title."

"This was the most pain you have seen her in. It shows how brave she is and how much Wimbledon means to her. If it was any other tournament, she wouldn't have done it."

In addition, Graf was disturbed by intruders who repeatedly trespassed on her family's property in Bruhl, Germany, prompting her father to pull a gun on the invaders.

"In two weeks, 18 people came over the wall of our house," Peter Graf said. "Sometimes I had to call the police or set the dogs loose, other I times I threatened them with my gun or my fists."

During the first week, a man who had been stalking Graf was ejected from the Wimbledon grounds after shouting at her during a match.

Keep us informed

The Sanford Herald welcomes news and announcements of health issues, classes and seminars available to the public.

The following suggestions are recommended to expedite publication:

All items should be typed or written legibly and include the name and a daytime phone number of a person who can be contacted to answer any questions we might have.

The deadline for publication is noon Thursday before publication.

Worthy of honor

Scouts assemble to honor fellow members, welcome new faces

By HERMAN SCHROEDER
Herald Correspondent

SANFORD — Boy Scout Troop #34 held a Court of Honor in McKinley Hall at the First United Methodist Church, 419 Park Ave.

Jim Kraemer, scoutmaster, welcomed everyone and discussed plans of the troop going to Camp Daniel Boone near Asheville, N.C.

Doug Pope gave the invocation.

Shaun Santos and Tyrone Ramesar gave a skill entitled "The Making of Our Flag" in honor of Flag Day. They also presented the program which was a requirement for a communications merit badge that they are both working on.

Alice Jackson of the troop committee presented appreciation plaques to the assistant scoutmasters for their dedication and help with the troop.

She also presented a special plaque to Scoutmaster Jim Kraemer in recognition of all the time, dedication and effort for the benefit of the boys.

Len Grover reminded the scouts of the tools they needed to be good scouts such as their handbooks, pack, good behavior, attention, helping others, etc.

Scoutmaster Kraemer made final remarks and presented a recruiter's badge to Mitchell Brown for recruiting George Shannis into the troop.

Boy Scout Troop #34 has been sponsored by the First United Methodist Church for over 51 years.

SCC offers real estate classes

SANFORD — Seminole Community College will be offering pre-licensing, post-licensing and continuing education classes to real estate salespersons and brokers.

Florida real estate licensees are required to maintain professional knowledge of industry changes with new post-licensing requirements and continuing education courses. With that in mind, the Real Estate Institute at SCC announces the following courses will begin in July:

- Post-licensing broker investment — Classes begin July 15 and continue through Aug. 2 at the Continuing Education Bldg. Times are 6 p.m. until 10 p.m., Monday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings.

- 14-hour continuing education class for salespersons and brokers — Classes run July 24 and 25 at the Continuing Education Bldg., from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m., Saturday and Sunday.

- Sales exam review — Classes run July 31 through Aug. 1, at SCC Hunt Club Location, 9 a.m. until 5 p.m., Saturday and Sunday.

For more information regarding the programs, contact the Real Estate Institute at SCC, 323-1450, ext. 705.

Busy beauty parlor 'stumbles' over small children underfoot

DEAR ABBY: The letter you recently printed regarding children in beauty parlors stirred a fond memory of a conversation I had several years ago with my hairdresser who owned a busy beauty shop. She was at wit's end over three unsupervised preschoolers who were trashing the place while their mother sat calmly under a hair dryer, engrossed in a magazine.

On my next appointment, I gave my hairdresser a poem I had composed. She liked it so much, she had it framed, and now it hangs on the wall in her shop. She claims it worked a miracle:

S.O.S. (SAVE OUR SANITY)
Oh, sing a song of Motherhood,
Of children dear and sweet...
The pleasures that they bring to us
Can make our lives complete.
But there are times we must admit,
When they can be a trial...
Like when we have to Concentrate
To do your hair in style.
For in this busy "Beauty Mill"
Our schedule makes us hurry.
And to have them underfoot
Is really quite a worry!
So we implore you, Mother dear,
Save us from their attack
Or we'll have to trade our uniforms for jackets... tied in back!

ADVICE
ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Thank you, Abby, for years of interesting and educational reading. You have my permission to share the poem if you wish.

was missing from her room, but that didn't bother her. She "found" another one — on somebody else's bed.

I REMEMBER MAMA

DEAR ABBY: May I offer another fractured name? When my wife and I checked out of our hotel in Kagoshima City on Japan's southern main island of Kyushu for an overnight side trip, I left a roll of film to be developed and asked the desk clerk to hold it for our return.

When we checked back into the hotel and I asked for my pictures, they were nowhere to be found!

Finally, a thorough search was made and they were found filed under "Mr. Hold-for-Return."

DAVID WESTHEIMER,
LOS ANGELES

DEAR ABBY: My beloved mother was in a nursing home with Alzheimer's, and the love and care she received from the staff was beautiful to see.

Sure, things would disappear from time to time, but nobody considered it stealing. Mom had a beautiful hand-crocheted afghan. One day, it

Do generic drugs measure up?

DEAR DR. GOTT: Can you tell me why generic drugs are so much cheaper than name brands? Are they as good, or do you get what you pay for?

DEAR READER: When a new drug is discovered, developed, mass-produced and marketed, the manufacturer patents it. This means that for several years, no other company can legally compete with the manufacturer.

The cost of a trade-name drug is generally higher than a generic compound because the pharmaceutical company is making a profit to recoup the expense (which is substantial) of bringing the drug to market -- and to satisfy the stockholders.

Once the patent expires, other companies can manufacture and sell the drug, as a so-called generic medicine. The cost is much less because the profit margin is much narrower.

As a general rule, generic drugs are equal in quality to their brand-name counterparts.

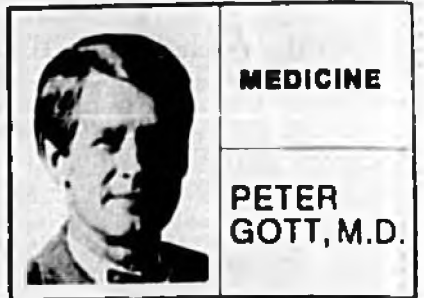

However, there have been instances in which the quality control of the generic was substandard. For example, generic digoxin (a heart medication) was found to vary in strength from pill to pill, unlike the trade-name drug Lanoxin; also, furosemide (a diuretic) is not as reliable as the trade-name drug Lasix.

This variability is not surprising, because many generic drugs are manufactured outside the United States, where restrictions are lax and matters of purity are relative. A generic manufacturer already makes less profit; sometimes it's tempting to reduce overhead and sacrifice quality control.

Before accepting a generic substitute for a brand name, check with the doctor who wrote the prescription or with the pharmacist, to make sure you're getting the quality product that you need. In most instances, the switch is OK (and will cost less money); in others, it may represent a serious mistake.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Consumer Tips on Medicines." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long,

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

Ask any American bridge player to name the most feared partnership in the country, and you are virtually certain to receive the answer Jeff Meckstroth and Eric Rodwell. If the wind is behind them, they are virtually unbeatable.

They have won all three world titles: the Bermuda Bowl (1981), the Open Pairs (1986) and the Team Olympiad (1988). Last January they finished second in The Sunday Times/Macellan Pairs Championship in London. Rodwell made what was arguably the best play of the event.

East's opening bid showed a weak two-bid in either major. South doubled to show opening count. North's second double was for takeout. South might have passed, probably collecting a 500-point penalty, but he opted to try for the vulnerable game.

West led the spade eight. East ducking to force declarer to win with the jack. Now Rodwell made an interesting play: he led the diamond jack. He was trying to drive out East's entry before the spade suit was established.

West, trying to save his partner's entry, won with the ace and led a second spade. Rodwell ducked. West won the third spade and led another diamond, preparing to duck if West produced the queen. However, when West played low, dummy's king won the trick.

Now it looked normal to lead a third diamond, in the hope that West would have to win with the queen. You can see that this line wouldn't have worked. But Rodwell gave himself one extra chance. He cashed the ace and king of hearts first. When the queen appeared, Rodwell had nine tricks.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
July 7, 1993

There are indications you could do well in the year ahead in side ventures that produce additional earnings or income. Make the most of these ancillary endeavors, but don't give up your major source.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be realistic and practical in your commercial affairs today, but don't make the deal so tough that there is nothing in it for the other guy. Neither will benefit if you do. Cancer, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Today you might be innately inclined to dodge making difficult decisions instead of meeting challenges head-on. Delays aren't a feasible remedy.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Co-workers may be pulling in a different direction than yours today. However, if you get everyone thinking of the common goal rather than the personal one, endeavors will get back on track.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Someone you love and respect who is usually rather predictable might not live up to your expectations today. This could be due to the fact you're too demanding.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your probabilities for completing things to your satisfaction are rather "iffy" today. This might be because you really don't know what you want. Define your goals more clearly.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Usually you're a rather optimistic individual, but today you may see little to admire in your ideas or the concepts of others. Actually both are pretty good if given a fair chance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Make an effort to spend and live within your means today, because if you fail to do so, you may not have funds available later when they are needed.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) In your arrangements with outsiders today you will automatically do things to win their approval, but when dealing with family members, you might not exclude the same considerations.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) There are two sides to every coin, but it might be hard to convince you of this fact today. You may put so much emphasis on negative factors you'll fail to see the positive ones.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Today you might permit your hopes and expectations to be overshadowed by pessimism where personal relationships are concerned. Don't, because any misunderstandings will be temporary.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) There's a possibility you might not have the necessary staying power today to achieve critical objectives. Don't toss in the towel before you really try.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If you fail to succeed today, take time to analyze your tactics and procedures. There's a possibility you're using techniques that you should have discarded a long time ago.
