Nest won't block expressway

SANFORD — The Seminole County Expressway may be built 50 feet away from an American bald eagle's nest, a U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service biologist said this morning. It will be the first such "waiver" of federal bald eagle protection rules in the state's history.

"They have provided the maximum possible protection for the nest," said Don Palmer. "They have done all they can."

Palmer said the wildlife services comments will be mailed to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers today. The corps considers the comments in deciding whether to issue a dredge and fill permit for the expressway.

In late December, a pair of nesting bald eagles appeared in the middle of the expressway path south of Lake Jesup. Although the planned expressway was shifted away from the nest, it still placed it about 50 feet from the proposed pavement's edge. Federal officials rarely allow construction to occur within 750 feet from an active nest, Palmer said the nest was begun after the expressway was designed and a further shift away would affect sensitive wetlands.

Memorial Day closings

SANFORD — All Seminole County and city governmental operations will be closed Monday for Memorial Day. Post offices throughout the area will be closed with no home delivery. Garbage pickup will not be made until Tuesday. All banks will be closed, as will all stock exchanges. The Tri-County Transit will operate busses on a limited schedule similar to the time schedules observed on Sundays, with not all routes covered.

Columbia ready for launch

CAPE CANAVERAL — The repaired shuttle Columbia and its seven-member crew were cleared Thursday for a sky-lighting midnight launch next Wednesday, two weeks late, to kick off a 10-day SpaceLab astronomy mission.

"It's the 30th. There are no significant problems or issues," said NASA spokeswoman Lisa Malone. "Everything's on schedule. We're going to pick up the countdown at 1 a.m. (EDT) Sunday."

Running two weeks behind schedule because of work to replace a faulty valve in the shuttle's cooling system, Columbia is scheduled for a fiery nighttime take-off at 12:38 a.m. Wednesday on the fourth of nine flights planned for 1990.

William Lenoir, NASA's associate administrator for space flight, and other top agency managers met at the Kennedy Space Center Thursday and reviewed the valve repair work before setting the official launch date and announcing the flight will last 10 days if on-board supplies hold out.

Expressway survives

TALLAHASSEE — The Seminole County Expressway received a vote of confidence Thursday in a new transportation plan approved overwhelmingly by the Florida Senate.

A proposal in the package to sell up to $4.1 billion in bonds for toll road projects throughout the state includes a proposal to spend $182.4 million to build the Seminole expressway from State Road 426 to U.S. Highway 17-92 in Sanford. Expressway authority members are pursuing building the road using locally sold bonds in case the state does not approve their own plan.

The Senate, refusing to concede defeat despite two failed attempts to address Florida's transportation crisis, voted 35-4 for the $5.2-billion plan. The package was passed on a 35-4 vote and was sent to the House for consideration. The two bodies are trying to come up with a plan that will satisfy Gov. Bob Martinez, who vetoed an earlier bill.

Pete Dunbar, the governor's top legislative aide, said the latest bill is "significantly better" than the earlier one and promised that Martinez would "be reasonable" in evaluating it.

He also said, however, that the governor would welcome further amendments removing certain portions that he still does not like.

SANFORD — State alligator trapper Junior Whidden was called to take charge of an almost 9-foot long alligator found injured near the Central Florida Zoological Park in Sanford

Thursday afternoon.

Whidden said today zoo workers had found the gator in a ditch off U.S. Highway 17-92, where it had apparently crossed the road from the area of Lake Monroe toward the swampy zoosite.

"He had been hit by a car. He was in bad shape," Whidden said. "Both of his eyes were blind. He had been hit a couple of times — old and new hits."

Whidden, of Osteen, said after he taped the gator he killed it, because it couldn't have survived its serious injuries.

Sanford museum, zoo tourist tax assistance rejected

By J. BRADLEY DILLING

SANFORD — The Central Florida Zoo and the Henry Shelton Sanford Memorial Library and Museum did not get the Tourist Development Council funds that they asked for in the final analysis of the IDC applications made yesterday.

The Central Florida Zoo asked for 50 percent of revenues generated by the IDC taxes. The council voted to continue giving the zoo 25 percent of the tax, which could amount to more than $163,000, depending on the tourist season, said Council member Sandra Glenn.

The museum requested $400,000 for the construction of an additional wing, which would feature visiting exhibits as well as exhibits rotating exhibits from resources in the museum's stores.

"We are very disappointed," said Curator Abela Clarke. "We'll just have to redouble our efforts for fundraising."

Glenn elaborated on the council's decision.

"As far as orientation goes, we considered each project on its own merits," Glenn said. "We considered what each one needed and what it did for the county as a whole."

Twelve organizations from all over Seminole County appealed to the Tourism Development Council yesterday for recommendations to the county commission for IDC money. Requests totaled almost $1.2 million, but only $570,974 was

Volusia County official among candidates screened for top Seminole County position

By J. MARK BARFIELD

SANFORD — A senior Volusia County official is among three candidates Seminole County commissioners will consider for county manager in two weeks.

Larry Arrington, the deputy county manager of Volusia County, has applied for the Seminole County position, it was learned Thursday. Arrington said in early April he considered applying for the position which could pay between $90,000 to $100,000, but decided his future lay with Volusia county.

Arrington said Thursday he made the statement at a time when Volusia County Manager Tom Kelly was out of favor with the county commission. The commissioners subsequently voted to show if it could be for Kelly, Arrington said.

"I didn't decide not to pursue the Seminole County position because I thought I had a chance to become county manager here," Arrington said. "It would be kind of like throwing gasoline on the fire considering what was happening. I couldn't do that."

The other two candidates include John Lawrence, city manager of Dunedin, and Michael Bryant, county administrator of Hall County, Ga. Commissioners will interview the three candidates and make their choice June 5.

Ending a new Seminole County executive since former manager Ken Hooper resigned last October has not been easy. Following a national search, 67 applications were received in March and commissioners interviewed five hopefuls April 12.

Commissioners' top choice, Greg Fehrenbach, the dynamic city administrator of New Brunswick, N.J., decided not to accept the position one day after salary negotiations began. Fehrenbach said the salary offer did not affect his decision, but he decided to stay in New Brunswick to complete several projects he had begun. The county's offer was believed to be about $90,000 yearly.

Commissioners had hoped to have a new manager on

Handwriting match brings arrest

SANFORD — Tracy Elaine Johnson, 21, of 220 McCarthy Ave., Sanford, has been charged by Sanford police with three counts each of forgery and uttering a forgery, and theft. She is accused of, in April and May of 1989, forging three withdrawal slips to take money from another woman's Sanford credit union account.

The loss totaled $260; police said an Florida Department of Law Enforcement Crime Lab evaluation of a sample of Johnson's handwriting, compared to the writing on the slips in question, helped break the case.

Johnson was arrested at the police station at 3:05 p.m. Wednesday.

Accused auto burglar nabbed

FERN PARK — A guest at the Econo Lodge, U.S. Highway 17-92, Fern Park, called Seminole County sheriff's deputies to that location and described a man he had just seen burglarizing his vehicle in the parking lot.

Deputies report locating in the area and arresting a man who matched the description at about 3 a.m. today.

Edmund Anthony Ramalal, 20, of Apopka, was charged with burglary to a vehicle and possession of burglary tools, after the reportee reportedly identified him as a suspect in the case. Deputies said they Ramalal dropped a screwdriver when first confronted. In a car he left at the lodge, deputies said, they found a crowbar and a flashlight on a seat.

Police arrest man on forgery charge

WINTER PARK — A rural Winter Park man who allegedly forged at least two stolen checks and cashed them at banks in Seminole County has been charged with two counts of dealing in stolen property and four counts of forgery.

James Paul Beckwith, 19, 2243 Tangerine Road, Winter Park, was arrested at home at 10 a.m. Tuesday, a Seminole County sheriff's report said.

Seminole County DUI arrests

SANFORD — The following persons face a charge of driving under the influence in Seminole County:

● Mark Anthony O'Shea, 23, 813 Orchid Ave., Casselberry, was charged with driving under the influence of alcohol Saturday at about 4:30 a.m. by an Altamonte Springs policeman who reported seeing him crossing the centerline of State Road 436. Bail was set at $500.

● Harry Fredrick Mead, 47, 534 Orange Blvd., Sanford, was charged with DUI Friday at about 10 p.m. by a Lake Mary policeman who reported seeing his car weaving on County Road 46-A. Bail was set at $500.

● John William Elliot, 52, 112 Essex Drive 18-B, Altamonte Springs, was arrested at 5:23 p.m. Tuesday, at home, after Altamonte Springs police noticed his license tag was expired, followed him home from Palm Springs Drive, Altamonte Springs. Police said he failed to stop at several stop signs enroute and was also cited for that and for other traffic violations.

'Helpful' robber nabbed by police

SANFORD — A man who entered the house of a Sanford woman May 11, saying he was looking for Jimmy Drumwright, because he owed him $10, allegedly stole $52 from the woman.

The victim, Annie Bell Drumwright, 1011 W. Sixth St., told police she was in the bathroom when Reginald Lee Lock, 35, 6 William Clark Court, Sanford, allegedly entered her house at about 7 p.m.

Jimmy Drumwright wasn't at home, and Lock reportedly helped Ms. Drumwright from the bathroom into the living room. There, Ms. Drumwright said she took a handkerchief containing $52 from her pocket. Lock allegedly said, "Let me help you Mama," as he took the handkerchief and took the money from it. He left. Ms. Drumwright told police she feared for her life.

Police located Lock Thursday and arrested him on 13th Street at Olive Avenue. He is charged with robbery, burglary and theft.

McLain: Too soon to set debates

From staff reports

SANFORD — District 5 Seminole County School Board candidate Daryl McLain today responded to a challenge from his opponent, M. L. "Sonny" Raborn, to meet in a series of debates.

"It's too early for that," McLain said. "We don't even know who or how many people will be running for that seat."

Although both McLain and Raborn are announced candidates for the seat being vacated by school board chairman Ann Neiswender, the actual qualification period begins at noon, July 16, and ends at noon, July 20.

"After July 20," McLain said, "I'll be ready to debate all legitimate candidates, as I believe it's the duty of each candidate to make his position clear on all subjects."

Only McLain and Raborn have announced their District 5 candidacies.

No rockets' red glare

Other civic projects capture priority for financial backing

By J. BRADLEY DILLING
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — The only rockets' red glare the city of Sanford will see this Fourth of July may have to come from a shuttle launch — if there is one, because it's a pretty safe bet that there won't be any fireworks over Sanford on our nation's birthday this year.

That's the word from officials at the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce, which has sponsored the event for several years.

Dave Farr, chamber executive director, said the money just isn't there to do it this year, because people have already donated more money to other civic projects this year than they have in years past.

"Our position is that rather than see this as a defeat, our community has diverted funds to other more worthwhile things that are longer lasting," Farr said. "Our sponsors are just sponsored out."

The chamber has about $1,700 left over from last year, but that isn't enough to have a decent fireworks display, Farr said. He said some of the "more worthwhile" projects to which the community has offered its support were the Park on Park community playground project, the St. Lucia Festival, chamber scholarship programs, the Thomas Whigham Super Challenge for AIDS research and city beautification projects such as "make Sanford Shine" and the "Adopt a Tree" project to raise money to plant more laurel oaks downtown.

Farr and chamber President Tony Russi each said that at the meeting of the executive committee June 5 they would recommend that the chamber abandon the fireworks this year.

"The people have just donated tens of thousands of dollars to other projects," Russi said. "That's more than they have given in years past, but if it came down to a choice of a project like Park on Park and burning money, which is really what you are doing with fireworks, we want to go with the more lasting projects."

Russi said about $3,500 was spent on last year's display and that people were displeased with it.

"We had people calling in and telling us that if that was the kind of show we were going to put on, we ought to just forget it. You need more than $3,500. That just isn't enough," he said.

Russi said other civic organizations have volunteered to lead the project next year, but would not say which.

"We have had some groups interested in doing it next year," Russi said. "I can't say which right now, because nothing is final."

Hair may link Power to girl's slaying

United Press International

FORT MYERS — Orange County prosecutors Thursday introduced hair samples that they said tied convicted rapist Robert Power to the slaying of a 12-year-old schoolgirl who died in a field near her home.

Power, 29, of Kissimmee, is charged with first-degree murder for the slaying of Angeli Bare. If convicted, he could be given the death penalty.

Bare, who was abducted from her home, was raped, sodomized and had her throat slashed in a field near her south Orange County home on Oct. 6, 1987.

The trial was moved out of Orlando because of publicity.

Assistant State Attorney Phil Townes introduced strands of hair found on Power that belonged to the victim. He also said the state would produce pubic hairs found in the girl's bed that matched samples taken from Power.

The state also introduced as evidence a bloody pair of panties and broken eyeglasses found several yards from the Bare home, near where the girl was attacked.

Opening statements were delayed about 30 minutes because Power arrived at court, complaining that he had not been allowed to shower. Formet granted a delay for the shower.

Jet ski race to be held on Lake Monroe

From staff reports

SANFORD — Between 75 and 100 jet ski racers from the southern United States are expected for the Spring Summer Splash Jet Ski Race Sunday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Lake Monroe.

Lon Wagener, of Seminole Honda Kawasaki, said he expects as many as 1,000 spectators for the race.

A similar race was held on Lake Monroe in December.

Admission is free.

Candidate shortage harms democracy

Congress, like the Marines, could use a few good men — and women.

Unfortunately, more and more men and women are deciding they do not want to run for office. The result is that a growing number of incumbents in the House of Representatives are being re-elected without any opposition.

We think this is a dangerous trend. Senior Writer Rhodes Cook of the Congressional Quarterly, a Washington, D.C., publication that closely monitors the activities in Congress, did some research and found that in 1980, in the election in which Ronald Reagan became president, the incumbents in 51 of the 435 House districts did not have an opponent. By 1986 the number of unopposed House members rose to 72 and then climbed to 77 in 1988 when President Bush was elected to the White House. Mr. Cook said indications are that the number of unopposed House members will be about the same this year as in 1988.

At a time when candidates are eager to run for office in the Soviet Union and various Eastern European nations where democracy is gaining a foothold, it is ironic — indeed tragic — that in the United States, the home of modern democracy, people are turning their backs on the opportunity to seek public office.

And while an incredible 77 House members had no opposition in 1988, scores of additional Congress members had only token opposition. Voters in only a handful of districts throughout the United States decided the outcome of truly contested races.

Two primary factors would appear to account for the lack of congressional candidates: Reapportionment and money.

In California, for example, a Legislature controlled by Democrats and former Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., in 1981 redrew the lines of congressional legislative districts in such a manner that large numbers of Democrats would be elected to office. In other states such as Indiana, Republicans drew legislative district boundaries to give the GOP a majority of so-called safe districts.

Reapportionment is at once both non-partisan and highly partisan. The party that happens to be in power in a state when new district lines are drawn every 10 years does as much as it can to put the opposing party out of business.

The primary losers in this political game are the voters. The voters are best served if the people they elect to office are in competitive districts and have to keep looking over their shoulders — and have to continue to be responsive to the needs and wishes of their constituents. Most state and federal lawmakers do not have to be as responsive as they should be as a result of reapportionment.

The second factor, money, reflects the power of being an incumbent. The cost of running for office even in congressional legislative districts has become staggering — costing hundreds of thousands of dollars and sometimes millions. All kinds of special interests give money to incumbents — both Republicans and Democrats. Legislators let this money accumulate in large war chests, even in non-election years, to discourage anyone from running against them.

In defense of affirmative action

WASHINGTON — Any attempt to explain today's contentious state of race relations sounds like the fable of the three blind men trying to describe an elephant, each feeling a different part of the anatomy — the trunk, the tail and a leg — except that our racial problems have more than three parts. I can count at least five. But the number isn't as important as the sorrowful reality that 26 years after the passage of the historic 1964 Civil Rights Act, this nation is still putting out brush fires that either inflame racial distinctions or remind us of our apartness. For example:

(1) In Washington, D.C., a Senate-House omnibus civil rights bill has placed President Bush between a rock and a hard place: How does he reach out to African-Americans who are supporting the bill, but still remain faithful to his conservative anti-civil rights constituency?

(2) In New York City, the cauldron of race relations is boiling over as African-Americans are locked in a bitter two-way conflict with Korean-American grocers in black neighborhoods and with ethnic whites who attack blacks who inadvertently stray into ethnic neighborhoods.

(3) On college campuses, serious assaults have been reported in more than 300 instances, not only on black students, but on women, gays and Asians.

(4) On the concert circuits, the most popular comedians, rock music groups and rappers are those whose routines dehumanize Asians, blacks, gays, Jews or women. Spewing bilious bigotry on stage, these performers are making hatred legitimate and ethnic antagonism respectable.

(5) In the media and in public speeches, white American conservatives (WACs) are merchandising a new breed of black intellectual mercenaries (BIMs) to dismantle affirmative action in academia, business and education. It is important that these new apologists be black in order to neutralize the accusation of white racism.

Recently, two dis-

The most popular comedians are those whose routines dehumanize Asians, blacks or women.

tinguished BIMs, University of Massachusetts Professor Julius Lester and San Jose State University Professor Shelby Steele publicly opposed affirmative action. Lester's opposition was presented in a speech before the National Forum Foundation, a Washington-based WAC group. Steele's opposition was contained in a superbly crafted article in the Sunday New York Times magazine, "A Negative Vote on Affirmative Action."

In this videoeratic era, Steele is a triple threat — academic scholar, eloquent writer and a telegraphically handsome personality. The brother also speaks with soothingly smooth baritone cadences. Yet, when you hear one BIM, you've heard them all. They make the same arguments and even use the same words. Lester: "To fight against racism ... leads to a self-definition as a 'victim' (my emphasis) and any one who defines himself as a victim has found a way to keep himself in a perpetual state of self-righteous self-pity and anger." Steele: "Another liability of affirmative action (is) that it indirectly encourages blacks to exploit their victimization ... (and in so doing) become invested in the view of one's self as a victim (my emphasis)."

Would Lester and Steele counsel Jews and women to refrain from protesting anti-Semitism and egregious sexism?

DAVID S. BRODER

An end to 'rotten campaigns'

WASHINGTON — The Democrats are enjoying the sounds of silence in Alabama and, in the process, proving that politicians can learn.

Four years ago, the savage battle for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination produced unparalleled bitterness, 14 separate and conflicting court rulings on the identity of the rightful nominee, and so much public revulsion with the Democrats that underdog Guy Hunt became the first Republican elected governor of Alabama in this century.

This year, five Democrats are vying in a close contest for the nomination to oppose Hunt. And, miracle of miracles, not one of them has run a negative ad about the others or launched any kind of personal attack. With the first primary only two weeks away, Al LaPierre, the veteran Democratic Party executive director, said: "The candidates understand that if they get personal, they're out of business. The 1986 race was so negative, we just turned the voters off."

I mention this as part of the good news in this column, the fourth of the promised periodic reports on my "crank" crusade to improve the tone and increase the substance of our political campaigns. Since I wrote that first piece back in January, announcing my intention to become a national nag on subject of sleazy campaign tactics, the journalism world has responded in unbelievable fashion. Many newspapers have stepped forward on their own to analyze and criticize the political ads being run in their states — and so have some broadcast organizations.

The heightened press scrutiny of 30-second TV spots has itself become the subject of stories in many publications and on the network news. U.S. News & World Report devoted considerable space to it.

But the best news is that politicians have gotten the message — and not just in Alabama — that shoddy tactics can and will become an issue in their campaign, while candor in discussing the public agenda may even bring some rewards.

Some candidates and consultants are experimenting with techniques that deliver a more solid, substantive message to voters than 30-second TV spots permit. GOP consultant J. Brian Smith, for example, is mass-mailing videotapes of his candidates, describing their backgrounds, qualifications and views, to prospective Republican primary voters in two states — Arizona and New Jersey — where he is working. Smith claims it is cost-efficient compared to TV and certainly gives voters far more information than they would get from a TV spot.

I do not want to leave you thinking that everyone has cleaned up his act. Enough of the anything-goes philosophy lingers that "Campaigns and Elections," which bills itself as the magazine for political professionals, announced plans for its annual training program next month with a press release headlined, "Negative Campaigning Skills to be Taught at Campaign Seminar."

That may strike you as similar to a grocery ad for "tainted beef" or "rotten vegetables," but presumably they know their market. Certainly the slugging in the Texas Democratic gubernatorial primary and runoff earlier this spring was a below-the-belt as anything I've ever seen.

A crucial test of the politicians' ability to keep their stilettoes sheathed comes up in the final weeks of the June 5 California primary. The California gubernatorial election is the biggest single prize in the 1990 election. While Sen. Pete Wilson (R-Calif.) is a cinch for the GOP nomination, Atty. Gen. John Van de Kamp and former San Francisco Mayor Dianne Feinstein are in a close race for the Democratic nomination. Across the country, politicians in both parties are waiting to see if they descend to the level of their Texas counterparts.

Fortunately, the California media are not waiting. Newspapers in Los Angeles, Sacramento and San Francisco have been giving close scrutiny to every new TV spot, grading it for truthfulness or distortion, and so has a San Francisco television station. The warning lights are flashing for any politician who wants to try a sneak punch.

Incidentally, I was not aware when I launched my effort that the Long Beach, Calif., Press-Telegram, as long ago as 1984, had set up a Hot Line phone number two weeks before each local election, on which readers could call in reports about "dubious campaign tactics" and sleazy campaign materials. Editorial page editor Jonathan Fried said he'd be happy to see other papers borrow the idea.

Since the Hot Line began and the paper showed its readiness to rebuke even candidates it had previously endorsed or (in one instance) withdrawn its endorsement because of shoddy tactics, the number of abuses seems to have declined dramatically. "The phone used to ring off the hook, especially on the weekend before the election," Fried told me, "but last year and this, there has been a significant decline."

Politicians have gotten the message that shoddy tactics can and will become an issue in their campaigns.

Tower may take consolation prize

WASHINGTON — John Tower, the former senator who couldn't pass muster as secretary of defense, is about to be named chairman of a secretive intelligence advisory board to President Bush.

Our sources say that in two months or less, Tower will take over the President's Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board, called "piffy-ab" for its acronym, PFIAB.

Bush put Tower on the board last year as a consolation prize after the Senate refused to give him the job he really wanted, secretary of defense. He does not need Senate confirmation to be chairman of PFIAB, so the questions of womanizing, drinking and conflicts of interest that dogged him through the Senate hearing will not find a public forum this time.

But some White House officials have privately raised objections, noting that Tower would continue to work as a consultant for government contractors while he has access to national security secrets as a member of the board.

PFIAB has been around in one form or another since the Eisenhower administration, although Jimmy Carter disbanded it during his term. It exists to advise the president on the quality of intelligence he is getting from the various U.S. spy agencies. The board technically does not oversee those agencies, but it second-guesses their work and suggests ways they can do a better job.

The elevation of Tower to chairman is something Bush wanted to do for a long time. Bush inherited most of the current members of PFIAB from Ronald Reagan, but he hasn't made much use of the board and is ready for a purge.

Knowledgeable White House sources tell us that Bush is eager to replace everyone on the board except his good friend Tower. Our sources predict it will happen in June, or later if FBI background checks on the appointees drag on.

Ironically, many of the current members are closer to Bush than Reagan, including the chairwoman, Anne Armstrong, an old Texas buddy of Bush's. In 1985, when Reagan streamlined his PFIAB from 21 to 14 members, some Reaganites complained that the members who survived the cut had closer ties to Bush.

Bush's reluctance to use PFIAB and his restlessness to restructure it with Tower at the helm may have something to do with his own days as director of the Central Intelligence Agency during the Ford administration. Ford's PFIAB decided that the CIA and other intelligence agencies were underestimating the Soviet threat.

The Ford PFIAB set up two teams to analyze that threat — the "A Team" from inside the CIA and the "B Team" made up of outside consultants. The B Team rated the Soviets as a more powerful threat than the CIA had assumed, and Bush eventually adopted that point of view to drive the CIA. But he received plenty of grief from the rank-and-file CIA members who already thought he was a political hack and didn't like being told what to do by outsiders. At the time Bush was struggling to win respect at the CIA.

In addition to being driven by somewhat sour memories of PFIAB, Bush now wants a smaller board made up of intelligence experts instead of the mixed bag of academicians, business people and consultants.

One PFIAB member told us that Bush "has not used us effectively at all. That doesn't mean that we have been inactive. But we have not had the direct and frequent contact with him as with past presidents."

The questions of womanizing, drinking and conflicts of interest will not find a public forum this time.

NBC ekes out May sweeps win

United Press International

NEW YORK — NBC eked out a narrow win in the May ratings sweeps, finishing only two-tenths of a ratings point ahead of second-place CBS, according to figures released Thursday.

"We are not conceding defeat in the Nielsen yet," David Poltrack, CBS senior vice president of planning and research, told a news conference and then got a laugh by adding, "although we are projecting it."

"I think this is the closest sweeps since May 1983," said Bob Niles, NBC vice president, research, at his network's news conference. "Before that you have to go back to the 1960s."

He added later: "A win is a win."

The closeness of the NBC win and CBS's belief that the Nielsen People Meter method of measuring audiences shows a bias against CBS, led Poltrack to say that while the CBS Television Network may have come in second, it is possible that when all the numbers are counted — in about three weeks — the CBS affiliates may come out ahead of the NBC stations.

This is the sixth consecutive May sweeps win for NBC, the ninth consecutive sweeps win and the 20th win out of the last 21 sweeps dating back to May 1985.

The sweeps numbers, which may change slightly but not significantly when Wednesday night, May 23, is added in, saw NBC with a 12.0 rating and a 21 share, CBS had an 11.8 rating and a 21 share, while ABC had an 11.4 rating and a 20 share.

There are four sweeps periods during the year — November, February, May and July — when the ratings companies go into 200 local markets to check viewing. Local advertising rates are based largely on sweeps, which also influence network rates.

NBC was the leader on Wednesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, CBS took Mondays and Sundays, the two most-watched nights of the week, and ABC was No. 1 on Tuesdays and Fridays.

Also significant for NBC, it was in the cellar on four nights — Monday, Tuesday, Friday and Sunday. CBS placed last on Wednesday and Saturday and ABC on Thursday.

Sixth-grade girl on top of the world in contest

United Press International

WASHINGTON — An 11-year-old aspiring physicist, from Altoona, Pa., took top honors Thursday in the second annual National Geography Bee by correctly answering that Antarctica was the continent where the volcanic Mt. Erebus is located.

Susannah Batki-Yovino, the only female contender to reach the top 10 finals in the contest's two-year history, was unruffled throughout the two-day competition, and remained calm when she received the first place scholarship check for $25,000.

"There is still a stereotype that men are smarter than women and I think that should be gone," said the round-faced sixth-grader from Washington Jefferson School in Altoona.

Timothy Forest, a 13-year-old from Goshen, N.Y., took second place.

Something fishy is going on

Area fish camp holds monthly bass tournaments

By JOAN KING
Herald correspondent

SANFORD — The first of the season Bass Tournament was held at the Osteen Bridge Fish Camp on May 6, 1990. John Mullis and Shed Robinson took first place as a team. They also fished their way to the winner's purse of over $500.

This bass trail is a monthly tournament that starts the first Sunday in May and continues to run the first Sunday of every month throughout the year until April, the following year. It has operated for eight years.

Along with the first place winners the big bass pot goes to the sole winner who has the largest live bass at weigh in. The pot builds as each fisherman contributes $10 to participate. Last month's total was $635.

Competition was keen as 64 boats were entered with crew. Each entrant paid $30 for the opportunity to exhibit the crew's ability to catch bass. Bass with a combined weight of 445 pounds, 6 ounces were hauled in by the fishermen. The total count of live bass was 296. All non-surviving fish are frozen for the free fish fry held every three months for the competitors and their families.

All live fish are released back into the river after weigh in.

The catch of the day is held in a good size pool beside the fish camp. Some of the customers built the retaining pool for the purpose of holding the bass after weigh in so they could all be released in a ceremonial event. For the ceremony, several boys are named to participate in the release of the bass from the pool. The boys gleefully snatch up the bass and place them into a large PVC pipe that's open-ended. The fish gently slide down the pipe and into their natural habitat until the next time.

There are few rules and they are easy to follow: any kind of boat may be used in the tournament, artificial bait only, live fish qualify at weigh in and a $30 entry fee is required.

The artificial bait gives the bass a chance to elude the hook and allows the fishermen to demonstrate their skills in catching the elusive little bass beasties.

Kathy and Steve Gard sponsor the Bass Tournament and have owned the Osteen Bridge Fish Camp for the past two years.

Kathy says, "The original owner was the bridge tender for the previous bridge."

The old low bridge required a tender who turned the huge handle 47 turns to open the bridge and allow boats to pass up river. Then 47 more turns would close it and allow the cars to roll across.

The Gards have eleven children. When they married, Kathy had three by a previous marriage. Gard had seven. Together they had one, Michael, who is now a busy little four-year-old towhead, affectionately called Spike.

Kathy's teenaged daughter, Becky Jorosik, is looking forward to an acting career. She also sings and dances and will try out for an acting scholarship later this year.

Kathy was a professional singer with the group Kaleidoscope. She stayed with them for about five years.

Gard went on the first gator hunt that the state licensed two years ago. His team included Garvin Harden Jr., from Sanford, and Nelson Lorenzo from New York.

Steve says, "It was a rainy night and not many gators were out."

The men went to Lemon Bluff and the Le Flis Slew area where they waited four hours before a sighting.

"When we finally giggered one, it took forty five minutes to boat him," Gard says. "We missed a couple of times. I held the light while Harden, nicknamed Gator, guided the boat. The Yankee giggered."

The gator's head from that night is behind the bar at the fish camp.

Local residents drop into the fish camp. Tourists look around and buy t-shirts. Area fishermen pick up bait and supplies. People come and go but everyone can count on a friendly chat with the Gards.

For tournament information call the Osteen Fish Camp at 322-3825.

Society is full of excuse makers

DEAR ABBY: About five years ago, I gave up my career as a pharmacist to become a police officer. It was a painful decision since I had become personal friends with many of my customers, and I knew I would miss them. However, the attitude of many customers at the pharmacy was too discouraging.

One of my customers was a very obese woman who came in faithfully for her amphetamine pills every 30 days. She used them for weight loss. After a few months, I asked her why she didn't try a weight-loss program. She said she had a "slow" metabolism and ate only one meal a day. Well, I happened to see her at an "all you can eat" buffet, and she put away three times as much food as I — and I'm a man, 6 feet tall and weight 215 pounds — and I play handball three times a week!

Abby, America has become a society of "excuse makers." No matter what a person does wrong, there's always an excuse to justify it.

I have sold medication to drug abusers, bodybuilders, married spouses with VD and people with emphysema who still smoke while using oxygen. They all had excuses!

I am now a police officer, and do you know what? Many people we arrest have "excuses" for breaking the law. America will not become the great country it is today by making excuses.

If one day we are taken over by a harder-working, better-educated country, I wonder what our excuse will be. Sign me...

NO EXCUSES

DEAR NO EXCUSES: I tried hard to find an excuse to junk this painfully honest letter, but I couldn't find one. So, here it is, warts and all.

(Problems? Write to Dear Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Dear Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. All correspondence is confidential.)

See an allergist for sinus trouble

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm an 81-year-old female with sinus trouble. I suffer from postnasal drip, and my eyes get itchy. What can I do to prevent this?
DEAR READER: When the sinuses and the lining of the nose are irritated, these tissues swell, become congested and produce excess mucus. These changes cause difficulty breathing and postnasal drip, a discharge of mucus down the back of the throat. Also, the eyes may become itchy and secrete more tears.
 From the limited information you supply, I'd guess that you are experiencing an allergic reaction, such as hay fever. This could be due to dust, pollen, animal dander, air pollution (tobacco smoke) or a host of other inhaled irritants in the air you breathe.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby
 Three no-trump is the most appealing contract with the North-South cards and no doubt would have been reached had North bid three clubs at his first opportunity after cue-bidding hearts. South was afraid to try no-trump when clubs had not been heard from, and so the side arrived at the less appetizing minor-suit game contract. British player Alan Kay had the task of making 11 tricks, even against the unfavorable 4-1 trump split. He solved the problem with an unusual tactic. Forget that a spade opening lead would be best; East had opened one heart to get what seemed to be the best lead against any contract, and his partner obliged him. Declarer ducked the first trick, and East switched to the Jack of diamonds. Declarer won and played a low club. When West played low, he put in the 10 from dummy. East did win that trick, but the defense was now helpless. A heart return was taken by declarer's ace, and declarer ruffed his third heart. A low club was ruffed and declarer now drew trumps, throwing away dummy's Q-7 of spades. A spade was led to dummy's ace, and the A-K-7 of clubs took the rest. The key to this play was giving up a club to East so that the A-Q of spades in dummy could not be attacked. Ruffing out the clubs without losing a trick would not work because West would be left with a long trump trick.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
May 26, 1990

In the year ahead you may be exposed to a spate of unusual opportunities of unusual opportunities of a material nature. If you do not fatten your bank balance, you might have only yourself to blame.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Financial conditions are rather unusual today and you could experience both gains and losses. Fortunately, however, you'll be using more black ink than red ink. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You're likely to be luckier today in things you do independently of others than you will be in your partnership arrangements. Try to do more of the former than the latter.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Do not discount your hunches today.

especially those that pertain to your career, advancing your status or your finances. You're likely to be right on target in these three areas.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Do not be reluctant about putting yourself out a bit for friends today, because you're apt to be the one who will eventually derive the greatest benefits.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Lady Luck tends to favor you today where truly important objectives are concerned. Disengage yourself from the insignificant and focus on the big.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Details have their importance, but today you will make greater progress if you concentrate on the big picture. You can always go back a little later and dot the i's and cross the t's.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) An enterprising associate with whom you've been closely aligned previously could be instrumental again today in creating something opportune for you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You may be more fortunate than usual today in striking bargains or negotiating agreements. If you want to make a deal, this could be the day to do it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Today where your work or career is concerned someone with whom you'll be involved could come up with an ingenious idea. It will have a few flaws, but you'll know how to correct them.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) People you know on a purely social basis shouldn't be imposed upon today in order to grant you favors businesswise. You'll do much better without them anyway.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) A development you previously considered a bit overwhelming could be less intimidating today. Some uncertainties are still involved, but they should be manageable.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) The ideas you conceive today will be constructive and functional, yet in order to be accommodating, you might water them down a bit in order to fit in the suggestions of the less gifted.
