Oviedo probes Sunshine Law violation

By Bill Kerne
Staff Writer

OVIDEO — Oviedo City Attorney William Colbert will investigate whether two newly elected city council members violated the state's Sunshine Law by discussing public policy outside of council chambers after they were elected.

The Council voted 4-1 to have Colbert investigate whether Chris Jepson and Tom O'Hanlon, whose first meetings on the council were on Oct. 4, have discussed issues in private that they planned to vote on in a meeting.

On Oct. 4, shortly after taking the oath of office, O'Hanlon and Jepson both called for City Manager Eugene Williford to be dismissed, saying that while they were campaigning they heard too many complaints about city services.

Since the meeting, allegations have arisen that O'Hanlon and Jepson discussed the move to oust Williford before the council meeting was held.

O'Hanlon and Jepson said that although they have met multiple times and discussed how to make a motion as well as service on the council in general terms, they have not discussed specific matters.

"I tried to bring Mr. Jepson up to speed on how the city works, how Robert's Rules work, and how to make or withdraw motions," O'Hanlon said.

Jepson provided the only vote against having Colbert investigate whether the Sunshine Law has been violated.

"I participated," Jepson said. "I know what happened. It was nothing."

Colbert said that even indirect discussions outside of council chambers could be a violation of the Sunshine Law.

"Any communications between two members of some board on any matter that may come before the board must take place at a time and place where the public has access to that communication," Colbert said.

Violation of the Sunshine Law is a second degree misdemeanor that, in addition to possible jail time, also carries a fine and the responsibility for attorneys fees. Violation of the city charter can mean

Police nab bank robber

SANFORD — Videotape from a security camera and positive identification from two witnesses has led to the quick apprehension of a Sanford man who robbed the Central Florida Educators' Federal Credit Union at 101 East 20th Street Monday.

Sanford police arrested Richard "Ricardo" Johnson, 35, 2006 Mangrove Avenue, shortly after 10 a.m. Monday.

On Friday, Johnson entered the credit union at about 3:30 p.m. Access records indicate that Johnson first asked a teller for a withdrawal of $1,000 from his account.

When the teller informed him she would need his account number and identification, he implied he had a gun. The teller said, "Excuse me," and Johnson again implied he had a gun and reached for his right pocket. The teller then opened her cash drawer and began counting out money. Johnson grabbed a little more than $700 and ran out of the credit union and drove away in a small gray vehicle.

Witnesses were able to get a partial tag number for the vehicle. The incident was taped on in-house closed circuit television.

Monday morning Sanford police attempted to make contact with Johnson at his residence. As they approached his house they observed Johnson leaving in a vehicle and followed him eastbound on Interstate 4. Johnson lost control of his car and rolled the vehicle as he turned on to exit 53.

He received minor scratches, and after being treated for his injuries, was transported to the Volusia County jail.

Johnson is charged with robbery using a firearm or deadly weapon and grand theft of property valued at $300 to $4,999.

Longwood commission OKs purchase of 15 police cars

By Joe DeBantis
Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — The Longwood City Commission made quick work of its Monday night agenda, swiftly approving the entire consent agenda while giving the green light for the purchase of 15 new Crown Victorias for the city's police department and approving special assessments for these road paving projects.

By a vote of 4-0, the board approved spending $298,200 to purchase 15 model year 2000 Ford Crown Victoria police vehicles from Don Reid Ford.

Prior to the vote, Mayor Paul Lovstrand asked whether the city would be better served by breaking up the purchase over a longer period of time.

City administrator John Drago explained the city had a better opportunity to recoup some of the initial outlay down the road by participating in a one-year buy-sell plan.

Drago said the plan, one he has been familiar with for the past 11 years, would allow the city to purchase all 15 vehicles at once, use them for a year, and then resell them to another police agency. He estimated the city could recoup a significant portion of its initial investment.

"The best way for this fleet plan to work is to get them at one time and sell them at one time," explained Drago. "We have to keep production schedules in mind and time frames when other agencies would be looking to buy used vehicles. If the program didn't work, I wouldn't be for it."

Commissioners also tabled work on an ordinance designed to repeal sections of the city's sign codes, setting a final workshop on the issue for Oct. 25 at 7 p.m. They will follow up that workshop with a special meeting at 7:30 p.m. dealing with the pending lawsuit by five Warren Avenue residents seeking temporary injunctive relief to force the city and the Central Florida Historical Preservation Society to keep Warren and Wilma avenues open during the Annual Fall Arts Festival the weekend prior to Thanksgiving.

The special meeting will allow

Seminole deputies not injured when tree falls on patrol car

By Russ White

GENEVA — A couple of sheriff's deputies escaped injury from Hurricane Irene on Saturday while responding to a call that trees were down on power lines on Seminole Woods Boulevard.

While the deputies were standing by for a power company team to arrive, a large pine tree fell on the patrol car, causing severe damage. The vehicle needed to be towed to Sanford.

Neither Sgt. Mike Messer nor Deputy George

Hart were injured said Sheriff's Office Public Information Officer Steve Olson.

Chief Deputy Sheriff Steve Harriett said that deputies were busy all weekend responding to a number of calls. He said Deputy Steve Algin responded to a call in the Sanford/Midway area from a 93-year-old woman with a plumbing problem.

"Deputy Algin not only responded and tried to help the woman, he was able to have a plumber he knew come to the house and do the work without Walking on water?

Wendy Whelan of Sanford appears to be walking on water at the Sanford Harbour Marina. Actually the heavy rains the Central Florida region has received in recent weeks have caused water levels in area lakes, including Lake Monroe, to rise significantly. The docks at the Sanford Marina are underwater, making for difficult walking.

Only fools rush into judgment

The county's conference center crisis may not be resolved until well into the Third Millennium. Larry Dale's plan was trashed. Victory for the clueless and impatient.

More than likely, dumb and dumber leaders won't come close to a strategy approaching Sanford Mayor Dale's Fort Mellon Park/Lake Monroe design from 1998.

As a result, nothing will happen until Pam Am World and Beyond builds a Pam Am Space Center at the aerodrome once known as Orlando Sanford Airport.

Pan Am's 100-story facility will include a hotel, conference center, offices and observatory. Pam Am will scrap its New Hampshire service, to offer hourly shuttles to Jupiter and Mars. A Mellonville-Moon Balloon will be a big hit with the kids.

Oh, it's not going to take that long. Of course, it's not. We suspect there will be a number of interesting proposals in the next few months. But here's the catch — no matter what the next strategy may be, let's be smart enough to listen.

"Nothing is going to happen overnight," Dale says. "We're going to see new players — new developers — who believe in I do in a waterfront center. Sanford has that and will always have that. What we need is patience. Why keep chasing developers away?"

Dale says he doesn't want to run off any would-be developers. Yeah, if the Donald said he wanted to build a casino/conference center on the Sanford Waterfront, Dale would trump that kind of deal.

"A plan has to be appropriate," Dale said, "and realistic."

Sanford has an RFP out to attract reputable developers. He said Monday that at least two have already contacted the city. Dale said it took him two years to get approval to develop a 17-lot gated community.

"It will take five for a conference center," he said.

It isn't so much the opposition by the Society for the Preservation of Fort Mellon Park that irks Dale today — it's scaring off PRA, the developers who wanted more time. Dale's own city commission said that enough was enough. Not nearly enough, Dale said.

Rushing to judgment on this project — any project — leads to intense pressure and nervousness when deadlines approach and tasks aren't completed. Dale's dead right when he says this is what happened on the waterfront hotel/conference center issues. He's right, too, about the waterfront. This is where the conference center ought to be.

We'd all be fools to resist hearing what others planners have to improve the quality of life in our cities and in Seminole County. It would seem prudent to listen to what others have in mind — and not rush them. Then, if need be, tell them to get lost.

See White's column against Tuesday through Saturday in the Seminole Herald.

Abusive mother-in-law is sign of trouble

DEAR ABBY: I had to write after reading the letter from "Hurt in Adams Center, N.Y.," the woman whose future mother-in-law is abusive to her because she thinks "Hurt" is "stealing her son away."

Please tell her to run, don't walk, to the nearest therapist and take her fiancé with her — and if therapy doesn't fix things, to please, please, not marry this man. I was once married to such a man and an almost identical set of parents. I was wife No. 2 — we had both been married before — and I quickly found out what had happened to his first marriage. His mother didn't want other women around her adored son; this included his daughter from the first marriage. And she was not nice to my children either because she felt "disloyal" to the real grandchild.

My husband simply would not or could not stand up for his bride over the craziness of his parents. The mother walked closely past me in the hall one time and punched me in the stomach as hard as she could. When I let out a howl of protest, this goofy woman actually said she hadn't done such a thing; this was just another example of my trying to cause trouble! She had a way of "needing" his help urgently when she knew something was going on at our house and, every time, my husband would walk out on me to take care of this manipulative woman, his mother.

Again, run, don't walk, to a therapist. Remember, these are the people who raised the fiancé to be the person he is. He's been yanked around and manipulated by them all his life — and there could easily be trouble ahead.

CRAZY LADY'S FORMER DAUGHTER-IN-LAW

DEAR FORMER DAUGHTER-IN-LAW: That's good advice, providing the couple will heed it. If it doesn't help them deal with the problem, at least it will help them gain insight. I have a stack of letters 6 inches high from women who have experienced the same problem. Every single one said to break the engagement and run like the devil. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: Please tell "Hurt in Adams Center" to put on her running shoes and exit that relationship as soon as possible. My ex-in-laws didn't approve of me, either.

At the wedding and reception they refused to be in any photograph that I was in. (How many wedding pictures have you seen without the bride?) My former mother-in-law called friends of mine and told them what an awful wife she thought I was, and my husband refused to intercede because he was sure everything would get better once children arrived.

After 18 months of this abuse, I got a divorce. I am now very happily married to someone else, and his mother and I get along just fine.

DIXIE DARLING

DEAR DIXIE DARLING: I advised "Hurt" that her fiancé and his mother were still attached by an emotional umbilical cord, and the only person who could successfully sever it was her fiancé — by making it clear to his mother that he expected his future wife to be treated with courtesy and respect.

To that I will add: If he is unable to do that, then she must read the handwriting on the wall. Better a broken engagement than a bitter divorce.

Creating a butterfly garden

Few outdoor activities are more rewarding and easily available than attracting butterflies to a well-designed butterfly garden.

Creating a butterfly garden can be as simple as planting a windowsill box or as complex as landscaping many acres. To design a successful garden, however, it is necessary to select the right plants for the specific butterflies that live in your region.

Planning the garden: The total butterfly garden takes into account the food preferences of both adult butterflies and their caterpillars. Many butterfly species will drink nectar from a variety of flowering plants, but their caterpillars often are greatly limited in the number of plants on which they can feed.

It is not necessary to plant larval food plants to attract butterflies, but adults tend to stay fairly close to the areas where their larval food plants can be found. All of this requires planning. There are a few basic rules to follow. You can be as creative as you wish, but you must start with a plan that considers the requirements of the butterflies you wish to attract and the

Gardening

Skippers have relatively stout bodies and shorter wings than true butterflies. These differences are not always Butterflies food preferences: Most adult butterflies found in Florida feed on flower nectar. Some visit a variety of flowers and others seem to prefer a more specialized menu.

Butterflies generally are attracted to brightly colored simple flowers that are not too deep and that are wide enough for good perching platforms. Universal nectar favorites include: phlox, zinnias, asters, marigolds, daisies, coneflowers, black-eyed Susan, milkweeds, thistles, and butterflybush. Flowers in the daisy family and flowers in clusters like milkweed and pentas are very good.

Double-flowered varieties of cultivated flowers are never as good as the single ones. White varieties are inferior to other colors as far as butterflies are concerned. A wide assortment of flowers is preferable to having just a few different kinds or a variety of similar flower types.

As a rule, small butterflies nectar from small flowers and large butterflies nectar from larger ones. Flowers that produce the most scent generally furnish the most nectar. Nectar also should be available for the greatest number of months possible. Therefore, it is best to choose your flowers so that at least some of them are always blooming.

Remember that many flowers are not designed to be pollinated by butterflies and are seldom, if ever, visited by them. Adults of some butterfly species rarely visit flowers but instead are attracted to aphids, manure, rotting fruit, mud, or tree sap.

Remember: You can not attract butterfly species that are not present naturally in your region, nor can you grow plants that are not adapted to the soils and climate in your region of the state.

plants you will use to lure them. Butterfly gardening requires a great deal of knowledge of the insect biology and must be based on butterfly preferences — not human ones. Usually, it is easily accomplished.

Butterfly biology: There are four stages in the amazing butterfly life cycle: egg, larva, chrysalis (also called pupa or resting stage), and adult.

Butterfly eggs are laid on the larval food plant and caterpillars emerge within a few days. Some species overwinter in this stage. These larva have enormous appetites and do nothing but eat. Food plants are sometimes severely defoliated by the feeding of the larvae. When their skin is stretched as far as possible, they molt or shed that skin; this process is necessary for growth.

After a few molts, they seek a sheltered place. Some spin a safety belt that holds them upside down on a twig or similar object, while others hang on with special hooks on their abdomen. At this time, the final molt takes place and the larva skin is replaced with a stiff butterfly chrysalis (pupa). During this stage, the once worm-like caterpillar transforms into a beautiful, flying adult. The average adult life expectancy of a butterfly is about two weeks.

Butterflies, skippers and moths: Butterflies are usually recognized by their beautiful wing colors, slender bodies, clubbed antenna and their activity during the day.

Moths are different from butterflies and skippers by having fluffy antenna instead of a club at the end. Other differences are that moths are active at night, and tend to hold their wings open while feeding or resting.

charge," Harriett said.

The Sheriff's Office was trying to contact the plumber to thank him, Harriett said.

Many Seminole County residents — mostly in the northern part of the county — spent Sunday and Monday cleaning up leaves and debris from Hurricane Irene. Once again the county escaped most of the storm. More than 50,000 customers in Volusia and Brevard were without power on Sunday — some were just getting it back Monday.

Seminole County Sheriff's Office spokesman Steve Olson examines a patrol car that was damaged when a tree fell on it.

The hurricane was blamed for the deaths of seven people in South Florida, and there was millions of dollars in damages. There wasn't serious damage in Seminole, where 1.2 inches of rain fell.

It was sunny on Monday, and partly cloudy conditions are expected today through Thursday with highs in the mid-80s. There's only a slight chance of rain. "Mother Nature has been good to Seminole County," Steve Harriett said.

Longwood

the plaintiffs to bring their concerns before the board, hopefully to iron out a compromise and avert the next scheduled court date on the matter set for Nov. 5 in Seminole County Circuit Court.

The city also took another step in hiring a consultant to review Longwood's Comprehensive Plan, Land Development Regulations and other Longwood city codes.

By a vote of 4-0, commissioners approved encumbering $105,950 to hire The Gail Easley Company for the project, and agreed the work should be done in two phases with the city reserving the right to pay for one-half of the project, then reviewing the necessity for the second half to be completed.

Commissioner Dan Anderson said he wanted to make sure that the consultant expenditure got the city what it is looking for.

"My concern is that by spending the money will we clean up the codes and not just go through a process?" Anderson asked. "Does this result in a document we can be proud of?"

Drago said the intent of the consultant's review is the clear up confusion and contradiction in sections of various codes and to make the final report more user friendly and understandable.

"I'm going to structure the contract in two phases," Drago explained. "When the first phase is done, the board will have the option to approve the second phase."

By respective votes of 3-1, commissioners also approved resolutions for special assessments to pay for street paving in three sections of the city. The paving projects at 14th Avenue, 13th Avenue, and First Place East, were verified from resident petitions in the areas in June of 1995.

The total cost of the projects is approximately $366,000 with the city's share slightly more than $218,000 and the residents absorbing the remainder of the cost.

Commissioner Rusty Miles said he wasn't convinced the city should have to assess residents in the three designated paving areas.

"We should look at these items and perhaps give some consideration to the city footing the entire bill and giving something back to our citizens," Miles said.

The special assessments were approved by a vote of 3-1 with Miles dissenting.

In other housekeeping measures the board approved a computer trade-in with Dataflow Systems; approved a purchase order of $29,600 for pumps, piping and fittings for two water treatment plants, and cleaned up language in Charter Amendment No. 14 that will appear on the Nov. 2 ballot.

Longwood observes Halloween festivities on Saturday, Oct. 30

By Joe DeSantis
Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — City Administrator John Drago is getting the kind of phone calls this week most city officials get this time of year concerning Halloween.

Oct. 31 falls on a Sunday this year, leaving parents and would-be ghosts and goblins in many Seminole County municipalities wondering which night the city will observe for official trick-or-treating.

Drago said several callers expressed concern about the Sunday night date with school the next day. As a result the city of Longwood will officially observe Halloween on Saturday, Oct. 30.

As part of the Longwood Fall Carnival, the Public Safety Building located at 235 West Church Avenue will be utilized for Halloween activities on Friday, Oct. 29 and Saturday, Oct. 30. From 6 to 9 p.m. on Oct. 29 the Haunted House will be open. On Oct. 30 from 1 to 9:30 p.m. the city will celebrate with games, prizes, food, drinks, and a bake sale. The Haunted House will be open on Saturday from 3:30 to 9:30 p.m., with a costume contest scheduled for 6:30 p.m.

In another unrelated item stemming from Monday night's commission meeting, an expected motion by commissioner Steve Miller to rescind a vote regarding pay raises for city employees that transpired at an Oct. 8 special meeting was removed from Monday night's agenda. Miller was absent from the meeting due to personal illness.

The board originally voted Sept. 7 to grant employees $500 raises in addition to cost-of-living adjustments and merit pay increases. A vote to change the effective date of the raises from employee anniversary dates to Oct. 1, 1999 failed at the special meeting.

Colbert said the investigation, which will include taking voluntary statements of anyone involved, is expected to take about 30 days.

O'Hanlon and Jepson live two blocks from each other, and say they have been friends for 12 years.

"We've talked about our children, schools, and life in general," Jepson said.

In addition, O'Hanlon and Jepson have met with other council members. O'Hanlon met separately with council members John Benson and Tom Hagood, while Jepson also had a private conversation with Benson.

"I have spoken with all of (the council members)," O'Hanlon said.

State laws allow council members to talk in private, so long as public business is not discussed.

"It is not against the Sunshine Law to be together and discuss your kids, marriage, or other personal matters," Colbert said. "Everybody will assume you are breaking the Sunshine Law, however. When it comes to city business, what can you talk about? Probably very little."

Benson and Hagood both said they gave general advice, and background on several issues facing the city, as well as other topics not related to city business. They said they never discussed public policy in any detail.

"It was just a casual get-together," Benson said. "I gave a past history of the sewer system and the water system. I had no intention of getting into any detail."

Hagood said they discussed matters that had arisen while campaigning.

"It was mostly in the context that he (O'Hanlon) had heard a lot of things while he was campaigning," Hagood said.

O'Hanlon also said he spoke privately with Council Chairman Bob Dallari after running into him in a park or a restaurant, although Dallari said a conversation never took place.

"I don't remember running into him (O'Hanlon)," Dallari said. "We never had any discussion."

Hagood said he is upset because O'Hanlon and Jepson both received private warnings stop meeting in private, and not to discuss city policy in private.

"They did it," Hagood said. "They did it with knowledge."

Both O'Hanlon and Jepson said that since the allegations have come up over possible violations of the Sunshine Law, they have stopped meeting.

"Since all of this has come up I don't meet with anybody," O'Hanlon said.

Several Oviedo residents during Monday's meeting, including former council candidate Mike Ertel, asked the council to have possible Sunshine Law violations by O'Hanlon and Jepson investigated.

"I have never been more appalled to admit that I am a resident of the city," Oviedo resident Stacie Webster said.

At the council's discretion, the matter can also be investigated by the State Ethics Commission or the State Attorneys Office. Private citizens can also file complaints with the Ethics Commission.

School safety is always in season

By Richard H. Middleton, Jr.
Special to the Herald

Most of us, at one time or another, have heard the stories from our parents or grandparents that begin, "When I was your age, I used to walk five miles to school, even when it rained or snowed."

Life has grown increasingly complex. Students are walking to school often fighting much more than the weather. Some ride bikes. Others share sidewalk space with bikers. Some walk alongside streets with heavy traffic volume and intricate intersections. Others catch rides with parents or on school buses. Regardless of the way in which your child gets to school, it's clear - the streets of today are not your parents' or grandparents' streets.

According to the National SAFE KIDS Campaign based in Washington, D.C., great strides have been made in lowering the pedestrian injury death rate among children ages 14 and under. From 1987 to 1996, the pedestrian-motor vehicle death rate declined 41 percent, but pedestrian injury still remains the second leading cause of unintentional injury-related death among children ages 5 to 14. Of the nearly 900 children ages 14 and under who died from pedestrian injuries in 1996, 723 died in motor vehicle-related traffic crashes.

The SAFE KIDS Campaign literature on pedestrian injury notes that children tend to be more vulnerable to pedestrian death because the traffic situations they are exposed to "exceed their cognitive, developmental, behavioral, physical and sensory abilities." Children simply are not as experienced as adults when it comes to judging speed and distance. In addition, their auditory, depth perception and visual scanning abilities develop gradually.

To help your children travel to school safely on foot, the National SAFE KIDS Campaign recommends the following:

- Never allow children under age 10 to cross streets alone.
- Teach your children what the different traffic signals/markings mean.
- Set a good example for your children - always use crosswalks and traffic signals, cross at corners.
- Make eye contact with drivers before crossing in front of them.
- Teach children to look left, right, and left again before crossing.
- Walk facing traffic.
- Prohibit play in streets, driveways, in adjacent unfenced yards, and parking lots.
- Requires children to wear reflective materials and carry flashlights to use at dawn and dusk.
- Teach children to cross at least 10 feet in front of a school bus and to wait for adults on the bus loading/unloading side of the street.

Your child should cross the path of a stopped school bus with ample room because a blind spot extends for 10 feet around the bus. The driver will not see your child if he or she crosses within the blind spot. In 1996, 35 school-age children were killed, and about 5,000 were injured in school bus-related incidents. The majority of the children killed were pedestrians. You can help your child get off to a good start every morning by arriving at the bus stop at least five minutes before the scheduled bus arrival. Remind your children that the bus stop is not a play area.

It is also important to consider what your child is using to tote his or her books to school. A backpack, with its two shoulder straps, is one of the best ways to carry things - just make sure your child is wearing it properly.

The president of the American Physical Therapy Association in Alexandria, Va., says a properly carried backpack is supported by the strongest muscles in the body.

"Typically our proximal muscles, or muscles closer to the trunk of the body, are much stronger and have greater endurance than the distal muscles, those muscles farther away from the center of the body," says APTA president Jan K. Richardson, PT, PhD, OCS.

If your child is only slinging a backpack over one shoulder, he or she may be leaning more to one side, curving the spine. This curving, over time, could cause back, shoulder, and neck pain, not to mention something called "functional scoliosis," or curvature of the spine. Richardson recommends that students carry no more than 15 to 20 percent of their body weight.

To ensure that your children have a safe and healthy school year, encourage them to speak up if they have questions about the particular traffic situations they encounter as they travel to and from school, and to let you know if their school bags are causing them discomfort or pain.

FWC hosts national Watchable Wildlife conference

SANFORD - Featuring the "best of the best" in ecotourism programming, the Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission (FWC) will host the ninth national Watchable Wildlife conference October 20-22 at Ft. Myers.

The conference, at the Harborside Convention Center, will address the translation of wildlife watching and ecotourism into economic benefit and environmental sustainability.

Conference attendees will participate in two and one-half days of seminars and workshops led by national and state experts in the fields of wildlife viewing and nature-based tourism.

Madge Lindsey of the World Birding Center, Austin, Tex.; Kerri Post of VISIT FLORIDA; Dr. Randy Wells of Mote Marine Laboratory; and Dr. Joanna Burger of Rutgers University will address the conference along with more than 100 other presenters from all over the continent.

People involved in governmental planning, natural resource management, nature-based tourism, outdoor retailing, conservation, education and interpretation will gather for the conference, according to organizers.

Conference and preconference workshops include: "Tapping Watchable Wildlife Markets: A Look at Six California Projects"; "Woman-friendly Ecotourism: Creating a Niche Market for Your Business"; "Establishing a Successful Birding Bed and Breakfast"; "Promoting Your Nature-based Festival"; "How to Address Visitor Carrying Capacity at Your Site"; "Minnesota's Wildlife Tourism Initiative"; and others.

Tourism experts say wildlife viewing is the fastest growing recreational and travel pursuit of the decade -- an $18.1-billion industry. Forty-eight percent of all American vacations now include nature-based experiences. The FWC is taking a leadership role in finding the balance between preserving and promoting the state's extraordinary wildlife heritage.

Tuesday evening, Oct. 19, at 8 p.m., acclaimed writer Sara Stein will open the conference. The public is invited; there is a $5 admission charge at the door for this talk.

Florida's Lee Island Coast has been selected for the 1999 conference, hosted by the FWC and the Lee Island Coast, in cooperation with the Wildlife Foundation of Florida. Sponsors include the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, VISIT FLORIDA, the Bureau of Reclamation, the Bureau of Land Management, National Marine Fisheries Service, Fermata, Inc., Defenders of Wildlife, National Wildlife Federation, and the Humane Society of the United States.

Conference registration, which includes a reception and four meals, costs $249. One day registrations are also available. For a full conference brochure, call the FWC's Office of Informational Services at (850) 487-0516. For reservations, contact Royal Palm Tours at (800) 298-0249 or (941) 368-0700. Attendance is limited.

Additional information about the conference and agenda is available at the FWC's Web site at <http://www.state.fl.us/gfc/BWC/018>.

Lake Mary slams Seminole

Rams cruise past Tribe in SAC girls volleyball

By Dean Smith
SPORTS EDITOR

LAKE MARY - After getting off to a slow start (for them) this season, the Lake Mary girls volleyball team is starting to look like the elite program it has been in the past.

Coach Cindy Henry's Rams improved to 16-6 Monday night with an impressive three-game 15-3, 13-15 and 15-4 triumph over Seminole in Seminole Athletic Conference action at Lake Mary High School.

"We showed up for one game tonight," said Seminole coach Beth Corso. "The rest of the night we played a sloppy defense and missed coverages all night long."

Lake Mary will play its final home match of the regular season on Wednesday, hosting Boone in Senior Night and then close out the regular season with a match at Bishop Moore in Orlando. Both matches will have junior varsity matches starting at 5:30 p.m. and varsity contests beginning at 7 p.m.

For Seminole (5-11), which totaled 12 kills, 12 digs, 11 assists, three solo blocks and two block assists, sophomore Tara Wiggins had a good night with six kills, one block and two digs, while senior Courtney Newman also played well with three kills, one dig and good service receive match.

"It's that time of the season when you work hard to get into your game and stay in it," said Corso. "We didn't play defense tonight and gave up six service aces."

The Fighting Seminoles will close out the regular season with a pair of home matches at Bill Fanning Memorial Gymnasium on Wednesday against Spruce Creek and on Thursday against Lake Brantley, which will also be Senior Night. These matches will be tripleheaders beginning with the freshmen at 5 p.m., the junior varsity at 6 p.m. and the varsity at 7 p.m.

In other volleyball action Monday night, the Lake Howell girls fell in straight games to Orangewood Christian (17-6), 15-6 and 15-10, and the Winter Springs boys (5-14) knocked off Father Lopez, 15-11, 8-15 and 16-14.

APOPKA - Lake Brantley showed that it is one of the top programs in Central Florida. Winter Springs rallied for its second win in a row and Mainland took out a lot of frustration on Lake Howell in prep football action from Friday night.

Senior Lanier Bush ran for two touchdowns and sophomore Randy Casey ran for another and the Lake Brantley defense completely bottled up the Apopka offense as the Patriots routed the previously underfeated Blue Darters, 32-6, at Rager Williams Field.

Bush scored on runs of 25 and 32 yards, while Casey, who ran for 101 yards in the game, found pay dirt after a 16-yard gallop as Lake Brantley took a 19-0 lead at halftime.

The lead could have even been more as Apopka stopped the Patriots on fourth-and-one at the Blue Darters eight yard line on Lake Brantley's first possession.

The Patriots defense got involved in the third quarter as sophomore Corey Andrade picked off an Apopka pass and returned it 80 yards for a touchdown to give Lake Brantley a 25-0 lead.

The Blue Darters (5-1 overall, 2-1 in Class 6A-District 3) scored their lone touchdown on a one-yard run by Fernando Durden to cap a 51-yard drive with 5:59 left in the game.

The Patriots (6-1 overall, 4-0 in 6A-2) then closed out the scoring on a five-yard run by Bryan Smith.

Lake Brantley's defense held Apopka without a first down and only 19 yards rushing and six yards passing in the first half.

The Patriots will be idle this week before returning to Tom Story Field to host Lake Mary in a huge 6A-District 2 game on October 29th.

Yankees eliminate Red Sox

BOSTON - Derek Jeter hit a two-run home run in the first inning and Orlando Hernandez and four relievers made it stand up as the New York Yankees wrapped up the American League Championship Series, four games to one, with a 6-1 victory over the Boston Red Sox Monday night at Fenway Park.

Chuck Knoblock led off the game with a single to right and Jeter followed with a booming home run to straight-away center field as the Yankees took a quick 2-0 lead against Boston starter Kent Mercker.

The Red Sox then missed a golden opportunity to get right back in the game in the bottom of the first inning as Jose Offerman and John Valentin opened the frame with back-to-back singles.

But the runners never moved as Hernandez mowed down the heart of the Boston line-up with a strike out, a pop up and a fly to right.

Jason Varitek hit a lead-off home run for in the eighth inning to get the Boston Red Sox to within 4-1 of the New York Yankees, but could get no closer as the Yankees wrapped up the series 6-1.

Back-up quarterbacks pull out big victories for Dolphins, Jaguars

By Dean Smith
SPORTS EDITOR

FOXBORO, Mass. - There might be a 100 people in Florida who could have told you who the back-up quarterbacks were for the Miami Dolphins and Jacksonville Jaguars prior to Sunday's games.

But after Damon Huard (Dolphins) and Jay Fiedler (Jaguars) came off the bench to lead their respective teams to victory, they are household names today.

Dan Marino left Miami's game with the New England Patriots after throwing just three passes with a sore neck and shoulder, but Huard came on to complete 24-of-43 passes for 240 yards, including touchdown passes of 69 to Tony Martin and five yards to Stanley Fritchard, as the Dolphins came back from a 14-0 deficit to win 31-20.

Marino, who completed his first pass to Martin for 8-yards to go over 80,000 yards passing for his career, had an interception returned 57 yards by Andy Katzenmoyer for a touchdown and Huard's first pass was returned 24 yards by Ty Law as the Patriots took the big early lead.

But behind Huard and an amazing defensive game by the Dolphins, which held New England to 259 yards of total offense, Miami got back in the game behind six field goals by Olindo Mare.

The Dolphins got the ball back with 2:10 left in the game and Huard drove his team 59-yards capped by the pass to Fritchard with 0:39 left.

On Monday, an MRI performed on Marino showed a bone spur on his neck which may force the future Hall-of-Famer to miss next Sunday's game with the Philadelphia Eagles.

The Jaguars had similar problems as they trailed the new Cleveland Browns 7-6 when starting signal-caller Mark Brunell was forced from the game with bruised ribs in the third quarter.

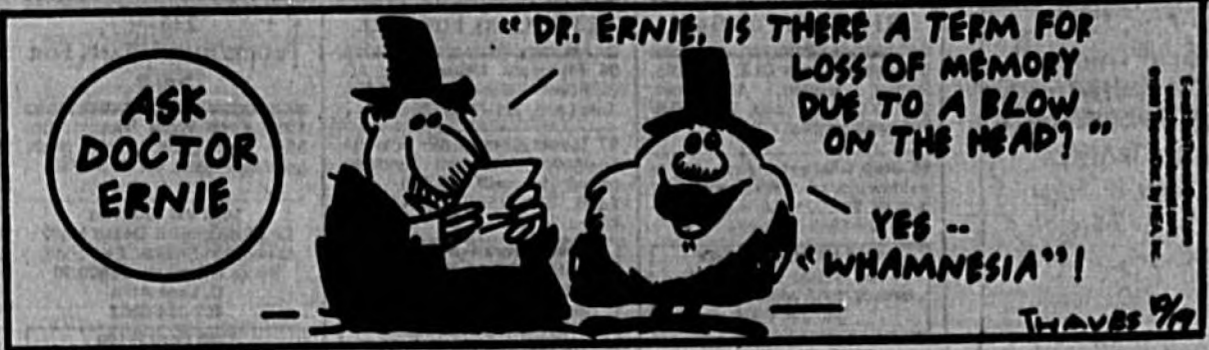

Fiedler came on to complete 12-of-14 passes for 113 yards and one touchdown and also ran three times for 27 yards to lead Jacksonville to a 24-7 victory.

HOROSCOPES

Tuesday, Oct. 19, 1989

There might be greater chances for advancement in the year ahead in your chosen field of endeavor. It could come about in way of a job change or a promotion from within.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be prepared to make corrections or adjustments should a plan that looks good on paper not stand up too well when you attempt to implement it. It can be fixed. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you understand what to do to make the relationship work. Mail $2.75 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1759, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10119.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) In the long run, something you think needs changing might end up benefiting everybody but you. Before revamping something that is running fine, make certain it will be better for all.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Should someone who has never supported you previously want to be on your back again today, be wary. This individual might have some type of ulterior motive for doing so.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) It's very unlikely you, yet today you might have difficulty keeping your financial affairs in good balance. What comes in the front door might fly right out the back door.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) One's reputation is priceless, so be extremely selective today with whom you choose to pal around. The wrong types could get you tarred by the same brush used on them.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Chances are it'll make matters worse if you attempt to get even today with someone who has wronged you in the past. Instead of being vindictive, turn the other cheek.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you really believe in someone who needs some support today, pull out the stops and go all the way for this person. It'll pay off for you in the long run.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Treat those people with whom you have dealings today fairly, but include yourself as well. Don't feel obligated to share with someone who has not made a legitimate contribution.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be advised, this is not a good day to try to pull the wool over anybody's eyes, even the weak. If you want to make a good impression, be up front and open in your dealings.

CANCER (June 21-July 20) Careless, needless talking could get you in a bit of trouble today, so remember that old broom that says, "Leave the sink ships" before you bubble away without thinking.

LEO (July 21-Aug. 22) In areas where many of the fine details are still a bit obscure, don't lock yourself into an agreement today, thinking the little things will take care of themselves. They won't.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Weigh tactics against gains today. If there's a chance you might offend someone in the process of going after a deal, you need to rethink ways to attain it or you'll end up losing.

WIN AT BRIDGE

Never say never, until it's impossible

By Phillip Alder

Thomas Jefferson wrote something that is usually abbreviated to "law die and none resign": "If a due participation of office is a matter of right, how are vacancies to be obtained? Those by death are few; by resignation, none."

At the bridge table, you shouldn't resign until you have lost more tricks than you can afford. How would you have greeted the 5-0 trump break in this grand slam? Also, what do you think of East's double?

Agreed, the bidding is contrived! Still, note that seven clubs by North falls if East leads a spade for West to ruff.

When this deal was played originally, declarer won trick one with his heart ace and cashed the spade king.

When he saw the 5-0 spade split, he immediately capitulated, muttering that he had to lose a trump trick. "Why weren't we in even no-trump?" he added.

North, offering to take the office, asked South to vacate his seat. He started with three rounds of clubs. When East didn't ruff, declarer continued with a fourth club from dummy, ruffed and overruled. He returned to dummy with a diamond to the king, and the last club was also ruffed and overruled. Declarer drew trumps and claimed these 12 tricks: four spades, one heart, three diamonds, three clubs and two overrules.

East's double was deft. Even if the contract went one down, he was turning plus 100 into plus 300. And here, having been warned that something was afoot in Medville, South might have run to the impregnable seven-act trump.

ASK DR. GOTT

What is 'referred pain'?

DEAR DR. GOTT: What causes "referred pain"? How can one feel pain in one place when it really comes from elsewhere?

DEAR READER: Referred pain is one of the bugaboos of medicine, because it often makes a diagnosis much more difficult to reach.

Our bodies contain networks of nerves that feed impulses to the brain. For instance, when you slam your thumb with a hammer, pain fibers are stimulated, electrical charges travel up the nerves, and you quickly recognize the location of the injury. Problems arise when an organ is supplied by several different nerve pathways or if there is an overlap so that more than one organ is served by the same nerves. In this case, the brain often misinterprets the nerve signals and mistakenly attributes the pain to one part of the body when, really, an adjacent area is stimulated.

For example, the heart, the upper stomach and the lower esophagus are supplied by the same nerve trunk. If a patient has heartburn, doctors may have understandable difficulty telling whether the discomfort is coming from the heart or the digestive tract. Patients with heart attacks often believe they are experiencing indigestion; conversely, people with esophagitis (esophageal inflammation) may be convinced that they are in the throes of a coronary. This is because the brain cannot distinguish the nerve impulses reaching it.

Another example: The nerves to the diaphragm also supply the shoulder. Therefore, diaphragmatic irritation from pleurisy or a gallbladder attack may be perceived by the patient as shoulder pain.

Chest pain may be particularly difficult to decipher. Patients having coronary conditions may complain of jaw pain, shoulder discomfort or forearm tingling and numbness, throat burning, or abdominal distress — as well as chest pain — because the pain is referred to another area of the body.

Referred pain is a common phenomenon, and people respond in highly individualized ways; there is no set-cut pattern. In diagnosing certain ailments, the doctor must consider all possibilities, however remote. Early on, good physicians come to realize that because of the body's complex nervous system, the source of pain are not always what they seem to be.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have a hemanglance on my jaw. It's getting larger and more painful. What kind of doctor should I see?

DEAR READER: Hemangiomas are harmless tumors composed of masses of blood vessels. They are likely to remove because large areas of tissue may have to be excised; therefore, they should be operated on only by surgeons who are skilled at handling this sort of problem. In my opinion, facial hemangiomas should be treated by plastic surgeons, who specialize in reconstruction and skin grafting to minimize cosmetic disfigurement.
