Private eye thwarted

KINGSTON, Jamaica - An American private detective has failed in his attempt to abduct a Guyanese national who had been residing in the United States and bring him to Orlando,

Another detective was thwarted when he tried to kidnap a Jamaican and bring him to Colorado to face fraud charges,

The two investigators were probably emboldened by a June 15 U.S. Supreme Court that the American government may abduct people in a foreign country who are wanted for trial in the United States, police sources said.

MARATHON - Investigation of a fatal crash here nearly two years ago may lead to a national warning about a small-engine component, a newspaper reported.

More than 25,000 small planes may be susceptible to losing power because of a piston flaw, federal officials say. The National Transportation Safety Board has recommended that the entire series of engines be periodically checked for cracks in the piston fittings and that regulations be adopted requiring replacement of flawed cylinders, The Miami Herald reported

Action by the Federal Aviation Administration is pending, The Herald said.

"I was folding clothes when I suddenly saw smoke," Ms. Moore told the Florida Times-Union. "I couldn't put it out." Moments earlier, she said two men tried to sell her clothes and left in anger after she turned them away. Fire officials said they were investigating the incident.

More than 75 firefighters responded to the blaze, which burned for more than three hours and seriously damaged the two-story brick building. All 20 residents escaped with only minor injuries.

Sun's rays used to clean environment

By IKE PLONGS Associated Press Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL - Florida researchers are combining basic chemistry with the sun's rays to break down toxic wastes generated by refining oil, and senufacturing explanives.

The Scientists' next step is putting the process into practical use in a bigger scale — and out how much it's going

The best part of the , says one of the Florida Solar Energy Center researchers, Clovis Linkous, ia that they are "using sunlight for environmental cleanup."

The refinery industry and makers of military munitions are facing major problems because of increasingly stringent state and federal clean air regulations. These require reduction or elimination of volatile compounds being released into the atmosphere.

Forced into finding affordable ways to prevent further contamination of the environment, private industry and the military are looking for answers from the FEEC as well as other science facilities.

The research was a natural for the complex just south of the ennedy Space Center. Linkous, Ali Raissi and Nazim radov had been using sunlight tor materials in efforts to produce hydrogen - the so-called perfect fuel.

They soon saw that work spin off in a totally new direction.

Their method of energizing semiconductors by the sun's rays evolved into a solarelectrochemical procedure which could be used to detoxify certain waste products as they were exposed to it.

In broad terms, the process broke down the waste into its constituent elements, which an

The Army and Navy became interested and began funding research to find out whether it could be used in munitionsmaking. Along the way, the refinery people wanted help with breaking down hydrogen sulfide produced in their operations.

The Gulf Coast Hazardous Substance Research Center, a consortium of eight Gulf state universities based in Beaumont. Tex., began contributing to the research budget. The center is working on refinery pollution and its contribution to the solar testing comes from the federal Environmental Protection gency's Superfund for cleanup of hazardous wastes.

The first phase of the PSEC project is virtually complete.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

OP lawmakers

Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — If a piece of legislation is favored by Florida business, chances are Republican state lawmakers will be the firmest supporters, two analyses of voting patterns show.

Two of the largest pro-business lobbles -Associated Industries of Florida and the state chapter of the National Federation of Independent Business - reported the GOP backing in studies of how legislators voted on key issues in the 1992 regular and special sessions.

The studies released last week examined votes on bills dealing with taxes, health care, unemployment compensation, environmental issues and workers' compensa-

During a campaign, it matters very little what a candidate professes he or she will do . If his or her voting record cannot support that stand," wrote Jon Shebel, president of Associated Industries, in a letter with the

Thirteen of the 14 senators and 36 of the 40 representatives rated friendliest to business in the Associated Industries study are Republicans: 31 of the 32 House members and all seven senators who got 100 percent rankings from NFIB were from that side of the aisle.

The top pro-business senator, according to both groups, is Richard Langley of Cler-mont. Associated Industries found Langley voted on their side 89 percent of the time. while NPIB gave him a perfect ranking.

In the House, Associated Industries bestowed its top ranking on retiring Rep. Peggy Simone of Bradenton; she voted its way 97 percent of the time. Simone also got a 100 percent rating from NFIB.

Democrats generally were less likely to vote for bills favored by either business lobby. In the Senate, nine of the bottom 10 in the Associated Industries ranking were Democrats, while two of them scored "zero" ratings in the NFIB study.

Those numbers held true for the House, where the Associated Industries bottom 37 were all Democrata.

Three Senate Democrats were least likely to vote for the Associated Industries position: Sens. Ken Jenne of Davie, Carrie Meek of Miami and Peter Weinstein of Coral Springs. In the House, Rep. Elaine Gordon, D-North Miami, finished last at 48 percent.

The NFIB, meanwhile, gave "zero" rankings to Sens. Helen Gordon Davis of Tampa and Eleanor Weinstock of Palm Beach and to Gordon and fellow Rep. Steve Geller, D-Hallandale.

One Democrat fared quite well in both studies. Rep. Irlo "Bud" Bronson of Kissimmee, a cattle and real estate magnate who is among the wealthiest legislators, was rated at 89 percent by Associated Industries and 100 percent by NFIB.

Taxes, the thornlest issue that faced the Legislature in 1992, were a defeat for Associated Industries in both chambers. The Senate took its side only 37 percent of the time, while the House was slightly better at 52 percent.

Bill Herrie, lobbyist for NFIB, said the tax debate weakened support for small-business lasues across the board. Senators supported NFIB positions 53 percent of the time, the House 58 percent.

Even the 20-year veterans will tell you that the push for taxes made this year one of the most acerbic sessions in memory," Herrie said. "The tax fight overburdened the legislative process.'

Cops probe death after surgery

By Associated Press

MIAMI — Prosecutors are investigating the death of a Colombian singer who hoped to boost his career through plastic surgery.

Dr. Ricardo Samitier Jr. blames bad luck for Claudio Martell's death on May 3 — about 30 hours after he performed cosmetic surgery on the man's chin, cheeks, torso and penis.

"They're trying to create a phony murder case that didn't happen," Samitier told The Miami Herald for a story published Sunday.

A preliminary autopsy report listed the death as an "accident."

Samitier, 35, is a flamboyant surgeon known as "Dr. Lips" for his silicone injections — a practice now prohibited. He also claims to be "the developer of the Circumferential Autologous Penile Engorgement."

"I have more enemies in this town of plastic surgeons than any other surgeon," he said. "Why? Because I'm the best. I have the most patients. I make the most money."

Martell, 47, was born Claudio Reyes in the province of Santander in Colombia on Feb. 25, 1945. He had a heart problem since his 20s. After two open heart surgeries, he got a pacemaker and regularly took an-ticoagulants to survive.

Martell moved to Miami and began singing in bars. Earlier this year he had his first big hit, "Celestial Party." a salsa tune about a heavenly jam session where he sings lines of famous dead Latin singers.

"I had a very beautiful dream that I was in the heavens with a chorus of little angels," it begins.

His wife said he scheduled a tour of Canada, Central America and South America for later this year. He wanted to make a new appearance, without his double chin, chubby cheeks and flabby tummy, Laura Muro said.

"Our relationship was wonderful, and everything was turning out well for us," said Ms. Muro, 24.

On May 1, Ms. Muro, then eight months pregnant with twins, drove her husband to Samitier's clinic. Martell paid $1,500 in advance for the outpatient surgery.

When an international accord to restore peace and install democratic government in Cambodia was signed last autumn in Paris. its success rested on two crucial conditions: (1) that the four warring Cambodian factions adhere to the treaty's provisions; and (2) that the principal sponsors — the five permanent members of the U.N. Security Council. including the United States - keep their promise to finance the largest-ever U.N. peace-keeping operation in which the global body is a full partner in managing the

So far, the United Nations and the major powers are holding up their end of the bargain. But to no one's surprise, the most troublesome Cambodian faction — the communist Khmer Rouge - is not, and the consequences could be disastrous if it fails to come around.

The Khmer Rouge, which turned Cambodia into a slaughterhouse during a three-year reign of terror in the late 1970s, refuses to disarm 70 percent of its fighting force, as agreed by all parties in Paris.

· Now it's launching sporadic attacks on government-held villages in the countryside. Why? to press a demand that U.N. authorities disband the caretaker regime of Hun Sen, a Khmer Rouge archenemy who was installed by Vietnam during its occupation of Cambodia in the 1980s and whose interim rule the Khmer Rouge reluctantly agreed to. Now, the Khmer Rouge wants an all-party regime that it would seek to dominate before elections planned for next year.

The Khmer Rouge tries to justify its refusal to disarm by claiming that thousands of Vietnamese troops remain in Cambodia, even though Hanoi withdrew ha troops three years ago, and U.N. officials say there's no evidence of any remaining units, There are, however, thousands of Vietnamese civilian workers' Whose presence many Cambodians resent, a fact that the Khmer Rouge hopes to turn to its political advantage.

This transparent ploy has been denounced by U.N. officials, by Prince Norodom Sihanouk, Cambodia's de facto chief of state: and by the United States and other sponsors of the peace plan.

They must do more by calling Khmer Rouge representatives on the spot in the United Nations and by exerting pressure on China, which as the Khmer Rouge's main backer might use its influence to help prevent a new outbreak of heavy factional fighting.

For the United States, the obligation is especially important. It was, after all, the 1970 decision to invade Cambodia and expand the war from neighboring Vietnam that ultimately turned a once peaceful country into a killing field in which more than a million Cambodians perished.

Tainted fruit of Justice Department

In debating Edwin Meese from time to time on General Meese, "calls for multiple prosecutions the college circuit, I found him personally to be far from his stereotype. He is witty, bright and affable. But when it comes to the distribution of sexually explicit materials, the former attorney general reverts to his official image. He still believes fervently that it was hardly the intention of the Framers of the Constitution to protect such creeping dangers to family values.

I have suggested to Meese that under his reading of the First Amendment, Ben Franklin would have been busted by the Justice Department for his book "Advice To a Young Man on Choosing a Mistress.

Recently, the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals has sternly contradicted Meese's reading of the First Amendment on these matters. The case involving a North Carolina corporation, Adam & Eve - stems from the creation by then-Attorney General Meese of the National Obscenity Enforcement Unit in 1987. Then, through the unit's "Project Postporn," the Justice Department, in all its majesty, embarked on a strategy to destroy producers and distributors of sexually explicit materials - even when some of that material was not obscene and was protected by the First Amendment.

'The heart of this strategy." a former U.S. attorney in Utah said in a letter to Attorney (either simultaneous or successive) at all levels of government in many locations."

There would be no

escaping the wrathful hounds of the Obscenity Enforcement Unit. For instance, the Adam & Eve company which sells adult sexual material only by mail order - had been found not guilty by a North Carolina jury. And in 1990, a federal district court in Washington ruled that the Justice Department had acted in "bad faith" by trying to force the company to stop distribution of every bit of sexually related material, including Playboy. Not withstanding that setback, the national obscenity hit squad went after Adam & Eve in Utah, figuring that community standards

there would at last bring this company its just and bitter deserts.

In an indignant editorial, The Raleigh News & Observer in North Carolina points out that all this close attention by the Justice Department has cost Adam & Eve $2 million in legal fees so far. And that is the intent of the Justice Department. As the original letter to Meese. outlining the scorched earth plan, said: "This strategy would test the limit of pornographer's endurance ... as profitable as these enterprises may be, there is a limit to the prison terms, fines and forfeiture of assets to which obscenity distributors will subject themselves."

Note the interchangeable use of obscenity (iliegal) and pornography (which is not illegal).
When the Justice Department pursued Adam & Eve into Utah, a federal district court there:

said that the defendant had presented "voluminous evidence, some contested, of questionable motives and zealotry exhibited by prosecutors and government officials."

There was also the Justice Department's clear animus toward the First Amendment. If the department were now to be driven by both the spirit and letter of doing justice, Attorney General William Barr would drop the case and dismantle the National Obscenity Enforcement

Negative campaigns return?

It is widely predicted that this will be the presidential election from hell. Gresham's Law will come into play with a vengeance, with bad politics driving out the good. The ticket that hits the low road first and often will be the one that wins, or so we are told.

The assessment is only partially correct. Negative campaigning is going to reach a nadir. Both sides have skilled technicians who love nothing better than a fast-paced game of pin-the-dirt on your opponent. Labela will be attached as fast as they can be manufactured.

But saying that is almost irrelevant to the likely outcome of the presidential election. For the vast majority of voters who are certain that the system needs something more than a light tune-up, labels will be irrelevant. What they will be seeking is evidence that at least one of the two professional politicians the Republicans and Democrats have offered them has sensible proposals for reinvigorating the economy and, more importantly, revitalizing the nation's spirit.

The open secret of 1992 is that most Americans are Perotistas, even if Ross Perot himself turned out to be a flawed icon. Their overwhelming desire is for a system that works. The malaise that afflicts so many of us is grounded in the uneasy suspicion that something is badly amiss, that America is off course and drifting.

Ross Perot did not invent the national mood that his brief campaign so dramatically tapped. It was there, waiting and growing, and, if anything, his abrupt withdrawal from the race intensified it. He was much akin to the proverbial blind man trying to describe an elephant, but he proved one thing. What he encountered was much bigger than he knew or

It is also bigger than the old tags of right and left, liberal and conservative. The people are impatient when not disgusted with what currently passes for political dialogue. They understand that it is a curtain behind which organized interests advance their individual agendas with minimum regard for the collective good. They do not believe anyone has the answer. If many are certain there is something wrong with "big government," others have become no less disenchanted with a political theology that deifies the market and, like Marxism of old, promises pie in the sky in an ever-retreating by-and-by. What most are seeking is a political leader whose politics reflect what they see as both possible and necessary.

Because so many adult Americans are uncertain, unhappy and pessimistic about the future, this presidential election is already the most volatile in American history. The polls have repeatedly drawn a picture of the electorate as genie, changing shape with startling speed and case.

Just two weeks before the Democratic Convention, the combined negatives of Bush, Clinton and Perot were higher than their combined positive ratings.

Three weeks before that, Perot's standing in the polis was higher than any third party candidate in American history and his negatives were half as high as President Bush's. The president's poil numbers have awung from mediocre to record high to near-record low, all in little more than a year. Bill Clinton and his running mate, Al Gore, are currently the beneficiaries of the people's restless search for someone to trust, but they know it can't last. Temporarily, they have managed to be all things to many people, offering in their youth and vigor the impression that,

as Jack Kennedy promised in his campaign 32 years ago, they will get "the nation moving again." Because the Democrats in 1992 have relearned an old lesson, which is that you have to win before you can do anything else, they have papered over the old fault lines that split them so badly

Labels will be attached as fact as they

But the paper will tear if Clinton and Gore do not convince the voters over time that they are people whose vision extends further than Nov. 3. George Bush, the incumbent president, must convince the voters that his second term will be something far better than the second act of a play they already dislike.

In both cases, the key to success can be found in the evolving consensus among the people that give rather than take is what the attuation requires. That is not to ignore the fact that the first priority for millions of Americans is to find a job or feel secure in the one that they hold. It is to recognize that the unease which afflicts so many of us has deeper roots than the long lingering recession. The cam-paign which capitalizes on the growing consensus that it is not enough to operate, individually and in groups, as special pleaders, is the campaign that will win.

This is going to be the longest presidential campaign in history. The Democrats are already running all-out, and the president is clearly in battle gear. Ordinarily, that would be something to decry. This year it is a positive development.

U.S. officials fear unknown in Iraq

WASHINGTON - President George Bush and the United Nations have put up with a lot of lying from Iraqi President Saddam Hussein - much more than either is willing to

That's why little matters like the lraqus' deliberate miscounting of how many Scuds they have left after the Gulf War adds a dangerous element of uncertainty in any a m e o brinkmanship with the Baghdad dictator. So deadly are the Scuds that when a single one hit U.S. barracks near Dhahran, Saudi Arabia, it killed members of the Pennsylvania National Guard. They are deadly, if inaccurate, weapons.

If the current standoff between U.N. inspectors and the Baghdad government results in a renewed military conflict with Iraq. one of the foremost strategic considerations by the Bush administration will be the clusive Scuds and the havor they can wreak. However decisive a victory Desert Storm represented, it was also a humbling experience for the Pentagon and intelligence-gathering agencies. The CIA initially underestimated even the Iraqi ability to launch the Scuds, leaving the United States to direct as much as a third of the American air effort to chasing Scuds during the war. This engendered some of the most sudden scrambling of the war plans. and was mostly designed to shield Israel and the Saudis, whose citizens became ground

Before Desert Storm, one U.S. intelligence estimate said that Iraq had eight fixed launchers and 50 mobile ones for their Scud missiles. As it turned out, they had about 50 fixed launchers and a whopping 400 or more mobile launchers.

Another example is the Iraqi nuclear program. It progressed far beyond any U.S. government prediction. As the United States was bombing "priority" targets in the first days of the air war, U.S. intelligence pinpointed only four sites where nuclear weapons-building technology was taking

'They told us about eight places where Iraq works on nuclear weapons - not the mere four we originally pegged," one source said.

Now the U.S. government believes that it underestimated by roughly 50 percent the weapons of mass destruction the Iraqis had to begin with. Since not all targets were destroyed during the war, less than half of these weapons facilities were destroyed. One source estimates that maybe only one-fourth of these weapons-related facilities and material were wiped out. He maintains there is not proof, for instance, that a single active Iraqi biological warfare facility was destroyed. As tensions heat up, U.S. intelligence analysts have to fear the unknown more than the known.

POLITICAL BAKE-OFF - While most Senate races turn on the grand issues of peace and prosperity. Republican challenger Charlene Harr believes she has seized on a 'wedge" issue that provides the ingredients for an upset over incumbent Democratic Sen. Tom Daschle of South Dakota.

In this Year of the Woman, Harr is running on a platform of the Year of the Homemaker, someone who has issued more recipes than policy papers.

Commissioners will formally adopt the budget during two hearings, on Sept. 8 and 22.

Tuesday, commissioners are scheduled to set the tentative countywide miliage rate of $5.42 per $1,000 of taxable property, a reduction from the current rate of $5.70. The reduction would save the owner of a $100,000 home about $21 from this year's tax of $427. The owner of a $75.000 home would save about $14 from this year's tax of $284.

Unincorporated residents will see only a slight reduction in their road and fire protection taxes. Rabun proposed a reduction from about $2.87 to about $2.86. Owners of unincorporated less or about $214.50. Owners of $75,000 homes in the unincorporated areas will pay about 38 cents less. or about $143.

Although Rabun's spending plan is moving towards confirmation by commissioners, three tasues remain to be decided. Rabun has asked for a 15 percent rate increase for water and sewer customers and a 72 percent increase in the dumping fee paid by garbage haulers. Rabun sought the increases to help meet bond requirements and to pay for new state and federal regulations.

Airport-

The completion of the runway work, mostly financed through FAA and other grants, accounted for one of the largest reductions in the budget. In last year's line item, runway overlay was listed at $1,630,000. For the new budget, the figure is $248,450, required to complete work related to the project.

Cooke said, "We had $300,000 allocated this past year for the purchase of an airfield rescue fire fighting vehicle, which is now in operation, so it eliminated that line item for this VERF.

Some airport employee raises may be in the future. "We don't have a cost of living raise,' Cooke said, "but our employees will be evaluated this November. and we have budgeted $30,833 homes will pay about 56 cents additional money in our salary portion of the budget to allow for up to a five percent increase based on the evaluation."

During its earlier budget discussions, the Airport Authority increased several expenditures. 'The Authority added $40,000 to that," Cooke said, "bringing it up to $90,000 for this coming year, mostly because the building we operate in is going to need some major repairs during 1993.

The airport budget will be presented to the Sanford City Commission during the regular meeting tonight, beginning at 7

Setback

When an international accord to restore peace and install democratic government in Cambodia was signed last autumn in Paris. its success rested on two crucial conditions: (1) that the four warring Cambodian factions adhere to the treaty's provisions; and (2) that the principal sponsors — the five permanent members of the U.N. Security Council, including the United States - keep their promise to finance the largest-ever U.N. peace-keeping operation in which the global body is a full partner in managing the

So far, the United Nations and the major powers are holding up their end of the bargain. But to no one's surprise, the most troublesome Cambodian faction — the communist Khmer Rouge — is not, and the consequences could be disastrous if it fails to come around.

The Khmer Rouge, which turned Cambodia into a slaughterhouse during a three-year reign of terror in the late 1970s, refuses to disarm 70 percent of its fighting force, as agreed by all parties in Paris.

Now it's launching sporadic attacks on government-held villages in the countryside. Why? to press a demand that U.N. authorities disband the caretaker regime of Hun Sen, a Khmer Rouge archenemy who was installed by Vietnam during its occupation of Cambodia in the 1980s and whose interim rule the Khmer Rouge reluctantly agreed to. Now, the Khmer Rouge wants an all-party regime that it would seek to dominate before elections planned for next year.

The Khmer Rouge tries to justify its refusal to disarm by claiming that thousands of Vietnamese troops remain in Cambodia, even though Harrot withdrew ha troops three years ago, and U.N. officials say there's no evidence of any remaining units. There are, however, thousands of Vietnames. thousands of Vietnamese civilian workers whose presence many Cambodians resent, a fact that the Khmer Rouge hopes to turn to its political advantage.

This transparent ploy has been denounced by U.N. officials, by Prince Norodom Sihanouk, Cambodia's de facto chief of state: and by the United States and other sponsors of the peace plan.

They must do more by calling Khmer Rouge representatives on the spot in the United Nations and by exerting pressure on China, which as the Khmer Rouge's main backer might use its influence to help prevent a new outbreak of heavy factional fighting.

For the United States, the obligation is especially important. It was, after all, the 1970 decision to invade Cambodia and expand the war from neighboring Vietnam that ultimately turned a once peaceful country into a killing field in which more than a million Cambodians perished.

Tainted fruit of Justice Department

In debating Edwin Meese from time to time on General Meese, "calls for multiple prosecutions the college circuit, I found him personally to be (either simultaneous or successive) at all levels of far from his stereotype. He is witty, bright and affable. But when it comes to the distribution of sexually explicit materials, the former attorney general reverts to his official image. He still believes fervently that it was hardly the intention of the Framers of the Constitution to protect such creeping dangers to family values.

I have suggested to Meese that under his reading of the First Amendment. Ben Franklin would have been busted by the Justice Department for his book "Advice To a Young Man on Choosing a Mistress."

Recently, the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals has sternly contradicted Meese's reading of the First Amendment on these matters. The case involving a North Carolina corporation, Adam & Eve — stems from the creation by then-Attorney General Meese of the National Obecenity Enforcement Unit in 1987. Then, through the unit's "Project Postporn." the Justice Department. in all its majesty, embarked on a strategy to destroy producers and distributors of sexually explicit materials - even when some of that material was not obscene and was protected by the First Amendment.

"The heart of this strategy," a former U.S. attorney in Utah said in a letter to Attorney

government in many locations.'

There would be no

escaping the wrathful hounds of the Obscenity Enforcement Unit. For instance, the Adam & Eve company which sells adult sexual material only by mail order - had been found not guilty by a North Carolina jury. And in 1990, a federal district court in Washington ruled that the Justice Department had acted in "bad faith" by trying to force the company to stop distribution of every

there would at last bring this company its just and bitter descris.

In an indignant editorial. The Raleigh News & Observer in North Carolina points out that all this close attention by the Justice Department has cost Adam & Eve $2 million in legal fees so far. And that is the intent of the Justice Department. As the original letter to Meese, outlining the scorched earth plan, said: "This strategy would test the limit of pomographer's endurance ... as profitable as these enterprises may be, there is a limit to the prison terms, fines and forfeiture of assets to which obscenity distributors will subject themselves."

Note the interchangeable use of obscenity (illegal) and pornography (which is not illegal).

When the Justice Department pursued Adam & Eve into Utah, a federal district court there said that the defendant had presented "voluminous evidence, some contested, of questionable motives and zealotry exhibited by prosecutors and government officials.

There was also the Justice Department's clear animus toward the First Amendment. If the department were now to be driven by both the spirit and letter of doing justice. Attorney General William Barr would drop the case and dismantle the National Obscenity Enforcement

Negative campaigns return?

It is widely predicted that this will be the presidential election from hell. Gresham's Law will come into play with a vengeance, with bad politics driving out the good. The ticket that hits the low road first and often will be the one that wins, or so we are told.

The assessment is only partially correct. Negative campaigning is going to reach a nadir. Both sides have skilled technicians who love nothing better than a fast-paced game of pin-the-dirt on your opponent. Labels will be attached as fast as they can be manufactured.

But saying that is almost irrelevant to the likely outcome of the presidential election. For the vast majority of voters who are certain that the system needs something more than a light tune-up, labels will be irrelevant. What they will be seeking is evidence that at least one of the two professional politicians the Republicans and Democrats have offered them has sensible proposals for reinvigorating the economy and, more importantly, revitalizing the nation's spirit.

The open secret of 1992 is that most Americans are Perotistas, even if Ross Perot himself turned out to be a flawed icon. Their overwhelming desire is for a system that works. The malaise that afflicts so many of us is grounded in the uneasy suspicion that something is badly amiss, that America is off course and drifting.

Ross Perot did not invent the national mood that his brief campaign so dramatically tapped. It was there, waiting and growing, and, if anything, his abrupt withdrawal from the race intensified it. He was much akin to the proverbial blind man trying to describe an elephant, but he proved one thing. What he encountered was much bigger than he knew or

It is also bigger than the old tags of right and left, liberal and conservative. The people are impatient when not disgusted with what currently passes for political dialogue. They understand that it is a curtain behind which organized interests advance their individual agendas with minimum regard for the collective good. They do not believe anyone has the answer. If many are certain there is something wrong with "big government," others have become no less disenchanted with a political theology that deifies the market and. like Marxism of old, promises pie in the sky in an ever-retreating by and by. What most are secking is a political leader whose policies reflect what they see as both possible and necessary.

Because so many adult Americans are uncertain, unhappy and pessimistic about the future, this presidential election is already the most volatile in American history. The polls have repeatedly drawn a picture of the electorate as genie, changing shape with startling speed and case.

Just two weeks before the Democratic Convention, the combined negatives of Bush, Clinton and Perot were higher than their combined positive ratings.

Three weeks before that, Perot's standing in the polls was higher than any third party candidate in American history and his negatives were half as high as President Bush's. The president's poli numbers have swung from mediocre to record high to near-record low, all in little more than a year. Bill Clinton and his running mate, Al Gore, are currently the beneficiaries of the people's restless search for someone to trust, but they know it can't last. Temporarily, they have managed to be all things to many people, offering in their youth and vigor the impression that,

as Jack Kennedy promised in his campaign 32 years ago, they will get "the nation moving again." Because the Democrats in 1992 have relearned an old lesson, which is that you have to win before you can do anything else, they have papered over the old fault lines that split them so badly

Labels will be attached as fast as they

manufactured.

But the paper will tear if Clinton and Gore do not convince the voters over time that they are people whose vision extends further than Nov. 3. George Bush, the incumbent president, must convince the voters that his second term will be something far better than the second act of a play they already dislike.

in both cases, the key to success can be found in the evolving consensus among the people that give rather than take is what the situation requires. That is not to ignore the fact that the first priority for millions of Americans is to find a job or feel secure in the one that they hold. It is to recognize that the unease which afflicts so many of us has deeper roots than the long lingering recession. The cam-paign which capitalizes on the growing consensus that it is not enough to operate, individually and in groups, as special pleaders,

is the campaign that will win.

This is going to be the longest presidential campaign in history. The Democrats are already running all-out, and the president is clearly in battle gear. Ordinarily, that would be something to decry. This year it is a positive

U.S. officials fear unknown in Iraq

That's why little matters like the Iraqis' deliberate miscounting of how many Scuds they have left after the Gulf War adds a dangerous element of uncertainty in any

a m c o brinkmanship with the Baghdad dictator. So deadly are the Scuds that when a single one hit U.S. barracks near Dhahran, Saudi Arabia, it killed members of the Pennsylvania National Quard. They are deadly, if inaccurate, weapons.

If the current standoff between U.N. inspectors and the Baghdad government results in a renewed military conflict with Iraq. one of the foremost strategic considerations by the Bush administration will be the clusive Scuds and the havor they can wreak. However decisive a victory Desert Storm represented, it was also a humbling experience for the Pentagon and intelligence-gathering agencies.

The CIA initially underestimated even the Iraqi ability to launch the Scuds, leaving the United States to direct as much as a third of the American air effort to chasing Scuds during the war. This engendered some of the most sudden scrambling of the war plans. and was mostly designed to shield Israel and the Saudis, whose citizens became ground

Before Desert Storm, one U.S. intelligence estimate said that Iraq had eight fixed launchers and 50 mobile ones for their Scud missiles. As it turned out, they had about 50 fixed launchers and a whopping 400 or more mobile launchers.

Another example is the Iraqi nuclear program. It progressed far beyond any U.S. government prediction. As the United States was bombing "priority" targets in the first days of the air war. U.S. intelligence pinpointed only four sites where nuclear weapons-building technology was taking place.

During and after the war, the CIA extensively debriefed two key Iraqi nuclear weapons defectors who provided voluminous information, some of which has been shared with the U.N. and international nuclear proliferation experts.

"They told us about eight places where Iraq works on nuclear weapons - not the mere four we originally pegged," one source said.

Now the U.S. government believes that it underestimated by roughly 50 percent the weapons of mass destruction the Iraqis had to begin with. Since not all targets were destroyed during the war, less than half of these weapons facilities were destroyed. One source estimates that maybe only one-fourth of these weapons-related facilities and material were wiped out. He maintains there is not proof, for instance, that a single active Iraqi biological warfare facility was destroyed.

As tensions heat up, U.S. intelligence analysts have to fear the unknown more than the known.

POLITICAL BAKE-OFF - While most Senate races turn on the grand issues of peace and prosperity. Republican challenger Charlene Harr believes she has seized on a 'wedge" issue that provides the ingredients for an upset over incumbent Democratic Sen. Tom Deschie of South Dakots.

In this Year of the Woman, Harr is running on a platform of the Year of the Homemaker. someone who has issued more recipes than policy papers.

Tuesday, commissioners are scheduled to set the tentative countywide miliage rate of $5.42 per $1,000 of taxable property, a reduction from the current rate of $5.70. The reduction would save the owner of a $100,000 home about $21 from this year's tax of $427. The owner of a $75,000 home would save about $14 from this year's tax of $284.

Unincorporated residents will see only a slight reduction in their road and fire protection taxes. Rabun proposed a reduction from about $2.87 to about $2.86. Owners of unincorporated homes will pay about 56 cents additional money in our salary less or about $214.50. Owners of portion of the budget to allow for $75,000 homes in the unincorporated areas will pay about 38 cents less, or about $143.

Although Rabun's spending plan is moving towards confirmation by commissioners, three issues remain to be decided. Rabun has asked for a 15 percent rate increase for water and sewer customers and a 72 percent increase in the dumping fee paid by garbage haulers. Rabun sought the increases to help meet bond requirements and to pay for new state and federal regulations.

The completion of the runway work, mostly financed through adopt the budget during two FAA and other grants, achearings, on Sept. 8 and 22. counted for one of the largest reductions in the budget. In last year's line item, runway overlay was listed at $1,630,000. For the new budget, the figure is $246,450, required to complete work related to the project.

Cooke said, "We had $300,000 allocated this past year for the purchase of an airfleld rescue fire fighting vehicle, which is now in operation, so it eliminated that line item for this year."

Some airport employee raises may be in the future. "We don't have a cost of living raise," Cooke said, "but our employees will be evaluated this November, and we have budgeted $30,833 up to a five percent increase based on the evaluation."

During its earlier budget discussions, the Airport Authority increased several expenditures. "The Authority added $40,000 to that," Cooke said, "bringing it up to $90,000 for this coming year, mostly because the building we operate in is going to need some major repairs during 1993.

They are Bernadine and Keith Pagnac and their two adorable red-headed children, Chad, 8. who would have been going into third grade at Wilson Elementary, and Kristen, 6, who would have been attending first grade at Wilson Elementary.

The Pagnac family have lived in the Raintree subdivision of The Crossings for the past 31/2 years and just purchased their home in May of last year.

However, because of the recession. Keith who is in the building industry, was forced to find a better opportunity in order to support his growing family. He found this opportunity a long way from Florida, in Everett, Wash., which is about 25 miles north of Seattle.

The Pagnac family was very happy here in this area of Florida and have made many friends. It is an unintended coincidence that the Pagnaca are returning to the state of Washington, since Lynnwood, Wash., which is between Seattle and Everett, is where Bernie, Keith, Chad and Kristen resided prior to coming to Florida.

It is a traumatic move to be returning 31/2 years later. It takes about that much time to really settle into a place and make friends and establish a home.

We are sorry to be losing you. but wish you much luck, health and happiness in your future.

The squad is in need of donations to help defray the cost of travel and other expenses for the tournament. The length of the season and the cost of traveling to three tournaments already this summer has pretty much depleted the teams budget and they really need finacial help if they are going to be able to compete for the state title.

If you can help, please call Mike Powers or Jerry Posey at Seminole High School, 322-4352.

Sanford Fall Softball meeting

Irvan wins again

TALLADEGA, Ala. - Ernie Irvan made up a lap he lost due to a flat tire on the fourth trip around the Talladega Superspeedway by catching the only two caution flags of the race at just the right time and rolled to victory in the DieHard 500.

Not only that, but the 11 laps of caution in the 188-lap event helped Irvan's Chevrolet Lumina set a race record of 176.308 mph. breaking the mark of 174.700 in 1978 by Lennie Pond. It was also the fourth fastest race in NASCAR history and the second fastest at Talladega.

The first caution flag, coming on the fifth lap when rain fell lightly for a few minutes in Turn 3, also made it a very pleasant afternoon for injured Davey Allison and Bobby Hillin Jr., who combined for a third-place finish that lifted Alliaon back into the series lead by one point over Bill Elliott, who finished fifth.

Sterling Marlin finished second, Ricky Rudd fourth and Kyle Petty sixth.

Barkley leads opening rout

BARCELONA, Spain - Using speed, height and strength, the Americans toyed with undersized, outmanned Angola in a 116-48 victory that fulfilled every expectation of the first Olympic team with NBA players. The 68-point margin was just four shy of the Olympic record, 72 points when the United States beat Thailand 101-29 in 1956.

Angola actually led 2-1 and was even tied 7-7. Then the Dream Team went to work, scoring the next 31 points and 46 of 47 over the next 1314 minutes.

Charles Barkley scored 14 points during the spurt and finished with a game-high 24 points. Karl Malone added 19 and Michael Jordan 10 while Magic Johnson had six points and 10 esists. The Americans led by 48 at the half, 64-16, shooting 62.2 percent from the field and outscoring Angola 17-1 at the free throw line. Angola made six of 32 shots in the first half.

Cyclones unleashed

Sanford Post 53 wins regional championship

From Staff Reports

VERO BEACH - Never count Sanford out.

After their play in recent weeks, some people may have thought that the Sanford American Legion Post 53 Cyclones were ripe for an upact as they headed into the American Legion Area Tournament in Vero Beach this past weekend.

Wrong. The Cyclones followed up Friday night's opening game 8-0 win with a 14-7 triumph over host Vero Beach Saturday, then completed a threegame sweep with a 14-1 slaughter of Pt. Pierce in six innings Sunday to earn an automatic bid to the American Legion 'B' State Tournament at Baseball City start-

From the moment we walked on the field, we were definitely the best team," said Post 53 head coach Kenne Brown. "The other teams were younger. I think we faced two 13-year-old pitchers. We definitely overmatched the field.

"We will see better teams in the state tournament, but this time they (the Cyclones) won't be surprised like they were in the Legion B tournament last month. We'll be well-rested, we'll have our whole pitching staff and it will be rested and we only have to play one doubleheader and that's on the first day of the tournament."

Todd Braden turned in one of his best pitching performances of the summer and David Eckstein and Jeremy Chunat both drilled two-run home runs in the title-clinching victory over Ft. Pierce.

Braden limited Ft. Pierce to five singles, struck out three and walked only two. After a slow start, the offense backed the junior right-

'We got great games from both Chunat (one-hitter in the opener) and Braden," said Brown, whose team improved to 27-10 with the three wins. "We went on the field ready to play today. I was real pleased with the enthusiasm. They had fire in their eyes today. The rest last week definitely helped."

Eckstein paced the offense on Sunday, going 2-for-3, scoring one run and driving in four, while Chunat was 1-for-3 with the home run, scoring two runs and driving in

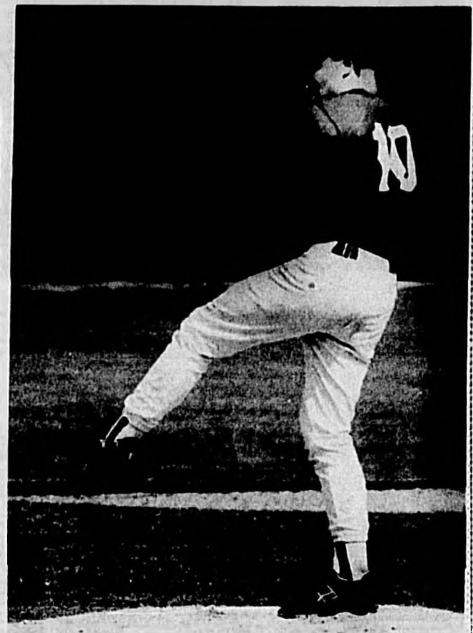

Also contributing were Scott Fergerson (2-for-3, 3 runs scored), Deon Daniels (2-for-3, double, two runs scored), Matt Freeman (1-for-3, 2 runs scored), Matt Diemer (1-for-5, one run scored), Corey Gochee (1-for-4, one run scored) and John Lugering and Robbie Morgan (one run scored each).

On Saturday, the Cyclones advanced to finals by scoring five runs in the bottom of the second inning to erase a 3-0 deficit and eventually built a 12-3 lead before ☐See Cyclones, Page 3B

County teams up to their armpits in arms

Seminole County is, you should excuse the expression, well armed.

This weekend, three "all-star" youth baseball teams representing the county were either in action or preparing for a tournament. And all of them boasted pitching staffs of impressive ability.

And we're talking pitchers, not just hard throwers, but pitchers.

In Vero Beach, the Banford American Legion Post 53 Cyclones — the summer team of the defending Class 3A state champion Seminole High School baseball program — went into the "B" Area Tournament with a staff of Jeremy Chunat, Todd Braden and Matt Freeman (the three pitchers Seminole used in the state tournament) as well as Rob Morgan and Deion Daniels.

Meanwhile, at Apopka, the Altamonte Springs Dodgers were playing in the National Amateur Baseball Federation regional tournament, led by a staff of Brett Black (Lake Brantley), Chad Kessler (Lake Mary), Kevin Stuckey (Lyman), Brian Gomes (Lake Howell), Todd Bellhorn (Oviedo) and Mitch Schardt (Lake Brantley).

This evening in Marietta, Ga., the Seminole PONY League Colt All-Stars take the field against Alabama in the Southeastern Regional tournament. Along with Morgan and Daniels, Lake Mary's Mike Carr, Lake Howell's Mike Johnson and Oviedo's Mark Metcalf are members of a very deep and talented pitching staff. All these and that's not taking into account players like Matt Diemer and Terry Tillia (Banford Cyclones), Frank Harmer and Jason Jaillett (Altamonte Springs Dodgers) or Mike Castro (Seminole Colts) who can pitch and pitch well.

In recent years, Seminole County high schools have graduated some pretty impressive pitchers, most notably Lake Brantley's Brad Rigby (who now attends Georgia Tech) and Oviedo's Rick Werner (drafted and signed this summer by the Milwaukee Brewers). Every year, every school has at least one ace to

But this . . . this may qualify as an embarassment of riches. When the Seminole Athletic Conference baseball schedule rolls around next spring, baseball fans can pick any game on any night at any park and be almost guaranteed of seeing a well-pitched game.

While low-run ball games that are the result of superior pitching may not be as exciting to the nonhorachide afficionado, one indisputable fact is that pitching wins championships, Seminole's state title and Oviedo's qualifying for the Class 4A state tournament serving as additional evidence to that claim.

The thing is, all of the pitchers listed here are underclassmen, rising seniors or younger. Who knows how much better they may be with another year's maturity, not to mention the lessons learned in the cauldron of top-flight summer competition?

The mind boggles.

As one coach commented, it runs in cycles. Some years, there are a lot of hitters in the league. Some years, there's plenty of pitching. But next year, not only will there be plenty of pitching, but a plethora of quality pitching.

In fact, don't be surprised if the rest of the state's high schools try and enter into an arms reduction treaty with Seminole County coaches for next year and on into the next century. Or at least until they can catch up, that is.

After opening the tournmament with an 8-4 come-from-behind win over Boone Friday night. the Dodgers (Lake Brantley High School's summer team bolstered by several other local players) dropped a 10-1 decision to Dr. Phillips Saturday morning to fall into the losers' bracket.

On Sunday, the Dodgers hooked up with West

Orange, which had eliminated Boone in Saturday's late game. With Lake Howell's Brian Gomes tossing a complete game four-hitter, striking out seven, the Doogers tripped West Orange 4-3 to get one foot into the door leading to the World Series. When Apopka beat Dr. Phillips twice (once Saturday afternoon and again Sunday afternoon).

the Dodgers were through the door.

In the afternoon, Bergman sent Lake Mary's Chad Kessler to the mound against host Apopka. Staked to a 3-0 lead in the first inning that grew to 8-0 in the third. Kessler took a no-hitter one out into the fourth inning.

"We were all over them," said Bergman. "But Keesler just made a couple bad pitches and we made a couple bad plays behind them. And you have to give Apopka credit. They didn't have a hit until the fourth inning, but they were up there

"There's nothing you can do in a game like that. You just write that one off and go one to the because it's such a fluke. It's just one of those things that happen in baseball."

Altamonte Springs didn't help itself any by botching several plays that extended Apopka

For example, during Apopka's seven-run fourth, the Dodgers were up 8-4 with two out when an Apopka runner got caught in a rundown between third and home. But the ball got away and the runner was safe at third. leading to three more Apopka runs in the inning.

Even so, Bergman is confident about the team's chances in the NABF World Series.

"I think this team wants it," he said. "I think the team played well in the regional tournament. They wen the games they had to win to get where they want to go. And that's what's important."

Hot days time to prepare for fall

believable, these hot summer days are the perfect time to start 'getting prepared" for fall vegetable gardening. Nematodes are one of the major obstacles for the vegetable garden, but the summer heat can be used to bake the harmful critters along with other soil borne pests.

A recent change in the label of a popular soil fumigant. metam-sodium, has many home gardeners looking for an alternative method to control soil pests. The chemical sold under such trade names as Vapam or Fume-V, has a new label requiring a purchaser or applicator to have a Florida Department of Agriculture private pesticide applicator's license. The license test is administered by Stephen Crnko. the County Extension vegetable agent at our office.

A non-chemical alternative which should kill soil-borne disease organisms, weed seeds and nematodes is solarization. The method has been tested extensively in Israel, Jordan and California. Test results in Florida have been inconsistent, but many gardeners in Seminole County have reported good results and I think it is worth a try.

The method uses clear plastic to cover the prepared garden area for a period of at least 4 to 6 weeks. In Califonria, soil temperatures six inches deep reached 111 to 122 degrees F. That's hot enough to fry many soil peats, if the soil is in full sun and left covered for an extended period of time.

ideal months, the high daytime temperatures now and in August worth a try.

The keys to proper solarization is to have the garden or flower bed ready for planting prior to covering with the clear plantic. Till the soil, and add pre-plant fertilizer and drip irrigation tubing before covering the soil with the plastic. The less you disturb the soil after removing the plastic, the better. If you dig around too deeply or till the area after uncovering the plot, you are likely to stir in some soil from below the heated area, where the micro-organisms and weed seeds may not have been

Water the soil before covering since moist soil conducts heat better than dry soil.

Be sure to use clear polyethylene plastic. The clear plastic tarp allows the soil to heat more quickly than if black plastic is used. This plastic, 1 to 2 mil. thick is clearer than thicker plastic and may allow Though June and July are more light to penetrate to the soil. However, over a longer period of time, the thick plastic and early September make it is more resistant to tearing and breakdown in the sunlight.

Leave the tarp on until you are ready to plant. You will have less chance of weed seeds and other pests getting back into the treated area.

Keep the area clean. Rinse tools such as shovels, rakes and hoes before using them in the treated area. Soil from untreated areas can recontaminate the garden or flower bed with nematodes, soil disease organisms or weed seeds. Be sure transplants for the flower bed or garden are grown in aterile potting soil. Planting seedlings grown in untreated soil may recontaminate the plot.

Gardeners may get more information on when and how to plant vegetables and flowers from the IFAS publication circular in Soil Solarization Report #17 that is available thru the University of Florida for $1.25 per copy. Order forms are available at the Ag. Center. For more information about vegetable gardening call the Ag. Center at 323-2500, Ext. 5550 and ask for a Master Gardener.

Thank you for the help you gave my daughter, Karyn, when she was planning her wedding. Your booklet on wedding planning was invaluable.

I have a suggestion for you. You seem to get so many requests to run an item again. Why don't you put all those poems, essays and special letters in a separate booklet and call it "Abby's Favorites"? I would be the first to buy one.

Keep up the good work.

KATHLEEN SCHULTZ, DEEP RIVER, CONN. DEAR KATHLEEN: You must

DEAR ABBY: I am always reading letters in your column from women who complain that they can't find a man. What do these women expect us men to do? Read their minds? How are we supposed to know which women want us to approach them, and which ones don't want to be bothered? Some women have written to complain because they can't go into a bar, sit down and have a drink without some man bothering them. How are gentlemen supposed to tell these women apart? It used to be that a woman who didn't wish to be bothered wore a wedding ring. That doesn't work anymore. Single women wear wedding rings, and some married women take theirs off.

These women who complain to you probably pass by men every day who are unattached and would be right for them, but the more decent a man is, the less likely he is to approach a woman he doesn't know.

Abby, why don't you suggest some way for women and men to communicate that they are interested in knowing each other?

DEAR ABBIt: The letter concerning how uninformed some people are about geography brought back a humorous memory from my Army days.
While I was stationed in Germany, a fellow soldier mentioned that she had just seen a map of Europe, and never realized that Germany was so close to Europe!

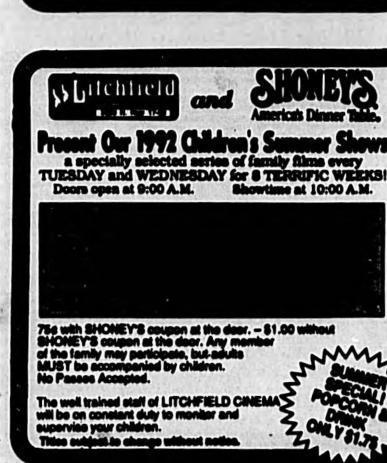

I laughingly repeated her remark to another soldier, and added: "That's like saying, 'I never realized Egypt was so close to Africa."

health. I'm mildly allergic to pseudoephedrine hydrochloride, regardless of the form or preparation the drug is in. After taking a cold medicine containing this drug. I break out in a faint rash on my upper torso. Since the rash doesn't bother me and cold remedies without this drug aren't as effective, would it do any harm if I continue the medication and suffer the side effects?

DEAR READER: If you are allergic to a drug, continued or repeated use of the medication could lead to a severe, even life-threatening reaction.

In view of recent reports showing that antihistamines and decongestants do not alter the course of common viral upper respiratory infections, I'd swear off over-the-counter cold remedies.

instead, try nasal sprays that don't contain pseudoephedrine or, better yet, ask your doctor to prescribe Hismanal, an effective decongestant that should not cause you to have a reaction.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm troubled with an incisional hernia that was caused by chronic coughing. Is surgical repair the answer?

DEAR READER: After a surgical incision, scar tissue forms. This scar is not as strong as normal tissue and, over time. can stretch and weaken. especially on the abdominal wall, which is quite movable and susceptible to abdominal presaure changes, as occurs with coughing. As the scar weakens, a bulge may appear because the loops of intestine pouch out.

Surgical repair is the answer. although you could use an abdominal binder (an inexpensive cloth garment) to provide additional support while deciding whether to have the operation. Incisional hernias can usually be fixed using a simple procedure under local anesthe-

Ambrose Bierce was a particularly pessimistic individual. For example, he said: "Calamities are of two kinds: misfortunes to ourselves, and good fortune to others." It sounds like the Unlucky Expert syndrome. But if you study the deals of players who claim to be unlucky, you will normally find that they misplayed.

Today's deal is a good example. Against three no-trump, West led the club king. Declarer naw that he had eight top tricks: four spades, one heart, two diamonds and one club. He realized that a 3-2 diamond break would allow him to generate the extra trick he needed.

Correctly, South held up his club ace until the third round. Then, incorrectly, he crashed out three rounds of diamonds. West won the last of these with the diamond jack and cashed two club tricks to defeat the "Just my luck!" grumbled

South. "West has five clubs and three diamonds. Do you know the odds against that, partner?" "Not exactly," replied North. He maintained a polite silence.

but he knew that the game should have been made. Declarer should attempt an avoidance play in diamonds.

At trick four, play a spade to dummy's jack. Then lead a low diamond toward hand, winning with the ace when East plays low. Take your three remaining spade tricks, discarding your low heart, and then play a second diamond. If the queen doesn't appear, win with the king and play a third round, hoping for the best. But when East's queen does appear, play low from hand. When West follows and

East switches to a heart, claim an overtrick.
