Polly's got a lesson

Ossie Stanley and his friends, a covey of parrots, cockatoos and other rain forest avians, have made a habit of visiting school children to teach them about the environment. Stanley displays the beautiful birds here to students at Tuscawilla Middle School. Hand-raised by Stanley, the birds help him show the youngsters about the fragile ecosystem in the Amazon rain forests from which most of birds' ancestors come. Stanley said he loves the birds and, even more, he loves the opportunity they afford him to teach young people about the environment. The birds, because they are hand raised, are very friendly and respond well to the children. The five year-old creatures are expected to live another seven or eight decades, so they will be around to teach many more generations about the rain forests and the animals and birds which live there.

Drug trafficker could go free

MIAMI - The former head of Bolivia's anti-drug agency was sentenced Thursday to three years in prison for cocaine trafficking, but his lawyer says he could be free in about another year because of time served.

Col. Faustino Rico Toro pleaded guilty in Miami on Nov. 30 to one count of conspiracy to import cocaine.

He has been in a Miami prison since March, when he was extradited from Bolivia. He was imprisoned there for about a year before the extradition, the first time a former military or government official was extradited from the country.

His lawyer, Ronald Dresnick, said under U.S. District Court Judge Edward B. Davis' ruling Thursday, Rico Toro will get credit for the two years he already served in both countries.

Rico Toro, 57, was named to head Bolivia's anti-drug force in February. 1991 by then-President Jaime Pas Zamora and Interior Minister Guillermo Capobianco. Within a week of the appointment, Rico Toro and Capobianco were forced to step down after the U.S. government threatened to suspend economic aid to Bolivia.

The U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration accused Rico Toro of operating a drug trafficking ring linked to one of Bolivia's top cocaine traffickers. He was one of 20 people named in a March 1995 indictment.

Two Broward teens murdered

POMPANO BEACH - Two Broward County teenagers were murdered by acquaintances in separate incidents.

Police say Willie Roger Richard, 16, was stabbed to death Thursday with a steak knife outside Pompano Beach Middle School after an argument with Donnell Mosley, 15.

According to a release from police, the two began fighting after Richard learned Mosley was looking for his cousin. During the argument, Mosley went to a friend's spartment, took a steak knife from her kitchen and returned to stab Richard in the upper left chest, police said.

Mosley has been charged with first-degree murder.

The second slaying occurred just two hours later in Dania. . According to police, 18-year-old Walter James gave classmate Feliciano Beneby, 17, a semi-automatic pistol he had brought to Hollywood Hills High School.

Beneby told police he had "an urge to kill," and shot James once in the head when he stopped the car near a warehouse to hide the gun. According to police, Beneby also tried to shoot the 16-year-old friend who had accompanied them to Dania. But the gun jammed and the boy escaped.

Beneby, who turns 18 next month, was charged as a juvenile with first-degree murder.

Blue Springs manatees treated

ORANGE CITY - Marine officials from Sea World corralled two manatees this week to treat them for injuries suffered by tangles of fishing lines.

Lucille, a 16-year-old female manatee, was cornered Wednesday at the Blue Spring State Park freed of lines, which cut into the manatees' flesh and can work through the tissue If not removed, said Peter Merrill, a veterinary student working for Sea World.

On Thursday, Sea World marine biologists trapped Margarito, a 12-year-old male. The web of fishing line was too imbedded in his flipper to remove, so the mammal was transported to Sea World in Orlando.

Scientists have been trying for weeks to help the manatees. Lucille was first spotted Jan. 17, but she eluded her helpers. On Wednesday, 18 people helped net the 1,600-pound Lucille and free her of the harmful lines. As workers removed the lines, her yearling calf, Lance, stayed nearby. Both were given a clean bill of health — after no signs of infection showed in Lucille's wounds — and were se

Social service field workers face audit after goldbricking report

Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE - Ran-domly-selected social service field workers will have their time sheets audited after some Jacksonville inspectors were caught running errands and having drinks during work

The Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services will check work reports in response to Sen. William Bankhead's call for "a full-scale investigation of this documented case of em-pioyee goldbricking."

Jacksonville television station
WJXT observed an HRS mobile home park inspector from the Duval County Health Department visiting a Wal-Mart and Kmart while supposedly doing inspections, and reported that he later stopped at a bar.

The station's hidden camera followed a day-care inspector who made only three 15-minute stops at day care centers but spent hours on personal errands.

A septic tank inspector visited a bookstore and a church on working hours and stretched a 30-minute lunch break to two

"This represents all that an increasingly cynical public feels is wrong with government today at every level," said Bankhead, R-Ponte Vedra Beach, chairman will randomly select field of the Senate Health and Rehabilitative Services Com-

Bankhead used the occasion to tout a bill he is developing to trim middle management at the nearly 30,000-employee social services agency and tighten local supervision.

In the legislative session opening March 5, his panel will consider other proposals that would drastically change the department, including one to give health-related duties to a separate state department of health.

In the meantime, HRS Secretary Ed Feaver said investigators workers statewide and audit six months of their time sheets and work reports from the last two years to check whether the work reported was actually done.

Anyone who falsifies such a record can be fired, he said.

About 3,800 employees who spend a lot of their time in the field will be subject to the records checks, said department spokeswoman Michelle Lagos.

That includes health inspectors such as those in Duval County as well as workers who conduct investigations for the agency's children and family services division, she said.

Culverhouse widow sues

By The ASSOCIATED PRESS

TAMPA - Three trustees of the $350 million estate of former Tampa Bay Buccan-Culverhouse have been sued by his widow in lawsuits alleging she has not received her fair share of the income.

Joy McCann Culverhouse acknowledges signing an agreement before her husband died that surrendered half of the estate, but she said that at the time she was more concerned about his health than what he would leave behind.

She said she signed the document on the advice of a friend, lawyer Fred M. Cone Jr., of Jacksonville, who would later become a trustee of the Hugh F. Culverhouse Trust.

She filed suit against Cone on Wednesday, accusing him of malpractice. In the second lawsuit, she is seeking an accounting of assets and the removal of her husband's handpicked trustees. The lawauita were filed in Hillsborough County Circuit Court.

In the second lawsuit. Culverhouse accuses the three men - Cone, Stephen F. Story and John M. Donlan - of keeping her in the dark about the trust since the August 1994 death of her husband from lung cancer.

The trustees have wasted trust assets, and falled to pay her the income she should have received by the terms of the trust, the suits allege.

They didn't distribute to her an $11.7 million cash dividend declared by the Bucs in 1994 and have yet to fund a $50 million marital trust set up to benesit her and her children. the lawsuit alleges.

"We don't have any way to understand what they are doing." said Tom Tew, the Miami lawyer who filed the lawsuits. "They're treating this trust as a blank check," he said.

All parties in the lawsuit declined comment.

BUSHNELL. Fla. - Chervi Ann Barnes is home, but she faces counseling and questions about how she ended up in a New York snowbank, incoherent, three weeks after being reported missing from here.

What happened to her physically or psychologically is unknown," Bill Barnes Jr. said Thursday after he brought his 17-year-old daughter from a New York hospital to a cheering crowd of about 100 neighbors and reporters. "The doctors can't even speculate."

Police, however, believe the girl ran away from home.

A behavioral specialist with the Florida Department of Law Enforcement studied entries from her diary and characterized Cheryl as depressed. Her father had also recently married one of her 18-year-old friends.

"They said all along they thought the key was in those journal entries." sheriff's spokesman Lt. Gary Brannen said. "They thought her diary

The rescue workers brought her to Beth Israel Medical Center where she was known as "Jane Doe" until a nurse recognized her photo Wednesday from a television newschat.

On Thursday, after a tearful reunion in New York: Cheryl and her family returned to this rural town of 2,212 about 50 miles east of Orlando and were greeted signs and a horde of reporters.

Based on the receipts found in the car, police know Cheryl was in Louisville on Jan. 4, where she apparently bought drawing supplies at an Office Depot.

On Jan. 10, she spent $2 at a Taco Bell in Indianapolis.

"It was so scary," she said, sobbing. "I was counting every day. I was praying to God that some one would recognize me. 1 prayed and prayed and prayed."

MIAMI - The young man with tuberculosis removed from an Amtrak train in northern Florida has died and health officials say they're determined to contact everyone exposed and make sure they're tested.

"We're making every attempt to notify everyone," said Michelle Bonds of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta, noting tuberculosis is preventable, treatable and completely curable."

The search for more than 100 passengers and their follow-up testing could take up to six months. Bonds said. Many of the passengers have been contacted. but it's too early to say whether anyone was infected, she said

The 22-year-old patient, who has not been identified, died Feb. 2 at JFK Medical Center near West Palm Beach, three days after his transfer from the A.G. Holley State Hospital for tuberculosis in Lantana. "This hospital is not equipped to do any type of surgical procedures," sald David Roach, chief executive at A.G. Holley. 'The (JFK) hospital did everything they could do. He started hemorrhaging." After leaving the Miami-bound Silver Star train on Jan. 21, the man was taken to University Medical Center in Jacksonville, then transferred Jan. 31 to A.G. Holley. He had large holes in his lungs, and his bronchial artery had croded and was bleeding.

State health officials and the CDC have been tracking down many of the passengers who rode the same trains as the patient - the Capitol Limited from Chicago to Washington on Jan. 19 and the Silver Star from Washington to Miami on Jan.

Passengers thought to be at risk have been advised to have a baseline TB skin test immediately and a follow-up sixto-eight weeks later.

Televising in civil court

An Associated Press report says the Maine Supreme Judicial Court has agreed to allow CBS to place television cameras in a courtroom and jury room during the hearing of a civil case. If this is the start of what may eventually apread across the nation and into Florida, we see some problems.

To some people, public speaking in front of a television camera is upsetting. Trying to speak well and appear calm and collected is difficult. People are often upaet over the feeling that their every word, every gesture, will be seen by hundreds, thousands, or millions of people.

Other persons however, see the TV camera as the opportunity to grandstand. They may take the opportunity to show off. They may try to show nothing more than how informed they are on a particular situation.

This type can be recognized easily, as people trying to grandstand often turn their eyes on the cameras rather than the persons to whom they are speaking.

We can see what may happen in courtrooms. Attorneys, both defense and prosecution, who may aspire for a political future, may attempt to show their prowess and eloquence.

Even defendants in a case may turn their faces toward the cameras and beg for leniency, but aiming their comments to the general public. They may believe that if the jury or judge finds them guilty, the public may come to their aid.

There is nothing wrong with the use of television carneras in the coverage of news. Rather, the difficulty is those members of the public who want their moment of fame, and try to use the cameras to their own benefit.

Courtrooms aren't the only questionable situations. Televising local government action

The Lake Mary City Commission telecasts all of its regularly scheduled commission meetings. Many citizens step forward to address the commissioners on various matters. A few however, know their comments will be heard citywide on cable television. Some, who may not even be directly connected with a particular matter, speak out, moving their focal points from the members of the commission to the TV cameras. We can only wonder if their intent is to seek election in the future, and thus use the cameras to introduce themselves to the electorate.

Most cities do not televise their government meetings. The potential of grandstanding by a few, (sometimes by individual commissioners themselves), is generally the reason. They believe, as do we, that if people want to know what is going on in their governments, they have the right to attend the meetings in Lake Mary is one of the few which televises meetings. Officials want to offer as many citizens of the city as possible, the opportunity to see and hear government activities in progress. It's the old story of better informed people bringing about better government.

Both sides have logical reasons for having or not having themr meetings telecast.

The problem however, whether we are talking about televising local governments or our court proceedings, is with a few individuals who, rather than using TV as an informational media, use it as a podium from which to benefit only themselves.

We believe this civil court activity telecasting bears watching, and should not be allowed locally without some serious study of the possible consequences.

-Guess who introduced legislation for a flat tax back in 1962? A serious 19 percent flat tax with no exemptions for home mortgages or for charity, with leaser rates for business income? It wasn't that Forbes fellow. It was a congressman from Monterey, Calif., an expert on budget economics -- Leon Panetta. Now, of course, he is chief of staff for President Clinton. Could it be such a nutty idea?

- Washington insiders are consumed by the search for the identity of "Anonymous," the author who wrote the novel "Primary Colors." The book is based on Clinton's 1992 campaign for the presidency. It's a good piece of fiction, as most all concede.

Those who have praised it include important Clinton allies. Mandy Grunwald, former campaign adviser, said this on "Larry King Live": 'it's a great book... a lot of it is true to life... it's only eerie that it is so accurate, some of it." The White House's George Stephanopoulos, whose fictionalized persons is a main character of the hook, called it "a great read," and according to Newsweek. It is set in a milieu thick with sex, drugs and obscenity. One plot line clearly intimates that the fictional governor had sex with a nowpregnant teen-age black girl.

A work of fiction proves nothing unless it is lent authenticity by those who were on site.

This particular work of fiction sets a backdrop that makes Gennifer Flowers, Psula Jones and the tales of Arkansas state troopers quite credible. So why have some Clinton insiders,

- Listen to the establishment press trying to follow Steve Forbes. He is a joke. He doesn't have a chance. He is buying the election. He is a bore. He has peaked. He has no experience.

And all the while, Forbes' poll numbers have gone up. Matched against Clinton, he runs better than any other Republican. Why? Forbes decided to run because he felt that an important part of the political dialogue was not being heard. It's hard to put a label on it, but it is a view that looks toward opportunity economics, cultural moderation, American optimism and toughness on social issues like crime and welfare. On the Democratic side, it has been articulated by the Democratic Leadership Council and backed -- rhetorically -- by Bill Clinton. Among Republicans, the Tough Moderate banner was hoisted prominently by the Conservative Opportunity Society (COS) and more recently by Empower America (EA), whose chairman was Steve Forbes.

it's a movement, it's serious stuff, and perhaps the presidential press corps will catch on.

Adolescent girls as fair game

PALO ALTO, Calif. - You could say that politics makes strange bedfellows, but bedfellows is probably not the best word to use considering the subject. The subject is sex, teen-age pregnancy, welfare - a trio of issues that have morphed into public enemy number one. An enemy with a face that is young and

In the past, politicians outdid each other in their praise of motherhood. Today they outdo each other in laments about teen-age motherhood. From the feminist left to the religious right, they have found common ground worrying and sermonizing over girls who become mothers before they become Now at last, the same disparate collection of policy-makers are turning their attention to the partners in this terrible tango: adult men.

In California, which has the highest rate of teen-age pregnnacy in the country, Pete Wilson, a governor who tacks from right to center with impressive sailing skills, has issued a warning to adult men who impregnate underage girls. In his state of the state address last month, he told these men, "I have this message: That's not just wrong, not just a shame. It's a crime, a crime called statutory rape."

In fact, it's a crime called "unlawful sex with a minor" in the gender-neutral terminology of the penal code. But Wilson has allotted $150,000 to each of 16 counties to go after men who go after girls. It's an idea whose time has come back. And not just in California.

The renewed interest in statutory rape laws comes out of startling research showing that the babies of teen-age moms don't necessarily have teen-age dads. Half the babies born to mothers between 15 and 17 had fathers who were over 20.

Remember the 14-year-old girl who had a baby in Texas last week and her 22-year-old "boyfriend"? Across the country, 20 percent of the fathers are six or more years older than the mothers. The younger the girl, the greater the age difference. In Washington state the average age of men who impregnated girls between 12 and 17 was 24 years old. And twothirds of the girls had been sexually abused in

You do the math. President Clinton's brand new National Campaign to Reduce Teen Pregnancy wants to cut teen pregnancy by a third by 2005. Half the impregnators are adult men. Any rational discussion of this issue has to include these men.

in California, one of Wilson's goals is, surely. to collect child support money by threatening imprisonment. But the other goal is to post a protective sign - "Off Limits" - around young and vulnerable girls. This where the support for dusting off these laws is growing out of a renewed concern about exploitation and abuse, sexual pressure and predators.

In early America, the age of consent for a girl was 10. Then in the 19th century, a movement made up of feminists and moralists and reformers of many stripes raised the age as high as 18 or 20 for the explicit purpose of protecting young females and their "virtues" from men and their "vices."

But a generation ago, in the wake of the sexual revolution and the women's movement, the social pendulum swung from protecting females to liberating them. Statutory rape laws seemed to sterectype both sexes while giving the state the right to decide who could and couldn't consent to

Most of the laws were put into mothballs. As a result. Michelle Oberman of DePaul University says. "Modern criminal law has turned girls from 'jail bait' to 'fair game.'"

An enemy with a face that is young and female.

Now, in many ways, we are concerned again that we have abandoned the responsibility to children. In the real world, "liberation" left girls more vulnerable, and the reform did little to right the power imbalance of age and gender.

I'm not in favor of these laws if they are used to prosecute the 18-year-old boyfriends of 17year-old girls. Every 17-year-old girl is not a victim. Nor is every 18-year-old boy a predator. The law is no substitute for that best contraceptive: a future.

But this is one way for society to draw a line. This is one way for society to right the power imbalance. It's time to say again that adolescent girls are not "fair game."

Beware of bandits on the infobahn

WASHINGTON .. Federal and state regulators have finally thrown up a roadblock against the modern-day version of "highway

One year after we first warned about scam artists using the information superhighway to peddle various investment scams, the Federal Trade Commission and 20 state securities agencies have joined forces to crack down on the crooks.

Dubbed "Project

Roadblock," the campaign has produced 85 law enforcement actions against bandits promoting more than a quarter of a billion dollars' worth of bodus investments. Despite the stepped-up enforcement. regulators caution that the high-tech schemes are still bilking hundreds of millions of dollars from unsuspecting investors across the country.

The crooks prey mostly on elderly consumers, many of whom have risked baby-sitting. their nest egg on the false belief that any investment connected with the information superhighway is the road to prosperity. One house-bound, elderly woman in Alexandria, Va., was fleeced in four high-tech scams. The woman lost her life savings of $100,000, which was earned over four decades of baby-sitting.

Regulators note that more than a quarter of all investment dollar losses reported to a federal-state database between March and October of 1995 involved high-tech information superhighway scams. Though the scams are not perpetrated on line - the crooks tout the explosive growth of the internet to convince victims that they're getting involved in a get-rich-quick investment.

According to one regulator, the promoters of the scams urge unwary investors to "just ait back and ride the coattails of the infor-mation superhighway" by making money off the boom in pagers and the proliferation of pay-per-call 900 phone numbers. Here's how the two most-reported frauds work:

in the first, a telemarketer offers to secure a license that covers a paging frequency in a portion of the United States. The caller tells the investor that a fortune can be made on the resale or lease of the license. To further entice and to hurry the potential victim, the caller goes on to say that the license is coveted by major paging operators because the federal government only allows one license per market. In fact, there is no limit on the number of licenses, and legitimate paging operators would never buy or lease a license from an individual.

The second scam involves 900-number investments. Telemarketers encourage the victim to purchase an interest in an "information provider" partnership. What the investor is not told is that information providers must pay promotional costs and must also fork over fees to any endorsers used in infomercials or other advertisements. These costs sap most of the victim's stake in the

"If these promoters complied with state and federal requirements on disclosing risks and profits, very few investors would go within a mile of these investments," one state regulator told our associate Ed Henry. "The truth is that these investments, if properly presented, are suitable only for sophisticated high-rollers who can afford to lose every penny that they put into them."

Law prof proposes cash market for human organs

By RICHARD CARELLI Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - Lloyd Cohen says he's found a way to end the severe shortage of vital organs needed for medical transplants: Let people sell their hearts, livers and kidneys when they die.

"There are those who like to pontificate about the descrition of the human spirit and such, but meanwhile people are dying for the lack of vital organs," says Cohen, a law professor at George Mason University.

It may sound like a ghoulish proposition, but Cohen says giving people an economic incentive to let their organs be used in transplant operations would end a scarcity that prevents many Americans from having life-saving operations.

"If you pay people for some-thing that's valueless to them, you'll probably get more of them to provide it to you. Why let usable organs be burned or become food for worms?"

Cohen wants people to have the same property right in their body parts as they have in omes, cars, boats or other

In other words, an estate could earn money through the sale of the vital organs of the deceased. Such a right does not exist today."Why shouldn't someone own his heart or his liver in the same way he owns his wristwatch?" Cohen asks.

Here's how Cohen's organ-ransplant market would work: -A government or quasigovernment procurement agency would spread informa-tion about how valuable their organa have become, perhaps $5,000 per heart, liver and kidney. -Potential donors would sign cards agreeing to provide organs if the circumstances of their deaths make harvesting possible and would specify to whom

For example, Hinson said, a European airline reported a case in which a pilot trying to set his controls to a 3,000-foot flight level inadvertently set them to 3,000-foot rate of descent.

If routine data collection began to turn up a series of similar cases, he said, steps could be taken to prevent such mistakes before an accident happened.

But airlines and pilots have been concerned about how this information would be used. They want assurances that routinely collected information will not be available for public release and not be used against pilots or others by regulators. Hinson said legislation is being considered to ease these fears.

Raising money to run

WASHINGTON - Wielding their majority status as a fund-raising lever. House Republicans last year raised $56.3 million toward their 1996 re-election campaigns, a national consumer group said today.

The figure, based on reports to the Federal Election Commission, represented a 28 percent jump over what the Democrats collected in 1993, when they held power in the House. The GOP fund-raising total in 1995 far outpaced the $34.2 million the Democrats raised last year as a minority.

"What is stunning is the degree to which House Republicans have used their power to solicit from the special interests such an enormous increase," said Ira Arlook, director of the liberal consumer group Citizen Action, which compiled the totals. The figure still may grow as late filing candidates' totals are added.

The money gap between the parties was even wider when amounts raised by House and Senate party campaign committees were added to the money raised by incumbents' individual campaigns.

Pope's Central American visit ends

GUATEMALA CITY - Pope John Paul II's five-day Central America mission, marked by his repeated calls for peace and reconciliation, ends today when the pontiff travels to Venezuela.

The pope is scheduled to depart for the South American country this morning following a farewell speech in Guatemala City, which has served as his home base during the trip.

Like many of the Central American countries. Venezuela suffers from serious economic and political problems. Inflation and employment are double what they were just three years

The warm welcome John Paul has received this week in Guatemala, El Salvador and especially Nicaragua contrasted radically with the reception he got in 1983, when armed conflict raged across the region.

Sick of Whitewater

WASHINGTON - A former Arkansas securities commissioner says she resisted efforts by a White House aide and two men with Clinton administration connections to get her to make public statements supporting the president and first lady on Whitewater.

Beverly Bassett Schaffer said in an interview Thursday that her response was "No way. I don't want to be drawn into the political response." She added, "I was sick" of talking about Whitewater.

The contacts with Schaffer were made around the time a Whitewater prosecutor was appointed and they tracked a strategy laid out at a Jan. 7, 1994, White House meeting. According to notes of that meeting. Clinton aides were greatly concerned about what Schaffer would say regarding her discussions with first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton on whether the savings and loan at the center of Whitewater could issue

As the state securities commissioner. Schaffer concluded that the S&L - represented by Mrs. Clinton's law firm - could issue stock. Schaffer had said during the 1992 presidential campaign she wasn't pressured by Mrs. Clinton and had only one conversation with her.

Poisonous mushrooms kill man

SAN FRANCISCO - A migrant fleid worker died after eating poisonous mushrooms, possibly the same variety that sickened a 13-year-old girl and her family.

Arturo Leyba-Sanchez of Petaluma died within three days of eating the mushrooms, called death caps. His death prompted Sonoma County officials on Thursday to issue a health warning, urging residents not to cat any wild mushrooms.

"If it kills a person that fast we've got to do something." said Will Wallman, a coroner's office investigator.

The teen-age girl, who ate death caps in a spaghetti sauce along with her family, had part of a donor liver grafted onto her liver on Thursday. Her liver had absorbed most of the toxins from the mushrooms. Doctors hope the operation helps the girl's organ rejuvenate itself.

Doctors at the University of California Medical Center in San Francisco said she showed no signs of rejection. She remained in serious but stable condition early today.

The girl's two brothers, aged 11 and 14, were released from the hospital Thursday. Her mother was upgraded from serious to fair condition. Investigators believe Leyba-Sanchez, who emigrated from Mexico a year ago, ate the mushrooms on Saturday. Two days later, he complained of stomach pains and began vomiting. He died Tuesday at Petaluma Valley Hospital, Sonoma County sheriff's Lt. Mike Brown said.

An autopsy revealed toxic substances consistent with poisons found in death caps, also known as Amanita phalloides. However, medical examiners said they could not determine the specific kind of mushrooms Leyba-Sanchez ate.

Splitsville for Lois Lane and Superman

NEW YORK - In the end, it's the superhero work - not his cross-dressing — that takes its toll on the 58-year courtship of Lots Lane and Superman.

Tired of playing second fiddle to the Man of Steel who wants nothing less than to save the world. Lois will call it quits with her jumper-wearing paramour. The DC Comics edition will be published on Feb. 14.

spokeswoman Martha Thomases said.

Superman will duck out for some superhero work and return to find that Lois did the disappearing act this time, leaving behind her engagement ring, Thomases said. Lois and Superman became engaged in 1990 but have dated off and on in the comic book series since 1938. Neither character will remain lonely for long. Thomases said. Lots will spot Superman, in his Clark Kent disguise, smooching with an old flame, mermaid Lori Lemaris. She herself will catch the eye of Spiderman's alter ego, Peter Parker, during a series of joint DC-Marvel comic strips.

Cops find 38 aliens in cargo space

ANNAPOLIS, Md. - State police investigating the crash of a rental truck found 40 illegal aftens crammed inside.

Thirty-eight aliens, all from Guatemala and Mexico, apparently spent the three-day trip from Arizona crowded into the unheated, dark cargo space without making rest stops. transportation authority police said. Two other aliens rode in Iront.

There were 38 people in the size of a space that would hold no more than living room furniture. Conditions were deplorable," said Benedict Ferro, district director for the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

The aliens apparently were being smuggled to jobs somewhere on the state's eastern shore, Ferro said.

The truck crashed Thursday at the Chesapeake Bay Bridge, rear ending a car that was stopped at a toll booth, police spokeswoman Lori Vidil said.

Two aliens, along with the driver of the car, were treated for minor injuries. The other aliens were turned over to INS of-

Other GOP candidates seize on polls presidential character - the

By TOM RAUM Associated Press Writer

CEDAR RAPIDS. Iowa -Republican candidates are scrambling for a huge bloc of undecided voters in the lowa caucuses with just a few days to go. With Bob Dole losing ground. his rivals are working hard to close the gap.

Texas Sen. Phil Gramm, trying to regain his footing after setbacks, was even offering plastic peel-off bumper stickers - for Republicans prone to changing their mind. He offered to send campaign workers out the day after the caucuses to remove them — If necessary.

Dole, still the front-runner but just barely - was back from a day of campaigning in New Hampshire to engage in heavy-duty campaigning here to shore up his fragile lead. He pronounced his lowa operation "in good shape," even though new polls suggested his lead was shrinking.

And publishing heir Steve Forbes, whose surprising surge in the polls had caught most political professionals and rival camps off guard, was back in the state to bolster his self-financed advertising campaign with several days of intensive retail campaigning.

Recent polls showed some support ebbing for Forbes, who has made a 17 percent flat income tax the centerpiece of his campaign. These polls also showed a large bloc of undecided voters — and they were the clear target as GOP contenders crisscrossed the state.

"Get out your Christmas card lists" to help lobby for his candidacy. Gramm told audiences at several stops in eastern lowa on Thursday. He maintained a stiff upper lip and tried to ignore a defeat earlier in the week by conservative commentator Pat Buchanan in a Louisiana caucus most GOP candidates had boycotted - but which Gramm had predicted he'd win.

Buchanan played the Louisiana victory for all it was worth, declaring himself "the temporary front-runner" in campaign appearances Thursday.

Gramm strategists contended the race was far from over, and that the extent of undecided voters so close to the election made Monday's contest a true grab bag.

Gramm dismissed Buchanan's victory as a fluke and pressed hard to win the support of lowa conservatives.

But he encountered some skepticism. David Solberg, an Independence, lowa, ceramic shop owner. said after meeting Gramm at a town hall meeting that he was still having a hard time making up his mind. "I was going to go with Senator Dole. But he and Forbes are dickering back and forth. And Senator Dole probably should have had it 10 years ago, if you know what I mean. Now I just don't know."

Voter concerns about the negative ad wars among the other candidates was taken up by Indiana Sen. Dick Lugar at a campaign stop in Des Moines.

T thought the whole idea of the caucuses was to get a Republican nominee who can win." Lugar told reporters. 'This is a demolition derby.'

Former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander struck a similar chord, laying most of the blame for the negative campaign, on Forbes and his relentless ad attacks. Alexander said many of those attacks were untrue. Forbes failed "the first test of George Washington test." Alexander said.

Late Thursday, as he stopped for a snack with his wife, Wendy Lee Gramm, at the Mealey Family Restaurant in Oelwein. about 60 miles northwest of here, Gramm again declared that his presidential campaign would be over if he doesn't finish at least third in Iowa.

"Why do you say that?" his wife asked him, picking at a salad of fruit and vegetables while Gramm dug lustily into an apple dumpling with vanilla ice cream overflowing its bowl. "It's just true, I think it's true. "Obviously you think it's true.

The reason is the momentum involved, the ability to raise money, a combination of all those things," Gramm said, looking off into space.

"I certainly am not eager to get out." he added.

But Gramm pronounced the But give me a reason why you think that," she said, ignoring a reporter at the table and quizz- dessert an unqualified success. "That was good," he said. "I feel better. I may live."

Forbes ready to overhaul Social Security, GOP rivals wary

By SALLY BUZDES Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - He doesn't mention it in his flurry of TV ads, but Steve Forbes plans to push to privatize the giant Social Security fund for younger people should he be elected presi-

Seniors groups have begun expressing concern about a proposal that goes far beyond the more modest changes discussed by Forbes' rivals for the Republican presidential nomination. "To privatize the system changes its whole nature." said Dan Schulder of the National Council of Senior Citizens.

The plan to put part of younger people's payroll deductions into private savings, rather than a government trust fund, has caught the eye of

"It's at least the start of a discussion about how to actually pay for these things in the future." said Richard Thau of Third Millennium, a New York-based advocacy group for 20- and 30-

This week, the politically volatile issue surfaced on the campaign trail in Iowa. Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole began airing a television ad warning: "Steve Forbes plans to end Social Security as we know it."

Dole ran the ad in response to a Forbes' spot accusing the Kansas senator of failing to protect Social Security. Dole has a long record of working to keep the system solvent through limited changes, such as scaling back cost of living adjustments and taxing certain benefits.

Other GOP candidates have mostly steered clear of Social Security, unless pressed.

"They'll throw out some possibilities, but they don't want to get caught in any specifics," said Bob Hannon of the Concord Coalition, a private group that advocates scaling back benefits for high-income Americans.

Forbes, who only recently began raising the issue on the campaign trail, argues that a sweeping overhaul is needed because Social Security faces insolvency in the year 2030.

He would maintain the current system for Americans now drawing Social Security benefits. plus those retiring in the next decade or so. 'Real-life decisions have been made based on those promises," he says.

But Forbes would phase in private savings for Americans who are around age 50 and younger.

"We all know ... that the current system will be broke or bleeding by the time these younger people retire." Forbes told the American Association of Retired Persons. Forbes has yet to flesh out details of his plan.

beyond saying a portion of payroll taxes would go directly into private accounts like an individual rettrement account or 401(k) plans. Thau believes Forbes will have to work hard to persuade both senior citizens and those in transition age groups. Democrats have politically skewered Republicans in the past for much more modest proposals.

The AARP worries that middle- and low-income people "don't necessarily have the financial expertise to make good (investment) choices. sald spokeswoman Evelyn Morton.

As for the other candidates, Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas talks about allowing individuals to put part of their contributions into private savings, but only in general terms.

Former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander says he would lead a national discussion about Social Security's future but refuses to discuss specifics.

Commentator Pat Buchanan promises he would never raise payroll taxes. Indiana Sen-Dick Lugar says it might be necessary to raise the beneficiary age.

Dole has voted, over the years, to scale back cost-of-living increases and partially tax benefits of higher-income Americans. But those votes came mostly as part of the 1983 Social Security bailout. Dole opposed more tax on benefits three years ago, and says he opposes any future benefit cuts or tax hikes.

Forbes, who stuck mostly to the flat tax in early appearances, now discusses Social Security frequently in tax-conservative New Hampshire.

Cheating, lying go hand in hand

DEAR MARY: My flancee and are supposed to get married this June. We've dated for almost two years and I was sure this was going to be the perfect marriage. (Both of us have been married once before.) Now, I'm not so sure.

While I was visiting relatives in Kentucky over the holidays, I found out that my flance cheated on me with an old girlfriend. When I first confronted him with what I'd heard. he lied about it; but when I kept on asking him, he finally admnitted it and said it didn't mean anything to him; he was just fooling around because he was lonely while I was gone. He promised me it would never happen again and begged me to forgive and forget.

I want to do that but it keeps gnawing on my mind. My dad cheated on my mom, my first husband-left me for another wothan, and I have reason to believe my fiancee cheated on his ex-wife. I keep hoping and thinking that he's learned his lesson and that once we're married he won't look at other women, but I don't know if I could stand the pain of another cheating husband, and divorce.

My heart wants to believe that he's changed and will never do it again, but in the back of my mind, I'm afraid. Do you think there's any way I can be sure he's learned his lesson before I go ahead with this marriage?

BEEN THERE BEFORE

DEAR BEEM, THEME! Jooks to me like you've been there before and are helder half to do it again. Let's look at the facts. Your "intended" has a history of cheating and then lying to cover it up. (By the way, lying and cheating in a relationship always go hand-in-hand. If you've got one, you can bet you've also got the other.) You have a history of picking men who cheat, as did your mother.

Get it through your head - if they did it once, they'll do it again! We women need to get smart and realize that marriage does not change anything in a man's character. They are not "fixer-uppers" waiting for us to come into their lives and make them better. If you marry this guy, you have every reason to expect that he will have the same character disorders as a husband that he has as a boyfriend. He lies and cheats. Now, the rest of the story is up to you. If you really want to avoid the path of another falled marriage, you need to start looking for a very differnt kind of man.

Once overweight man needs to practice what he preaches

"Abnormal in California," the 34year-old bachelor who lost 100 pounds and wonders where the women he's now dating were when he was fat and alone.

Sanford Mayor Bettye Smith signs proclamation declaring

February as American History Month sponsored by the Salle

Maureen Bravo. Emphasizing history all year, the Sallie Harrison

Chapter will present history and essay awards today at 2 p.m. at

Perhaps he should look to women who understand what he's been through - those who may be sitting at home feeling rejected and alone because they are overweight.

If he doesn't consider a fat woman worthy of his time, then he's doing the same thing he accuses the women of doing to him.

A DULUTH, MINN., READER

DEAR DULUTH READER: You make a valid point. "Abnormal" has a special understanding to offer women whose social lives are suffering because of their weight. I was inundated with letters from readers who shared their painful experiences. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: In reference to "Abnormal in California": I, too, was overweight during my childhood and teen-age years. After painful harassment and great struggle, I finally lost the weight. Suddenly, I miraculously fit into the socially acceptable world, even though nothing else about me had changed. I had the same personality, moral standards and sense of humor I had when I was heavy.

Although being overweight is unhealthy, it doesn't mean an overweight person is not worth know-he is the most wonderful friend and companion a woman could have. C.A.A. IN DELAWARE

DEAR ABBY: Recently I left a pot of rice on the stove too long. By the time I remembered it, the potwas smoking. Last week, a friend of mine accidentally started a grease fire in her kitchen. I heard many tragic news reports over the holidays about Christmas trees causing fires and heartbreak in what should have been a joyful season.

Abby, I'd like to pass on a suggestion that was made to me after my close call with the rice: Every home should have at least one fire extinguisher. The new ones are inexpensive and come with easy-tofollow instructions. Learn how to use it as soon as you get it home, then put it in plain sight. If you buy only one, the kitchen is the best place to keep it.

I have decided to purchase fire extinguishers as gifts for the weddings, housewarmings and gradua-

DEAR ABBY: My college classmates and I are concerned that something as minor as leaving one's hat on is seen as disrespectful. Times have changed, and so have people. Keeping a hat on during dinner is not considered disrespectful by a young person's peers. Neither does the young person intend any disrespect to his elders. If no disrespect is intended, then none should be taken.

Each generation has its own standards of courtesy, Abby. I'll bet your elders took offense at some of the things your generation did, too. IN TUNE WITH THE TIMES

DEAR IN TUNE: I see many more hats at tables these days, it's true. However, well-mannered people of every age still observe the niceties. If that means removing a hat occasionally, it seems a small sacrifice.

Larche preaches, shares past

By SUGAN WESHIE Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - Jimmy Larche, a former juvenile delinquent now youth evangelist, will speak at the Sanford Civic Center on Friday, February 23. Sharing the perils of his turbulent teenage years Larche travels and presents the faith and love in Christ he has found.

His past of growing up in a broken home, running away and attempting suicide brought him then to a psychiatric hospital at the age of 13 and a juvenile detention center at the age of 16. While there, he met a preacher that shared a message of hope.

After his acceptance of Jesus and his forgiveness he then committed his life to sharing this message with others. His goal has been to spare others the grief and pain that he suffered.

The Sanford Civic Center is located at 401 East Seminole Blvd. The event will take place at 7 p.m.

For more information call Youth Storm at P.O. Box 32851. Palm Beach Gardens, FL 33420 or call (4070743-6207.

Ask the preacher Bible questions

Question : "Why do so many have a 'me first' mentality?"

Answer: People naturally ursue the path of least resistance. Why bother? Serving self is easier than looking out for others. I know what I want but I'm uncertain or uncaring about what you may need. "If I don't watch out for my interest who will?" seems to be a popular frame of mind.

There are many reasons that selfishiness to on the upowing in our world. The number one reason: "We are taught to be day runs against the grain of

Now, let me explain. I do not believe that parents in mass are telling their children to be self-serving little imps but many are allowing them to grow up that way.

We are also taught selfishness by others. When someone mistreats you with their selfish ways, you instinctively react with a show of your own.

The popular philosophy of our Biblical teaching. Jesus did not teach us to do what was right for ourselves but do what is right.

The golden rule of treating others as you wish to be treated seems so foreign to the attitude of most. Loving your neighbor as yourself is another untaught Biblical truth.

The world follows agnostic, cynical, materialistic, selfish goals. The Word teaches us to meet the needs of others. You owe the world your best, it owes you nothing.

Celebrating Valentine's Day

By WESLEY BAKER, PASTOR Special to the Herald

SANFORD - February 14th is Valentine's Day. This year, along with cards and the flowers and the candy, let's give something far more important. Let's give some consideration.

It's Biblical. We are told to 'consider one another to provoke unto love and to good works (Hebrews 10:24)." Not to provoke in the sense of inciting to anger. But to call forth, to evoke. The New International Version translates it, "spur..on." The New King James says, "stir

Living a life of love and peace

By REV. BRUCE SCOTT Special to the Herald

SANFORD - least Pennington, a 17th Century Quaker poet, wrote, "Our life and peace and tenderness and bearing one with another, and not laying accusations one against another. and helping one another up with a tender hand, if there has been any slip or fall; waiting 'till the Lord gives sense and repentance if sense and repentance be wanting. Oh, to walk in this spirit, that ye may enjoy the Lord in aweetness, and sweetly, meekly, tenderly, peaceably and lovingly one with another."

As we think of Valentine's Day and love let us remember it is a word that is thrown around but hard to live up to. There is only one language that a confused world understands; a love that is not only vocal, but active.

It is not only what we say, but what we do that counts. If Christians don't lead and become headlights and not the taillights in this society needing love for our God, for our families, for our church families, for our community, nation and world, then who will? Let us be leaders of love.

We live and move and have our being from God's Word. Paul'a great love chapter reminds us not only at wedding times and not only for Valentine's Day, but for every day the following: "And now I will show you the most excellant way. If I speak in the tongues of men and of angels, but have not love, I am only a resounding gong or a clanging cymbal...And now these three remain ; faith, hope

Making use of a living will know your opinion on living wills and power of attorney. I have also signed an ambulance form refusing heart compression, defibrillation, etc. How NY 10156. Be sure to mention the title much actual power do my son and doctor have to see these carried out? Although my sister who recently died had the same requests, they were ignored until her blood pressure read 48/0 and, at that stage, treatment was stopped. I'm 80 years old and realize my own mortality may soon be in question. How do I assure that my wishes will be carried out?

DEAR READER: This is a very pertinent issue. We all can sign living wills until we are blue in the face, but our wishes may not be honored if, subsequently, we experience a life threatening catastrophe.

If you do not want to be subjected to life support during an emergency, you must distribute copies of your living will to your doctor, next of kin, attorney, and local hospital. Hopefully, with everyone "on board," your wishes will be respected.

In my experience, it's the family members and the doctor who must really be instructed about your desire to avoid resuscitation. As part of that plan, make sure those who are involved in your care will not call an ambulance if you are unable to express your wishes at the time. Unless the ambulance personnel know your preferences, they are mandated - often by state law - to administer life-saving measures.

A further consideration might be a MedicAlert bracelet or neck emblem, indicating that you have a living will on file. These devices will give emergency responders critical information regarding your life support wishes. Further details can be obtained by calling 1-800-432-5378. In summary, discuss this with your attorney who, depending on your state's legal position, can advise you whom to notify and in what form. DEAR DR. GOTT: Please comment on the effect that a hot tub might have on a couple's fertility. Could this cause a problem either in conceiving or in maintaining the fetus from the time of conception on? I'm worried.

DEAR READER: Many medical authorities believe that hot tubs affect male fertility by reducing the number and activity of sperm.

Therefore, if you wish to become pregnant, I advise you to encourage your husband to abstain from prolonged exposure to the heat generated in hot tubs. To my knowledge, such activity will not affect a woman's ability to conceive, nor will it harm a pregnancy. Nonetheless, I advise all pregnant women to check with their obstetricians before using hot tubs.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Contraception: An Update."

DEAR DR. GOTT: I would like to Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, selfaddressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York.

> DEAR DR. GOTT: I have silicone breast implants. The capsule around the implants hardened, and my doctor had to perform a closed capsulotomy. Is this condition going to cause health problems in the future?

> DEAR READER: From your brief description, I conclude that your surgeon had to modify the covering that kept your breast implants in place. In my experience, this is an unusual solution to the problem of malfunclioning implants. A more customary approach would be to remove the silicone entirely and replace the prosthe-ses with saline breast implants.

Although several studies have failed to demonstrate a relation between silicone breast implants and autoimmune diseases — such as lupus and scleroderma — many women believe that they have suffered irreparable damage from leaking breast prostheses, causing arthritis, fatigue and a host of other symptoms.

Therefore, I urge you to obtain a second opinion from another surgeon. who may recommend further operations to remove the silicone and substitute a less toxic substance.
