Politician talks pork

LONGWOOD — Call it Svinigate or a Pig Problem. In Longwood Monday night, a politician was talking "pork" but not as in pork barrel projects, as in pet.

Commissioner Paul Lovstrand noted Mayor Steve Miller is the owner of a potbellied pig kept at his Longwood home.

The city adopted the county code for its own ordinance on the matter. It does not allow livestock, defined as any member of the equine, bovine or swine family within the city limits, Lovstrand asserted. "I called the county code enforcement officer and potbellied pigs are not allowed," the commissioner told the mayor.

"If you want to pick on my pet," Miller retorted, "you are free to do so." Petunia, the 28-pound, pink potbellied pig has been a part of the Miller household for about a year and two months, Miller said. He claimed while campaigning in the Skylark subdivision recently he found five families with the porker pets. The mayor also noted potbellied pigs are advertised under "pets" not "farm animals" or "livestock" in local newspapers.

Miller said perhaps the city should set up a permitting process to allow people to keep the little piggy pets.

Lovstrand wondered aloud if the mayor should abide by the law or the law should be changed to accommodate the mayor's pet. By the way, Lovstrand is campaigning for Miller's opponent in the November election.

Violation of code

One arrested as city probes infractions

By NICK PFEIFAUF
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The special task force to seek out city code violations was only recently established. Monday morning, it saw its first battle.

According to the police report, at approximately 10 Monday morning, the city's code enforcement team, comprised of Sanford Public Utilities Director Jerry Herman, Building Inspector Dan Florian, Fire Inspector Terri Murray, and police officer Tim Welter, went to 1000 W. 16th St. to investigate possible code violations.

The team is to check for such matters as litter in yards, building or fire code violations, trash, junked cars, and other infractions of city codes.

The police report says, when the team arrived, the four, "came into contact with a Robert Morris. The team asked Morris if he knew who the property owner was. Morris became extremely rude and uncooperative and told the team to get off his property."

Morris, age 51, is listed as living at 1508 Williams Ave. in Sanford.

The report continues, "As the team turned to leave, Morris threatened them by saying he would fill them full of lead if they returned. Officer Welter turned back around and approached Morris advising him that he had just

Runoff election today: 'Slow, slow, very slow'

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — A trickle of voters turned out this morning to participate in runoff elections.

"Slow, slow, very slow," was elections supervisor Sandra Goard's assessment at 9:30 a.m. Goard said one precinct with 1,696 registered voters had attracted 28 voters 2 1/2 hours into voting today. In another, 17 of the 1,432 voters had participated by 9:30 a.m.

Polls will be open until 7 p.m. today. Locally, Democrats were called on to choose between incumbent District 2 county commissioner Carlton Henley and primary challenger Adrienne Perry. The race heated up in the final days when Henley mailed a piece featuring a photograph of Perry taken from a newspaper without her name.

Perry charged racism, which Henley denied, but then fired back with allegations her opponent was not supportive of women's issues. Henley said the allegation was a lie, noting girl's sports programs he initiated during his tenure as principal of Lyman High School.

Democrats will also choose their candidate to face U.S. Sen. Connie Mack, D-Fla., next month. Their choices are Mike Wiley, a former Orlando talk show host, and Hugh Rodham, brother to first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton. That race has been teaty, with Rodham questioning Wiley's name change from Michael Schreilbman and his use of campaign funds to pay his mortgage.

Republicans have only one choice today, between Frank Brogan and Bob Morris in the commissioner of education race.

Pond protection pondered

Lake Mary to study retention pond safety

By NICK PFEIFAUF
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — The Lake Mary City Commission will hear a special presentation this Thursday night regarding a pond which has been dug on North Country Club Road.

The pond is on the western side of the road, across from Grace Methodist Church and Liberty Park, and near the Lake Mary Sports Complex.

During a meeting last month, Commissioner David Meador said he had received a number of calls regarding the retention pond. Mayor Lowry Rockett said he had also heard questions and complaints, mostly about the safety issue.

Meador observed that some people have questioned whether having such a large pond dug into that area may even lead to a potential for sinkhole development.

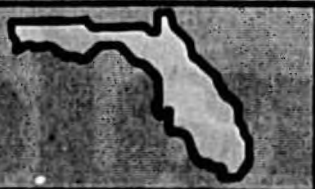

As of yesterday, the retention pond has no enclosure, nor is there any protection to keep motorists who may drive off the road, from ending up in the pond.

With recent rainfall, the water in the pond has been getting deeper.

City Planner Matt West said the pond is required, as what is known as a "Compensation Storage Site." West said for every development, there must be a certain amount of land removed elsewhere, to

State promises to subsidize rail route

TAMPA — The state is promising $70 million in annual subsidies to get the Tampa, Orlando, Miami high-speed rail plan back on track.

"This is going to be a major public-works project, akin to building the interstate highway system," said Nick Seriani, state public transportation administrator.

Airlines complain that a subsidy would give the rail plan an unfair advantage.

"If high-speed rail is going to work, let the market come up with ways to finance it. We think public subsidies are not what state governments should be worried about," said Chris Chiamas, a spokesman for the Air Transport Association, which represents the major airlines.

The automobile also is considered a formidable opponent because many travelers find it more convenient to drive than park, buy tickets and wait for a train.

A high-speed plan failed four years ago because private developers couldn't raise enough money.

The Florida Department of Transportation plans public hearings to discuss options and hear suggestions.

Loni in court

STUART — Loni Anderson must appear Wednesday in court to answer questions from attorneys representing her ex-husband, Burt Reynolds, a Martin County circuit judge has ruled.

But the former acting couple's dispute over an unpaid $11,000 alimony payment, artwork and a grand piano will not be decided at a hearing previously set for Thursday.

The former acting couple has been feuding over artwork that Anderson says Reynolds has failed to return to her, and a grand piano that Reynolds says Anderson hasn't given back.

Reynolds, who lives in Hobe Sound, was required to appear in Stuart last week to give a statement to Anderson's attorneys. Anderson wanted to give her statement to Reynolds' attorneys over the telephone from California.

Her attorney, William Stolberg, told Circuit Judge Paul Kanarek on Monday it would be difficult for Anderson to make the trip.

But Kanarek didn't budge.

Last week, Reynolds' attorneys filed court documents asking the judge to find Anderson in contempt for failing to return the piano. Late Monday, Stolberg filed documents asking Kanarek to throw out the contempt case. He said Anderson offered to return the piano to her ex-husband last week.

Grant to aid NTC employees

TALLAHASSEE — The state has won a $3.4 million federal grant to help almost a third of the employees who will be laid off with the closing of the Naval Training Center in Orlando, Gov. Lawton Chiles said.

About 800 of the more than 2,500 workers who will lose their jobs will be helped by the grant.

The purpose is to provide participants with services, including assessment and counseling, job-search assistance and various types of training and financial assistance.

The grant was the second through the U.S. Department of Labor's Job Training Partnership Act awarded to Florida in a week. Florida was granted $2.1 million last week to help workers at the McDonnell-Douglas facility in Titusville, which lost the Navy contract for the Tomahawk missile.

Chiles announced the grant Monday.

Poisonous plant

DAVIE — Jason Boucher reached down for a plant at a K mart garden center, felt a sharp jab on his hand and was horrified to find a 2-foot rattlesnake had bitten him and was still holding on.

"I was shocked. I slung my hand to get the snake off and fell over a bunch of plants," Boucher said Monday from a hospital bed.

"A friend killed the snake," the 19-year-old Hallandale man said. Boucher was brought in Sunday night in serious condition, but was in fair condition by Monday afternoon, said a spokeswoman at the Westside Regional Medical Center in Plantation.

The pygmy rattlesnake bit him at a store in Davie, about 20 miles north of Miami.

The snake probably got into the garden center from a field, said Lt. Lynne Maddox, hunter education officer for the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission.

She said pygmy rattlers usually don't have enough venom to kill a healthy person. The snakes are found mostly in prairies, swamps and woodlands in the south-central United States but have been seen as far north as the Great Lakes region and as far west as Arizona.

This was the fourth time in seven years that people shopping in garden centers at Florida discount stores have been bitten by poisonous snakes.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

13 percent of voters expected Rodham-Wiley face off in Senate runoff

By BRYN KALLESTAD
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — The weather may be good, but a low turnout is predicted as voters choose a Democratic nominee for the U.S. Senate and a Republican nominee for education commissioner in runoff elections.

Miami attorney Hugh Rodham, the younger brother of first lady Hillary Clinton, and former radio talk show host Mike Wiley of Longwood vie for the Democratic senate nomination in today's so-called marquee contest.

But the anticipated turnout indicates little interest in the Democratic runoff. The winner advances to next month's general election against U.S. Sen. Connie Mack.

Only 13 percent of the state's voters are expected to show up despite favorable weather predictions, said Secretary of State Jim Smith.

"Unless something excites people, they won't go to the polls," Lance deHaven-Smith, associate director of the Florida

Institute of Government at Florida State University, said Monday. "In this particular case, the winner is unlikely to beat the Republican incumbent."

The last time Florida voters had a runoff in the U.S. Senate was in 1988, when the turnout was 23 percent. Buddy Mackay, now the lieutenant governor, defeated Bill Gunter for the Democratic nomination that year, but lost to Mack in the general election.

Today's turnout isn't expected to come close to the 1988 figure despite the weekend visit by Mrs. Clinton on Rodham's behalf.

"Most voters don't know much about what's going on but get alerted to it during the campaign," said deHaven-Smith. "In this particular case, there hasn't been any issue or personalities to draw the voters out."

Rodham and Wiley finished first and second respectively in the four-person Sept. 8 primary.

Although many parts of the state are recovering from a weekend drizzling, voters can expect temperatures in the 80s and a 20 percent chance of rain today, the National Weather Service predicted.

Republicans choose today between Frank Ibragan and Bob Morris to face Democrat Tim Jamerson for education commissioner. Ibragan, superintendent of schools in Martin County, carried 44.3 percent in a three-way primary to 37.7 for Morris, a Sarasota businessman.

Jamerson, who was appointed to his job in January by Gov. Lawton Chiles, narrowly avoided being upset in the Sept. 8 primary.

Some voters also have congressional or state legislative races in addition to local contests.

Three nominations for U.S. House seats are up for grabs.

State Rep. Lois Benson and Pensacola lawyer Joe Scarborough are after the GOP nomination in District 1 where Democrat incumbent Earl Hutto retired. The GOP nominee meets Pensacola attorney, Vince Whitbo Jr., who won the Democratic nomination last month.

Judge hears argument on homicide defense

By BILL KASSON
Associated Press Writer

PENSACOLA — Letting a former minister accused of fatally shooting an abortion doctor and a clinic escort use a justifiable homicide defense would invite more violence, a federal prosecutor says.

But U.S. District Judge Roger Vinson agreed Monday to reconsider his earlier denial of a necessity, or justifiable, defense.

The decision came as Paul Hill's trial on charges of violating federal clinic protection and firearms laws opened.

"There are others out there like Paul Hill," Assistant U.S. Attorney David McGee told Vinson. "They are small in number but they are fanatics. I fear more blood will be shed."

Hill also is to be tried on murder and attempted murder charges in state court Jan. 30 for the July 29 shootings outside a Pensacola abortion clinic.

Last week, Vinson refused to allow Hill to argue that the slayings were justified to prevent a greater evil — abortion — because Hill, then representing himself, had failed to respond to a prosecution motion.

Hill has since changed his mind about self-representation. Vinson granted a defense motion Monday to let two standby attorneys take over the case. He also agreed to reconsider the justifiable homicide issue.

The prosecutor objected to the defense, contending Hill's lawyers want to put abortion, not Hill, on trial.

"They want a circus," McGee complained. "They don't want law."

The judge said he would allow the defense to present its argument today before lawyers make opening statements to the 12 jurors and two alternates seated Monday. The panel is being sequestered for the duration of the trial, expected to take at least three days.

Assistant U.S. Public Defender Roderick Vreen said he hopes to show that equipment at the Ladies Center clinic was improperly calibrated so he could argue that abortions were illegal. Vinson allowed the defense to obtain photographs and aerial numbers of the equipment Monday. It was outside that clinic that the slayings took place.

Vreen and his co-counsel, private attorney Maureen Duignan, said they also may try to show that viable fetuses were aborted at the clinic.

McGee contended that even if the defense could show that illegal abortions were performed, Hill had other ways to prevent them.

Court asks administration view, gambling cases

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court, acting on the first day of its new term, has asked the Clinton administration for its views on high-stakes battles in Florida and Alabama over regulation of gambling on Indian lands.

The court asked Justice Department lawyers Monday to say whether they think federal courts have the authority to oversee negotiations between tribes and state officials about starting such gambling operations.

The justices are not expected to act in the Florida and Alabama cases until hearing from the government lawyers, which could take months.

Federal appeals courts have split on that aspect of a 1988 federal law, the Indian Gaming Regulatory Act. It gave tribes new freedom to run big-money casinos, bingo halls and other gambling activities on their lands.

Indian gambling since has grown into a $6-billion-a-year industry in more than 20 states.

The Supreme Court in 1987 ruled that states cannot ban gambling on Indian reservations within their borders, a decision that left Indian gaming largely unregulated by the states.

Congress responded in 1988 by passing a law "to provide a statutory basis for the operation of gaming by Indian tribes as a means of promoting tribal economic development, self-sufficiency and strong tribal governments."

The law requires federally recognized tribes to negotiate with the respective states before starting some types of on-reservation gambling. States are required to negotiate in good faith, and the law authorizes a tribe to sue a state in federal court if it fails to do so.

That's what happened in Florida and Alabama, where the Florida Seminole and Alabama Poarch Creek tribes accused state officials of not negotiating in good faith.

Both states contended that the Constitution's 11th Amendment shields them from such lawsuits.

Four found slain at strip club; two arrested

By Associated Press

PANAMA CITY BEACH — There was "bad blood" between a manager of a topless bar where four people were fatally shot and one of the two suspects, police say.

The suspects, who worked for a sister nightclub, gunned down two maintenance workers while waiting for Chris McConnell to arrive at Show N Tail Monday morning, police said.

McConnell, also a partner of Show N Tail, was shot at point-blank range in the nape as he walked in the door. Another employee who arrived before the suspects could flee also was killed.

Allen Johnson, owner of Show N Tail, arrived at 10 a.m. CDT Monday to find two bodies behind the front bar. Authorities searched the building with Johnson and found the other two.

The two suspects were being held early today at Bay County Jail, authorities said.

Within hours of the shootings, police arrested Joe Clark and charged him with four counts of first-degree murder.

Javier Ramos was arrested on the same charges in Dade County late Monday by agents of the Florida Department of Law Enforcement and officers from the Metro-Dade Police Department. He was to be returned to Bay County today.

Ramos' driver's license listed a Homestead address though he had been sharing an apartment with Clark in Lynn Haven, authorities said.

No motive was offered, but police said McConnell and Ramos, a former manager at the Toy Box club, didn't get along.

"There's been some bad blood between them for the last couple of months," Bay County Sheriff Guy Tunnell said.

Clark had also been working at the Toy Box.

Tunnell said it appears Ramos, 28, and Clark, 21, were waiting at Show N Tail Monday morning when two maintenance workers arrived.

One of the workers, "Big John" LaForge, called McConnell at home to say Ramos was at the club and wouldn't leave without talking to McConnell, Tunnell said.

LaForge, also known as William Hunter, 32, and Eran Ayers, 18, of Panama City, were gunned down at point-blank range, police said. Also killed was Tony Lands, 33, of Callaway.

Settlement reached out of court in DuPont estate case

By Associated Press

JACKSONVILLE — A lawsuit to change the makeup of the board that oversees Alfred I. du Pont's $1.6 billion estate has been settled out of court.

The agreement could mean a change in direction for St. Joe Paper Co. and Florida East Coast Industries Inc., two Jacksonville-based companies controlled by the Alfred I. du Pont Testamentary Trust, analysts said.

In a lawsuit filed in May 1993, two trustees of Du Pont's estate sought to change the administration of the trust by increasing the number of trustees and their annual salary.

Details of the settlement reached Friday were withheld, but a source familiar with the agreement told The Florida Times-Union that it will increase the number of individual trustees from four to six. There also is one corporate trustee, which is currently NationsBank.

Bringing in new trustees could shake up the conservative management philosophy of the trust and the two companies. It could also possibly raise the values of the companies' stocks, analysts said.

"It's encouraging. What it means to the trust is a higher caliber of funds management," said Paul Rowan, chief investment officer of SIM & FED North America, an Italian investment company that owns shares in both St. Joe and Florida East Coast.

Proceeds of the trust, established by Du Pont's will in 1935, are used to fund the Nemours Foundation, which supports the Nemours Children's Clinic in Jacksonville and children's and elderly care clinics in Delaware.

The trust's principal asset is its 21.3 million shares of St. Joe stock, representing 70 percent of the company's shares. The trust also owns 5 percent of Florida East Coast's stock and St. Joe owns 54.5 percent of Florida East Coast, so the trust controls both companies.

The two companies form a conglomerate with interests in five industries: paper, transportation, real estate, sugar and telecommunications.

Analysts hope new trustees will be more aggressive and consider selling off one or more of the business interests.

State Attorney Harry Shorstein, as state attorney for the circuit in which Du Pont's will was filed, was a defendant in the lawsuit.

Assistant State Attorney Lance Day, who represented Shorstein in the lawsuit, could only say an agreement had been reached. He could not provide details pending the completion of a final document on the agreement, which is expected to be completed within a week. The agreement must be approved by the court.

Closing the business

It's a very logical conclusion. If you have complaints about a business operation, get enough people to support you, stop frequenting the business, and it will eventually cease operation.

One person alone however, cannot accomplish this. It's only natural, if you find fault with a business, you will take your business elsewhere. Generally though, that won't be much of an economic loss for the business.

Our point is not about commercial businesses. Rather, we are referring to your friendly neighborhood drug dealer. This is the type of business many people say should be eliminated. Right. People say it, but they continue shopping there.

Most people know of some area where they have reason to believe there are drug sales going on. Ask yourself, how long would the sellers stay at that location if no one came to buy?

In a recent Sanford Herald report concerning drug activities, Volusia County Sheriff's Capt. Bob Boaco said, "This crack epidemic we seem to have is a community thing. It's mostly the people who live in a community who do the buying and selling. They don't really want the activities to be eliminated."

Boaco's comment on the community situation stands on its own. We doubt that anyone, including drug dealers and users wouldn't agree with him.

Therefore, we see the solution. To get rid of drug activities in a neighborhood, stop buying the stuff. It's as simple as that.

Of course sellers know how to prevent people from going off drugs. A few free samples here and there, and a person becomes an addict. "Sure, I can quit any time I want to," they say. When people have to burglarize, rob people, sell stolen property, or even sell their own bodies to obtain drug money, that quote certainly becomes stupid, doesn't it?

What can be done? Step one - Do whatever possible to keep children from even starting on any type of drugs. One way or another, it could kill them.

Step two - Users and abusers must seek help in kicking drug habits. It's almost impossible to do it alone, no matter how much a person may brag about self-control.

Step three - Report illegal drug activity to law enforcement agencies. People who may not be a user should become involved in helping eliminate the problem.

Step four - Continue to speak out about increasing punishment resulting from drug-related convictions in our courts. A slap on the wrist is not a cure for drug addiction.

If we consider drugs like an Edsel, we can defeat the problem. Don't buy or use drugs, and it won't be long before they will disappear from our street corners.

Nationalizing Clinton's problems

Many Republicans running for office are using television commercials that show the face of their opponent metamorphosing into the face of Bill Clinton. And many Democrats are asking that Clinton please not appear in their district.

The reasons are clear. Clinton's approval rating has fallen to 39 percent in polls, the lowest ever at this time in a presidency. Republicans, accordingly, seek to "nationalize" the election as a referendum on Clinton, while Democrats chant "all politics are local." Right now it looks very good for the GOP, even many liberal Democratic incumbents are stressing old Republican themes.

(For example, Sen. Jim Sasser, D-Tenn., with a 95 percent liberal rating from the Americans for Democratic Action in 1992, is running a TV commercial stressing the decline in moral values, pornography, crime and prayer in the schools.)

What happened to Clinton? He says that although he "created" 4 million jobs, nasty partisan Republicans have been able to make their case better than he. Dubious: It's the president that has the bully pulpit.

Among the reasons offered for Clinton's sad estate are 1) Mini-scandals; 2) his administration, seen as too left-wing; 3) Democrats in Congress, seen as too left-wing; 4) his wife, seen as too left-wing; 5) people don't know what he stands for; 6) raising taxes and insufficiently cutting the deficit; 7) voters are fed up, angry, mad, disgusted; 8) Rush Limbaugh; 9) flip-flopism on foreign policy, and so on.

There is a sad aspect to all this. It's worth remembering the Bill Clinton of Campaign 1992, who said some big things that needed saying. Of course, he made the standard point, "It's the economy stupid," that any out-of-office party uses when the economy is slow. But candidate Clinton also said that both political parties were "brain dead," and his platform incorporated the notion that a "Third Way" was needed. But since his victory, we have seen precious little of that. In fact, the original strategy for last year's budget battle was "get all the Democrats," which meant a big spending plan to placate the left of the party, which is stronger than ever among congressional Democrats.

Pretty pure and simple, this has been a full-blooded Democratic administration. For example, the long-ago pledge to have Republicans in the Cabinet seems forgotten in the mist of time.

Candidate Clinton's best campaign line was elemental: "No more something for nothing," he said over and over. It's the best one-liner I have ever heard. He stressed the word "responsibility," and/or "personal responsibility." They were the catch words that could have ignited the idea of a "New Democrat," which is what Clinton said he would be.

His record is by no means all bad. His little noticed "Goals 2000" education bill is not perfect but will probably end up as a medium-sized step in the right direction. The same can be said for the crime bill. The "prevention" side may be porky, but it is not, in itself, a wrong-headed idea. And there is plenty of "punishment" in the bill.

Clinton's approval rating has fallen to 39 percent in polls, the lowest ever at this time in a presidency.

Critics' cant obscures 'Forrest'

I recently became the last certified pundit in America to see the movie "Forrest Gump," and like many, I found a message in the experience: The life of an ideologue must be hell.

I just re-read that sentence and I perceive some convoluted thought there that might require clarification. It is probably best to begin with a summary of the highlights.

Forrest Gump, played by Tom Hanks, is a slow-witted Alabama boy raised by a single mother of gumption and good sense who fills his head with aphorisms (Life is like a box of chocolates; you never know what you're going to get), and teaches him he is as worthy as the next person, despite his handicap.

On his first day of school, he meets Jenny, the girl who will become his life-long love. Because he can run, he goes on to become a college football hero. He is drafted, gets sent to Vietnam, saves the lives of several buddies, gets wounded in the rear end and earns the Medal of Honor. At the White House awards ceremony, we see Lyndon Johnson asking him where he was shot and Forrest dropping his drawers to display his butt-tucks.

In this you-are-there fashion, we see Forrest practicing ping-pong diplomacy in China, meeting with President Nixon, reporting a burglary in the Watergate complex. He had promised Bubba, a black buddy killed in Vietnam, that he'd go into the shrimp business with him, so he buys a boat. With the help of Lt. Dan, his legless and bitter former platoon leader whose life Forrest had saved, and with the help of Hurricane Camille, which spared Forrest but wiped out the competition, he becomes the millionaire owner of the Bubba Gump shrimp company.

Meanwhile, Jenny takes up the life of a disolute hippie, gets hooked on drugs, eventually convalesces with Forrest in Alabama, disappears, later reappears with Forrest's child, marries him, then dies of a mysterious virus, presumably AIDS.

Despite the weepy ending, "Gump" is a fun movie. It is fiction of an absurd sort that requires viewers to suspend their sense of disbelief. But it is worth the effort because it's fun.

Except for the ideologues, burdened as they are with the compulsion to find a political message in everything, fun is not enough. "Forrest Gump" must say something.

Right-wing politician/columnist/fanatic Pat Buchanan: "This film... is a morality play where decency, honor and fidelity triumph over the values of Hollywood. Though it carries a PG-13 rating, 'Forrest Gump' is, at its core, a conservative film."

Gee, does this mean that Forrest would worship at the feet of Phil Gramm, Newt Gingrich, Jerry Falwell, Pat Robertson? Somehow, I have trouble accepting that.

Left-wing fanatic and editor of Tikkun magazine Michael Lerner: "Gump's America has no class divisions, no intractable history of racism, no genocide of Indians.... Like Gump, many Americans have gone through the experience of the 20th century without ever comprehending how their good fortune was connected to the oppression of others."

In other words, the film did not guilt-trip the audience and is therefore inferior. Gump got rich catching shrimp, for heaven's sake. Who the hell did he oppress? The shrimp?

A Baltimore Sun reviewer pointed out that "Gump" portrayed Vietnam as a battle of napalm and horror and could be seen as a liberal hit on war.

I found a message in the experience: The life of an ideologue must be hell.

DONNA BRITT

Dissecting Rosa Lee's life

WASHINGTON - A thousand times a week, we face them. We measure one against the other and, often, choose between them.

What we feel. And what we think we should feel.

But we know which is easiest to reveal. Verbalizing what we "should" feel - that which is acceptable to whomever is listening is smart, convenient, as safe as your old slippers. And just as easy to slip into.

So, what do you say about Rosa Lee Cunningham?

Cunningham, 57, is an HIV-infected recovering heroin addict, petty thief, decades-long welfare recipient. A former prostitute, she let a male customer introduce her daughter, then 11, to sex for $20.

But she's more: a mother of eight who is loving and supportive of several incredibly burdensome adult children; a doting grandma; a victim of grating, lifelong poverty. The daughter of sharecroppers, no one taught her to dream, study or even to read.

Last month, veteran Washington Post reporter Leon Dash introduced both Rosa Lees in an eight-part series he's spent four years researching. Reading about Cunningham's epically horrific life was like being invited to watch a surreal, Dickensian peep show.

Marvel at how Rosa Lee lets daughter Patty inject her with heroin as stunned journalists watch. Gasp as Patty aids the thugs who kill the man who said he loved her. Gape at Cunningham's apparent belief that shoplifting, fencing stolen goods and taking drugs are Kodak moments worthy of preserving in print.

Dash has said that he wanted to address an American crisis and hoped his close-up portrayal of Rosa Lee Cunningham and her family would cause readers "discomfort and to be alarmed."

More uncomfortable and alarmed, presumably, than they already are by recent accounts of the young lawyer shot dead getting into his car after a night out; the grandfather murdered in broad daylight as he sat in his car; and the two men shot - one died instantly - in a mall parking lot during their lunch break.

Certainly, the 15 or so African Americans I spoke with about the series were disturbed. A few typical reactions:

A telephone operator: "The Post told Rosa Lee's story ... but what will they do about it? Who'll help ... (Cunningham's 2-month-old great-grandson)?"

A public relations consultant: "My grandparents sent five kids to college - and my grandfather never made more than $35 a week. It killed him, but he did it. None of his grandchildren, or great-grandchildren, has done drugs, been in jail or become an unwed mother. We are not atypical. But the Post will never write about my family."

A realtor: "I hear more of these stories than about black families who are wanted, cherished, ... And I know they exist. ... People who are borderline ... end up with nothing to pattern themselves on."

Watching Ken Burns' "Baseball" I was floored by the courage of pioneers Jackie Robinson, Curt Flood and Hank Aaron, who endured taunts, threats and maltreatment that most blacks today can only imagine, and who still still soared. And I thought of humankind's need for sterling examples that touch and teach the tarnished rest of us.

So when will the Post spend four years studying some of today's heroes - not sports stars, but the average men and women who manage to soar above their circumstances?

In fairness to Dash, nobody likes bad news. Many people wish folks like Cunningham would disappear. I appreciate Dash's refusal to let that happen.

Still, there are questions. Is it ethical - not journalistically, but morally - to stay silent, knowing that a man you've interviewed is having sex with a woman whom you know - but whom he may not know - to be HIV-positive? Did journalists' presence affect the actions of Cunningham and her family? It's possible that one whose life had been cruelly anonymous might "perform," positively or negatively, for those fascinated by her degradation.

How smart was it to focus seven episodes on Rosa Lee's many lawbreaking family members and just one on her two sons who managed to reject drugs and crime and lead productive lives? Who, really, has more to teach us?

What do we learn from such stories?

The depths of some folks' pain and self-loathing, certainly. Some of the societal conditions affecting their life choices. We learn, yet again, how helpless such deprivation makes us feel.

But do we ever learn, really, why the Rosa Lees we endlessly report on make their choices? Or why millions who are similarly deprived choose differently?

Certainly, the 15 or so African Americans I spoke with about the series were disturbed.

committed a crime."

The report then states that Morris threatened to shoot Welter, and spoke several profanities.

Morris reportedly punched Welter in the face knocking off his prescription eyeglasses.

"Fire Inspector Murray tried to assist officer Welter in securing Morris," the report continues.

"Morris grabbed Murray by her throat and began choking her. Officer Welter tried to pry Morris' fingers off her throat but couldn't."

The narrative continues, "Officer Welter then punched Morris several times in his face, but Morris still kept choking Murray. Jerry Herman and Dan Florian also tried prying Morris' hand off Murray's throat. They eventually did and secured Morris."

Murray, who is also a sworn officer with the city was transported to Central Florida Regional Hospital for injuries sustained to her throat. Welter was also taken to the hospital for a possible broken right hand.

Florian and Herman did not sustain any injuries, but officers said they were both kicked by Morris while assisting in surviving the man.

Herman said much of the credit for calming Morris down should go to a deputy sheriff who lives in the area. "He saw us there and came over," Herman said, "and he apparently knew Mr. Morris, and helped calm him down. I don't know what would have transpired if he hadn't come along."

Herman said Morris was constantly uttering profanity and racial slurs at the code team during the entire situation.

Morris was arrested on two charges of aggravated battery, one of resisting with violence, and two of battery. He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility, where he was held under $7,000 bond.

Sanford police will be investigating the case as well as determining who owns the property at 1000 W. 16th St.

The specific code violations which were being investigated were not immediately available.

Herman said this morning one of the concerns was a trailer on the property which was loaded with old tires.

"Actually," Herman said, "I wasn't part of the team. It's supposed to have three people. But it looks like the city is going to have to have the items removed from that property, and I went along with the team to determine how much of a load it may be and what kind of items we may have to pick up."

According to the report on the code team during a recent Sanford City Commission meeting, the team was first to advise property owners of violations, and not issue fines or take further action until a specific length of time had passed, during which proper measures might be taken to improve the property or begin work at eliminating the violations.

It was only after that length of time that any fines or charges would have been made.

Sewer

businesses would be required to hook on.

Commissioner Iris Benson noted she brought up the need to improve sewer service as a way to attract business to the city a couple of years ago and found it was "a taboo subject."

Commissioner Paul Lovstrand said the commission should study the plans but cautioned the city is also facing a $375,000 bill to be paid from the water and sewer fund to relocate water lines along CR 427 in conjunction with the county's road widening project. Installation of sewer lines would be financed from the same fund.

Lovstrand added Miller's suggested sewer program should have been in the city's capital improvement plan reviewed by the commission last week.

The commission will conduct a work session Oct. 18 on the sewer proposal at 6 p.m. in the commission chambers of city hall.

In other business Monday night, the commissioners approved a zoning change and plans for an expanded Winn-Dixie at SR 434 and Rangeline Road. The store will be expanded by nearly 12,000 square feet and a parking lot for use primarily by employees will be constructed on rezoned land in the back of the building. The Delnice Corporation which owns the shopping center where the supermarket is located requested the approvals.

Further the commissioners:

• Honored Enzo Perini of Enzo's on the Lake as Longwood business person for October.

• Approved on first reading an ordinance to sell land for right-of-way on CR 437 to the county for $11,800 for the road widening project.

• Okayed a "Proud to be Drug Free" festival planned for Oct. 15 in the Longwood Lakes Center at SR 434 and Hwy. 1742, sponsored by Norman Family Chiropractic.

Snakes in the grass

Senior Peptide Keeper Mike Welter checks one of 18 baby Rhinoceros Viper snakes born last Thursday at the Central Florida Zoological Park. Rhinoceros Vipers can have anywhere from 16 to 43 young, measuring about eight inches at birth.

The snakes will require physical exams and care at the zoo's herpetarium before being made available for public viewing. This is the first time these creatures have been born at the Sanford zoo.

provide for stormwater or rainwater retention.

The question however, appears to be whether a fence or some other type of protection should be required around the pond. At the September commission meeting, it was not made clear exactly what stipulations were made when approval was granted to have the pond dug.

Mayor Rockett, Commissioner Meador and others had proposed that the city staff investigate the issue and make a presentation to the commission at the earliest possible time. One of the matters which has not been clarified is whether or not the area is required to be fenced.

Meador had commented, "If an engineer tells us there are some overriding issues, this is one time the city is going to have to take a stand. It is conceivable that this approved project may not be appropriate."

Meador said he wanted to be certain it was built to specifications which were approved.

This Thursday night, the commission has called for a presentation from staff and consulting engineers relating to the project. Meador has suggested an introduction on the history of the project including how it was approved. He also wants the staff to discuss the safety issue since the pond is so close to the sports complex, and the risk of draining the underground water to the point where it will create dry pockets creating a potential for sinkholes.

The special presentation on the compensation storage site (pond) is scheduled for this Thursday's regular meeting of the Lake Mary City Commission, beginning at 7 p.m., at Lake Mary City Hall, 100 N. Country Club Road.

Waste

County Recycling and Solid Waste Department.

Use of the county's "SMRF," Small Materials Recycling Facility, remained constant at 500,000 lbs. of materials processed there. The SMRF is used to process mingled recyclable materials from businesses and multi-family housing.

The county tracks recycling efforts to gauge progress towards meeting the state's 30 percent garbage disposal reduction goal. The county must meet that goal by January.

Yard waste collections jumped from 3.2 million lbs. to 4.5 million lbs. between July and August, accounting for most of the overall increase. Recycling collections increased from 1.9 million lbs. to 2.2 million lbs.

In the unincorporated areas of the county, a total of nearly 1.8 million lbs. of residential garbage was offered for recycling. A total of 1.3 million lbs. of yard waste was collected. A total of 2.9 million lbs. of waste was diverted from the unincorporated waste stream.

In Sanford, a total of 1.1 million lbs. of waste was diverted from the garbage waste stream. That includes 154,820 lbs. of residential garbage and 984,150 lbs. of yard waste.

In Lake Mary, 191,120 lbs. of waste was separated for recycling, including 65,520 lbs. of residential garbage and 125,300 lbs. of yard waste. In Longwood, a total of 484,040 lbs. of waste was separated, including 145,900 lbs. of residential garbage and 338,540 lbs. of yard waste.

Pesticides may increase breast cancer risk

By PAUL RABINOW
AP Science Editor

NEW YORK — Pesticides can increase a woman's "bad estrogen" and decrease her "good estrogen," leading to a sharp increase in the risk of breast cancer, researchers say.

The researchers exposed human breast cells in a test tube to DDT and other chlorine-containing pesticides. The effect was three to four times as great as that of a known human carcinogen used as a comparison, researchers said Monday.

The study offers ways to reduce breast cancer risk, such as limiting exposure to such pesticides and to fuels, plastics and natural substances that have the same effects, the researchers said.

"The thing that's really exciting here is we may be able to figure out how to reduce the risk, even the risk of recurrence in women who've already had breast cancer," said researcher Devra Lee Davis, an epidemiologist with the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

The results surprised the director of the research, who had expected to find that pesticides had no effect on estrogen.

"I was wrong," said H. Leon Bradlow, a biochemist with the Strang Cancer Prevention Center at Cornell University Medical School. The study showed that after exposure to pesticides, "your risk ratio is greater than what it was before," Bradlow said.

The study builds on Bradlow's previous research showing that there is a "good estrogen" that protects against breast cancer and a "bad estrogen" that is associated with increased risk of the disease.

The distinction is analogous to the one made between good and bad cholesterol with respect to heart disease, Davis said.

Several earlier studies have linked pesticides to an increased risk of breast cancer, although one study failed to find a link. The new study adds to the evidence by showing how pesticides may be exerting a harmful effect, Bradlow said.

Penelope Fenner-Crisp, a pharmacologist and pesticide specialist with the Environmental Protection Agency, said the EPA is taking the link between pesticides and hormones very seriously. The response includes more than simply encouraging further research, she said.

"We should also think about how we might go about encouraging exposure reduction," she said. "I don't think we want to sit around five or 10 years while the research goes on, and then think about reducing exposure."

The study will be published shortly in Environmental Health Perspectives, a journal of the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences.

In a separate study, Bradlow and his colleagues reported indole-3-carbinol, an anti-cancer substance in broccoli, cauliflower, Brussels sprouts and cabbage, tipped the balance toward more good estrogen and less bad estrogen.

Bradlow said women who regularly eat those vegetables could significantly reduce their risks of breast cancer, although he could not say precisely how much lower the risk would be.

"We can't prove it's going to work, but we can suggest a plausible thing that isn't going to hurt ... and could help," he said.

Mandela makes first state visit to White House

By NYA BRADSHAW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — South Africa's Nelson Mandela is making his first state visit to Washington not merely as the hero of the anti-apartheid movement but as a newly elected president struggling to bring prosperity to his reborn nation.

Mandela today was beginning a five-day stay focused on efforts to win private investment and business interest in South Africa, where investor concerns about political stability linger.

President Clinton, planning announcements on economic assistance later this week, was hosting Mandela today at the White House for a brief preliminary meeting and then at a state dinner.

In a United Nations speech Monday, Mandela underscored his country's need for economic development now that the apartheid system of racial separation has been dismantled.

"As we undertook never to rest until the system of apartheid was defeated, so do we now undertake that we cannot rest while millions of our people suffer the pain and indignity of poverty in all its forms," he said.

Creating a non-racial society, he said, depends on the ability to ensure that people "not only have the vote, but they have bread and work as well."

The Clinton administration, already committed to a $600 million, three-year assistance program, will announce some $200 million in loan guarantees to build housing and electrification projects in the impoverished black township areas, according to an administration official.

In addition, the U.S. Agency for International Development is establishing an enterprise fund providing such incentives as credit and joint ventures to encourage investors, similar to what has been set up for Eastern Europe and the former Soviet states.

South Africa also stands to get a financial boost from the Overseas Private Investment Corp., a federally supported organization that this week will unveil $150 million in new equity funds to provide capital and insurance for prospective business executives in South Africa.

Many companies are taking a go-slow approach to South Africa, but Pepsi-Cola International on Monday announced a major deal in which several prominent black Americans put up $15 million for Pepsi's bottling joint venture in South Africa. The investors include actor Danny Glover and basketball star Shaquille O'Neal.

Two more deals will be announced under OPIC sponsorship this week — the re-entry of a major U.S. company that had pulled out in response to anti-apartheid sanctions and the start-up of a food franchise, an OPIC official said. The names of the companies were not disclosed.

U.S. officials see South Africa's economic prosperity as a key also to regional political stability and already look to Pretoria as a regional cornerstone. The administration, which has sponsored trade missions and a U.S. business conference on South Africa, is seeking to help Mandela lure private companies.

"American investors have been taking a wait-and-see attitude on South Africa," said one U.S. official. "This visit by Mandela raises the profile of South Africa. It reassures them that democracy is a fixture ... that this is a good safe place to do business."

Mandela's agenda today included a State Department luncheon today for about 200 chief executives of major U.S. companies. And OPIC organized a seminar for 30 leading firms on doing business in South Africa.

Tonight, singer Whitney Houston was to entertain some 200 guests at a White House state dinner.

New system slows fraud or makes it easier to do

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Investigators say the way Maryland delivers welfare benefits with electronic banking technology seems to make it easier to "launder" food stamps.

The findings in a report Monday from the Agriculture Department's Food and Nutrition Service are at odds with claims that the system — known as electronic benefits transfer — reduces fraud.

The Clinton administration is pushing for a nationwide switch to EBT by the end of the decade and sought to minimize the significance of the report, obtained Monday by The Associated Press.

Neal Flinger, a spokesman for the Food and Nutrition Service, said the report was "not a formal audit, not a formal, published report." He said it illustrates one aspect of EBT, while other studies have found that it cuts costs and is a useful tool for catching stores involved in trafficking.

The study says that while EBT holds great promise to identify fraud, poor follow-up efforts by USDA may actually be encouraging additional trafficking.

To buy groceries in Maryland, food stamp recipients present a card to a grocer, who runs it through an electronic tracking device that records the card number, date, time and amount. The recipient then enters a personal identification number into a key pad and the amount is deducted from the value left on the card, which is replenished monthly.

Breyer jumps right in on court

By MELISSA S. ROBINSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Whether they'll share opinions remains to be seen, but President Clinton's Supreme Court appointees at least share a tendency to jump right into the public part of their jobs.

Like Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg, appointed by Clinton last year, new Justice Stephen O. Breyer asked questions on his first day on the high court.

Breyer, 55, a former federal appeals judge from Boston, posed two lengthy questions, prefaced by summations of earlier points and comments, during oral arguments Monday, the first day of the court's 1994-95 term.

Breyer was generally serious but animated, shifting in his chair, fiddling with his eyeglasses and leaning into the bench now and then to concentrate on various points made by attorneys.

Occasionally, he would vigorously nod when another justice asked a question. And he leaned over several times for private exchanges with Justice Clarence Thomas, who sits next to him.

While Breyer and Ginsburg, who waited just nine minutes on her first day before asking a question, were not shy about public questioning, other justices have held back more.

Justice David H. Souter, for instance, waited three weeks in 1990 before asking a question, and Thomas, appointed in 1991, held off for a day.

Breyer posed questions in drug conspiracy and death-row appeals cases argued before the court. He did not make a public remark during the last case, which concerned a lawsuit against a transportation agency.

In both questions, Breyer encapsulated previous points and asked lawyers to directly rebut the opposing side. He modulated his voice for emphasis, stressing certain words or pausing to underscore points.

In the death penalty case, Breyer asked Missouri Attorney General Jay Nixon to explain his opposition to lowering the standard required by federal courts for introducing new evidence of innocence.

"Why do you need a tougher standard?" Breyer asked.

At one point, Breyer broke into a huge grin when Nixon responded to his assessment of the case by saying, "You're close, Your Honor."

Later, Nixon said Breyer "appeared very knowledgeable in this particular area of the law." "He was, as expected, a thoughtful, interested, experienced jurist," Nixon said. "It was a pleasure to be in front of him."

Overall, the cases prompted much discussion on the high court, with seven of the nine justices interrupting numerous times to ask questions.

Only Thomas, who is typically quiet during oral arguments, did not pose a single question.

"The only way to make this joint more energy efficient was to wave some green stuff in his face."

It was a bitter pill to swallow. He didn't realize that most homes over a year old could take advantage of FPL's free Home Energy Survey and cash incentives. "Get this," I told him, "FPL will give your home a real once-over to uncover ways to reduce your electric bill. Plus they offer cash incentives to help pay for energy-saving improvements. But you gotta call FPL right now.

Teachers' pay climbing, but not keeping up, union says

By GABRIEL FELDMAN
AP Education Writer

WASHINGTON — Pay for America's teachers climbed an average of 2.5 percent last year, a rate that failed to keep pace with inflation, a teachers' union said today.

The average teacher salary nationwide reached $35,813, according to the American Federation of Teachers.

The union said the 1993-94 increase compared to inflation of 2.7 percent as measured by the Consumer Price Index for 1993. Through August, it was running at an annual rate of 2.9 percent in 1994.

The AFT said it marked only the second time since 1981 that teacher salaries dropped after adjusting for inflation.

After two years without a raise, Washington, D.C., teachers got a 10.3 percent increase — the biggest in the nation. Teachers in two states, Nevada and Vermont, lost money.

"As we near a critical mass of support for the idea that schools must demand more of students academically, the need for training, recruiting and keeping the best teachers speaks for itself," Edward McElroy, the AFT's secretary-treasurer said. "No other expenditure amounts to a more direct investment in the academic achievement of students or better reflects the level of commitment to the academic mission of schools."

The AFT's annual survey of federal and state departments of education showed that teachers in Connecticut had the highest average salary, $60,500, and those in Mississippi had the lowest, $25,153.

But taking in account differences in the cost of living around the country, the $60,000-member union said Michigan teachers came out on top, and North Dakota teachers were on bottom.

With the exception of Alaska, the 10 highest paying states had teachers more experienced than the national average. The 10 lowest paying states, with the exception of Mississippi, had teachers with less experience than the national average, the union said.

Since 1990-91, the AFT said, teacher salaries have more than doubled in half the states.

Beginning teachers were paid an average $23,250 in 1993-94, up 2.2 percent from the previous year. Starting salaries in Alaska, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Connecticut exceeded $35,000. North Dakota whose first-year teachers were paid less than $18,000, according to the report.

The AFT said states are spending declining portions of their educational budgets on salaries, down from 53 percent in 1984-85 to 39 percent in 1993-94.

Interracial adoptions happen soon

By JENNIFER BIZON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Congress appears close to approving legislation barring discrimination against white families trying to adopt black children languishing in foster care.

A bill proposed by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, would forbid child welfare agencies from discriminating against prospective parents solely on the basis of race, color or national origin. Agencies violating the law would risk being sued in court and losing federal aid.

Although nothing is certain in the congressional session's last days, the ban on adoption discrimination is expected to win final approval in the Senate as part of the $11 billion Elementary and Secondary Education Act.

In a recent interview, Metzenbaum said it is an "abomination to keep a child from being adopted by a family that can bring that child up, that wants to give that child a home, an education, loving care. I see thousands more kids being adopted as a consequence of this bill."

His bill, the Multiethnic Placement Act, seeks to encourage more interracial adoptions at a time when a record 460,000 American children are in foster care. Not all are candidates for adoption, but tens of thousands, many of them black, are waiting for a permanent home.

In addition to making adoption discrimination illegal, the measure calls on child welfare agencies to diligently recruit parents of all races and ethnic groups. However, it provides no extra money to help agencies find the families needed to take in abandoned, abused and neglected children.

Metzenbaum began his campaign more than a year ago to end discrimination against white families trying to adopt black children. His plan arouses intense feelings all around: from those who believe all adoptions should be colorblind to others who say it would pressure states to place a child in the first available home, without sufficient attention to cultural and racial dynamics.

Interracial adoptions were first done in significant numbers in the 1980s, but they declined dramatically following a 1972 statement of opposition by the National Association of Black Social Workers.

The group argued that only a black family could give a black child the racial identity and support needed in a racist society. Today, the association says interracial adoptions should be allowed only after exhaustive efforts to find a relative or black family have failed.

Leora Neal, co-chairwoman of the association's child welfare committee, said the bill does not address the fact that most adoptive parents want healthy babies and toddlers, while most children available for adoption are school-age, members of sibling groups or disabled.

The threat of lawsuits and loss of federal aid, she said, would push agencies to approve adoptions "without consideration of cultural ties ... or the children's right to know their cultural heritage."

Toni Oliver, also with the association, said the bill would affect only a handful of families while failing to address the reasons — such as drugs and crime — that children wind up in foster care.

"I doubt more than 50 cases will fall under this legislation," Oliver said. "It's a waste of money and time."

Health and Human Services Secretary Donna Shalala, however, has promised to enforce the law, including withholding federal funds to achieve compliance.

Hurricanes lose 7-footer

CORAL GABLES — Miami sophomore Will Davis will miss the 1994-95 season after suffering a knee injury in a pick-up game.

Davis, who was expected to battle for a starting position, will have surgery on Oct. 13.

The 7-footer was on a traveling all-star team which toured Spain this summer, then with Miami during its Israeli tour. Last season, Davis was named "Most Improved Player," averaging 3.6 points and 2.9 rebounds in 20 games.

GAINESVILLE — Florida defensive tackle Henry McMillan will miss up to six weeks as he recovers from a knee injury.

An MRI on Monday revealed that no surgery will be required on the torn medial collateral ligament. McMillan injured his left knee in Florida's 38-14 victory over Ole Miss.

McMillan, a 6-3, 278 pounder from Folkston, Ga. had started all four games for the Gators.

Coach Steve Spurrier also said Monday that junior inside linebacker Deater Daniels is likely to miss at least a week with a separated shoulder. Freshman Kevin Walton may also miss 1-2 weeks with a sprained ankle.

Wide receiver Travis McGriff (broken toe) and offensive lineman Mo Collins (sprained ankle) may also miss Saturday's game against LSU.

Heat ownership vote delayed

MIAMI — The NBA has delayed a vote on Whit Hudson's purchase of part of the Miami Heat.

The league's Board of Governors was to have considered Hudson's application to purchase 40 percent of the Heat Wednesday in New York. But the NBA said the ownership change will be discussed but not voted upon.

"Unfortunately, we were overly optimistic that a vote could be taken Oct. 5," said Hudson, who plans to buy shares belonging to partners Lewis Schaffel and Billy Cunningham.

NBA attorney Joel Litvin said the vote was being delayed because of incomplete paperwork.

Lake Mary boys' volleyball team improves to 13-0

Devin Hale (dark uniform left) goes over a Seminole defender in Lake Mary's win Monday night. Hale came off the bench to get five kills and one block in the contest at Bill Fleming Memorial Gymnasium.

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Lake Mary boys' volleyball coach Bill Whalen got just about everything he wanted Monday night against Seminole at Bill Fleming Memorial Gymnasium.

His first string played exceptionally well in claiming its 13th victory without a loss and everyone on his roster got to play.

The scores were 15-0, 12-18, 18-4. "It was a match where we were able to play everybody," said Whalen. "We played an excellent first game. Seminole did return the ball and covered fairly well, but we were on top of our game."

Whalen went to his second team in the second game and it played well after falling behind early.

"The second team played the whole second game," said Whalen. "They were down 7-0, but came back and almost pulled it off."

The starters returned in the third game and did almost as well as in the first game. Jeff Phillips ran off the last five points to end the match.

Will Lipcomb, who scored the last seven points of the first game, led the way with five kills, two blocks and 17 assists. Phillips finished with one kill and five blocks, while Darrell Dimore added eight kills and six blocks and Erik Larsen eight kills and three blocks.

Lake Mary is 5-0 in the Seminole Athletic Conference and will play at Deltona tonight at 7 p.m.

Three-way volleyball split at Lake Mary

From Staff Reports

LAKE MARY — Two things were apparent after a rare girls' volleyball tripleheader at Lake Mary High School Monday night.

First, it was a night the Japanese would love. Second, never try to figure out sports, especially high school sports.

The tripleheader, which was originally scheduled for September 24th but had to be moved because of the rescheduling of the West Orange Tournament, found the three teams each winning one game and losing one game.

That split would have pleased the Japanese because in their culture the best thing that can happen is a tie so that no one loses face.

On the other hand, picking a winner was impossible as Middleburg, from the Jacksonville area, beat Lake Mary, University beat Middleburg and Lake Mary beat University, go figure.

Middleburg, which is 12-3 and ranked No. 2 in this week's Class 6A state poll, struggled in edging the Rams 15-13 in the first game, but then cruised in the second game with a 15-1 triumph to complete the two-game sweep.

"In the first game we did pretty well," said Lake Mary head coach Cindy Henry. "We were passing well, keeping the ball away from their middle hitter. She's a 6-foot, highly recruited junior and the best I've seen, you get a break when she has to go to the back row."

"In the second game we could not get the ball to the setter and could not attack. We were having a lot of trouble with the first touch. I think we surprised ourselves at being able to stay that close to them in the first game and then when we lost it took all of the wind out of our sails."

University (13-6), which is getting votes in the 6A state poll, then came up with a hard-fought victory over Middleburg, 15-13, 2-15, 16-14.

The Rams (9-6) then got their piece of the winners prize, winning in straight games over University, 17-15, 15-8.

"University is a well rounded, well coached team that is tough to find the floor against," said Henry. "They are real scrappy and play good defense. They cover real well and are hard to score on. But when we got the 17-15 win, I knew the pressure would be on them. I really can't name a player who stood out over anyone else, because everyone played well and did their job."

"We enjoyed playing someone different, it gets old playing the same teams all the time. Both teams were well coached, and even that close loss to Middleburg has got to help our confidence. It shows that we're improving and we know the district tournament is what's important."

The Rams will be in action again this evening, traveling to Seminole for a freshman/junior varsity/varsity tripleheader with the Tribe at Bill Fleming Memorial Gymnasium starting at 5 p.m.

SANFORD HERALD PLAYER OF THE WEEK

Lyman's Bell rings up Player of Week honor

By DEAN SMITH
Herald Sports Writer

LONGWOOD — The best offense is a good defense.

Coaches have been using that saying since sports began, but it has stood the test of time quite well.

The latest team to prove that axiom is the Lyman Greyhounds, which turned four second quarter turnovers into 22 points in a 24-6 upset of the Edgewater Eagles this past Friday night.

Senior defensive end DeWayne Bell led the way, grabbing an interception off a tipped pass by Jason Shipley and forcing a fumble when he blind-sided the Edgewater quarterback on a sack.

For good measure the 6-foot-1, 185 pounder caught a pair of passes for 20 yards and also returned a couple of punts.

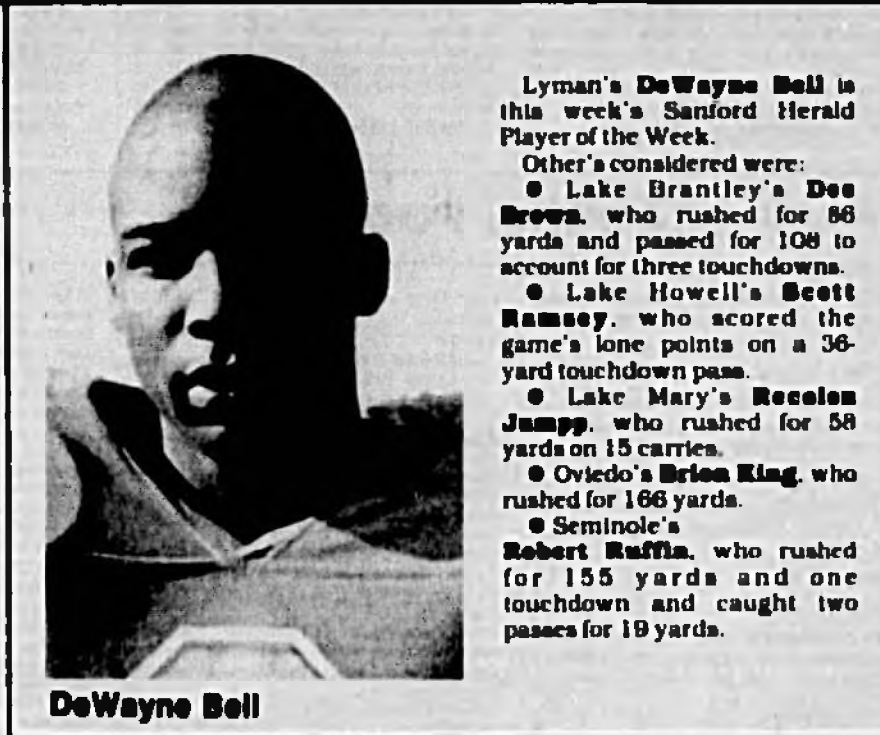

Greyhound quarterback Tommy Dixon was quick to praise his defensive mate after the win.

"DeWayne Bell was everywhere tonight," said Dixon.

The win was the first of the year for Lyman, ending the winless streak at three games.

"I told everyone at school that we weren't losing this game tonight," said Bell. "This is a real big win for us. We needed something like this to get us going."

For his efforts, DeWayne Bell is this week's Sanford Herald Player of the Week.

DeWayne Bell

Lyman's DeWayne Bell is this week's Sanford Herald Player of the Week.

Other's considered were:

- Lake Brantley's Dea Brown, who rushed for 66 yards and passed for 108 to account for three touchdowns.
- Lake Howell's Scott Ramsey, who scored the game's lone points on a 36-yard touchdown pass.
- Lake Mary's Reolon Jump, who rushed for 58 yards on 15 carries.
- Oviedo's Brian King, who rushed for 166 yards.
- Seminole's Robert Ruffin, who rushed for 155 yards and one touchdown and caught two passes for 19 yards.

Westview Baptist Church, 2-1 for the week, defeated Sanford

First Baptist Church, 15-13, and Agape, 15-8, to improve to 4-4 on the season.

The only other win of the night was a 15-7 triumph by Agape over Sanford First Baptist.

After three weeks, B & M Lawn Service (7-2) leads Westview Baptist (4-4), Agape (4-5) and Sanford First Baptist (2-6).

The league plays every Monday night at 7 p.m. at the Sanford Middle School Gymnasium located behind the main building off 18th street.

Premier continues to close gap on B lead

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Premier continued its torrid turnaround in the Sanford Recreation Department Fall Recreational B League with its second straight perfect week at the Sanford Middle School Gymnasium Monday night.

Premier, which had to forfeit all of its games the first week of the season, clubbed Park Air Incorporated, 21-7, whipped Neighbors, 21-10, and trounced league-leading Nichols Outboard Marine Services, 21-8, to run its winning streak to six games.

Nichols held onto its lead in the league by going 2-1 for the week, bopping Neighbors, 21-10, and trimming Park Air, 21-16.

The other victory of the night went to Neighbors in a 21-15 triumph over Park Air.

Nichols Outboard Marine Services is now 7-2 on the season, but both losses have been to Premier, which has closed to within a game of the leaders with a 6-3 record. Neighbors moved into third place with a 3-6 mark, while Park Air is 2-7.

Sanford Kiwanis Club and Sanford Optimist Club install officers

Gunster to lead Kiwanis

Incoming officers of the Sanford Kiwanis Club were installed at Timucuan Country Club Sept. 28 by District 23, Lt. Gov. Jan Henson at a festive banquet, according to Walt Smith. Members of the local club and their spouses assembled for dinner, awards and recognition of members' efforts in meeting community needs.

Outgoing president Janice Springfield welcomed guests and members and highlighted past year's numerous community projects and the accomplishments by the Sanford Kiwanis members. Phil Gunster, incoming president, outlined his plans for the club during his administration starting Oct. 1. Phil was selected by the club to receive this year's coveted "Kiwanian of the Year" plaque for efforts in club involvement in Golden Age Games, Pancake Day leadership, interclubbing, board meetings and president's advisor position. Gunster has

The annual installation banquet of the Sanford Optimist Club was held at the Renaissance Retirement home. The "We three + 1" band provided music for the banquet as their donation to the club. Kathy Cody, master of ceremonics, recognized several members for their outstanding work in the club. Bob Howe is a charter member of the club which is 25 years old. Audrey Ogden was surprised when Ernie Butler presented her with the "Optimist of the Year" award. John Cullum was cited for his work on the band festival comprising all six high school bands of Seminole County. The band festival will be held at Oviedo High School. The highlight was the presentation of life membership to Gus Ormberg for his many efforts over the years working for the benefit of youth.

Lacy Loar, editor of the Sanford Herald, was the guest speaker. She spoke on how the paper has progressed, the changing world, the crime problem and that there are no easy solutions. She closed with hope for a better tomorrow.

Rick Howe, lieutenant governor and past president, installed the officers for the coming year.

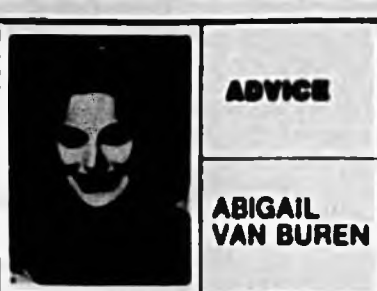

Peggy Hardin, president, thanked everyone for helping her in years past and for work on the banquet. She remarked on the growth of the club and she intends to continue in that area.

Memphis letter loses a little in translation

DEAR ABBY: I appreciate your running my letter to you a few weeks ago, but my friends and I were quite surprised to learn I had moved from Memphis to Nashville. I have lived in Memphis for many years. All kidding aside, since both cities are so well known, it is probably easy for West Coast people to switch them, but I still live in Memphis.

WILL E. BARNHART,
RANCHO CUCAMONGA,
CALIF.

DEAR WILL BARNHART: Since you have celebrated 76 birthdays, I would say your parents got a bargain. Congratulations.

DEAR ABBY: I read your column every day. I often think to myself, "I should write Abby about that" ... but then I never get around to it.

The letter today about the difficulty some older people have in hearing the telephone ring, and getting to it while it is still ringing, inspired this letter.

Each year just before Christmas, you get letters saying, "I don't know what to get Grandma, or Uncle Bill, or Aunt Betty." How about a cordless telephone? They are reasonably priced, and most of them have volume controls for the handset, and some for the ringer. Some even have a pager/finder tone so the phone can be located if misplaced.

DAWN SCHRAMM,
MINNEAPOLIS

DEAR DAWN: Just when I think I'm out of ideas for Christmas (or Hanukkah) gifts—comes the Dawn.

Thank you for an excellent gift idea.

DEAR ABBY: Whoa, Nellie! The people who are offended at "There you go" are missing the meaning. It is not a substitute for "Thank you," but rather a response to the unexpressed "Thank you"; the clerk or teller has just performed a service, and is saying "You're welcome," or, "I'm happy to serve you." It is comparable to the French "Je vous en prie," the Italian "Prego" and the German "Bitte." All carry the same meaning as "Here you go" and are used the same way.

"Thank you" would be inappropriate. It would be the proper response for the service just received.

THOMAS CALDWELL,
S.J., MILWAUKEE

DEAR ABBY: Seeing as how I was new in town, I stopped a nice-looking man on the street and asked him for directions. He said it wasn't far and, since he was going that way, he would walk me there. Before we parted, he asked me if he could see me again, and I said yes.

To make a long story short, George and I started going together and now, six months later, we are very much in love and have even talked about marriage some time in the future.

Abby, George never talks about his parents, his life or anything to do with his past. He says he has no living relatives—no parents, sisters or brothers. He doesn't talk about his job, either. He just says he "sees" for a living.

I am 28 and have never been married. George says he is 32 and has never been married either. He has been to my apartment, but I have never been to his. (I don't even know where he lives!)

Is it possible that he has no living relatives?

WONDERING
P O S S I B L E

DEAR WONDERING: Possible, but not probable. Before you invest more time in this mysterious character, find out what it is he "sees" and for whom. Then check up on him. I have a hunch it's a line you don't need.

Reform remnants

What happened to reform agenda?

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON — This was supposed to be the reform Congress, the one that would clean up the act, streamline the system, loosen the grip of big money on politics, list lobbyists and limit their favors. About all that's left of that agenda is lobbying, the easiest target of all.

Even that comes with a quirk: The lobbyist who wouldn't be permitted to take a congressman to lunch could funnel $5,000 into his campaign through a political action committee.

"It's clearer than ever that Americans still want to change the way Washington works," President Clinton said. "And they should."

"Reform" has been the buzzword since this Congress began, with more than 20 percent of its members new to the Capitol. It had helped to elect them after a season of institutional scandals and individual ethics cases.

"Now we run the risk that this Congress will adjourn being known as the no-reforms Congress, except for a few largely cosmetic actions," Sen. David Boren, one of the Democrats leaving after this session, said when a campaign finance bill was blocked by Senate Republicans.

"Now we run the risk that this Congress will adjourn being known as the no-reforms Congress, except for a few largely cosmetic actions," Sen. David Boren, one of the Democrats leaving after this session, said when a campaign finance bill was blocked by Senate Republicans.

What reform is, after all, depends on who is defining it. Sen. Bob Dole, the Republican leader, said the campaign finance bill was for spending restraints and campaign subsidies that would have stacked the deck for the Democratic majorities.

"It's only human nature to try to hold on to what you do not want to give up and, in all candor, if Republicans controlled Congress, we would probably be doing the same thing," Dole said.

That's about what happened to the reform movement when it collided with competing interests, not only between the political parties but also between the House and Senate, and between generations, as newcomers grasped for the powers guarded by seniority.

Even committee interests got involved as when Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., said he was against an internal reform proposal because it would have done away with the Joint Committee on the Library, where he is vice chairman and where his father served as a congressman in the 1920s. More substantively, that measure sought two-year appropriations bills, and another Democrat, Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, wasn't going to let his Appropriations Committee yield that much power.

The proposal to streamline operations and cut payrolls floundered, and attempts to revive it were blocked in the waning days of the session.

One vestige that may survive is a politically popular provision requiring Congress to comply with workplace safety, job discrimination, wage and hour rules, along with a half-dozen other laws governing private employers.

"That's just common sense, and it's only fair," Clinton said, on a point that has been a political issue since the 1992 campaign. That's when the inside reform effort began; Congress voted unanimously to set up bipartisan panels on reorganization.

Nobody was arguing so soon after episodes like the overdraft checks drawn on the old House bank, now abolished. Nor was there much argument about reform after the election of 110 House newcomers, and the 19 percent vote Ross Perot got for president.

"You must eliminate all of the perks and practices that have caused the American people to lose confidence in Congress," Perot lectured at a reform hearing early in 1993. "The White House must do the same."

That way, the reformers' theory went, sagging confidence could be revived as the voters saw Congress dealing with its flaws and the dollar-hungry campaign process.

But the campaign finance bill was hung up for a year in a dispute between the branches, since House Democrats wanted to keep the political action committee funding that helps them run. By the time the Democrats settled that, the calendar was almost out, and there wasn't enough backing to come up with the 60 votes to get the bill past Republican foes in the Senate.

So much for that reform.

That leaves the lobbyist bill, which Clinton said "will go a long way toward taking the government out of the hands of the influence industry" by forbidding gifts and favors and requiring disclosure of who they work for and what they're paid, beginning in 1996. That's up to the Senate; the House has passed it.

Clinton called it tough. Rep. Bob Michel, the retiring House Republican leader, called it self-flagellation.

"Our faults," Michel said, "lie not in our perks but in our posturing."

Study: Smokers' daughters are likely to smoke, too

By LAURAN HENNING
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The daughters of women who smoke during pregnancy are much more likely to smoke themselves, suggesting nicotine may somehow biologically "prime" the fetal brain to respond years later, a new study contends.

In today's American Journal of Public Health, Dr. Denise Kandel of Columbia University reports the first documented link between children's tendency to smoke and prenatal exposure to nicotine.

She theorized that nicotine, which can cross the placenta barrier, stimulates a fetus' receptors for dopamine, the brain chemical involved with drug addiction. This "priming" may predispose girls to smoke, Kandel contended.

But smoking mothers didn't have that effect on their sons, raising the possibility that male hormones protect male fetuses, she said.

"What this really shows is there may be subtle effects on brain function that won't become apparent until 13, 14, 15 years later," Kandel said. "It's another reason women shouldn't smoke."

Ex-smoker needs exam for breath shortness

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've smoked a pack of cigarettes a day for about 30 years. I recently stopped smoking and have noticed a shortness of breath. Is this normal while my lungs attempt to adjust?

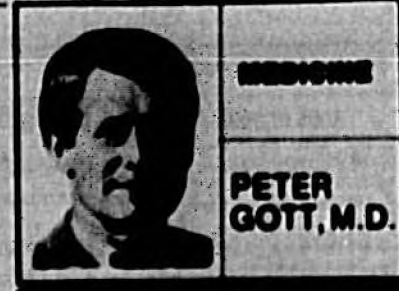

DEAR READER: Congratulations on your decision to stop smoking. However, shortness of breath is not a consequence of smoking cessation. More likely, you are inadvertently being more physically active and are suffering a previously unrecognized consequence of your heavy cigarette consumption: namely, emphysema, a chronic lung disease marked by an inability to absorb enough oxygen from the air. On the other hand, the cigarettes may have left you with chronic bronchitis (inflammation of the bronchial linings); this may improve with time.

The most ominous possibility is that your smoking has led to a pulmonary growth. A few weeks ago, I saw a patient who had discontinued smoking several years before. He came to me for shortness of breath. A chest X-ray revealed a lung tumor. I'm not suggesting that this is your problem, but in a smoker (or ex-smoker), the risk of serious lung disorders, including emphysema, is very real and very high. Therefore, I urge you to be examined by your family doctor, who will probably X-ray your lungs and may schedule you for pulmonary function studies, breathing tests that diagnose emphysema. In most cases, the only adjustment the lungs make to smoking cessation is a sigh of relief. Breathing gets better, maybe as much as 30 percent better. Equally important, the progression of emphysema is arrested once a person stops smoking. Don't delay; get to your doctor.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Is there a code of ethics or rules and regulations that prohibit doctors from leaving their prescription pads in an examining room? Patients are usually left alone while waiting for the doctor to arrive and it's such a temptation.

DEAR READER: You bet it is. And it's more than a temptation for addicts, who would just as soon steal a prescription pad as shake your hand. Any physician who leaves his prescription pad in plain view is eventually going to find that pad missing because an unscrupulous "patient" will forge a prescription to obtain drugs illegally.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

If you have read any of the recent articles by the Young Turks (most of them older than I am), you will be aware that they recommend bidding as much as you can. Pre-empt rule; but there is a time for silence.

Today's deal occurred during a major pair event several years ago. Two declarers, Peter Weichsel from the United States and Adrian Schwartz from Israel, benefited from West's verbosity.

In the given auction, six clubs was the Grand Siam Force, asking North to bid seven with two top heart honors.

When West passed throughout, the declarers in six or seven hearts immediately tried top clubs or top spades, with fatal consequences. But our two heroes won the first trick with the diamond ace, unblocked the spade king, cashed the heart queen and played a second trump to dummy's king. Now came the spade ace. South discarding his diamond loser. When West couldn't ruff, the rest was routine. The spade nine was covered and ruffed, the club ace cashed and a low club ruffed in the dummy. South's 10-8 of clubs disappeared on dummy's Q-10 of spades. South ruffed the diamond seven, drew East's last trump and claimed, his hand being high. The 13 tricks were four spades, five hearts, one diamond, two clubs and a club ruff in the dummy.

Leopold Stokowski, the American conductor of Polish origin born in London, once repudiated a talkative audience: "A painter paints his pictures on canvas. But musicians paint their pictures on silence." More often than they realize, bridge players should act like musicians.

YOUR BIRTHDAY
Oct. 5, 1994

Do not enter into commercial partnerships in the year ahead with individuals who cannot offer qualities or resources you lack. Complementary alliances are the only ones with good chances for success.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be considerate and realistic regarding the demands you make upon others today. They might not be able to drop what they are doing and speed off to assist you. Libra, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Compliments are effective tools today. However, insincerity will be readily discerned by the recipients and is sure to arouse their anger.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be hopeful and optimistic about your financial affairs today, but resist the temptation to commit funds you have yet to receive.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Little of significance will be achieved today if your goals are improperly defined. If you hope to succeed, you must be very exacting about what you anticipate.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) It's imperative you do not take critical situations for granted today. If you do, it might lull you into a false sense of security that could collapse upon contact.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Keep your guard up today and search for ulterior motives if a business contact suddenly offers you a deal that gives you something for nothing.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you and your mate's aims aren't in complete harmony today, there's a possibility each might do something -- knowingly or unknowingly -- that thwarts the other's efforts.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Should someone with whom you're involved ask for instructions today, don't pretend to be knowledgeable if you aren't.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be very cautious regarding investments today. Don't dive into something impulsively, based on unverified information. You need facts, facts and more facts.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Guard against inclinations today to go to the wrong people for advice. An ineffective counselor could contribute confusion and complications that prove impossible to unravel.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Roll up your sleeves and go to work if you have a critical assignment to take care of today. If you're counting on someone to come along and bail you out, it's just wishful thinking.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Usually, you manage your resources in a rather practical manner. Today, however, you might be impelled to take gambles or chances that seem totally out of character.
