2nd In Command Resigns In Dispute With CIA Director

WASHINGTON (AP) - The man who ran the day-to-day operations of the Central Intelligence Agency for the past year has quit in an apparent dispute over major changes planned by President Carter's CIA director. The resignation of E. Henry Knoche, submitted to Carter on July 5, may be the first in a series by CIA veterans in what reportedly is a policy disagreement with CIA director Adm.

Knoche, who received the government's highest civilian service award six months ago from then-President Gerald R. Ford, was the No. 2 executive in the CIA, holding the title of deputy director of central intelligence.

Supreme Court Is Not Consistent

The U.S. Supreme Court ruled in 1972 that death penalty laws then on the books in the United States were unconstitutional. The court did not hold that the death penalty itself was "cruel and unusual punishment" - only that laws then in force had made it so by exacting capital punishment in an inconsistent and capricious way.

That decision has had the effect the Supreme Court obviously intended. Capital punishment has become an issue to be resolved in state legislatures. Two-thirds of the states have reenacted death penalty statutes designed to meet the objections of the court.

Thus our society has been attempting to deal with a highly controversial issue through a combination of the democratic and judicial process enactment of laws reflecting the will of the majority on a fundamental moral question, under uidelines laid down by the courts.

Now we're beginning to wonder whether this process is going to work after all. It's not so much a problem in drafting legislation to suit the supreme Court as it is a growing confusion over that the Supreme Court really wants.

The impression in 1972 was that the court believed existing death penalty laws left too much discretion to judges and juries in deciding when it should be imposed. Some states then enacted laws mandating the death penalty for first degree murder and some other crimes. Last year, however, the court struck down those laws in two tates on grounds they did not allow for consideration of the character and record of the defendant. A month ago it avoided another state aw mandating death for the murder of a coliceman, on grounds it left no room for mitigating circumstances."

This apparent retreat back toward discretionary imposition of the death penalty has now been followed by a ruling that capital punishment is inappropriate as the penalty for rape even in the most aggravated case - if there has

Admittedly there are philosophical arguments over whether rape should stand in the same category as murder when it comes to the penalty to ed. But that's not the point. The point is that Justice Byron R. White - in an opinion supporting the 6-3 majority - raises that question and answers it. He believes it is "cruel and unusual punishment" - forbidden by the Constitution - to execute a rapist. We thought the Supreme Court wanted the will of society to prevail on what penalties should be exacted for various crimes. Obviously Chief Justice Warren Burger thinks so too. In his dissenting opinion he declares that the majority has overstepped its constitutional authority by "substituting its policy judgment for that of the state Legislature" in Georgia, which passed the rape law in question. There are other laws being enacted in various states which prescribe capital punishment for crimes other than murder - acts of terrorism, airline hijacking and other forms of kidnaping, for instance. Are they, too, going to be subject to the judgment of the Supreme Court on their ap-

The theory is that it should be relatively easy to score a presidential success with a part of the bureaucracy that is temporarily unpopular.

But the theory has already run into trouble, because there is nothing approaching a consensus over what should be done.

It is no secret that many, if not all, off these agencies and sub-bureaucracies overlap, often duplicating both the gathering of data and its systems which cannot even communicate with each other.

Several members of the Senate intelligence committee have already expressed grave reservations about concentrating too much authority in the hands of the director of the CIA, or several members of the Senate intelligence to the communicate with a systems which cannot even communicate with each other.

Not only did the civilian Central Intelligence Agency blossom into a sort of government-within-the-government, but the military also developed its own network to complement, and rival, the CIA.

One solution, tentatively favored by Mr. Carter's reorganization team, is to concentrate more authority in the director of the CIA.

Carter's reorganization team, is to concentrate from his own former colleagues in the military. He has held on to his commission as an admiral while running the CIA, which upsets those who telleve that America's intelligence services should be directed by a civilian.

She wants to be a golf course superintendent. Miss Goldsmith, 21, is a senior at Texas A&M and is the only female in a class of 35 studying turf management. "I had several opportunities to work this summer as an assistant superintendent at several country clubs but decided to play golf," said the ponytailed San Antonio lassie. Her three brothers play golf. "I don't think wanting to be a golf course superintendent is so unusual. You could get up early in the morning, get most of your work done and then play golf in the afternoon." she said.

Miss Goldsmith won a fouryear golf scholarship at Texas A&M and was No. 1 on the girls' team. She now has used up her eligibility. She was a finalist in the Western Amateur in 1973 and a semifinalist in 1974. Her match today against co-medalist Beth Daniel, of Charleston, S.C., shaped up as one of the best of the third round. Another classic battle figured to be between Lauren Howe, 1976 Western Junior champion, and 28-year-old Cindy Hill, 1974 U.S. Amateur titlist. Both are from Colorado Springs, Colo., where Miss Hill won the Broad-kids so much they've had 13 of them in the past three years. Four of them were their own children, two girls and two boys ranging in age from six-months to 15 years old. The other nine were troubled or delinquent youngsters who needed a place to stay. The youngest was an 8year-old boy and the oldest was a 17-year-old girl. Mr. and Mrs. Rogers are group home parents. The Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services (HRS) needs a lot more like them. No one does it for the money. The roughly $240 per month per child that a family gets for its service can't begin to cover the cost of feeding, clothing and, most important, loving a youngster in trouble. The people in HRS don't misrepresent the problems involved. A family group home is not a foster home. The youngsters who came to a family group home are under 18 and already have been judged delinquent. Becoming a group home family involves making application to the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services, undergoing an investigation.

Why? Japanese labor costs

Imports are strongest on the two coasts, where they account for up to a third of the new car market. They are weakest in the Midwest, the home of the domestic industry. In Michigan, imports account for less than 6 per cent of the market, the national low.

Some industry executives attribute that pattern to the fact that shipping charges for imports are lowest on the coasts and highest in the Midwest. "Everything ultimately comes down to price," the Ford analyst said. "In the 1960s, when the VW was cheap and sales were 60,000 a month, everyone said it was the best car around. No one talked about
