It takes three things to make a war, he will tell you; Money! Money! Money! He not only gives money direct to his leaders to carry an election, but he spends it lavishly in public works. He probably can point to more ma-terial things he has created than any other state politician. It has reached the point where it is said almost every resident of Louisi-

In the last six years he has spent more than $350,000,000 in the state. These funds went for a network of paved roads, a sky-scraper capitol, a new governor's mansion, bridges, airports, various public works, free school books and other things. His opponents claim that several millions of these funds found their way into political channels, but Long denies it.

This expenditure has given Huey a wealth of material to shout about from the hustings until he has convinced a majority of voters in the state that he is their benefactor and a Moses lead-tile to the send and of November, and their benefactor and a Moses lead-tile to the send and of November, and a list their benefactor and a Moses lead-tile to the send and of November, and their benefactor and a Moses lead-tile to the send and of November, and their benefactor and a Moses lead-tile to the send to the send t
