Vandals crush puppies

SANFORD — The executive director of the Humane Society of Seminole County was left speechless at an assault earlier this week at the society's shelter that left two three-week-old puppies with crushed skulls and one with a broken jaw.

"This is just... not in my wildest dreams, I can't imagine why," said Diane Albers, society director.

Following an apparent break-in at the shelter on County Home Road sometime between 11 p.m. Tuesday and 6 a.m. Wednesday, one puppy was discovered dead with a crushed skull, another was found in convulsions with a fractured skull and a third was found with a broken lower jaw. The puppy with the fractured skull had to be euthanized, Albers said. The puppy with the broken jaw is nursing and will recover, she said.

Society veterinarian Joseph Vaughn said the assailant must have used a hammer or had been very large and stomped on the puppies, Albers said. She said she does not suspect any former employees or anyone else with a grudge.

Albers said she suspects someone entered her office where the litter of five puppies were being kept with their mother and the bitch bit them.

There were no signs of forcible entry to the compound or through the locked entrance but Seminole County deputies were able to get fingerprints, Albers said. No arrests have been made.

Parental gripe: 'We're in dark'

By VICKI DeSORMIER

SANFORD — While there was a steady stream of concerned citizens in the Seminole County school district boardroom looking at the controversial sexual education materials on Wednesday, some people feel there was not enough publicity given to yesterday's review session.

"If I hadn't been keeping after Roger Beathard about this, I would never have known about it," said Robin Haase, president of the Christian Coalition, a strong opponent of some portions of the proposed curriculum.

Concerned citizens browsed over the books and supplemental materials in the district boardroom.

Some sat at the table where they were displayed and took copious notes.

Others just flipped casually through the pages then left.

Most did not stay for the committee work session which followed.

"We have to get back to work," said John Dinton, who just wanted to make sure the district wasn't planning to teach "slecko things" to his daughter.

"You hear so many rumors," he said. "You have to make sure."

Convinced that the curriculum was acceptable, he returned to work.

Sandra Grissom, the mother of a tenth grader at Seminole High School, said she heard about the meeting from a friend who works at the district office.

"Doesn't the district want us to see parents, Page 5A

SANFORD — Some objected to what the school district proposes to teach in the sexuality education classes. The others were opposed to what would not be covered.

While the tone of Wednesday afternoon's meeting of the sexual education curriculum committees was civil there was some heated discussion.

In the end, a controversial teachers' supplement was deleted from the curriculum that will be put into use later this school year at the high school level. In addition, a school curriculum writing team has been assigned the task of writing material to cover issues contained in the book.

State law, with the passage last year of House Bill 1739, requires that school districts have a curriculum in place for all students. The curriculum is expected to be abstinence based.

Members of the public were on hand yesterday though they were not given the opportunity to speak during the meeting.

"That will come later," promised Roger Beathard, coordinator of health education.

Robin Haase, president of the Christian Coalition, who said she has taken her children out of the Seminole County school system and teaches them at home, said she is 'appalled' that the district would see dropped, Page 5A

Simmons proposes merger of city parks, recreation offices

By NICK PFRIPAUF
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — City Manager Bill Simmons is proposing a merger of the city's parks and recreation departments. The measure follows the resignation announcement of parks director Jim Jernigan, effective at the end of this month.

The move, if approved, will re-establish a position that had been part of the city staff for many years. An ordinance approved on Aug. 28, 1989, separated the departments, the Department of Parks and Facilities Maintenance and the Department of Cultural Affairs. The latter eventually had its name changed to Recreation Department.

Simmons will present his recommendations for a recombination before the Sanford City Commission during a commission work session Monday afternoon, then during the regular commission meeting Monday night.

As the position is currently organized, Jernigan, as director of parks, also has supervision over the parks maintenance endeavors, as well as functions relating to the Civic Center, Cultural Arts Center, Picnic Pavilions, Senior Citizens Center, Henry Shelton Sanford Memorial Library and Museum, and the cemetery.

Part of the proposal calls for the transfer into the department, of the grounds maintenance division, presently in the Public Works Department. In Simmons' presentation he has written, "This would effectively place all city effort involved with maintenance and improvement of appearance of city grounds under one manager for establishment of appropriate priorities and workload coordination."

To handle the additional work, he is suggesting the creation of a new position of "grounds maintenance coordinator" be created, reporting directly to the department head.

The city manager is suggesting that "all functional responsibilities, personnel, positions, physical assets and FY 91/92 budgeted funds associated with the parks department and the grounds maintenance division of public works, be combined with the present Recreation Department."

Simmons, who will be responsible for suggesting Jernigan's replacement and the person to hold the new title if it is approved, has not yet advertised to fill the position.

In his presentation to the commission, he is suggesting several points. Number one, approval to implement the proposed reorganization. Number two, if it is deemed appropriate by the commissioners, to have an ordinance prepared to activate the move.

Then, he is requesting the commission to authorize initiation of personnel recruitment actions for the grounds maintenance coordinator position, not to be filled prior to Oct. 1, 1991.

Mike Kirby, the present recreation director for the City of Sanford, was not specifically identified by name in the proposal, but Simmons is recommending, "that the duties of the present director of recreation be redescribed to include these additional functions and responsibilities."

Simmons also is proposing a salary increase for the director, on a comparable worth basis. Kirby's salary is presently $33,314. Under Simmons' proposal, it would be increased to $35,312.

Regarding Jernigan's retirement, Simmons will make a second proposal Monday night. The city has previously allowed Jernigan the opportunity to act as general coordinator of the Golden Age Games. With his resignation however, the position would not be able to continue through the city sponsorship.

Lake Mary discusses money again

By NICK PFRIPAUF
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — The Lake Mary City Commission will tackle money matters again tonight. The 1992 fiscal year budget and millage rate will come up for its first official reading.

Following a number of meetings on individual and collective budget matters held during the past several months, the city is now ready to adopt the budget for fiscal year 1992. The amount, identified as total uses of funds, is $10,134,892.

The ordinance to come up for approval tonight also establishes a millage rate of 3.8991 mills. This is the tentative rate set by the city commission in conformance with the requirements of state law. The millage rate was included on the statement of taxes sent to property owners by the Seminole County Property Appraiser.

During previous discussions, the commissioners indicated approval of the proposed rate. In addition to adopting the tentative rate however, the commission also has the authority to adopt the tentative rate or a lower rate, but may not increase it without notifying each taxpayer.

The budget to be voted on tonight is based on the original proposal submitted by the City See Lake Mary, Page 5A

Lewis quits county chamber

By J. MARK BARFIELD

LONGWOOD — Robert Lewis, the beleaguered director of the Greater Seminole County Chamber of Commerce, resigned Wednesday despite a State Attorney's Office investigation that cleared him of any wrongdoing for using $11,000 of his own money to bolster the organization sagging finances.

"I took this step today because I thought it would be in the best interest of the organization to remove myself as an issue," Lewis said Wednesday.

"I wanted to remove me as an issue so the members and leadership can get on with the with their fund-raising."

An interim director begins work today until a permanent replacement is found for Lewis, who steered the business organization's membership from 400 in 1983 to between 1,400 and 1,500 members today. He was paid $50,000 per year, Lewis said.

W.G. "Doc" Strawbridge, who retired last year as executive of the South Brevard County chamber and was past president of the Florida Chamber Executives Association, will begin work today, said Carmen Fogarty, chamber president. Lewis will remain on call to chamber officials for assistance, Fogarty said.

Prosecutor: Witnesses not nice people

MIAMI — Two key government witnesses who will testify against a Drug Enforcement Administration agent accused of selling confidential information to drug dealers are "not nice people," a prosecutor said. The trial of Jorge Villar began Wednesday in federal court. Villar also is charged with conspiring to defraud the DEA and distribute cocaine. The chief prosecution witness is Alex Marrero, Villar's alleged partner and a former Metro-Dade officer. Marrero was among officers acquitted in 1980 of charges related to the beating death of Arthur McDuffie. The verdict sparked three days of rioting in Miami. Another witness is Willy Martinez, a former boxing promoter and confessed drug dealer who was the chief informant in the case against Marrero and Villar. Marrero has pleaded guilty to conspiracy charges in the case and agreed to testify.

Woman convicted of murdering child

TAMPA — A woman convicted of murdering her foster child raised her shackled wrists to wipe away tears when a judge sentenced her to life behind bars with no chance of parole for 25 years. "I'm a mother. I have tried to live my life the right way," Patricia Pugh said during her sentencing Tuesday in the beating death of 5-year-old Melissa King. Court records say her foster family punished her for sneaking leftover barbecued chicken and chocolate cake and for other incidents over the 1990 Labor Day weekend. Prosecutors acknowledge they don't know exactly who inflicted the blows to the head that killed Melissa. They blame three members of the Pugh family — Patricia, 33; her son, Andre, 18; and her husband, Ferris, 29 — for abuse in a home where the state meant to protect Melissa.

Staffing cuts less than thought

EGLIN AIR FORCE BASE — Staffing cuts at this base for units responsible for developing and testing non-nuclear weapons will be slightly less than previously thought, an Air Force general said. Thirty fewer positions will be eliminated, Lt. Gen. Thomas R. Ferguson Jr., commander of the Air Force Aeronautical Systems Division headquartered at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base in Dayton, Ohio, said Wednesday. That will mean a total reduction of 1,198 military and civilian positions through 1995, said Capt. Leah Bryant, an Eglin spokeswoman. Eglin has about 16,000 military and civilian workers. Ferguson and Bryant said the intention is to eliminate the positions entirely through attrition, including early outs or retirements, to avoid layoffs.

Associated Press correction

TALLAHASSEE — The Associated Press reported erroneously on Sept. 1 that new day care regulations passed by the Legislature this spring will take effect next month. The effective date for most of the provisions is October 1993. The story also said the new staffing ratio for 1 and 2-year-olds would be reduced from eight children for every staffer to six children for every staffer. That ratio applies to 1-year-old children. The current ratio for 2-year-olds is 12 children for every staffer and will drop to 11 children per staffer in October 1993.

GOP taps lottery to raise funds

By BRYANT KALLESTAD

TALLAHASSEE — Florida Republicans are after more money for the 1992 elections and they've tapped into the lottery in a gimmick fundraiser. In a mass mailing that began reaching registered Republican voters Wednesday, state GOP chairman Van Poole said Gov. Lawton Chiles treats the lottery as "a halfway house for unemployed friends and campaign workers." The letter and an accompanying page of photocopied newspaper articles on the lottery was sent to tens of thousands of party members, GOP spokesman Stan Smith said.

Chiles' press secretary, Julie Anbender, said the governor was satisfied with the present direction of the lottery.

"I think we've answered all the questions on that," she said. "We find it curious that the GOP has chosen not to attack the governor on his ethics reform, campaign reform and budget reform or any of the major new approaches to government."

"We'd like to hit the jackpot," Smith said Wednesday. "I think it'll anger a lot of people that their state is being run entirely different than it was promised in the campaign rhetoric."

Kitten's heart defect stirs debate

By CATHERINE WILSON
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI — The discovery of an inoperable heart defect in a captive Florida panther kitten has renewed debate about the future of the endangered species and biological rescue efforts. A heart murmur could be heard with a stethoscope in Panther No. 905, and cardiologists found a defective heart valve that is so severe the kitten may survive only a year or two.

Only about 30 to 50 of the tawny brown cats are believed to survive in the wild, and a plan by state and federal biologists for a captive breeding program to save the animal from extinction is open for comment through Sept. 13.

The state Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission is asking the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to allow the sick kitten to be moved to the commission's wildlife research lab in Gainesville for special treatment. Researchers say the kitten may be an example of inbreeding problems. The cause of the defect cannot be determined, but scientists note her father also is her grandfather. He mated with both her mother and grandmother.

"This is one of the types of problems the ability to improve animal Florida panthers through selective captive breeding," Tom Logan, the commission's head of wildlife research, said Wednesday.

Local NAACP says it didn't know new school was being built, wants it closed

Associated Press

JACKSONVILLE — A new $8 million elementary school in suburban Mandarin should be closed immediately because it violates a desegregation agreement, an NAACP official claims. Fred Matthews, chairman of the education committee of the local chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said

Tuesday that he did not know the school was being built and would be opened this fall.

The elementary school was never mentioned in desegregation discussions with school officials over an agreement that covers seven other new suburban schools. Matthews said. "If Greenland Elementary is an eighth school, it needs to be closed," Matthews said. But School Superintendent

Larry Zenke said there was no attempt to build it secretly, and he said he wouldn't close it unless ordered to do so by a court.

Zenke said the School Board awarded contracts for the design and construction of the school in a series of public meetings. "There was no effort or desire to cloak in secrecy the opening of this elementary school," Zenke said.

Nymphomaniac's alleged client list to become public

By MARK GUSOFF
Associated Press Writer

FORT LAUDERDALE — A Broward judge says releasing a client list in a prostitution case involving a self-proclaimed nymphomaniac and her sheriff deputy husband won't jeopardize their right to a fair trial. But attorneys for at least 11 of about 80 men on the list, which lawyers say could include prominent local officials, want to block the release of the names. Richard Rosenbaum, who represents six men calling themselves John Doe, told Broward Circuit Judge John A. Frusciante in a hearing Wednesday that his clients have been tormented by the potential release of the list. "I've had grown men crying," Rosenbaum said. "These people's lives will be ruined." But Frusciante rejected the John Does' plea and ruled that by Sept. 18 the media would have access to the list of men that the state claims paid Kathy Willets for sex. Rosenbaum immediately filed an appeal to the 4th Circuit Court of Appeal in Palm Beach. Mrs. Willets' attorney, Ellis Rubin, has said her clients could include prominent local officials. Fort Lauderdale's vice mayor resigned a month ago amid speculation he was on the list. Once the names are released, "then you can have a field day. You can destroy whoever you want," Rubin told reporters outside the courtroom Wednesday. Mrs. Willets, 33, was arrested July 23 and charged with selling her body for $80 to $150 a session. Her husband, Jeffrey Willets, 42, was charged with sharing profits of up to $2,000 a week. Rubin says Mrs. Willets needs to have sex with many men because she suffers from an insatiable sexual desire while her husband has spells of impotence. "We are going to show through medical and sex therapist testimony that these situations are not unusual, and this was their way to compensate for each other's deficiency," Rubin said. "The state calls it prostitution. We call it sexual surrogacy." Assistant state attorney Joel Lazarus dismissed the tactic. "Nymphomania as far as I know is not a legal defense, if there is such a thing as nymphomania," he said.

Mother wants freedom at psychiatric hospital

Associated Press

TAMPA — A woman found innocent by reason of insanity last year in the slayings of her two children was in court this week to win more freedom at the mental hospital where she is held. Dorothy Dianne Rose looked much different than the gaunt, 73-pound woman who, after the killings, lay chained to a hospital bed and denied her children were dead. Ms. Rose, 33, was charged with strangling Michael, 2, and Jessica, 15 months, with her bathrobe sash just before dawn Jan. 23, 1990. She then tried to kill herself. Neighbors and relatives said she was an obese woman who loved her children intensely and was haunted by the idea that her estranged husband and his girlfriend would take them away. Through much of the court proceedings that led to Rose's commitment to the state's mental hospital at Chattahoochee in June 1990, doctors said she denied the children were dead. Eight psychiatrists agreed that Rose was insane. Tuesday, Graybill agreed not to block Rose from a program that would allow her to move more freely around the hospital.

Native American sovereignty

To a greater extent than ever before, Americans are visiting Indian reservations, to gamble at the casinos and high-stakes bingo parlors that the tribes are authorized to run, or to enjoy the amusement parks and other tours that some reservations offer. Inevitably, some of those hundreds of thousands of visitors are going to be injured. And that's when they find out the bad news about the doctrine of tribal sovereignty.

Under existing law, which, in certain respects, treats reservation lands as independent nations, none of the usual rules about public safety and good building codes apply. Most tribes don't even carry insurance. And they can't be sued because the laws of civil liability don't have any force on tribal property. To allow such a suit, Indian attorneys contend, would amount to submission by tribal authorities to outside domination.

Although that has been the rule for 50 years, ever since the Supreme Court ruled that "Indian nations are exempt from suit without congressional authorization," it hasn't caused that many problems. That's because the reservations were often remote and rarely visited by outsiders.

But today, with tribes aggressively seeking new economic opportunities in activities ranging from casinos and resorts to hazardous waste dumps, the chances for contact with the outside world have readily increased and so have the risks for the unsuspecting public.

As the Supreme Court pointed out, however, Congress has the power to address this problem — either by establishing some uniform rules for insurance coverage and public safety on reservations that are open to visitors, or by making the tribes subject to the same rules of civil liability that apply to all of their neighbors.

There's no question that after so many decades of dependency and neglect of the tribes, the federal government has a vital interest in encouraging them now to enhance their self-sufficiency. But as Congress works to improve the economic independence of Indian people, it needs to look closely at this question of immunity, to ensure that responsibility goes along with the economic growth it's trying to encourage.

Air, arms, basic needs

Embarrassed that German firms were deeply involved in helping Iraq and Libya develop major weapons and that the state bureaucracy was incredibly slack in allowing such illicit activity, German officials have announced a new foreign aid policy that could serve as a model for other nations. From now on, Bonn will gauge its aid by how much recipient governments spend on arms, and how well they treat their citizens.

This builds on an idea, advanced by U.N. agencies that has caused consternation among Third World dictators who fear, with reason, that such a policy might well apply to them. That idea is being reinforced by the end of the Cold War and the growing global awareness of the horrendous waste of resources in aid-receiving countries resulting from the government corruption and outsized military expenditures.

Germany's new policy would take into account levels of spending for arms as well as the extent of human rights and economic freedoms in countries receiving aid. The main objective, according to a Cabinet minister, is to supply aid most generously to "countries that enjoy what is generally called good government."

That's hardly a detailed blueprint for limiting arms sales, nor for controlling the proliferation of new arms-exporting countries — Brazil, Argentina, North Korea and Taiwan, among others — that are ready to satisfy governments covetous of state-of-the-art military technology. The Pakistani foreign minister's response to Iraq's devastating defeat last winter was to express determination to acquire all the weaponry necessary to make Pakistan "an impregnable fortress."

Major arms suppliers, including the United States have committed themselves anew to ridding the Middle East, in particular, of weapons of mass destruction. But they continue to find rationales for business as usual. Now more than ever, Washington, with Moscow all but relegated to the sidelines, has an opportunity to lead the way toward a global arms-control regime. What's mostly lacking is the will to do so.

Disproportionate levels of military aid not only generate arms races that can lead to war;

JOSEPH SPEAR

Look more closely at Mr. Invincible

How many times can George Bush win the same election?

Last winter, in the aftermath of the Persian Gulf War, the pundits virtually handed the White House to Bush for another four years. The New York Times heralded his "aura of invincibility in '92." Business Week went so far as to suggest that only George Bush be put on the ballot.

Now, in the wake of the failed coup in the Soviet Union, the president has been re-elected. "The Gods of politics have dealt this guy another ace," Democratic pollster Harrison Hickman told The Wall Street Journal. "How lucky can this guy get?" pondered a Mario Cuomo aide. There is a "brewing stature gap" between this guy and the Democrats, noted Washington Post reporter Dan Balz.

The "stature gap" in question is the international stage, upon which Bush appears to strut without equal and the Democrats appear to slither like lowly reptiles. Panama, the Persian Gulf, the Soviet Union. Has there been a crisis anywhere in the past three years that this guy hasn't handled deftly? Shouldn't we just award him another term by acclamation?

Well, yeah, I think there are some real questions about Bush's foreign affairs acumen. And no, I wouldn't shut the opera house doors until the differently sized person sings.

Let's put on Spear's muck-splattered glasses and take a look at a few of the tempests through which Bush has navigated the ship of state:

In the Soviet coup crisis, what did Bush do but stop his golf cart long enough to look cool and complain about the "talking head industry" — television pundits — who knocked him for not doing enough? OK, so he flew back to Washington for a day to demonstrate for the cameras the firmness of his grip on the helm. And he rallied world leaders to the defense of democracy. This is a display of extraordinary talent? I would say 80 percent of whatever points Bush earned in the coup crisis ought to be wrapped in ribbons and sent by air express to Boris Yeltsin.

In the Iraqi crisis, Bush deserves naught but kudos for pushing Saddam Hussein out of Kuwait, but he ought to be held to account for stopping the action before Iraq was militarily disabled and Saddam deposed. The most effective reply to an anticipated barrage of Desert

Storm campaign footage would be a poster featuring Saddam's smiling visage above the words, "I owe my job to George."

In the Panama crisis, Bush declared it was time to put a halt to the cocaine traffic through that nation and dispatched the troops to haul its corrupt dictator out by the scruff of his neck. And what did we get for Bush's bold move? The General Accounting Office reported in July that the movement of drugs through Panama may have doubled since Manuel Noriega's departure and that the country is still a money laundering hub.

Many more questions could be posed about Bush's performance in international affairs. Why is he so godawful pokey about helping the Soviet Union survive its economic holocaust? Why did it take him forever to warm up to the changes in Eastern Europe? Why was he so eager to lift economic sanctions against South Africa? Why does he not now make some gesture of reconciliation to Fidel Castro, who is now bereft of friends and might respond?

And most importantly, why is he such a confounded hypocrite when it comes to China? I know, he played tennis with them when he was the top American diplomat in Peking.

There is a brewing stature gap.

Noriega-BCCI link trial focus

WASHINGTON — With Manuel Noriega's drug trafficking trial beginning in Miami, jurors and the American public will hear much about the deposed Panamanian strongman's dealings with the now infamous Bank of Credit and Commerce International.

BCCI had branches in more than 70 countries. One of its largest, in terms of the dollars transferred, was in Panama City. That branch, it appears, held numerous accounts for the government of Panama.

Bank of England investigators, poring over records from BCCI's major London branch, have discovered movements of large amounts of cash — ranging up to $15 million — backed by documents with Noriega's signature. Most of these transfers appear were the legitimate movement of Panamanian government funds, but the investigators are now comparing the transactions with the post-Noriega government's records to confirm this.

BCCI was also Manuel Noriega's personal bank. Records on Noriega-controlled accounts, found in the London BCCI branch, show millions of dollars moved around for obviously private use. So far, totals for these accounts add up to more than $23 million.

Prosecutors are especially interested in one unusual BCCI account that Noriega personally controlled. Capitol Hill sources say they expect records of this account will be introduced at Noriega's trial with the allegation that the millions involved were drug payoffs.

According to BCCI records, this account was established when Noriega was still just the commander of the Panamanian National Guard. The account, in fact, was in the name of the Guard, although Noriega was the signatory on the account.

Over the next five years, almost $5 million flowed through the account. Most of the funds were deposited in Panama City and then immediately transferred to BCCI London where they sat until dispersed.

Capitol Hill sources who have seen copies of the documents say many of the disbursements were to hotels around the world for stays by Noriega and his family. Others went to charter airplanes to carry Noriega's family around Europe. One large transfer was sent to BCCI's branch on the Champs Elysees in Paris, apparently to pay for a Left Bank apartment for Noriega.

Other disbursements were for much more mundane things, such as a monthly transfer to an American bank to pay his wife Felicidad's Visa bills. However, in the case of Mrs. Noriega, these payments were often far from mundane. One monthly payment, in 1988, was for $223,000. Apparently, the Noriega credit card was put to good use by Felicidad and her daughters on a two-week shopping spree in Miami.

Other payments were sent from the London account to numbered accounts at the BCCI branch in the Cayman Islands. Given the strict bank secrecy laws in the Caymans, investigators are still having difficulty ascertaining who controlled these accounts — despite the fact that the British-controlled Caymans shut down BCCI's operations there after the Bank of England moved against BCCI in London.

The manager of BCCI's Panama City branch was Arjad Awan, handpicked for the post by BCCI's founder, Agha Hasan Abedi. Awan was eventually transferred, first to Washington and then to head BCCI's whole Latin American operation based in Miami. But investigators say there he continued as Noriega's personal banker, often making trips to Panama City to meet with Noriega.

Awan was one of four BCCI officers and officials to be convicted of laundering cocaine profits in a federal court in Tampa, Fla. He was sentenced to serve 12 years.

In that trial, Awan was asked repeatedly about his relationship with Noriega by prosecutors trying to tie Noriega to the drug trade.

But Awan insisted that most of his dealings with Noriega were normal, except that occasionally men would come into the bank with letters from Noriega for large cash disbursements. Awan said he assumed they were political payoffs.

However, sources close to the prosecution say they expect Awan will change his testimony at Noriega's trial. He will give new details about where Noriega's money came from and where it went. He may testify that Noriega introduced major drug figures to the bank, where they became some of BCCI Latin America's biggest customers.

These payments were often far from mundane.

Bank may have aided Iraq in war

WASHINGTON — Congressional investigators conducting a probe into how Iraq fueled its military machine are following a trail that leads to the doorstep of some prominent American corporations.

Employees of the Atlanta branch of the Rome-based Banca Nazionale del Lavoro are the focus of the investigation into the diversion of strategic materials to Iraq from the West. BNL, along with other banks, received billions of dollars in federally insured agricultural credits now suspected of helping to subsidize Saddam Hussein's war effort.

Some employees in BNL's Atlanta branch already have been indicted on charges of defrauding the bank by illegally extending some $4 billion in agricultural guarantees, export-import credits and unsecured loans to the Central Bank of Iraq. Iraq managed to divert millions of these dollars to purchase weapons parts from the United States and abroad.

Moreover, evidence now being pieced together by congressional investigators suggests that some of the parts and tools Saddam required to construct weapons of mass destruction such as the "supergun" may have been financed indirectly by American taxpayers.

Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C., charged that, "It is absolutely clear to me that without the flow of federal agricultural loan monies to Banca Nazionale in Atlanta, weapons procurement by the Iraqi war machine would not have been possible."

Our associate Dean Boyd followed one of the money trails that started in the fall of 1988 when BNL employees issued an allegedly illegal $12 million letter of credit to Associated Instruments Distributors.

Baghdad cabled shipping instructions to BNL for the parts Associated Instruments was to purchase with the letter of credit.

Armed with $12 million, Associated Instruments then began looking for companies that exported these goods and quickly found two. In May 1989, it extended $2.7 million to the huge German metalworking firm Krupp-Widia, and $6.5 million to a second German firm. In carrying out its end of the shipment, Krupp turned to Kennanetal Inc., a Pennsylvania-based Fortune 500 company that produces the specialized metal cutting tools Iraq was hunting for. In August 1989, parts bought from Kennanetal's German subsidiary were added to a shipment of related goods, and sent to Iraq.

Nash Rehman, president of Associated Instruments, denied allegations that his company served as an Iraqi front. But, internal company documents we obtained show that Rehman's company and two other individuals, whom Rehman only identified as "Iraqi nationals," reaped nearly $1 million from the illegal $12 million letter of credit in return for brokering the deal. Some of that money was deposited in an account at Bank of Credit and Commerce in Montreal, Canada, now the focus of a major financial scandal.

Now both Kennanetal and Associated Instruments are under investigation by the U.S. Customs Service for their role in the sale of these and other products to Iraq. Although Commerce Department officials corroborate both Kennanetal and Rehman's assertion that the export of these particular parts to Iraq was legal, congressional investigators are looking at the letter of credit used to finance the shipment, which is cited as fraudulent in the BNL indictment.

Some employees have been indicted on charges of fraud.

It's official Winter Baseball League to operate out of Sanford

By TONY DeBORMIER
Herald Sports Editor

SANFORD — Nobody wants to hear about the labor pains, they just want to see the baby.

On Wednesday afternoon at the Sanford Memorial Stadium Dugout Club, commissioner Bobby Bonds and deputy commissioner Sal Algieri formally presented the offspring of over two years of labor, the Winter Baseball League.

"Bobby announced that the league is going full speed ahead and we will start playing ball as of November 1," said Algieri Wednesday night.

Hand-in-hand with the declaration that the league was moving ahead came the announcement that the Winter Baseball League would now operate out of Sanford Memorial Stadium. Today and tomorrow, the stadium will be the site of the WBL's first series of owners' meetings.

Or at this stage, prospective owners' meetings.

"Bobby Bonds said that the WBL will consist of six cities (Sanford, DeLand, Cocoa, Daytona Beach, Winter Haven and Port St. Lucie)," said Pete Arcamone, the liaison between Wes Rinker (who rents the stadium from the City of Sanford) and the WBL.

"Bonds made the indication that there is ownership for those cities. We'll know by Friday if all the ownership groups are intact."

At Wednesday's press conference, Bonds and Algieri supposedly went over a list of prospective owners. Arcamone stressed that until the $5,000 deposits are paid and the contracts are signed, prospective is the key word.

Currently, Arcamone said Rinker falls into that prospective category.

"The numbers are a heck of a lot more reasonable," said Arcamone, who has worked closely with Bonds and Algieri in the refinement of the financial protocols for prospective ownership. "Now someone can get into this league and make it work from an owners' standpoint."

"Wes is very optimistic about getting into this league. Otherwise, he wouldn't go so far as to have the league headquarters in Sanford."

Algieri said that among the business the league hopes to accomplish today and tomorrow, aside from the collection of the deposits, will be such tasks as the choosing of team names and colors.

The first actual piece of baseball business will be tryouts this weekend at the Cocoa Expo. Players interested in trying out should contact Kevin Russell at the Cocoa Expo.

Beyond that, the WBL expects to open fall training on Oct. 15 with opening day scheduled for Nov. 1. The league will play a 60-game schedule (30 home and 30 away).

"They ran an advertisement in Baseball America for the tryouts this weekend," said Arcamone. "From what I can see, there has been a very good response to the ad. There appears to be a lot of interest in it (the league)."

"Basically, what you're looking at are players who have been released from Major League Baseball at one

Last year, Brett Marshall (left) was one of nine seniors that helped the Lake Mary boys' volleyball team post a 32-3 record while winning its third consecutive SAC title and second straight Volleyfest championship. This year, Jason Mau (No. 13), Ryan Munns (No. 25) and Chris Parrillo are the Rams' only three returning seniors.

Rams in vanguard of boys' volleyball

By TONY DeBORMIER

LAKE MARY — Last year, the Lake Mary High School boys' volleyball team may have been the best team nobody ever heard of.

It's not that the Rams don't have their fans, it's just that they play a sport that is not considered a varsity sport outside of the tri-county area of Seminole, Orange and Osceola counties.

That doesn't bother Lake Mary coach Bill Whalen much.

"As far as the Seminole Athletic Conference and the Metro Conference, it is considered a varsity sport," said Whalen, who has guided the Rams to a 68-7 record in the three years that they've played the sport. "For the conference All-Sports trophy, it gets first-place points just like basketball or girls' volleyball."

And the sport appears to be spreading. "Volusia County just put it in as a varsity sport," said Whalen. "The Five Star Conference (which encompasses Volusia County) will play amongst themselves this year. When I was down in Broward County a few months ago, I read a story that said that Fort Lauderdale schools were putting it in as a varsity sport

"It looks like it's starting to grow."

While Whalen and the Rams can certainly take pride in the collective role they've played in spreading the popularity of the sport, no one would blame them for feeling a little cheated. Last year's team that went 32-3 enroute to third consecutive SAC title and second straight Volleyfest championship may have been as dominant a squad as any in any other sport in any given year.

"It's hard to predict what would have happened had there been a state tournament because there are so many variables," said Whalen. "But given the volleyball we played and the size and talent of our players, last year's team could have competed in a state championship against teams from anywhere in the state."

That's no idle boast. This summer, three local teams (two 19-and-Under squads and one 16-and-Under team) consisting largely of Lake Mary players went to the United States Volleyball Association state championships in Tampa and came away with two firsts and a second.

"Most of the team last year were a part of the 25-player USVBA teams," said Whalen. "They played

Dolphins seek help on defense

MIAMI — Miami Dolphins defenders aren't offended that their coach thinks they need help.

The Dolphins, blitzed for 583 yards Sunday in a 35-31 season-opening loss at Buffalo, traded receiver and first-round draft choice Randal Hill to Phoenix on Tuesday for the Cardinals' No. 1 pick next year. Coach Don Shula said Miami may use the pick to trade for a veteran defensive player.

"Any time you go out and give up 580 yards, you're naive if you don't expect this to happen," defensive end Jeff Cross said Wednesday.

"We haven't been in the Super Bowl and we weren't ranked No. 1 in defense last year. We could always use some help on defense, right?"

Shula has declined to name players Miami might try to acquire. The Palm Beach Post reported Wednesday that the Dolphins are looking into the background of Green Bay Packers linebacker Tim Harris, a former Pro Bowl player who is unsigned and has asked to be traded.

The prospect of Harris joining the Dolphins excited safety Louis Oliver.

"You picture Cross coming from one side, Harris from the other side," Oliver said. "You get a big smile on your face, because it's constant pressure on the quarterback. As a defensive back you start thinking, interceptions!"

Harris has 54 1/2 sacks in five NFL seasons. He also has a reputation for talking trash on the field, and he's seeking $1.5 million for this year.

"You talk about Tim Harris — he doesn't seem like the Miami type, but he's a hell of a player," Cross said.

Miami's defense ranked seventh in the NFL last year but slipped in the second half of the season, largely because of a poor pass rush. The Dolphins selected Hill with the No. 23 pick in the draft because, Shula said, all the best defensive players were already taken.

"It was a shock that they drafted him in the first place," cornerback J.B. Brown said. "We could use some defensive help — a pass-rushing linebacker or defensive end. If we get that pressure in the quarterback's face, that might be the difference" in the bid for a Super Bowl berth.

The Dolphins received some defensive help Wednesday — veteran

In-law's familiarity breeds contempt

DEAR ABBY: My problem is the 40-year-old husband of my 30-year-old daughter. He believes that because he is "family," he is entitled to come into my home and help himself to anything he wants in my fridge or cupboards. He has done this for several years, even after having been told (by me) that this is unacceptable. After complying for a while, he went back to helping himself to food and drink as though he were in his own home.

His manners are atrocious. He doesn't wait to be offered a second helping — he takes what he wants, sometimes ignoring the serving utensils and using his fingers. He weighs 280 and is a big eater. He complains if I don't have his favorite beer, suggesting that I buy it by the case so I won't run out.

My daughter caters to him, making him (in my home) if he wants more of anything.

Because of the distance they have to travel to visit us, they always spend the night. My husband and I always give them our bedroom. When we spent the night at their place, we slept on a broken-down sofa that they brought in from the toolshed.

I know there is very little you can do to help me, Abby, but I need to know if being "family" is a legitimate reason for my son-in-law's behavior.

APPALLED IN CANADA
DEAR APPALLED: Being "family" in a family of pigs might excuse this inconsiderate act, but in a family of reasonably well-bred people, his behavior is not acceptable.

DEAR ABBY: I handle "lost" property for a large hospital, and I see so much heartache. I feel compelled to write.

Abby, advise your readers to please leave all valuables at home, especially their precious wedding rings with stones and other "real" jewelry or religious medals.

I cannot tell you how many

ADVISE

people I have seen who have been robbed of their jewelry and other valuables. The elderly are especially vulnerable, as they are sometimes confused. Their rings are often loose after years of wear and are easily slipped off by thieves.

A tip: Never tape a ring to a finger — it's an advertisement to come and get it.

Even the dead are being robbed. If you arrive at the hospital unexpectedly, send your valuables home immediately with a friend. If you're alone, insist that the nurse (no one else) lock up your rings in the hospital safe. She will place them in a special "valuables" envelope and will give you a receipt.

Most hospitals are wide open to the public, and that includes thieves as well as fine and dedicated employees. Also, hospitals are not responsible for lost valuables. We cannot afford to reimburse patients for theft. Please sign this...

Good hygiene will prevent pinworms

DEAR DR. GOTT: My 15-year-old daughter suffers from pinworms every four or five months. I treat her with Vermox, yet the problem continues. Do you have any suggestions?

DEAR READER: Pinworm eggs, which are excreted in the stool, may enter the environment and remain infective for weeks. Thus, people who put their fingers in their mouths may be inviting infection from objects they have touched.

Therefore, I recommend that every family member, adults included, be checked for pinworms. Your family doctor can easily perform this service at very little cost.

In addition, your daughter must be fastidious in her hygiene and handwashing. If she is a nail-biter, she must stop. Also, if there are young children in the house, their underwear should be changed frequently and washed.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've been diagnosed with hydrocephalus, after having ruled out thyroid problems and multiple sclerosis. Can you provide information on my condition and advise if there is an adult support group I might contact?

DEAR READER: The brain is bathed in fluid that circulates around the surface of the organ and through a system of channels within it. These channels empty into larger spaces, called ventricles. When the ventricles become blocked (from infection or stroke), they enlarge. This is called hydrocephalus and is diagnosed by X-rays or CT scans of the brain. Mild enlargement requires no treatment.

When you have an honor blowing in the wind - for example, king doubleton opposite only low cards - you must try to keep off play the defender who can lead through your unprotected honor.

Cast your eyes over today's North-South hands. Against the contract of five clubs, West leads the diamond king. How would you play if you were South?

The bidding didn't end in the best contract for North-South, but it is difficult to get to three no-trump by South. North's redouble showed 10-plus points. South might have bid two clubs over one spade, but among experts this bid indicates a sub-minimum opening, and South has a respectable hand.

From the bidding, it is likely that West has the spade ace. If so, there is a risk that you will lose one heart and two spade tricks. Unless East unexpectedly has the spade ace, you need to find hearts 3-3. But if East can get the lead in hearts, you will go down, since he will push a spade through your king.

How can you establish the 13th heart while guaranteeing that East never gets the lead? The secret is to duck the opening lead in dummy.

Win the second diamond, discarding a heart. Next, draw trumps, cash the heart ace, play a heart to dummy's king and ruff a heart in hand.

If hearts break 3-3, return to dummy with a trump and discard a spade on the last heart. If they don't break, return to dummy with a trump and lead a spade, hoping East has the ace.

By Bernice Bode Cool YOUR BIRTHDAY

Be on the lookout for several unusual business proposals in the year ahead. Although they might seem far-out, it will still behoove you to examine them in depth.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 23) In today's involvements, you may become frustrated due to an individual who is usually easy-going. Conversely, someone who usually is uncooperative may be your prime ally.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If you find yourself in a tight spot today, do not fear. Adversity tends to strengthen your resolve, and you'll discover that you're more than a match for spontaneous complications.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) It's best not to discard traditional methods today in order to experiment with the new and untested. Working with known qualities enhances your probabilities for success.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) This could be a profitable day for you, provided you're not dealing in speculative ventures. Make your bundle the old-fashioned way - earn it.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't reduce your hopes and expectations today if, by chance, you have to contend with some minor setbacks. Obstacles are apt to be temporary while your motivation should be permanent.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Ignore an associate's pessimistic opinion regarding something about which you feel strongly optimistic. It might not work for this individual, but it should for you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Socially, try to do something different today with friends other than those with whom you usually pal around. Fresh personalities will have a favorable effect on your outlook.

immediately, but you can take measures to lessen their negative impact. Challenges stimulate your ingenuity and resourcefulness.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Don't deprive yourself or your loved ones of pleasurable things today, even though they might cost a bit more. The experiences engendered will be worth any sacrifice.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Study important situations very carefully today; what appears to be negative at first glance may actually contain intrinsic values. You'll find this out only through closer inspection.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If you are too materialistic today, you might not be rewarded in proportion to your expectations. Look out for your own interests, but also be protective of those with whom you're involved.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Funds could suddenly become available at this time for something you've been wanting to buy but thought you couldn't afford. Now this unfolds could be rather mysterious.
