BRIEFS

Juvenile money

The state Department of Juvenile Justice (DJJ) has awarded over $4.9 million worth of grants through the Community Juvenile Justice Partnership Grants program. The grants were awarded to 125 applicants to help fund juvenile delinquency prevention and early intervention efforts.

Seminole County was listed as receiving three grants with a total of $109,794. The Excel Alternate Middle/High School program by the Private Industry Council of Seminole County is to receive $31,100. Seminole County's Middle School Truancy Program will receive $34,194. The 18th Circuit State Attorney's Project Pay Back is to receive $42,500.

College officials

SANFORD — With a stroke of his pen, Governor Lawton Chiles approved three persons to remain in official capacity at Seminole Community College.

The three are Beth Hattaway, chair, SCC District Board of Trustees; Amos C. Jones, vice chair, and Russell E. Moncrief, first appointed to the Board by Chiles in 1991. Each of them will continue to serve with SCC and its new President, E. Ann McGee, for a considerable length of time. Hattaway and Jones will serve until May 31, 1999, and Moncrief's term will end one year earlier.

The other members that comprise the five-person SCC district board of trustees, whose terms are not up for renewal are Patricia H. Herring and Charles J. Kovalski.

SJRWMD meeting

The St. Johns River Water Management District will hold two meetings this coming week at SJRWMD headquarters in Palatka. Tuesday, a governing board workshop begins at 10 a.m., with a regulatory meeting at 1 p.m. and committee meetings to follow.

One of the local issues to be considered is a consumptive use application by the City of Altamonte Springs regarding Canes Roost.

Public hearings will begin Wednesday, July 10, at 9 a.m. at the same location. Many of them deal with land designated for improvement in the uplands/wetlands areas of Indian River and Putnam counties.

VFW breakfast

SORRENTO — Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 10474 will be hosting a pancake breakfast at the post home, on SR 46 west of Sanford, in Mount Plymouth, Saturday, July 6, from 8 until 11 a.m. Cost is $3 for adults and $2 for children.

Breaking ground in Midway

SANFORD — Seminole County is hosting a kickoff for improvements to 21st Street, in the Midway community, just east of the City of Sanford.

Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) funds are being used to complete the paving, drainage and sidewalk improvements to 21st Street. According to a statement issued by the Seminole County Planning and Development office, the project will be the first paving and sidewalk improvement in the Midway community and will act as the catalyst for additional housing and neighborhood revitalization projects beginning in October.

The event will be held Monday, July 8, at 9 a.m. at the corner of 21st Street and Hurston Avenue. The Seminole County Commission members, Community Development office and District Commissioner Daryl McLain are inviting all interested persons to attend this event.

Respect born on Fourth of July

By JEFF HUNT
Herald Staff Writer

Respect. It's what is missing in America today, say local veterans searching on our nation's 220th anniversary for ways to stake the fires of freedom.

Three generations of Sanford-area participants from three wars gathered at the Disabled American Veterans post, Seminole Chapter 30. All agree that most Americans have lost respect for freedom, those who brought it to them and those who died keeping it for them. And the proof is everywhere they say.

From the mundane celebrations that accompany our nation's anniversary of independence to the total contempt of authority displayed by the Freemen of Montana during their standoff with the FBI, respect for our country is almost nonexistent.

"Kids have no idea what their forefathers went through to make America what it is today," says Russ Germane, a Vietnam veteran and Veteran of Foreign Wars 8093 member. "They don't realize you wouldn't have what you do if people hadn't gone out and got it for you."

"We don't have the patriotism we had when we were younger," says Ray Blower, a World War II vet and American Legion Hall Post 53 member. "We don't have the respect for the flag, or the country, or the political system, not for anything."

The vets also agree that the lack of respect stems from a lack of education in our nation's

Hitman caper: Preacher posts bond

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — George Crossley has been released from prison the day after police charged the minister and broadcast personality with soliciting the murder of a man he said had been harassing him.

Crossley appeared before Seminole County Judge Fredric Hitt yesterday for his first appearance. The judge set bond at $50,000.

Before the day had ended, Crossley posted the bond and was released from the John E. Polk Correctional Facility.

While at the jail, the Seminole County Sheriff's department had Crossley under a suicide watch.

"There wasn't any indication as far as we know that there was any threat," said sheriff's spokesman Ed McDonough, "but as long as he was in the custody of the sheriff's department, we felt he should be closely observed."

McDonough said once a prisoner is released on bond, "he's on his own from that point."

Crossley, 55, was arrested after detailing a murder-for-hire plot to an undercover agent for the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. Investigators said they have both video and audio recordings of the conversation.

Crossley asked the agent to shoot George Waldo in the head. In exchange, Crossley said he would give the agent a pistol worth about $650, according to police.

Investigators said the dispute between the two men centered on an affair between Crossley and Waldo's wife. Waldo was arrested more than a year ago and charged with assaulting Crossley. Sheriff Don Eslinger said Waldo pleaded no contest and was given six

Blessed with a rhinestone crown

By RUSS WHITE
Herald Staff Writer

There is much to be said about Tara Dawn Holland's zigzag journey to the Miss America Pageant in Atlantic City.

She was born in Mobile, Alabama, and has lived in Nashville, New Orleans, Jackson, Miss., and Lake Mary.

She began the Miss America quest after graduating Summa Cum Laude at Lake Mary High School in 1990.

That summer, at 17, she was first runner-up in the Miss Florida Pageant. In 1994 she was fourth runner-up. In 1995, after graduating Magna Cum Laude from Florida State University, she was again first runner-up. This year Tara won the Miss Kansas Pageant.

Yes, that's the direction, Holland, 23 chose to seek her master's degree, at the University of Missouri-Kansas City, and her bid for a beauty-scholarship title. As a resident of Overland Park, Kan., (or is it Oz?) the past year, she qualified for the competition.

"As Tara Dawn Holland, I haven't been able to make the difference I want to make helping eradicate illiteracy in America," she said during her four-day visit with her parents here last week. "Putting a crown on my head, gives me a voice.

"I feel blessed to wear the rhinestone crown as Miss Kansas. I'm independent. I believe in what I want to do and in the power of God. I feel God has a plan for me, and this is part of that plan."

In the past six years, Holland has trained 150 volunteers to work in the Adult Basic Education System and has written a self-published book with an audio tape, "A New Job for the New You." It is designed, she said, to give people with minimal job skills help in getting a job.

Lisa Maile, who tutored Holland at her Winter Park School of Image, Modeling and Acting, says Tara has a good chance at being the new Miss America.

"If ever a young woman possessed all the attributes to win Miss America, Tara is the one," Maile said. "She is a beautiful-looking woman with grace and charm. She is an extremely talented operatic singer. And she genuinely believes in her message about eradicating illiteracy. She has spent her summers as a teacher in Seminole County."

Holland won the swimsuit and talent preliminaries in the Miss Kansas Pageant in addition to the overall title. She sang an aria popularly known as the "Indian Bell Song."

Dianne and Tara Holland

Maile said that Tara's height (she's 5 foot 10) works as an advantage because of her grace. "Tara has the look and poise of a fashion model," Maile said. "She carries herself beautifully."

Because of her stature, Holland attracts all the more attention in her travels. She recalls one of her first summer teaching stints at a middle school in Seminole County. "I heard one little girl and then another say, she's tall... she's really tall," Holland said. "I've been hearing that all my life. I was 5-8 by the time I was 13 years-old. I've never felt awkward about it."

Her "job" as Tara put it as Miss Kansas will be to visit hundreds of middle and high schools and colleges in the state beginning

A mom's view

"Tara is an only child, and this never presented any problems. As she grew up we became best of friends. I know I liked her better the older she was. That's because we related to things much more once she was 12 or 13. She became interested in my friends and the things we did. She always related well to adults. My friends were her friends. We talked every day when Tara came home from Lake Mary High School. I made it a point to be there for her. This summer will be difficult for us both as we wait for the Miss America Pageant. Tara will be in Kansas until the last week. I will join her there if she calls for me. And I imagine she may do just that."

this summer before the Miss America competition.

"There's a lot I can share with the children," she said. "Not only the ones with learning problems, and 20 percent of the population has problems with reading at an early age. But with everyone. These kids don't have the greatest role models."

"I want to tell them about individual responsibility for their actions, and about peer pressure."

As for herself, Holland said, "I feel very good, confident and comfortable. I can look these kids in the eye and tell them I'm a 23 year old virgin. I have enough respect for myself to choose not to follow the crowd. My role model is my mom, Dianne Holland. She has always been my best friend."

Tax on rental cars

TAMPA, Fla. — A car rental company has taken its business away from a state senator's law firm because of support of a proposed tax on rental cars.

Sen. John Grant, a Republican from Tampa, was the Senate sponsor of a bill that would have let Hillsborough County voters decide whether to levy a 5 percent rental car tax to pay for a $160 million football stadium for the NFL Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

The bill ultimately was killed, but that didn't prevent Alamo Rent A Car from taking their business elsewhere. Grant told the St. Petersburg Times Wednesday.

"They said they were very pleased with the service they'd been getting from us," Grant said. "But they said, 'John Grant's there and that's the reason you're fired. You're losing the business because of the rental car tax and the stadium thing.'"

Grant said his firm, Harris, Barrett, Mann & Dew, had been notified a couple of weeks ago by Norman Tripp, a lawyer for Alamo in Fort Lauderdale. Grant called Alamo a "significant client" of his firm, but said that he personally had never handled any of Alamo's work.

Tripp could not be reached for comment Thursday.

Reporter arrested

MARGATE, Fla. — A reporter for Credit Union Times, a national trade publication, has been arrested for trying to obtain a fraudulent driver's license as part of a story on fraud.

Carole Anne Burger, 45, was arrested and charged Wednesday with a third-degree felony when she tried to get a driver's license under the name of a dead woman.

Burger was trying to find out how easy it was to assume someone else's identity through a fake driver's license, which in turn could be used to open fake bank accounts and obtain fraudulent credit cards, said Frank Diekmann, editor of the West Palm Beach-based publication aimed at credit union customers.

"This was in pursuit of doing a story," he said. "Every financial institution deals frequently with false ID's."

Burger found the woman's name from newspaper obituary columns and managed to obtain her social security number and even a copy of her birth certificate from a New York hospital, police said.

Margate police say the charges will likely be dropped.

Peaklest mosquito

The Asian Tiger has become Florida's peaklest mosquito species in the decade since it hitchhiked from the Far East in used tire shipments, but scientists say the best control agent is nothing exotic.

It's you and your neighbors.

A voracious feeder that — unlike most mosquitoes — is active in daylight hours, the Asian tiger has spread throughout the Southeast including all of Florida's 67 counties.

The tiger is a container breeder, meaning it lays eggs in discarded tires, buckets, pet feeding dishes, birdbaths and any other place rain water accumulates, said University of Florida entomologist George O'Meara.

"This is one area where the individual can really take control," O'Meara said. "If you want to have that container out there, turn it upside down so it doesn't collect water."

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Sea World sea lions make debut

By The Associated Press

ORLANDO — Independence Day marked the first day of a life sentence in a Sea World pool for three voracious sea lions.

Hondo, Big Frank and Bob were ushered into the park's Pacific Point Preserve, where they can mingle with 48 other sea lions and 14 harbor seals.

The trio's crime: feasting on steelhead trout near Seattle's Ballard Locks, which won the wrath of fishermen and, eventually, state and federal wildlife officials.

The threesome's existence in the two-acre, saltwater pool at Sea World is actually a reprieve of a death sentence. "It's better off than being shot," said Brad Andrews, Sea World's vice president for zoological operations who interceded when he read they were to be killed.

"I called and said you don't have to kill them. I'll take them," Andrews said.

Sea World's newest residents were among five marked for death in May, when officials decided there was no other way to keep the animals from gorging on the steelhead, an imperiled commercial fish that each year swims upriver to spawn. Attempts to catch them and move them away hadn't worked: the sea lions simply swam back.

Andrews said the trout isn't ordinarily part of a sea lion's diet, this pack had discovered an easy meal. "It was just like a buffet," he said.

Two of the five disappeared — "Maybe they found out their posters were up at the post office," Andrews guessed.

The other three were captured and flown by FedEx to Orlando on May 29. They were in quarantine until Thursday while Sea World biologists made sure they were disease-free.

Andrews said that new blood lines were always welcome for breeding purposes, and that there were plenty of females among the sea lions already there. "They'll go ahead and get some of those females pregnant," he said.

Husband made wife drink out of toilet bowl

By The Associated Press

CAPE CORAL — A man has been sent to prison for forcing his wife to wear a necklace like a dog collar, attaching a leash and forcing her to drink from a toilet bowl.

Richard DiTusa also offered his children rides on his naked wife, prosecutors said.

DiTusa, 41, was convicted last month of battery, a first-degree misdemeanor punishable by up to a year in jail and $1,000 in fines. He received a one-year sentence Wednesday.

Calling the abuse "bizarre," Assistant State Attorney Susan Tacy successfully urged Lee Circuit Judge Jay Rosman to sentence DiTusa to the maximum time allowed.

"She is still afraid he will retaliate," Tacy said.

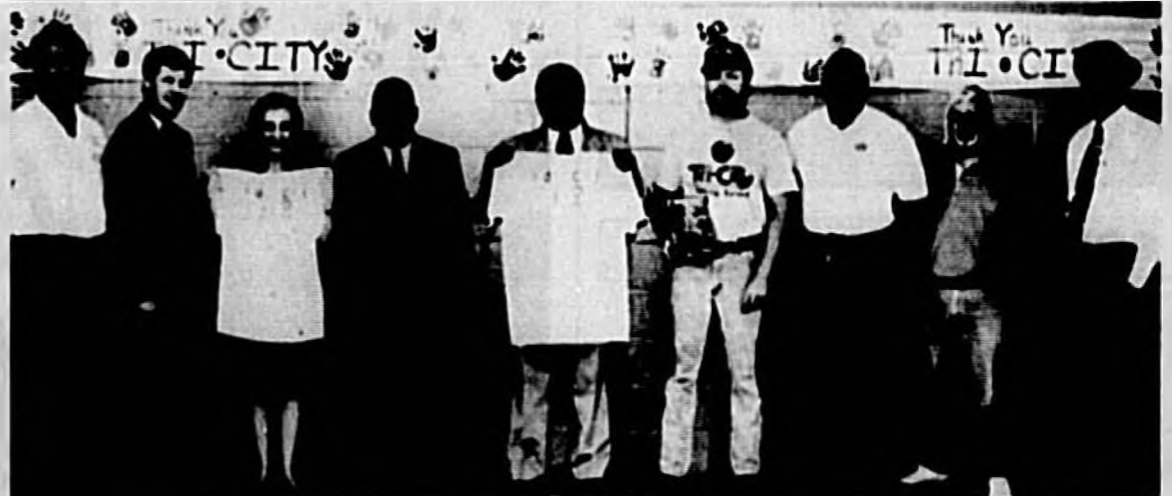

To which DiTusa retorted: "She is a threat to me. ... I'm not a threat to her."

He said the prosecution was making an issue out of nothing and vowed to appeal.

Rosman condemned DiTusa's actions.

"This took place numerous times in the course of the marriage," the judge said. "Your behavior has been described in many ways, but the acts were acts of violence, acts of control ... acts of domestic violence that are not condoned in a marriage."

Wired for basketball fun

Tri-City Electrical Contractors of Sanford recently provided wiring for new lighting at the Seminole Area Boy's and Girl's Club gymnasium in Sanford. In addition, Wington Fire Sprinklers helped install a new scoreboard at the gym. Completion of the project was observed earlier this week. Cyber campaign to elect Fidel Castro U.S. president in high gear

By BOB BODENHEIM
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI — A college drop-out turned computer programmer who moonlights as a septic tank cleaner is happily struggling on with his tongue-in-cheek cyberspace campaign to elect Fidel Castro president of the United States.

A web page jokingly touts the bearded, fatigue-wearing Cuban leader as an alternative to President Clinton and former Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole.

The campaign turned a year old Thursday with Castro no closer to reaching the White House, but Adam Reith, a college drop-out turned computer programmer and septic tank cleaner by night.

"I said 'That is exactly what America is looking for! He is the ultimate Washington outsider.'"

The bright red-white-and-blue pages of the web site are filled with one-liners, a Letterman-like top-ten list, a catalog of campaign T-shirts, bumper stickers and chewing-gum cigars as well as a brief platform.

At the top of one page, a banner poking fun at the Republican takeover of Congress in 1994 proclaims, "This time, send a REAL revolution to Washington. Fidel for President '96."

Reith, a registered libertarian from Santa Cruz, Calif., said his web page is aimed at making people "wonder why we'll trade with the butchers in China, but we're unwilling to open the door to our neighbors in Cuba."

And he said he also wanted to make fun of Dole, Clinton and other politicians who try to portray themselves as Washington outsiders in an attempt to get votes.

But Reith said the humor is the most important part of the web site.

On the issue, the Fidel '96 campaign claims the cigar-loving Cuban president is not beholden to special interests. After all, he's "a lifelong foe of special interests (and) nationalized nearly every major industry."

Possible running mates

MIAMI — These are some of the potential running mates suggested for Fidel Castro in the spoof campaign for the U.S. presidency.

- Homer Simpson, father from TV cartoon "The Simpsons." Pro: Very much an outsider. Easily as qualified as some recent vice presidents.
- former President Ronald Reagan. Pro: Is anyone more "out of it" than Reagan? Con:

Now that we finally got Nancy out of the public's eye, do we want her back?

- Barney, the purple PBS children's character — Pro: Smarter than Dan Quayle; looser than Al Gore. Con: More likely to get assassinated than Fidel (probably by Fidel).

And on the Republican Contract for America: "Castro knows this one well; after all, America's had a contract out on him for more than thirty years."

That one line got the biggest laugh from Castro's spokesman in Washington.

"I think it's funny," said Cuban Interests Section spokesman Jose Ponce.

He did not know if Castro was aware of the web page, but said he didn't doubt his boss would get a big laugh out of it and have something witty to say in response.

But the Cuban American National Foundation in Miami saw more than just the humor.

"I thought it was humorous, but the more I looked at it ... I started to have problems," said the powerful exile group's Washington director

Arrests

● Mark Bradley Morrison 51, listed as homeless in Sanford, was arrested by the Sanford Police Department for disorderly intoxication in the alley behind 305 and 321 Palmetto Ave.

● Richard Earl Cash, 45, listed as homeless in Sanford, was arrested by the Sanford Police Department for retail theft in the 1500 block of French Avenue. Cash allegedly put a pack of round steaks into his pants and attempted to leave the store. The value of the steaks was $12.85.

● Miriam Natal, 35, of 290 Columbia Ave., Passaic, N.J., was arrested by the Sanford Police Department for battery and resisting arrest without violence at 2409 S. Grandview Ave. Police said Natal attacked a woman and then allegedly grabbed her daughter in an attempt to avoid arrest.

Judge blocks Imelda's plea

MANILA, Philippines — The judge who sentenced Imelda Marcos to 24 years in prison delayed her departure to the United States for eye treatment today, ordering an examination by a court-appointed physician first.

Marcos, who is free on bail pending appeal on a 1993 corruption conviction, must get court approval to leave the country.

"Time is of the essence," Mrs. Marcos said after the ruling by Justice Francis Garchitorena. "My eyes are deteriorating."

The widow of President Ferdinand Marcos suffers from glaucoma. Her private physician said this week that the condition is worsening. In addition, she has diabetes and hypertension, disorders that could aggravate the eye problem.

Besides her conviction, Mrs. Marcos still faces criminal and civil actions over alleged corruption during her husband's 20-year presidency.

The Marcoses fled the country following a popular revolt in 1986. Marcos died in Hawaii in 1989. Mrs. Marcos returned to the country in 1991.

Last August, the Supreme Court ruled that Garchitorena's anti-graft court has the right to decide whether she can be allowed to go abroad for medical treatment.

Last year, Mrs. Marcos, 65, won a seat in Congress representing her hometown in central Leyte province.

A majority of the members of the 203-member chamber approved a resolution urging the courts to allow her to go abroad.

If the court allows her to travel, it would be her first trip to the United States since her return to Manila in 1991.

Second nanny spills dirt

JERUSALEM — As the prime minister's wife defended herself against Israel's "Nannygate" scandal, a second ex-nanny burst into the headlines today with more dirt on the Netanyahu household.

In her first interview since Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu took office, Sarah Netanyahu denied allegations that she is obsessive and hysterical.

"I am fussy about cleanliness, but all the rest is nonsense," Mrs. Netanyahu told the Yediot Ahronot newspaper.

Tanya Shaw, who had taken care of the Netanyahu's two young sons for six months, entrusted the Israeli media last week with her claim that she was accused for burning the group.

Today, the Maariv newspaper led up its latest scoop — an interview with Heidi Ben-Yair, who quit after a week as the Netanyahu nanny in 1994, headlined, "I Was There Only One Week — But It Was A Nightmare."

Ben-Yair said Mrs. Netanyahu made her work from 5:30 in the morning until after midnight. "I barely had time to take a shower," she said.

Mrs. Netanyahu wouldn't let her cat while she was there, she said.

"Once she shouted at me for 20 minutes for eating a tomato. She said tomatoes were expensive and I should eat only one a day, and one egg every two days. I ended up sharing the children's pudding. I was so hungry."

Mrs. Netanyahu insisted that the clotheslines and clothespins be washed before the laundry was hung out to dry, said Ben-Yair, 23, a recent immigrant from England.

Ben-Yair said Yair Netanyahu, then 3, was not allowed out of his playpen. The nanny fired last week, Tanya Shaw, also described Mrs. Netanyahu as obsessed with cleanliness, saying she made everyone — including her husband — wash hands before touching the children and refused to let them play on the floor.

Lawyers: Diana studying divorce offer

LONDON — Princess Diana's lawyer said today she is studying a divorce offer from Prince Charles, but there was no indication when the couple will reach an agreement.

"Proper consideration will be given to the proposals that have been made, but I'm afraid I've got no further comment to make," attorney Anthony Julius told reporters who clustered outside his offices this morning.

Diana reportedly had proposed her terms some weeks ago. Her spokeswoman, Jane Atkinson, confirmed on Thursday that Charles had made his response.

A spokesman for the prince said, "We regard the divorce discussions as private and will not comment."

Newspaper reports today claimed that Charles had offered Diana a lump sum of anywhere from $15 million to $30 million, plus an allowance.

Once they agree on terms, a divorce could become final in less than two months and neither would have to appear in court.

Charles and Diana married in 1981 and separated in 1992.

A Florentine ode to Giorgio Armani

FLORENCE, Italy — A boy sits sifting sand through his fingers while a giant mechanical turtle crawls across the stage.

In the foreground, a woman dressed in black watches from a deck chair as a jogger in bathing trunks and men and women in summer attire move along the imaginary beach.

The scene, which evokes Giorgio Armani's childhood on the Ligurian coast in the 1940s, is the opening live tableau of the "G.A. Story," a 1 1/2-hour saga on the life and works of Italy's fashion champion.

The show presented Wednesday evening in Florence was commissioned by Pitti Immagine Uomo to honor 25 years of the semiannual men's wear trade fair.

Put together by American theater director Robert Wilson, the show walks the viewer through a spectacle of still life, music, dance and fashion in a former railroad station.

"I wanted to do something different, to break away from my usual patterns — and I think it worked," said Armani, who usually puts on a conventional men's wear show in Milan.

The spectacle was divided into nine parts, including the Gallery of the Gods — eight deeply tanned, perfectly shaped silver-haired models in Armani underwear and swimsuits — and office scenes dubbed "every day dancing" where men and women in Armani garb work at computers or gather around the conference table.

Families, killers play waiting game in death penalty system

STARKE, Fla. — Bennie Demps murdered two people and wounded a third after stealing a safe from a home in 1971. Seven years later, while behind bars, he was accused of fatally stabbing a prison snitch.

Demps, 46, has been sentenced to death twice for his crimes, has lived on Florida's death row for 20 years, and has dodged three dates with the electric chair, spared each time by last-minute appeals.

The latest twist in Demps' case should add more time to his life expectancy. Budget-cutters in Washington last year cut funding for a federal program that coordinated legal representation for hundreds of death row inmates nationwide and 40 in Florida.

That left Demps without a lawyer.

"Who is going to represent me?" said Demps, who claims he was framed for the snitch's murder. "They have yet to realize what a clog they have thrown in the system."

Most death row inmates are represented by a state office of lawyers, which was already struggling with a backlog of cases when the federal offices closed.

The state agency, known as the office of Capital Collateral Representative, can't represent Demps because of a conflict of interest. Demps is asking the state Supreme Court to get him a lawyer.

CCR had about 140 cases last summer when it said its two dozen lawyers couldn't handle any more. The state Supreme Court, however, refused to give CCR more time to handle the growing backlog of cases.

Florida's high court asked former Attorney General Robert Shevin, a Miami attorney who played a key role in drafting Florida's death row law in 1972, to look into the situation.

Shevin concluded that CCR needed six more attorneys to handle its backlog. Lawmakers this year approved hiring eight more attorneys.

"We have created a system that is slow and cumbersome and the state likes it that way," says Larry Spalding, the former head of CCR.

At one time, the families of the five college students murdered by Danny Rolling in Gainesville in 1990 hoped he would be executed within five years of his sentencing in 1994.

After all, Rolling had pleaded guilty, admitted he had killed the students during a killing spree that shocked the university city.

But he is unlikely to be executed anytime soon.

On average, it has taken about 10 years to execute the 36 men who go to the electric chair since 1976, an Associated Press analysis found. Michael Durocher, who was executed in 1993, spent only 2.4 years on death row, but he asked that all his appeals be dropped.

An execution is scheduled after the governor signs a death warrant.

Since 1976, Florida governors have signed 317 death warrants and it usually takes multiple warrants before an inmate exhausts all appeals.

Willie Darden, known as the "sage of death row," holds the record. He was executed in 1988 on his seventh death warrant for the September 1973 slaying of Lakeland furniture store owner James Carl Turman in a robbery that netted $15.

Only one of the 36 men put to death in Florida since 1976 has been executed on a first warrant, and each of those inmates spent an average of 9.71 years on death row.

In contrast with previous governors, who often signed a warrant to get a case moving, Gov. Lawton Chiles allows inmates to make one trip through the state and federal appeals process before signing a warrant.

No one knows how long it will take Rolling's appeal to work its way through the courts, but his case has gotten off to a slow start and illustrates what's wrong with the system.

Rolling's first appeal was supposed to have been filed in the state Supreme Court in January 1995, nine months after he was sentenced. It wasn't filed until this January, a year late.

Florida's Supreme Court gave the public defender assigned to the case three deadline extensions because of a backlog of capital cases in her office, which handles death appeals for 32

North Florida counties.

At best, the families of Rolling's victims can expect to see the appeal settled by the state Supreme Court in a year.

If Florida's high court upholds the death sentences and convictions, Rolling's attorneys can ask the U.S. Supreme Court to overturn the Florida Supreme Court.

The nation's high court doesn't often agree to hear such cases. But filing the petition and waiting for the answer takes months.

If the U.S. Supreme Court refuses to consider the case or affirms the state Supreme Court, Rolling's first appeal, guaranteed by state law in every death case, is finished.

Then Rolling, now 42, has a year to file a second appeal on constitutional grounds. That appeal is filed at the state trial level.

After that he can turn to the federal courts.

A win at any level, even a minor victory, can cause further delays.

No one knows how long all these appeals will take.

In an effort to keep cases moving, the Florida Supreme Court said this spring that the chief circuit judges in each circuit must report every three months on the status of appeals.

The U.S. Supreme Court last week affirmed part of a new federal law that gives inmates one federal appeal unless they receive approval from a three-judge panel. The justices said if the panel turns down the request, an inmate can file an appeal directly with the Supreme Court — a measure which seldom succeeds.

Once a warrant is signed, lawyers for Rolling will file an appeal in state trial court and the cycle begins again.

Vicki Stone Ettinger understands what the families of Rolling's victims are going through.

She endured repeated delays waiting for the state to execute the two men who beat and stabbed her brother in 1976, sealed his body in a box and dumped it in the St. Johns River.

For killing Jacksonville businessman James N. Stone, Timothy Palmer, 37, died in the electric chair eight years later, on Nov. 6, 1984, and Ronald Straight, 42, was executed 10 years later, on May 20, 1996.

The waiting "was a terrible time," Mrs. Ettinger says. "The reason it was bad is because you were always hanging. You don't know what is going to happen. Every time, there was a date set and then there was a stay."

Bennie Demps has avoided the executioner for 24 years.

He was first convicted and sentenced to death for killing two people and wounding a third on July 2, 1971. The three victims were inspecting some land for sale when they happened upon Demps in a citrus grove where he had fled with a stolen safe. R.N. Brinkworth and Celia Publick were fatally shot. Mrs. Publick's husband, Nicholas, was wounded.

Demps was on death row in 1972 when the death penalty was ruled unconstitutional. Freed of their death sentences, Demps and 96 other death row inmates were returned to the general prison population.

After Florida's rewritten death penalty law was declared constitutional in 1976, he was convicted of fatally stabbing prison snitch Alfred Sturgis as Sturgis lay in his cell bunk on Sept. 6, 1978.

Sturgis told a prison guard before he died that Demps had stabbed him, but Demps contends he was framed. He was returned to death row.

Since his second death sentence, Demps has survived three death warrants — in 1982, 1987 and 1990 — by winning last-minute appeals.

Demps said there has been little action on his case since his last stay — granted in 1990, six years ago.

And since he doesn't have an attorney thanks to Congress — or the prospect of getting one soon — Demps likely will be living on death row for several more years.

He realizes he may not be able to delay his date with death indefinitely.

"Death watch, whether it's your first time or your second time, it is always painful," he said. "The worst thing I experienced on death watch was having to pick up the phone to call my mother to make funeral arrangements."

Wrongly-convicted Richardson recalls horror of death row

JACKSONVILLE — Seven white caskets buried in Arcadia's Oak Ridge Cemetery haunt James Richardson.

Richardson spent 21 years in prison, including four on death row, after he was convicted of murdering his seven children in 1967 by poisoning their food with insecticide.

But Richardson didn't do it. Freed from prison in 1989, Richardson today leads a pauper's existence in Jacksonville.

"I'm a poor man," he said, declining a reporter's request to visit his home. "The place I am living is so poor it is not decent enough for anyone to come to see me."

He is unable to work because of a heart condition and promises of a movie deal have not come through. A $35 million lawsuit against former State Attorney Frank Schaub was dismissed last week after

Accepting responsibility

The two presidential candidates are arguing over school truancy. In a speech Wednesday, President Bill Clinton said the nation must do more to keep its children from cutting schools. He offered $10 million in grants for innovative programs to make public schools safer and keep kids there.

On the other side of the coin, presidential challenger Bob Dole's campaign group said the president is only talking about truancy because his administration has failed to keep drugs out of schools.

For the time being, we will have to take even another approach. The president may have offered $10 million in grants, but from where will this money come? Has Congress given its approval or is this just a proposal presented in the guise of a promise?

There can be no doubt, truancy in our schools is a serious problem. Just drive around neighborhoods in Sanford or any other city when school is in session. You'll see youngster after youngster biking around or standing at street corners. Most of them may be angels, many are probably skipping school and are up to no good.

Remember the old days? One of the people most feared by youngsters was the truant officer. If you skipped school, you could depend on the truant officer to come knocking on your front door, and you knew you were in for some serious trouble.

But now, truant officers are restricted by so many laws they can no longer perform the tasks of yesteryear. And there should be little doubt, the youngsters are fully aware of this and are taking advantage.

We are pleased to see the Department of Juvenile Justice in Tallahassee has awarded $4.9 million dollars in grants to various authorities around the state. In Seminole County, part of the money, $34,194 is to go to the Middle School Truancy Program in our public school system.

The only problem we see in this grant is that it costs so much to operate a school truancy program, most of the money will probably go toward administration and operation costs. After all, with the number of children we have, even at the middle school level, that's not much money.

Truant officers have difficulty in doing their job. When police are called to locate youngsters who are supposed to be in school, they end up being restricted by laws regarding what they can and cannot do, and they seldom are successful.

That leaves only one area of responsibility: the parents. Yes, we know. You have a job and can't always know whether your child is at school or not. But unless you find ways and means of keeping an eye out, you are going to end up with serious problems.

Rather than being called to the principal's office because of a truancy, continued disregard for this problem will possibly have children called to such places as the juvenile detention facility, sheriff's office or police station.

Truant officers will no doubt continue to try helping eliminate this problem, but you are the parent, and as such, must,MUST accept responsibility for your child's future.

The Clinton White House mess

In a humorous speech at a Gridiron Dinner about 20 years ago, John Connally made a reference to "the White House mess," which is the Navy term for the staff restaurant. Then he added, with a twinkle, "You know where that is - it's just down the hall from where they eat."

Even Mr. Clinton's most enthusiastic supporter would have to concede that the White House mess has gotten a good deal larger recently - and I'm not talking about the staff restaurant.

Actually, Mr. Clinton brought a lot of baggage with him from Little Rock when he won the Democratic nomination in 1992. First there was the story of his long affair with Gennifer Flowers. The media did him the favor of minimizing it, and when he was elected in November they interpreted his victory as evidence that they were right to do so: The American people were clearly past caring about such moral lapses.

Whitewater, too, had its roots in shenanigans back in Arkansas 10 or 12 years ago. But what appeared to be a subsequent cover-up reached deep into the Clinton White House, and resulted in Rose Law Firm files, after two years on the lam, mysteriously turning up on a White House table with Hillary Clinton's fingerprints all over them.

Finally, still in the pre-1992 era, there was the Paula Jones affair, though her charges of sexual harassment (i.e., indecent exposure) against Mr. Clinton long postdated Gennifer Flowers. She had no better luck with the media, though, and her lawsuit is now safely postponed until after Election Day.

That brings us, however, to January 1993, and from now on the alleged misconduct takes place in the White House. First there is what has become known as Travelgate - the abrupt firing of all seven members of the White House Travel Office, to make room for Clinton cronies, and the cynical attempt to ruin its head, Billy Dale, with charges of corruption that it took a jury just two hours to dismiss.

More recently we learned of Filegate - the incredible demand by White House political operatives for several hundred FBI files on former Republican White House staffers. This has been characterized by Mr. Clinton himself as merely a "bureaucratic snafu." But the man who apparently demanded the files is now taking the Fifth Amendment before congressional committees, which is hardly standard procedure for a mere snafu-committing bureaucrat.

Then there is the serio-comic episode of the self-described "spirit-lifter" Jean Houston, who literally moved into the White House residential quarters and persuaded the first lady to engage in conversations with Eleanor Roosevelt and Mahatma Gandhi.

Lastly (as we go to press) there is the new book by Gary Aldrich, a 25-year veteran of the FBI, reporting what he saw and was told during three years on duty in the Clinton White House. It is rather amusing to see journalists complaining that Aldrich doesn't name his sources for such stories as that concerning Mr. Clinton's week-long excursions to the Marriott Hotel, since the Washington press corps practically pioneered unsourced stories.

MORTON KONDRACK

GOP late ad blitz against Clinton

President Clinton has enjoyed a huge TV advertising advantage over Republican Bob Dole for the past year, but the GOP plans to make up for it with an air avalanche this fall.

Republican National Committee officials claim that the Democratic National Committee, the Clinton/Gore campaign, and their labor union allies will have spent up to $110 million on TV ads prior to the August conventions, compared with just $20 million by the RNC.

But when the conventions are over, the RNC plans to unload vast sums to support Dole and keep Congress Republican, closing the spending margin from 5-to-1 to as close to even as possible.

Both parties naturally are closely guarding their spending plans - and Republicans may well be exaggerating the Democratic advantage - but it's clear that the Clinton campaign set out on a spend-early strategy to build up the president's standing and pound down Republicans, while the GOP is banking on a strong finish.

Most polls indicate that the Democratic game plan is working so far, with President Clinton enjoying a 15-point lead over Dole and high-50s approval ratings, partly as a result of thousands of TV ads run since last August extolling his virtues and slamming Republicans.

National Media Inc., a GOP firm with the capacity to track political advertising buys by monitoring satellite feeds, claims that between March 1 and June 26, the DNC ran 21,204 spots around the country, and the Clinton/Gore campaign, 1,845. Of the total, all but 1,008 contained criticism of Dole, House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., or a specific Republican member of Congress.

The congressional ads seem to be working, too, with the latest CNN/USA Today/Gallup poll giving Democrats a 7-point advantage in voters' generic congressional preference, although GOP officials say that various private polls indicate margins of 2 to 4 points.

RNC Chairman Haley Barbour acknowledges that the GOP is bent on a late-finish strategy and defends it as both necessary and smart.

"There was no way that we could match the bottomless well of union money," he said in an interview, "and it would have been a mistake for us to dribble out our resources for a low level of market penetration early, as opposed to waiting for a chance to penetrate the market heavily over a short period at the end."

"Whatever advantage the Democrats got from running in the clear for seven or eight months will be dissipated by Election Day," he said, predicting that the RNC would outstrip its 1992 fund-raising record of $68 million "by a lot."

According to Bob Woodward's new book, "The Choice," the Democrats' spend-early 1992 strategy was advocated by presidential adviser Dick Morris over the objections of Clinton fund-raisers who didn't want to see their war chest diminished.

Woodward reports that the White House directed the DNC to spend $15 million on pro-Clinton "issue ads" in 1992 and that the Clinton/Gore campaign spent another $3 million.

Barbour claims that unions and pro-Democratic senior citizen groups spent an additional $20 million during 1992 clobbering congressional Republicans for planned "cuts" in Medicare and education.

So far, in 1993, according to Barbour, the unions have spent $20 million, while the DNC has spent $30 million, and Clinton/Gore, $2 million, for a total up to now of $60 million.

According to National Media Inc., the DNC has stepped up its spending from $1 million per week to $2 million per week since President Clinton's Whitewater and Filegate troubles ballooned in early June.

The Clinton/Gore campaign still has $20 million in the bank that it didn't have to spend fighting a Democratic nomination race, and GOP officials expect much of it to be spent during July, when Americans are watching the Olympics on TV. That would bring the Democratic-union pre-convention total to $110 million if GOP estimates are correct.

DNC national Chairman Don Fowler won't discuss his party's spending record beyond saying that the DNC has raised $68 million so far this year. He says he does not know what the GOP and its corporate allies may be spending.

According to the Federal Election Commission, Republican presidential candidates spent $171 million during the primary season - including $40 million by Dole - but the money went for attacks on fellow Republicans, not Clinton. As of May 1, Dole had just $1.9 million in the bank.

The RNC has been trying to pick up the slack, spending $10 million since May to introduce Dole to voters and extol his character. It says it will spend another $10 million prior to the GOP convention.

Most polls indicate that the Democratic game plan is working so far.

Olympic sport of gender bias

In many ways, the summer Olympics in Atlanta will be a watershed event for women - a record 3,800 women will compete, a third more than did so at the 1992 Olympics in Barcelona.

But this will be cold comfort for Hassiba Boulmerka, the Algerian native who did not dare return to her homeland after she won the 1991 World Championship in the 1,500-meter dash. Muslim clerics in Algeria condemned Boulmerka for "running with naked legs in front of thousands of men" and put out a "hok" or denunciation, against her. Boulmerka moved to France and went on to win the gold medal at the Barcelona Olympics.

"For Muslim women I symbolized freedom," Boulmerka told the London Observer, "but, believe me, many think it's not appropriate for women to take part in sport dressed in clothes that show our bodies.... For the conservatives and religious leaders, we become the first targets in the fight to halt the progress and a symbol of all that is bad in Algeria at the moment."

As in many Islamic nations, Algerian women are forbidden from participating in almost all forms of international sports competition, because Muslim law forbids women to appear in public without covering their bodies in heavy robes and veils, a form of dress called "hijab." The laws restricting women's dress and movement in countries like Iran, Afghanistan and Saudi Arabia are so strict that a woman can be arrested for letting a lock of hair slip out from under her headscarf, or for leaving the house without a male "chaperone." Just last month a crackdown on women's sports in Iran led to the beating of several women, who were charged with violating the state's indecency laws. Their crime: riding bicycles in the park.

There have been a few exceptions. In the past, Muslim women have participated internationally in sports in which the heavy Islamic garb is not an undue hindrance, such as horse-jumping, shooting, skiing and table tennis. And this year an Iranian marksman will be the sole woman on her country's team. But for the most part, athletic competition for Muslim women has been limited to all-female events, such as the first Islamic Women's Games, which took place in Iran in 1992. At these games, serious women athletes were permitted to compete in shorts and tanks because the arena had been cleared of all men and cameras.

After the 1992 Olympics, where more than 30 all-male national teams competed, a European-based group called Atlanta Plus wrote a letter to the International Olympic Committee urging it to bar any nation that does not allow women on its Olympic team.

After all, the group argued, the Olympic charter states that "All forms of discrimination with respect to a country or a person whether for reasons of race, religion, politics, sex or any other are incompatible with the Olympic movement." And there already was a precedent: From 1964 to 1988 the Olympic Committee forbade South Africa from competing because blacks were not allowed on that country's team.

But the IOC blithely dismissed Atlanta Plus's letter. "The problem of women in sports is a fundamental issue, but what is in the letter does not concern us. It is an attack against religion for political purposes," said IOC general director Francois Carrard.

In other words, the IOC is taking the well-worn stance: Racial discrimination is an international outrage; gender discrimination is a religious value.

For the conservatives and religious leaders, we become the first targets in the fight to halt the progress.

history. They feel that kids today are not being schooled in the classroom or at home about what a privilege it is to be free. They say that if young people had ever seen what they have, that they would have a different perspective on how special it is.

They suggest sending kids on tours of China, Cuba and the Balkans "where they live under the gun" to get an appreciation for what they have here.

They also remind younger generations that even here in American, freedom is constantly being won or lost. For example, James Baskerville of AMVETS post 17 says he can remember vividly having to use a separate bathroom in school because he was black.

However, they don't pass all the blame. They also fault themselves and fellow veterans for losing touch with the younger generations and passing on their valuable experiences.

"We've become a bunch of old men that are socially motivated," Blower says. "We only have a small fraction of members that are active participants. Most come in and have a drink or dinner. They don't volunteer for anything. They just pay their dues. But they don't really belong."

Blower and the others suggest more veterans getting out into the community and sharing their knowledge by visiting classrooms or clubs. But they point out it cannot be forced on children, that they need to be instilled with the desire for their knowledge.

"They have to want to know about our country's history," says Don Abberton, a member of the Paralyzed Veterans of America of Central Florida.

And with this desire, they say, will come renewed respect for America. Things like voting for one's elected officials and putting up a flag for Independence Day will become second nature and not an afterthought.

"It means a lot to say freedom," Baskerville says. "It's not just fighting for your country. It's the freedom you have to do the things you like to do as well."

an appeals court ruled the prosecutor had immunity. Since Richardson spent most of his productive years behind bars, he is ineligible for Social Security.

Richardson, 60, lives primarily on the generosity of others, although Medicaid pays much of his medical bills. After a heart attack in August, a cardiologist in Wichita, Kan., agreed to perform a coronary balloon angioplasty at no charge.

Richardson, however, doesn't seem bitter about his circumstances. He talks freely about life behind bars, but breaks up when conversation turns to his children.

"Those children were more than the world could ever give me," he said. "I have nightmares for them and I hope that people will never have to go through these aches and pains that I went through."

During Richardson's trial, Schaub called him "a pathological, hypocritical, mad-dog killer." He claimed Richardson killed his children to collect on insurance policies he'd taken out but never paid the premium on.

Richardson, who had no criminal record, took the stand and denied killing his seven children. The jury didn't believe him.

Attorney Mark Lane believed the farmworker was wrongly convicted and Richardson was exonerated in 1989 by Gov. Bob Martinez after an investigation by State Attorney Janet Reno, then a Dade County prosecutor.

Lane secured evidence of a confession by a babysitter who was with the children when they died.

Richardson, not surprisingly, is opposed to capital punishment.

"I don't think God intended that man would take electricity and kill another person. It is too harsh," he said. "You've got so many innocent people there mixed among the guilty ones."

Richardson said he can forgive the people and the system that sent him to death row, "but I won't ever forget it."

"I could taste the scent of death on my tongue in that place," he said. "It was like you were living in another world in darkness. The pain started aching you up and down your spine. It was hard. I don't see how a man can survive."

Supreme Court took no clear course right or left this term

By LAURIE ASSOS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court's just-completed term continued a conservative trend on voting rights and law-and-order issues but also expanded the rights of women and homosexuals.

Shifting coalitions of justices provided outcomes that sometimes outraged liberals but other times infuriated conservatives.

Following are snapshots of how the court's nine justices fit into the overall trend:

WILLIAM H. REHNQUIST — In 10 years as chief justice, he has led the court down a conservative path on such issues as religion, crime and abortion. This term, he wrote for the court when it unanimously upheld part of a new law aimed at limiting federal court appeals by state inmates, including those on death row.

He also wrote the North Carolina part of twin, 5-4 decisions that invalidated voting districts intended to help elect minorities to Congress in North Carolina and in Texas. He dissented from the court's 6-3 ruling that suggested discrimination against homosexuals might be unconstitutional. But Rehnquist joined the 7-1 majority that said all-male Virginia Military Institute must admit women or give up state funding.

JOHN PAUL STEVENS — Often idiosyncratic, he is considered the most liberal member of this conservative court, mainly because there now are no classic liberals such as retired Justice William J. Brennan. Stevens cast 19 dissenting votes among the 75 cases decided this term — more than any other justice.

He wrote for the court in a Colorado gay-rights ruling that said states cannot prohibit laws protecting homosexuals from discrimination. He also wrote the majority opinion that voided as "grossly excessive" a $2 million damage award in a lawsuit over a touch-up paint job on a new car.

SANDRA DAY O'CONNOR — A cautious, conservative judge, she exercises enormous power as a pivotal swing vote. In the Texas and North Carolina voting-rights decisions, "O'Connor just continued to call the tune," said Jesse Choper, a University of California at Berkeley law professor. "The other eight have staked out their positions and O'Connor continues trying to chart some middle course."

ANTONIN SCALIA — Finding himself dissenting in some of the term's most important cases, Scalia refused to go down quietly. Disagreeing with the court's gay-rights ruling, he said: "This court has no business imposing upon all Americans the resolution favored by the elite class from which the members of this institution are selected, pronouncing that 'animosity' toward homosexuality is unconstitutional."

ANTHONY M. KENNEDY — Along with O'Connor, he occupies the very center of the court. No justice had fewer dissenting votes in the just-completed term. The longtime law professor has a no-nonsense courtroom attitude.

DAVID H. SOUTER — Known as the "stealth" nominee in 1990 because little was known about his judicial philosophy, he often joins the court's liberal wing on major cases.

Souter is "very sensitive to individual liberties," George Washington University law professor Mary Cheh said. "He may be the only developing counterweight to the right wing."

CLARENCE THOMAS — Along with Scalia, one of the court's most conservative justices, Thomas voted to throw out voting districts aimed at electing more blacks to Congress, in an Arizona ruling that limited inmates' right to prison law libraries. Thomas was the only justice who argued that inmates should not be entitled to government-funded law libraries.

RUTH BADER GINSBURG — Something of a judicial split personality, she generally voted with the court's more liberal members, but most often parted company in criminal cases.

Ginsburg cast the decisive votes when the court, 5-4, allowed states to bar criminal defendants from using drunkenness as evidence they didn't act deliberately and let the government confiscate property that was used in a crime even if owned by innocent people.

Exactly 25 years after the onetime advocate for women's rights won her first landmark victory before the high court, Ginsburg wrote for the court as it enhanced protections for sexual equality and ordered state-run Virginia Military Institute to end its male-only policy or go private.

STEPHEN G. BREYER — Having served only two terms on the court, he may still be finding his place, although he generally votes as a moderate liberal. "He's clearly one of the smarter people on the court," Howard said. "In Breyer you see the law professor at work."

WASHINGTON — The nation's unemployment rate fell to 5.3 percent, the lowest level in six years, as the economy continued to expand at a surprisingly robust rate last month. Financial markets went into an immediate swoon, fearing the rapid growth makes rising interest rates inevitable.

The Labor Department said today that businesses added 239,000 workers to their payrolls in June, a sharply higher figure than had been expected. The unemployment rate had been 5.6 percent in May and many analysts had been expecting it to remain basically unchanged.

The White House was certain to hail today's strong report as evidence of the good news of the economy. But financial markets reacted adversely.

Immediately after the labor report was released, bond prices tumbled, pushing the yield on Treasury's benchmark 30-year bond up to 7.10 percent. Investors grew convinced that the Federal Reserve will now be forced to start increasing interest rates to fight inflation. They noted that the unemployment report showed the biggest gain in hourly earnings on record.

"The basic message here is that the economy is running well above the speed limit for this stage of an expansion," said Robert Dederick, an economic consultant at Northern Trust Co. in Chicago. "We are beginning to see some signs of inflationary pressures emerging as a result."

Fed policymakers bypassed the chance to raise rates at this week's meeting. But many analysts said today's unemployment report made a rate hike at their next meeting on Aug. 20 a virtual certainty.

The 5.3 percent jobless rate marked the lowest unemployment level for this recovery, which is now in its sixth year. Economists believe that the Fed will be forced to worry now that tight labor markets will trigger rising wage demands and higher prices.

The Clinton administration, which is battling widespread economic anxiety despite what is now the third-longest peacetime expansion in history, has argued that rising productivity is providing room for workers to enjoy higher wages without risking worsening inflation.

But analysts noted that average hourly earnings, which are closely watched for signs of inflationary pressures, jumped 9 cents in June to $11.62 an hour. It was the biggest one-month increase in this inflation barometer on record.

The unemployment rate of 5.3 percent was the lowest since a 5.2 percent level in June 1990, the peak month for the last expansion.

The increase of 239,000 payroll jobs was the fifth straight strong monthly gain. It followed an even bigger increase of 365,000 in May, a number which had also jolted financial markets.

Just four months ago, analysts were still worried about a recession and calling on the Fed to cut interest rates again following a prolonged period of weakness in 1989 that saw overall economic growth slow to a barely discernible 0.5 percent in the fourth quarter.

But economists believe all the recent strong reports indicate that the overall economy, as measured by the gross domestic product, was racing ahead at a rate probably above 4 percent in the just completed April-June quarter.

Rare form of AIDS virus turns up

LOS ANGELES — A Los Angeles County woman is the first person in the United States to carry a rare form of HIV, and health officials say the discovery may change how AIDS testing is done, a newspaper reported today.

The woman is infected with a strain of HIV known as Group O, although she tested negative for the virus that causes AIDS, the Los Angeles Times reported. Both conventional blood tests and DNA analysis were performed.

Current HIV screening tests can detect the unusual strain in just four of five cases, scientists say.

However, officials at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and the Food and Drug Administration, which licenses HIV tests, said Group O poses little threat to the nation's blood supply. Reconfiguring blood tests to screen for Group O will take about a year, the officials told the newspaper.

"This is really prevention," said Jay Epstein, director of the FDA's blood research program. "It's not that we're patching up a problem; it's the other way around. We had an early warning and we're reacting to it appropriately."

The unidentified woman in her early 20s immigrated to the United States in 1994 from a nation in West Africa, where the unusual HIV strain is found more frequently than in other locations. The woman apparently was infected in West Africa.

Epstein said there is no evidence that Group O has spread in the United States, and the woman has had one sexual partner since arriving in the country. Local health officials are trying to find him so he can be tested.

CDC epidemiologists discovered the woman recently through a records search begun two years ago after Group O showed up in Europe. The CDC reported the finding Thursday and planned a presentation at the 11th International AIDS Conference under way in Vancouver, Canada, the Times said.

"This is really a sentinel event," said Dr. John Ward, who heads the CDC's effort to track HIV.

Group O was first identified in West Africa in 1989 by researchers charting the genetic makeup of HIV. The virus has genetic differences from the common Group M strains responsible for the AIDS pandemic.

Abortion issue clouds Dole's Fourth

WHEATON, Ill. — Sunny skies and friendly crowds couldn't keep the nettlesome abortion issue from clouding Bob Dole's Fourth of July celebration.

As the Republican presidential candidate prepared to address a rally of supporters, the man he handpicked to rewrite the GOP platform signaled disagreement with Dole over proposed changes to the abortion plank.

Illinois Rep. Henry Hyde, the staunchly anti-abortion Republican chairman of the platform committee at the upcoming Republican National Convention, told reporters Thursday he wanted a "generic statement" in the platform welcoming Republicans who disagree with various party positions — rather than the "statement of tolerance" that Dole wants to append to the abortion plank.

"We haven't worked out every word," Hyde said of Dole, the presumptive GOP nominee. "The senator and I are agreed on principle and there really is no problem. ... It will be resolved to everybody's satisfaction."

New twist to Betsy Ross tale

WASHINGTON — There's a new twist to the old tale of Betsy Ross and the origins of the first American flag.

The story her family passed down and that most American children learn in school goes something like this: In June of 1776, Gen. George Washington and two other members of the Continental Congress came to Ross' Philadelphia home with a design for a flag for the new nation. They asked her to make it. Ross, the story goes, changed the stars in the design from a six pointed star to the five pointed star on modern flags.

Now, some historians and even the Betsy Ross House in Philadelphia are changing their tune and giving credit for the design of the stars and stripes to another member of the Continental Congress from New Jersey, Francis Hopkinson.

"There is an abundance of circumstantial evidence that Francis Hopkinson did it," Washington author and historian Earl Williams said. "We cannot say that anyone else designed the flag."

Teen escapes death in elevator fall

JERSEY CITY, N.J. — Fifteen-year-old Abdul Bash wasn't thinking about safety when he climbed into a dark 12-story shaft of moving metal and cables to take his first joyride atop an elevator with three pals.

A short time later, he got off but was struck by the elevator before he could climb from a ledge to get out of the shaft. He was flipped, dragged for two floors and left dangling by his leg upside down for an hour, stuck in the elevator's track and praying he wouldn't fall the 70 feet to his death.

"Elevators are nothing to mess with," Bash said from his hospital bed Thursday, a week after the accident in a Jersey City public housing building. "They really could kill you. I'll never do it again. I just thank God I'm alive and I've got a second chance to live."

They call it "elevator surfing" on the East Coast and "riding the freight" in the Midwest. Authorities nationwide are trying everything from elevator modifications to awareness campaigns to stop it.

Drinking water alert called off

WASHINGTON — City health officials in the nation's capital called off an order to boil drinking water late Thursday, saying the water was safe to drink despite earlier concerns about bacteria contamination.

District of Columbia Public Health Commissioner Harvey Sloane told reporters that revised information about water tests indicated that the water has been safe to drink all along.

"With that information, I'm convinced that the water is safe to drink," said Sloane.

Earlier, Sloane had urged the elderly and anyone with immune system problems to boil their drinking water because some samples taken last month had been found to have bacteria levels that exceeded federal guidelines. He said the latest information showed that bacteria levels have been within the safe range since June 25.

Earlier, Mayor Marion Barry told residents no boiling was needed. "Our water is extremely safe. (It's) among the best in the country," declared the mayor.

One killed in fireworks display

REYNOLDSBURG, Ohio — A stack of fireworks ignited at a fireworks show Thursday night, killing one spectator and injuring two others, a Columbus television station reported.

WBNS-TV said the accident occurred at a fireworks display at Huber Park in suburban Reynoldsburg.

One of the injured was taken to Ohio State University Medical Center in Columbus.

Ken Phillips, spokesman for the hospital, said a 52-year-old male was in surgery late Thursday. He said the man had severe injuries to his abdomen and his right hand.

It was not immediately clear where the second injured person was taken.

The identities of the victims have not been released.

Suspect arraigned in deadly fireworks blaze

By MARK WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

SCOTTOWN, Ohio — People who knew Todd Hall said he had mental problems and was the perfect person to be talked into a prank, like the one that killed eight people in a fireworks store.

Hall, 24, would ride his bicycle onto people's lawns and walk into homes uninvited, asking for money or gasoline, neighbors in this southern Ohio town said. A prosecutor said Hall had suffered a head injury when he was younger.

Hall was to be arraigned today on eight counts of involuntary manslaughter. If convicted he could get up to 25 years in prison on each count.

A fireworks expert, meanwhile, said Wednesday's blaze could lead to changes in federal standards that regulate how people buy fireworks.

Hall is accused of starting the blaze by lighting a box of firecrackers while 40 people shopped for the Fourth of July inside Ohio River Fireworks, a cinderblock building about the size of a double-wide trailer.

The fire killed eight people, including two children, and injured 12 as firecrackers and bottle rockets exploded in every direction. The dead were found packed on top of each other just a few feet from the front door.

"In 15 seconds, it was all over," Freddie Burcham, assistant fire chief in Windsor Township, said Thursday. "It was awful."

Hall, of Proctorville, was egged on by two friends, Lawrence County sheriff's officials said. No one else has been charged.

Prosecutor J.B. Collier Jr. said Hall suffered a head injury a number of years ago that may have contributed to his odd behavior.

"I understand he has some problems," Collier said. He would not elaborate, but said Hall would have a psychological evaluation.

Neighbors said Hall seemed to have the mental capacity of someone about 12.

A friend of the family who answered the door Thursday night at the home Hall shares with his father said relatives would not comment.

Tom Nibert, who lives up the street in the upper-middle class subdivision, said Hall's behavior had become more troublesome in the past few months — he would ride his bike through other people's property and walk into the Nibert's home uninvited, asking for money or gasoline.

Nibert said he began locking his house, although he said he was more concerned about Hall hurting himself.

Investigators on Thursday searched the debris inside the store, which is only open on the three weeks before July 4 in this village of 50 people near the West Virginia line. Authorities were using dental records to confirm the victims' identities.

Three of the injured were still hospitalized today in critical condition. The others have been treated and released.

John Conkling, executive director of the American Pyrotechnics Association, said he would come to Ohio to investigate. He said the fire could lead to some changes in federal standards.

"Possibly more limitations on direct consumer access to fireworks," he said. "Perhaps having fireworks behind some type of a barrier and people would select what they want."

instead of picking them up themselves."

Ervin Napier, the owner of D & N Grocery, said residents have always been afraid of a fire since the fireworks store opened five years ago.

"You've got a building full of fireworks. You got a disaster waiting," he said. "I'm surprised it hasn't happened before now."

the newspaper said.

The U.S. Transportation Department said in 1994 that the pickups contained a safety defect.

DETROIT — General Motors Corp. agreed to an estimated $5 billion deal to settle lawsuits over GM pickups in an attempt to end the matter, not because the trucks are unsafe, the automaker said.

"We feel it is time to bring this issue to a close ... because it is the fair thing to do for our customers who have heard and read so much misleading, erroneous information about these trucks for several years," GM lawyer Lee Schutzman said Thursday.

Critics contend the side-mounted gas tanks on 1973-86 CK trucks and 1987-91 RV trucks are fire hazards in side-impact crashes. Most trucks' tanks are mounted in the middle of the frame to protect them.

A Louisiana judge on Wednesday tentatively approved the deal, which would settle several national class-action lawsuits and others in Louisiana and Texas. He scheduled a Nov. 6 hearing to grant final approval.

The settlement would require GM to give truck owners $1,000 certificates toward the purchase of any new GM car or truck, except Saturns. Lawyers estimate 5 million truck owners would benefit, hence the $5 billion figure.

But GM spokesman Ed Lechtzin disputed the number, saying it wasn't clear how many of the certificates would actually be used. GM does agree that at least 5 million of the pickups — or half the number built — are still on the road, he said.

The settlement, which would not affect lawsuits involving injuries that might have occurred as a result of the gas tanks, also requires GM to contribute $4.1 million to a national research project on vehicle fires. None of that research will involve the GM pickups covered by the new settlement, the Detroit Free Press reported today.

GM still faces more than 40 product liability lawsuits filed by owners of the older GM pickups who were injured in crashes, the newspaper said.

The U.S. Transportation Department said in 1994 that the pickups contained a safety defect.

AROUND THE STATE

Jacksonville 7, Orlando 6

JACKSONVILLE — Tarrick Brock hit a bases loaded, two-out single Thursday, scoring two runs and powering the Jacksonville Suns to a 7-6 victory over the Orlando Cubs.

The play came at the bottom of the eighth inning, with the Cubs leading 6-5.

Mutiny 4, Rapids 1

TAMPA — Roy Lassiter had two goals and an assist in the second half Thursday night to lead Tampa Bay to a 4-1 Major League Soccer victory over the Columbus Rapids, snapping the Mutiny's three-game losing streak.

Lassiter, who has 11 goals and three assists this season, set up Steve Ralston with a goal in the 56th minute that broke a 1-1 tie. He added goals in the 73rd and 78th minutes.

Tampa Bay leads the Eastern Conference with a 9-6 record, while Columbus dropped to 3-11.

ELSEWHERE

Phillies 8, Marlins 5

PHILADELPHIA — Ron Blazier pitched 2 2/3 shutout innings and Philadelphia starter Curt Schilling hit a three-run double as the Phillies beat the Florida Marlins 8-5.

Ricky Otero reached on an error and scored on Todd Zelle's single to give the Phillies a 1-0 lead.

Florida starter Pat Rapp tied the game in the second with an RBI single and Jeff Conine's solo homer in the third, his 15th, put Florida up 2-1.

In the third, Mike Lieberthal singled and J.R. Phillips and Kevin Stocker walked ahead of Schilling's hit into the right-center field gap.

Kurt Abbott's double scored Charles Johnson to cut the Phillies lead to 4-3 in the fourth, but RBI doubles by Lieberthal and Phillips in the bottom half gave Philadelphia a three-run lead.

Terry Pendleton's RBI double in the fifth cut the lead to 6-4, but the Phillies pulled away in the seventh on Gregg Jefferies' two-run single.

Florida added a run in the eighth when Abbott tripled and scored on an error.

Sampras' reign ends

WIMBLEDON, England — Pete Sampras' three-year reign as Wimbledon champion ended with a 7-5, 7-6 (7-3), 6-4 loss to Richard Krajicek of the Netherlands in a match that was suspended Wednesday at 1-1 in the third set.

Krajicek will next face Jason Stoltenberg, who beat No. 4 Goran Ivanisevic 6-3, 7-6 (7-3), 6-7 (7-3), 7-6 (7-3) in another match that had been suspended after three sets Wednesday.

No. 13 Todd Martin and MaliVai Washington overcame numerous rain delays to set up an all-American semifinal. Martin beat Britain's Tim Henman 7-6 (7-5), 7-6 (7-2), 6-4, while Washington overcame Alexander Radulescu 6-7 (7-5), 7-6 (7-1), 5-7, 7-6 (7-3), 6-4.

In women's play, fourth-seeded Arantxa Sanchez Vicario reached her second consecutive Wimbledon final by beating unseeded American Meredith McGrath 6-2, 6-1 in one hour.

The other semifinal was suspended by darkness after defending and six-time champion Steffi Graf dropped the second set 6-2 to Kimiko Date, seeded 12th. Graf won the first set 6-2.

Strawberry back with Yankees

NEW YORK — Darryl Strawberry, proving his power is more important than his past problems, got yet another chance.

George Steinbrenner gave himself a big 66th birthday present and shook up his New York Yankees, re-signing the 34-year old outfielder to a one-year contract with an option for 1997.

Strawberry, unwanted by general manager Bob Watson, immediately responded with a two-run homer in each of his first two at-bats with Columbus, the Yankees' Triple-A team.

Strawberry hit .276 with three homers and 13 RBIs in 87 at-bats for the Yankees last summer following a 60-day suspension for cocaine use. But he was let go Nov. 30.

After no major-league club showed interest, Strawberry signed with the St. Paul Saints of the independent Northern League. He hit .435 with 39 RBIs and 18 homers in 28 games.

Wednesday is Wells' Champs use upset, comeback to claim title

By DEAN SMITH
 Herald Sports Editor

SANFORD — Cactus Bob's withstood a furious comeback effort to end Fitzgerald's four-game winning streak and Wells Contracting took care of its own business to clinch the championship of the Sanford Recreation Department Men's Spring Wednesday Night Slowpitch Softball League at Chase Park.

Cactus Bob's, which got its first win since the sponsor name change from Crazy Wings, took a 4-2 lead in the bottom of the first inning and maintained a two-run advantage until it scored four runs in the bottom of the sixth inning.

Fitzgerald's tried to rally, scoring five runs in the top of the seventh inning and having the tying and go-ahead runs on third and first base with two out, but winning pitcher Steve Woodley snagged a comebacker and tossed to first to end the 9-8 victory.

In the second game, Hopkins Meats scored

Fitzgerald's	201	000	0	—	8	14
Cactus Bob's	001	000	0	—	9	12
Hopkins Meats	100	001	0	—	10	19

Wells Contracting	200	100	1	—	13	19
Hopkins Meats	200	001	0	—	9	11

eight runs in the top of the fifth inning to erase a 9-6 deficit and went on to an 18-12 victory over Monroe Harbour Marina.

Hopkins Meats then looked like it might keep its title hopes alive when it scored three runs in the bottom of the fourth inning to take a 8-7 lead. But Wells Contracting got got RBI singles from Robert Hirt and Mark Whitley to take the lead and a bases-loaded error accounted for two more runs as Wells took an 11-8 lead and held on for a 12-9 clinching triumph.

Wells Contracting is now 8-3, while Fitzgerald's is 6-5, Hopkins Meats is 5-5, Monroe Harbour is 5-6 and Cactus Bob's is 3-8.

The league will finish up next Wednesday with make-up games that were rained out on May 29. Wells Contracting will take on Monroe Harbour at 6:30 p.m. and Hopkins Meats will play the doubleheader against Fitzgerald's at 7:30 p.m. and Cactus Bob's at 8:30 p.m.

Facing Cactus Bob's were Bob Keeler (two singles, run, RBI), Jim Nulty (two singles, run), Heath Short (two singles), Cary Keeler (single, two runs, RBI), Ron Wirth (single, run, two RBI), Jesus Muno and David Goldstick (one single, one run and one RBI each), Woodley and Don Macher (one single and one run each) and Brantley Brumley (RBI).

Fitzgerald's was led by Mike Miller (three singles), Kyle Brubaker (two singles, run, RBI), Blake Murray (two singles, two runs), Kurk Allen (two singles, RBI), Brett Mollé (double, two runs, RBI), Trey Brasseur (single, run, three RBI), Joe Ferps (single, run), James Garner (single) and Joe Dilbartolo (run).

Upcoming senior Greg Bradley has been outstanding this summer for the Lake Mary Mudcats and has been impressing his coaches in hopes of getting more mound time for Lake Mary High School next year.

Bradley making a statement

By GARY COATMAN
 Herald Staff Writer

Lake Mary senior pitcher Greg Bradley saw very little action for the Rams in the 1996 season, and the right-hander has been on a mission in National Amateur Baseball Federation action this summer as a result.

"I didn't pitch much last year, and one of my goals this summer was to come out and surprise people," Bradley said. "Nobody thought I could do this last year, and I want to prove that they were wrong."

Bradley allowed just nine hits and two walks while recording five strikeouts in Wednesday's 4-3 loss to the West Orlando Indians in NABF action at Lake Mary High School. Bradley came into Wednesday's game with a 1-1 record and a 0.60 earned run average. He has surrendered just seven walks while recording 14 strikeouts in 19 2/3 innings this summer.

"Greg has been pitching well this summer," said Mudcats coach Kevin Wainwright. "His change up and curveball have been working really well. Greg hits his spots well and tries to stay ahead in the count."

Although Bradley saw very little playing time last year, Lake Mary Rams varsity baseball coach Allan Tuttle wishes he had more players like Bradley.

"Greg is a competitor, and he has a big heart," Tuttle said. "If the rest of the team had his heart, we'd be in great shape."

West Orlando converted a single, a double, a hit batsman and a walk into a 2-0 lead in the top of the first during Wednesday's game, but the Mudcats offense soon came to Bradley's aid. Shaun St. Dennis got Lake Mary going with a lead off single in the second inning, advanced to third when Jimmy Smith took second on a two-base error, and scored on an RBI ground out by Tony Carrao to cut the deficit to 2-1.

Dustin Hogan put the Mudcats ahead 3-2 when he doubled to open the third inning, took third on a single by Ryan Ablejon, and scored on a fielder's choice by Kyle Berryhill. The Indians then responded with a run on two hits in the top of the fourth inning to knot the score 3-3. The score remained tied until West Orlando got a home run off Bradley in the top of the eighth.

Bradley estimates that he threw at least 200 batting practice pitches at every Rams practice session last season. He counts that experience and a summer conditioning program for his improvement.

Gordon takes early lead in Pepsi 400 qualifying

DAYTONA BEACH — A surprising-ly fast car gave Jeff Gordon an early lead in qualifying for the Pepsi 400.

Gordon circled Daytona International Speedway's trioval at 188.869 mph Thursday. That made him by far the fastest of the few to finish before showers postponed the completion of qualifying until today.

Gordon will bid for his sixth victory of the year and his second consecutive Pepsi 400 title Saturday.

"I'm just glad we got a good solid run, and we'll start somewhere up front," he said.

Gordon could well earn the pole. Among the nine drivers who took the track Thursday, his speed was the best by more than 2 mph.

"I'm surprised," he said. "I didn't think we'd run that fast."

Because hot weather makes the track slick, qualifying speeds are typically slower for the Pepsi 400 than the Daytona 500. In addition, NASCAR's 45-degree rear spoiler rule takes effect this week and will reduce downforce — and speed.

Nonetheless, Gordon fought windy conditions to nearly match Dale Earnhardt's lap of 189.510 mph in February, which was good enough for the Daytona 500 pole.

"It worked out well for us," Gordon said. "It's a lot of fun to qualify when the car's running like that."

Mudcats, rain win at Lyman

By GARY COATMAN

LONGWOOD — The Lake Mary Mudcats swept a doubleheader Thursday in the first two games of the Lyman July 4th Invitational Tournament at Lyman High School, and Mother Nature forced the postponement of the last two games with a severe thunderstorm.

Oviedo and Dr. Phillips were originally scheduled to play at 5 p.m. Thursday, but the game will be played at 2 p.m. today. Lyman and West Orange were scheduled to play at 8 p.m. Thursday, and that contest has been rescheduled for 5 p.m. today.

The Lake Mary II team came from behind to defeat Lake Howell 7-6 in the opening game of the tournament. Matt Allegra gave the Mudcats a 1-0 lead in the top of the first inning when he reached first base on an error, and scored when Joey Hicks and Kevin Graves followed with back-to-back sacrifice flies.

Donald Taylor reached second on a two-base error to open the second inning for Lake Howell, advanced to third on a ground out by Roberto Santana, and knotted the score 1-1 as Robert Ely reached second on another two-base error. Ely then put the Bucks ahead 2-1 when he scored on a sacrifice fly by Tim Hummel.

Jason Bailey followed with a walk, and extended the Lake Howell lead to 3-1 on a single by Nick Hajek. Hummel, Bailey and Hajek each scored in the fourth inning to give the Bucks a 6-1 cushion. Allegra and Matt Main had consecutive singles for Lake Mary B in the top of the fifth, and later scored to pull the Mudcats within 6-3.

sixth inning for the Mudcats, advanced to second on a sacrifice fly by Jose Rosado, reached third when Main took first base on an error, and scored on a fielder's choice by Allgra. Hicks followed with a single, and scored behind Allgra to tie the score 6-6 on a triple by Graves. Graves then scored the winning run when Chris Westarvet doubled.

The Lake Mary A team completed the sweep with a 5-0 win over Bishop Moore in game two. Scott DeGraff and Scott Hillinski had consecutive singles to open the game for the Mudcats, and DeGraff made the score 1-0 on an error that allowed Brad Klinger to reach first base.

Klinger and Hillinski then made it 3-0 on a two RBI single by Shaun St. Dennis. St. Dennis reached third on a single by Jimmy Smith, and extended the Mudcats advantage to 4-0 on an error. DeGraff drew a one-out walk in the second inning, took second on an error, and closed out the scoring on a single by Klinger.

quiring restrictor plates in carburetors. Still, Gordon found plenty of horsepower in a new Monte Carlo.

"The guys have really worked hard on this car," he said. "We wrecked our Daytona car in February, and we wrecked our Talladega car in May. We had to come back here and test, and that test has really paid off."

Darrell Waltrip had the second-fastest lap at 186.776 mph. He was pleased with that effort after finishing 20th in the Daytona 500 and 21st at Talladega.

"This is an incredible turnaround for the whole team," Waltrip said. "Everybody has worked real hard to get a good car under me."

Jeff Purvis was third at 186.474 and Dale Earnhardt fourth at 186.409.

"It seems like we're a little slower than usual," said Earnhardt, who leads the Winston Cup point standings.

Among those still waiting to take the track when rain ended the season were Dale Jarrett, who won this year's Daytona 500; Sterling Martin, winner of the Winston Select 500 at Talladega; and Bill Elliott, planning to make his first start since crashing at Talladega in April.

Gordon won last year's Pepsi 400 and went on to claim the Winston Cup championship. This year he finished next-to-last in each of the first two races, but has nine top-10 finishes since then to climb to third in the driver standings behind Earnhardt and Terry Labonte.

Weird night at New Smyrna

And a couple of Corvettes — one a classic — were tailed in the Spectator Challenge races for novice drivers in street-legal rides.

Chris Lawrence captured the Coca-Cola Limited Late Model 100-Lapper, the first of a three-race series.

Osteen's Bobby Sears, who leads the FASCAR Limited Late Model point standings at both New Smyrna Speedway and Orlando SpeedWorld, took the lead from Donnie Narmore on Lap 43 and commanded the 25-car field through Lap 78 when his car broke.

Lawrence, who had the only car that could run with Sears, took the lead on the restart and held off the determined challenge of Gary Tiffany for the victory.

Patrick Williams finished second, followed by Narmore, Bobby Newton and Hank Baker.

In the End of the Month Championship 50-Lapper for Late Models, Tony Newson took a big lead early and held on for the victory, followed by Tim Nicholas, Ron Magueri, Jacob Warren and Ricky Wood.

Conrad Grenier won the 30-Lap Mini Stock Special sponsored by DeLand Quality Inn and dedicated the victory to Gary Sanberg, a wheelchair-bound youngster who attends the races every Friday night at Orlando SpeedWorld and went the extra distance Saturday from his home near Oviedo.

"It was a real good ride to night," Grenier said. "The car ran flawless. I've got to thank Wayne Graham, Sammy Graham and the whole bunch. They worked on this car yesterday when I wasn't even there. They really got it dialed in for tonight."

WALLACE GOONS
Rusty Wallace signed a three-year contract extension to drive Ford Thunderbirds through 1990.

Wallace has won 13 races, including three this year, since switching to Ford from Pontiac following the 1983 season. He said there was no temptation to rejoin Pontiac rather than re-sign with Ford.

"I couldn't imagine this not happening unless Ford had a major change or a realignment," he said, "and I haven't seen that happen. Those guys are all racers. They have been really good to us and are working hard at it."

Tips for keeping food safe

To prevent illness from E. coli 0157:H7 and other Shiga toxin-producing bacteria, heed the following advice.

● At the supermarket, make sure meat and poultry are bagged separately from fruits and vegetables or that the meat is wrapped in a small plastic bag. Produce bagged along with meat can become contaminated with bacteria if the meat's juices seep out of the package and onto the fruits and vegetables. And since fruits and many vegetables are not cooked, any toxin-producing bacteria that reach them will not be destroyed.

● Rinse fruits and vegetables thoroughly with cold water before serving. Toxin-producing bacteria resides in animal feces rather than produce. But some outbreaks of illness due to E. coli 0157:H7 have been linked to lettuce and other produce that apparently had been exposed to fecal matter during growing or transport to the supermarket. Even cantaloupe and other melons with inedible skins should be rinsed carefully. The knife used to cut the fruit can carry bacteria lurking on the exterior into the fleshy inside of the fruit.

CONSUMER FOCUS

● During cooking, flip steaks with tongs or a spatula rather than a fork. Unlike ground beef where bacteria is mixed throughout the meat during the grinding process, steak harbors bacteria only on the surface. Sticking a fork into the meat, however, injects the interior with bacteria from the outside. Cook all meat and poultry to 160 degrees Fahrenheit. The meat should not look pink and the juices should run yellow, with no trace of pink or red.

● Using hot, soapy water, wash hands, utensils, cutting boards, and countertops that have come into contact with raw meat or poultry. Also wash sponges and dish-cloths used to wipe surfaces exposed to raw meat.

● When dining out, order hamburgers and other ground beef items well-done.

● Buy pasteurized apple cider or heat fresh cider to 160 degrees Fahrenheit. In 1991, about two dozen people were infected with E. coli 0157:H7 after drinking fresh cider at a mill in Massachusetts. Public health officials suspect that the contaminated cider was made with unwashed apples that had fallen off the tree and come into contact with animal feces on the ground.

● Do not drink raw milk.
● Wash hands thoroughly after changing diapers. If your child is in a daycare setting, make sure the staff does the same.

President cherished 'Rules for Living'

DEAR READERS: Recently I was asked about President James A. Garfield's "Rules for Living." When I confessed I had not seen them, many of you were kind enough to send them to me.

They were evidently given to a young James A. Garfield by an elderly friend, and Garfield cherished them to the end of his life. So for "A Moment in History," who asked for them, and for all of my readers who will surely enjoy them, here are President James A. Garfield's cherished personal principles:

- Never be idle.
- Make few promises.
- Always speak the truth.
- Live within your income.
- Never speak evil of anyone.
- Keep good company or none.
- Live up to your engagements.
- Never play games of chance.
- Drink no intoxicating drinks.
- Good character is above everything else.
- Keep your own secrets if you have any.
- Never borrow if you can possibly help it.
- Do not marry until you are able to support a wife.
- When you speak to a person, look into his eyes.
- Save when you are young to spend when you are old.
- Never run into debt unless you see a way out again.
- Good company and good conversation are the sinews of virtue.
- Your character cannot be essentially injured except by your own acts.
- If anybody speaks evil of you, let your life be so that no one believes him.

— When you retire at night, think over what you have done during the day.
— If your hands cannot be employed usefully, attend to the culture of your mind.
— Read the above carefully and thoughtfully at least once a week.

DEAR ABBY: We recently moved to a new city, and our new telephone number once belonged to a doctor's office. (The doctor has moved to the other side of town.) We frequently find phone messages on our answering machine from people attempting to contact this doctor. One man left a message in minute detail about which vertebrae his wife injured while she was dancing. Another individual left three messages in two hours. He was obviously in extreme pain, begging the doctor to call him.

Our new number is also very close to that of a "Jason." Although the greeting on our machine clearly states that Kraig and Lisa live at this number, we often get messages for him, too. His bank called about his savings account; a car dealer called about a new model he thought Jason might like; a few of his friends were in town for the weekend and called about getting together.

TV news often compared to call these people back and tell them they reached the wrong number, but we remind ourselves that we are not someone else's answering service.

For a while, we had a hilarious message — obviously not that of a doctor's office. Finally, in desperation, we changed our greeting to: "Kraig and Lisa cannot come to the phone right now. Please leave a message after the tone. And by the way, this is not a doctor's office and Jason doesn't live here." That seemed to do the trick!

KRAIG AND LISA, CEDAR RAPIDS, IOWA

DEAR KRAIG AND LISA: Thanks for your letter. As more and more people use telephone answering machines, it is important for callers to listen to the machine's "greeting" to be certain they have reached the right number before leaving a message. Callers could be leaving a message for someone who will never receive it if they have dialed the wrong number. (From the star boy if you comprehend this message.)

DEAR ABBY: Recently a child in my husband's family was to undergo surgery. The child's mother asked all of the family members to donate blood. This child has A positive blood, and everyone in my husband's family except him also has A positive blood. My husband's blood type is O positive.

Abby, I am convinced that the people he knows as his parents are not his biological parents. My husband will not mention this to them unless someone more knowledgeable than I tells him it's unlikely that these two people are his parents. I feel it is his right to know who his parents are.

Do you think that the people he believes are his parents actually are? Or do you feel that he should confront them and ask for a DNA test? NAMELESS IN ARIZONA

DEAR NAMELESS: Your husband's parents are not hiding anything from him. I checked with Jeffrey Morris, M.D., Ph.D., the director of Long Beach Genetic in Long Beach, Calif., who assured me that two parents with A positive blood can, most definitely, have a child with O positive blood. I vote with the doctor. Stop stirring the pot.

DEAR ABBY: You recently listed the best places for women to meet men, but you left out the best place of all: the grocery store! Especially early Sunday mornings. I usually go between 7:30 and 8 a.m., and there are always a lot of single guys there. They are like last little boys. If they are shopping that early, you

Coping with teen is difficult for mom

Dear Mary: My 17-year-old daughter has just been arrested for shoplifting. This is just the last of a long string of delinquent behavior. She was a sweet little girl; but when she turned 13, she started getting crazy and wild, and it's just gone from bad to worse since then.

She had her first abortion when she was 14 and had another one last year. When she's at home she does whatever she wants, and doesn't listen to a thing I say. I'll leave a list of chores for her to do while I'm at work. When I come home, the house is a mess, there's food strewn all over, and none of the things I've asked her to do have been done.

FAMILY COUNSELOR

MARY BALK

I'm at my wit's end. I have to put up with her for another year, but I'm afraid to think what kind of trouble she's going to get into between now and when she turns 18. (By the way, she's out of here on her next birthday.) Sure, her dad is in prison and hasn't seen her (Thank God) since she was 7, but I've tried to have her in contact with some good guys. I keep asking myself where I went wrong. I know you can't answer that but I feel better just getting it off my chest.

Burned Out Mom

Dear Burned Out: Of course you're right. I can't answer your question, but I can reassure you that nearly every parent alive has, at one time or another, asked him or herself the same question. Your daughter has had to face some difficult challenges, but the reality is that everybody faces challenges in their life, and how we deal with them is a function of our character, as well as our training.

The 14-year-old Ann Frank wrote a wonderful insight in her diary while in hiding during World War II. I'd like to share it with you. "Parents can only give good advice and put them on the right track. The final forming of a person's character lies in their own hands."

Perhaps you could benefit from counseling to come to peace with your situation and possibly learn some coping strategies for the next year.

IN BRIEF

Vacation Bible Ship

LAKE MARY — The Holy Cross Lutheran Church of Lake Mary is setting sail for memorable Bible learning aboard the Vacation Bible Ship. The Bible Ship will run from July 15-19, from 9 a.m. to 12 noon. The "cruise" will include crafts, games, Bible songs and treats.
Call 333-0797 for more information or to register.

Summer Bible School

SANFORD — Christ United Methodist Church, 408 Tucker Dr. in Sunland Estates, has announced plans for a Vacation Bible School. Seeking to follow its goal to be a "neighborhood church," members have designed a program to be held July 8 to 12 and a Neighborhood Bible School.

The theme for this event is "Camp Courageous. Where God's Love is Contagious." It will be conducted from 9 a.m. until noon each day.

To pre-register call Linda Hutson at 322-0073 or Jan Kogar at 330-1367.

For more information call the church office at 322-7900.

Lectures scheduled

DELTONA — Temple Shalom of Deltona and the Kabbalah Learning Centre will present a full day lecture on the "Mystical Secret of the Jews, Kabbalah, the Seed of all Creation" on Sunday, August 11 from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. at Temple Shalom, 1785 Elkcam Blvd. in Deltona.

A breakfast noah and kosher deli lunch will be provided. Reservations received before July 15 will cost $20 and reservations received after July 15 to August 11 will be $30.

For further information call Eric C. Sanders at (904)789-3259 or Temple Shalom at (904) 789-2302.

Christian Women to meet

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — The Christian Women's Club of Altamonte and Maitland will meet Thursday, July 11 from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. at the Holiday Inn Orlando North, Wymore Road in Altamonte Springs.

The cost is $9.50. The theme is "Nifty Fifties" brunch featuring coca-cola collectibles, special music and speaker.

For brunch and nursery reservations and cancellations call Dot Childers at 423-5541 or Dot Merchant at 365-1157 by Sunday.

Hanson to speak

SANFORD — Dr. Ken Hanson will speak on the topic "Year of Jubilee" Sunday at the morning service at Sanford Church of God, 801 W. 22nd St. For more information call the church office at 322-3942.

Anniversary set

SANFORD — The New Bethel church family will be celebrating their fifty-seventh church anniversary on Sunday, July 14 at 11 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

The morning service's inspirational message will be delivered by the Rev. Vernon Woolridge, associate pastor of the Church of God in Christ, Eatonville. Afternoon service will be rendered by the Rev. Ricky Scott (and congregation), pastor of the New Mount Calvary MB Church of Sanford.

The public is invited to attend. For more information call the church office at 323-3504.

VBS to begin

SANFORD — The Lutheran Church of the Redeemer, 2888 Oak Ave., will hold Vacation Bible School from July 8 through July 12 from 9 a.m. to noon with registration the morning of July 8 in the Fellowship Hall.

The theme will be "God's Winning Team." Patti Hartwig will serve as director.

Crafts, Bible stories, music and snacks will be enjoyed each day. A program and cook-out is planned for Friday morning and all family members are invited to attend.

A special invitation is extended to all visitors in the area and to those children without a regular church home.

For more information call the church office at 322-3552.

VBS scheduled

SANFORD — "We have an exciting summer planned for the children in our community," said Pastor Cliff Melvin, of First United Methodist Church of Sanford. "This summer we will embark on a prayer safari. We will be having lively song, skits, crafter, games, Bible studies and snacks...all things that make Vacation Bible School so popular with children and parents. On top of that, we will be helping kids grow in their relationships to God through prayer. We are looking forward to this very special opportunity for us to reach out to parents and children in our neighborhood and share with them the joy of developing a personal relationship with God."

The Kingdom of the Son Vacation Bible School begins July 15 through July 19. Classes will be held at the First United Methodist Church, 419 Park Ave., from 9 a.m. till noon.

For more information and registration call the church office at 322-4371.

'Friend Day', VBS set

SANFORD — Westview Baptist Church, 4100 Paola Rd., will be having "Bring a Friend Day" Sunday, as its high attendance emphasis for Sunday School at 9 a.m. Following, at 10 a.m., there will be a special Patriotic Service.

Then, at 6:30 p.m., Vacation Bible School begins for ages 3 through 8th grade and adults. All classes will be USA "teams" and the church will feature a USA decor theme throughout.

VBS will include Bible study, games, recreation, music, crafts, refreshments, the penny offering for the Baptist Children's Home in Lakeland and lots of fun. VBS will continue nightly at 6:30 p.m. through Thursday and will conclude Friday night with Family night on July 12 at 7 p.m.

The public is invited to attend and encourages to attend all activities. The church 4100 Paola Rd. (46A) in Sanford. For more information call the church office at 323-0823.

Awards held at Civic Center

SANFORD — The 1986 Central Florida Gospel Music Lifetime Achievement Awards will be held at the Sanford Civic Center on Saturday, July 20 at 6 p.m. A banquet will also be featured as a part of the evening.

The event is presented by the Sanford / Central Florida Interdenominational Musicians' Guild. Sponsors are Wilson Eichelberger, Gainous Funeral Home and Ken Rummel Chevrolet.

Formal attire is requested. Tickets are on sell at the cost of $25 and must be purchased by July 12. Vendors, entertainment and door prizes will also be featured.

For more information call (904) 532-2335.

Cast members wanted

SANFORD — Doug Burnham will be forming a children's comedy / variety show for television viewing. Channel 52 will produce the event.

Those interested in participating must have Christian clowning experience. This is open to the young and old.

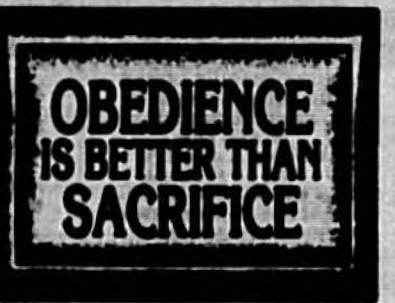

For more information and casting opportunities call Doug Burnham at 330-6638 from 6 to 7 p.m.

Community touched by churches

Going for the goal theme for VBS

Whether its throwing the frisbee or blowing bubbles, children attending vacation bible school at First Baptist Church Markham Woods are encouraged to do their best, whatever that may be. Alevia Varkett (right photo) seems to have no problem with the bubbles and several children, including Joey Gebben (from right, second in line), Samantha Hicks and Sally Parker, wait in line for their turn, after Bobby Goertz. 'Olympic games' are mixed with other activities such as Bible study, music and crafts. The Wednesday night program continues through Aug. 7.

Concert celebrates Jerusalem 3000

SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

ORLANDO — The Honorable Ehud Olmert, Mayor of Jerusalem, will serve as the Honorary Chairman for the August 22 Gala Performance by the Jerusalem Youth Orchestra. The performance will begin at 7 p.m. at the Clarion Plaza Hotel. This outstanding musical event is part of the celebrations for Jerusalem 3000 in Central Florida. Jerusalem 3000 celebrates the Trimillennium of Jerusalem marking the 3000th anniversary King David made

Jerusalem the capital of Israel and the Jewish people. King David is a unifying figure for Jews, Christians and Muslims, as he is revered in the Koran and his psalms are sung in synagogues and churches the world over.

The Orchestra's fifty members range in ages from 14 to 18. They begin their training at the age of nine. Their repertoire includes classical and light classical music, Israeli and other folk tunes and marches.

While in Orlando, the Jerusalem Youth Orchestra will be performing at Walt Disney World. Their tour includes Tampa and several communities in Georgia.

Tickets are available for sale from the Jewish Federation of Greater Orlando, 851 North Maitland Ave., Maitland 32751.

The price of tickets is sponsors - $118, Admission - $18, General Admission - $10. For additional information contact Rabbi Moshe Elbas at 669-9160.

Be thankful, share a little happiness

SANFORD — My prayer is that this column finds all happy and well. After the last few weeks of tests and trials, and only a few more to go, life is improving.

Many activities are planned throughout the summer to uplift and encourage the community spiritually. Vacation Bible Schools are offered at many churches.

lies, whether spiritual or physical are only a few of the good things from above.

God blesses us in numerous ways through our relationships with others, material possessions, food and shelter. May we always thank Him for the things we enjoy.

Take time to express your appreciation to family, friends, spouses, parents, children and co-workers how they have brought joy to you. Keep a smile on your face and spread joy.

The world is such a bitter place at times and a friendly voice or face may be just the thing that will turn the tables for good. A good attitude is a wonderful virtue.

Share a little love. Touch someone for good.

Bishop dedicates new church ramp

By SHIRLEY E. BAKER
Herald Correspondent

SANFORD — On Sunday afternoon, July 14, at 4 p.m., the Willie Waverly handicapped ramp, recently added to Historic St. James AME Church, will be dedicated.

Everly, a long time Sanford resident and member of Historic St. James AME Church, has been actively involved in many aspects of the church's operations and history. He is also a Rosewood survivor.

Bishop Frank C. Cummings, Presiding Prelate of the eleventh Episcopal District, which included Florida and the Bahamas, will be present. Presiding elders and ministers of the AME Connection, as well as friends and members of Historic St. James AME Church have been invited. This special event will be noted on a commemorative plaque.

Historic St. James AME Church is located on the corner of Ninth Street and Cypress Avenue in Sanford. Preston Adams is pastor and Caroline Shine is the minister.

How to cope with fear of doctors

MEDICINE
PETER GOTT, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My 55-year-old brother is terrified of doctors and lives in relative seclusion. His eyes are very sensitive to light, he squints, and his eyes water when exposed to daylight. Is there an over-the-counter medication to help him?

DEAR READER: I'm sorry that your brother fears doctors. This probably stems from an unpleasant past experience he had with a pediatrician. It's in childhood that these fears first develop.

Remember when parents used to threaten their children? "You behave or I'll take you to the doctor for a shot!" This thoughtless statement caused more harm than anyone will ever know.

Actually, doctors aren't such a bad sort — well, some anyway. Unfortunately, we often have to tell people bad news. The various ways that we meet this daunting challenge may not always be appropriate, leading to poor public relations at best, permanently frightened patients at worst.

Whoops! I think that I got diverted from your question. Sorry. Light sensitivity commonly accompanies a variety of eye disorders, including cataracts and glaucoma. Because this symptom may reflect a serious eye disease that could eventually affect vision, your brother really should attend to it.

Ideally, he should be examined by an ophthalmologist (M.D.), but you might be able to get him to an optometrist, who is not an M.D. but who can perform the necessary basic testing (vision, eye pressure and so forth), all of which is painless and without risk. If the optometrist is sensitive — and many are — he may be able to refer your brother to a physician for a much-needed general examination.

I hesitate recommending an over-the-counter product without knowing the cause of your brother's light sensitivity. He really needs an exam.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've been treated by dermatologists for some time for a skin condition called intertrigo, but it just keeps spreading. Why?

DEAR READER: Intertrigo is a resistant skin infection that is common in obese persons. Areas where the skin touches — for example, under breasts and in deep skin folds — remain moist, dark, and warm, an ideal environment for bacteria and yeasts to grow.

Intertrigo can often be helped by periodic dusting with corn starch or talc. But, in my experience, the only sure-fire cure is to slim down. So, if you're too stout, get on a diet and shed some pounds.

Also, obtain a blood test for diabetes, because this disease frequently worsens intertrigo.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I had malignant polyp of the rectum removed about three years ago. Since then I have had lots of gas, several small bowel movements at a very inconvenient time of the day, and I find I can't go too far from the bathroom because of loose stools. I've had a CT scan and colonoscopy that revealed a small polyp but no cancer. I live in fear, afraid to socialize and take trips. Will I always have this problem?

DEAR READER: Ordinarily, the removal of rectal or colonic polyps does not affect bowel movements. Therefore, I am at a loss to explain your symptoms.

I suggest that you discuss this with your gastroenterologist or surgeon, who may suggest some dietary alterations (such as increased fiber), the use of a bulking agent (such as Metamucil) or a trial of an over-the-counter medicine (such as Immodium) to firm up your stools.

To give you more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Constipation and Diarrhea."

The unbelievable happened

By Phillip Alder

Let's end the week with two deals that, despite what you might think, actually happened as described. But first a question: When and where was the first weekly television show on bridge broadcast?

To my knowledge, the right answer is in England in 1936 — on what is now known as BBC1.

This deal was included in one of these shows. A leading player of that time, Harry Ingram, included it in his "reminiscences" — a word that he couldn't spell.

The presenter of the show, Hubert Phillips, had prepared an analysis of the bidding when he was told that East, Ingram, had opened with an incredible psychic three spades. He had only one spade, three first-round controls and lots of red-suit winners — and was vulnerable too!

South had the right answer: a penalty double. (No one used takeout doubles of pre-empts in those days.) Not that South was totally innocent, but the interpretation of the auction was lost on North. Over five diamonds, he should have jumped to six spades. (North was Norman Bach, who later moved to Bermuda and organized the first Bermuda Bowl world team championship in 1950.)

In their excellent book "Famous Bidding Decisions" (Collaun; $15.95 p.p. from The Bridge World, 39 West 94th Street, New York, NY 10025-7124), Terence Reese and David Bird ask if this is the only time a pair has gone five down in a 6-1 fit when laydown for a slam in a 6-5 fit.

As you can imagine, the viewers with a sense of humor loved it.

Your Birthday

Saturday, July 6, 1988

In the year ahead, your chart indicates that you will be in a position to achieve some of your personal goals. You are capable of making impressive progress.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You can achieve an important objective today, but you might have a tough time. Do not start something you don't intend to finish. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you understand what to do to make the relationship work. Mail $2.75 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1758, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10158.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 23) A solution to a vexing problem can be found today. It will put your mind at ease and give you a very good reason to do a little celebrating.

VIROO (Aug. 23-Sept. 23) Working with a partner will be the best way to achieve success today. You will be involved with someone for whom you have a great deal of respect.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You may not have taken a promise too seriously, but the person who made this commitment will come through for you today. Do not judge people prematurely.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) It will be important to do a good job today if you are employed by another person. Your compensation will be in proportion to the quality of your work.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You will be more popular with others than you realize today. However, you will feel more comfortable when in the company of old pals and familiar faces.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Tenacity and staying power will be the essential ingredients for success today. If you can hang on until the end, you will be rewarded.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) The good news you've been hoping to hear might come your way today through an unusual courier. This person will be someone who helped you recently.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Something you've worked long and hard to achieve will finally come to fruition. Do not alter your course, because you're in better shape than you realize.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You might be in a serious mood early in the day, but as you begin to mingle with friends, their warmth will lift your spirits.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You could be in for a pleasant surprise today. Something you've worried about will turn out happily instead of ending on a negative note.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Companions will have a strong influence on your outlook today. Stick with optimistic people and avoid pessimists.
