Family says 8 people contributed to death and should stay away

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — The family of Cpl. Sharon Shearer does not want top Sanford Police Department officials and some city officials to attend her funeral on Friday.

Shearer died Monday as a result of complications from a massive heart attack. Her family believes the stress of her job and the threats placed on her by the top brass caused her death.

Shearer's sister, Rhonda Jones, and her son Jacob Smith had made a verbal request that they not attend, but Chief Joe Hillard agreed that the request be made in writing, and it includes a list of all those who were not welcome at the funeral and that are seen for the request be given.

A handwritten letter was presented to Hillard this morning, and a copy was furnished to the Sanford Herald.

Board privatizes school cleaning

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Senior Staff Writer

Despite the protests and pleas of representatives of the union and the custodial staff from a district school, the Seminole County school board decided to assign the job of cleaning three county facilities to a private company.

In an effort to save money, the school board agreed to open up for bids the after-hours cleaning of Wicklow Elementary School, South Seminole Middle School and Winter Springs High School.

District custodians, who undergo state background checks, will still work at the facilities during the day and on school days, but the school board is looking for a private company to clean the facilities during the night, weekends and holidays.

Florida may ban partial birth abortions

By STEVE BARNES
Herald Staff Writer

Partial birth abortions would become illegal in Florida if a bill currently under consideration by the state legislature becomes law.

The bill, HB1227, would make it a third degree felony to participate in a partial birth abortion. The legislation defines partial birth abortion as “A termination of pregnancy in which a physician partially delivers a living fetus before killing the fetus and completing delivery.”

The ban would not apply in cases in which the procedure is necessary to save the life of the mother and no other procedure would suffice for that purpose. In addition, the woman having the abortion could not be prosecuted under the proposed law.

Third trimester abortions would also be outlawed except in cases where two doctors agree in writing that the abortion is necessary to preserve the life or health of the mother. In the event of a medical emergency, a second physician's agreement would not be necessary.

The legislation also stipulates that if an abortion is performed at a stage of pregnancy in which the fetus is viable, physicians would be required to use the same degree of care to preserve the life and health of that fetus as

Historical Society and the movies

By G. B. STOKES
Herald Columnist

At their recent meeting, members of the Sanford Historical Society learned about the making of the movie "Rosewood" from Neil Stokes who was both an extra and stand-in in the production.

Mr. Stokes gave the group a general outline of the Rosewood story as depicted in the movie. He stated that he felt as if he were truly living the experience and part of it really scared him. His main job was that of stand-in for the actor who played Sylvester, but he was also an extra in several different scenes. He said that he did a lot of running and hiding in the dark during his daily 12 hour shift.

Producer John Singleton has preconceived ideas about Central Florida, thinking that everyone here would be backward hicks, according to Mr. Stokes. He, of course, was enlightened soon after beginning production. Jon Veight, one of the actors, really like Sanford.

Several people from Sanford were in the movie as extras and also some Sanford homes were moved to the movie location where they were later part of the burning of the town.

The society members were also interested to learn that Mr. Stokes lives in the former home of Prof. N.J. Crooms on Sanford Avenue which was built in 1920. Prof. Crooms was the first black principal in Sanford. Writer Zora Neal Hurston also lived in that house; in fact, her mother drowned in the pool there.

Mr. Stokes was born in New York City and have lived all over the country, but has fallen in love with Sanford and plans to make his permanent home here. He is a dog trainer by profession, sometimes known as "The Dog Man", and, of course, is interested in acting.

During the business meeting conducted by President Millard Hunt, it was announced that three field trips have been planned for the year. These will be to both the Sugar Mill in New Smyrna Beach and the Peace Inlet Lighthouse, the "Imperial Tomb of China" exhibit at the Orlando Museum of Art, and the genealogy department of the Orlando Public Library.

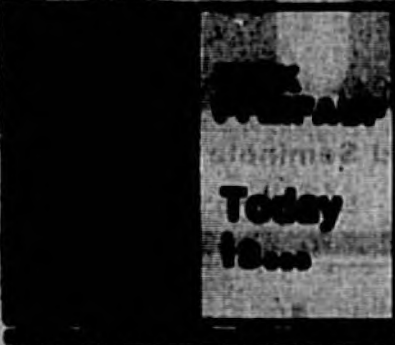

Area "Spring into History" events were announced with activities taking place throughout the Central Florida area during the next two months. On May 17 there will be walking tours through Sanford's two National Register Historic Districts and also a garden tour.

The publications committee scheduled its first meeting of the year at which time plans will be made for producing This is a Manatee and Newsmakers. Also announced was that Dr. C.L. Park has turned over the copyright of his book Tristram...What Was? to the society.

Membership chairman, Grace Hunt, announced that 13 new members had been added to the society this year. Membership currently includes one corporation, four patrons, 24 families and 85 individuals.

Following the meeting, members enjoyed refreshments provided by Daris Gurney and Nancy Morgan.

The Civil War is officially over

The war is over, even though some may not believe it. On this date, April 9, 1865, General Robert E. Lee, commander of the Army of Northern Virginia, officially surrendered to General Ulysses S. Grant, commander-in-chief of the Union Army, ending four years of what has been referred to as the Civil War, War Between the States, and no more war-related items. Today is the commemoration of the fall of Bastion in World War II, in 1943. I'll have more about that tomorrow.

In historical birthdays, W.C. Fields (Claude William Dunbarfield) was born in 1879. He wrote the song "On the Whole, I'd Rather Be in Philadelphia."

For today's birthdays, Peter Seve Ballesteros is 68, country founder Hugh Hefner turns 71; country singer Carl Perkins turns 65; actress Judy Garland is 18 and actor Dennis Quaid turns 43.

While today is the anniversary of the signing of the Civil Rights Bill of 1865. Although it was vetoed by then-President Andrew Jackson, congress overturned it and granted blacks the rights and privileges of American citizenship, forming the basis for the Fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Con-

Getting kids ready now for next year at school

By WEND BARRON
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - They're already getting ready for next year at Midway Elementary School in Sanford.

The transition from home to school is often a difficult one for most youngsters. The differences are sometimes greater for students in high risk, economically disadvantaged, students like many of those who attend Midway Elementary.

Often, the emphasis in these homes is not on education or on academics.

"We want to help these children get off the right path in school as soon as we can," said Amy Walker, a spokesman for the school.

On Thursday, April 15, Midway will host a kindergarten registration event for students who will enter school for the first time in the fall.

The event will take place at the school from 7:30 a.m. until 4:30 p.m.

First graders will also be registered at that time.

Students who plan to enter kindergarten must be five on or before Sept. 1, 1997. Those who will be entering kindergarten must be six on or before Sept. 1, 1997 and they must have successfully completed

Those who attend need to bring a proof of residence with them as well as the youngsters' birth certificate and social security number.

In addition parents should bring immunization (shot) records and student health examination records are required. Forms are available at private physicians offices and at public health departments. Parents who have any questions should call the school at 323-1791.

Who will profit from traffic citations?

Special to the Herald

SANFORD—A bill which will allow private companies and cities that install and operate traffic infraction detectors, or "red light cameras", to profit from traffic citations, was temporarily passed on Tuesday, April 1, by the Senate Transportation Committee, but not without debate by several members of the committee about how the revenue from this system would be spent. "We are concerned that the profit incentives allowed by the bill run contrary to the true purpose of traffic law enforcement, which is to improve traffic safety," said Terry Farias, Chairman of the AAA Clubs of Florida.

"AAA does not oppose implementation with traffic infraction detectors or the controlled testing of any device or technology that might reduce the number of crashes on our roadways," Farias said. "However, the concerns that we raised last year about this legislation have yet to be fully addressed."

One of the AAA's primary concerns is the possible use of "contingency fees" as the method of compensation for the contractor installing and operating traffic infraction detectors. Under the contingency fee system, private contractors would generate income based on a percentage of revenue from traffic citations issued. Under the current bill, up to 40 percent of the citation revenue from the traffic infraction detector could go to the private contractor or the municipality operating the system. This results in motivation to write as many tickets as possible in order to generate revenue for private companies or city budgets. The purpose of traffic law enforcement is traffic safety, not revenue generation," Farias said.

The AAA Club of Florida, with more than 2.5 million members, testified before the Senate Transportation Committee meeting, Tuesday, to urge committee members to proceed cautiously and make drastic changes to Senate Bill 1888 before authorizing the installation of traffic infraction detectors in communities throughout Florida.

At the April 1 committee meeting, several positive amendments were adopted. These include: requiring a ticket be sent within 15 days after the alleged violation, as opposed to the original 30-day turnaround period (AAA recommends a 10-day turnaround); requiring that 40 percent of the gross revenues raised be used for law enforcement purposes; and making the hiring of additional personnel for the Florida Highway Patrol a priority with the revenue raised from traffic infraction detectors.

"Despite these provisions, some of our most important concerns are not being addressed," Farias said. These concerns include: • Issue the ticket to the driver of the vehicle at the time the violation occurs, as opposed to automatically issuing the ticket to the registered owner of the vehicle. If a car's picture is taken running a red light, then the owner of the vehicle, not the driver at the time of the violation, is presumed to be guilty, and the picture is prima facie evidence that the registered owner committed the traffic violation. This "guilty until proven innocent" ideology and the issuance of a ticket for a driver violation to the owner of the vehicle is a dangerous precedent to be set.

• Prohibit the use of "contingency fees" as the method of compensation for the contractor installing and operating traffic infraction detectors.

• Require that the traffic infraction detectors be operated by the appropriate law enforcement agency, instead of private contractors. "The Senate Bill allows non-law enforcement people to control the issuance of citations to motorists. The use of trained law enforcement personnel will ensure the adherence to proper traffic enforcement procedures and guidelines. Control of the program needs to be directly in the hands of law enforcement, rather than private companies who stand to profit from this arrangement," Farias said.

• Require that all revenues generated from citations issued under the traffic infraction detectors program be used for legitimate traffic law enforcement purposes and to enhance traffic safety. The goal with any new technology such as this should be to enhance traffic safety. The AAA Club of Florida believes that money generated from this program should be used exclusively to help law enforcement reach that goal. • Mandate that all penalties for red light violations be equal, no matter what form of insurance was used. "Currently, the penalty for a red light violation detected by a traffic infraction detector is equivalent to a parking ticket," said Farias. "Under the proposed legislation, the red light violation will not be made part of the violator's driving record, points will not be assessed and insurance companies will not know of the violation."

"Establish a demonstration project, allowing the use of the devices in 10 jurisdictions, versus a permanent change in Florida's traffic law. A demonstration project will allow the use of the devices in areas where there is a true traffic safety justification, but would provide reasonable limitations so that the technology can be evaluated before broader implementation. Communities that want to install a traffic infraction detector must demonstrate that there is a traffic safety justification, such as a serious problem with red light violations or crashes resulting from red light running before the device are installed.

Because these concerns are not addressed in the Senate Bill, the AAA Club of Florida opposes this legislation in its current form.

"The intent of this legislation is good - to promote traffic safety and to prevent crashes. But unfortunately, it seems that the private companies that operate the traffic infraction detection systems are more concerned with profit. Otherwise, they would not object to the concerns raised by AAA, since these concerns in no way compromise the potential enhancement of traffic safety," Farias said.

Volunteering for good cause

There is a meeting tonight at Eastmonte Recreation Park, 830 Magnolia Drive in Altamonte Springs. The organizers of the meeting are looking for volunteer assistance in what is one of the most worthwhile projects undertaken each year in Central Florida, or for that matter, across most of the nation.

It's time to begin planning for this year's Seminole County Special Olympics.

These events aren't just contests involving people who are out to win medals. They are opportunities for participants to win hugs, applause, cheers, and support from family and friends.

The Special Olympic Games, for possibly those who don't already know, are for those who have some type of difficulty. They are people who not only need regular care and companionship, but an occasional pat on the back.

Who wins in the Special Olympic Games? Hopefully, everyone who participates, and everyone who attends.

Participants are proud of their ribbons for victories. Some almost seem as though this is the only sporting event of the year, and for many, it really is.

The Seminole County Special Olympic Steering Committee hasn't announced how many people they need for this year's event. They haven't made any public listing of requirements or work expected from volunteers. But judging from the past, the requirements include the desire to do something for others, the ability to hug someone, cheer for someone, and support the participants in the various events. People who are unable to fulfill these requirements should not volunteer.

Regarding how many people they need, the numbers are endless. Not only will they be needing people to assist in setting up and supervising the events, but they need entire families to turn out at the games in a show of love and support.

We aren't talking about professional sports events here. The people who will be entered in these games are themselves, special. As such, they are in need of special attention.

The meeting tonight is scheduled to begin at 7:30 p.m. in meeting room 2 of the recreation center.

For additional information, phone Larry Levine at 942-5279.

If at all possible, attend tonight's meeting. Get involved in the 1997 Special Olympic Games for Seminole County. It'll do everyone a world of good.

Corruption killed officer

A real tragedy has occurred in the City of Sanford. A police Corporal is dead, an apparent victim of the corruption which seems to have been rampant, and possibly remains, in the Sanford Police Department.

Sharon Shaefer, a 14-year veteran of the Sanford Police Department has been trying to initiate an investigation into an apparent cover up at the Department. For this, she was placed under scrutiny and was facing at least a suspension from her duties, if not a dismissal from the force.

Can this death be blamed on the system, an individual or group of individuals? Most likely the blame should be shared by the supervisors of the Police Department along with recently promoted Commander Aaron Keith and his wife Renee, whose spurious actions Corporal Shaefer was attempting to expose.

How Aaron Keith was promoted to Commander in light of the indictments against his wife (of which he claims to know nothing), I cannot begin to fathom.

And how about Chief Dillard? Although, as reported by the Sanford Herald, he was asked by Mayor Larry Dale to postpone any promotions pending an investigation into reorganizing the Police Department, Chief Dillard promoted Aaron Keith. Was this to elevate this civil servant to a position where he might be immune to investigations?

The stress experienced by Corporal Shaefer must have been enormous. Not only did she have to fight crime on the street, but also within her own department which is supposed to be upholding the law. It seems to me that the gambling investigation at City Hall last year received more attention than the blatant operation which was carried on between a former Police Sergeant and his wife. I feel certain that the stress generated by the reprimand and possible dismissal facing Corporal Shaefer was directly related to her death. Where will it end?

Let the guilty ones suffer, not the innocent in search of justice.

Thank you.

Notifying dads about abortions

For some time now, the debate regarding abortion has focused on the right of a woman to have an abortion versus the right of the unborn child to be born.

While this debate is important, it minimizes an equally important issue - the right of a father to participate in a decision which will affect his life and the life of his unborn child.

At this time, Florida law does not require that a father be notified of his partner's decision to have an abortion, even when the couple is married.

This is a morally indefensible position. While a man cannot, by nature, give birth to a child, he shares an equal responsibility - both moral and legal - to nurture and care for that child. And while carrying a child to term is an awesome responsibility, one that could jeopardize the very life of the mother, it should not be used as a pretext for denying the father equal participation in the decision making process. Parenting is a life-long journey, of which pregnancy is just the first step.

As a society, we would never allow a father to abort a fetus without the mother's consent (a very real possibility given the availability of abortion pills), yet this does not differ substantially from the current situation, in which women routinely get abortions without the consent of the father.

STEVE BARNES

Staff Writer

The fact that a man cannot give birth in no way minimizes his parental responsibilities, therefore it should not limit his parental rights.

In addition, advances in medical science have shortened the amount of time a woman must carry a fetus before it becomes viable. A fetus can now live outside the womb much earlier than was previously possible, thereby reducing the burden on a woman who wishes to terminate her pregnancy, while at the same time giving fathers the opportunity to preserve the life of their child if they wish to do so.

While I realize that many abortions are performed on women who have been abandoned by the father of the child, I feel it is important to give responsible fathers the right to participate in such a personal and important decision.

There is currently a bill under consideration in the Florida Legislature that partially addresses this issue. While the bill, HB1227, commonly known as the Partial Birth Abortion Bill, does not require a husband's consent, it does require that he be notified prior to an abortion being performed.

Unfortunately the language is weak, requiring only that the wife certify that her husband was notified. Nonetheless, the bill is a small step towards strengthening the parental rights of fathers.

Although the bill has a few weak points, I believe it is an important step towards recognizing paternal rights and reducing the number of abortions in cases where the child is both loved and wanted.

JACK ANDERSON

All seven governors suspected of being corrupt belong to an older wing.

Corruption of Mexican government

MEXICO CITY--At least seven of Mexico's 31 state governors are believed to be corrupt, meaning they are taking money from illegal sources such as drug lords, according to intelligence sources in Mexico and the United States.

The Mexican sources who identified corrupt governors spoke to our associated Dale Van Atta on the condition that they not be identified for fear of retaliation, including murder.

The U.S. intelligence sources, who spoke to us in Mexico, Texas and Washington, asked for anonymity either because their information involved sensitive intelligence-gathering methods, or because the government of Mexico would take umbrage if, as U.S. officials, they spoke openly about the subject.

Most of Mexico's governors are members of PRI (the Spanish-language acronym for the Institutional Revolutionary Party), which has ruled Mexico for seven decades. But there are different factions within the party. The current administration of President Ernesto Zedillo comes from what is considered the reformist wing.

All seven governors suspected of being corrupt, however, belong to an older wing, sometimes called "the Bolinistas," because of their loyalties to former President Carlos Bolinas de Gortari. Some of them are hand-picked for their positions by the former president, who's now facing corruption charges in Mexico.

Two of the governors suspected of links to drug cartels are Manlio Fabio Deltrone Rivera, governor of Sonora, which borders Arizona; and Jorge Carrillo Olea, governor of Morelos, a state south of Mexico City.

A year ago, after our sources repeatedly named them as being at the top of the Mexican gubernatorial "blacklist" maintained by U.S. drug agents, we spent more than a month trying to meet with them and discuss the allegations. They refused to respond.

However, they have both now heeded, and repeatedly, denied the allegations after the charges were leveled in a Feb. 23 story in the New York Times. That story spawned a slew of similar, damaging stories in Mexican newspapers.

Neither official is likely to be charged with any criminal activities, however; because governors and cabinet officials have traditionally enjoyed immunity for official corruption.

The usual method--when evidence becomes overwhelming--is for the accused to quietly resign. In the mid-80's, for example, a former governor of Binaloa, Antonio Toledo Corro, was widely and publicly linked to drug barons by American and Mexican officials. But he was never charged with any crime, and went off to retirement at the end of his six-year gubernatorial term in 1987.

Corruption in PRI is systemic and endemic. So corrupt is the party that an honest governor like Vicente Fox must be on the lookout for assassination attempts. Fox, the governor of Guanajuato, is a rare leader because he is from PAN, the opposition party, and is widely regarded as being above reproach.

But he confessed to us in an exclusive interview that honest Mexican leaders must be courageous, and live with the realization that they may one day be killed because of their convictions.

Millennialism and megabytes?

BOSTON--The 'experts' are parading across my television screen again. A full entourage of authors and researchers and professors are there, following the psychic bread crumbs, the clues that led 39 people from their separate lives to their Rancho Santa Fe deaths.

We are far now along the familiar media route. Last week's tragedy becomes this week's analysis and then--as surely as black humor survives horror--next week's entry in some David Letterman routine.

Surfing across the channels now, I can put together a collage of such experts trying to explain why some three dozen souls would willingly, maybe even eagerly, leave their "containers."

There is a hapless pursuit of any common thread that brought a former massage therapist, choir leader, postal worker to the conclusion that if they packed their flight bags and drank their potions, they would be lifted to "the kingdom level above human."

But this time the incomprehensible even has a new name. Someone labels Heaven's Gate an Internet cult. Someone else calls it a cybercult.

What jars the minds of many people is that the folks in Heaven's Gate were technologically sophisticated. And yet stunningly gullible. They worked skillfully in a field that we associate with computer science. And yet believed in science fiction.

Calling themselves Higher Sources, they made home pages by day. And read ancient portents from the comets in the night sky. They had skills that outstrip those of us who barely navigate the Internet. But believed there was a spaceship in Hale-Bopp's tail.

Millennialism and megabytes? The World Wide Web and unidentified flying objects? It doesn't compute, many say, as if computing were the ultimate proof of rationality.

It doesn't compute, they say, to find 39 bodies--pockets filled with quarters and 85 bills, videotape filled with excited talk of spacecraft--in a luan house crammed with desktop terminals. Compared to this, the Jonestown jungle made perverse horror-tale sense.

Maybe indeed "cybercult" should be an oxymoron. But today, it stands as one more word of proof about how fast and far technology can streak ahead of understanding.

At times like this we are reminded of a vast disconnect between the new tools we created and the old mindsets they may serve. It's as vast as Heaven's Gate's home page that used electronic talent to post the tacky tabloid portraits of an alien creature. As vast as the megabyte transmission of a message, and the gibberish of the message itself.

The Internet is the latest, but hardly the only, example of this gap between hi tech and lo us. After all, we are the people who made television and show sitcoms on it. We split the atom and made a bomb with it. We built cars that can go beyond 120 miles an hour for people who cannot control the wheel over 80. And in Hollywood, the most advanced technology is used to blow up a miniature

They worked skillfully in computer science. And yet believed in science fiction.

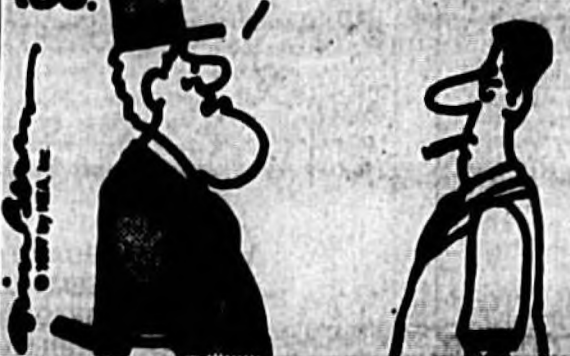

White House or imitate a volcano. To see how much faster technology can move than the human mind, all I need to do is look at the cursor on my screen blinking impatiently for the next sentence to form. To see the gap between skill and understanding, you can talk about life with the 13-year-old installing your Windows 95.

So too, the remarkable new turf of the Internet can, as well, be just another place to show people having sex with each other. Cutting-edge software can be used by people recruiting others to an anti-scientific creationism. It can hook up Marshall Applewhite to a young mother surfing the new way for an ago-old way out.

What strikes me about the Heaven's Gate members is not that they were so advanced but so far behind, not that they were part of the great new world of computers but that they were lost in the world of people. Cut off from family and reason, the authors of these home pages had already left their earthly home.

With all due respect to those who dub this a cybercult, the connecting thread isn't in the tools these people used, but those they lacked. In the end, cyberspace was easy. Life was too hard.

I AM SHOCKED,
SHOCKED TO LEARN
THAT YOU WOULD THINK THAT A VERY LARGE DONATION TO ME WOULD RESULT IN SPECIAL TREATMENT FOR YOU.

Sheafer

funeral: Chief Joe Dillard, Deputy Chief Dennis Whitmore, Retired Chief Ralph Eason, City Manager Bill Simmons, Sgt. Pat Smith, Sgt. Barry Little, Cdr. Aaron Keith and his wife Renee Keith.

Sheafer was awaiting news of what her punishment would be for providing copies of a complaint that she believed was not being investigated, for her husband Nick to send to the Florida Department of Law Enforcement (FDLE).

The complaint, filed by Aaron Keith's mother, Roberta Keith, accused Renee Keith of defrauding her. The case had remained inactive for seven months. Sheafer had said, so she asked her husband to submit it to FDLE for investigation.

Within two days State Attorney Norm Wolfinger had issued a warrant for Renee Keith's arrest. Sheafer was reprimanded for giving the file to her husband. Dillard had recommended her for termination and was set to make pronouncement on the matter the day she suffered the heart attack.

Tom McCauley, the city personnel manager who heard Sheafer's appeal to the city after she was first recommended for termination by Dillard, was originally on the list and then removed, Jones said. McCauley ruled that the department did have reason to impose punishment on Sheafer for giving the papers to her husband. He did not recommend a specific punishment.

"It was not his fault. He was just doing his job," Jones said. "This is not a revenge thing. That's not what this is all about."

Renee Keith said her "sympathy goes out to the Sheafer family and I feel for them in their loss." She had no comment on the family's request that she not attend the funeral.

Mayor Larry Dale said he is saddened by the request, but that he understands the ill feelings.

"I do want the family to know that everyone in the city, everyone in the mayor's office is saddened by her death," Dale said. "I'm sad that all of us in the city can't pay homage to a fine police officer and a good woman."

Simmons said he is sorry the family feels the way they do toward him and said he is sorry about Sheafer's death. He said he does "feel a certain responsibility" and wishes he could attend the funeral. He is unsure what he will do in that regard.

"I may go and stand outside the church," he said. "That would meet my needs to show respect and would comport with their needs to not have me take up a space inside the church."

Neither Dillard nor Whitmore returned repeated telephone calls this morning.

Abortion

they would protect the life and health of a fetus intended to be born and not aborted. Viability is defined as "the stage of fetal development when the life of the unborn child may, with a reasonable degree of medical probability, be continued indefinitely outside the womb."

The act would not require any hospital or individual to participate in abortions, and would protect individuals who refuse to participate in abortions on religious or moral grounds from disciplinary action. Finally, the bill would ban experimentation on any live fetus or pre-mature infant, and requires that fetal remains be disposed of in a sanitary and appropriate way.

The bill, which is co-sponsored by Rep. Tom Feeney-R, Dist. 33, is currently under consideration in the House Health Care Services Committee. A similar bill is currently working its way through the Florida Senate. To make your opinion known, contact Rep. Feeney at his office in Tallahassee at (904) 488-0466.

best systems in the country," he said. "Why change it?" "This is one of the dumbest things the commission has ever done," said Ernie Hatton of South Seminole County. "It goes against all reason and is opposed by the majority of citizens in the county."

Commissioner Maloy said Tuesday that he was "tired" of the fighting, and that he didn't see a problem with finding out who would provide the best services. Van Der Weide agreed. Both managed to slip away from chambers without the opposition that was in store for Adams, who hadn't quite left the platform when confronted by a woman who demanded a private meeting. "I don't want to embarrass you in public," she said. The two most satisfied people at the session were Samuel L. Wood and Walter Elsmann from LifeFleet Atlantic, which has had an exclusive contract with the county for non-life threatening ambulance service for nearly seven years.

The EMS issue, which has raged for two years, will not be determined until June, when bids for the service will be received and reviewed. In the meantime, the firefighters of the county are shook andadder than ever.

SCC softball team sweeps doubleheader from Daytona Beach C.C.

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Who is the big under the Seminole Community College softball team?

Whether it was the embarrassment of a doubleheader thumping at the hands of Florida Community College at Jacksonville last Thursday or the prodding of head coach Courtney Miller, the Raiders certainly woke up Tuesday, sweeping a Mid-Florida Conference doubleheader from highly ranked Daytona Beach Community College, 5-3 and 2-1 at the Seminole Community College Softball Complex on Tuesday afternoon.

The Scots came into the day's action with a 26-8 record overall and 11-3 in the conference, while Seminole Community College was trading water at 17-27 overall and 9-8 in the MFC.

But this day belonged to the Raiders as they scored early and late and got super pitching and defense.

In the first game, Seminole Community College took a 1-0 lead in the bottom of the first inning as Lake Brantley graduate Nadine White-Davis reached on an error and stole second base. Lake Howell graduate Brittany Scott then laid down a sacrifice bunt, moving White-Davis to third. White-Davis then scored on a passed ball.

The score remained 1-0 until the top of the fourth inning when Daytona Beach Community College plated three runs.

With one out, Weed walked and Blatney and Jernigan singled to load the bases. Thomas then grounded back to the pitcher, but the throw to the plate was late and Weed scored to give the Scots a 2-1 lead. Lyman graduate Carolyn Cramer (1 for 3, two RBI) then singled to left field to score Blatney and Jernigan.

Things were starting to look bleak as the Raiders still trailed 3-1 heading into the bottom of the sixth inning.

White-Davis again got things going as she bunted for a single and stole her 10th base of the season. Scott then singled to center field and an error on the play allowed White-Davis to score and Scott to reach second. Jean Spanarelli then homered to left field and Seminole Community College had the lead.

Sarah Dungey followed with a single to left field and advanced to second on a sacrifice bunt by Davido's Michelle Field. Dungey then moved over to third as Lyman's Jamie Sharp grounded out and then scored the insurance run on a double to left field by Jodie Woessner.

Providing the offense for the Raiders were Spanarelli (1 for 2 with her second home run of the season, run, two RBI), Woessner (1 for 3 with her fifth double of the season, RBI), White-Davis (1 for 2, two runs), Scott (1 for 2, run), Kendra Bateman (1 for 2) and Dungey (1 for 3, run).

Freshman Rene Hooper from Airo, New Jersey was the winning pitcher, evening her record at 11-11 by giving up four hits, while striking out one and walking two.

The second game again found Seminole Community College taking a 1-0 lead in the bottom of the first inning as Spanarelli launched her third home run of the season to center field with two out.

Daytona Beach Community College tied the game at 1-1 in the top of the fourth inning as Jernigan walked, advanced to second on a wild pitch, moved to third on a sacrifice bunt by Thomas and scored on another wild pitch.

But the Raiders were up to the task again as, with one out in the bottom of the fifth inning, White-Davis bunted for a single and advanced to second on an error. Scott then singled to right center field to plate White-Davis with the winning run.

Hitting for Seminole Community College were Spanarelli (2 for 3 with a home run, run, RBI), Dungey (2 for 3), White-Davis (1 for 3, run), Scott (1 for 3, RBI) and Field and DeBona's Erin Majub (both 1 for 3).

Sophomore Cathie Murphy, who is from Westfield, Indiana but now lives in Deltona, raised her record to 7-11 by scattering seven hits, while striking out two and walking two.

The Raiders only committed one error in the doubleheader.

Seminole Community College will return to Mid-Florida Conference action on Thursday, traveling to Gainesville for a doubleheader against Santa Fe Community College starting at 2:30 p.m.

The Raiders will then return to Jacksonville on Saturday and Sunday to compete in the Florida Community College at Jacksonville Tournament.

Lighting a victory

Seminole softball squad wins under new lights

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — The Seminole High School girls varsity softball team claimed its first win under its new lighting system with a 4-1 victory over the Lake Brantley High School Patriots in the Seminole Athletic Conference action at the Seminole High School Softball Complex Tuesday evening.

Lake Brantley took a 1-0 lead in the top of the second inning, but the Fighting Seminoles answered with the tying run in the bottom of the frame.

The score remained tied at 1-1 until the bottom of the fifth inning when the Tribe broke through with what proved to be the winning run.

Seminole then added a pair of insurance runs in the bottom of the sixth inning on a Kelle Langton single.

Fighting Seminoles pitcher Maria Duval hurled

a four hitter to even her record at 4-4, while the Tribe improved to 7-8 on the season.

Langton led the Seminole offense by going two-for-four with two RBI, while Lakita Bryant and Jennifer Wilson also singled.

The Tribe have a couple of more tough road games on their schedule this week as they travel to Lake Mary High School on Thursday for a Seminole Athletic Conference battle with the Rams, with the junior varsity playing at 5 p.m. and the varsity game starting at 7 p.m., and then head to the east coast for a varsity only 4 p.m. Class 5A District 4 contest at Merritt Island High School on Friday.

Leading the way for the Patriots were Sitkoff, who went two-for-four and Scales, who had a double. Schommer suffered the loss despite allowing only five hits.

THE KING WILL RETURN — The King and His Court, led by Eddie Feigner, will make a return visit to Sanford on Saturday, April 19th, when they take on the Seminole All-Stars at the Seminole High School Softball Complex starting at 7 p.m.

This is the 52nd International Tour for the original 4-man softball team and they will come here directly from an appearance at the Louisiana Superdome.

Proceeds from the event will go to the Seminole High School softball team.

Tickets are $4 in advance and $5 at the gate. Tickets are on sale at the Seminole High School Athletic Office and at Sports Image.

Pitching carries Bambino winners

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Good pitching stops good hitting every time.

Pitching was at a premium in the Sanford Recreation Department Babe Ruth Baseball Bambino League at Ft. Mellon Park Tuesday night.

Jamie Corns hurled a one hitter and recorded 11 of a possible 12 outs on strike-outs as the Sunland Corporation Red Sox hammered the Rich Plant Indians 11-2 in four innings at Lakeside Field.

Corns got plenty of help from his offense as Kenny Erickson hit a three-run home run and Darel Harris and Leonard Stiles both tripled as the Red Sox scored at least three runs in every inning.

In the other game at Lakeside Field, Michael Dean scattered five hits and struck out six, while his

The 1997 Greenwood Lakes Middle School Central Florida Lady Magic

Lady Magic open season on fire

By MARVA HAWKINS Herald Correspondent

LAKE MARY — A community basketball team made up of Greenwood Lake Middle School students are a part of the Florida Amateur Athletic Association. 1996 was a great season for the Central Florida Lady Magic. The ladies finished in third place at the state tournament held in Tampa.

This year's Lady Magic basketball team has already started and have compiled a 5-0 record. The girls played in a tournament this past Saturday and Sunday, April 5th and 6th and beat the 1996 state champions twice. Clearwater's (No. 1) team had a defeat handed to them by the Lady Magic by the final score of 63-56. In their next game on Saturday, the Lady Magic beat Pensacola 75-56 and later they whipped Naples, which finished second in the state last year, 76-34. They gained another win by upsetting the 1996 state champions again with a grand win on Sunday, edging Clearwater 44-41.

The tournament was the 4th Annual Central Florida Girls Hoop Basketball Team Association and was held at Larkheart School in Orlando. Coach Mike Mitchell is proud of the Central Florida Lady Magic basketball team. They are a winning part of the Florida Athletic Association.

The Lady Magic is in need of donations and financial support in order to continue attending the tournaments being held throughout the season. This team is in need of uniforms to play in and finances for their trips to other tournaments to be held April 19th at Clearwater, May 2-3 in Naples and May 16-18 in Tampa. If they are winners there they will travel to Atlanta in July for the nationals.

Help keep these talented future professional star young girls out on the basketball court. They may receive donations in care of Mike Mitchell at Greenwood Lakes Middle School in Lake Mary.

Duo alone at top of Women's Softball

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — And then there were two.

The She-Devils bounced one team from the ranks of the unbeaten, leaving them and Insurance World as the only undefeated teams left in the Sanford Recreation Department Women's Spring Slow Pitch Softball League Tuesday night.

Playing at Pinchurst Park, the She-Devils got on the board first with a pair of unearned runs in the top of the fourth inning. Sue Nichol led off the inning with a single and Leah Sparrow reached on an error and both came around to score on two more errors.

Paul's Auto and Truck Repair answered right back in the bottom of the fourth inning as, with two out and no one on base, Carol Cranick singled and scored on Belinda Anderson's home run.

Paul's Auto and Truck Repair then gained the lead in the bottom of the fifth inning as Dino Wilson led off with a triple and scored one out later on a sacrifice fly by Ann Lanza.

Heading to the top of the seventh inning, the She-Devils still trailed 3-2.

Kim Winn opened the seventh for the She-Devils with a single and

Is store-bought produce inferior?

DEAR DR. BLONZ: Was there ever any scientific work done on nutrient availability in store-bought produce? I wonder whether store-bought produce — as compared to home-grown and picked — supplies the nutrient amount commonly listed when it actually has been harvested days or weeks earlier? And how much difference does soil condition make? — J.E.E., San Diego

DEAR J.E.E.: Nutrient values in fruits and vegetables can decrease over time. Only certain vitamins will be affected as mineral values remain unchanged. Assuming no form of food preservation such as freezing or drying is used, the shorter the time from "field to plate," the greater the nutrient value — and flavor. Home-grown and locally grown items purchased from a farmer's market are often the best as these items have the shortest "field-to-plate" time.

Keep in mind, though, that many of the more flavorful varieties that you can grow at home do not lend themselves to commercial agricultural operations. It also helps to realize that the differences, although present, may have only a minimal impact on the body. Bottom line: Produce is your best nutritional bargain — regardless of where it comes from.

The organizations responsible for coming up with the nutrient values usually take many samples under a variety of conditions. In the interest of accuracy, this often means picking up samples from stores around the country. As there are different varieties and growing areas around the country, and the nutrient content may vary through the growing season, you should consider posted nutrient values to be nothing more than average.

NUTRITION

Soil conditions can affect nutrient value of a crop, but it is not as straightforward as you might think. For example, if a particular mineral that the plant needs is in short supply, the main effect could be nothing more than a decreased yield. Everything that grows, however, may have the "right amount" of that mineral. In other cases, the amount of a mineral could reflect the amount in the soil. The story varies from crop to crop and from geographical region to region. It's one of the best arguments for eating a wide variety of fruits, vegetables and grains.

DEAR DR. BLONZ: Are there any health-benefiting properties in soy milk? I was told it contained estrogen. — M.S., Carlsbad, Calif.

DEAR M.S.: Most soy milks are made by soaking and grinding whole soybeans. The soybean contains many beneficial compounds, but they don't contain estrogen — at least not the same estrogen that we have in our bodies. What you might have heard is that soybeans contain phyto-estrogens, which are plant compounds (phyto = plant) that bear some similarity to human estrogen.

The presence of phytoestrogens, though, appears to have a beneficial effect, especially for women. Soy also contains other beneficial compounds, such as the isoflavones, a family of antioxidants put there by nature to help protect the soybean's naturally high oil content. (About 50 percent of the calories in the soybean come from polyunsaturated fat.) A regular consumption of soy products is thought to be one of the reasons why the Japanese diet is among the healthiest in the world.

DEAR DR. BLONZ: Recently I bought some "sugar-free" candy that has maltitol as a primary ingredient.

While it lists sugars as 0 grams per serving, it lists carbs as 20 grams per serving. Is maltitol just another form of sugar? — D.W., Lombard, Ill.

DEAR M.S.: Maltitol belongs to a class of substances called sugar alcohols, which also includes sorbitol, mannitol and xylitol. They are carbohydrates and they do contain calories, but they are not considered "sugars" for food labeling because they are metabolized in a different manner. Sugar alcohols don't contribute to tooth decay because they cannot be metabolized by the bacteria that live in our mouth.

The sugar alcohols are also absorbed slowly so they don't raise the blood sugar as rapidly as other sugars. This makes them ideal sugar substitutes for diabetics. If there is a downside, it's that sugar alcohols can cause cramping when they are consumed on an empty stomach.

Friend's gift from heart is poet's inspiration

DEAR ABBY: I have read your column daily for many years and greatly enjoy your letters on random acts of kindness. Yesterday I read the letter about Darlene Gudsey's husband, who came home a quadriplegic after an overdose of anesthesia during open-heart surgery, and how her friends rallied together to repair the things she had formerly relied on her husband to do.

It reminded me of something my quadriplegic friend Bernie did for me several years ago during a very lonely and difficult time in my life. I wrote occasional verse and had been sharing my poems with him over a bulletin board service via our personal computers. Through time we became good friends.

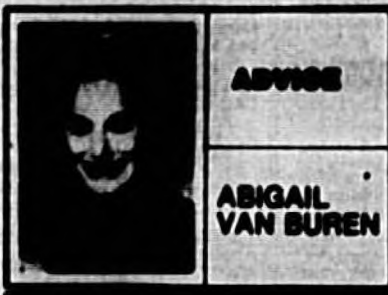

Unknown to me, he took the following verse of mine, had it printed in "Queen's English" and beautifully framed, and presented it to me as a gift. For no particular reason. That was a turning point in my life and I've never been the same since.

I have just recently completed my first poetry and verse manuscript and am hopeful it may be published someday. Bernie's gift, titled "Lessons You Learned," now has its own special place on my wall and is a daily reminder of the "random acts of kindness" that inspired me originally to write it.

I am sharing it with you in the hope that it will help people along life's journey either to recognize their own gifts or help someone else along their way. If you print it, I thank you. If you cannot, I understand you cannot print every letter you receive. I will continue to faithfully read your column because you so often touch so many hearts, and have often touched mine.

MARLENE GERBA, MILWAUKIE, ORE.

DEAR MARLENE AND DEAR READERS: Unfortunately, I am unable to publish all of the letters or the lovely poems I receive. However, this has moved me so deeply that I am compelled to share it. Read on:

ADVISE

LESSONS YOU LEARNED

by Marlene Gerba

For every petal you pluck from a daisy,
You're granted one measure of love.

For every rainbow you find with two ends,
I wish you two stars from above.

For every tear you brush from a cheek,

I promise you kindness will follow.

Wherever you walk, under rainbows or stars,
Over daisies, or down lonely hollow.

For every child you play with and talk to,
I grant you one heart full of laughter.

For every smile you place on a face,
I promise you peace ever after.

If you think "I" am giving you precious gifts,
Look close at yourself and your deeds.

The gifts you earned were the lessons you learned
While answering other folk's needs.

CONFIDENTIAL TO 'STILL TRYING TO CATCH THE BEAST RING IN HAWAII!' IN the words of Arnold Palmer, world champion golfer, "The road to success is always under construction."

DEAR ABBY: When I became engaged, my future mother-in-law gave me a lovely diamond ring that had been in her family for three generations. I was thrilled and have cherished it. I know that it is worth several thousand dollars.

I am now divorced, and she has asked me to please return the ring. I love her very much and couldn't refuse her or fight over it, but that ring means a lot to me. I would have had the stone reset or, perhaps, passed it down to my children.

What is the right thing to do?

DOUBLY BROKENHEARTED: Since your former mother-in-law has asked you to return this family heirloom that has been in the family for three generations, the "right" thing to do would be to return it.

Is disease sexually transmitted?

DEAR DR. GOTT: My wife and I separated and live in different cities. Nevertheless, she visits me about once a month. At these times, we have relations.

PETER GOTT, M.D.

She recently told me that she has a vaginal infection called trichomoniasis. She said that it "just developed" and that I should be treated, too. However, I've read that it is sexually transmitted. Does this mean that my wife is sexually active with some other man?

DEAR READER: Possibly. Or she may have contracted the infection from you, if you have other partners.

Trichomoniasis is a microorganism that is spread by sexual contact. In women, it usually causes a frothy vaginal discharge with marked genital discomfort. Infected men may have no symptoms whatsoever, even though they are contagious.

In both sexes, trichomoniasis is diagnosed by a special microscopic examination of either the vaginal secretions or urine. Treatment with the anti-microbial drug Flagyl is almost always successful.

Men and women don't just "develop" trichomoniasis infection. Either you or your wife got it from someone else. I'll leave the social implications of this fact for you both to work out, but I agree that you should probably be treated as well. Ask your doctor about this. Fortunately, trichomoniasis is not a serious health hazard, but it can be uncomfortable, so it should be eradicated.

To give you more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Vaginal Infections and Disorders." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10158. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: What is a ganglion? Is surgery the only cure?

DEAR READER: A ganglion is simply a harmless cyst that commonly grows from tissues, such as nerves and tendons. It is composed of a jelly-like material encased by a shell of gristle. No one knows why ganglions form, but in most instances they can be ignored — unless they grow rapidly or appear in a location, such as the foot, where pressure or friction can cause discomfort. Ganglions are painless, rubbery, firm lumps.

In the old days, the traditional "cure" for a ganglion was to give it an enormous whack with the family Bible. This dramatic therapy ruptured the fibrous covering and released the gelatinous interior. However, the ganglion often reappeared because the covering was not removed.

The only satisfactory treatment for a ganglion is complete removal, shell and contents together, during a simple operation under local anesthesia. But, as I mentioned, this option is usually only appropriate if the gan-gion is large (and unsightly) or causes discomfort.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I suffer from halitosis (bad breath). My dentist assures me it's not coming from my teeth. I occasionally have a sinus infection, successfully treated with antibiotics. I've had a tonsillectomy. What kind of medical specialist should

I see? DEAR READER: There are many causes of halitosis, ranging from the fermentation of food particles between the teeth to liver or kidney disease. In addition, chronic sinus infection — even when it is hidden and produces no other symptoms — can produce bad breath.

I suggest that you start with your primary-care physician. You should have a complete examination, including blood tests, a chest X-ray (for lung infection) and a CT scan of your sinuses. If these tests are normal, your doctor may choose to refer you to a gastroenterologist or an ear-nose-and-throat specialist. Most cases of halitosis can be successfully treated, once the cause is identified.

STUMPED?

WIN AT BRIDGE

Wasting a vital card

By Phillip Alder

You have three low trumps. When declarer broaches the suit, what does it mean if you play your highest trump first?

There are two traditional answers to this question. Most pairs treat it as showing the ability to take a ruff. With a void somewhere, you are hoping partner will win an early trump trick and give you that ruff. Alternatively, some play high-low in trumps to show three. (Note that this is the opposite of the normal length-showing signal, when an echo, as it is called, indicates an even number of cards.)

Against four hearts, West cashed the diamond ace before switching to a club. After winning with his queen, the declarer, Frenchman Guy Aubard, led the heart king; ace, five, seven. East thought he couldn't lose: He had a club void, so he could take a ruff, and he had three trumps. But ...

West exited with a spade to dummy's ace. Declarer called for the club ace and overruffed East's heart two with his three. Aubard cashed his two diamond tricks before ruffing a spade in the dummy. Next, the club king was ruffed by East's heart six and overruffed with South's eight. After another spade ruff in the dummy, declarer cashed the club jack. With the heart queen still to come, South had 10 tricks: one spade, one high heart, two diamonds, two clubs, two spade ruffs in the dummy and two club overruffs in hand.

Note that if East had played the heart two at trick three, the contract would have failed. South must overruff the heart six and seven with his eight and queen, which establishes West's heart four as the setting trick.

HOPE

Thursday, April 10, 1987

In the year ahead, strive to build upon relationships with friends in the business world. These contacts could help you open vistas of which you're not even aware.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Winning an argument today could cost you the loss of a friend if you handle it poorly. In a disagreement with a pal, be wise and let the person think he or she is the victor. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2.75 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1758, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10158.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) It is imperative when shopping today to be conscious of both quality and cost. Avoid any impulsive purchases. GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Today you might have to deal with someone who can be impossible to please. Knowing this in advance gives you an edge other co-workers won't have. CANCER (June 21-July 22) Without a proper understanding with co-workers today, you might end up with all the unpleasant tasks. Set the ground rules early. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Circumstances could force you to socialize with a person today you've been skillfully avoiding. Make the most of it. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) An objective you establish for yourself today isn't as difficult to achieve as you may think. Take a deep breath and dive in. LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You may have to use the soft sell in promoting a person of interest today. Others will resent it if they feel forced to comply. SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Modify your personal motives today and you will succeed. Make a point of letting others participate as well. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Try not to overreact today if a trusted ally displeases you. An outburst of anger will only make matters worse. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If your workload appears to be heavier than usual today, you may discover that most of the tasks are the responsibilities of others. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) A friend who is constantly in conflict with other friends can be converted with compassion today. PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Competitive career developments may accelerate today. If you can't handle the heat, don't hang around the kitchen. © 1987 by NEA, Inc.
