Crime in Sanford: Loved ones pay price when someone dies

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Melissa Lawrence stares blankly ahead, blinking back the tears.

Her cousin Melinda Rouse stiffens her jaw with anger. She, too, is fighting back the tears.

Reginald Lawrence, 26, was the brother of the former and the cousin of the latter.

Early Sunday morning on the streets outside a bar on West 13th Street in Sanford, Lawrence was shot in the leg. Less than an hour later, he was pronounced dead at Central Florida Regional Hospital.

"We were devastated when they told us he hadn't made it," Lawrence said of her brother. "We don't know how to deal with it yet."

The men in the family have been especially affected by the shooting. Lawrence and Rouse said. One brother spent Sunday driving around trying to deal with the sudden loss and "trying to find Reginald." Another brother cries constantly, they said.

His teen-age nephews are dealing with the loss tearfully and with great pain.

He was no saint, his family says, but he was not the terrible person that police have portrayed to the media.

"It doesn't matter what we say about him," Rouse said. "People look at what has been said and they see a bad man. They don't see the Reggie we knew."

Reginald Lawrence had been in jail during his lifetime. He "lived and died for the streets" a few years ago, his sister said, but since his last release from prison over a year ago, he has "turned himself around."

Even at the time when he was living a rougher life with the people on the street, he

Melinda Rouse writes: We will miss you Reginald, but your family has comfort in knowing that you are in a better place now. It was not the hand of man that took you away from us, but God made you an offer that you could not refuse, and no one can take that fact from us.
I love you sweet cousin, we all did. Go on now and take your rest.
It was hard to part with one so dear. We little thought your time was near. Farewell dear one your life is past. Our love for you till end will last.

The Lawrence, Rouse, Maner, Hooks, Knight families.

was always very devoted to his family, they said.

"He had his own son (three and a half years ago) that he cared for very beautifully," Lawrence said. "And I am a single mom with one son. He was helping me with raising my son up right. He was teaching him right from wrong."

Reginald Lawrence knew the importance of an education and of living right, his family said. Though he didn't always do those things himself, he tried to impart that knowledge on the young men in the family.

Those young men are all in school or, the older ones, are working and are married, his sister said. Much of the credit goes to their upbringing and to the devotion Reginald had to the family.

The investigation is continuing into the murder of Reginald Lawrence. The autopsy

FHP nabs thousands of traffic violators

Airport ordered to pay religious group

FORT LAUDERDALE — The Fort Lauderdale-Hollywood International Airport must pay $48,000 to a religious group, Jews for Jesus, that sued when airport officials kept it from distributing literature.

A federal judge approved the settlement Thursday. The airport also must change its policy, which required a lengthy waiting period and other criteria before groups could solicit on airport property.

"After several months of litigation, the airport policy has now come in line with the constitutional rights to free speech," said the attorney for the evangelical group, Matt D. Staver.

Under the proposed policy, solicitors will receive a badge immediately and be allowed to solicit in five "First Amendment" zones spread throughout the airport's three terminals.

Surgeon guilty of Medicare fraud

MIAMI — A cosmetic surgeon who is in prison for allowing a patient to bleed to death during a penile enlargement surgery has been found guilty of Medicare fraud.

Ricardo Samitier Jr., 39, was sentenced to 28 months in federal prison Thursday, but the sentence will run concurrently with a five-year sentence he got last year on a manslaughter conviction in the surgery case.

Samitier had pleaded guilty last October to two counts of conspiring to commit Medicare fraud. A 1993 indictment said Samitier and several unnamed companies with whom he did business submitted bogus claims between 1987-89.

U.S. District Judge Wilkie Ferguson ordered Samitier to pay restitution of $441,000 to the federal government.

Florida slaying suspect jailed

NEW PHILADELPHIA, Ohio — A man appearing in court in New Philadelphia on a robbery charge is a suspect in a slaying 16 years ago in Gainesville, Fla.

James Martin, 39, was arrested Wednesday night in Stark County. He is accused of trying to steal merchandise at a mall, then hitting a security guard and stealing a car, officer Larry Hootman said.

An arrest warrant was issued for Martin in December in connection with a 1979 fatal shooting during a burglary in Gainesville.

He was to appear in court today.

2 killed in plane crash

LILLIAN — Authorities are resorting to dental records to try to identify two people killed in the crash of a small plane near the Florida border.

The plane crashed and burned in a field on the Alabama coast Wednesday evening. Witnesses said it appeared to have crashed nose first.

Huey Mack Jr., chief investigator for the Baldwin County Sheriff's Department, said the two-seater airplane, which may have been built from a kit, went down near here Wednesday evening. It apparently took off from a small airfield near Pensacola, Fla.

Bobby Carlisle of Lillian said his son noticed the plane spinning and making quick flips in the air. "He thought it was doing tricks," said Carlisle. "It was spitting and sputtering like it was running out of gas."

Law library needs upgrading

ST. PETERSBURG — Graduates of Stetson University College of Law could be banned from taking the bar exam and from practicing law in many states if it doesn't upgrade its library.

The American Bar Association has said the school will lose its ABA accreditation unless the school builds a larger library with conference rooms and upgraded technology.

The improvements would cost about $8 million. The college says it is raising money for the project.

"We're very early in the process," Elizabeth Moody, Law College dean, said Wednesday.

Official charged with sexual battery

CALLAHAN — A Callahan town councilman was arrested on a child molestation charge after an 8-year-old girl claimed he paid her $40 to let him touch her.

Calvin Gary Barton, 54, was charged with capital sexual battery and is being held in the Nassau County Jail without bond pending his next court date May 16.

Capt. Jerry Vaughn said the girl's stepmother called police April 8 to report the suspected molestation.

The woman told police she found the child with $40, and that the girl said Barton, a neighbor, had given her the money for letting him touch certain parts of her body, Vaughn said.

Barton is a self-employed handyman and former member of the town's volunteer fire department.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Sentencing guidelines

Senate passes tougher sentencing rules

By ADAM YEOMANS
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Criminals who may have avoided prison under the state's current sentencing guidelines would face time behind bars under legislation the Senate passed Thursday.

The bill aims to reverse changes that took effect last year in the oft-criticized guidelines that allowed home burglars and other criminals to avoid state prison.

It's a major part of the Senate's get-tough-on-crime agenda this session to punish felons and change the state's crime-tarnished image.

The legislation (CS-SB 172) also is one of the most expensive pieces of the Senate's plan. It has an estimated price tag of a half-billion dollars in five years to house an additional 25,000 criminals.

"Sentencing guidelines is a very complicated subject," Senate Criminal Justice Chairman Locke Burt said before the bill passed unanimously. "What we're trying to do is simply get us back where we were in 1983."

The bill would increase the points used to calculate the sentences for dozens of offenses, including many violent and capital crimes. It also adds five offenses to the guidelines, including displaying a gun within 1,000 feet of a school, fleeing or attempting to flee a police officer and aggravated stalking.

Some lawmakers said the legislation did not go far enough and believed the guidelines should be abolished. The guidelines were enacted in 1983 to provide for uniform sentencing statewide.

Senators rejected an amendment by Senate Democratic Leader Ken Jenne that would have repealed the guidelines in five years and given the sentencing power back to judges.

"You have to look at what the sentencing guidelines have become," said Jenne, D-Fort Lauderdale. "They have become a management tool, not a tool to punish wrongdoers in this state."

Sen. Rick Dantzler, D-Winter Haven, said he voted for the sentencing guidelines more than 10 years ago when supporters argued sentencing lengths varied around the state, blacks were more often sentenced to prison than whites and lawmakers had little control over the costs.

"I think we made a mistake," said Dantzler. "I don't know why we take away the ability of our judges to think. We try to turn them into robots. We shouldn't try to sentence from Tallahassee." Burt, R-Ormond Beach, said the changes in sentencing guidelines were part of the broader criminal justice package. He said any effort to repeal the guidelines would kill the measure this session.

"This discussion is not about the philosophy of sentencing guidelines and whether you support them or not. This is about the legislative process," said Burt.

The Senate attached another major crime proposal to the sentencing guidelines legislation to put pressure on the House, where a guidelines bill bogged down this week.

Included in the Senate bill is the "Officer Evelyn Gort Career Criminal Act," named after a slain Dade County police officer.

The Gort legislation imposes mandatory prison terms on those felons convicted of a fourth violent offense who have already served one stint in prison. The House and Senate already have passed slightly different versions.

By attaching it to the sentencing guidelines legislation, the Senate hopes to force the House to pass the package.

Gort became a symbol for tougher sentencing after she was killed by an armed robber with a lengthy record while she was off duty in 1993.

Health care director coming under fire

By Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Two Tampa lawmakers are criticizing the way the director of the Agency for Health Care Administration handled the patient-care mistakes case at University Community Hospital.

Sen. John Grant, R-Tampa, wants to make Doug Cook's job subject to Senate confirmation because of what he called Cook's "arbitrary actions" in penalizing the hospital.

Cook is appointed by the governor but is not required to undergo Senate scrutiny. Grant has tacked amendments onto two bills to change that, and

Rep. Victor Crist, R-Temple Terrace, whose district includes the hospital, said he would sponsor a similar amendment in the House if Grant asked.

Cook banned elective surgeries for 11 days and fined the hospital $341,000 after a series of patient-care errors which included the wrong-foot amputation of a diabetic and the death of a patient mistakenly removed from his ventilator.

While the ban was in place, hundreds of residents and employees rallied in support of the hospital, saying the moratorium was unfair and that the hospital had complied with new safety standards mandated by state and federal regulators. Some 200 people were bused to Tallahassee to lobby lawmakers.

"The UCH matter has just helped to amplify what can be done to the community and a community asset by the arbitrary actions of one bureaucrat," Grant said.

"Mr. Cook doesn't answer telephone calls, doesn't respond to letters. He thinks he is totally independent of the legislative process, and perhaps a confirmation hearing would be a good experience for him," Grant said.

Cook defended his actions Thursday, saying his agency acted in the interest of public safety.

"Clearly, this agency had nothing to gain by taking a tough stand at (UCH) other than to provide for the public safety and to help that very important hospital get back on the right track," Cook said.

Sen. James Hargrett, a Tampa Democrat, and Sen. Malcolm Beard, a Plant City Republican, backed Cook's handling of the matter.

The hospital was in jeopardy of losing its federal Medicaid and Medicare funding — which accounts for about one-third of its revenue — but federal regulators determined patients were no longer in danger.

A woman in Carriage Cove reported someone took a lawn mower from the family's carport.

Jail time for misdemeanors

Overcrowding awaiting trial costs thousands

By The Associated Press

MELBOURNE — A computer analysis shows 82 people awaiting trial on misdemeanor charges were held at a North Florida jail for an average of 27 days before trial. The cost to taxpayers: $82,000.

The Florida Today newspaper in Melbourne, which conducted the analysis, said the excessive number of misdemeanor offenders was exacerbating overcrowding problems at a time when both federal and state authorities have ordered the jail reduce its population.

The newspaper selected April 4 to chart how many people were being held at the Brevard County Detention Center in Sharpes, what they were charged with, and how their presence affected the jail population.

Eighty-two of the 840 were being held for charges such as not paying fines, being drunk and disorderly, battery and shoplifting. The jail has a capacity of 732. People complained of not having enough food and not having a bed, the newspaper found.

The number dropped by two-thirds last week after the paper called some officials about the situation. However, the drop was an aberration due to court scheduling, according to Chief Brevard County Judge Preston Silvernail. He said the number likely would go back up.

The sheriff blames judges for the problem; the judges blame a lack of coordination between themselves and defense attorneys. The ACLU says it's easier for all involved to keep the poorest defendants — who cannot make bond — in jail.

The situation even drew criticism from Stop Turning Out Prisoners, an organization that normally fights to keep prisoners in jail.

"It doesn't make sense for that number of misdemeanor offenders to be in the jail," said Jerry Sibol, the Brevard chapter president of STOP. "Shoplifters (and the like) should be let out to make room for more violent offenders."

Jim Hooper, secretary of the Brevard County American Civil Liberties Union, spent some time in the jail two weeks ago. He was arrested on misdemeanor charges he assaulted his 35-year-old daughter. But he posted his $2,500 bail and was released within 24 hours. Hooper noted others don't have the resources he could call on to get out.

One man's experience

SHARPES, Fla. — Patrick Collins was released from the Brevard County Detention Center after being held for more than a month on $250 bail for not paying a $213 fine.

The cost to the county: $1,465.

"There is no place to walk around here," he said during an interview from the jail this week. "The food servings are getting smaller and smaller and they've run out of mattresses, so some people are sleeping on concrete floors."

Sheriff's deputies arrested Collins on St. Patrick's Day on charges of being drunk and disorderly and resisting arrest — misdemeanors. He was released but picked up two days later for not paying the fine — also a misdemeanor.

Collins didn't have the money to post the $250 bail so he sat in jail until Thursday, a day after Brevard County Judge Lisa Kahn sentenced him to time he already had served. The judge also ordered he serve six months probation and pay $105 in court costs.

Even if Collins pays the court costs, he will have cost the county at least $1,350, and it never will collect the original $213 fine.

"And I won't be able to pay the court costs, either," he added. "I'm homeless. I don't have that kind of money."

"I can't even get anyone to post the bond, so I'll be right back in the same position 90 days from now."

Collins served 30 days last year for not paying the same fine, but the warrant for his arrest never was canceled. And because he didn't see a public defender about the case until Wednesday, he decided to plead guilty to not paying the fine, just so he could get out jail, he said.

Condemned murderer donates kidney to mom

By THERESA HUSPAREY
Associated Press Writer

DOVER, Del. — His own life due to end by lethal injection, a convicted murderer has given his mother the kidney she needs to survive.

Steven Shelton, his younger brother, Nelson, and a cousin were all sentenced to die for beating a man to death after an 18-hour drinking binge in 1992.

Nelson, who offered to donate his kidney first but was not a compatible donor, was executed in March. Steven, 29, was scheduled to die April 5, but he received a stay and appeals are pending.

Shelton's kidney was removed Thursday at Wilmington Hospital and taken to his mother, Vesta Shelton, at Thomas Jefferson University Medical Center in Philadelphia. Shelton was in fair condition today; his 63-year-old mother was stable.

Shelton's attorney, Joseph Gabay, said they have not discussed how the transplant might affect his case.

"Steven has been very enthusiastic about trying to assist his mother," Gabay said. "This has been strictly an inner-family matter and the decision to do so has been strictly based upon wanting to, in some way, alleviate his mother's condition."

His medical costs are being covered by his mother's insurance.

The transplant is not the first from a prison inmate to a relative. But officials at the Death Penalty Information Center in Washington and the United Network for Organ Sharing in Richmond, Va., knew of no other death row transplant cases.

In the 1970s, Florida death row inmate Shabaka Waglin, who was later found innocent and released, was prevented from donating a kidney to a relative, according to the American Civil Liberties Union's Capital Punishment Project in Washington.

In 1992, a Florida court denied a request from Daniel Faries, who was serving a 34-year sentence, to give him the death penalty so he could donate his organs for transplants.

Diann Rust-Tierney of the ACLU said Shelton's case points to a need to re-evaluate the death penalty. She said it shows that no matter how heinous the crime, condemned inmates are still part of "the human community."

Puppet show

Almost everyone has seen a puppet show. Characters on the stage, in full view and earshot of the audience making a performance. They aren't doing it themselves, however, they are being manipulated by someone back stage, someone who can neither be seen nor identified.

If the characters didn't need to be held on a string and moved in one direction or another, they would not be puppets. They would be considered as artists.

If their performances weren't up to standards, they would be boo'd right off the stage. On the other hand, the performances of puppets who don't quite do what is expected, are merely laughed off.

By now, readers may know where this is heading. We are talking about government.

While we have true officials who perform to the maximum of their abilities, we also have some puppets. These are government leaders who are having their strings pulled by someone back stage. Often, we don't know who these hidden people are.

Likewise, it is often difficult to determine why they want to pull the strings. To some perhaps, it's for personal and financial gain. To others, it may be almost a hobby, to see how they can control a city or county without anyone knowing who they are, and without having to become personally involved.

Later this year, as election time draws nearer, those pulling the strings will become more and more invisible. They may have their hidden candidates and push for their election or re-election, but they will stay as far as possible away from the spotlights.

By election time, voters may have a tendency to forget what has transpired. They may overlook actions taken by those who are clearly on the strings of someone offstage.

As a result, we will have more puppets elected to office.

Our suggestion: Consider elected officials and prospective candidates from the very beginning. Don't forget what they have or have not accomplished. Don't ignore the possibility that they were led by an unidentified source.

If people keep their eyes and ears open, and act accordingly when it comes time to make an election decision, we could reduce the puppets and increase the people who act for the people rather than the puppeteer.

Think about it. We believe it's important.

Some vignettes on Oklahoma City

The Sunday memorial service was remarkable. One had expected a simple and somber event. The proceedings were that, and more. There was patriotism, pluralism and Oklahoma boosterism, yet not off-key. Afterward, Americans felt stronger, not weaker.

Rev. Billy Graham is a natural resource. What presence he has. Imagine being able to tell a couple of jokes under such circumstances, bringing us down to earth.

For a while, President Clinton handled the whole matter admirably. I was touched watching him quietly singing hymns along with the choir. I loved it when he said, "Come to Oklahoma!" It is evidence that presidents are not irrelevant, notwithstanding recent punditric views to the contrary. Presidents are, however, hostages to uncontrollable events, which can make them soar like the eagles or sink like stones. Never rule a president out.

The partisan political pop sociologists of the left allowed about five minutes to pass before saying that nasty conservatives created the climate for such a horrible act. (If Newt and Rush favor less government, and Tim McVeigh favors less government, no wonder Tim blew up the federal building...) Conservatives, naturally, went ballistic over such a linkage.

The last playing of the cause-and-effect blame game was after the Los Angeles riot. Asked what precipitated it, President Bush's press secretary, Marlin Fitzwater, said, "We believe that many of the root problems that have resulted in inner-city difficulties were started in the '60s and '70s and that they have failed." The statement was widely interpreted to mean that President Johnson's "Great Society" programs caused the riot. That time, naturally, it was liberals who rocketed into orbit.

The proceedings were that, and more.

Let's stop. Everything isn't always caused by something. Often, bad people do bad things on their own. Let's blame them, not politics. Put them in prison if appropriate. And if appropriate, fry them.

I wanted to say only nice things about President Clinton. But then, speaking in Minneapolis, he began political bidding in the blame game, saying: "We hear so many loud and angry voices in America today whose sole goal seems to be to try to keep some people as paranoid as possible... They spread hate. They leave the impression that... violence is acceptable. You ought to see... the reports of some of the things that are regularly said over the airwaves in America today."

Who is saying what on the airwaves, Mr. President? The Washington Post reports that after the speech, "Senior administration aides labored to emphasize that, despite what seemed like an obvious implication, the president was not referring specifically to conservative talk radio shows."

So who's doing it? Could it be the politically correct types who preach angry separatism under the flapping banner of multi-cultural diversity? Or the folks who say we're going to starve children by increasing the funds for school lunches? Could it be Rush, who speaks regularly on the airwaves? If the president doesn't name names, he may be attacked as a practitioner of name-no-names McCarthyism.

Bob Dole speaks for himself

As if Bob Dole wasn't carrying enough baggage already, now he's got people saying he's not a real right-winger.

You know the old knocks against Dole. He's quick-tempered, they say. He's moody and mean, so mean, in the words of a former Senate colleague, that he "couldn't sell beer on a troop ship."

Now "movement" conservatives are saying Dole is an antique. He "projects a distinctly midwestern, Main Street, balance-the-books brand of small-C conservatism, the kind that was common in the Republican Party in which he came of age," wrote Gerald Seib and John Harwood in the Wall Street Journal.

The Newt Republicans are not going to like it when they discover Dole's "dirty little secret," wrote columnist Jack Germond and Jules Witcover, namely that "he believes government has a useful function to perform."

In a story about Dole's April 10 announcement of his candidacy, the Washington Times, a.k.a. the "movement" conservatives' newsletter, informed us that "not once in his speech... did he use the C-word."

It seemed to me that Dole had been saying some fairly conservative things lately, and I wondered how much red meat it takes to satiate this crowd. To check on their claims, I resorted to an old reporter's trick. You want to know where politicians stand, you have to take a look at what they're for and what they're agin. Here's some of what I came up with:

— Last fall, Dole stumped the state of Virginia in support of the extremely conservative Oliver North. During the Iran-contra scandal a few years ago, the Kansas Republican had excoriated North for selling arms to terrorists — an act, said Dole, which "runs against everything we stand for in America." Not so in 1984. Now Dole was "very proud" of Dole.

— In March, Dole vowed to repeal last year's ban on assault weapons. "Gun control is a completely ineffective approach to the lack of safety and security in our communities," he wrote in a letter to the National Rifle Association.

— On the day Dole announced his candidacy for the presidency, he signed an anti-tax pledge similar to one he had refused to endorse in his 1988 run for the White House. Before, he said, he had to reserve the option of raising taxes so he could negotiate with the Democrats to lower spending. Now that Republicans were in charge, he didn't have to worry about it.

— In a recent speech in Des Moines, Iowa, Dole blasted Hollywood, which "poisons the minds of our young people" with depictions of "casual violence and even more casual sex."

An examination of the other things Dole said on his recent five-day, 11-city, 10-state "announcement tour" offers some additional clues about his fundamental politics. Here are a few more things that Bob Dole is for:

The 10th Amendment, experience, leadership, religion, the flag, defense and prayer. As I went to press, there was a rumor going around he might be coming out foursquare in favor of vanilla ice cream. But I was unable to confirm it.

This is more of what Bob Dole is agin: The press, Washington insiders, welfare, taxes, crime, drugs and deficits. There was another rumor going around that he would soon come out in opposition to asparagus-flavored frozen yogurt. But I could not pin this one down, either.

GUEST COLUMNIST

Parents, legislators must act

I have lived in the Seminole County-Sanford area for approximately 40 years and I think it is a wonderful place to live and bring up a family. I certainly admire Martha Yancey for her activist role in many community activities and needs. She is absolutely right — we do have a big problem with crime — both in the city and the county. I do think, however, that if crime could be stopped or even controlled by the mayor, city commission, Sanford Police Department or the Seminole County Sheriff's Office, there is no question that we have the experienced, well trained, caring group of officers and commissioners to do this. They all live and/or work in this city or county.

Mrs. Yancey has stated that 3- and 4-year-old children are being made or encouraged to help drug dealers. Shame on the parents of these children who will allow this to happen! Where are the parents? The parents must take the responsibility for bringing up and controlling the activities of their children. Maybe some of the parents are dealers — if so, they should lose the right to keep these children in such an unhealthy crime-filled environment. If parents do not wake up and stop or monitor some of the less than desirable shows on television — take more of an interest in the so-called music that their children are hearing and demand a stop to the violence on television and the filthy music, then we can't expect any big changes. Parents should be held responsible for the actions of their underage children. It is time for parents to stop ending every request they make of a child or young person with the words "OK"? We are the parents. It is up to parents to set the structure for the children — not to ask their permission to initiate action. Children can only follow the example set by their parents.

It is time that we stopped excusing young people for criminal actions just because they were brought up in a single parent family or had other adversities. I know many wonderful young people who were brought up by a single parent and they are productive citizens of the community. Until parents take the responsibility of bringing up a child to love and respect God, his parents, himself, his peers and the law — there is not much future for our young people — not here or anywhere.

The budget for the Sanford Police Department is over four million dollars. If it were $4 million we could not expect the police to stop crime. There could be a policeman on every corner and there would still be crime. Policemen can only do so much and be in so many places. The Neighborhood Watch revision is certainly a good one. Officers in the Sanford Police Department and the Sheriff's Office get the finest training available and they have hours of classes to be updated periodically in order to stay certified. They are trained to handle every conceivable situation.

I recently completed the Citizens Police

JEAN METTS

Jean Metts is director of Seminole Volunteer Enterprises, which distributes food to the needy, a past president of the Sanford Women's Club and a registered nurse by profession.

Academy which is sponsored by the Seminole County Sheriff's Office. I highly recommend attending these classes to everyone. The citizens learn about every facet of law enforcement. After a few weeks of class, we were assigned to ride with a deputy if desired. There is nothing better than this hands-on experience to understand what these officers face.

These officers face life-threatening situations almost daily and the criminals simply go to jail and then walk right back out. An officer can make an arrest, the judge hears a trial, passes sentence (judges' guidelines are provided by the Legislature), and more often than not, the criminal gets a slap on the wrist, community service or a small amount of time in the county jail. We cannot put blame on the mayor, the commissioners, the police chief, the sheriff, the officers or the judge. We must blame the legislators. It is only the Legislature that can put more teeth in the laws. It is our responsibility to let our legislators know how we feel and what we expect. If it takes more prisons to keep the felons in jail to serve at least 75 percent of their sentences — then build them! These rapists, murderers and drug barons need to be removed from society. I fully support the "three times and you're out" law.

We must get involved, parental! Know where your children are and what they are doing! We cannot expect the school system to teach our children manners, responsibilities and all the learning skills necessary. Put prayer back in the schools. Be aware of how your legislators vote and what bills they support. There are two motivating factors that make any of us take action. A desire to gain something or a fear of losing something. We need parents and legislators to take some action so that law-abiding citizens have a safe community to gain — and the convicted criminals have a fear of loss — their freedom!

If citizens do not like the way the system has become — then they have a choice of voting in — or — out the candidate they feel has not lived up to their responsibilities to their community or state. Thank God we can still make a choice!

EPA to ease recycling of batteries, other products

By M. JOSEF HERBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Environmental Protection Agency wants to make it easier for people to recycle batteries, battery powered tools and toys, thermometers with mercury and even farm equipment that contains some pesticides. The agency on Thursday announced more flexible regulations governing common products that may contain some toxic materials. The new rules will keep more of the items out of landfills or off the side of roads where they may be dumped illegally, officials said. "It's common sense to give Americans, and American businesses, easy ways to recycle products that may pose hazards in our homes and in our environment," said EPA Administrator Carol Browner. Because of the toxic materials in such widely used items as batteries or consumer goods powered by batteries, the EPA has required special procedures to be followed during handling. Retailers and business groups have argued the strict rules have inhibited recycling efforts.

The revised regulations simplify packaging and handling requirements for such items when they are recycled. They also reduce the amount of paperwork required by businesses when large quantities are handled as part of the recycling process.

States also will be given greater flexibility in how to regulate such recycling programs. The agency said the new rules are designed to make it easier for retailers to provide convenient collection centers in retail outlets where consumers can return the commonly used items that are of concern to the EPA because they contain small amounts of toxic material. Browner said by making recycling programs more consumer friendly, fewer of the products containing batteries or other toxic chemicals will be sent to landfills or disposed of improperly or illegally.

"For the first time Americans will be able to voluntarily recycle common toxic items such as batteries and pesticides," said the EPA in a statement. "The wastes still must be properly recycled or treated before disposal."

The EPA has been under pressure both from Congress and the White House to make regulations more flexible and less burdensome. The House already has approved a string of bills aimed at curbing federal regulations, arguing too many rules are overly intrusive and expensive.

The agency in recent months has taken a number of steps aimed at giving businesses and state and local officials greater leeway in complying with federal environmental regulations.

Browner has said she intends to pursue a "common sense" approach to regulations, but has insisted that overall environmental standards and protection would not be weakened.

In a related action, the EPA said that it will hold public hearings over the next six weeks in three cities to identify ways to improve and simplify industry compliance with both toxic and solid waste regulations.

Some of the changes would require legislation, officials said. The meetings are scheduled for Chicago, Houston and Arlington, Va.

Senate debates medical malpractice proposals

By MARGY GORDON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Punitive damage awards against doctors would be limited and some obstetricians would receive special protection under proposals being considered by the Senate in its debate on product liability laws.

The lawmakers on Thursday weighed extending a proposed cap on punitive damages to health care providers. An amendment by Sens. Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., and Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn., would establish a uniform, nationwide standard of medical malpractice law.

The amendment would limit punitive damage awards in malpractice cases to three times the amount of economic damages, or $250,000, whichever is greater. It also would limit attorneys' contingency fees to one-third of the first $150,000 awarded to clients and one-quarter of any award over $150,000.

The debate came a day after a Supreme Court ruling that could open medical malpractice caps to challenge if they are enacted, because they are traditionally considered an area of state law rather than interstate commerce. In a far-reaching decision, a divided high court struck down a federal law banning gun possession within 1,000 feet of schools, saying the states — not Congress — have the authority to enact such criminal laws.

Caps on punitive damages in product liability cases, on the other hand, probably would not be challenged because manufactured products tend to move in interstate commerce.

The product liability measure, proposed by a bipartisan team of senators led by Sens. Slade Gorton, R-Wash., and Jay Rockefeller, D-W.Va., also would impose a cap on punitive damage awards of $250,000 or three times economic damages, whichever is greater.

The bill is expected to take as long as two weeks to come to a final vote. The Senate scheduled no roll call votes on amendments before Tuesday.

Congress can enact laws under its power to regulate interstate commerce only to police activity that substantially affects such commerce, Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist wrote in the gun-free school zones decision. The ruling seeks to preserve a distinction "between what is truly national and what is truly local," he said.

The 5-4 decision throwing out the 1990 Gun-Free School Zones Act stood in sharp contrast to a longstanding court trend of deference to congressional power to regulate interstate commerce.

The medical malpractice amendment is missing the one element the American Medical Association calls essential: a $250,000 cap on awards for patients' pain and suffering. The AMA, which helped engineer a last-minute, late-night vote for such a cap in the House last month, has been pushing hard to find backers for it in the Senate.

Drivers

said from Tallahassee earlier this week. Speeders, intoxicated drivers and other traffic violations are being caught as well.

Since the program began during the Easter holiday weekend, 749 uninsured motorists have been cited by state troopers. Over 290 FHP Auxiliary and Reserve officers have volunteered their time to work alongside regular troopers during the intensive enforcement operation.

In Seminole County, a driver ticketed for going 10 miles over the speed limit can expect to pay over $100 to the court clerk's traffic division. "Our best ticket is $374," said Susan Aguirre, supervisor of the traffic division. "On average, people spend $111.50 for a speeding ticket, which is for going 10 miles over the speed limit."

Seminole County has not passed a $12.50 surcharge allowed by statute but includes court costs by administrative order in the bottom line fee.

"I think Orange and Volusia counties have the surcharge," Aguirre said, "but our county has not passed the required ordinance." It is too early to tell how many tickets in Operation Safe Journey have been issued in Seminole County, Aguirre said.

High risk drivers, including those driving recklessly or under the influence of alcohol or drugs are being targeted along with those violating license, registration and insurance laws.

The enforcement totals for the period April 14-23 are:

- 18 DUI sobriety checkpoints conducted resulting in 86 arrests
  - 289 DUI arrests at other locations
  - 749 uninsured motorist arrests
  - 1,379 unlicensed or suspended drivers arrested
  - 858 improper vehicle registration arrests
  - 257 truck enforcement program arrests
  - 16,517 other citations for various traffic offenses
  - 6,402 written warnings for various traffic offenses
  - 5,509 faulty equipment notices issued
- Operation Safe Journey will continue through the Memorial Day holiday.

the last few months," said Ed McDonough, public information officer for the Seminole County sheriff's office.

On Thursday, Eriksen, 19, of 1380 Corte Nueva in Casselberry, was arrested for impersonating a police officer and with stopping motorists.

According to McDonough, the man told deputies he had stopped a variety of motorists around the county over a six month period, telling them they were being arrested for reckless driving. He had them walk to his truck where he handcuffed them and demanded $50 in exchange for not writing them a ticket or taking them to jail, McDonough said.

Each of his victims paid, he reported. Eriksen, who was a pizza delivery man, had a green flashing light, a siren control box and a pair of handcuffs in his truck at the time of his arrest, officers reported.

McDonough said Eriksen's truck was also seized as evidence.

According to the arrest report, Eriksen never displayed any identification, nor did he have a badge. "He didn't tell anyone he was with any particular (police) agency," McDonough reported. "Apparently no one asked him for any identification."

Eriksen is 6'5" tall and weighs 320 pounds. He told deputies he does not know the names of any of the people he stopped.

McDonough said he was caught after a young man, who was apparently a school mate of Eriksen's at Lake Brantley High School called to report an incident in which he was stopped by Eriksen.

Deputies found Eriksen and arrested him. He is being held at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where he is expected to make his first appearance in court this afternoon. Bond has been set at $2,000.

Deputies are continuing to look for others who were stopped by Eriksen. Those who have encountered him are being asked to call the sheriff's office at 330-8650.

Those who call, he said, will not be charged with reckless driving.

Officials: Heroin use increasing in many areas

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Heroin sales are reported to be picking up, attracting younger users with prices in some areas as low as $3 a bag, the government's anti-drug office reports.

"Heroin of high purity continues to be a major story in many areas of the country with use in the Northeast and South having stabilized at a high level or with increasing use," Lee P. Brown, director of the White House Office on National Drug Control Policy, said Thursday.

Brown's quarterly report on national trends in drug abuse also said that heroin is attracting younger users and that cocaine and marijuana are readily available across the country.

While older users still dominate the heroin market, researchers in New York, Colorado, New Jersey, Connecticut, California and Georgia interviewed by Brown's office said that younger users are increasing.

Police in New York, Seattle and Washington reported similar trends, but treatment providers said the average heroin user they see remains essentially the same: over 30 years old and male.

"Street sales of heroin are reported as brisk, with areas like Connecticut reporting as many as seven or eight sellers on a single street corner," according to the report.

The $10 to $20 bag is the favored unit of distribution. New York and Delaware reported lower-price units, $3 to $5 per bag, while Los Angeles reported bags selling for $20 to $40.

"In Atlanta and other areas where heroin is becoming increasingly popular, crack and cocaine dealers are changing their product lines completely — getting out of cocaine and into heroin," the report said. It said some crack users in the Northeast are switching to snorting heroin because it is cheaper, more plentiful and carries less of a stigma than crack.

Maryland police also reported that crack dealers were switching products.

Another report found that users spent $49 billion on illicit drugs in 1993, down from $64 billion in 1988. That decrease largely reflected dropping prices, the report said.

America's MIA hunters: 20 years of failure

By DENNIS D. GRAY
Associated Press Writer

BANGKOK, Thailand — They raised and spent millions, accused governments of lying and staged bravura raids into other countries. With the help of Hollywood they even produced a new, macho American hero.

But after two decades, America's MIA hunters have failed in their avowed mission: to bring back live U.S. servicemen they claimed were being held prisoner in communist Indochina.

Some have hung up their jungle boots and retired, but diehards remain. Former U.S. Rep. Billy Hendon insisted in March that he had "irrefutable evidence" that American prisoners of war were still alive 20 years after the wars in Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos ended.

The MIA search has brought out a colorful cast of characters — ex-warriors, well-meaning patriots, bar stool commandos and local swindlers preying on the anguish of those who lost loved ones in the wars.

Among the American searchers:
— James "Bo" Gritz, Vietnam War veteran who led unsuccessful forays into Laos in search of live Americans in the mid-1980s and later tried to run for U.S. president. Among his backers were H. Ross Perot and Clint Eastwood. "It is time for the POWs to come home. It just needs to be finished and if I and my people don't do it, I don't know anyone in Washington who will," he once said.

— Jack E. Bailey, a veteran fighter pilot who scoured the South China Sea to save fleeing Vietnamese boat people and question them for information about American servicemen listed as missing. Bailey gave up "Operation Rescue" when funds from private backers dried up and debt forced him to abandon his ship in Thailand with an unpaid, angry crew.

— Hendon, a North Carolina Republican whose group in 1988 floated plastic bags across the Mekong River boundary between Thailand and Laos. The bags contained dollar bills stamped with an offer: $2.4 million to anybody who produced a live American POW. Children on the Thai side promptly grabbed some of the bags. No POWs were produced.

Despite such failures, individuals and private organizations still pursue the MIA-POW issue, many with passion.

"Private efforts can be very constructive as long as they are not based on unfounded claims, wishful thinking or illegal activities," said Ann Mills Griffiths, executive director of the National League of Families, an MIA group founded in 1970.

In a telephone interview, Ms. Griffiths said private searches escalated because of public frustration over the U.S. government's inability to resolve the fate of the 2,207 MIAs.

More radical groups have heaped abuse on the U.S. and Vietnamese governments. They claim both cover up information about live Americans and prevent MIA activists from going into Indochina to uncover the truth.

Vietnam maintains that all POWs were repatriated after the Paris Peace Accords were signed in 1973 ending direct U.S. military involvement in the Vietnam War.

Although a U.S. congressional committee declared in 1976 that all the MIAs had died, Washington has changed its stance in recent years, saying it operates on the assumption that some may still be alive. Critics say the new stance was simply to appease MIA groups and brought no real change to U.S. policy.

U.S. government and military officials have generally been displeased — sometimes outraged — with the MIA hunters, saying their clandestine raids and other actions undermined official cooperation from the nations of Indochina.

Rewards like Hendon's also spawned a grisly "bone business," with local bounty hunters tampering with MIA sites to dig up remains. Swindlers faked dog tags, documents, photographs and videos, including one in which a Russian seaman was hired to play the starring role of a "live American." Some people robbed graves of Asians for skeletal remains.

Such material was then offered for sale to MIA groups or families in the United States.

"There's been a great deal of exploitation and that's tragic," said Ms. Griffiths.

Yet the faith of many remains unshaken that American prisoners remain in Indochina and they strongly support groups that keep the issue alive. In 1989, for instance, people donated nearly $4 million to four of the major MIA organizations, including Operation Rescue and the National League of Families.

Just in time for new season, baseball skill explained

By PAUL REGER
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON — The bat cracks and an outfielder races across the grass until ball and glove arrive at the same place, at the same time, and a fly ball is caught. It may be routine in baseball, but scientists have long wondered how people are able to perform the feat.

Researchers from Ohio's Kent State University and from NASA's Ames Research Center at Moffett Field, Calif., reported today they have found the answer.

The scientists, in a study published in the Journal Science, say fielders move to the exact point where a fly ball will land by running along a curving route that gives them the optical impression that the ball is following a straight line.

Michael K. McBeath and Dennis M. Shaffer of Kent State and Mary K. Kaiser of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said a fielder runs at varying speeds and changes directions to maintain the sense that the ball is traveling straight.

To test their theory, the researchers had students track fly balls with video cameras. By analyzing the pictures, the scientists confirmed that the students tended to run curving paths, with changing speeds. "If you're running along a path that doesn't allow the ball to curve down, then in a sense you're guaranteed to catch it," McBeath said in Science.

Well, maybe not always, he added.

"Most of the errors that people tend to make are not that they can't get to the right place, but that the ball bounces out of their mitt or they close their eyes," said McBeath.

But, then, that's another problem.

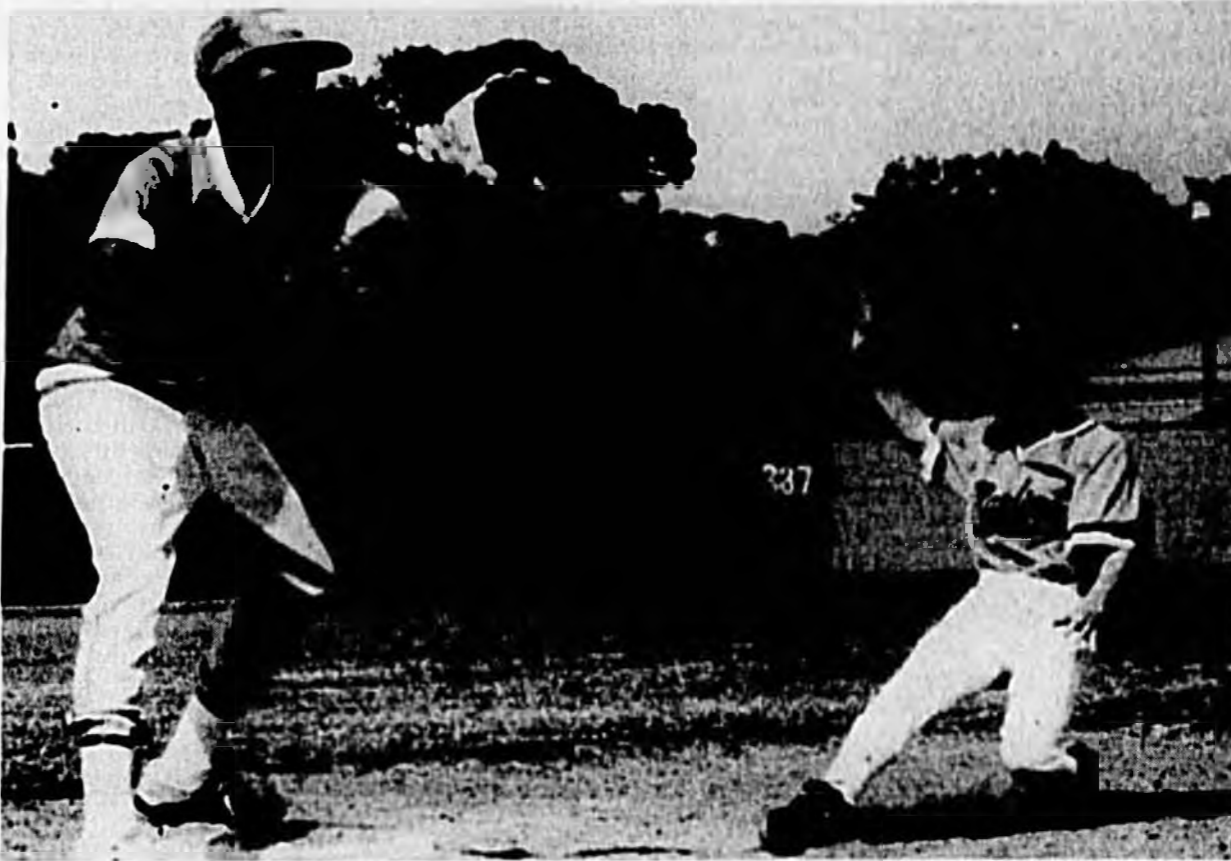

Outfielders know instinctively that if they follow this system they eventually will come in contact with the ball, the researchers said. But the instinct does not say exactly where the ball will come down.

"This explains why fielders run into walls chasing uncatchable fly balls and why they do not rush ahead to the ball destination point, choosing instead to catch the ball while running," the researchers wrote.

It also explains why ballplayers have more difficulty catching balls hit directly at them. Players prefer to step to one side to get a look at the curving path of the ball's trajectory. This gives a more precise view of the flight path than trying to judge the ball's speed as it approaches directly, the researchers said.

Science, which published the study, is the journal of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Ancient toolmakers Proof found of early toolmaking in Africa

By PAUL REGER
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON — Stone Age humans first learned to make tools in Africa more than 80,000 years ago and not, as widely believed, in Europe many thousands of years later, researchers reported today.

Allison S. Brooks, a George Washington University archaeologist, said that bone tools with barbed points and blades dug up from an ancient lakeshore in Zaire predate similar tools found in Europe from some 60,000 years later. This proves that human toolmaking began in Africa, not in Europe, she said.

"The old idea that there were humans in Africa who looked modern, but who didn't behave like modern people until they got to Europe ... is not correct," said Brooks.

She added: "The finding shows that early humans in Africa invented sophisticated toolmaking long before their European counterparts. Barbed points like these appeared in Europe only 14,000 years ago."

Brooks and her husband, John E. Yellen of the National Science Foundation, along with researchers from eight other institutions, are co-authors of studies on the tools published today in the academic journal Science.

The old tools were found during years of excavation at seven sites in Semliki River valley on the border between Zaire and Uganda in central Africa.

Included are double-pointed blades with carved barbs and single points with ridges that could have been used for attachment to spear shafts. All of the bone tools probably were carved from the ribs of large mammals that lived in the area, the scientists said.

Yellen said the researchers were so concerned about the accuracy of dating the discoveries that the tools were subjected to four different age-dating techniques. The age estimates ranged from just under 80,000 to more than 170,000 years and Brooks, for convenience, referred to the ages as "more than 80,000 years."

Steve Kuhn, an anthropologist at the University of Arizona and a specialist in ancient tools, said the African implements came from "much earlier than any of us expected. It makes us rethink some ideas" about how early technology developed.

"It upsets a lot of simple models about technology

Unfairly blamed?

Kimmmel family wants Pearl Harbor record set straight

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The family of Rear Adm. Husband E. Kimmel says it's time to set the record straight about the man who took the blame for the terrible American defeat at Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941.

One after another, the sons and grandsons of Kimmel on Thursday told senior Pentagon officials and Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., that Washington made Kimmel the scapegoat for the debacle to hide its own failure to anticipate the Japanese surprise attack.

"I'm sick and tired of hearing that the people of Pearl Harbor were not alert," said retired Adm. Thomas K. Kimmel, the late admiral's son.

The family, backed by historians and numerous retired Navy officers, is demanding that Kimmel, then commander in chief of the U.S. Pacific Fleet, and Lt. Gen. Walter C. Short, then commanding general of the Army in Hawaii, both be restored to their full ranks.

A presidentially appointed commission headed by Justice Owen J. Roberts in 1942 concluded that the two were guilty of dereliction of duty and forced their retirement. A Navy Board of Inquiry in 1944 and a congressional commission in 1948 reversed that ruling, but still maintained Kimmel guilty of mistakes.

Kimmel is blamed for not carrying out reconnaissance flights that might have detected the approaching Japanese fleet, and for taking almost his entire fleet into the harbor, where it was vulnerable to attack, despite warnings that war was imminent.

The Japanese attack killed 2,403 people, sank or damaged 18 warships, destroyed 188 planes and drew the United States into World War II.

Kimmel's supporters say the Pentagon left Kimmel without adequate equipment to defend the islands, and failed to inform him of decoded messages from the Japanese that suggested they were preparing to attack Hawaii. Some historians have suggested that President Franklin Roosevelt deliberately allowed the attack to go forward as a way of taking the United States into the war.

"At no time has the military shown any genuine interest in finding the truth. Instead you have perpetuated the largest cover-up in U.S. history," claimed grandson Manning M. Kimmel IV, the owner of a Rock Hill, S.C., radio station.

Attorney Edward Hanly, who represented Kimmel at the 1944 Navy inquiry, said Kimmel "should not be a hostage to the reputation of Gen. (George) Marshall or President Roosevelt." The admiral died in 1968 after years of trying to clear his name.

Also appearing on Kimmel's behalf were former Joint Chiefs of Staff Chairman Adm. Thomas Moorer; former chief of Naval Operations Adm. James Holloway III; British author John Costello, who wrote "Days of Infamy"; and Tony DeLorenzo of the Pearl Harbor Survivors Association.

Kimmel "must have been an enormously noble person" to command such loyalty, said

Deputy Defense Secretary John Deutch, who represented the Pentagon with Navy Secretary John Dalton.

Deutch said there's no question that Kimmel was a patriot, and he pledged to review the case "with an open mind without prejudice."

But the Navy's general counsel, Steven S. Honigman, repeated the reasons that the Navy has rejected previous requests to exonerate Kimmel. There is no historical evidence of a conspiracy to withhold information, and both Kimmel and Short made numerous errors of judgment in preparing their forces for hostilities, he said.

Honigman added that there is the issue of finality. "It is for history and not the government to render that decision."

Leaking gas line explodes, kills over 100 people

By SANG-HUN CHOE
Associated Press Writer

TAEGU, South Korea — A leaking underground gas line exploded during morning rush hour today, killing at least 103 people, including dozens of children on their way to school.

Rescue workers said at least 160 people were injured, many seriously, and other people were still trapped under debris from a subway under construction.

The explosion occurred under a well-traveled road in an area that had been excavated for the subway and covered with 600-pound metal plates, which went flying into the air like dominoes, flattening cars and buses.

Officials said 56 of the dead were students in their early teens from the seven middle schools in the vicinity.

"It was like a nuclear bomb exploding," said Kim Dong-duk, a high school student. He arrived early for school, only to watch from across a street as the blast flung vehicles filled with classmates into the air.

At the nearby Song Nam Middle School, 38 students were dead and a dozen more were missing. Students sobbed as teachers slowly read roll call and the blackboard filled up with the names of absent classmates, said Song In-woo, a ninth-grader.

Parents rushed to the school, and their cries of grief filled the schoolyard, he added.

Police said a spark from the subway construction site ignited gas escaping from a broken pipe, causing the blast. As many as 100 cars and buses were engulfed in flames. Some tumbled more than 30 feet into the exposed pit.

"I heard a loud boom, and then was thrown into the air," said subway construction worker Suh Man-kyo, speaking from his hospital bed. "When I regained consciousness, my co-workers were crying out for help. Many were pinned under beams," which were thrown as high as a 15-story building.

Taegu, a provincial capital of 2.2 million people about 140 miles south of Seoul, is the country's third-largest city. The subway — Taegu's first — was near completion after more than three years of work.

The national news agency Yonhap, reporting that construction workers were using excavators near the gas line, suggested workers may have accidentally damaged the line.

Some 2,500 soldiers, police, firefighters and volunteers worked desperately to find survivors. Huge cranes were used to lift the beams. Two helicopters, along with dozens of ambulances, ferried the injured to nearby hospitals, where officials put out an urgent call for volunteers to donate blood.

"There are torn limbs, blood everywhere," said Choi Hong, one of the rescue workers. "A lot of the people down there are kids, kids who were crushed to death."

Passers-by cried and hugged as rescue workers carried out bloodied, unconscious victims from the construction site. Rescue efforts were being hindered by a broken water main that officials feared could drown some survivors.

Cars were mangled and crushed like paper cups.

Bloodied clothes and schoolbags were scattered helter-skelter.

Several buildings were gutted, and a dozen more were blackened by the explosion, which created a column of fire 150 feet tall, witnesses said. Windows were broken up to 2 1/2 miles away.

"There was a tower of fire rising out from underground," said Choe Byong-kil, who had been working at his nearby bookshop when the blast knocked him unconscious.

South Korean President Kim Young-sam ordered all government offices to mobilize to save as many lives as possible, and ordered safety checks of gas pipes in other large cities.

Prime Minister Lee Hong-ko, visiting the site, expressed heartfelt condolences to the victims and their families.

But an opposition party blamed the government for the accident, calling it evidence of incompetence.

Today's explosion was the second major blast in South Korea in four months.

Last December, 12 people were killed and dozens more injured when a gas holding tank exploded in Seoul. Thirteen other, smaller explosions were reported last year.

Gas accidents have become more frequent in recent years, as more and more homes receive gas through underground pipes. Previously, customers bought gas in huge tanks.

Critics say the government gas monopoly has haphazardly added more pipes, rushing to expand its network at the expense of safety.

Man acquitted again in rape case

MONTREAL — In a case that has outraged many Canadians, a 72-year-old Canadian man has been acquitted — for the second time — of sexually assaulting a 65-year-old wheelchair-bound woman.

Henri Daviault has never denied the 1989 crime, but he has testified that he was too drunk at the time to know what he was doing.

Daviault was acquitted for the second time Thursday after Quebec Court Judge Gerard Grouard turned down new evidence put forth by the prosecution — notes police took when they first interviewed the alleged victim.

The judge said since the woman died in 1993 she could not be questioned on new evidence.

After Daviault's initial acquittal in April 1991, the Quebec Court of Appeal found him guilty and sentenced him to a year in jail. Daviault then took his case to the Supreme Court of Canada.

Last September, the high court ruled that drunkenness can be used as a defense for assaults and other crimes and ordered a new trial for Daviault.

The case prompted lawmakers to draft a bill to limit the use of drunkenness as a defense in rape trials. It's expected to be presented to Parliament before summer.

Russian gas pipeline repaired

MOSCOW — Natural gas began flowing again through a repaired pipeline in northern Russia today, about 30 hours after an explosion sent a pillar of flame skyward, the ITAR-Tass news agency reported.

Officials of Gazprom, the Russian gas monopoly, said a 97-foot section of pipe had been replaced, ITAR-Tass reported. No injuries were reported in the explosion, which occurred near the town of Ukhia, 600 miles northeast of Moscow.

A Japan Air Lines pilot and his passengers spotted the huge fireball as they passed over the area en route to Tokyo. One passenger called it "brighter than anything I've ever seen" and said "it was as if the sun was climbing upward."

Russian officials, who in the past have tried to cover up such accidents, played down the blast.

A Gazprom spokesman rejected the pilot's description of a fireball five miles high and said it reached no more than 60 feet.

The explosion underscored chronic problems of the aging former Soviet energy complex. Gazprom officials said the pipe was 15 years old and may have been unable to withstand the gas-flow pressure any longer.

Jet crash-lands on runway

MANCHESTER, England — A jet crash-landed at the Manchester airport today when part of its undercarriage collapsed on touchdown, but all 178 people aboard were evacuated safely.

The plane's 171 passengers and seven crew slid down the McDonnell Douglas MD-83's evacuation chutes.

Fire crews smothered the plane in foam as ambulances raced down the tarmac. But only four passengers needed to be taken to hospital — two with ankle and arm injuries, a third with chest pains and a fourth suffering from shock.

Airours, the British tour company which chartered the twin-engined plane, said the undercarriage on the left side buckled as the jet touched down shortly after midnight, forcing the left wing down onto the tarmac.

"I think we have been very, very lucky," Police Superintendent Kevin Hart told reporters, adding that there could have been a major disaster.

The plane was returning from the holiday resort of Las Palmas, on the Spanish Canary Islands off the northwest coast of Africa.

An investigation into the crash landing has been launched.

progress," Kuhn said.

However, he said the fossil record has so many gaps that it is not clear whether the tools developed in Europe descended from the design ideas of the early African craftsmen or the Europeans invented them independently.

Fragments of skeletons from what are considered to be anatomically modern humans, called Homo sapien sapien, have been found in several places in Africa and dated at more than 100,000 years old. Younger evidence of modern humans has been found in Europe and Asia. There also has been evidence of more primitive humanlike creatures found on the three continents.

It is widely accepted now that modern humans physically developed first in Africa. What is uncertain is how and when these presumed ancestors of all humans migrated to the rest of the world.

"We are a long way from being able to answer about the timing for the movement out of Africa," said Brooks.

Alleged sightings of McVeigh

OKLAHOMA CITY — One witness spotted Timothy McVeigh driving a Ryder truck toward the federal building. Another saw him minutes later, speeding away in a car just before an explosion ripped through the building.

The alleged sightings, and those of several other witnesses, are part of the mounting evidence against the only person charged so far with the deadly April 19 bombing. A manhunt continued today for a second suspect, known only as "John Doe 2" — who authorities fear may bomb again.

At a hearing Thursday, U.S. Magistrate Ronald Howland found sufficient evidence to hold McVeigh without bail pending a trial. A grand jury will be asked to return an indictment. McVeigh, 27, is charged under a federal anti-terrorism statute that carries the death penalty.

"I could not imagine a more heinous offense than this," federal prosecutor Merrick Garland told Howland.

Gentle giant recalls tragedy

OKLAHOMA CITY — As the 6-foot, 300-pound truck driver recalls rescuing a child minutes after a bomb crumbled the federal building, the gentle giant's voice cracks and his eyes fill with tears.

"There were so many children that were hurt and that were killed," said Richard McKnight, who had just finished paying a traffic ticket with his wife a few blocks from the building when the bomb exploded.

Fourteen children were among the victims killed, four are still missing and six remain hospitalized.

"Christopher was the only child I held in my arms," said McKnight. "I thank God that he's alive today. I will always, always remember Christopher and Christopher's face."

McKnight didn't know that the 44-pound boy he carried to an ambulance was 5-year-old Christopher Nguyen until he recognized him on a television newscast Thursday, recovering in Children's Hospital.

Event hasn't gripped them yet

OKLAHOMA CITY — For more than a week, they have been coming to the center of the city the world is watching — their town. At the edge of yellow police tape, they look, weep and remember.

They are pilgrims, in a sense: residents of Oklahoma City who have visited the bombing site once, twice, even a half-dozen times to gaze at twisted girders and inspect televised images in person.

"For our people, this is not real yet. The event hasn't gripped them yet," Cecil Elliott, 50, said Thursday. "So they come here and they see."

Even with their presence, downtown Oklahoma City seems in limbo more than a week after the bombing, its silence strangely loud along the five-block perimeter surrounding the ruins of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building.

Fight over Foster's confirmation

WASHINGTON — Conservative Christians who oppose abortion are attacking him on the airwaves. Abortion-rights groups are holding forth on the Internet, trying to whip up support.

The fight over Dr. Henry Foster's nomination as surgeon general is heating up again, just days before his Senate confirmation hearing, where the outcome probably hinges on the votes of three Republican senators.

At Tuesday's hearing, Foster will get his best shot at telling the American people and the Senate what he has done in his four decades as a doctor and how he would guide the nation as its leading health educator.

Former county treasurer pleads guilty

SANTA ANA, Calif. — The former Orange County treasurer, whose casino-style investments lost $1.7 billion and forced one of the nation's wealthiest counties to declare bankruptcy, has pleaded guilty to fraud.

Robert Citron looked subdued but collected Thursday as he admitted to six counts of defrauding investors. He faces up to 14 years in prison and has agreed to cooperate in the investigation of the nation's biggest municipal bankruptcy. He was released on $25,000 bail and is to remain free until investigations are completed, said Deputy District Attorney Wallace Wade. No sentencing date was set.

Citron, 70, admitted to misappropriating public funds by skimming more than $80 million in interest due to investors in the county pool and putting it in another investment pool. He also made false statements to sell securities to the schools, cities and local agencies that invested in the county, and lied to sell various bonds for the county and its schools.

Windfall to makers of brand name drugs?

WASHINGTON — The new world trade agreement may bring a $6 billion windfall to the makers of brand name drugs because of what one senator calls a loophole that blocks generic competition.

The Food and Drug Administration is under pressure from generic drug makers, consumer groups and some senators not to allow pharmaceutical companies to reap the profits.

If the brand names win, "what's going to happen is, we're seeing American consumers paying ... higher drug prices for a much longer period of time," said Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark.

At issue is whether the new world trade pact negotiated under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, or GATT, will keep low-cost, generic drugs from competing with more than 100 brand-name versions as quickly as generic companies and consumers had anticipated.

Sewage explosion

YAKIMA, Wash. — Subcontractors forgot a small but significant detail when they were finishing the city's new public works administration building last year.

The building's sewer lines were never connected to the main line that carries waste to the treatment plant. For the past year, hundreds of feet of sewer line and several manholes have been filling up with raw sewage.

Last week, there just wasn't any more room.

"The toilets all exploded," said City Manager Dick Zais.

"Right away you can tell something is wrong when stuff starts coming out of the floor drain," Public Works Director Jerry Copeland said. "It backed up in the floors of the bathrooms."

City crews pumped out the lines and discovered the sewer lines were never hooked up. The subcontractor, Ken Leingang Excavating, fixed the problem in a couple of hours, said John Haddix, a Yakima transit planner.

"Their reaction was the same as ours," Haddix said. "They couldn't believe it."

Poor grade leads to suicide

LEBANON, Tenn. — A high school senior distraught over a poor grade committed suicide, police said.

Authorities found a suicide note written on the back of Nick Allen's report card.

"He was really a good student, but there was one grade in particular which showed a substantial deduction from his grade (in the) last six weeks," Sheriff Terry Ashe said Thursday.

The 17-year-old's parents reported him missing Tuesday evening, and his body was found Wednesday at a boat ramp near his home. He killed himself with a gunshot, police said.

Moderate expansion in economy

By JAMES M. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The economy expanded at a moderate 2.8 percent annual rate in the first quarter of the year, the weakest growth since the summer of 1993 and a dramatic slowdown from the end of last year.

The Commerce Department said today that gross domestic product increased $37.9 billion at an annual rate in January through March, compared to $66.8 billion or 5.1 percent in the final three months of 1994.

The government's initial look at first quarter growth fell a little short of the expectations of analysts, who said a series of interest rate boosts by the Federal Reserve is braking the economy to a pace that can be sustained without inflation.

The Commerce Department said one measure of inflation tied to GDP rose 2.8 percent in the first quarter, up from 2.6 percent the previous three months but within a range that suggests modest price increases.

A big downward shift in the winter was in consumer spending, which accounts for about two-thirds of GDP and has been the driving force behind the four-year-old economic recovery.

Spending rose at a $12.4 billion rate in the first quarter, barely more than a fourth as rapid as the acceleration in the final three months last year. All final sales, which includes consumer spending, net exports and government purchases, climbed a mere 1.8 percent compared to 5.7 percent in the fourth quarter of 1994.

Net exports of goods and services fell in the first quarter, plunging at a $12.6 billion rate after rising $9.9 billion in the October-December quarter.

GDP, which measures the output of all goods and services produced in the United States, increased 4.1 percent for all of last year — the economy's strongest showing in a decade. The slowdown in the first quarter produced the weakest growth since the economy grew at a 2.7 percent rate in the third quarter of 1993.

Moreover, a huge buildup in business inventories — the largest increase in more than 10 years — contributed to the first quarter expansion. Analysts said that could be a drag on the economy in upcoming months if consumer spending continues to level off.

The Commerce Department

this week reported a surprising increase in factory orders for durable goods in March. But most of the gain was concentrated in productivity-enhancing purchases by businesses of computers and other electronic equipment.

Today's report said durable goods purchases for the first quarter actually fell $6.6 billion, compared to a $25.2 billion increase the previous three months.

"When you look at the details, the only sector with any strength whatsoever is capital goods," said economist Bruce Steinberg of Merrill Lynch & Co. in advance of today's report. "They will be up pretty strongly. Nothing else will."

Analysts credit the Federal Reserve for slowing growth to a more moderate pace. The central bank sought to accomplish that rare feat by a preemptive strike against inflation, raising short-term interest rates seven times since midwinter 1994.

"I think the Fed is thrilled," Steinberg said. "They have essentially succeeded in doing what they set out to do. They have lengthened the duration of the cycle."

Most analysts expected a growth rate of around 3 percent for the first three months of this year, but some had cautioned it could be higher because of the inventory buildup.

While the economy clearly has slowed, it has weathered the dollar's slide and Mexico's peso crisis that has cut into U.S. exports. Financial markets have rarely been stronger in the United States, with the Dow Jones industrial average and other indicators rising into record territory.

Other key signs pointing to a slowdown included the housing market and employment, which appear to have passed their peak.

The unemployment rate rose to 5.5 percent in March as factory jobs fell for the first time since 1993. The number of new claims for jobless benefits shot up by 8,000 last week to the highest level in nearly four months.

Analysts said if the slowing trend continues, the next move by the Federal Reserve could be a cut in interest rates. The central bank's policy-making Federal Open Market Committee meets May 23, with most analysts betting it will leave rates unchanged at least until the summer.

The panel last raised interest rates on Feb. 1.

Microsoft, Intuit vow court fight

By RORY MARSHALL
Associated Press Writer

SEATTLE — Microsoft Corp. and Intuit Inc. dug in for a court fight that could last months, perhaps years, after the government sued to block their $2 billion merger.

The Justice Department said Thursday the deal was a threat to competition. Ending its required review, the Justice Department's antitrust division said the merger "would likely lead to higher prices and lessened innovation" in the growing market for personal finance programs.

Intuit's Quicken program had a nearly 70 percent market share last year and Microsoft's Money had 22 percent.

Microsoft's chief counsel, Bill Neukom, suggested the lawsuit was a routine Justice Department move to seek judicial review.

"There is no suggestion that Microsoft and Intuit are engaged in any anticompetitive conduct," Neukom said. "There is no stigma about this transaction."

"The question is simply whether we are right or the government is right about the consequences of this transaction."

But a long court battle could give banks and financial institutions, caught with their guard down when the deal was reached last fall, time to come up with products that could rival the companies' plans in electronic commerce.

And Intuit, while promising to stay engaged to Microsoft, may catch the eye of some other company looking for an attractive partner.

As part of the deal announced last October, Microsoft agreed to give Money to rival Novell Corp. But that was not enough to assuage the Justice Department.

"Novell simply can't replace Microsoft — with its leading position in the personal computer software industry — in competing against an entrenched, dominant product like Intuit's Quicken," said Assistant Attorney General Anne Bingaman, who heads the antitrust division.

Only a small fraction of the mergers that are attempted by U.S. businesses are blocked on antitrust grounds. Rarer still are companies willing to fight the government in court.

The suit was filed in U.S. District Court in San Francisco. It was assigned to Judge William Orrick, a Nixon appointee who led the Justice Department's antitrust division from 1983 to 1985. No trial date was set.

William Baxter, who led the antitrust division in the early 1980s, said the divestiture of Money wasn't enough to calm Justice Department worries about diminished competition.

"If Money had stayed in Microsoft's hands ... it would be a significant competitor to Intuit," Baxter said. "But in the hands of Novell ... there's no reason to think that Money is going to be an effective competitor."

Cell phones interfere with pacemakers?

By ROBERT W. TROTT
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON — Two researchers are warning people with pacemakers to be careful around digital cellular telephones because they might speed up or slow down the heart-regulating devices.

While the interference is not harmful, the studies were enough to raise concern, the researchers said Thursday. There have been no reports of people with pacemakers being injured by the phones, experts said.

"If a patient asked me if it was OK to use a cellular phone, I'd have to say, 'I don't know,'" said Dr. David Hayes, director of pacemaker services at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn. "Because we can't answer the question, I'd be particularly cautious with patients who are completely pacemaker-dependent."

Hayes and Dr. Roger Carrillo, a cardiovascular surgeon at Mt. Sinai Medical Center in Miami, conducted separate studies with patients who were not dependent on their pacemakers.

Some patients have pacemakers to guard against irregular heartbeats, while others need them to continually control their heartbeats.

The researchers found no irregularities when analog cellular phones were used.

But when newer digital cellular telephones were used — especially when they were placed close to the pacemaker — the patients' electrocardiograms showed interference, "a rare slowing or speeding up of the pacemaker," Hayes said.

Many cellular telephone companies are moving into digital technology, which puts signals in the language of computers and allows data and video to be intermixed with voice calls. About 375,000 digital cell phones were sold last year in the United States, The Wall Street Journal reported.

Some European studies also have found that digital phones can disrupt pacemakers. But telephone company representatives have said that the risk of interference is small.

Carrillo used 10 models of cellular phones — both analog and digital — on 59 volunteers.

District track meets 'Noles sweep; Farmer injured

By TONY BOSCHNER
Herald Sports Editor

SANFORD — For the Seminole High School track teams, near-annual challengers for state titles, district meets are often a study in foregone conclusions, a task to be endured.

Usually, that is. The biggest danger facing the Tribe in a district meet — an injury to a key performer — struck Thursday night during the running of the boys' 4 x 100-meter relay, when Charlie Farmer suffered a hamstring pull.

Only the quick thinking of Ansel Jackson, who picked up the baton after Farmer dropped it while falling to the track, kept the situation from being a complete disaster. Jackson kept the Tribe relay from being disqualified, helping the Seminoles finish fourth in the four-team race, which is good enough to qualify the relay for next Thursday's 5A-Region II meet at Clearwater High School.

Farmer, who won the 100-meter dash in 10.83 seconds, was unable to run in the finals of the 200-meter dash. According to Seminole coach Ken Brauman, Farmer's absence will have an impact on the 4 x 400-meter relay, which will lose Derrick Swain to the 4 x 100.

"Without Charlie, I don't know if we can qualify both relays for the state meet," said Brauman.

The injury overshadowed an otherwise strong performance by the Seminole teams, which swept the team championships.

Led by double winner Carolyn Hubbard (1,600-meter run, 800-meter run), the Tribe girls qualified someone for the regional meet in every event except the 3,200-meter run.

Derriko Shaw scored in five events for the Seminole boys, winning the long jump (21 feet, 84 inches), 110-meter high hurdles (14.91), and 300-meter intermediate hurdles (39.94); placing third in the triple jump (43-11), and anchoring the Tribe's second-place 4 x 400-meter relay.

LAKE MARY — Shiona Newman and Nardia Tyrell each won two events during Thursday night's 6A-District 4 track meet at Lake Mary High School to lead the Lyman Greyhounds to the girls' team championship.

Lake Howell took the boys' title, gaining the edge in its battle with Mainland by scoring 17 points back-to-back events, the 300-meter intermediate hurdles and 800-meter run.

The top four in each event advance to the 6A-Region I meet next Thursday in Tallahassee.

Newman swept the district titles in the shot put (with a winning throw of 41 feet, 4 inches) and discus (112-9) while Tyrell won the 100-meter dash (12.5 seconds) and 200-meter dash (28.7).

GeAna Rivera won the 3,200-meter run (11:56.4) for the Greyhounds, who also won the 4 x 100-meter relay (51.2).

The Lake Howell Silver Hawks finished second to Lyman in the girls' standings on the strength of Winsome Clarke's wins in the triple jump (35-1/4) and 400-meter dash (1:01.8), Cally Howell's first in the 800-meter run (2:22.0), and victories in the 4 x 800 and 4 x 400-meter relays.

Lake Mary's Amie Bradley won both the long jump (17-4 1/2) and high jump (6-0). Ashley Naeaser of Lake Brantley was first in the 1,600-meter run (5:18.8).

Richard Gordon led Lake Howell in the 300-meter intermediate hurdles with his winning time of 41.1 while teammate Cory Frank won the 800-meter run in 2:03.3.

Lyman's Rob Evans was a double winner, finishing first in the 1,600-meter (4:29.9) and 3,200-meter (9:59.0) runs. Andy Mayer won the high jump (6-0) for the Greyhounds, who also took first in the 4 x 800-meter relay (8:18.14).

District champions for Lake Mary were Thomas Watson (long jump, 22-9) and Robert Boothe (pole vault, 13-0). Oviedo's Brian Pettaway won the triple jump (44-8 1/2).

Mildew season has arrived

At this time of year I get a lot of phone calls on mildew. Weather patterns in Florida provide high humidity for six or more months each year. During humid periods mildew is thriving outside. Spores are being produced by the zillions. Even if indoor mildew spore levels were low during dry months, spores from outside come in on our clothing and hair. Every time windows or doors are opened, in come more spores. Some people are allergic to mildew spores. Such allergies are sometimes triggered by continual exposure to mildew.

With mildew spores always ready to grow in homes, what protection is needed to stop mildew from growing and spreading? The watch words are clean and dry.

Clean mildew must have nutrients to grow on. The sources of mildew nutrients are many. Any food spills on carpets, smears on door sills from sticky or oily fingers, soap buildup on shower walls, dirt on clothes, dust on air conditioner filters, the drain pan under a refrigerator, even the air conditioning ducts that channel air to each room can be "hot" spots for mildew to grow.

The first step in avoiding mildew is to plan a program to keep surfaces clean — a regular routine. How often specific cleaning jobs need to be done may be different for each family depending on the family's lifestyle. Here are some general guidelines in your anti-mildew campaign.

● Don't let bathrooms become mildew gardens. That means regular cleaning — before mildew is visible. By the time mildew is visible it has produced enough spores to contaminate the air in your whole house.

● Change air conditioner filters frequently. Once a month may be frequently enough for many households, but if there are children in a family, or pets, check more frequently.

CONSUMER FOCUS

● Wipe up spills as they occur. Especially clean carpet spills and spots quickly and thoroughly. Mildew loves living in the cozy carpet pile. Vacuum regularly, too. Dust and dirt, good mildew nutrients, are harder to remove after they work down into the carpet pile.

● Wash off finger marks on door sills. Even a slight oily residue on wooden, metal or plastic chair arms where hands touch can get alimy with mildew under severe humidity conditions.

● Don't let dirty laundry pile up. Soiled clothes, towels, etc. mildew quickly when conditions are warm and humid.

● Don't put sweaty clothes back into closets. The small amount of moisture they hold will make your closet smell stale and musty.

● Once shoes have been worn, they are "conditioned" to grow mildew. A little perspiration plus the composition of leather in shoes or belts is yummy for mildew. Let sweaty shoes dry.

Dry mildew needs moisture to grow. The big question is "How can you keep a home in warm, humid Florida dry?"

Air conditioning removes moisture from air, but if moisture comes into a house faster than air conditioning can remove it, mildew will show up and it will spread. Air conditioning can usually remove the moisture produced inside a home through cooking, cleaning, bathing and other water-related activities. The moisture we need to be most concerned about in Florida's warm and humid climate comes into a house from outside in one of several ways and there are special guidelines to cut down or prevent moisture from coming into a home for each way:

● Every time people open outside doors to come and go, moisture moves inside. People must be free to come and go, but it will help reduce moisture, if they open and close doors promptly.

● Air enters homes through cracks and crevices. Just look around windows and doors. If you can see daylight anywhere, that is an invitation to moisture you can stop with weatherstripping. See your friendly hardware store for the right type of weather stripping for your window or door type.

● Hold a lighted match in front of each electrical outlet. If the flame flickers, moist air can leak in. There are inserts to put behind cover plates to control air and moisture leakage.

● A fireplace has a large opening that air and moisture can come through. Make sure the damper (and glass doors, if present) are closed.

● Check the air conditioning and cuts in your garage. Are there cracks in joints where garage air and moisture can get into the system. Use duct tape and/or caulking depending on the type and location of crack.

Moisture coming into the air conditioning system through joints and cracks in duct work are often the biggest source of moisture where severe mildew problems are found.

● Bath and kitchen exhaust fans remove moisture and odors from those rooms. That's good. But they also create a negative pressure in a house that pulls warm, humid outside air into other parts of the house. That's not so good. Usually a bath fan can remove most of the excess moisture put into the air during showering or bathing in about 10 minutes. Wet towels and wet walls will continue to put moisture into a bathroom for hours, but long fan operation can bring in more moisture than it removes.

To remove moisture that wet shower walls and wet towels contribute to your home over the next few hours use a squeegee or the towel you dried with to wipe down wet shower walls. Then put towels on a rack in the garage or on the porch.

● Finally this. When the temperature of outside air drops to the low 70s during the late evening, should air conditioning be turned off and windows opened to save energy? The answer is no, not in Florida. That outside air is saturated and will bring in a lot of moisture. Furnishings can soak up excess moisture. When air conditioning is turned on again the next day, it will have to work harder to remove the excess moisture from air and furnishings. During this period, moisture will be high enough to invite mildew.

Keeping your home mildew-safe during warm, humid weather requires a routine that is not difficult, but requires team effort. Call a family council. What can each person do to help keep your home clean and dry to avoid the hard work of cleaning mildew, the costs of repairing and repainting after mildew damage to a home and its furnishings, and the bad effects of long-term exposure to mildew spores?

Joiners join in Seniors' fun

Rebecca Henderson (center) introduced Wayne Joiner and his wife, Nancy, to the membership of the Senior Citizens Club of Sanford at a recent meeting. Wayne played the piano in his own inimitable style of various impersonations while Nancy sang and enacted several roles. The highly entertaining couple are from Longwood. In other club business, the club received a plaque from the Salvation Army for ringing bells during last year's Christmas season.

Entire family has problems with tantrums

DEAR MARY: I've had a problem controlling my temper ever since I can remember. Sometimes as a kid when I got mad, I'd go kind of crazy, throw things, tear things up, scream and cry, then I'd feel really wiped out but I'd also feel a lot better. The outbursts have continued on and off over the years, but last month I actually cracked a bone after I slammed my hand on a desk when I made a mistake at work. My whole family has problems with our tempers, but this is stupid.

FAMILY COUNSELOR

MARY BALK

If it's in the genes I guess I'm sunk, but if not, I want to stop this craziness before I really hurt myself or someone else. Willpower doesn't work. If I try to ignore it when I get mad, it doesn't go away; it just explodes over some other dumb little thing that happens. Are there any tried and true techniques for getting control of my temper or do I just have to keep hoping I'll get over it?

TOO OLD FOR TEMPER TANTRUMS

DEAR TOO OLD: I'm really impressed with your ability to describe the problem and your obvious desire to change. With that said, you're well on your way. We never get too old to feel anger, but you're getting too wise to risk alienating friends and family unnecessarily this way. You've already learned some important lessons about temper tantrums; they have negative consequences, but trying to stifle anger causes us to feel powerless and resentful until we "blow up" over something else.

At one time we encouraged people with anger problems to "ventilate" by acting out the aggression in a safe way, such as beating a pillow or screaming into a towel. However, many people have found that rather than getting rid of anger, they may actually intensify it in this way.

"Making Anger Your Ally: Harnessing Our Most Baffling Emotions," written by psychotherapist Neil Warren, recommends making rage work for you rather than against you using a five-step program:

Step 1: Assess how you feel about yourself. The better your self-esteem, the less apt you are to let other people upset you.

Step 2: Know that how you express anger is learned and therefore can be changed.

Step 3: Keep tabs on your feelings by keeping a daily journal or "anger diary" where you record your anger experiences daily. When you anticipate what makes you angry, you can deal with it constructively.

Step 4: Decide to find new ways of responding to your anger. Counting to 10 really will delay an angry outburst.

Step 5: Let go of your anger. Forgive anyone who betrayed you. Try not to take someone else's obnoxious behavior personally. When anger threatens to overwhelm you, make a conscious decision to refuse to respond in the old ways.

You'll be a better person for having dealt with your anger constructively. You can do it.

Various world governments explained

DEAR ABBY: About five years ago, you had a letter in your column from a teacher who taught economics in a high school. The letter explained in a humorous way the various types of governments throughout the world. Will you please try to find it and run it again? I need it for a speech.

NO NAME, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: Here it is:

DEAR ABBY: I teach government and economics at Grant High School in Van Nuys, Calif. This is a belated thank-you for one of your columns. I have been using it for years to explain the difference between communism, socialism, capitalism and a few other "isms." My students love it.

BARBARA HALPERN, VAN NUTS

DEAR BARBARA: Thanks for your thank-you. I'll run it again for others to enjoy. Here it is:

DEAR ABBY: A friend gave me these definitions of the various forms of government, and I thought you might want to share them with your readers:

COMMUNISM: You have two cows. The government takes both of them and gives you part of the milk.

SOCIALISM: You have two cows. The government takes one and gives it to your neighbor.

FASCISM: You have two cows. The government takes both cows and sells you the milk.

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

NAZISM: You have two cows. The government takes both your cows, then shoots you.

BUREAUCRACY: You have two cows. The government takes both of them, shoots one, milks the other, then pours the milk down the drain.

CAPITALISM: You have two cows. You sell one of them and buy a bull.

Abbey, what happens in a democracy?

MRS. J. MCC. DEAR MRS. MCC: In a democracy, everyone has two cows, then a vote is taken, and whatever the majority decides to do, you do, and that's no bull!

DEAR ABBY: I am a 12-year-old girl. My birthday is next month, and I can't wait. I'm looking forward to being a teen-ager, but more than that, when I'm 13, adults won't think of me as a "little kid." Most adults think when you are 13 you are more responsible than you are when you are only 12, but actually, you aren't.

It makes me angry when adults assume that I'm irresponsible because I'm a "little girl." (Some of the teen-agers I know act like 2-year-olds.)

Please publish my letter, Abby, so adults will know how people my age feel when we are treated like "little kids" when we are not.

NICOLE QUINTERO, GAINESVILLE, FLA.

DEAR NICOLE: You appear to be very mature for your age, but please don't be in a rush to grow up. People have only a short time to be children, but a very long time to be adults.

DEAR ABBY: While I was watching television recently, I saw a black-and-white picture of Babe Ruth flashed on the screen accompanied by the following comment: "Babe Ruth — one of the all-time greats of baseball. To this day you hear his name, as he had a candy bar named after him."

Wrong! The Babe Ruth candy bar was named after President Grover Cleveland's infant daughter — not the baseball

Sorting It Out

"What a glorious spring day. I'm going to open the windows and let in some fresh air ... maybe even clean out a closet or two. I've been meaning to sort out those clothes we don't wear anymore and put some winter things in storage."

Indeed, the advent of spring seems to bring to mind freshness and order. What an appropriate time to freshen up and sort out our spiritual lives as well. Perhaps it would be refreshing to enroll in a religious seminar or to take part in the musical program at your local house of worship. Discard unwanted habits that clutter your soul such as negative thinking and begin a practice that will enrich your life. Perhaps you could begin each day with prayer or keep a daily devotional guide at your bedside. The possibilities are endless.

Most importantly, make it a habit to visit God's house each Sabbath. Your spirit will sparkle as you learn to trust in God's will for your life. Remember, when you're sorting things out, put away fear and store God in your heart.

Strang promotes evangelism

By SUSAN WENNER
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — Strang Communications on Rhinehart Rd. in Lake Mary initially began with only Steve Strang, himself, and a few volunteers. The company has now grown to 150 employees.

Strang and his wife of 22 years, Joy, have been in the area some time now. They have two children. His 19 year old son, Cameron, is a freshman at Oral Roberts University in Tulsa, Oklahoma and his 7 year old son, Chandler, is still in the nest with mom and dad.

"I had an idea," said Strang. "We started at Calvary Assembly. They gave us their blessing and in 1981 I began a separate company."

Charisma, published by his organization, has the largest circulation of any religious magazine. Other magazines published by Strang are New Man, a Spanish version of Charisma called Charisma Internacional, Christian Retailing and Ministries Today, devoted to .

According to Strang, New Man is now available on secular newstands and not exclusively in Bible book stores. "New Man can also be purchased at Walden Books, Wal-Mart and Goodings."

Although Strang began his path in Christian publications at a secular local newspaper in 1973, he launched out in faith in this new endeavor. He started Charisma magazine in 1975. The company continues to grow and enrich the Christian community in leaps and bounds.

Along with magazines, Strang Communications also publishes approximately 24 books per year. Authors such as Benny Hinn, Pam Smith and A.C. Green have been printed through Creation House which handles this portion of business.

Over 8,000 churches also use Sunday school material from Strang Communications. "All our materials cater to the Charismatic movement," said Strang.

A recent project included a 13 week television contract. "We have a national program, Charisma Magazine Now, on Trinity Broadcasting," said Strang. "It airs on Fridays at 6:30 p.m. on Channel 55."

The company was recognized for its achievements and honored at a gathering in Altamonte Springs last year. "Strang Communications was named for the 1994 Industry of the Year Award for Seminole County," he said. "It was adjudged the winner by the Metro Orlando Economic Development Commission of Mid Florida. They also named companies in Orange, Lake and Osceola counties. There was a banquet at the Hilton in Altamonte Springs. About 400 to 500 people were present."

Strang further discussed plans for the future. "I presently have two other magazines on the drawing table," he said. "I'd like to continue in the television area. A lot of my vision is international." The company has branched out to the country of Russia with a missions project there.

With much attention given to the liberal media and the large number of non-Christians in this arena Strang shared his views. "Regardless of what other people are we need to be professional. Our whole trust is toward evangelism. We need to get involved and try to make a difference."

Strang concluded by saying, "We like being here in Central Florida. It's a good place to raise families and recruit people and recruit a workforce. We're excited to see the growth in the area."

Crossley reaches audience through airwaves

By SUSAN WENNER
Herald Staff Writer

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — WTLN radio station has ministered to many in the community. Its upbeat messages of hope, faith and encouragement has received much adoration.

George Crossley, of Central Florida Forum, became a Christian in 1975 because a co-worker in the radio industry shared Jesus Christ with him. Today he reaches many homes through the airwaves daily from 4 to 5 p.m. He solicits listeners to phone the station and share their views on the various subjects covered.

In 1970 Crossley began his career in Sanford. "I wrote a sports column at the Sanford Herald called 'Track Talk,'" he said. "I worked at WTRR as a disc jockey and salesman. From there I went to WDBO and then WLOF. At WLOF, on my birthday, April 3, 1975 I became a Christian."

Crossley began his work with WTLN in 1985. "I was supposed to be a talk show host and in sales and promotion."

He spoke excitedly about the company's new endeavor and launching into a new contemporary Christian radio station on 88.3 FM. Hopes are to begin airing the music in June of this year.

He reminisced the early years of his radio career. "There was no talk show or talk radio when I first started," he said. "Tom Moffitt deserves some credit. We have the largest Christian station in the state. We are the third largest in the nation."

George Crossley at WTLN and on the air

Presently Crossley's program airs for a one hour block. In July the station plans to increase that time to two hours.

He admitted that although the show tends to be controversial at times the main emphasis is to strengthen and evangelize. "Some see those who disagree with us as the enemy," he said. "I don't see them as the enemy but as an evangelistic opportunity."

Channel 52, a local Christian television station, also utilizes Crossley's talents. "Since I'm concerned about our civil liberties I try to help educate people," he said. "I find it a bit of a challenge."

Being a Christian in a primarily secular industry is a tough job. Crossley shared his views. "It used to be more of a problem than it might be," he said. "I've made some pretty clear lines in the sands. If they don't see it my way I just see them as an evangelistic opportunity."

A challenge was how Crossley described the world. "We are light and salt in the process. We are now reaching a secular audience on Channel 52. We need to be careful not to be Pharisees when it comes to the lost."

God says, 'Think on these things.'

SANFORD — God knows the importance of filling our hearts and minds with pure thinking. Movies, videos and television have been blamed at times for the increase in violence in our society. Secular radio and printed matter seem no longer under restriction for proper language.

In the midst of all the craziness Jesus leads Christians to a life of purity in a world of filth. He urges us to a life of holiness in the thoughts of a world of misconduct. The Holy Spirit guides us toward a spirit of love amid the violence and hate.

We are told by Paul in Philippians 4:8, "Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things."

Solomon even realized the importance of filling our minds with positive information. In Proverbs 23:7 he said, "As a man thinks in his heart, so is he..." What is fed into our hearts and minds becomes a reflection of us.

Are we reading the Bible with regularity? Is the printed material, whether it be magazines, books or papers, filled with the things of darkness or with uplifting encouragement?

As Steve Strang and George Crossley pointed out there is a vital need met through the Christian media industry. Strang supplies helpful books, magazines and materials to strengthen the bond of faith. Crossley strives to evangelize and encourage the listener to evaluate his views spiritually.

As Christians we are called to be a light in the darkness. A challenge has been given to let our lights shine. By utilizing the resources available through the Christian media, television and radio we can allow God to speak to us through these avenues.

Yet, utmost, commune with God through prayer and reading His Word. Allow Jesus to bring other sources of strength into your life whether through strong relationships or positive media available. Then, in the end, we can all be found to be good and faithful servants and enter into our eternal home.

How effective is herb treatment?

DEAR DR. GOTT: Your sweeping dismissal of herbs in medicinal applications was sad. I think it does a great disservice both to your readers and to physicians who, in the spirit of true medicine, have taken the time to research and evaluate herbal therapies in an open manner. To refuse credence to herbal historical and laboratory data is narrow-minded.

DEAR READER: Although many people endorse non-traditional treatment, such as herbal therapy, herbs really have no place in the modern treatment of serious diseases. Innumerable scientific studies have repeatedly demonstrated that herbal therapy is ineffective. This is not to say that it's impossible that undiscovered herbs may hold promise, but -- to date -- herbal therapy is unproved.

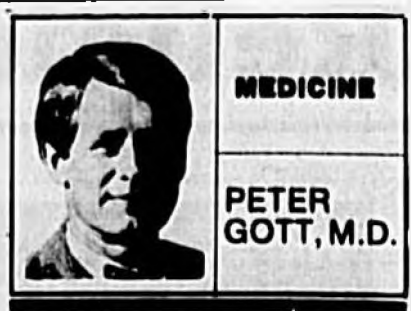

As you know, many miraculous drugs have an herbal basis, most notably digitalis (from foxglove) and morphine (from the opium poppy). And, I am certain, we will see great strides made in purifying useful drugs from natural sources in the future. However, experts doubt that people's health will improve as a result of herbal therapy, which -- in numerous instances -- can be harmful or downright poisonous: for example, comfrey, ginseng, willow bark, and ma huang have been reported to cause serious side effects.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've suffered from varicose ulcers for years. What would you recommend for relief? Mine seems to heal and open again as soon as I bump them in any way.

DEAR READER: Varicose veins in the legs are often accompanied by chronic skin inflammation (darkening, scaling and itching) due to poor circulation. Unfortunately, such skin heals poorly and is especially susceptible to ulceration caused by trivial injuries. Thus, patients with varicose veins are often plagued by crusting, unsightly sores that are difficult to cure.

You should ask your doctor for specific advice but, in general, varicose ulcers can be helped by using elastic support hose (to promote drainage of blood from the dilated veins), moisturizing creams (to keep the skin soft and supple), antibiotic creams (such as Bacitracin, to control infection), meticulous care in avoiding injuries to the legs, and sterile dressings (to protect the skin and aid healing).

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

To my taste, American beer is too gassy. I much prefer real English ale, which is pumped out of the barrel using compressed air, not carbon dioxide. And, yes, it is served at close to room temperature. This brings out the flavor, much as one doesn't drink red wine chilled.

However, Shakespeare overstated my views in "King Henry V" when he wrote, "I would give all my fame for a pot of ale, and safety."

In today's deal, South didn't think about safety, and afterwards North went to the bar to drown his sorrows, as it cost them first place in a team event.

Against four hearts, the defense began with three rounds of clubs. After ruffing, South played a trump to dummy's ace. East's discard was a bad jolt. Now South's only chance was to find West with 3-4-3-3 distribution. Then, after cashing his three spade and three diamond winners, a trump exit at trick 11 would endplay West, to lead away from his heart queen into South's king-jack tenace. However, West ruffed the third round of diamonds and got off play safely with his last club: one down.

The trump suit is ideally set up for a safety-play. At trick four, South should cash his heart king. (It is also fine to lead a low heart from hand, planning to cover West's card. But that play may unnecessarily sacrifice an overtrick.)

If East has all four hearts, South leads a heart to dummy's ace and a heart back toward his jack. When East discards, South continues with a low heart, using the power of dummy's nine to hold the defense to one trump trick.

Write A Want Ad That Sells! YOUR CLASSIFIED AD works best when it contains what the reader wants to know. GIVE FACTS: Put yourself in the buyer's shoes. What would you want to know? List the item's age, condition, size, brand name, model and approximate value. Be honest, state the time you will be home, telephone, mileage (if it's low) and special equipment. DON'T EMBELLISH: It's risky business to exaggerate and it won't increase your chances of success. Misleading information may get a buyer to your house. It may also get you a punch in the nose. AVOID ABBREVIATIONS: While a few abbreviations are necessary, use many of them wrong together can cause confusion. A confused reader won't take time to sort out your meaning. INCLUDE PRICE: Surveys indicate that buyers are more interested in the merchandise when they know the price. This applies to everything from household furnishings to automobiles. Good merchandise, priced fairly, is the best guarantee of success. BE AVAILABLE: A telephone number is fine if you're at home when your ad runs. If you're not going to be home, state the time you will be. Most people won't call back twice. USE YOUR NAME: Put your name in your ad. It gives credibility to the item you are advertising. You
