The City With A Drinking

CASSELBERRY - A costly and complicated logging operation is expected to get under way at the new $800,000 city water plant by the end of next week. Objective: to get to the bottom of the mystery of the yellow water. Water from the two 500 ft. deep wells tested out before the new South Water Plant was tied into the system on Oct. 22, according to Water Plant Operator F.A. (Frosty)

Frost, who has a degree in sanitary engineering, a background in electronics and chemistry, and is licensed in water and waste water treatment by the state, is in charge of the city's six water plants. The plant, located south of Howell Branch Road off SR

436, serves 3,500 customers in the Tanglewood, Goldenrod. Eastbrook, Howell Branch, and SR 436 area, formerly served by General Water Works. Shortly after the new plant was put in operation, calls began to come in from customers concerned about the yellowish water and possible contamination through reaction of higher chlorine levels with the Crews worked all night to flush and chlorinate water lines. When it was discovered that the water in question was coming from one of the new wells, it was taken off the line and the two storage tanks were drained. The facility has a 170-ft. elevated tank, which holds 250,000 gals., and a ground storage tank which has a 500,000-gallon capacity. Water pumped from the wells is aerated before going into the ground storage tank. In-house testing, which found the water safe bacteriologically and chemically, was confirmed by an outside laboratory, but the yellow tint still made the water unsatisfactory aesthetically.

Frost said it is not unusual for water to have a slight coloration, which can be easily removed by chlorination, but feels it is important to determine the source. The logging operation is a combination of a physical sampling of material and the measuring of temperature at various levels in the ground to determine at what level the discoloration has been entering the water. Since the problem first occurred, the troublesome well has been closed down. A second well is being used with no problem,

Clark Dietz and Associates, engineering consultant firm for the city, has arranged for the tests. Frost said the problem is somewhere underground, necessitating lowering testing equipment down in the well to discover if there is a crack in the 180 ft. steel casing or if the problem goes deeper. "It may be something that was trapped in the limestone between 350 and 500 ft. down," he said. If the problem

British Organizers Postpone Session At Rhodesia Talks

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) - British organizers of talks on Rhodesia postponed a session today at which black delegates had threatened to call for indefinite adjournment unless Britain set Dec. 1, 1977 as a target date for black rule. Reliable sources said Chairman Ivor Richard put off the meeting until Monday at the request of some black African states that are in Geneva as observers. There has not been a formal session since Nov. 5. Richard had called a meeting for today after all four black nationalist leaders rejected a British compromise formula Friday.

Circuit Court Judge Robert B. McGregor has sentenced 32-year-old Douglas McArthur Simpson of Sanford to two life prison terms for the rape of a six-year-old girl.

Assistant State Atty. William Heffernan had urged the court to go against a trial jury's recommendation of life imprisonment and sentence Simpson to death in the electric chair. Heffernan said he felt the death penalty was warranted by the heinous nature of the sexual assaults on the little girl last May. "I don't believe the death penalty is appropriate in this case," Judge McGregor said.

He said pre-sentence investigation reports indicated the black-haired father of three children is "hedonistic - one who seeks pleasure regardless of consequences." and thus won't be eligible for 57 you'll conclude that you don't have to victimize young girls," the court told Simpson as a woman broke into loud sobs and then left

Hua Wields Clubs In Many Directions

China-watchers have marveled at the swiftness with which Hua Kuo-feng confirmed his position as chairman of the Chinese Communist Party and carried out a purge of his rivals. As some analysts put it, the Chinese have just had an "election," and Hua's party won.

There's a vague resemblance to a two-party system in the struggle between so-called moderates and radicals within the ranks of Chinese communism. The partly secret, partly public events since the death of Mao Tse-tung are probably the closest thing to an election that the Chinese can hope to see.

But the democratic process in a China that calls itself a "people's republic" is pure fancy. For one thing, only a small fraction of mainland China's 850 million souls belong to the Communist Party and has anything to do with the process of creating its leadership. And it hardly fits any definition of democracy when the losers in a political contest wind up in jail - if indeed they are

The emergence of Hua as the political and ideological heir of Chairman Mao calls to mind two quotations. One of them is Mao's famous principle that "power emerges from the barrel of a gun." It was Hua's support in the People's Liberation Army that made possible the surgical neatness of his move against the radicals. This has reconfirmed the belief that the loyalty of the army is the indispensable factor for achieving and maintaining power in Peking. It also supports the view that when all is said and done about the nature of the Chinese government, it is essentially a military

The other quotation is from English literature - that "the pen is mightier than the sword." Hua not only has the army on his side but is in effective control of the scripture of Maoism which must keep the soldier, the worker and the peasant pulling in the same direction. He is responsible now for editing the works of Mao, which means he will have control over how the words of the now-departed chairman are presented and interpreted in the future. Needless to say, the future "Thoughts of Chairman Mao" are not likely to emerge with any meaning contrary to what editor Hua wants them to have.

The importance of having custody of the guiding doctrine of Maoism was demonstrated soon after Mao's death. Mao's widow and other radicals apparently attempted to alter one of the purported final thoughts of Mao to give the impression that he favored their ascendancy.

Whatever direction Chairman Hua chooses for China in the future, he is starting from a secure position of power over the bodies and minds of his people - represented by the army on the one hand, and the words of Mao on the other. What more

Virtues Abandoned

In this Bicentennial year of our nation's history, many are thinking about the principles on which this nation was founded. Some are warning that we have wandered far from those

There are indications that in "the pursuit of happiness" we have sought wealth and power and easy living as our mostimportant goals, and that in the search for these we have abandoned many of the virtues which the Founding Fathers cherished and which are a major part of our heritage. An anonymous writer has given us a warning message which we Americans might well read and seriously consider in these days when we are being bombarded daily with the news of "man's inhumanity to man." The message follows: "The things that will destroy us are: Politics without principle; pleasure without conscience; wealth without work; knowledge without character; business without morality; science without humanity; and worship without sacrifice." To that list might be added: Power without self-discipline: justice without compassion; personal achievement without concern for the welfare of others.

BERRY'S WORLD

"Lame duck!"

There is an undercurrent of irony that runs through the tide of human events.

This is the month of November, and the nation has just elected a new president. A Democrat. Thirteen years ago, in Dallas, another president, a Democrat, died in a hail of bullets. His demise, which still is the subject of controversy, plunged the nation into a period of confusion and grief.

The Dallas killing was the first of several assassinations. Dr. Martin Luther King was shot in Memphis. Sen. Robert Kennedy was gunned down in the kitchen of a Los Angeles hotel. Those were troubled times. The nation was bitterly divided over an unpopular war and the shattered dreams of the Great Society. Remember those film-clips on the television They seemed to be scenes from some foreign

Nixon was the one. He became president, and there was plenty of law, but precious little order. His plan to end the war remained a secret. The social programs instituted by his predecessor died on the vine, their financial supply lines severed. Then, Watergate. The Law and Order posture was exposed as a farce. The Republican administration, a temple built on a foundation of arrogance and elitism, crumbled into disgrace. Nixon had to go. Consumers Are Suing More Often

It isn't only the doctors who are afflicted with awsuit sickness.

The number of people suing companies for allegedly defective products is rapidly rising, says The Conference Board, and so is the cost of product liability insurance - the manufacturers' counterpart of medical malpractice

Homemaker Quilt Honors Bicentennial

Women's Editor

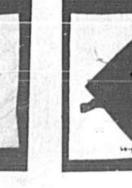

Christmas came early to Seminole County Homemakers who held their annual Holiday Showcase Tuesday at the Altamonte Civic Center. Hand crafted items, baked goods, but especially a varied and attractive assortment of holiday ornaments and gifts were displayed by members of the county's 10 Homemaker Clubs, under the co-chairmanship of Dot Barry and Elaine Gilson, Sanlando Springs Homemakers.

Focus of the show was the Bicenter.nial quilt created by club members under the chairmanship of Eleanor Parcell, Geneva Homemaker. Embroidery, fabric painting and a variety of other techniques were employed to make the many colorful squares depicting Seminole County and patriotic themes. Elated winner of the quilt was Mrs. Mae Specht, Orlando, pictured right.

Featured during the morning event were holiday craft making demonstrations and a fashion show with original creations being modeled by Homemakers Fran Colosimo, Irene Bullock, Nancy Bird, Lottie Wood, Rae Artman and Freddie Mayfield. Emcee was Louise Gill, county home economics ex-

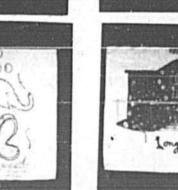

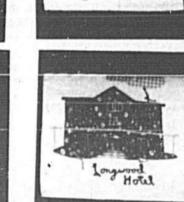

Senators, Secretaries, Priests Do It: TM

Herald Correspondent Every morning, just before he goes to work, and then again that night, Frank Sledge of Orlando, slips into a comfortable chair, leans back, and closes his eyes. Simply, effortlessly, he settles into deeper and deeper states of relaxation while his mind remains extraordinarily alert.

Transcendental Meditation (TM) has "most definitely affected my life," said Frank. He works for WESH TV and is responsible for everything that goes on the air in a given period. "Before TM, when something went wrong with the film or equipment, I exploded, losing control of the whole

But after six months of practicing the technique, Frank noticed that he was able to cope with problems without

"My blood pressure lowered and I lost weight," acknowledges Frank. "TM gave me a clearness of mind to find out why I let my body get into bad shape and to actually do something about it." Sledge is among the 830,000 Americans who practice TM daily. They include senators, lawyers, secretaries, priests or the man seated next to you on the bus. They are people of all ages and occupations, including an increasing number of Sanfordites. TM is not a religion or a philosophy. It is merely a natural technique for reducing stress or anxiety and expanding conscious awareness. Basil Henderson, a TM lecturer, explained that the term "transcendental" means "going beyond." It takes you to the fourth state of consciousness after waking, sleeping, and dreaming. Yet "the meditator is not oblivious to the environment," said Basil. If the phone rings or the baby cries, he is aware of it.

The procedure itself is done twice a day, in the morning and at night, for a 20 minute period. The longer you practice the technique said Basil, the more beneficial it is During the meditating state, Scientific American reported in February 1972, the metabolic rate of the body drops with a corresponding dip in oxygen consumption, galvanic skin resistance increases and blood lactate decreases. What this means, the researchers wrote, is that the meditator is in a deep state of rest, which reduces emotional disturbances and helps to free a person from anxiety-related neurosis such as hypertension. In his book, "Transcendental Meditation and Productivity," D.R. Frew wrote that meditators show more job satisfaction, improved performance, stability and had better interpersonal relationships with their supervisors and co-workers.

Jeff Baude, 21, of Sanford can testify to this study He has been practicing TM for two and a half years. "I operated the folding machine for Rich Plan of Florida Inc.," he said. "But after studying TM, I found I had more energy and exhibited more curiosity to learn all I could about the print shop." He has since been promoted and is now shop manager.

In January of 1972, the Stanford Research Institute published a report showing a decrease in prescribed tranquilizers and stimulants among meditators. The use of non-prescription drugs (marijuana, LSD, etc.) also

"TM can be learned by anyone, regardless of intellectual ability," said Basil Henderson. "Unlike other forms of meditation such as Zen or Gestalt, TM require no concentration, contemplation or locused afforts." During the first lesson in TM, you and your instructor choose a mantra. This is a pleasant sound or a mild word that holds no meaning other than to divert your attention away from unpleasant sensations or thoughts. You are instructed to tell no one what your mantra is. After the initial lesson, you come back for the next three evenings to make sure you are doing it correctly, then you're on your own. Although it is easy to learn and to practice, the TM technique is very specific and requires the instruction of a teacher who has been trained by Maharishi Mahesh Yogi. Basil Henderson is one such instructor who belongs to the Orlando chapter. He studied under Maharishi in Belgium. The technique of TM was brought to America in 1959 by the Indian monk. Basil drew a cross section of a pond to further explain this concept. "The sand is our pure field of energy and

From this nonactivity springs activity. Air bubbles always developing are like thoughts. When it is first released, the bubble is tiny yet powerful. As it becomes bigger, it pushes to the surface of the mind. When it finally reaches the surface, it is a thought." A survey was taken on 408 meditators who had previously suffered from infectious diseases. Researchers wrote that more than 70 per cent reported a decrease in the number of infectious diseases per year. This suggests that TM strengthens the body's system of immunity. Emily LaRoche, Sanford, who also works for Rich Plan, found that she accomplishes more and is more relaxed. "My husband had high blood pressure, so we took the course together. His blood pressure has since lowered." Louise Clinton is another TM meditator. She lives in Sanford and has been practicing the technique for a year and a half. "I read several articles about it and it was discussed on the Mery Griffin show, so I decided to give it a try. I find it very relaxing. For the skeptical businessman, the cynic with raised brows, and for those of you whose questions have not been answered in this article, a free introductory class on TM will be held in Sanford, Nov. 17 at 8:30 p.m. The meeting will be at the Flagship Bank on 200 W. First St.

Mrs. Daniel is the former Penny Wallace of Sanford, daughter of Mrs. W. B. Wallace Sr., 208 W. 17th., Sanford and the late W.B. Wallace.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown designed and made by her mother. It featured an empire bodice with scalloped sheer yoke, wedding band collar and tapered sleeves appliqued with lace and seed pearls. The A-line skirt was splashed with similar appliques which also trimmed her chapel train. Her fingertip veil of illusion fell from a band of lace and pearls, and she carried a colonial bouquet of white sweetheart

Miss Pam Davenport, Ellaville, served as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Angie Ballard and Miss Wendy Mifflin, cousins of the bride; Miss Cissy Daniel and Miss Mary Lou Daniel, sisters of the bridegroom. They wore gowns of green organza flocked with tiny white flowers and carried colonial ouquets of white and yellow daisies.

Christy Martin, cousin of the bride served as flower girl in a gown similar to the bridesmaids.

John Davis, brother of the bride, served as ringbearer. Arthur Daniel served as his son's best man. Usher-groomsmen were Brad Wallace, Sanford, uncle of the bridegroom; Gene Davis, brother of the bride; Gary Campbell, Ellis Larkin and Joe

The bride's parents entertained with a reception at their home and garden after the ceremony.

The newlyweds left for a honeymoon in the mountains following the reception. They will make their home in Ellaville where he is employed at the Western Auto store and also attends Georgia outhwestern College. She is the Schley County health nurse.

Karate Champ: Better Beware!

By ELDA NICHOLS Herald Correspondent

A 1975 graduate of Lyman High School recently returned toting a six foot, six-inch tall trophy - won at the East Coast United States Grand National Karate Championships, held in St.

No, Pat Militello is not a brawny, muscled male, but a pretty, dainty young woman, with a black belt in karate. It all started two years ago. Pat began her karate instruction with Jack Morris at the American Karate Studio, Pine Hills, Orlando. Today, she is an instructor there.

Pat's trophy was for her individual performance, plus another one for team karate. Jack; likewise, won two. The champions plan on competing at the Grand Nationals, in California, and the Battle of Atlanta, in Georgia. "The two weeks before the tournament are pretty tough. We work out continually completing movements we'll be doing. We also watch our diets a little more carefully," she said. At the East Coast Grand Nationals, competition started at 9:30 a.m., and lasted until 12:30 at night. The team which Pat and Jack are on is the first United States team to be classified as a 'kata' (Japanese word meaning 'form') team. Does knowing karate make a woman feel more secure? Pat says, "Yes!" However, if confronted with a gun, she admits she would be cautious and figure out her move. But for anyone coming at her without a gun, watch out! The moves are fast, accurate, decisive and pretty much in her favor.

"I really wanted to win this trophy so much," she said. "I wanted Mr. Moser, (Marshall Moser, assistant principal at Lyman) to see it. When I was at Lyman, he really helped me, and had confidence in me. I just wanted to show it to him."

DEMOLITIONIST JOHN BLOUNT AT HIS . . .

Building Coming Down

Herald Staff Writer

The building that carried the addresses, 301, 303, 305 and 307 So. anford Ave., condemned by the City of Sanford in February 1975 because of its dilapidated and unsafe condition, is being demolished a bit at a time. John Blount, who demolished adjacent sections, 309 and 311, a carefully dismantling the building that housed six stores at one time to salvage as much of the old wood, blocks and old brick as possible. Deadline for completion of the demolition is Jan. 1, 1977, and Blount says he will meet the deadline. "I took the job pretty cheap so I have to salvage as much as possible to pay the difference," said Blount, who demolishes three or four buildings a year in addition to at least one salvage

Demolition is not Blount's major operation. "I sell fill dirt, haul asphalt and do a little land clearing occasionally," he said. "I took down the other two buildings a year ago. That didn't take too long," he said, adding he brought in a front end loader, knocked the building down and hauled it away. "Demolition work is dangerous only if you don't watch what you are doing," Blount said, noting the work requires a bit of common sense, knowledge of how things are put together and some skill and understanding of carpentry and masonry.

"Mainly you must be willing to learn. All buildings are different in some respects and the same in others. You must take your time when salvaging one, work a little bit and think a little bit," he but hasn't yet made up his mind whether to pull the other walls into the floor. "I'm thinking of pulling all the walls into the floor because it can be salvaged easier in that way. "This building has some pretty good old wood, old brick and (Heraid Photo by Donna Estes) block," Blount said. Currently, he pointed out, used brick brings a better price than new brick.
