Manatees death toll rising

ST. PETERSBURG — The manatee death toll this year is threatening to make 1990 an even worse disaster than last year for the endangered marine mammal in Florida and Georgia waters, wildlife officials say.

So far this year, at least 139 manatees have died in Florida and Georgia waterways. See Page 5A

Budget hearing cancelled

SANFORD — After slashing 14 jobs from the city payroll during two days of hearings on the 1990-91 budget, the city commission has decided to cancel a third budget hearing scheduled for today.

The commissioners agreed to take the $22.14 million proposed budget to the regularly scheduled commission meeting Monday, saying they had covered as much as they could cover during the special meetings.

"We went through everything we had to," said Commissioner Whitey Eckstein. "We did everything but the utility funds and we went through that individually. At least I know I did."

Eckstein said since all department budgets had been tentatively approved, having additional special meetings would be unnecessary.

Mercury levels appear safe

FORT LAUDERDALE — Florida's saltwater fish appear to be largely free of the alarming levels of mercury that have tainted fish in inland waters, according to preliminary findings of state marine scientists.

Tests on more than 200 saltwater fish samples taken from coastal estuaries found only seven with mercury contamination exceeding state health guidelines.

Filets of those tainted fish had mercury concentrations greater than 0.5 parts per million, the level that can trigger state fish-consumption warnings, said George Henderson, environmental administrator for the state Department of Natural Resources Marine Research Institute.

Researchers are still trying to find the source of mercury contamination among freshwater fish in the Everglades, where concentrations as high as 0.7 parts per million have been recorded in large, predatory fish.

Henderson said the fish tested so far include those taken from Tampa Bay and Charlotte Harbor on the west coast and from Indian River Lagoon and north of Sebastian Inlet on the east coast.

Among commercial fish tested and given a clean bill of health are sea trout and flounder from Tampa Bay.

Americans and their admirers around the globe threw the United States a star-spangled Independence Day party, celebrating the nation's 214th birthday with a special zest in a year when the very word "independence" has taken on new meaning worldwide.

"It's a very sensitive moment for me and very exciting," said Adal Risk, a native Egyptian who was sworn in Wednesday as a U.S. citizen with 471 other immigrants in a Seattle ceremony. "My dream came true. It's my biggest day."

Traditional parades, fireworks and family barbecues vied for attention Wednesday with such non-traditional commemorations as a cookout for the homeless in Washington, D.C., and an official Fourth of July ceremony in communist Bulgaria.

Eager families began gathering by 6 a.m. for Boston's celebration, the annual evening Boston

SANFORD — Cars lined the lake and crowds packed Fort Mellon Park for the first People's Fireworks display on Lake Monroe last night to celebrate the nation's 214th birthday.

And fortunately for the sightseers — stretched along the lake almost from Interstate 4 to the city marina — the only blind mosquito that seemed to show its face was hiding behind a two-foot cardboard beak, wearing dark glasses and carrying a tin cup while walking in the Doo-dah Parade.

Missing Children Center wants Lake Mary base

By MICK PFEIFAU
Herald staff writer

LAKE MARY — The Missing Children Center, 160 W. Evergreen Ave., Longwood, wants to move its entire Central Florida operation to Lake Mary, and the Center's Executive Director Joan Thompson will discuss the proposed move before the Lake Mary City Commission meeting Thursday night.

Thompson said, "Nobody knows where we are, and we need a new location from which to operate, one that hopefully will have high visibility." Her request to the commissioners will be for office space and financial support.

The Missing Children Center is one of only three organizations in Florida dealing with the disappearances of an estimated 4,000 children annually, in this state, and the only one in this area. The center is a publicly supported, non-profit reference and referral agency for all missing children.

Thompson said, "We are, right now, handling cases from as far away as Canada."

Statistics at the center indicate over two million children are reported as missing across the nation each year. About 200,000 are parentally kidnapped, 50,000 are criminally kidnapped, 5,000 are found murdered and 2,000 are never identified, according to statistics. The remaining 1.74 million are classified as runaways.

The center offers a 24-hour help line, speakers bureau, family support and nationwide distribution of information and photographs in attempts to locate missing children.

Thompson will meet with the commission at tonight at 7 p.m. in the old city hall building, 158 N. Country Club Road.

'Sign of the times' unnerves Sanford church, not thieves

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Deborah and Douglas Clendenin got tired of people stealing tires from their cars and other items from their yard, so they put up a warning to the thieves.

"Anyone caught stealing will be shot on sight," read the hand-lettered sign on a piece of plywood propped up in the front yard in front of their house at 700 Upsala Road.

Sanford Christian Church, who owns the property and hopes to build a new church on the site some time next year, were not pleased with the threatening sign, however. With the help of two lawyers, the church told the Clendenins they had three days to remove the sign or face eviction. So on Monday afternoon, the sign came down.

"It was just a warning," Deborah said. "We wanted those people to know we didn't want them stealing stuff from us."

Ron Swift, an elder with the church said they "just didn't feel it was good community relations" to have such a sign next to the one which reads "Future Home of the Sanford Christian Church."

He added that people driving by would not know whether the church had put up the warning or someone else.

"It just didn't look very good for us," he said.

Swift added that it "probably wasn't very safe" for the Clendenins to issue such a warning.

"You've got to be careful about shooting someone unless it's in your house the way the laws are now-days," he said.

She said though she received two letters from two different lawyers, no one has told them why the sign had to be removed.

"They just said to get it down or they would make us get out," she said.

She also said most of her neighbors had been burglarized at least once and she knew they were tired of it. She said it is a quiet neighborhood where the incidence of robberies in the area has "increased a lot" this year.

While none of the neighbors could be reached for comment, Clendenin said the items taken from surrounding houses range from truck tires to home entertainment systems.

Oviedo school first selected for year round class calendar

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald staff writer

OVIDEO — Beginning in July of 1991, students at Lawton Elementary School will be the first in Seminole County to attend classes on the year round calendar.

The announcement came in a press conference this morning at the school, 151 Graham Ave., Oviedo. The school board will have to officially approve the designation of Lawton as the first school during its July 10 meeting.

While proponents like Lawton principal Michael Mizwicki and school board member Pat Telson have been promoting the concept of the modified school calendar for several years, there has been widespread resistance to the proposed change in how the school year is spread over the calendar year.

According to Robert O'Dell, district coordinator of year round schools, the move to the new calendar will not only help alleviate the overcrowding in schools by increasing the capacity of a facility by about 20 percent, but it is also a more efficient way for students to learn.

Lawton is not overcrowded. According to Mizwicki, the school is just at capacity with about 792 students enrolled for the fall. He predicts the numbers will be closer to 1,000 by June 1991.

"But that is not why I am promoting year round school," said Mizwicki, who prefers to call the modified calendar "continuous learning program." "I just believe this is a more effective way to teach and to learn."

Mizwicki said the concept of year round schools allows students to receive remediation in a subject before a lack of skills or understanding of a subject becomes a problem. Students also do not have the disadvantage of forgetting what they learned in one school year over the summer before the next year.

"That's one reason teachers love the continuous learning program," he noted.

When the school board approved the designation of a pilot school for the modified calendar program, Mizwicki, who recently earned his doctorate with a study of the year round schools calendar, said schools on the calendar did consistently better than those on the agrarian calendar used in most schools.

While the students will still attend classes 180 days a year, the modified calendar calls for them to attend classes throughout a 12 month time frame, rather than nine months. In one sample calendar students would be in classes 60 days and have a 15-day break before beginning the cycle again.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Prisoner guidelines toughened

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — Gov. Bob Martinez is expected to announce Thursday tougher classification guidelines for prisoners prompted by the escape of a convicted murderer accused of killing a grandmother in Tallahassee.

The new rules were drafted by the state Department of Corrections and are part of a statewide crackdown on prison security after the incident. Martinez's aides estimated Tuesday about 3,000 Florida inmates would be put under the tighter controls.

Prison officials spent Monday and Tuesday moving reclassified inmates from minimum-security prisons to more secure facilities, but it was unclear how many of those were among the 1,000 prisoners Martinez ordered pulled from work-release programs last week after the killing. Martinez's aides and prison officials refused to discuss details of the reclassification, but said it was designed to make sure violent and hardened criminals stay behind bars.

"We're looking at taking out a large degree of the discretionary" authority of prison staff, said Brian Ballard, the governor's chief of staff. "It will basically be codifying common-sense procedures and taking human decisions out of it as much as you can."

Donald David Dillbeck, who walked away from a work-release program, has been charged with stabbing to death Faye Lamb Vann, 44, in a Tallahassee shopping mall parking lot.

Dillbeck, 27, had served 11 years of a life sentence for the 1979 murder of a deputy sheriff when he escaped June 22 while catering a banquet for a civic group in Gadsden County.

After his escape and recapture, Martinez ordered three prison officials fired, citing their "poor judgment" in allowing the placement of Dillbeck on a community work detail. Martinez also ordered eight other corrections officers suspended, and is expected to announce Thursday whether they will receive further disciplinary action.

Officials say the tougher standards eventually will require adding prison beds to the 42,900 maximum security beds already in the system.

Corrections Secretary Richard Dugger said the new rules will prevent putting inmates serving 25-year minimum sentences in low-risk classification until their final years. Past rules allowed putting prisoners in minimum security after they served 40 percent of their sentence.

Project Adolph put on hold

THORNTOWN, Ind. — Authorities said Wednesday that attempts to recapture Adolph the alligator will be put on hold until at least next Tuesday.

The 4-foot alligator is enjoying himself in a lake near the Old Indiana Fun Park in Boone County. He escaped from his caged enclosure at the park June 22, probably with help, park officials said. Attempts to catch the wily gator Tuesday were unsuccessful. No attempts were made Wednesday.

Park manager Earl Gascoigne said a special alligator catching device used in Florida will be air freighted in from Tampa sometime this weekend. Gascoigne said handlers will familiarize themselves with the cage-like device before attempting to use it next week.

Larry Battison of Wildlife Education Services and Adolph's primary keeper at Old Indiana, agreed to put off any further rescue attempts until the device arrives. Battison made several tries at catching the gator Tuesday but came up empty.

Man at center of struggle dies at home

PERBACOLA — An elderly man at the center of a struggle between his family and the state's welfare agency over his forced medical treatment has died at home.

George Stokes, 94, was found dead Tuesday. His death came on his 73rd wedding anniversary, family members said.

Stokes had been in the middle of a struggle between the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services and Stokes' relatives about his care.

HRS officials insisted Stokes receive medical treatment for hypothyroidism. But the family insisted that Stokes, who had lost his ability to speak, had told them he wanted to die at home and receive no medication.

The disagreement between the agency and the family began last month when an HRS representative visited Stokes after a distant relative expressed concern about his health.

Sentence handed down in fraud cases

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa — A Boca Raton man has been sentenced to nine years in prison after pleading guilty to charges he defrauded John Deere and Company out of more than $410,000.

Robert T. Krebs, 54, was the second person sentenced in connection with the case. Krebs was sentenced Tuesday in U.S. District Court to serve five years in prison on one count of conspiracy, and four years for one count of mail fraud. The sentences are to be served consecutively.

Krebs was also ordered to pay $410,295 restitution and a special assessment of $100.

Krebs had previously pleaded guilty to conspiracy to defraud John Deere Dubuque Works in Dubuque, Iowa. According to the U.S. Attorney's office in Cedar Rapids, Krebs and Gary Anderson, a former buyer for Deere Dubuque Works, conducted a scheme from 1984 through 1986 in which inflated quotes for hardware parts were submitted to the company.

Study shows pensioners fall through gap

TALLAHASSEE — Many Florida retirees who have worked all their lives are falling through a gap in the health care system because they are unable to afford nursing care but ineligible for Medicaid, a Florida State University professor said.

As a result, many of the state's most needy retirees are being deprived of nursing-home care, said Jill Quadagno, a professor of sociology at FSU's Institute on Aging.

"We're not talking about people who have been poor all their lives," said Quadagno. "We're talking about middle-class working people who get stuck — who now can't get any help."

Quadagno's study found that many Florida retirees are penalized because pensions earned by years on the job push them above the limit to qualify for Medicaid-subsidized nursing-home care. But those same retirees can't afford that care themselves, she said.

Fourth celebrations around the state

War veterans rallied, Boy Scouts gave worn flags a proper retirement, politicians stumped for votes, and sun worshippers flocked to Florida beaches Wednesday — all in the spirit of celebrating America's independence.

In St. Petersburg, about 2,500 war veterans and supporters crowded into Williams Park for a patriotic Fourth of July rally to press Congress for more money to finance health benefits for veterans.

The throng of veterans from World War II, Korea and Vietnam distributed petitions calling for more money for veterans health care and used the event to register voters to muster clout for their cause.

Convoys from Pensacola, Fort Myers and Orlando converged at the rally, co-sponsored by Paralyzed Veterans of America, Veterans of Foreign Wars and AMVETS American Veterans of World War II, Korea and Vietnam.

In Pensacola, 750 American flags were burned ceremoniously to retire them in a proper manner.

Researchers studying ways to keep crayfish soft-shelled

United Press International

GAINESVILLE — Softshell crawfish could join Key lime pie as standard fare in Florida restaurants if a University of Florida researcher is successful in getting the crustaceans to keep their soft skeletons longer.

"Softshell crabs, crayfish and lobster are the latest culinary delicacy in some of the nation's fanciest restaurants," said Michele Wheatly, a UF zoologist. "People like to eat these creatures when they're soft because they can eat the whole animal, not just the tail and claws, and they don't have to work to take the meat out."

The problem with softshell is that most restaurants don't offer it as a regular menu item because they can't be assured of a steady supply, she said.

As crawfish, also called crayfish, and other crustaceans grow, they shed their hard shells to reveal a new soft one underneath. But it only takes one or two days for the soft shell to harden, she said.

Wheatly, who received a $250,000 grant from the National Science Foundation, is studying whether this molting process can be manipulated to last longer so that more softshell crustaceans can be harvested.

In studies on crayfish in Florida, Wheatly found that calcium must be absorbed within a certain time after molting begins — usually three to four days — or a hard skeleton cannot form.

Florida is the third-ranked state in the country, behind Louisiana and Texas, in area devoted to commercial production of crawfish as food.

Waste plan gains temporary approval

United Press International

STARKE — Florida has received temporary approval of its plan for dealing with hazardous waste for the next 20 years, but the state must work to acquire landfill space for the waste, federal officials say.

Approval of the plan by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency means Florida will continue receiving federal funds for cleaning up toxic-waste sites, said Caron Falconer, project analyst in the EPA's regional office in Atlanta.

That amounts to about $20 million a year, state Department of Environmental Regulation officials said.

But Florida lacks space for disposing hazardous waste and must either develop some within next year or get another state to take the waste, Falconer said.

State environmental officials have said before that Florida is unsuitable for a hazardous-waste dump site for environmental and geological reasons. Because it does not have treatment facilities, Florida was excluded from a deal reached among five southern states to share hazardous waste treatment capacity, Falconer said.

Last August, Alabama began refusing to accept hazardous waste from states that do not have disposal facilities.

Florida's plan for dealing with hazardous waste calls for developing treatment facilities in either Polk or Union County, DER officials have said the Union County facility will be built unless the Polk facility receives approval from the state first.

Florida First Processing Corp. of Haines City has proposed building a hazardous waste incinerator in Polk County that would burn up to 70,000 tons of waste annually.

Under the Florida plan, the Polk facility would receive a permit to begin operating by 1992 if there is no administrative challenge, or by 1993 if there is a challenge.

Some Polk County residents have organized opposition to the project, which was delayed earlier this year when a bald eagle nest was found on the site.

If the Polk facility is not built, state officials have plans to begin operating the Union County fa-

Police search for mother of an abandoned baby

United Press International

MIAMI — Police searched Wednesday for the mother of an hours-old baby girl who was found abandoned in a plastic foam drink cooler in a hospital parking lot by two nurses.

The baby, dubbed Julia Lakes by a nurse at Baptist Hospital where she was found, still had her umbilical cord attached and was crying softly when two nurses discovered her Tuesday morning.

A hand-written note in the bottom of the cooler said: "Please take care of my baby, find a good home for her as I cannot provide her with the necessities of life."

"I heard a little noise," said Sybil Warner, one of the nurses who found the infant. "I thought it was a cat."

When she discovered the baby, Warner picked her up. "It stopped crying right away. I thought it had died. She looked so shy," Warner said.

The baby, who weighs 7 pounds, 4 1/2 ounces, and is 20 inches long, is in good condition at the hospital.

Hospital officials, who said the hospital had never had a baby dropped at its door, speculate that the infant was driven there for quality care. "NIGHT OWL"

"The baby is doing well," head nurse Nancy Hyatt said. "She was born so close to term she had no problems except for the cord."

Metro-Dade County detective Lawrence Noon has only one clue in his search for finding the baby's mother.

Sex education in schools becomes law

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — A controversial bill requiring sex education for all Florida public school students is expected to become law at midnight Thursday without the signature of Gov. Bob Martinez.

Martinez notified the secretary of state Tuesday that he will allow the bill to become law without his signature. He said he would not veto the bill because provisions he vigorously opposed, such as on-campus health clinics, had been removed, said

Pete Dunbar, general counsel to the governor.

But Martinez would not sign the bill because he was not satisfied with some parts of it, including a tax increase that will allow schools to expand health services for low-income students, Dunbar said.

State law already requires health courses for middle-school students, including information about AIDS. But 19 districts offer no such instruction.

But anti-abortion lobbyists still are vigorously opposed to the plan, saying the compromises did not go far enough.

"To think that we need to teach reproductive health to 5- and 6-year-olds shows how ludicrous this bill is, and how out of step legislators are with their constituents," said Carol Griffin, lobbyist for a number of conservative organizations.

To think that we need to teach reproductive health to 5- and 6-year-olds shows how ludicrous this bill is.

Litton proposes Palmer purchase

By MARK PFEIFFER
Herald staff writer

LAKE MARY — City Manager John Litton will be sending up a trial balloon tonight to see if the city commission is interested in the purchase of property owned by Palmer Electric Company on Wilbur Avenue at the intersection of Old Lake Mary Road.

The city presently owns the two adjoining pieces of property, the Wilbur Avenue fire station, which presently houses volunteer fire fighters for the city, and the public works building. In earlier discussions, Palmer Electric had expressed an interest in buying the city's two pieces of property, but now Palmer has indicated no further interest, and has offered to sell its property to the city for the appraised value of $195,000.

As Litton sees it, the city has four choices: buy the Palmer Electric property to extend city property through the entire block; coordinate with Palmer to jointly market the entire block to a third party; redivide the property to retain the fire station, but sell the rest jointly with Palmer; or do nothing and retain ownership as it currently stands.

Litton sees some advantages to buying the Palmer property. He said it could be used for a park or a city parking lot, but he expressed concern over safety factors when a future road widening project on Old Lake Mary Road may take some of the area for right-of-way.

Meanwhile, Charles H. Tindal, president of Palmer Electric Company, has reportedly notified Litton there have been some outside inquiries made regarding the possible purchase of the property.

Litton will be seeking direction from the commission on the matter tonight at 7 p.m. in the old Lake Mary City Hall 158 N. Country Club Road.

Tonight's meeting will be the final city commission meeting at that location, as the new City Hall Commission Chambers will be ready for use by the next meeting, scheduled for July 19.

Victim chased with meat cleaver

SANFORD — A man who allegedly chased a man from his house with a meat cleaver and then fired six shots at the victim stood with a group on Midway Avenue at about 3 p.m. Wednesday, has been arrested by Sanford police.

Johnnie Lee McKinnon, 32, 3250 Midway Ave., Sanford, was arrested at his house at 3:39 p.m. Wednesday on a charge of aggravated assault.

The weapons were not recovered, but the victim, who had reportedly refused to leave McKinnon's house on request, and witnesses, reportedly identified McKinnon as a suspect in the case.

Stone thrown through window

SANFORD — Tefflic Joseph Ambeau, 45, 50 Downing Street, was arrested at about midnight Tuesday after he allegedly threw a stone through a window of a house at 2847 Sanford Ave., Sanford, city police report.

Ambeau was arrested at home at about 12:02 a.m. Wednesday on charges of throwing a deadly missile into an occupied dwelling and criminal mischief. Police said the victim reportedly saw a man run from her house after the stone was thrown. She reportedly later identified Ambeau as a suspect in the case.

Boy threatened with gun

SANFORD — A man who allegedly pointed a gun at a 15-year-old boy and tapped him on the chest with the gun in Sanford Wednesday night has been arrested.

City police charged Michael J. Mangham, 34, of 126 Wilbur St., Lake Mary, with aggravated assault, aggravated battery, use of a firearm in a felony and carrying a concealed firearm.

Mangham was found in a vehicle on Second Street, at about 9:48 p.m., within minutes of the incident. In a search of the vehicle, police said they found a hidden handgun. The incident occurred on First Street, police said.

Woman hit with frame

SANFORD — A man who allegedly hit a woman with a broken picture frame and cut her forehead during an argument at 617 Beth Drive, Sanford, the residence of both, has been charged with battery.

Daniel Ronald Hass, 26, was arrested at home at about 1 a.m. today, following a dispute with Joyce Muncie, 36, Seminole County sheriff's deputies report.

Bicyclist accused of violence

SANFORD — Charles Leon Boykins, 22, 3395 O'Neil St., Sanford, was arrested on 10th Street, Sanford, at about 8 a.m. Wednesday, after he allegedly attacked another man and Sanford police.

The victim Jim Beam told police Boykins rode past him on a bicycle and stabbed at him with a knife and said, "I'll teach you a lesson about messing with my woman," a police report said.

Boykins also allegedly took a bucket from Beam and threw it across the road. While police were talking to Beam, Boykins allegedly rode up again and yelled, "I'll show you I'll show you." Police ordered him to drop his knife and he did after a police officer reached for his own sidearm, the report said. Boykins allegedly fought police and had to be subdued when being charged with aggravated assault, aggravated assault on a police officer and resisting arrest.

Woman fights police after accident

CASSELBERRY — A woman who allegedly fought Casselberry police investigating a traffic accident at a scene from which the woman was reportedly trying to flee, has been charged with battery on a police officer, resisting arrest, failure to give information on an accident, driving with a suspended license, and other traffic charges.

Flora Esfuillin, 42, 802 Palmetto Ave., Sanford, was arrested at the 7-Eleven, 121 N. Winter Park Drive, Casselberry, the scene of the accident, at about 3 p.m. Wednesday. She reportedly fought police who were called to the scene by occupants of a second vehicle involved in the accident.

Orange, Brevard counties have steepest water bills

United Press International

JACKSONVILLE — Residents of Orange and Brevard counties pay the most for water and sewage, while those in Miami are paying the least, a recent survey of rates in nine of Florida's urban areas shows.

The survey was conducted for the city of Jacksonville, which is considering a major overhaul of its water and sewer system.

Jacksonville Mayor Tommy Hazouri said this week that higher rates will be needed to fund a $95.2 million overhaul of the city's water and sewer systems. Under Hazouri's plan, the largest chunk — $24 million — would be spent buying out private utilities around Duval county.

Hazouri's plan must still be approved by the City Council and the state.

Of the nine cities and counties studied by the city's consultant, Dyer Riddle Mills and Precourt Inc. of Orlando, three municipalities charge more than Jacksonville residents pay.

The average monthly water-sewer bill, based on using 6,000 gallons of water, was highest in Orange County at $40.71, followed by Brevard County at $40.55 and Pensacola at $30.70.

The Jacksonville bill for the average household is $5 more a month than what similar users pay in Orlando, $3 higher than in Tallahassee and $1.50 more than in Fort Pierce.

The rates differ from one place to the other because of factors such as how large the service area is, how recently overhauls were made and whether the utility is publicly or privately owned.

On the low end of the scale is Miami, where residents pay an average $12.82 a month. But that's going to change, city officials said.

Adriana Puente, spokeswoman for the Miami-Dade Water and Sewer Authority Department, said the utility's 380,000 customers probably will see a 5 percent or 6 percent increase Oct. 1.

That's because the department for the first time is considering an "inclining" rate structure aimed at getting Dade County residents to conserve water.

"The more you use, the more you pay," Puente said.

A similar conservation rate is in place in Tampa since January.

Outlook bad for manatees

United Press International

ST. PETERSBURG — The manatee death toll this year is threatening to make 1990 an even worse disaster than last year for the endangered marine mammal in Florida and Georgia waters, wildlife officials say.

So far this year, at least 139 manatees have died in Florida and Georgia waterways.

Scientists studying the whiskered "gentle giants" are predicting a final tally of 200 or more manatee deaths this year — or about one-sixth the remaining population. That would far surpass the landmark of 166 set last year.

The death toll for the first six months of 1990 already is higher than for all of 1988, when 133 of the lethargic sea cows were killed. And it is more than double the number killed 10 years ago.

Biologists estimate 1,200 to 1,500 of the slow-moving mammals are left in Florida, where most of them spend their lives. However, the animals have been seen as far north as North Carolina.

"We've had about 430 dead animals over the last three years."

Turtle nests increasing along beaches

United Press International

WEST PALM BEACH — More sea turtles are nesting along beaches in Palm Beach County this year than last, but existing sea walls are keeping the turtles from their prime nesting areas, state officials said Wednesday.

Despite the present increase in the number of nests, environmental officials say there is no way to predict if the trend will continue throughout the two months remaining in the nesting season, which runs from March to August.

"We can say the number of nests is up, but that does not mean the total will end up that way," said Barbara Schroeder, state Sea Turtle Recovery Coordinator.

Searchers found 45,000 nests statewide last year, said Ron Mezlich, a biologist with the Department of Environmental Regulation.

The turtles nests are most common on the Atlantic coast between Volusia and Broward counties.

Sea walls also are limiting access to prime nesting areas that are above the high water line, said Davis, who has noticed turtle tracks retreating from the sea walls.

An Indecent proposal

An interesting argument has grown out of the furor that North Carolina Sen. Jesse Helms fomented in Congress over public funding of "indecent" art. In Washington and in the arts community across the country, they have been debating how — indeed, if — individual artistic expression can be promoted by a government agency that's also responsible to the mass tastes of its taxpayers.

The problem is far from simple, and the "compromise solution" proposed by the National Endowment for the Arts is only compromised: It's no solution. The NEA is making all its grant recipients sign a kind of decency oath, pledging not to spend the money on anything distasteful to the likes of Helms.

It would have been less offensive simply to refuse public funding for work the NEA didn't like; Congress has no obligation to spend the taxpayers' money on what it thinks is pornographic. But the NEA's pledge makes a mockery of what its very existence is supposed to encourage: art — which is to say, the bold idiosyncratic and emotionally charged visions of skilled artists.

Despite Helms' talk of obscenity, the immediate protests of the arts establishment couldn't have been more dignified, or more compelling. Earlier in June, museums across the country draped in black crepe the great works of art in their collections that were condemned in their own time as obscene. Others covered the works that could never have been acquired or shown to the public without NEA funding.

A few days later, the struggling Iowa University Press and the hard-pressed Bella Lewitaky Dance Co. in Los Angeles turned down their NEA grants on principle, refusing to take any oath to someone else's notions of good taste — even though neither organization has ever been involved in any controversy over sexually explicit work.

Joseph Papp, longtime producer of New York City's famed Shakespeare in the Park, also turned down the NEA's new grant-with-strings. But it is the smaller organizations that will suffer greatly from the loss of funding. The risk they take in making their protest gives more than a glimpse of the stakes in this debate — both for them and for the public, which would be without such small and important stalwarts of the arts if federal funding changes were either to starve or to stifle them.

The debate is not about censorship, though some have called it that. The issue is subtler than that. The NEA is not proposing any ban on the works it doesn't fund. But if the nation cannot find a way to affirmatively support art — knowing that the best of it is nearly always controversial — the effect will be a different kind of suppression, suppression of potential. Would we not rather be a country where the arts thrive, albeit with occasional furors, than a country where they decently wither?

Activists resort to underground testing

SAN FRANCISCO — The AIDS epidemic is causing the medical and scientific community to rethink the way new drugs are tested in this country.

At the recent Sixth International Conference on AIDS here, a local activist group reported favorable results from the underground testing of a Chinese herbal compound. The report, and the group's testing methods, were attacked by leading figures of the drug-testing establishment. However, they were also defended by others who argued that faster testing methods must be established.

Compound Q — the nickname given to trichosanthin — is a purified form of a protein found in the root system of a cucumber plant. In China it has been used for centuries as an abortion-inducing agent. In very early testing it was shown to selectively kill AIDS-infected cells in the test tube.

Last November, Project Inform — a local clearinghouse for AIDS information — decided to do its own community-based testing of the drug on volunteer AIDS sufferers.

The Food and Drug Administration originally tried to shut down the underground tests after one test subject died and two others suffered severe adverse reactions. However, in March, under severe community pressure, the FDA gave Project Inform the go-ahead to conduct further tests.

"At this stage," Project Inform's executive director, Martin Delaney, told a seminar meeting, "we have seen a major and dramatic change in what happens to the patient. We have not seen anything like this with AZT."

In the Project Inform study, 48 HIV positive patients who had been taking AZT, the only officially approved AIDS drug, were given monthly infusions of Compound Q. After 118 days the average T-cell count in 38 patients rose by about 77 cells per cubic millimeter of blood. Based on past experience with AIDS patients, the T-cell count could have been expected to have fallen by about 40 cells per cubic millimeter.

T-cells are critical to the immune system, and are usually the primary target of the AIDS virus. In some scientists' minds the increase of T-cells in patients using Compound Q would represent an arresting of the spread of AIDS within the patients.

Despite the apparent results, Delaney has come under sharp attack.

Dr. Arnold Reisman, editor of The New England Journal of Medicine, criticized the underground test as an "irrational and uncontrolled experiment" and chastised Delaney for releasing his conclusions without providing data to back it up.

Project Inform's testing also came under attack for its lack of scientific method. In most drug trials, patients are split into two groups: One receives the drug being tested and the other control group is given a placebo. Here, without a control, it is impossible to say if the patients receiving Compound Q are really any better off than if they had not received the drug at all. It is known, for instance, that psychological factors can alter the immune system's effectiveness; the subjects' mere expectation that they were receiving an experimental drug could explain the reversal of T-cell destruction.

"I don't think our operation is unethical," countered Delaney. "I find it extremely compassionate."

GEORGE F. WILL

On Bush's heavenly cynicism

WASHINGTON — Different people have different ideas of Heaven. Will it feature, as one poet supposed, eating pate de foie gras to the sound of trumpets? Perhaps. But for many Democrats, Heaven on Earth is watching George Bush eat his words to the sound of snickering from a cynical public that never thought he meant them.

The cynicism of high-level Republicans here is such that they are happily proclaiming (yes, proclaiming; yes, happily) that Bush's changed position regarding taxes, even if the change is real, will not do real political damage because most people assumed he was being cynical all along. And how do you suppose senior Republicans acquire such cynicism? Presidential leadership.

"Read My Lips — I lied," roared the New York Post, aflame with a rage altogether as bogus as Bush's too-tricky-by-half statement on taxes. Bush can neither speak effectively nor keep silent with dignity, so he made his carefully crafted, and crafty, tax statement in a terse (three paragraphs) written message. It was dropped into the press corps like a scrap of wastepaper furtively discarded on a street by a litterer with just enough conscience to be uneasy about littering but not enough of conscience not to litter.

This method of communicating his message did nothing to make the message seem candid, which even a cursory reading reveals it not to be. Disdaining the leadership task of explaining himself, he said only that the statement "speaks for itself." Indeed it does, loudly and damningly.

From sea to shining sea the press took the bait. The Washington Post headline said Bush "calls for new taxes." The Los Angeles Times said he "backs a tax increase." Never have so many fat trout been hooked on such a small fly. And Democrats, allowing their wish to be the father of their thoughts, also read Bush's statement as saying what it ostentatiously does not say.

It says "it is clear to me" that deficit reduction requires, in addition to spending cuts, "tax revenue increases." Democrats, who were busy demanding that Bush include the words "to me," evidently did not notice the labored nature of the locution "tax revenue increases." Such language signals a refusal to use other language. In this case the eschewed words are "tax increase."

Clearly "tax revenue increases" can refer to increased yields from existing taxes as a result of economic growth; or the billions Bush anticipates (as Dukakis did) from improved enforcement of existing taxes; or a short-term spurt of revenues from a cut in the capital-gains tax.

Republicans are panicked by the tax issue, as a Democratic operative understands: "A lot of Republicans are going to have to wake up tomorrow and find another reason for running for office." Many Republicans are reassuring themselves that Bush has not said anything new, or that he is, with admirable deviousness, misleading everyone. Republicans are so dependent on tax-phobia for their political identity, they are telling one another that Bush is a cynic.

John Sununu, Bush's Doberman, who flaunts his cynicism so that his employer's will be less noticeable, told some Republicans that Bush has not committed himself to anything new. Rep. Newt Gingrich, the Republican whip, says "(Bush) very explicitly didn't say 'raise taxes.' He said 'seek new revenue.'" So Bush's statement "didn't represent significant change in Republican policy."

George Mitchell, Democratic leader in the Senate, insists that Sununu did not mean what he said and that Bush said what he clearly did not say. Mitchell says Bush endorsed "tax increases" in a "clear and unambiguous statement." Mitchell has just written a book. Let us hope, for the sake of belles-lettres, that Mitchell is a better writer than reader.

Given the signals of cynicism sent by Bush, Sununu and Gingrich, and so avidly seized upon by grateful Republicans, sensible Democrats assume Bush's statement is designed to lull Democrats into proposing tax increases. At that point Bush will deny accurately — if not honorably — that he never said such a thing.

Democratic realists think the press, by misreading Bush's statement, may force him to mean what he flinched from saying. If not, Democrats will sit mute until Bush proposes a tax increase. If he does, his only idea — taxes are icky — will be nullified.

If he does not, the deficit-reduction process will pit Democrats emphasizing defense cuts against Republicans emphasizing entitlement cuts: tanks against wheelchairs, closing military bases or closing rural hospitals. And Bush probably cannot have the grand passion of his life, a capital-gains cut, without proposing an increase in the income-tax rate for the rich.

In Heaven, 'tis said, all will be made plain. How tiresome. If everything is made plain, what will there be to talk about?

How do senior Republicans acquire such cynicism? Presidential leadership.

JACK ANDERSON

What to do with all these spies?

MUNICH — So many East German spies are coming in from the cold that Western intelligence agencies are overwhelmed as they try to sort out the information from these defectors and the files they bring. Not that the West is complaining about the windfall — it's the espionage equivalent of stumbling onto King Solomon's mines.

For the Soviet Union, whose KGB worked closely with East German spies, it's probably the greatest intelligence loss since World War II. The Western mood is "exultant," according to one West German intelligence official. He and others are preparing for a highly secret meeting to be held here soon between top U.S. and West German intelligence officials. They'll sift through reams of information received so far from a deluge of hundreds of East German defectors.

There have already been almost daily meetings between the West German foreign intelligence service, the BND, and the Central Intelligence Agency here and in Washington since the Berlin Wall fell last November. Both CIA and BND sources describe their current cooperation on the "take" as first rate. One German source noted there's no point in hoarding data, because there's so much.

He predicted the "marvelous" cooperation would get even better in the future. One reason he gave is what he called "the internationality of issues" that will unite the CIA and the BND in their efforts.

Another, more compelling reason, he said, is both the CIA and the BND expect cuts in manpower and budget as the Soviet threat wanes and the Warsaw Pact withers. "We're all have less personnel and fewer resources, so we'll really need to share them," the German official added.

The East German secret services came under the State Security Ministry. Defectors with the most value to the CIA and the BND come from the ministry's foreign intelligence service, or HVA, by its German initials.

They are also the hardest to get. Except for a few top-notch HVA defectors who've revealed excellent information, intelligence sources concede, no key people at the top of the service have come over. To hear a top West German counter-espionage official, they are "fanatic and ideological about communism" and unlikely to defect. Worse, he added, they transferred more than a tenth of their most sensitive files to Moscow last year as reformist East German officials moved in.

Even without their defection, the HVA has changed its tack. "Since last February," the official said, "we have no sign or information that the GDR (East Germany) is spying on us. That's when the East Germans stopped espionage and entered into secret agreements of cooperation with us."

The most important defector so far, according to these intelligence sources, is a top ministry official named Alexander Schalck-Golodkowski. He was East Germany's chief foreign trader until he "jumped" the wall last November. He was jailed briefly in West Berlin but was released for extensive debriefings on East German intelligence activities. In his guise as a trader, he worked full-time with cover firms, one intelligence source told us: "So he has shown us all the firms the East Germans and KGB intelligence agents use for cover around the world."

The lion's share of defectors, so far, have come from the Stasi, the dreaded secret police that East Germany used to spy on its own people. Stasi employed 85,000 people full-time and paid a network of 109,000 citizen-informants.

They'll sift through reams of information received so far from a deluge of hundreds of defectors.

Christian Scientists convicted

BOSTON — A lawyer for a Christian Scientist couple convicted of involuntary manslaughter for relying solely on prayer to treat an illness that killed their young son vowed to appeal, denouncing the verdict as a "mockery" of the religion.

A Suffolk County Superior Court jury deliberated for slightly more than two days before returning the guilty verdict Wednesday against David and Ginger Twitchell.

The panel of eight women and four men determined the Twitchells were guilty of wanton neglect in allowing their 2 1/2-year-old son, Robyn, to die of a bowel obstruction after a five-day illness in April 1986.

Nineteen injured in fireworks explosion

TORRINGTON, Conn. — A rocket from a Fourth of July fireworks display dropped into a crowd of revelers at a city park and exploded, injuring 19 people, including a 3-year-old boy, authorities said today.

The accident occurred at 9:40 p.m. Wednesday, near the end of the 45-minute fireworks display at Fucsenich Park on the banks of the Naugatuck River, said Torrington Fire Lt. Nicholas Florio.

About 5,000 people were watching the show when one of the rockets went astray, exploding about 300 feet away from the platform as it landed in a crowd, Florio said.

People scattered and screamed as the device landed, he said. An ambulance crew, on standby at the event, rushed the injured to Charlotte Hungerford Hospital.

A 3-year-old boy was transferred by emergency medical helicopter to Hartford Hospital, spokesman Robert Summa said.

The toddler was listed in stable condition this morning, a spokeswoman at Hartford Hospital said.

Sketch of dart attacker being prepared

NEW YORK — Detectives investigating more than two dozen dart attacks on women in midtown Manhattan are preparing a sketch of the suspect responsible for the bizarre assaults, authorities said.

By Wednesday, police had confirmed 26 such attacks, with about half occurring near Penn Station, since June 26.

Two most recent attacks occurred Tuesday and were consistent with the pattern reported since women were first hit with the homemade blow darts, said Lt. Raymond O'Donnell, a police spokesman.

U.S. may sue to get chemical

DALLAS — The Defense Department is considering legal action to require two U.S. chemical manufacturers to sell the Pentagon a key ingredient for chemical weapons, despite an agreement signed by President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev to ban such armaments, a newspaper said today.

Citing company policies forbidding involvement in chemical warfare, the two companies, Occidental Chemical Corp. of Dallas and Mobay Corp. of Pittsburgh, have rebuffed Defense Department requests to sell the government thionyl chloride, which is needed to make poison gas artillery shells.

The Defense Department had sought to buy the thionyl chloride to replenish its supplies of the chemical, which were exhausted last month.

Havel re-elected president

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia — Vaclav Havel, the playwright who led November's "Velvet Revolution" that ousted Czechoslovakia's communist leadership, was re-elected Thursday as the nation's president.

Havel was named on 234 of 284 ballots cast in a vote by the Federal Assembly, or Parliament.

The selection of Havel was widely anticipated. The only other presidential candidate was Slovak actor Stefan Kvietik, who was nominated by the Slovak National Party.

Albania ready to open borders

VIENNA — Albania is prepared to open its borders to wide-scale emigration in an attempt to halt a stampede of refugees seeking asylum at foreign embassies, French diplomats said.

Scrambling to defuse unrest that sparked street battles between police and protesters early this week, the communist Albanian government stands ready to grant 15,000 exit visas and may soon abolish the visa requirement altogether, the diplomats said Wednesday after contacts with Albanian officials.

Mandela heads home

LONDON — South African black leader Nelson Mandela ended his tour of Europe and the United States with a frank exchange with Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, but said he was confident his anti-apartheid movement has the "whole support of the international community."

On his last stop Wednesday, Mandela met Thatcher and the two agreed to disagree about the wisdom of keeping economic sanctions against South Africa's white-minority government until it abolishes apartheid.

"I accept that she is an enemy of apartheid and racism," the deputy president of the African National Congress said during a news conference. "We have started a process of consultation, and that is very important."

Pops concert along the Charles River capped by a 20-minute finale and 2 tons of fireworks.

In Philadelphia, where the Second Continental Congress adopted the Declaration of Independence on July 4, 1776, former President Jimmy Carter received the 1990 Philadelphia Liberty Award in recognition of his work since leaving office in promoting freedom and human rights at home and abroad.

Flocks of picnickers amassed on and around the Mall in Washington, D.C., for a day of activities, starting with a noon parade along Constitution Avenue and topped off by a grand display of fireworks over the Lincoln Memorial, visible for miles around.

Nearby, Luther Place Church, a few blocks from the White House, staged a Fourth of July cookout for the homeless who live in a complex of group homes and shelters in the area.

The church's pastor, the Rev. John Steinbrink, said the Fourth of July barbecue was meant in part to keep public attention from wandering from the problem of homelessness.

"We're in a new ballgame now," he said of conflicts between the church and the neighborhood over efforts to help the homeless. "We're now getting hostility instead of hospitality. The homeless are not romantic any more."

Eastern Europeans experiencing their first Fourth of July free of domination by the Soviet Union joined in America's celebrations in suburban New York. 14 East European journalists were offered a taste of Independence Day in small-town U.S.A.

The guests, high-ranking editors from Poland, Hungary, Romania, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia and East Germany, are in the New York area for 10-week internships with major American magazines, said Ruth Whitney, who co-ed the party in Irvington, N.Y.

"We're having hamburgers, potato salad, ice cream, beer and wine — the usual — and they're all bringing Frisbees," Whitney said. After a barbecue by Whitney's backyard pool, the group watched the annual Irvington fireworks display at a park by the Hudson River.

William Holstein, a business professor at the State University of New York at Albany, held a similar "good old-fashioned American cookout" for a Hungarian delegation learning about American free enterprise.

"We really wanted just to do hot dogs and hamburgers to show how a typical American would have a Fourth of July backyard barbecue," said Holstein's wife, Audrey.

Americans around the world — some living in nations where independence is still something to be won rather than celebrated — joined in spirit with the Fourth of July commemorations at home.

U.S. Ambassador Jack Matlock held a reception in Moscow, drawing Yevgeny Primakov, a member of Mikhail Gorbachev's presidential council, and other Soviet officials, despite the continuing Communist Party Congress.

A big embassy bash in Beijing was washed out by torrential rain that began just as things were starting to hum to the music of a blues band led by an American correspondent.

After four decades of faithfully observing the anniversary of the 1917 Russian revolution, Bulgaria celebrated American independence for the first time with a ceremony at the national Palace of Culture. The theme: "Bulgaria discovers America."

"The average Bulgarian appreciates American democracy and has a good knowledge of the American values," the official news agency BTA said.

The Romanian government, which has sought to mend strained U.S.-Romanian relations following last month's crackdown on anti-government demonstrators in Bucharest, sent a congratulatory message to President Bush and called for a new "spirit of mutual respect and confidence" between the two countries.

Bush spent most of Independence Day at his summer home in Kennebunkport, Maine, before leaving for Thursday's NATO summit in London. He caught a fireworks display in Kennebunkport Tuesday night and then started his Independence Day early, speeding through 18 holes of golf before an afternoon filled with boating and fishing.

More than 40,000 people in Atlanta joined the president in rejecting the notion that holidays are strictly for rest and relaxation. They ran — or, in the case of the many wheelchair competitors, rolled — for 10 kilometers in the 21st Peachtree Road Race.

In Fort Lauderdale, Fla., a morning "Sandblast" contest drew more than 25,000 to the beach to watch the creation of sand sculptures, many with patriotic or environmental themes. The biggest was a giant Snoopy lying on a 200-ton sand castle surrounded by Charlie Brown, Woodstock and other Peanuts characters.

Fireworks

Sanford Police Chief Steve Harriett this morning estimated 10,000 spectators saw the fireworks from the Lake Monroe waterfront.

The fireworks and Doo-dah Parade were two of several Independence Day celebrations across Seminole County yesterday. In Geneva, the Geneva Citizens Association hosted a parade through the community, while barbecues and other fireworks displays were held throughout the area.

In Sanford, the fireworks might not have flown at all if not for Steve Alford, a Sanford resident who, about one month ago spearheaded a campaign to raise money for fireworks after hearing that the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce would not host the traditional Fourth of July display.

In little more than four weeks, Alford managed to solicit more than $4,000 to pay the Vickers for the display. The total exceeded last year's by $500. Vickers is the owner of APC Fireworks, Orlando, which has been putting on Sanford's show since 1968.

"Obviously, the People's Fireworks supporters are ready, willing and able to do it again next year," said Dave Farr, chamber executive director. "Steve showed the business community that it could be done through civic groups and business people. He has done just what the chamber of commerce hoped he would do. I think he did a wonderful job."

Alford dressed in a red, white and blue tuxedo, complete with top-hat and tails, which he wore as the Less than Grand Marshal in the Doo-dah Parade. Although attired as Uncle Sam, Alford responded in comical Joe Iauzu fashion when someone shouted a thank-you during the parade: "Piece of cake; extra icing," he yelled in response. "I never broke a sweat."

The display lasted 10 minutes. Vickers earlier had said the display would last from 20 to 23 minutes, depending on the humidity level. The more water there is in the air, the slower the fuses burn.

Onlookers weren't extremely thrilled about the show. But they seemed to enjoy it, even if it was a little short-lived.

"I think it was very nice — what they had of it," said Kaye Warner, of Sanford. "But they were beautiful."

"It was pretty good," said Bernie Paquin, of Caseleberry. "It's pretty crowded. We were lucky to find this spot," said Paquin, standing by the boat ramp at the Holiday Inn Marina.

Alford said he thought the show was "pretty nice," but it could be even better next year, because the fundraising will start earlier.

"They, for four weeks we didn't do too bad," Alford said.

Jeff Blackstone, general manager of the Holiday Inn, estimated the crowd at about 10,000.

"It's a nice turnout," Blackstone said. "I think it would have been nicer if the city had helped the gentleman out," he said, referring to Alford. "I think we'll try to get with him on the effort and start out a lot earlier for next year's fireworks."

Alford said a bank account will be kept open year round to accept donations for the fund. The account is with the Navy Orlando Credit Union on the corner of Third Street and Park Avenue in Sanford.

night — it

made people laugh. "It was terrific," yelled an ecstatic Anita Kirk, a Sanford resident. "Did you see that lady who dressed as a Palmetto Bug? She even died her skin brown. She went the distance. She should win."

Kirk said the only problem was that not enough people had the bug theme in mind for the parade.

"They should have had more bugs," Kirk said. "This is Florida. They should have had a whole flock of bugs."

Bettye Reagan, who dressed as the giant palmetto bug, garnered laughter and applause from parade watchers as she dodged and weaved among other participants, while trying to escape the bug sprayer carried by Louise Austin.

Asked why she chose the giant roach theme, Reagan said it was an obvious choice.

"I'm a Florida native and I figured, what could be more Florida than a roach?"

Parade judges were Sanford Police Chief Steve Harriett, Sanford Mayor Bettye Smith and Circuit Court Judge Joe Davis, and Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce Executive Director Dave Farr.

Lawton

Plans to put more than one school on the modified calendar may be put on hold while the district works on educating the public about the year round school concept.

Year round schools allow for continuous learning throughout the year, which research shows improves a student's performance on tests. The modified calendar also allows vacations to be planned at several times throughout the year instead of only in the summer.

Mizwicki knows that the year round schooling idea will be a success at Lawton. He has confidence because he has educated the parents and he is willing to work with them on any problem, such as day care, they might encounter under the new calendar.

However, he refuses to call Lawton a "pilot" program. He said that a pilot program is one where things are tried out and

The Clendenins said they will not protest the action taken by their landlord, though they have been told by another attorney that they have the right to display anything they want on their property as long as they pay their rent.

"We just complied with what they told us to do," Clendenin said. "They're putting us out in

She said they tried to explain to the church officials that things had been stolen from their property and they wanted to warn thieves that they were prepared to take action, but the church still objected to the sign.

"It's just not right," Clendenin said. "But what are we going to do?"

STATEMENT OF FINDINGS AND PUBLIC EXPLANATION Floodplain Management (Executive Order 11988) Wetlands Protection (Executive Order 11988)

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) has analyzed the project identified below, as required by Presidential directive (Executive Orders 11988 and 11989) and determined that federal mortgage insurance should be granted therefor.

The Crystal Creek subdivision, Phases I, II and III, is located in the northwest quadrant of the intersection of County Road 427 and Country Club Road in unincorporated Seminole County, Florida. It is a planned residential community of 205 lots as well as vacant commercial and residential land. The developer is A. Wayne Rich, Trustee.

Since this project is located in a base (i.e., 100-year frequency) floodplain established by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA), or is located in wetland type soils, HUD was required by Executive Orders 11988 and 11989 to deny assistance to this project unless there is no practicable alternative to doing so. An analysis by HUD indicates there is no practicable alternative. The basis for this determination is as follows:

Construction will be in compliance with the Wetlands Protection Plan and with the Floodplain Management Plan prepared by the community as a condition of their participation in the National Flood Insurance Program. Any comments received as a result of the Early Public Notice for this project on May 14, 1990, were considered in the analysis which can be reviewed at the HUD office identified below: U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development Orlando Office, Region IV 3251 Maguire Blvd., Suite 270 Orlando, FL 32803 Public comments on this statement will be received and considered for a period of fifteen (15) days from publication. The project will not be implemented without considering public comments. Publish: July 5, 1990 DET-69

IN BRIEF

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Jackson's blast leads Royals

Bo doesn't know his own strength. Jackson's mammoth three-run homer triggered a seven-run seventh inning Wednesday, rallying the Kansas City Royals to a 13-6 win over the New York Yankees.

Jackson's home run, a towering 450-foot blast over the center-field fence off reliever Lee Guetterman, was his 15th of the year and his sixth in the last nine games.

Frank White and Kevin Setzler each had two-run homers for the Royals, who were able to withstand a season-high 18 hits for the Yankees.

Steve Crawford, 2-1, gained the victory in relief of starter Bret Saberhagen.

Elsewhere in the American League, Boston nipped Minnesota 4-3. Seattle clipped Cleveland 3-2. Toronto topped California 4-2. Milwaukee mauled Oakland 7-1. Baltimore battered Texas 9-4, and Detroit outlasted Chicago 10-7 in 12 innings.

BASEBALL

Canseco, Sandberg top voting

NEW YORK — Jose Canseco and Ryne Sandberg led their leagues in voting for the All-Star Game, and Canseco was joined by Oakland teammates Rickey Henderson and Mark McGwire when the starting lineups were announced Wednesday.

The 61st All-Star Game will be played Tuesday night at Wrigley Field in Chicago.

Canseco, of the World Champion Athletics, received 2,313,091 votes in fan balloting, the most since Montreal's Gary Carter received 2,785,407 ballots in 1982.

Chicago Cubs second baseman Sandberg, who leads the National League with 24 homers, collected 2,262,245 votes.

WORLD CUP

Rematch of 1986 set

TURIN, Italy — Four years later, it's West Germany and Argentina all over again.

West Germany became the first country to qualify for three straight World Cup finals Wednesday night, defeating England and goalkeeping great Peter Shilton 4-3 in a penalty-kick shootout.

The West Germans, who played England to a 1-1 draw after 120 minutes of regulation and overtime, now meet defending champion Argentina in Rome Sunday in a rematch of the 1986 World Cup final.

This will be West Germany's sixth appearance in the final after victories in 1954 and 1974 and defeats in 1966, 1982 and 1986. England will play Italy for third place in Bari Saturday.

On Tuesday, Argentina qualified for the final on a penalty-kick shootout against Italy, marking the first time shootouts have decided both World Cup semifinals.

AUTO RACING

Pepsi 400 practice starts

DAYTONA BEACH — For the past three years, Mark Martin has vowed to climb to the top of the NASCAR Winston Cup Series. Even when Martin's luck was down, his spirits remained high.

Martin now has good reason for optimism. He is the NASCAR points leader entering Saturday's Pepsi 400 at Daytona International Speedway.

The first 20 positions for Saturday's race will be determined Thursday morning, with the rest of the field set Friday.

During a 4 1/2-hour practice session Wednesday, Winter Park's Greg Sacks posted the fastest speed of the day at 195.228 mph in a Chevrolet Lumina. Dale Earnhardt, also in a Chevy, was next at 193.476 mph. Ken Schrader (192.710), Jimmy Spencer (191.376), and Darrell Waltrip (190.828) rounded out the top-five practice times. Martin was 10th fastest at 190.269 mph.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Martinez, Expos slow Reds

Dennis Martinez, who limited the Cincinnati Reds to five hits over eight innings Wednesday night in the Montreal Expos 5-3 victory over the Cincinnati Reds, came to the plate in the first inning against Tim Lincecum with a 5-0 lead and in his view, wearing a target.

The right-hander, who earlier in the year hit Cincinnati pitcher Jack Armstrong with a pitch, fully expected Birtsas to even the score.

He was right. Birtsas plunked Martinez on the elbow with a pitch.

Intentional or not, nailing Martinez may not have been such a good idea by the Reds.

The incident only fired up Martinez en route to evening his record at 6-6.

Martinez fired a bit in the eighth, so in came Dave Schmidt, who worked the ninth to record his 10th save.

In other National League action, San Francisco routed St. Louis 9-2. New York pounded Houston 7-4. Atlanta topped Philadelphia 4-1. San Diego nipped Pittsburgh 5-4 and Chicago downed Los Angeles 5-3.

Locals start fun time

Sanford hosts sub-district tournament at Fort Mellon

From staff reports

SANFORD — Now the fun begins.

After practicing against one another for the past five weeks the Sanford Little Major League All-Stars will get to play for real as the 1990 Sub-District Tournament opens at Fort Mellon Park's Roy Holler Field tonight.

Leesburg and Orlando S.A.Y. open the tournament at 6 p.m. with Sanford taking on Orlando Recreation Department in the 7:30 p.m. nightcap.

This tournament marks two major changes from past tournaments. Sanford will send only one representative for the first time in at least 20 years and this year's tournament will be a round robin affair instead of the traditional double elimination format.

Under the new format the schedule has already been set. On Friday, Leesburg will face Orlando Recreation at 6 p.m. and Sanford will challenge Orlando S.A.Y. at 7:30 p.m. and on Saturday, Sanford and Leesburg will do battle at 6 p.m. and the two Orlando teams will square off at 7:30 p.m.

The winner of the tournament will be decided by head-to-head competition. If there is a three way tie the winner will be the team that scores the most runs in the tournament.

The winner of this tournament will advance to the District IV tournament in Leesburg next week, with the winner of that tournament going to Panama City for the state championship the last week in July.

Head Coach Steve Laurence and his assistants, Jeff Deen and Dean Smith, have been putting the 18 man Sanford team through their paces and have settled on a group of 13 who will make up the starting lineup.

"These 13 have shown the most ability during the practices," said Laurence. "But I will not hesitate to use any of the 18. I expect us to hit the ball well and play good defense. If we get good pitching we can go places. This is a very talented ball club."

Laurence will choose the starting pitcher for tonight's contest from the trio of Cedric Williams, Terrell Jackson and Joshua Watson. Jackson and Watson played for the City Champion Rinker Materials Dodgers while Williams was undefeated while playing for the Railroaders Cubs this season.

If Williams is the starter Albert Hampton from the Seminole Ford Red Sox will be the first baseman, the second baseman will be either Damon Coppola of the Dodgers or Mike Howard from the Cubs, the third baseman will be Shawn Eason from the First Federal of Seminole Cardinals and the shortstop will be Watson.

The outfield will consist of Kevin Butler from the American Division champion Disabled American Veterans Royals in right, Jackson in center and Alexis Acosta from the Royals in left. The catcher was expected to be Paul Evans of the Cubs but he is recovering from a broken finger so either Bart Dixon of the Cardinals or Donnie Hinson of the Royals will get the call.

If Jackson is the starter Cedric Williams will play first base with either Corey Williams of the Royals or Alberto Williams of the First Union A's in centerfield.

If Watson is the starter Acosta will move to shortstop with Corey or Alberto Williams playing left.

Other players at the disposal of Laurence are Phillip Reynolds of the SunBank Orioles, Byron Deese of the Dodgers, James Fields of the Sunland Pirates and Lloyd Dixon of the Royals.

Cedric Williams (top), Joshua Watson (L) or Terrell Jackson (R) are expected to get the call as the starting pitcher tonight as the Sanford Little Major League All-Stars go in search of a berth in next week's district tournament when the sub-district opens at Fort Mellon Park's Roy Holler Field tonight.

Magic move on to championships

From staff reports

Thanks to a 29-22 win over Virginia Silver, the Magic of the Sunshine Basketball Association have advanced to the championship pool of the AAU/Carrier Boys' 11-and-Under National Championship Basketball Tournament.

The Magic, who draw players from the Seminole County area, will open with Maryland in the 16-team, double-elimination championship series. On Monday, the tourney started with 41 teams divided into eight pools. Three days of round-robin play later, the top two teams in each pool advance to the championship pool.

Round-robin pool play wrapped up at five county high schools on Wednesday.

At Oviedo High School, Western Pennsylvania topped Ozark Gold 41-36. Ohio trimmed North Carolina Gold 46-43. Arkansas Silver defeated Indiana Bronze 59-47. Wisconsin Gold knocked off Pacific Southwest 52-46 and North Carolina Silver def. Oklahoma in OT. No score was reported.

At Lake Brantley High School, Pacific Northwest Silver whipped Gainesville 65-20. Maryland dunked Arkansas Gold 59-47. West Virginia thrashed Pacific 66-20 and Potomac Valley Gold downed Oregon 50-34.

At Lake Howell High School, Oklahoma overcame

Lendl, Becker, Edberg, Ivanisevic in semi's

United Press International

WIMBLEDON, England — Top seed Ivan Lendl, looking to become the fifth man to win all four Grand Slam titles, survived a surprisingly stiff challenge from Brad Pearce and advanced Wednesday to Wimbledon's semifinals with a rain-delayed 6-4, 6-4, 5-7, 6-4 victory.

On Friday, Lendl will face his first seed in the tournament, No. 3 Stefan Edberg. Defending champion Boris Becker also advanced to the semifinals, where he will meet Goran Ivanisevic, the 18-year-old who beat him in the first round of the French Open.

Wednesday's matches were delayed because of rain for more than four hours. When play did begin, players had to deal with gusting, swirling winds while dark clouds swept overhead.

Pearce, ranked No. 120, lived up to Lendl's description of him as "a solid player with good shots." The American played a smart, steady game, always keeping the ball deep and making Lendl work for his net-rushing opportunities.

Becker, refusing to yield to the history of "The Graveyard," Wimbledon's famed Court No. 2, where upsets are a tradition, dispatched No. 7 Brad Gilbert 6-4, 6-4, 6-1.

In a pairing of hard-serving non-seeds, Ivanisevic reached his first Grand Slam semifinal with a 4-6, 6-4, 6-4, 6-7 (8-10), 6-3 victory over 1985 finalist Kevin Curren.

Edberg made the semifinals for the fourth consecutive year by overwhelming fellow Swede Christian Bergstrom 6-3, 6-2, 6-4.

Becker said the weather, the smaller stadium at Court No. 2 and the subdued crowd made it difficult to remember he was playing for a semifinal berth at Wimbledon.

Gilbert, who entered the match with a 4-3 career advantage against Becker, played the 22-year-old champion even through the first six games, but the West German's booming serve and accurate service return proved too good. In Becker's final 10 service games, he dropped just 10 points.

Ivanisevic, whose groundstrokes are consistent and hard, had a match point in the fourth-set tiebreaker, at 8-7, but failed to convert as the more experienced Curren took the next three points. Ivanisevic broke the South African native in the fourth game of the fifth set then held serve to complete the match.

Play resumes Thursday in the women's singles, with defending champion Steffi Graf facing No. 5 Zina Garrison and No. 2 Martina Navratilova meeting No. 4 Gabriela Sabatini.

Garrison, who upset No. 3 Monica Seles in the quarterfinals, will likely have to play the match of her life to beat Graf, who has not lost a set thus far and is playing on her best surface. Garrison has not beaten Graf since 1985, losing their last five meetings, but is eager to gain her first Grand Slam final.

Navratilova, 33, desperate for a record ninth Wimbledon singles title, has a career mark of 12-3 against Sabatini. The No. 4 seed seems unlikely to pull an upset. Her play has been erratic this year and she has not learned the serve-and-volley game Navratilova has mastered.

YBOA play continues

From staff reports

ORLANDO — It was not a good day for Seminole County in the Youth Basketball Organization of America's Girl's National Basketball Championships in Orlando Wednesday as only one of the seven teams competing in the four age groups was victorious in pool play.

The only winners were the Sunshine Basketball Association-Kemper in the 12-and-Under's as they stomped the Kutis Liners of St. Louis 42-17 at Walker Middle School.

The other county teams in the 12-and-Under's, the Oviedo Tigers and the Inter-County Basketball Association-Florida, were not as lucky as the Tigers were embarrassed by the undefeated Seattle (Wa.) Magic 63-8 and the ICBA dropped a close 44-40 decision to the Kutis Kewpies (St. Louis, Mo.).

The schedule for today for the 12-and-Under's at Walker Middle School has Kenner playing Oviedo at 1 p.m., SBA-Kemper facing the Kewpies at 2:15 p.m., West Virginia challenging the Liners at 3:45 p.m. and the Magic against ICBA-Florida at 5 p.m.

In the 10-and-Under, the Conway Middle School, the SBA-Bulls dropped a 26-25 heartbreaker to Eastern Middlesex of Reading, Mass., and Kenner eased by the Bruins (Pa.) 29-27.

In the 11-and-Under, also at Conway, Kenner topped the SBA-Stingers 46-43. The New Jersey A's hammered the Kutis Mashers 43-2 and Parkersburg, W.V. doubled the score on Eastern Middlesex 36-18.

In the 15-and-Under, at Westridge Middle School, Top Gun of Indiana bested the SBA-Pistons 78-52. Oklahoma clobbered the ICBA 74-27. Little Ma Power whipped the Kutis Elites 58-22 and Capital Maryland grounded the Kutis Flyers 89-39.

Enter our writing contest

The Sanford Herald is searching for two Seminole County high school students who are prospective journalists.

Write us a letter about a person in Seminole County whom you would like to interview. The person need not be famous. He or she could be an unsung hero who volunteers time to those less fortunate. You may choose to interview a politician, community leader, or even someone notorious. Tell us why you wish to write a story about this person.

Your letter will be reviewed by our panel of judges based on originality, clarity of thought and our accessibility to the person to be interviewed. (Remember, the person must be available for an interview.)

Two winners will be selected. Each will write a feature story, assisted by one of our editors, to appear in a future edition of the Herald. Letters should be typed or printed legibly. Include your name, street address, city and daytime phone number.

Deliver or mail to "Feature Story Contest," Sanford Herald, 300 N. French Ave., Sanford, 32771.

There is no maximum length limit on letters.

Entries are due at the Herald office by 1 p.m., Friday August 10.

Woman looking for right man keeps finding the wrong man

DEAR ABBY: I'm slim, blond, well-groomed, take two baths a day, and everyone says I'm pretty. I come from a good, middle-class Protestant family. My mother is a retired tax consultant and my father is an engineer. I play three musical instruments and speak three languages.

Last year, I won a bronze medal in the county triathlon (a long-distance race consisting of swimming, bicycling and running). I don't drink liquor or use recreational drugs, nor do I frequent bars.

I am 40 years old, have no children, no health problems, and I own a nice car. I have been formally engaged twice and broke the engagements. Both men were compulsive liars. One had been married seven (yes, seven!) times. His last wife told me he was still married to her when he started dating me! I am not currently dating, deliberately, to avoid another disaster.

Why can't I have a nice, normal relationship with an honest, decent, middle-class guy where I won't be lied to, stolen from or beaten up? I have no preconceived demands such as height, looks, bank account, religion. So, how can I connect with Mr. Nice and Normal?

THOROUGHLY CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: There are con artists everywhere, so one's only protection is to check out their backgrounds with someone who has known them for a very long time.

One of the best ways to meet nice people is through other nice people - put out the word to friends and relatives that you are interested in meeting someone nice. At least that way, you will have the benefit of a little "history" regarding the person.

Also be very wary of people who seem to have no relatives or friends who have known them from way back.

DEAR ABBY: Here's one for you. My wife and I were married over a year ago. We sent wedding invitations to a number of family members and friends. One of my cousins who lives many miles away called to say that she couldn't attend, and asked whether we would like "a this" or "a that" from a prominent store in her town.

I chose between the two items and thanked her, but now I really can't recall what the items were. It was a very cordial conversation.

ADVICE

Well, here it is, a year later, and neither the "this" nor the "that" has arrived. My concern: Did my cousin forget or decide not to send anything (which is fine), or did the store not send it (which isn't). And, hence, since my cousin may have thought a gift was sent and she hasn't received a "thank-you," she may be miffed.

PERPLEXED IN PRINCETON

DEAR PERPLEXED: Since your cousin did not attend the wedding, and you received no gift from her, I think it's safe to assume that she sent none. In any case, I would not ask her if she had sent anything. She may get the impression that you are "flashing."

DEAR ABBY: I just read your article from "Tillie W. Brice, Easton, Pa." stating, "My how things have changed" - and she enclosed a hospital bill from May 1946 for a 10-day stay in the hospital at a cost of $124.

Well, I can top that! My mother put the hospital bill for when I was born in my baby book. The date was May 14, 1930, at The Swediah Hospital in Minneapolis.

Her "room" cost $3 a day and she stayed for seven days. Other expenses were:

Birth Room, $7; N.O. Gas Anesthetist, $1; Dressings, $3; Medicines, $1.45; Pathology, $1; Baby Care, $7 ($1 per day). The total bill was $41.45.

DOROTHY ALPERTO, MELBOURNE, FLA.

DEAR ABBY: Who said, "Life is tough. Three out of three people die, so shut up and deal"? It sounds like Damon Runyon.

BUBBA IN BIRMINGHAM

DEAR BUBBA: It may sound like Damon Runyon, but credit Ring Lardner.

Vitamin deficiency causes anemia

DEAR DR. GOTT: Do you have any information about refractory megaloblastic anemia? As a layperson, I need some words I can understand.

DEAR READER: The term megaloblastic refers to a class of diseases causing anemia marked by red blood cells that are larger than normal. The most common causes of megaloblastic anemia are vitamin B-12 deficiency (pernicious anemia), folic-acid deficiency and anti-cancer drugs (that interfere with blood formation in the bone marrow).

Pernicious anemia is due to defective absorption of vitamin B-12 from the intestine. The treatment is safe and effective: intramuscular injections of vitamin B-12.

Folic acid, like B-12, is a vitamin. Deficiency can result from inadequate quantities in the diet or insufficient intestinal absorption. Treatment consists of high-dose oral replacement.

Anti-cancer drugs often disrupt the metabolism of blood-forming cells. A megaloblastic anemia can result if too few red corpuscles are manufactured. Once the cycle of chemotherapy is completed and the drugs are stopped, the anemia usually self-corrects, and the bone marrow returns to normal.

Refractory anemia means the condition does not respond to treatment. The three examples I gave almost always respond — if the proper treatment is given. However, there is an exceedingly rare type of megaloblastic anemia called Di Guglielmo syndrome (erythremic myelosis) of unknown cause, for which there is no therapy. If this is your diagnosis, you should be under the care of a hematologist.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a sophomore at Florida State University majoring in nutrition and fitness and was interested in your column on numbness of the limbs. I had a similar problem that was corrected with vitamin-B complex. You might want to pass this information on to your readers.

DEAR READER: The B

vitamins include: B-1 (thiamin), B-2 (riboflavin), B-3 (niacin), B-6 (pyridoxine) and B-12 (cobalamin). This class of vitamins is vital to good health; deficiency of any one vitamin could lead to severe consequences, ranging from fatigue to heart failure.

Fortunately, the B vitamins are abundant in foods such as lean meats, whole grain cereals and nuts. Therefore, deficiencies are rare except in people on limited diets, pregnant women and patients with chronic diseases (such as diabetes).

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby
South would have liked stronger clubs, but everything else about his cards cried out for a game force in no-trump. West led a heart, and declarer put up dummy's queen, won by East with the ace. Back came the 10 of hearts, ducked, and the third heart, won by declarer's king. It was apparent that West had started with five hearts, and it was equally apparent that making the contract depended upon setting up extra diamond tricks without allowing West to gain the lead. Bill Root analyzes this problem succinctly in "How to Play a Bridge Hand" (Crown Publishers, Inc.). If diamonds are 2-2 or if East has three, there is no problem. If West has three diamonds, you can keep him out of the lead only if East has the lone queen, so you must allow for it. After winning the king of hearts, declarer plays a spade to reach dummy. When he leads a diamond from dummy and East plays the queen, declarer can play low. Since East has no more hearts, declarer will win the next trick and play A-K of diamonds, running the suit to make his contract. If the queen of diamonds had not appeared from East, declarer would of course have played A-K, hoping for the best.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bode Cool
YOUR BIRTHDAY
July 6, 1990

Even though partnership arrangements might not be too appealing to you in the year ahead, several alliances you form will be extremely advantageous. Others might be only of nominal value.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) A partnership arrangement could represent your most beneficial involvement today. It will have mutual advantages, but each party will have to work at it. Get a jump on life by understanding the influences which are governing you in the year ahead. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today by mailing $1.25 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Something you've been trying to do that hasn't worked out successfully so far can be accomplished today if you approach it in a methodical manner. Do things one step at a time.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You'll be better at calling the shots today than you will be trying to comply with the directives of others. Don't be reluctant to take charge when you see other fumbling.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't waste any time today on frivolous pursuits, because if you focus on your more serious priorities what you can accomplish may amaze you. Handle the tougher matters first.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If there is a serious issue you'd like to iron out with another today, don't beat about the bush. Get down to basics as quickly as possible and set your mind upon resolutions.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be alert for ways to improve your material circumstances today. Your possibilities for personal gain look good, even though what you might get won't be earth shaking.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If something difficult has to be taken care of in your dealings with your peers today, you are likely to be appointed a committee of one to get it done.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Usually you are rather outgoing and friendly in your personal relationships, but today you might be a trifle withdrawn. Come out of your corner, you'll have more fun being a mixer than a loner.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) View your expectations realistically today, because your possibilities for making them realities are within the realm of probability. Practical goals are achievable.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your possibilities for being an achiever are quite good today, but you're likely to be extremely selective regarding your objectives. If you're not strongly motivated, you might wait until later.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) A lesson you've learned from a painful, past experience will be put to constructive use today. You're not apt to make the same mistake twice.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Financial or commercial involvements should be your strong suit today. You'll recognize a good deal if you see one and you'll know how to advantageously fit yourself into the picture.
