H.W. 'Bill' Suber elected president

Suber to head state appraisers

SANFORD — H.W. "Bill" Suber, Seminole County Property Appraiser, has been elected as President of the state-wide Florida Association of Property Appraisers for 1993-94.

The election was made during the association's Post Legislative Conference held recently in Altamonte Springs.

Suber has been a key member of the association for many years. He has served as the organization's Legislative Chairman during this past year and is credited with being instrumental in writing and helping pass state legislation connected with property appraisals.

According to Martha Cleaver, Association spokesperson in Tallahassee, "Mr. Suber has chaired the Administrative Procedures Committee, which has worked very closely with the Department of Revenue in writing rules that will help the department and property appraisers to better serve the citizens of the State of Florida."

"The association looks forward to a very productive year under Suber's leadership," she added.

Suber has been a Sanford resident since late 1967, and has served as Seminole County Property Appraiser since 1980. He is presently in his fourth term in office.

The drawing also produced 223 winning tickets with five of the six numbers, worth $1,376.50 each; 11,220 with four of the numbers, worth $65.60 each, and 203,613 with half the numbers, worth $5 each.

Intelligent hairdryers?

Local company offers 'fuzzy logic' to appliances

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

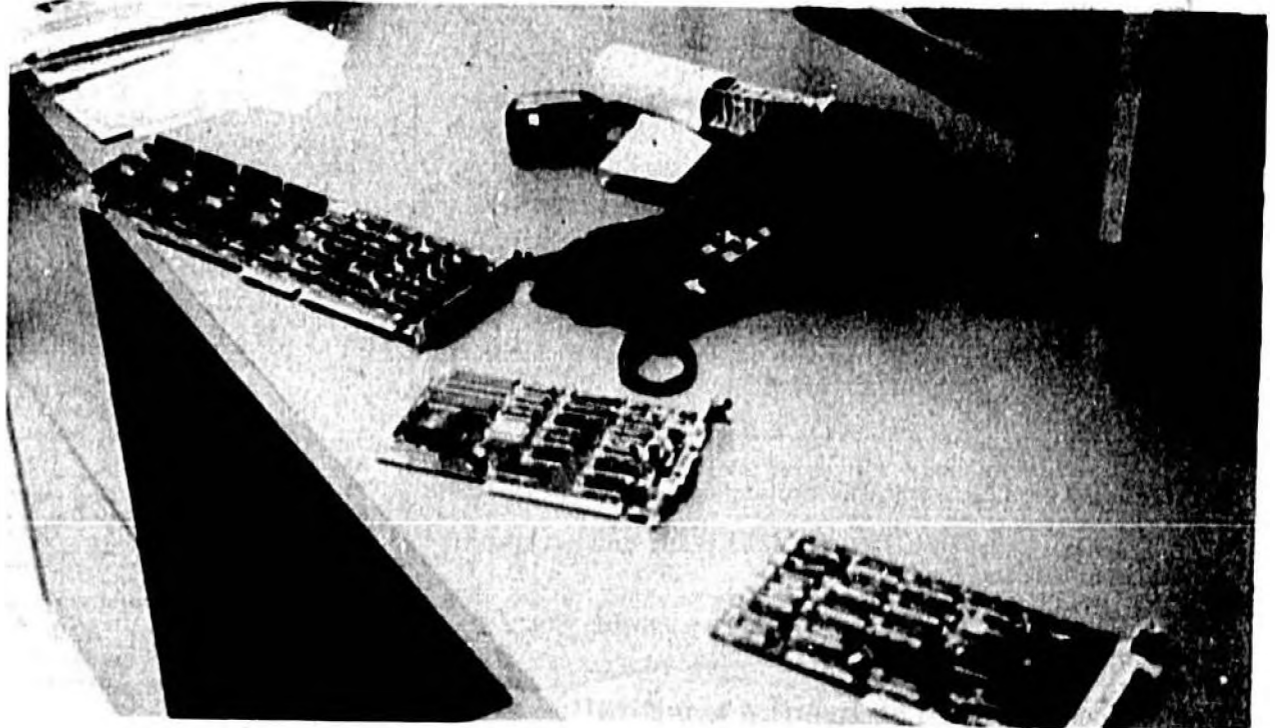

SANFORD — A self-adjusting hairdryer may be a long way from HAL, the recalcitrant computer from "2001 - A Space Odyssey," but a local electronics company hopes hairdryers and other common products will blow it into the leading-edge field of artificial intelligence applications.

American Neuralogix Inc. is a small company headquartered in Northstar Business Park on Sanford's west side striving to create a new market in microprocessors. The 2 1/2-year-old company is the first manufacturer in the world of low-cost computer brains which use "fuzzy logic," a process which electronically mimics animal, even human, thought processes.

By targeting the market of low-cost machine and equipment control, Neuralogix officers believe they can create a new industry of smart products. Paul Baschore, Neuralogix founder and vice president of engineering, says the company has two patents and is seeking nine others.

Baschore says Neuralogix has sold about 1,000 development packages which allow engineers to quickly create uses for the chips.

LONGWOOD — A hearing on removing a code enforcement board (CEB) member from office for violating board rules, a performance review request from the city administrator and baseball may all be a part of Monday night's Longwood City Commission meeting.

Topping the agenda action will be a hearing by the commissioners on charges that CEB member Lynette Dennis violated board rules by discussing an active case which was before the board. The charge against Dennis stems from a case against Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hardy, Jr. who own AAA Tree Service.

She is specifically charged with obtaining documents and filing alleged charges against the Codes Enforcement Officer with information taken either from a respondent or other interested party prior to the final resolution of the case.

Dennis wrote a letter to Mayor Paul Lovstrand about the handling of the case, which also included evidence about the case. Lovstrand appointed Dennis to the CEB. She was attending her first meeting when the Hardy case was heard. Dennis also acknowledged she was a long-time friend of the couple's. Although Dennis said she intended to file a conflict of interest in the case, she interceded on the Hardys' behalf, according to CEB members. Citing the possibility of political interference in the case or in the future operation of the board, two code enforcement board members resigned. The city code enforcement officer also resigned.

The remaining CEB members asked the commission to remove Dennis from office for violating the board's rules.

In other business, the commission may face a protest over an agreement with Longwood Babe Ruth Baseball, Inc. for use of the city ball diamonds.

Longwood resident Rick Scharla said Friday he was planning a petition drive against the agreement which gives Babe Ruth priority in use of the baseball fields. Scharla, who heads the Little League program, claimed Friday his protest had nothing to do with any baseball rivalry.

Scharla was an unsuccessful city commission candidate in the last election. He also served on the Babe Ruth Baseball board before leaving to start the Little League program.

"My concern is for the kids," Scharla said. He explained he and his son went to Reiter Park in Longwood recently to play ball but were shoed away by a city employee, who said the field was for the use of Babe Ruth. If the agreement is

SHS senior receives Florida scholarship

By VICKI DeSORMIER

SANFORD — Lisa M. LaSalle, a senior at Seminole High School, has been awarded the Florida Vocational Association Scholarship this year.

The $1,000 scholarship is awarded annually to the graduating senior in the state who has excelled in business and technical education and who has achieved strong success in academic pursuits as well.

The student must also be a strong role model for other students and in the community as well as having outstanding leadership service and dedication.

"It's a great honor," said Mary Cragar, the director of the Seminole Vocational Association. "In addition to the financial benefits of the scholarship, it is a strong statement about the quality of student that Lisa is both in academic classes and in her vocational classes as well."

Cragar said that LaSalle will graduate with honors from Seminole High next month having completed both the accounting and the computer business programs.

She presently serves as the vice president of the Seminole High School chapter of the Future Business Leaders Association (FBLA).

Cragar said LaSalle has participated in many local and state vocational competitions and has always done well in those contests.

She is also active in the school's student government and other organizations.

LaSalle is employed part-time at the Central Florida Pediatrics office in Sanford.

She has been accepted at Seminole Community College where she plans to pursue her associates degree in accounting and business finance.

Judge rejects mercy recommendation

PENSACOLA — A judge has rejected a jury's recommendation for mercy and sentenced a teen-ager to death for murdering a man the defendant claimed had made homosexual advances.

Circuit Judge Nickolas Geeker overrode a 10-2 jury vote for life in prison Friday and ordered that Matthew Dale Boyett, 19, die in Florida's electric chair.

It was the sixth time Geeker has imposed a death sentence against jury recommendations. The Florida Supreme Court has reversed one of those sentences, upheld three others and is still considering the fifth.

Boyett's sentence automatically will be appealed to the high court.

The eighth-grade dropout told police he entered the home of Billy Charles Hyier, 59, in the unincorporated Bellview community intending to shoot him with a stolen gun six weeks after the second of two homosexual advances.

He insisted, however, that he didn't intend to kill the victim but "to make him miserable." Boyett was convicted last month of first-degree murder and armed burglary.

University system seeks 10 percent raise

FORT LAUDERDALE — The state university system's Board of Regents plans to seek a 10 percent pay raise for professors without changing tuition in the 1994-95 school year.

Seeing signs of economic improvement, the board voted Friday to seek a 21 percent increase on the current $1.4 billion budget to absorb 8,000 more students and meet the goals of a five-year master plan.

The proposed raise for professors, who received a 3 percent increase this year along with other state workers, would lift Florida universities in national rankings from 35th to 27th or 28th nationally.

Tuition has risen 40 percent in three years, and a 3 percent tuition increase takes effect this fall.

The presidents of the nine state universities will make their budget recommendations in July, and Gov. Lawton Chiles gets the proposed budget in September.

Woman ordered to mental hospital

TAMPA — A woman ruled insane for strangling her two children in 1980 was ordered back to a state mental hospital after failing to cope with life in a halfway house.

Dorothy Diane Rose, 34, was acquitted by reason of insanity after she strangled her 1-year-old daughter and 2-year-old son with a bathrobe sash.

She was committed to the Florida State Hospital in Chattahoochee, released a year later to a Clearwater halfway house and then to a less-restrictive halfway house in Tampa.

But Miss Rose wound up in the Hillsborough County Jail last month after halfway house officials banned her for being obstinate, disobeying rules and not bathing or changing clothes regularly.

Although her attorney suggested an inpatient facility for Miss Rose in Tampa, Circuit Judge M. William Graybill on Friday ordered her returned to Chattahoochee.

Jury awards guard $550,000

MIAMI — A jury has awarded $550,000 to a security guard who was injured by police officers chasing a robbery suspect. The city had rejected a $100,000 settlement offer.

The jurors testified the shooting was justified because Gabriel Castellon posed an "imminent danger" to their safety, but the jury ruled the police were 99 percent negligent.

Castellon, 36, picked up a shotgun and went to investigate a noise outside his quarters at Omni Terminals in April 1990. His attorney, Donald Jones, said Castellon saw the police and went back to put away the weapon.

But as he did, officers Juan Mendez and Jose Quintero fired nine shots from 97 feet away, and one hit near his spine, Jones said.

Chief Assistant City Attorney Charles Mays, who defended the city, was out of his office late Friday and could not be reached for comment.

State law caps jury awards against government agencies at $200,000, but additional money on court awards can be sought from the Legislature.

Representatives break gender barrier

JACKSONVILLE — Two Florida women have broken the gender barrier in an exclusive club for U.S. House Republicans.

U.S. Reps. Ileana Ros-Lehtinen and Tillie Fowler have joined the Chowder and Mashing Society, which was all male for 44 years.

Admission is restricted to 25 active House members plus former club members, a Republican who's who including former Presidents Nixon and Ford, former Vice President Dan Quayle and former housing secretary Jack Kemp.

Residents hoof it to help needy

SANFORD — Nearly 200 participants of the Central Florida Walk for the Hungry gathered beneath the old oak trees of Centennial Park on Sunday to raise money for local agencies.

"There's a great turnout," said Cal Conklin, a member of Markham Woods Presbyterian Church, Lake Mary, as he prepared to do his one mile trek.

"I'm going all the way," said Leona Orcutt, of Our Lady of Lakes Catholic Church, Deltona. "I usually walk three miles a few days a week, but for a worthy cause I'm sure I can do the other two."

Walkers had a choice of either a one- or five-mile route through the streets of Sanford. Residents of all ages began registering and preparing for the journey by stretching and filling water bottles to quench their thirst in the heat.

Participating church and organizations included: Rescue

Participants share a moment of fellowship before taking to the streets.

All Florida households should have guns

By Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — A Florida lawmaker wants to take aim at crime by requiring guns in every household in the state.

"I don't see any option for the people but for them to bear arms," said state Rep. Al Lawson, D-Tallahassee, chairman of the Legislature's black caucus. "Every house would have a gun."

Lawson said he may offer his proposal to the Legislature when lawmakers begin a special session this month on a prison construction plan. He said people in his district are so tired of crime that drastic measures are necessary.

Lawson said his plan wouldn't provide weapons to people, but it would require they have them and give police and sheriffs responsibility for training.

"Most people are already arming themselves, they just don't have the training," he said. "The police will say, 'No, we can provide greater protection.' But, hey, just look at America. They can't even patrol in some areas."

The proposal is unlikely to catch on in the Legislature. "I'm not sure having a gun is going to cut down on violence — it could do the opposite," said Susan Olickman, state director for People for the American Way, a civil liberties group.

"You take a volatile situation like Miami or Tampa and interject vast numbers of guns into the situation, you could have trouble."

In Oregon earlier this year, a veteran legislator introduced a similar proposal, but it hasn't passed. For 12 years, residents in Kennesaw, Ga., have been required to have a gun, except those who oppose gun possession.

Research flights still set to go this month

By Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL — Presidential Challenger George Bush has killed the Strategic Defense Initiative but a pair of "Star Wars" research flights remain scheduled.

The first of two small sub-orbital rockets is to lift off Saturday morning from Cape Canaveral Air Force Station. Its twin is to go up May 28.

"The missions are still on the range schedule," 45th Space Wing spokesman Master Sgt. Bruce Ziesdorf said Sunday.

Last week, Defense secretary Les Aspin announced that the administration was scrapping most efforts to develop the controversial space-based missile defense system. But some limited research will continue under a new name, he said.

This month's missions — known as Red Tigris 2 — will be conducted by the Ballistic Missile Defense Organization instead of the old Strategic Defense Initiative Organization.

Air Force officials say Red Tigris 2 is a test program aimed at developing new sensors that can track targets and tell the difference between incoming rockets and decoys.

Each of the three-stage, solid-fuel rockets will carry 13 experimental payloads that are to be ejected in space. Orbiting satellites are expected to track the objects.

Officials say the cost of the missions is about $25 million. The six-day separation between flights helps keep range support costs and other expenses to a minimum.

Although they used a different type of rocket, a pair of Red Tigris 1 missions was launched in 1991 from the Cape. The first ended in failure when the Arias booster flew off course and was destroyed. The second rocket was successful a few weeks later.

Star Wars was begun in 1983 by President Ronald Reagan, who envisioned an orbiting shield of rocket-carrying satellites that could track and shoot down enemy nuclear missiles and their warheads.

But the project ran into technological problems that could not be overcome. Among the most daunting was the development of new supercomputers and "smart" satellites that could distinguish warheads from decoys.

The project's cost also climbed out of sight and political support in Congress dropped sharply with the end of the Cold War and the need to cut the Pentagon's budget.

POLICE BRIEFS

Visit leads to domestic violence

Jessie Sandra McElvain, 39, 2218 Sanford Ave., Sanford, was charged with domestic violence by Altamonte Springs Police on Saturday.

Police said McElvain and her husband had been separated for about a month when she called to say she was coming to visit him at 3 a.m. Saturday. He told her not to come over, police said.

When he opened the door, police said, she slapped him, hit him and scratched his back.

She was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $2,500 bond.

Three charged with possession

Kimberly Carole Henderson, 19, 2817 Tupelo Ct., Longwood; Tiffany Marie Nedrow, 19, of 565 Lake Bingham, Lake Mary; and Ian Bachrach, 18, 1820 Wingfield Dr., Longwood, were charged with possession of less than 20 grams of a controlled substance and possession of drug paraphernalia by Seminole County sheriff's officers Friday night.

Nedrow and Henderson were also charged with possession of alcoholic beverages by a person under the age of 21.

Deputies said the three were standing in a group with three juveniles around a car that was parked in the street at Chapman Street and Ayrshier Court.

Deputies approached the car and saw several open cans of alcohol and a bag that contained a green leafy substance. The substance tested positive as marijuana.

The juveniles were taken to the Juvenile Detention Center and the adults were taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where they were held on $500 bond each.

Domestic violence charged

William A. Langford, 50, 294 Lake Breeze Cir., Lake Mary, was charged with domestic violence Saturday by Seminole County sheriff's officers.

Deputies said his wife told them that during an argument he had slapped her repeatedly and pushed her.

Deputies said she had locked herself in her bedroom and he had broken the door down.

Deputies said he was intoxicated during the incident.

He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $1,000 bond.

Two domestic violence counts charged

John D. Fella, 33, 415 Valencia Ct., Longwood, was charged with two counts of domestic violence by Longwood Police on Friday.

Police said he pushed his wife in the chest during a verbal argument.

When her brother, who lives with them, tried to break up the argument, he was hit as well.

Police transported Fella to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where he was held in lieu of $1,000 bond.

Warrant arrests

Henry Lee Colyer, 27, 105 Sterling Ct., Sanford, was arrested on charges of failure to appear in court on disorderly conduct charges.

He was stopped while driving at 13th Street and U.S. Highway 17-92 in Sanford and a check revealed the warrant.

He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $500 bond.

Darrell Guy Woodruff, 29, 239 Washington Ave., Sanford, on charges of failing to appear in court on charges of driving with a suspended license.

He was already serving time at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility on other charges. Bond was set at $200.

James LeRoy Smith, 27, 5551 S. Sanford Ave., Sanford, on charges that he failed to appear in court on petit theft charges.

Further investigation revealed that he is also a fugitive from Indiana wanted on charges of grand theft auto.

He was located driving his car on S. Sanford Avenue.

Police said he denied that he was the same James L. Smith who is wanted in Indiana.

He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held without bond.

Thaluis Jerome Inman, 20, 1215 Randolph St., Sanford, on charges of failing to appear in court on charges of driving with a suspended license.

Deputies located him at the store at Maple and 11th Streets in Sanford.

He was held at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility on $500 bond after his first appearance in court.

Troy Lynn Ruckman, 23, 112 Sheppard Ct., Longwood, on charges that he failed to appear in court on charges of driving with a suspended driver license.

He was arrested in Orange County and transferred to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where he was held without bond.

Traveling crooks stymie officials

By Associated Press

FORT MYERS — Visiting crooks are responsible for a rash of bank robberies in Southwest Florida, and they're harder to catch, local officials say.

In the past, local criminals would rob a bank or two, said Thomas Busatta, investigator for the Lee County Sheriff's Office. But now, people most likely from outside Southwest Florida are hitting multiple banks.

"A good percentage of bank robberies got solved, but I don't know if we've had a bad stroke of luck or what," Busatta said. "If it's a local guy, we're gonna catch them. But with the long-distance guys who come here to rob banks, it's like a cat-and-mouse game: sometimes you catch them, and sometimes you don't."

Law enforcement officials say at least seven people are responsible for a rash of robberies in Southwest Florida. At least 50 bank robberies have been reported in Lee County since October 1990 and about 13 so far this year, Busatta said.

It's no longer uncommon to have several bank robberies in one day. On Jan. 8, three banks were robbed.

"Three in one day? When would you hear about that years ago in Lee County?" asked Busatta.

But it's not just Southwest Florida. The same robbers are believed to have struck in other parts of the state, Busatta said.

For instance, one man who jumps bank counters during robberies is suspected in at least a dozen from Tampa south to Naples and east to Fort Pierce since May 1992.

Another man who wears a stocking over his face is suspected in at least 11 robberies in Lee, Sarasota, St. Lucie, Brevard and Hillsborough counties.

"They're hitting us up and down the coast in North Florida, Central Florida, everywhere," Busatta said.

Like most law enforcement agencies, Lee authorities have turned to the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Busatta said at least 35 copies of every photograph of a suspected bank robber are distributed to every FBI office in the agency's eastern district.

"What we're so concerned about is the safety of the community. With so many bank robbers out there, there's a chance of a confrontation with somebody who's armed in the bank," Busatta said.

Out-of-control car hurts eight

By Associated Press

MIAMI BEACH — An out-of-control sports car raced down a narrow, crowded street in the city's hip South Beach section, scattering people like bowling pins: eight were hurt.

"I saw one guy do a full flip in the air," Lincoln O'Barry, 21, said of the early Sunday incident on Espanola Way. "There were people crossing the street everywhere. It could just as easily have been 50 injured."

Behind the wheel of the black 1993 Corvette was nightclub valet Manuel Pelayo, 47, who had gotten it from its owner seconds before. The accelerator jammed, he said.

"He was saying 'I don't know what happened.' He was in shock," O'Barry said.

"When he sat behind the wheel, the car just took off," said Jaime Cardona, doorman at the nearby Warsaw Ballroom. "We heard the engine roar and then the people went flying."

The Miami Herald was unable to reach the car's registered owner for comment Sunday.

Fishing tournament includes hook, line and local seniors

By NICK PFEIFAUER Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Most people seen fishing along Sanford's Lake Monroe waterfront appear to be beyond 60 years of age. This coming Saturday, those seniors will have an opportunity to show if they are good at catching 'em, or just drowning bait.

The city's Sanford Senior Center, Florida Power and Light, and Holiday Inn Lake Monroe will be sponsoring the Seniors All-American Fishing Festival this Saturday. The event is actually part of a national program of senior involvement.

Chris Uary, Senior Center supervisor, plans to have this as an annual event and hopes this year's inaugural contest will produce a good turnout.

"Our Senior Center has a strong commitment to America's Seniors," Uary said, "and we are proud to offer this unforgettable All-American fishing festival."

The festival will begin at the Lake Monroe Marina on Saturday, May 22, at 7 a.m. Seniors will be divided into onshore and offshore divisions. For the offshore boating, teams of two are requested.

Local prizes include trophies, cash awards (some as high as $100), fishing gear, Universal Studio tickets and other prizes.

Local winners will also be eligible for the National Festival, which will have prizes including a boat and trailer, airline tickets, and a Las Vegas vacation.

Advance registration may be made at the Senior Center this week. Open registration is at the festival, beginning at 6 a.m.

The entry fee is $10 per person, which includes a lunch.

For additional information on this Seniors All-American Fishing Festival, stop at the Sanford Senior Center, in the east wing of the Civic Center or phone Chris Uary at 330-8699.

At 14, state's youngest 'adult' inmate shows system's failure

By Associated Press

ST. PETERSBURG — Instead of playing Little League baseball or camping out with the Boy Scouts, 14-year-old Eddie McGee is doing time as Florida's youngest inmate in adult prison.

McGee is serving a 10-year sentence for two Pensacola armed robberies in 1991, one of a man outside a restaurant and the other a dry cleaners. He's sharing a Brevard Correctional Institution cell with a 21-year-old.

In an interview published Sunday by the St. Petersburg Times, McGee said prison is just making him angrier.

"They think prison is going to change you, man. They just don't know how this is, man. I only learn how to do more better crimes. How to make more money. How to sell more dope. That's all people talk about," he said. "When you stay in here long, that make your mind just get more devoted, man," he added. "It's making me mad. It's making me so mad."

McGee wound up in an adult prison because, oddly, of his young age.

Marci Goodman, a Pensacola prosecutor, wanted to send McGee to the Dozier School in Marianna, where serious young offenders can stay for up to nine months with group therapy and one-on-one counseling sessions.

The state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services would not go along. Under terms of a 1987 federal agreement, HRS agreed to accept only children at least 14 at Dozier so that younger kids wouldn't mix with the older ones. That left nowhere to put younger ones like McGee, who was but 12 when he was sentenced.

Orders from death row?

Almost every report about increases in criminal activities alludes to the problems Florida has with overcrowded prisons. It has brought about early releases of more and more criminals who statistics say, are now spending an average of only 20 percent of their sentences behind bars.

Now prisoners on Florida's Death Row at Raiford prison want to add to the overcrowding. They are urging the state to deny a proposed rule change which would give them a maximum of one year before execution.

At the present time, the length of time between conviction and execution is a minimum of two years.

Larry Spalding the Capital Collateral Representative reported the average death row inmate in Florida is held for eight years before being executed.

Spalding is in charge of the state agency responsible for defending inmates once they are sentenced to death.

Sixty of these death row inmates, found guilty of murder or other major crimes, have sent a petition to the governor. They want more time during which to have their cases appealed.

The governor already has the authority to sign an execution delay if proof is given that additional information might be obtained regarding a case.

These prisoners however, are not satisfied with that. They are demanding the proposal be rejected.

Spalding suggests it takes many years for an attorney to represent a death row inmate to a death sentence. We question whether it should take that much time. Are defense attorneys stalling? Are they waiting for some new law to be enacted which might overturn the original conviction?

If the governor goes along with the request by the death row inmates, he will be allowing the worst criminals in our state to dictate what can or cannot be done.

Florida presently has 342 inmates on death row. If we continue to allow them to stall in accepting their punishment, we are ignoring one of the problems connected with prison overcrowding.

We are also paying for the feeding and housing of these inmates for too long a time period. It is wasting hundreds of thousands of taxpayer dollars that could well go toward prison bed expansions.

Cartoon offensive

I am writing because I was, to say the least, disgusted with the trash you print in your so-called newspaper. The cartoon that appeared on Wednesday, May 5, 1993 was, in my opinion, a very cheap shot at a lot of very brave service personnel who paid the supreme price (their lives) in the defense of this great country.

I am a 25-year retired service member who has a son on active duty who is on his way overseas to what could possibly become a very ugly situation. I feel personally slighted by your poor choice of material on a very controversial subject, but some people will do anything to sell newspapers.

In closing I would like to say that if this is the kind of trash your paper chooses to publish, I for one, will never purchase one of your papers again except possibly to use it as it is affectionately referred to in the local areas as the "The Sanford Mullet Wrapper."

A letter to president on executions

Congressman John Lewis, D-Ga., was a victim of more violence — as a key figure in the civil rights movement — than most other people could have survived. The beatings were inflicted by mobs, but since local and state police often did not intervene, it could be said that Lewis also suffered from violence approved by the state.

Last year, Lewis was an enthusiastic and influential supporter of Bill Clinton. Recently, the congressman from Georgia has written a letter to Clinton "concerning your administration's position on the death penalty" — the ultimate violence by the state.

"While the rest of the world is moving away from death as a form of punishment," said Lewis, "capital punishment is becoming more entrenched in some parts of our country."

It is highly unlikely that the president will be converted by Lewis to the point of declaring his opposition to capital punishment. It would be hazardous politically, and besides, as governor of Arkansas, Clinton has been an executioner at times, and his soul does not seem to have been notably seared in the process.

John Lewis, however, hopes to capture the president's attention in other ways. He points out in the letter that racial discrimination, for instance, has been a traditional factor in determining who actually gets executed. Lewis cites a 1990 study by the dispassionate General Accounting Office that "found a pattern of evidence indicating racial disparities in the charging and imposition of death sentences in state courts throughout the nation."

Lewis also urged the president — in the face of insatiable attempts in Congress and by the chief justice to eviscerate habeas corpus — "to firmly reject" such attacks. "The right of Americans to a full review of federal constitutional claims in a federal court should not be compromised." There is nothing in the letter that deals with the morality of the state as a killer. A brief sentence does caution the president that capital punishment "risks terrible errors." Yet, a 1989 Gallup Poll showed that 79 percent of those surveyed were more concerned about criminals being treated too softly by the justice system than they were about the violation of the criminals' constitutional rights. That percentage has probably risen since then, especially concerning those on death row.

It could be said that Lewis also suffered from violence approved by the state.

It will require presidential leadership to educate the public — and certainly the Congress — on the need to rehabilitate habeas corpus as well as to send convicts to death on a non-discriminatory basis.

If Congressman Lewis is sufficiently resolute to write another letter to the president on this subject, he might mention the basic reason for the often gross unfairness of the way the death penalty works. A 1990 American Bar Association study of habeas corpus and the death penalty quotes a former law clerk of Justice John Paul Stevens: "The death penalty frequently results from nothing more than poverty and poor lawyering."

Justice Thurgood Marshall made that point again and again.

Clinton needs to find focus, or else

More than 1,000 days must pass before the voters of New Hampshire cast the first ballots of the 1996 presidential primaries, but the political pundits are already shining up their crystal balls — and it doesn't look good for Bill Clinton.

His presidency is in utter disarray, they say, and they are already posting odds on the Republican team that will run against him. Heck, it's even worse than that: They're handicapping Democratic opponents as well.

Let me quote just one columnist, Martin Anderson, a senior fellow at the Hoover Institution at Stanford University: "Mr. Clinton looks like a wounded sea lion in a cold political sea filled with sharks — mostly senators and governors. So, perhaps a year earlier than usual, the thoughts of both Democrats and Republicans are turning to the idea of running for president."

His presidency is in utter disarray, they say.

HODDING CARTER

Government's role in free market

The hot topic on the political horizon is national health care. The almost invisible debate concerns industrial policy, or more precisely, whether a new one is needed. The second, though currently subdued, is at least as important as the first.

"New" is the operative word. Defense spending was America's industrial policy in military drag for most of the Cold War. Now, with the eight-year boom fueled by the $1.2 trillion Reagan military buildup a distant memory, the nation faces something eerily akin to cold-turkey withdrawal from hard drugs. The symptoms, including hot flashes of plant closings and cold flashes of joblessness, pervade the economy.

The recession of the early 1990s and the paltry recovery of the past year coincided with significant cuts in defense spending, but few observers seriously believe that the cuts were primarily responsible for the nation's economic anemia. Even in fiscal 1992, after the slowdown was well underway, the military-industrial complex directly employed almost 6 million people. That was less than 3 percent of the total U.S. work force (though the 1.6 million people who held defense-related manufacturing jobs represented about 9 percent of total manufacturing employment).

But defense spending has been slashed repeatedly since then, with further cuts ahead. Massachusetts and California, states once widely envied for their miracle economies, have simultaneously gone into deep decline. With Department of Defense outlays falling in current dollars from $286 billion in 1991 to $262 billion in the 1994 budget, the effect is reaching inland from the two coasts as well. By fiscal 1997, Pentagon outlays are projected to bottom at $238 billion. In inflation-adjusted dollars, that will be closer to $200 billion in 1991 terms.

No matter how you cut it, that is a chilly economic bath. More base closures, fewer industrial jobs, fewer men and women in uniform — all of these are depressants in an economy already sagging and in poor health.

That explains the spate of headlines predicting the loss of an additional 2 million defense-related jobs over the next several years. It also explains the Clinton administration's request for targeted federal spending aimed at certain key industries — not coincidentally located primarily in the military research and development heartland of California and the upper East Coast.

That would seem to be a logical request, as is the Clinton-sponsored conversion of the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency into the lead horse in the development of purely civilian as well as dual-use (military with civilian application) technologies.

The problem is that both fly in the face of the near-theological insistence by free market purists that the government has no place in the conversion process. The very phrase "industrial policy" is anathema to the men and women who ran the government during the 1980s.

Since they were allowed to play ideological games for so long, disguising the massive defense-related industrial policy of the Reagan years with flowery capitalist rhetoric, they still have the political high ground. Digging them out will take time, and time is a precious commodity in today's precarious economy. If industrial policy is a good idea, then it is an idea that needs to be implemented quickly.

But is it a good idea? The old military-industrial policy was financed with borrowed money, trillions and trillions of dollars of it, and more debt lies ahead. The federal budget is expected to run annual deficits ranging anywhere from $300 billion to $200 billion for the rest of the century, even if the Clinton tax proposals are accepted in toto and work as advertised. Under the most optimistic scenarios, the national debt will reach $5 trillion before the decade is over. It was $1 trillion 12 years ago.

In short, there is ample room to argue over the proper use of the money "liberated" by the defense cuts and the most effective way to deal with the consequences of the reductions. Should federal dollars really be spent on picking industrial winners in hopes of creating jobs, or would it not better be applied to deficit reduction? What are the "right" industries, tomorrow's microchip or biotechnology wonders? How can anyone be certain?

We can't, but then again, we couldn't be certain that the generals, admirals and political appointees in the Defense Department could pick winning weapons systems every time either. Nor did they. What they did do was to build an incredible military machine over time by harnessing private firms and public dollars in tandem. It was hardly free enterprise capitalism a la Adam Smith, but it worked, just as industrial policy has worked for our chief competitors, whether in Japan or Europe.

As President Clinton has repeatedly claimed, it could work again.

No matter how you cut it, that is a chilly economic bath.

Chip

NeuroLogix has not begun large-scale sales of custom-designed chips as yet. NeuroLogix officers hope a undisclosed European personal care products manufacturer will boost their production to 800,000 units per year and their finances into profit-making.

"Our objective is to produce electronics that are easy for engineers to use to make their products better," says Basehore.

NASA engineers have used, and praised, a NeuroLogix chip to align laser measurement devices. Quality Communications Products Inc., a Winter Park company, developed a new security monitoring product after seeing the capabilities of a NeuroLogix product.

Quality president Kent Rollins says his company is about to go into production of a security device that alerts a guard when a human-sized object has entered a monitored area.

Basehore says NeuroLogix can produce the chips so inexpensively, for as little as $2 in quantities, that "brains" can be added to everyday products such as hairdryers and refrigerators. A home office in Sanford has been a bonus, he says.

"The great thing about Sanford is you can keep overhead costs low," Basehore says.

Mike Ziemacki, NeuroLogix applications engineering manager, is working with the European company to develop an "upscale" hairdryer which will maintain a constant temperature regardless of speed. A deminorization model varied by about four degrees when Ziemacki doubled the speed. The company's president expects to sell 800,000 of the units annually, says Basehore.

"They'll produce the world's first fuzzy hairdryer," he quips.

A quick beginning

Basehore formed NeuroLogix within months after Microdevices, a Lake Mary company, closed after a corporate sale. Basehore, general manager of Microdevices, says the company was also working on fuzzy logic applications. When Microdevices closed, Basehore and several staffers joined NeuroLogix to continue their research and development.

Previously, Basehore worked at Siemens Stromberg-Carlson, then Maynard Electronics.

Starting with only $20,000 in December 1990, Basehore says the company has since attracted between $1 million and $2 million from private investors.

Basehore has also attracted top-level computer industry expertise to the company. Gene Flath, chairman of the board, was one of the first engineers working for the computer giant, Intel Corp., in 1968, the year it was founded. NeuroLogix president S. Joon Lee was formerly president of Samsung Semiconductor, now a major electronics component manufacturer.

"I got excited after talking with S. Joon Lee and got a chance to talk to Paul," says Flath. "NeuroLogix is the only company we're aware of that builds a fuzzy microprocessor. It's a fairly straight-forward fuzzy chip, which results in its low cost."

Basehore says none of the chips are made locally, but are jobbed out to manufacturers in the Midwest.

Fuzzy thinking

Imagine refrigerators cycling on or off when needed, not according to a timer. Or think of a conveyor belt full of chicken parts passing under a scanner which recognizes the individual parts so they can be sorted and packaged. How much energy would be saved by an air conditioner that automatically adjusts to the number of people in the room?

These are just a few of the applications Basehore says NeuroLogix fuzzy technology can now serve.

To understand how computers "think" and why fuzzy logic is so radically different is not much more difficult than understanding how a light switch works, says Basehore. Virtually all computers today process information using a dense series of on-off switches. Word processors, electronic games, even automobile computers, all work the same way.

The computer is fed information through a keyboard or some other "input" device which goes to the microprocessor. Almost instantly, the information is processed through a series of "yes" or "no" questions. At each question, the information either meets the specific definition the computer was told to recognize or it doesn't.

Programmers can give computers whole lists of things to look for, which requires large amounts of expensive electronic memory, but the computer processor is still looking for exact matches. Even a command typed on a keyboard in uppercase letters instead of lowercase letters may not be recognized.

With fuzzy logic, the computer doesn't need to see an exact match.

"Now, think of fuzzy logic as a light dimmer switch," says Basehore.

If the information is close to an exact match, then the fuzzy computer can act on it. For example, if a regular computer sees only a six-foot man as "tall," a fuzzy computer might see both a five-foot, 11-inch man and a six-foot, one-inch man as "tall" even though the programmer didn't tell the computer to look for those heights.

Smart machines

More incredibly, some NeuroLogix chips can also learn. By using a new internal "neural network" design which has just been patented, the chip can learn to recognize repetitive information and act on it more quickly.

Basehore cites the example of a smart elevator car which frequently travels to a group of floors more often during certain times of day. In time, the elevator will automatically travel to those floors when not in use and stand ready for a finger punch. The result: less waiting for an elevator for the user.

One NeuroLogix product can distinguish and identify several different animal shapes at the rate of 30 images a second. That's the speed a motion picture film travels through a movie projector.

The chip is not simply recording the images and spitting them back from its memory like a typical computer system would do. It is learning the differences and in time, coming to recognize the different shapes.

Basehore says the company hasn't quite reached profitability yet, but if the hairdryer maker and another potential client or two comes through, NeuroLogix could begin to show a profit by next January.

NeuroLogix stock is traded privately now, but under Basehore's plan, the stock will be traded publicly by 1996 or 1997.

Flath says NeuroLogix isn't widely known to industry leaders, but says major companies are beginning to take notice. In time, Flath says NeuroLogix may become a competitor to National Semiconductor, Motorola and other major manufacturers in the fuzzy applications market.

"The CEOs on the top floors don't know us now, but they will," says Flath.

him to the police station, he started telling us all about it."

Whitmire said Knight identified his cousin, Williams, as the other person involved, and told police where to find him.

"After our officers brought Williams to the police station," Whitmire continued, "he told us where he had hidden the gun, and we were able to recover it."

The gun was identified as an SKS 7.62 caliber semi-automatic rifle. Whitmire said the gun contained a 30-round magazine. Police said Williams had reportedly hidden it inside a migrant bus parked near his home on Alexander Avenue.

The robbery and burglary took place at approximately 2:43 Friday morning, when two men reportedly broke into the Winn Dixie store on Highway 17-92 at Lake Mary Boulevard. After firing what police said were eight to ten shots into the air, the two men reportedly took car keys from an employee, and locked all seven employees into a cooler before escaping.

Sanford police officer John Evans gave chase. After the fleeing men and officer exchanged gunfire the getaway car eventually collided with a dumpster enclosure and wooded area at the Country Lake Apartment complex. When the men ran from the car, Knight was wounded and apprehended. The second man had escaped.

Whitmire said Williams had also may have been wounded slightly in the shoot-out. "He had a couple of abrasions, one in his left thumb," he said, "but we don't know if it was from one bullet or two. Williams apparently didn't seek medical treatment for the wounds."

Each of the two men has been charged with the following: armed burglary; armed robbery with a firearm; seven counts of aggravated assault; seven counts of armed kidnapping; grand theft auto; grand theft; two counts of shooting in an occupied building and vehicle; possession of weapon in the commission of a felony; and attempted murder of a law enforcement officer.

Officials this morning said both men are being held without bond, pending a first appearance in court scheduled for 1:30 this afternoon.

The baseball fields are locked when not in use to prevent damages but city employees are there during operating hours and can radio for permission to open them from the recreation coordinator.

In April, Mike Ikonu who heads the Babe Ruth program, requested a long term commitment from the city commission for use of the city fields. He noted the program has been very active in the city for five years and the league had made improvements to the baseball facilities.

The facility use agreement to be considered Monday night is for one year, but may be extended.

S.A.F.E. helps provide the arts

LAKE MARY HEATHROW
SARABECCA ROSIER

Jackie Cushman founder and chairman of Seminole Arts for Education, S.A.F.E., organized SAFE in 1991 to restore cultural arts field trips to Seminole County elementary-age school children.

These trips were cut from the school-year budget because of the economic crunch. They consisted of field trips to the Bob Carr Performing Arts Center to see the symphony and the ballet and trips to the Orlando Museum of Art.

Due to continued budget cuts, SAFE is planning for the 1993-94 school year. To this end, 26,000 flyers went home recently with school-age children to restore and expand field trips to include the opera and civic theatre. These flyers said that your "donation to SAFE will be matched dollar for dollar by United Arts of Central Florida" and it will help defray the cost of the program. In order to "provide these cultural field trips and let our children enjoy the challenge, inspiration and joy that is available to Orange County children."

If you wish to help provide these culturally important field trips, please send a $5 or more donation to SAFE, c/o FACTS, Seminole County School Board, 1211 Mellonville Ave., Sanford, FL 32771.

The goal is to give all the children all the arts! Remember donations are tax deductible.

The SAFE committee members working toward these goals are: Cathy Bauerle, president-elect, The League, Inc. and Council of 101; John Blair, fine arts coordinator, Seminole County School Board; Dr. Karen Copp, cultural arts coordinator, Seminole Community College; Alice Gilmore, education director, Florida Symphony; Carrie Haumiller, cultural arts coordinator, Seminole County PTA Council; Linda Harrell, Seminole County Council of PTAs; and Robin Jensen, education director, Orlando Opera Company.

Also, Jennifer Kelly, former commissioner, Seminole County; Walter Kovshik, development director, United Arts of Central Florida; Joanne Lucas, chairman, Heathrow Arts Festival; Jeanne Morris, school board member, Seminole County; Dr. Mary Palmer, College of Education, UCF and project director, ACE; Karen Peters, Florida Symphony, member and league liaison; and Sandra Quinn, executive director, Orlando Science Center.

JACKSONVILLE — John Jensen's single gave Orlando the go-ahead run and Mike Grace added an RBI double in the 10th inning to give the Cubs a 6-2 Southern League victory over Jacksonville Sunday. Earnie Johnson (3-0) got the win. Paul Perkins (2-1) suffered the loss.

Tennessee routs Gators

GAINESVILLE — Chris Freeman allowed four hits and two runs in six innings to pick up his school record 11th win Sunday as Tennessee defeated Florida 12-3. Freeman improved to 11-1. Pete Harvell picked up the save, allowing only one run in the final three innings.

AROUND THE NATION

Zeile, Cardinals edge Marlins

ST. LOUIS — Pinch hitter Todd Zeile singled with the bases loaded in the ninth inning Sunday as the St. Louis Cardinals ended a string of 17 consecutive scoreless innings and beat the Florida Marlins 1-0.

St. Louis was blanked Saturday night on Ryan Bowen's six-hitter and got only three hits in eight innings against Marlins starter Luis Aquino. The Cardinals finally got a run in the ninth off rookie reliever Trevor Hoffman.

With one out, Gregg Jefferies singled for his second hit of the game, stole second and went to third on catcher Steve Decker's wild throw. Ray Lankford and Mark Whitten were intentionally walked to load the bases. Zeile, batting for Stan Rover, singled through a drawn in infield.

Clemson dumps FSU

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — Keith Williams hit a grand slam and freshman lefthander Jason Dawsey pitched a complete game into hitter Sunday as Clemson beat Florida State 6-1 in the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament.

Williams slam was his 15th home run of the season and Clemson's first in ACC Tournament play since 1987. It wiped out the 1-0 lead Mike Schmitz homer gave FSU in the first inning.

Bodine wins Save Mart 300

SONOMA, Calif. — Geoff Bodine took advantage of a series of late cautions to hold off a strong charge by Ernie Ivan and Ricky Rudd on Sunday to win the NASCAR Save Mart 300 at Sears Point International Raceway.

Bodine, who won the Hanes 500 last month and finished third in the season-opening Daytona 500, held first in his Ford Thunderbird when Dorsey Schroeder spun on lap 72 of the 74-lap race, bringing out the final yellow.

The race went to green with just one lap left, recalling the end of the Winston 500, when the race went green with just two laps left, triggering a mad sprint and a huge crash that saw Rusty Wallace cross the finish line in sixth place while tumbling off the track.

Ivan slipped his Chevrolet Lumina past Rudd's Chevrolet on the final lap to take second.

ROME — Jim Courier no longer is No. 1. Try convincing Goran Ivanisevic.

He's a believer in Courier.

Courier routed last year's Wimbledon finalist 6-1, 6-2, 6-2 in two hours Sunday to win his second consecutive Italian Open championship and stump himself as the heavy favorite in the French Open starting later this month.

"He's so dominating," said a dejected Ivanisevic. "He's mentally stronger than anybody else."

Even Courier, a former resident of Sanford, was impressed.

"I didn't expect it to be this easy," he said. "It was scary how fast it went."

Sunniland Red Sox complete series sweep

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — What happened? The Sanford Recreation Department Little Major Baseball League City Championships came to a sudden and unexpected end Saturday morning at Roy Holler Field, as the Sunniland Corporation Red Sox mauled the Railroaders Cubs, 10-6, to claim the city crown, two games to none.

It was the second time in three years that the Red Sox have claimed the city title.

What makes the results so amazing is the fact that the Cubs had gone through the regular season and a one-game playoff with 14 consecutive wins without a defeat.

"The season went great," said Sanford Recreation Department Supervisor Rocky Ellingsworth. "The coaches seemed to like the new playoff format. We took the top four teams in the league and the two best teams met in the finals, which is great. The outcome was a little unexpected, but that's baseball.

"It looks as if we are going to expand to a 12-team league next year and we expect it to be as good, if not better, than this year."

As in game No. 1 Thursday night, when the Red Sox won 13-0, the champions jumped on the Cubs. See Red Sox, Page 2B

Bowman, Bresnick third at state meet

From Staff Reports

GAINESVILLE — Two third place finishes were the best that Seminole County athletes could manage Saturday night at the Florida High School Athletic Association's Class 4A state track meet at the Peary Beard Complex.

Lake Howell's Matt Bowman cleared 4 feet to finish third in the pole vault while Lynn's Kianak Bresnick came in third in the girls' 3,200-meter run with a time of 11:33.39.

Also from Lake Howell, Louis Greco threw the discus 165 feet, 6 inches to finish fourth.

With the seven team points scored by Bowman and Greco, the Silver Hawks ended in an eight way tie for fifth (the highest Seminole County finish in the boys' team standings with Pensacola Washington, Tampa Gaither, Brandon, Oak Ridge, Boyd Anderson, Miami Southridge and Miami Edison).

The Lynn boys finished tied for 9th with the three points scored by Todd Cleveland, who finished fourth in the 200-meter dash (22.14 seconds).

Lake Brantley was one of three teams to score one team point. David Bush taking sixth in the discus (116 feet, 6 inches) for the Patriots.

Besides Bresnick, who accounted for all four team points for the Lynn girls (good for a share of 2,500 place), the only other Seminole County female athlete to score at the state meet was Oviedo's Marla Mims, who finished fifth in the shot put (37 feet, 2 1/2 inches).

Gainesville Burchholz won the boys' team championship with 33 team points while Palm Beach Lakes claimed the girls' team crown with 52 points.

Deltona Trinity wraps up crown

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Two down, one to go. With two weeks left in the regular season of the Sanford Church Softball League Spring season, only the Competitive Division is still up for grabs, and that division too is all but over.

On Saturday at Lee P. Moore Park, Deltona Trinity Assembly of God bested the Lake Mary Church of the Nativity Catholic Crusaders, 8-2, in a Fellowship Division game to join the Nativity Catholic Disciples, which won the Fun Division last week, as division champions.

Meanwhile, at Chase Park, Sanford First United Methodist outscored St. Stephen Catholic from Winter Springs, 21-11, to eliminate St. Stephen and clinch at least a tie for the Competitive Division crown.

Sanford Central Baptist and Sanford Church of God of Prophecy are still alive for a tie in the Competitive Division, but the Methodists must lose their final two games, while Central Baptist and Prophecy must win their final three games, a scheduled game between the duo Saturday has been rescheduled for the final day of

Rules are all that separate play from chaos

Rules are a curious thing. Not laws, not moral mandates, but rules, those nit-picking guidelines which seem to have little rationalization other than the ever-popular "because we said so" or "we've always done it this way."

Such is the world of athletics. Certainly, rules are a necessary evil. They insure a degree of uniformity and, in the process, (should) create fair conditions. Three strikes and you're out; 90 feet (or whatever) between bases; the rim's 10 feet off the ground; the field's 100 yards long; the goal is 8 yards wide by 8 feet high.

Most rules do have some basis in logic or history. The reason the rim in basketball is 10 feet above the playing surface is, legend tells us, that's how high the balcony was in the Springfield, Mass., YMCA where Dr. Naismith first hung his peach basket.

While not etched in stone, it might as well be. Talk about changing the basic rules of a game, regardless of how well intentioned or carefully thought through, and you'll be branded quickly as a heretic. In their way, rules are a universal language, allowing teams from around the globe to compete despite not sharing a common tongue or culture.

SPORTS

And, where so little in life is absolute, sports are, to paraphrase Bill Vecek, the only orderly thing in a very disorderly world. Speaking of baseball, Vecek said "if you get three strikes, even the best lawyer in the world can't get you off."

We respect those who follow the rules with religious zeal even when no-one's looking, referring to them as true sportsmen or sportswomen, the highest laurel in the world of athletics, more awe-inspiring than the crown of world champion.

As a result, rules (or, more specifically, rulebooks) are wielded like a magic weapon from sandlots to Super Domes. "That's against the rules" may be as commonly heard as safe, out, fair, foul, ball, and strike.

But, even though we agree on the necessity of rules, the importance of rules, and the value of rules, it sometimes seem that as much time is spent arguing about rules or trying to circumvent them as it is playing the game.

For example, the directive from the Sanford Recreation Department for its adult softball leagues that mandates immediate ejection for any player overheard cursing probably generated more cursing than any call by any umpire.

And it doesn't take a new rule to generate debate. The Amateur Softball Association rulebook, which the Sanford Recreation leagues follow, requires uniforms to have a numeral at least 6 inches tall on the back. Despite having the first two weeks of the season to meet that requirement, there were still complaints when the rule was enforced.

Also, while the consistency and constancy which rules supply contribute to the appeal of athletics, there is a fair amount of energy expended in stretching the rules or getting around them.

We all know athletes who seem to take as much pleasure in how they get around the rules as they do in playing the game, employing the "it's only against the rules if you get caught" mentality and describing it as "gamesmanship."

Then there's the other end of the spectrum, those people who have no problem ignoring the speed limit or being creative with their tax return but being unable to bring themselves to take advantage of indistinct areas in the rules of the game.

When it comes down to it, rules are all we have; they transform chaos into a game and, occasionally, vice versa.

Blackouts serious for heavy drinkers

DEAR DR. GOTT: Why do alcohol-related blackouts destroy the brain-cell memory of what I did last night, yet I know what happened 20 or 30 years ago? This is disturbing since the blackouts are occurring more regularly than they ever did in the past.

DEAR READER: You are in serious trouble. Alcohol-related blackouts are an unequivocal sign of alcohol toxicity, alcohol abuse and irreparable damage to nerve tissue. Alcohol has a predilection for brain cells that store recent memory, as opposed to distant memory, which is "locked" into the brain's computer.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Do you have any material to help me understand the Fragile X syndrome?

DEAR READER: For years, experts have puzzled over the fact that more males than females require institutionalization for mental retardation. This affliction clearly has a gender relation. Fragile X syndrome may account for many of these cases.

In such instances, special tests have demonstrated a defect in the X chromosome, causing large testicles and ears, and a prominent chin and forehead. Fragile X syndrome is transmitted genetically from the maternal side of the family; thus women may carry the chromosome (and be unaffected) only to pass it on to their male

MEDICINE

PETER GOTT, M.D.

There is no treatment for this affliction. Next to Down's syndrome, Fragile X syndrome is the most common form of mental retardation that can be diagnosed.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder
Joan - I'm a hater! You make the beds, you do the dishes - and six months later you have to start all over again.
Regardless of how the chores are divided, it helps if a wife and husband trust each other. Similarly, bridge defenders who trust each other do better than those who do not.

BRIDGE HAND: NORTH 5-7-99, WEST 4-9-8-6-4, EAST 10-9-5-2, SOUTH 10-7-5-2, VULNERABLE: East-West, DEALER: North, OPENING LEAD: 2

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
May 18, 1993
In the year ahead your opportunities might come to you in a serialized fashion. Each one could be important, so strive to develop it fully before moving on to the next.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you associate with people today who have integrity and are reliable, your chances for success are substantially enhanced.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) The only thing that can impede your progress today is your own self-doubts concerning whether your ideas and methods are feasible.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A pal of yours has some get-rich-quick schemes that are alluring, but they might work out more on paper than in the real world.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Being squeamish or bashful about calling and getting together with someone who is waiting to hear from you could be a mistake.
SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) The quickest way to accomplish a tedious task today is to focus on what you're doing, and not on the lines of least resistance.
CANCER (June 21-July 22)

21) You know you're a nice guy or gal and so do your friends, and they like you as you are. However, you might try to please someone today who just can't be pleased.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You won't be unpopular at home today if you buy only the necessities and forego the luxuries. Your family knows the household budget limitations as well as you do.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If you think before you speak today, your comments will have a profound effect upon your listeners.
PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) There's no reason to feel guilty if you can't be equally generous to everyone today. Give and do what you can for those who have truly legitimate needs.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) Try to give your undivided attention today to an endeavor that you believe can fulfill your practical expectations.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)
