Home invasion suspects Suspects sought

The Seminole County sheriff's major crimes section has released two composite photos of the suspects in last week's home invasion in Goldenrod.

In that incident, Kathy Walters, 35, Houndslake Drive, Winter Park, reported that two men forced their way into her home shortly after noon on Wednesday, July 24. The suspects reportedly beat and kicked the woman, and cut her with a razor blade. They also knocked her from her wheelchair. Walters is confined to the chair because of multiple sclerosis.

While the two reportedly went through the house room-by-room searching for money, deputies said nothing is believed to have been taken from the residents by the two suspects.

One suspect is a white male, 18 to 21 years of age, five feet nine to five feet eleven inches tall, weighing 160 pounds, with black hair.

The second suspect is a white male, approximately 16 years of age, five feet six inches tall, 135 pounds, with black hair. Both suspects appeared to be Hispanic, as they both spoke Spanish.

Walters said the suspects had come to her house earlier in the day soliciting for a charity, and reportedly offering to sell candy. Neighbors reportedly also saw the suspects in that area during that day.

The sheriff's office is looking for any information about the suspect's identity and whereabouts. Anyone with information is asked to phone the sheriff's office at 330-6650.

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — A Sanford Aviation Noise Abatement Committee (SANAC), proposed by the Sanford Aviation Authority, will be discussed during this Thursday night's Lake Mary City Commission meeting. The agreement would require approval from the Authority, as well as city commissions from Lake Mary and Sanford.

The establishment of the committee was considered at the July 2 meeting of the Airport Authority. While Lake Mary comments were requested, the matter was postponed at the last commission meeting.

According to Steve Cooke, director of aviation, "The concept of this committee is to allow objective and unbiased citizens to work together

ATLANTA — He was a national hero a day ago, but today Richard Jewell is under a shadow of suspicion.

Who's running in those local political races?

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The candidates for office in Seminole County are now out beating the bushes to obtain votes, with the first election, the Republican primary, scheduled for Sept. 3.

That is probably the most crucial time for most, as all the candidates are Republicans. A win on Sept. 3 would mean they would be unopposed in the general election, unless they fail to obtain a 50 percent plus one vote. Then they will go forward into the runoff primary which will see the two top candidates on the ballot.

A few local countywide candidates are not opposed by persons from either party, and will automatically be re-elected.

For the Democratic primary on Sept. 3, there will be four Circuit Court judgeships on the ballot. Running non-partisan, they will also be on Republican ballots.

There will also be several other Democratic candidates to choose from, but only in certain precincts, as they fall on the state and national levels.

Eat well to feed others in need

By VICKI DeBORNIEN
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — Seminole County residents are being invited to eat to help feed others.

"A Taste of Seminole" is being sponsored by Seminole Volunteer Enterprises, Inc. as a fund-raiser to bring in money to buy food.

Seminole Volunteer Enterprises began three years ago and has served more than 2,000 needy families per month since then. The program provides food for those in need through programs such as SHARE (Self Help And Resource Exchange), monthly food commodities, the Farm Share program and everyday food needs for those who are indigent.

The non-profit agency has been operating with little in the way of funds, depending mostly on the kindness of individuals and businesses to help out in times of need.

FLORIDA BRIEFS

Snake smuggler snagged

MIAMI — A South Florida man has been convicted of smuggling more than 100 endangered snakes into the United States.

Tim Eaton, 36, of Tequesta, hid 110 red-tail boa constrictors, one rainbow boa constrictor and three green anacondas in cloth bags and brought them into Miami International Airport in 1983, the U.S. Attorney's Office said Tuesday.

Eaton was convicted of violating the Endangered Species Act, two counts of smuggling and two counts of receipt, sale and facilitating the transportation of smuggled boa constrictors.

He faces a maximum penalty of 25 years and more than $1 million in fines. Sentencing is scheduled for Oct. 10.

Importers are allowed to bring in endangered animals with a federal permit and with permission from the country of origin.

But Peru has banned the commercial trade of Amazon snakes.

The snakes, particularly the red tail boa constrictor, are popular with pet stores because of their rarity and can cost more than $200.

Miami gets tourism show

MIAMI — The Miami area will host a major tourism trade show in 1989 for the second time this decade.

The International Pow Wow of the Travel Industry of America is one of the tourism's most prestigious shows, local officials said Tuesday.

Miami, Miami Beach and other beach communities hosted the show in 1984. A number of cities vied for the 1989 event.

"Pow Wow is the most important U.S. travel industry sales event a destination can host," said Merrett R. Stierheim, president and CEO of the Greater Miami Convention & Visitors Bureau. "This will give us another opportunity to showcase our community to the most important tour operators of the world."

The event is designed to sell the U.S. travel products to the international market — a business estimated at $80 billion a year. More than 1,500 tour operators from 70 countries are expected to attend.

Dade County Commissioner Miguel Diaz de la Portilla said the tourism industry was impressed by the event two years ago.

"They were impressed by the hospitality, service and excitement they experienced here in 1984," he said. "The very fact that they chose to return so quickly speaks volumes."

Banana boat carries cocaine

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. — Drug smugglers used a banana boat to try to deliver nearly 90 pounds of cocaine into Bridgeport Harbor but were foiled during a routine boat inspection, federal prosecutors said.

The cocaine was seized Monday from the Summer Meadow, which was transporting bananas from Colombia, said U.S. Attorney Christopher F. Doney.

The boat was chartered by the Turbana Corp., a Bridgeport fruit importer, prosecutors said Tuesday.

A state police dive team discovered a tube clamped to the underside of the ship during an inspection after seeing two scuba divers swimming along the vessel, he said. The tube contained about 88 pounds of cocaine.

James Garcia, 31, of North Miami, Fla., and Andres Camacho, 29, of Pompano Beach, Fla., who Doney identified as alleged swimmers, were arrested on charges of conspiracy to transport cocaine into the United States.

Upon further investigation, three more suspects — Albeiro Gonzalez, 24, Juan Montoya, 29, and Ofelia Sourales, 36, all from Queens, N.Y. — were arrested on the same charge.

All defendants are being held without bond pending detention hearings.

Parents: Kmart illegally sold gun

DESTIN — A Florida Panhandle couple charges that Kmart illegally sold an air gun to an underage youth who fired it and blinded their son in one eye.

The discount chain violated state law and its own company policy when it sold the air gun to 15-year-old Chris Leiman on Feb. 12, an attorney for Tenor and Virginia Mallette said Tuesday.

On Feb. 15, Chris Lehman fired the gun, striking 11-year-old Nicholas Mallette and blinding his right eye, attorney Troy Rafferty said.

According to Okaloosa County Sheriff's Office reports, Nicholas Mallette said he expected to be shot in the foot in what was described as an "initiation," but when Chris Lehman pulled the trigger the pellet struck his eye.

The lawsuit seeks more than $15,000 — the threshold for filing a damage suit in Circuit Court — and requests a jury trial, said Rafferty.

Santeria priest pleads no contest

By RAJU CHESNUM
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI — A Santeria priest facing animal cruelty charges stemming from ritualistic animal sacrifices has decided to take his chances with an appeals court rather than risk a jury's likely guilty verdict.

Rigoberto Zamora, 59, pleaded no contest Tuesday to four counts of animal cruelty. A Dade County Circuit judge found him guilty on one count and withheld adjudication on the remaining three.

Zamora received two years probation and 400 hours of community service. Each count carried a $5,000 fine and a year's imprisonment.

Zamora said he wanted to go to trial, but was advised by his attorney to take the plea and turn to an appeals court with the freedom of religion defense.

"My lawyer said better not to go to trial, because I was going to have problems with the jury," Zamora said. "The (appeals court) judges understand what the Supreme Court ruled. But the jury doesn't understand what it ruled. I must wait for the appeal."

His attorney, Assistant Public Defender Brian Tannenbaum, could not be reached for comment.

Zamora was referring to a 1993 U.S. Supreme Court decision that determined Santeria — an Afro-Caribbean religion that blends Catholicism and West African religions — is legitimate and animal sacrifice an integral part of it.

The ruling came in the case of a Hialeah priest who challenged city ordinances that banned animal slaughter except for consumption.

To celebrate the ruling, Zamora invited the media to his Miami Beach apartment to witness a sacrifice. During the two-hour ceremony, he killed five roosters, three goats, two hens, two pigeons, two guinea hens and a lamb.

Zamora switched knives midway through the slaughter of one goat, ripped the head off a pigeon and slammed a guinea hen against the floor.

Some of those actions led to the cruelty charges.

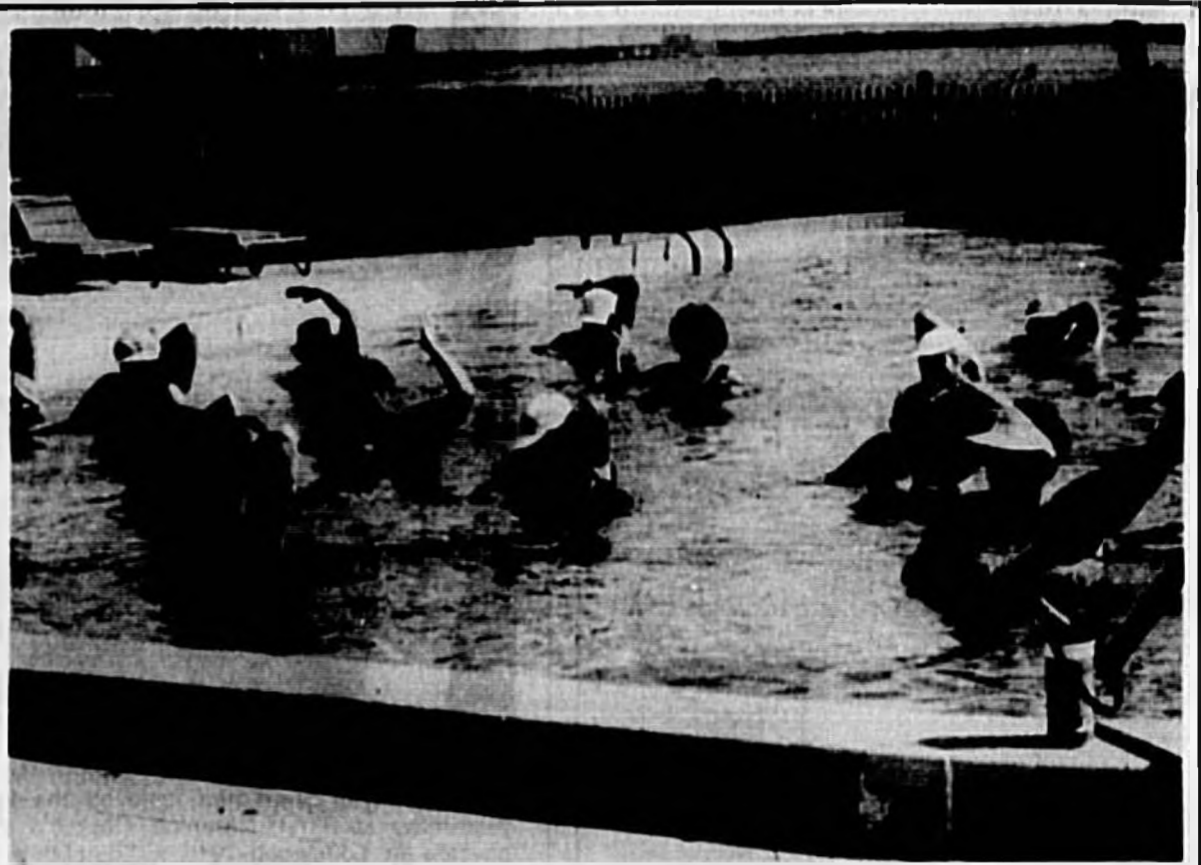

The Humane Society of the United States, which played a key role in the charges against Zamora, said it was satisfied with Tuesday's outcome.

"It's the next best thing to conviction by a jury," said Ken Johnson of the Humane Society.

Charges dropped in tourist murder case

By The Associated Press

DAYTONA BEACH — Murder charges against a mentally disabled man were dropped after one of his co-defendants and several other witnesses testified he was elsewhere when a Canadian spring breaker was murdered.

John Rainey, 17, who prosecutors believe shot high school student Mark Fyke, testified in a sworn affidavit that Donald Shoup was not involved in the March 15 killing.

New witnesses also told prosecutors Tuesday that Shoup, 19, of Ormond Beach, couldn't have participated in the killing because he was with them, miles away, said Steve Cotter, a spokesman for the state attorney.

One witness confirmed that he spotted Shoup at his Port Orange establishment while Shoup was visiting his friends, court records show.

Shoup has now been cleared of charges of being a principal in first-degree murder and principal of attempted robbery with a firearm.

Fyke, 19, of Bedford, Ontario, was gunned down during a botched robbery as he hung up a beachside pay telephone after talking to his mother.

Shoup, who state psychiatrists have said has an IQ of 52 and is prone to fantasize and make up stories, initially confessed to the shooting.

And in April, a Volusia County grand jury indicted Shoup, Rainey, and two other teenagers in Fyke's murder.

Scott Russell Malone, 16, of Umatilla and William Marshall Schmidt, 16, of Astor were indicted on the same charges as Shoup.

One witness, Joy Hamilton of Port Orange, said in a statement that Shoup, his sister Shannon Shoup and friend Greg McElwain visited her room at a motel about 8 p.m. the night of the murder and that they talked until about 12:05 a.m.

Boy accused of slashing mother with steak knife

By The Associated Press

NEW SMYRNA BEACH — A 7 year-old slashed his mother across the stomach with a steak knife and threatened to kill her just hours after being released from a mental health facility, police said.

The boy was arrested and charged Tuesday with aggravated assault and battery, and was taken to a juvenile justice center in Daytona Beach.

The attack took place early Tuesday inside the family's home after the mother, Mary L. Stacy, told the boy he couldn't open some new toys. The mother suffered a minor cut and didn't require medical treatment.

The woman said the child had previously threatened family members with silverware.

Stacy, 28, first called police to the home in a housing project at about 5 p.m. Monday.

She reported that her son had been out of control since Friday, lunging at his two sisters, ages 6 and 10, and threatening to kill them while holding a fork. The woman said the boy charged at his sisters with a knife on Saturday, saying he wanted them dead because he didn't want any witnesses around when he killed his mother and stepfather, Charles Stacy.

The Stacys managed to take the silverware from the boy after each attempted assault.

The second grader, who attends special classes at Halifax Behavioral Services, a mental health facility, was taken into custody late Monday afternoon under the state's Baker Act.

But Stacy said the hospital called her about 10 p.m. Monday and said the child had been evaluated and was being released on the recommendation of Dr. Harish Care. Dr. Care was unavailable for comment Tuesday about the boy's release.

Stacy said she was coming out of the bathroom after midnight when the boy slashed her nightgown and the flesh underneath. Stacy took away the knife, which had a 6-inch blade, as he lunged at her a second time.

The attack is the fourth incident involving violent children in Central Florida this month.

A 13-year-old Orange County girl pulled a knife on her mother during an argument July 18. A 10-year-old boy from Orlando threatened to stab his mother July 25 after she punished him by taking away his teddy bear.

Health care training program helping move recipients off welfare rolls

By DAVID WILKINSON
Associated Press Writer

NEWARK, N.J. — Nicole Singleton leaned over her notes and struggled to decipher the gibberish written on the classroom board.

Seconds later, with a little coaching from an instructor, the 20-year-old single mother from East Orange had interpreted the jumble of letters and numbers as a doctor's order to get a patient out of bed and into a wheelchair at least twice a day.

Singleton, who has lived on public assistance since her 2-year-old daughter was born, is taking part in a program that trains welfare recipients as community health workers. She sees it as the path to a new life and financial security.

Its sponsors see it as a way to reduce the burden of welfare costs on taxpayers while putting health care advocates into their own inner-city neighborhoods that others are quick to write off as too dangerous.

"When I was growing up, I always felt as though I was going to be the one to save the world. I'm going to help people do this. I'm going to help people do that," Singleton said Thursday. "I didn't know how I was going to help the people or what road I was going to take to help these people. This is giving me a path, and I just have to walk through it."

The program, operated by the health-oriented, nonprofit Project Hope and the New Community Corp. of Newark, one of the nation's largest private development corporations, is small and just a year old.

However, of the 35 people who have graduated, 27 have found jobs in the health care industry and are off the welfare rolls. Their starting salaries have ranged from $15,600 to $26,000. The current class has 11 students, and officials hope eventually to expand the privately funded program.

Most graduates are finding jobs with health maintenance organizations, which are working to sign up thousands of Medicaid recipients as part of a state effort to move the system to managed health care.

As community health workers, the new graduates go out into the community and teach people about prenatal care, AIDS, drug abuse and other health problems. They also encourage people to see their doctors regularly.

"The community health workers are trusted by people in the community because they have been through what they are going through," said Patricia Alkinocho, Project Hope's New Jersey director. "They live in the same neighborhood, and their kids attend the same schools. They have shared experiences. They're not afraid of the drug dens and the shooting galleries."

While the program clearly benefits the HMOs, it is also bringing preventive medicine to people who too often avoid doctors until the last minute, when illnesses can require costly hospital stays.

The program comes as Congress works to overhaul the welfare system that entitled the poor automatically to open-ended assistance and replace it with work-oriented, time-limited aid distributed by the states.

The cost of the New Jersey program, which is picked up through a $70,000 grant from

New York-based Pfizer Inc., is about $8,300 per person. It is open to men and women, but is dominated by single mothers on welfare.

For three months, they meet weekdays, six hours a day, and are lectured on such things as prenatal care, sexually transmitted diseases and drug abuse. They also learn simple medical tasks such as taking vital signs.

And since most have limited experience in the work place, they are taught communication, interview and computer skills, conflict resolution, even money management.

Storage buildings on zoning agenda

From staff reports

SANFORD — Two proposed storage facilities in Sanford are the only items listed for consideration this Thursday, during the regular meeting of the Sanford Planning and Zoning Commission.

One is consideration of the site plan for two wholesale/storage or manufacturing buildings to be located at Sanford Commerce Park, 150 and 134 Coastline Road. One of the proposed facilities is 20,000 square feet. The other is 7,997 square feet.

The second proposal is a site plan for Public Storage Inc., a proposed climate-controlled storage facility at 2905 Orlando Drive. Conditional use approval was granted on May 2.

The proposed building is 18,500 square feet, with an additional 2,500 square foot area for office space.

While these are the only two items listed for consideration on the agenda issued this past week, additional business may be proposed by commission members or the general public.

The meeting will be held beginning at 7 p.m., Thursday, Aug. 1, in the commission chambers of Sanford City Hall, 300 N. Park Avenue.

Limits on solicitation after plane disasters called for by lawyers

By JOE MARCUS
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON — Members of the nation's largest trial lawyers group called for restrictions on soliciting business from grieving relatives of people killed in airplane disasters, saying they need to improve their image.

"We have so trial lawyers caused some of the criticism that we're getting," New York lawyer Mitch Baumeister, chairman of the Association of Trial Lawyers of America's aviation committee, said Tuesday at the group's annual convention.

Baumeister, who represented relatives of victims in the Pan Am Flight 103 bombing over Lockerbie, Scotland, in 1988, said it is now up to lawyers to "recapture the image that we are the good guys doing good work."

Lawyers trying to solicit clients after the May 11 crash of a ValuJet in the Florida Everglades were accused of deluging family members with telephone calls, fliers and even flowers. Some were accused of using sexy female employees to approach the male relatives of victims.

Fewer such incidents have been reported in connection with the July 17 explosion of TWA Flight 800 in New York, with relatives clustered in a heavily guarded hotel.

Baumeister and other members of his committee proposed banning face-to-face or direct-mail solicitations in the wake of a disaster.

If ATLA members approve restrictions on attorneys, the association could expel any member who appeared in violation of the limits and refer them for possible disciplinary action to their state bar examiners.

Drive carefully

This is something which shouldn't be said. Yet, year after year we have offered comments on the situation. But people still fail to pay attention.

School is back in session. That means motorists will begin to exercise a new type of motoring caution. When school is out, we have to watch for youngsters darting into the streets during their play time or en route somewhere. This is a problem at all hours of the day.

Now, with school back in session, we need extra caution when motoring to avoid youngsters darting into the streets going to and from school, or trying to expand their play time on weekends.

One caution which needs to be exercised is to heed school buses. When they stop, motorists must stop. That's a complete stop and a wait. Don't attempt to drive around them at the last moment before the driver flips out the stop sign.

Youngsters aren't supposed to, but they nonetheless sometimes will stand too close to the street when waiting for their bus. Some youngsters, probably in a playful mood, also have a tendency to try pushing each other out into oncoming traffic. While this is certainly something which should not be condoned, it is a situation with which each of us must be cautious.

One of the most serious situations may occur when a parent is dropping a youngster off at school in a private vehicle. Driving onto school property, with hundreds, thousands of youngsters in the immediate area, can be extremely dangerous. A motorist needs to be aware of everything going on, at all times, and even then, exercise extreme caution.

We have said this every year. Yet every year youngsters at school bus stops and parking lots are struck by vehicles. When a lightweight child collides with a multi-ton moving vehicle, there is no need to explain the probable results.

School is back in session, so drive carefully. Those are words which all of us must live by, regardless of what we drive or where we drive. A lack of caution in this case can be, and often is, a tragedy.

Luring business

I commend your newspaper for the excellent article by Jeff Hunt, "Luring Business With Money," and his equally well-written companion piece, "County Stands By Economic Program." Both headlines invite comment.

Taxpayers in Lake Mary should applaud and join with Commissioner Sheila Sawyer in questioning the constitutionality of that city's economic program. Her revelation that an incentive program to lure business is intended to jumpstart economies in blighted areas should cause thoughtful citizens to pause and ponder. Although county commission candidate Paul Lovstrand may have a political motive, his questioning of the legality of Seminole County's program for luring businesses with money should be answered by the County Attorney, not County Commissioner Randy Morris.

I am a concerned county taxpayer who has seen his property tax almost double in recent years. I seriously doubt that either Lake Mary or Seminole County could be considered a blighted area. With employment rates higher than any other time in our history, the creation of more jobs will just attract more people to the area. Public servants in Lake Mary and Seminole County cannot handle the growth-related problems we have now. Go figure!

How to raise an Olympic athlete

WASHINGTON--How do you raise an Olympic athlete?

Every four years, the thrilling peals of the Olympic theme have made me wonder, "How do you become an Olympian?" But today--after decades of fantasizing about abandoning journalism to train nonstop--this non-athlete is facing facts. I will never be an Olympian.

But as a mom of three, I figure: If you can't be one, perhaps you can raise one. And I asked the parents of Grant Hill and Dominique Dawes how to do it.

In truth, Dream Team hoopster Hill and gymnast Dawes would be Very Impressive People even if they weren't competing in Atlanta. Reston, Va., native Hill helped lead Duke University to two NCAA championships before joining the Detroit Pistons and becoming the 1995 NBA Rookie of the Year.

Dawes, a member of the Olympic gymnastics team that won the bronze medal in 1992, was the 1994 U.S. National all-around champion. She was a prom queen at Gaithersburg (Md.) High School before her 1994 graduation and will attend Stanford University this fall on an academic scholarship.

Loretta Powell Dawes, taking a break from packing for the trip to Atlanta, displays her daughter's fine bone-structure and a down-to-earth manner. Ask the former small-business owner how she and her ex-husband, Don, raised their Olympian, and she pauses.

It helped having a baby who couldn't stop tumbling. "Dominique would slide down the stairs on her stomach, do flips ... jump off furniture," recalls Dawes, 42. It helped when that kid, introduced to gymnastics at age 6, became so devoted that she'd stretch on the floor even when feverish.

Anyone interested in Olympian-raising, Dawes says, should "always believe in your child ... always be positive--we never said,

"Don't get your heart set on winning." And stress education, she adds. "Sports isn't everything--once you're injured, that's it."

As for the Olympic spirit, "Dominique had that in her," she says. "This is what she always wanted and dreamed of. Nobody can take that away but her."

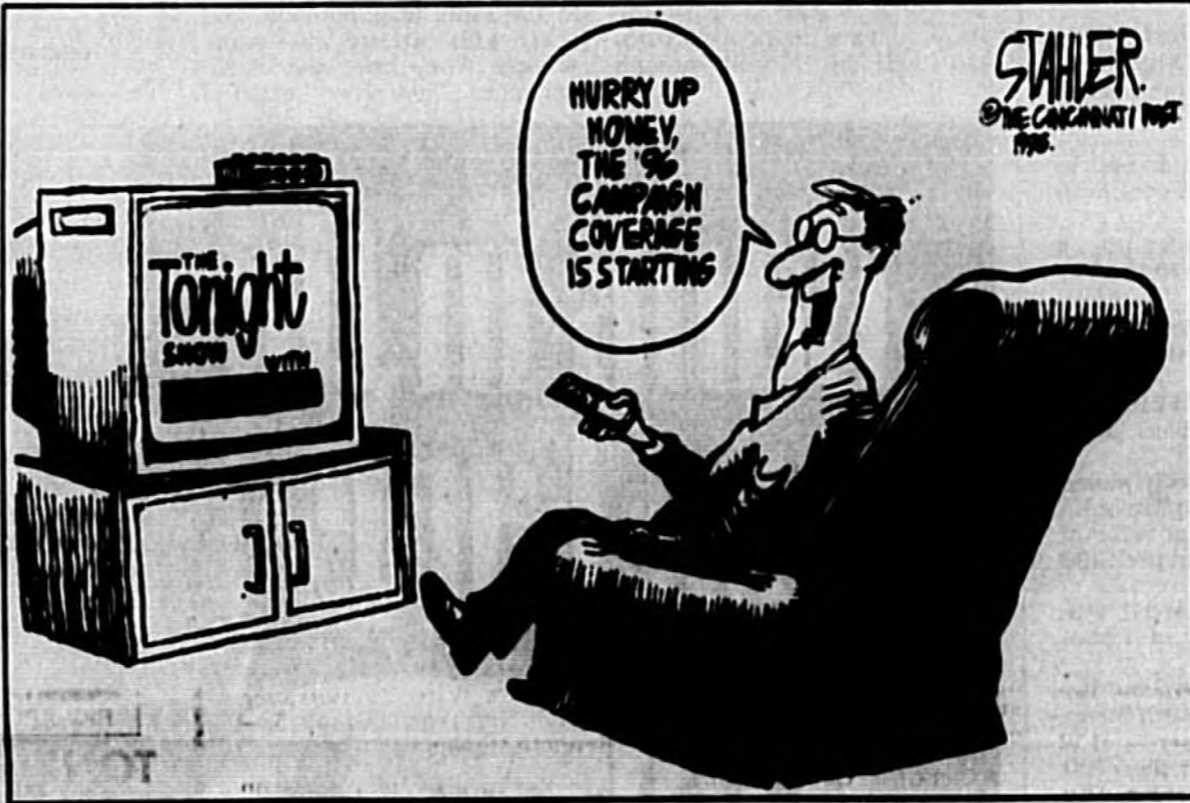

Grant Hill apparently has no intention of relinquishing the honors he sought--Dream Teamer and NBA superstar--and the one he didn't--sports' unofficial Mr. Nice Guy, so solid that a GQ cover story asked: "Can Grant Hill Save Sports?"

His parents, Janet and Calvin Hill, are hardly underachievers: She co-owns a successful management consulting firm; he's the former All-Pro running back who played for the Dallas Cowboys, Cleveland Browns and Washington Redskins.

They stop for breath. And Calvin Hill sums it up:

"We focus on gold medals, but the Olympic spirit is about doing your best," he says. "If your son can't do algebra, it's about helping with problems, hiring a tutor, providing support."

When he comes home with his first passing grade--that's an Olympic moment."

Garment gab: Buyer be aware

BOSTON--This story begins with a pair of tennis shorts. Generic white. Cotton knit. Deep pockets. No teeny-weenie polo players or alligators or famous players' endorsements.

On the outside they bear a price tag: $94.98. On the inside they have a label boasting their and my country of origin: the USA. They have another label recording their and my size: never mind. And of course, a third label telling how to clean them: wash in cold water, tumble dry low.

I have come here to adopt these tennis shorts as my very own. So I add them to a pile already containing two pairs of socks born in China. But now standing at the checkout counter, I have begun wondering what exactly the array of labels and tags aren't telling me about their background.

Do I know where these shorts began life? Do I know who made the socks and for what wage and in what working conditions? Did they get to this sports shop from a sweatshop?

I don't usually carry on conversations with my clothing. But after a year with the spotlight on sweatshops in America and child labor abroad, I am not the only consumer developing the gift of garment gab.

Just last Monday, human rights activists at a Washington shop rallied against Nike, insisting that it monitor conditions of Indonesian workers. The same afternoon, a humbled Kathie Lee Gifford, whose Wal-Mart clothes were made by children in Honduras and sweatshop workers in Manhattan, spoke to a congressional hearing on child labor.

Then on Tuesday, the peripatetic secretary of labor, Robert Reich, a man who has been raiding sweatshops and naming names of retailers who knew better, corralled a fashion industry forum of good guys to wrestle over these issues.

It is no wonder that consumers are slowly widening their focus--one pair of shorts at a time--from what's good for the buyer to what's good for the worker. The motto, Let the Buyer Beware, is changing to Let the Buyer Be Aware.

But it isn't always easy. In America, everything from cigarettes to a child's car seat carries a safety warning. The cereal box is positively garrulous about nutrition. The laundry detergent bottle carries an infomercial on its chemical makeup. The paper towels come with a certificate of recycled birth. The entire supermarket is an invitation to comparison-shop for price and ingredients.

But no matter how many questions I ask, my tennis shorts remain mum on the subject of working conditions. The most informed consumers can't know if the pajamas their children are sleeping in were made by sleepless children or if the balls they are playing with were made by kids who work instead of play.

Now at this checkout counter I have begun to wonder. If we have a safety label, a nutrition label, an eco-label, why not a labor label? If we have a tag telling us what's good for our private health, why not a tag telling us something about society's health? Why not a label to rank the wages, ages and working conditions of the people making what we buy?

This notion of a labor label is not as far-fetched as it seems. In Asia there is a Rugmark attached by independent monitors to guarantee European buyers that their goods have not been made by children.

California Rep. George Miller has been promoting a similar voluntary "No Sweat" label for child-labor-free products. And Tuesday in Washington, Reich's fashion forum discussed the feasibility and criteria of a label that would proclaim No Sweatshop.

In the world, there are more than 70 million children under 12 working full-time. In our country the Department of Labor has found one-third of the cutting and sewing shops to be hazards to the health and safety of workers.

We are told repeatedly, as if it were a fact of nature, that we live in the new world economy. That companies chase wages down to the lowest, even youngest, laborer. That they do it to keep prices low and customers happy.

At the same time, companies spend vast sums of money on their good name and image. They spend it on Olympic torches and ad campaigns. They do it to keep sales high and customers happy.

But what if we could compare labor practices as well as prices? What if we make a conscious reconnection between what we wear and the people who made it? One study suggests that 70 percent of us might boycott those that use sweatshops. It also suggests we might even pay more to those who pay more.

"The only way it will change," says Reich, "is if consumers ask questions." As the uneasy consumer of one pair of tennis shorts and two pairs of socks of dubious origin, let me start with an easy question. How about labels for labor? No sweat.

Egg farm fried for filthy work conditions

WASHINGTON -- The world's largest producer of brown eggs is accused of forcing laborers to work 10-hour shifts while paying them for only three and a half hours, housing workers among containers overflowing with soiled toilet paper and failing to get proper medical treatment for workers with serious injuries.

And the U.S. government has helped to pay for it all.

The Department of Labor recently recommended fines of $3.8 million for the Maine-based DeCoster Egg Farms after an investigation found employees working and living in conditions that Labor Secretary Robert B. Reich calls "as dangerous and oppressive as (in) any sweatshop we have seen."

"Fear and intimidation kept these workers in this unsafe, unhealthy atmosphere and living in totally unsanitary conditions," Reich said.

DeCoster's facilities in Turner, Maine, where the alleged violations occurred, have 3.5 million laying hens producing 12 million eggs a week with estimated sales of over $40 million annually. Of the 320 workers at the Turner plant, approximately half are Hispanic migrants, many of whom do not speak English.

DeCoster also operates plants in Ohio, Minnesota and Iowa.

As shocking as the investigation's conclusions are, longtime DeCoster watchers were not surprised. The company has repeatedly violated safety and other regulations over the years, according to the Labor Department.

More surprising is the fact that the federal government would hand the company a deal worth millions of dollars according to Agriculture Department figures.

Beginning in the mid-1980s, Congress began shelling out subsidies of as much as $5 million per year to support the export of brown eggs to Hong Kong. Without them, heavily subsidized European producers and exporters would have had the rooster's share of the market.

According to Agriculture Department numbers, DeCoster received $14.3 million through the program from 1991 to 1996. And through a continuing export promotion program, DeCoster received or is budgeted to receive $982,665, according to the Agriculture Department.

While trying to create an overseas market for an American product, the subsidies may have helped to enrich a company that was creating Third World working conditions at home.

Occupational Safety and Health Administration investigators found that DeCoster managers sometimes referred to employees as "animals." Workers with injuries, including one who had a broken leg, were "taken back to their housing and dumped, left on their own to seek medical aid," according to the agency.

In 1996, one worker had three fingers cut off when they were caught in an unguarded belt and pulley drive. He was promised medical help, but the help did not arrive for several hours, the agency said.

To prevent workers from making long-distance calls, outside telephone service had been disconnected. Workers were unable to call 911.

Workers did not have proper protective equipment, even gloves. Because of contact with dead chickens and feces, workers were exposed to salmonella and other hazards.

And the U.S. government has helped to pay for it all.

Guard

As early as Tuesday morning, Jewell, a beefy 33-year-old with a checkered law enforcement career, was appearing on NBC's "Today" show to recount his heroic deeds.

By afternoon, his name was splashed across Page 1 of an extra edition of the Atlanta

Journal-Constitution: "FBI suspects 'hero' guard may have planted bomb."

A federal law enforcement official, speaking in Washington on condition of anonymity, said Jewell had emerged as the "leading candidate" in the FBI's investigation.

"He looks good now, but there have been no arrests and the investigation is still continuing," the Washington official said.

One woman died and 111 were injured in the blast early

Saturday, which indirectly contributed to the heart-attack death of a Turkish cameraman rushing to the scene.

Jewell's lawyer, Watson Bryant, asserted the guard's innocence: "I can tell you that I spoke with agent Don Johnson of the FBI, who said that Richard Jewell was not a suspect, was not a subject, was not a target."

An FBI spokesman here, Paul Miller, would say only that investigators "have been questioning many individuals."

DeKalb County police briefly spoke with Jewell at his door twice late Tuesday night. It was not clear why they went to the door or what was said.

Bryant returned to Jewell's apartment around 2 a.m. today and stayed about 20 minutes. Asked if he expected police to search the apartment, he said, "I assume they will if they have probable cause. But I don't think they do."

Hero

Why would anyone supposedly dedicated to protect the public put lives at risk instead? Experts say people caught in the hero syndrome are driven by anger, egotism and a pathological need for recognition.

"Very often in these cases, it's a disgruntled personality," said Michael Rustigan, a criminologist at San Francisco State University who has taught homicide-investigating techniques for 20 years.

"It's someone who feels that somehow they've been wronged or overlooked," Rustigan said Tuesday. "They have a very strong need for attention, and they have monstrous egos. Now they're going to show the world their importance."

Feed

The biggest need, said Jean Metts, director of Seminole Volunteer Enterprises, has been to have food available for those who come to them in need of food at times when they are not scheduled to distribute USDA food commodities.

"Some have just lost their jobs. Others have moved here and are looking for jobs and can't find them," she noted. "Some are living in their cars. Some are homeless and sleeping in the woods. They are all ages, colors and races, but all need a helping hand."

While Seminole County may not be often mentioned as one of the culinary hot spots in magazines like Gourmet, some fine meals are created here in restaurants, by caterers and at the homes of some of our citizens.

"We're going to have them all come together to help us out for the needy," Metts said.

Among the participating chefs at "A Taste of Seminole" will be representatives from the Golden Lamb restaurant, the Rose Garden Tea Room, Ganas' Barbecue and Pizza Hut. Metts will be making her famous venison stew and others from Seminole Volunteer Enterprises will be making their own specialties.

"A Taste of Seminole" is scheduled for Saturday, Aug. 3 between 5 and 9 p.m. at the Sanford Civic Center.

Tickets are $10 for adults, $5 for children and $7.50 for senior citizens.

"We are looking forward to having the community help us help those in need," Metts said. "This is the first of what we hope will be an annual event."

A federal law-enforcement source speaking on condition of anonymity said Tuesday that the investigation into Saturday's bombing at the Olympics is focusing on Richard Jewell, the security guard initially hailed as a hero for spotting a suspicious knapsack minutes before it exploded.

Jewell's early warning allowed police to start clearing the area, avoiding more injuries. The bomb killed a woman and injured 111 other people.

Paul Miller, an FBI spokesman in Atlanta, would say only that investigators "have been questioning many individuals," Jewell, 33, said he is innocent.

If Jewell did plant the bomb, the case would fit a well-established hero-syndrome profile, experts say.

After the bombing, Jewell gave extensive TV interviews that were broadcast nationally.

"What we're looking at often is a nobody who becomes a somebody and gets his 15 minutes of fame," Rustigan said.

NATIONAL BRIEFS

Christian Coalition in lawsuit battle

CHESAPEAKE, Va. — Created by Pat Robertson to preserve the ideals he espoused during his failed 1988 presidential bid, the Christian Coalition has for years championed conservative social issues and their advocates.

That those advocates have been overwhelmingly Republican is the basis for a lawsuit filed by the Federal Election Commission against the coalition, which is readying for what's shaping up as a battle royal.

"The FEC simply will not be able to prove that the Christian Coalition has worked to benefit either party or any candidate," says Mike Russell, a coalition spokesman who calls the Virginia-based group nonpartisan.

Ralph Reed, the coalition's director, said the organization was recruiting "the finest election law legal team ever assembled" to fight the charges, which he called baseless and frivolous.

Where Dole is coming from

WASHINGTON — Bob Dole says he's putting the finishing touches on his economic and tax-cut package and that it will begin to show Americans "precisely where I'm coming from."

Dole and his aides are portraying the release of the long-delayed plan — expected early next week — as a defining moment for the GOP presidential candidate, one nearly as important as his selection of a running mate.

USS Grapple helps search for clues

By PAT MILTON Associated Press Writer

EAST MORICHES, N.Y. — Investigators hope a newly arrived Navy ship with remote cameras and crack divers can retrieve airplane wreckage to help crack the 2-week-old case of TWA Flight 800.

The USS Grapple, one of the Navy's top two search-and-salvage vessels, was to begin searching the waters off Long Island today, said James Kallstrom, head of the FBI investigation.

Investigators hoped the ship can find wreckage to confirm their theory: A bomb in the front cargo hold blew the Boeing 747's nose off July 17, killing all 250 people aboard.

The New York Times reported today that some investigators said the plane's front landing gear, which was found over the weekend, showed damage from a powerful blast inside the aircraft — indicating the jet may have been brought down by a bomb.

An unidentified federal investigator told the newspaper that the hydraulic mechanism that retracts the landing gear was found to have "serious concussive damage," and that "by the way it had been smashed, bomb experts thought it had been very close to the source of the explosion."

But senior law enforcement officials also told the Times that the finding did not prove the explosion was the result of a criminal act.

Two sources who spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity also cast doubt on the Times report.

It is "unlikely" the landing gear provided proof of a bombing, said a source from the National Transportation Safety Board. And another source close to the investigation said those who had studied the piece of wreckage did not believe it brought them closer to a conclusion.

Divers working on the 100-foot-deep floor of the continental shelf recovered 10 more bodies Tuesday, for a total of 171. They also brought up more wreckage and spotted components of a third engine.

For a week, Kallstrom said each day that investigators had "moved the ball up the field" toward learning what made the jumbo jet explode. But he dropped his football analogy on Tuesday.

"Even on the (investigating) team, some people think one thing, some think another," Kallstrom said. "There's a lot of different opinions."

The Grapple arrived Tuesday in an area that produced the front landing gear and some first-class seats. An investigative source has told the AP that searchers suspect a bomb in the forward cargo section blew the plane's nose off, and that wreckage in this debris area might yield a crucial clue.

If such evidence is located, and involves a large piece of wreckage, the Grapple can raise loads of up to 13,000 pounds and keep divers in the water at the same time.

The Grapple is the sister ship of the USS Grasp, which the Navy brought in earlier to help with the search.

Report: More adults going back to school

By BARBARA SUPERVILLE Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The better educated you are, the greater your chances for success.

Education Secretary Richard Riley said today in reporting that a larger percentage of adults are returning to the nation's classrooms.

"My message to all Americans is very simple: if you want to get ahead, stay in school, go back to school or take advantage of on-the-job opportunities to advance your skills," Riley said in remarks prepared for delivery at Jefferson Community College in Louisville, Ky.

Riley was releasing the Education Department's annual report on the state of education, which shows that 40 percent of adults participated in some form of adult instruction last year, up from 32 percent in 1991.

The report showed that 21 percent returned to school for work-related courses and 20 percent for personal development. A smaller proportion, 8 percent, studied for a diploma, degree or certificate.

The report also found that: —High school pupils are taking tougher courses, particularly in math and science, and also are completing more advanced classes in the two subjects.

—College attendance is increasing. The percentage of 18- to 24-year-olds enrolled in college grew from 33 percent in 1984 to 42 percent in 1994.

—The proportion of high school graduates going directly to college increased from 47 percent in 1973 to 62 percent in 1994, despite continued increases in college costs compared to family income.

Employed individuals and those with more education are most likely to return to school, Riley said, noting that opportunities for success in both life and work are limited for those who fail to complete even high school.

The department's National Center for Education Statistics prepared the report, which contains 60 indicators related to preschool, elementary, secondary and post-secondary education that define the status of education in the United States. Included are data on enrollment, student achievement, curricula, revenues and expenditures, staffing, degrees awarded and tuition.

"The record is clear. More and more adults are taking the time to learn new skills," Riley said. "But there is a growing gap between those who are returning to school to learn new skills and those who aren't."

Riley cited new findings that confirm high school dropouts face tough times: In 1994, they were more than twice as likely to receive welfare as were high school graduates who didn't go directly on to college.

Less than 1 percent of college graduates received public assistance.

"I urge students to finish high school (and) to recognize that if they don't they may have years of struggle ahead of them," Riley said.

Repair shop blamed in ValuJet engine fire

By RANDOLPH E. SCHIND Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Disintegrating jet engine parts killed two passengers this month and led to the destruction of an airliner in Atlanta last year — accidents that safety investigators say proper maintenance should prevent.

Jet engine covers are designed to block fan blades that come off, but massive, rapidly rotating parts cannot be contained, National Transportation Safety Board member John Goglia observed Tuesday.

"They can't," agreed NTSB aviation safety director Bernard Loeb. "You head it off" with inspection procedures and maintenance. "Heavy, rotating parts are not meant to depart the engine and we've got to make sure it doesn't happen.

The discussion came as the board focused on the engine failure and fire last June 8 that destroyed a ValuJet DC-9 as it began its takeoff run in Atlanta.

An internal disk on a Pratt & Whitney JT8D engine broke and flying parts injured a flight attendant and ruptured a fuel line, leading to a fire that destroyed the plane.

The board blamed the accident on improper maintenance procedures by Turk Hava Yolları, a Turkish company that overhauled the engine in 1991 before selling it to ValuJet.

The part that broke had a visible crack at that time and it should have been detected, the board concluded.

A similar accident occurred July 6 in Pensacola, Fla., when a fan hub failed on a Delta MD-88 sending metal pieces slamming into the passenger cabin killing a woman and her son.

The board investigation of that accident is continuing. However, the board has recommended that the Federal Aviation Administration order new inspections of the fan hubs on the type of engine involved, also a Pratt & Whitney JT8D, and review procedures under which the parts are returned to use after damage is reported.

While the ValuJet accident was blamed on poor maintenance, the fault was that of the Turkish company, not the airline, the board said.

ValuJet was grounded in June after inspectors found a pattern of problems in its maintenance procedures. At the same time the airline was under scrutiny because of a May 11 crash in Florida, killing 110. ValuJet says it hopes to return to the air next month.

The NTSB was critical of the Turkish repair facility's record-keeping and of FAA rules that it said neither require enough records of repairs nor provide enough supervision of foreign facilities.

It recommended that the FAA tighten record-keeping requirements and review certificates of all foreign repair shops. The FAA responded that it will review the board's recommendations.

The safety board also recommended that airlines buying engines from foreign companies be required to perform a complete overhaul if any question arises about the maintenance record when an engine is purchased abroad.

House bill would change 'dolphin safe' tuna labeling

By M. JOSEF HEBERT Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The familiar "dolphin safe" tuna label, a symbol of the campaign to safeguard dolphins from commercial fishing nets, is under assault in Congress as overly restrictive and in need of change.

The House was expected to vote today on redefining "dolphin safe" and lifting the import restrictions that led to the dramatic reduction in dolphin deaths in recent years. Mexico, which has a large fleet of tuna boats, has pressed the United States to lift the import ban, promising a commitment to dolphin protection.

The legislation has the support of the Clinton administration, but environmentalists are divided. Some say it once again would put thousands of dolphins in jeopardy and mislead consumers into thinking that dolphins would be protected.

Other environmental groups argue that dolphin protection is best achieved internationally and that U.S. import ban has outlived its usefulness. They argue that if Congress does not ease its tuna import policy, it would mean the end of international efforts begun last October with a tentative agreement among 13 nations in Panama to protect dolphins and other marine life.

The House bill would allow canneries to continue to use the "dolphin safe" designation even if the tuna is caught by deliberately forcing dolphins into nets so that tuna that often accompany the popular mammals are easily caught.

This method of tuna fishing was specifically outlawed as part of the import ban and the tuna labeling requirements after it was found to have led to the slaughter of hundreds of thousands of dolphins.

As recently as 1991, as many as 125,000 thousands dolphins were killed in tuna nets in the eastern Pacific where the yellow fin tuna usually follow dolphin for reasons that scientists still do not fully understand. Last year confirmed dolphin deaths were put at just over 3,000.

The prospect of a wholesale slaughter of dolphins no longer is a matter of concern because nations such as Mexico have committed to minimizing dolphin deaths, argues Rep. Wayne Gilchrest, R-Md., chief sponsor of the House bill. "Dolphins will continue to be protected," agrees Suzanne Ludicello of the Center for Marine Conservation. "The question is whether you want to sacrifice the entire (marine) ecosystem because one or two or 10 animals are frightened."

She echoes the views of other environmental groups such as the Environmental Defense Fund, the World Wildlife Fund, the National Wildlife Federation and Greenpeace as well as the Clinton administration.

In a letter last week to a number of House Democrats, Vice President Al Gore called the House legislation "essential to the protection of dolphins" in the eastern Pacific from southern California to Chile.

Gore said it would ensure that the tentative dolphin and other marine life protection agreement reached last October would be implemented as hoped. Otherwise, it likely would fall apart, he suggested.

As part of that agreement, Mexico and other nations promised to:

- Cap dolphin deaths at 5,000 per year.
— Have observers on tuna ships.
— Work to reduce the deaths of sea turtles, small fish and other species that long have been part of the tuna business.

This agreement on an international level "sets the stage for eliminating dolphin mortality altogether," Gore said.

But some vocal critics within the environmental community strongly disagree.

The widespread resumption of encircling dolphins to get to the tuna will lead to thousands of additional dolphin deaths, argues Mark Palmer of the Earth Island Institute in San Francisco.

"They say it's OK to chase dolphins, harass dolphins, injure dolphins as long as in capturing them you don't see any dolphins dead in the net and then it's dolphin safe," says Palmer. He said these tuna fishing practices lead to thousands of deaths after dolphins are released — fatalities never officially counted.

Noise

with the Airport Authority to achieve reduction of noise or noise impacts for the benefit of the surrounding community.

There have been a number of complaints voiced over the past year by residents in and near Lake Mary, including the Timacuan subdivision, over which large aircraft often fly when making a landing approach on the East/West runway, which is the longest at the airport.

City Commissioner Gary Brender has been one of the leading spokesmen in efforts to have the aircraft noise kept as low as possible. Brender is a resident of Timacuan as well as a license private pilot.

According to the SANAC proposal as presently drafted, the committee would consist of seven members with voting rights, and six additional members on an advisory capacity which would serve in a non-voting capacity.

The overall committee would consist of one citizen from Lake Mary and one from Sanford, both of which would reside in noise-impacted areas.

Additionally, there would be two citizens of Seminole County from non-noise-impacted areas, one member from the Aviation Authority staff, one who would represent airlines serving the Sanford area, and one member from the general aviation community.

Each member would be appointed for a four year term, and may be elected to succeed themselves.

In the second article of the proposed document forming the committee, the purpose is described. "...to make recommendations to the Sanford Airport Authority for establishing noise abatement procedures and for monitoring their implementation."

The matter is scheduled to be presented during reports from commissioners, scheduled at this Thursday's regular meeting of the Lake Mary City Commission. Because of a heavy agenda, the meeting, which regularly begins at 7 p.m., has been moved forward to 5:30 p.m. start.

Lake Mary City Hall is located at 100 N. Country Club Road.

Don't slight Sanford Post 53 cruises to Area championship

From Staff Reports

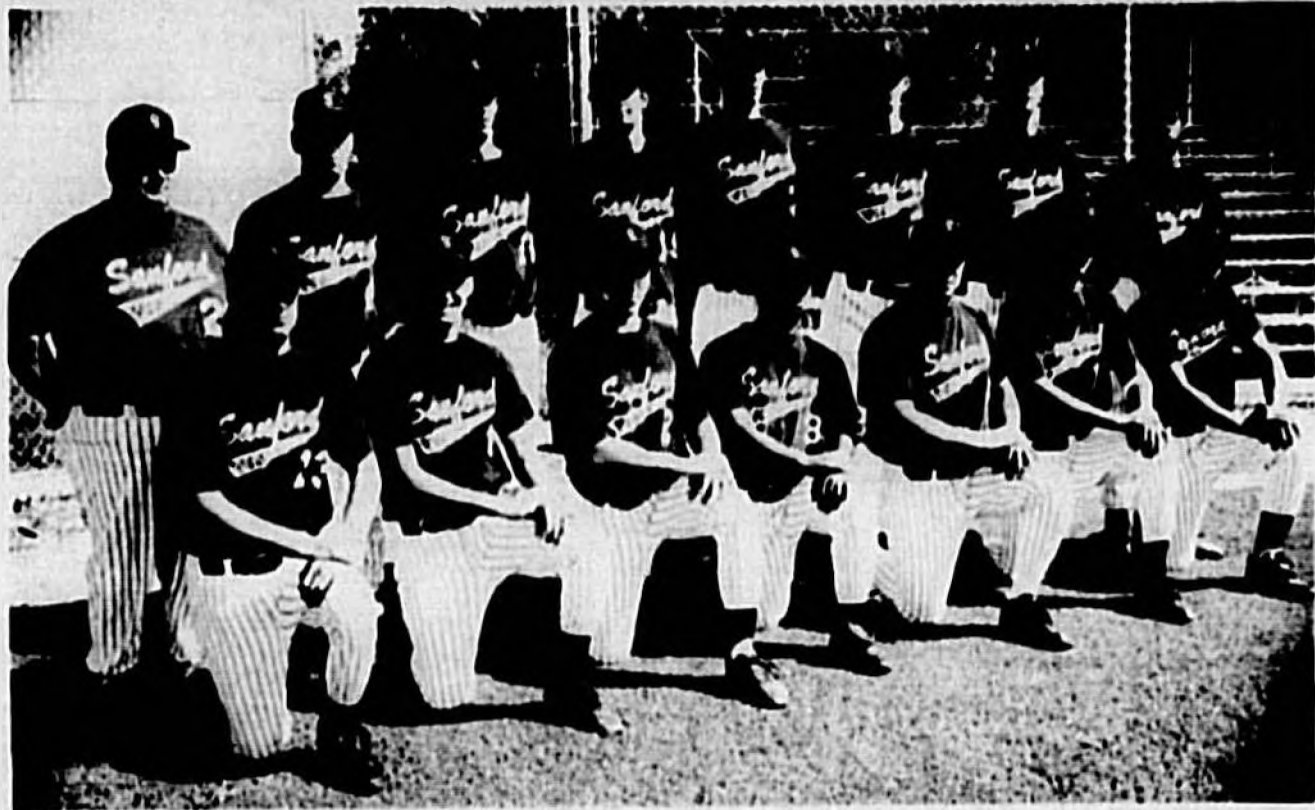

VERO BEACH — They came in to the tournament seed fourth in a four team tournament and given little chance of winning. They came back to Sanford undefeated and with the championship trophy.

Sanford Campbell-Losing Post 53 cruised to its third straight victory without a defeat Sunday to claim the championship of the American Legion Baseball A Eastern Area Tournament at Vero Beach.

The victim this time was Boca Raton Post 277, which battled back after an opening game loss to advance to the finals, but they were no match for Sanford as Post 53 got ahead early and coasted to a 10-6 triumph.

The Sanford squad will now advance to the State Tournament at Manatee Community College in Bradenton starting Thursday morning. Post 53 will take on Madeira Beach, from the St. Petersburg area, at 9 a.m. This will be the second meeting of the year for the two teams. Madeira Beach edged Sanford 4-3 in the Firecracker Tournament at DeLand. Madeira went on to claim the Firecracker championship.

Post 53 scored five runs in the top of the first inning, with a two-run home run by Mike Meadows being the big blast, and by the time the fourth inning rolled around it led 10-3.

Jim Rabun and Brad Jenkins were the beneficiaries of a 13-hit Sanford attack. Rabun went the first 5 1/2-innings to get the pitching victory, while Jenkins came on to hurl the final 3 1/2-innings for the save.

Tim Raines Jr. paced the Post 53 offense, going three-for-six, including a double, scored a run and drove in two. ## Sharks put bite on Sunniland

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — It took them four extra weeks but the Sharks don't mind today after they claimed the championship of the Sanford Recreation Department Women's Spring Slowpitch Softball League with a 9-2 playoff victory over Sunniland Corporation Tuesday night at Chase Park.

The win capped a super comeback effort by the Sharks, who opened the season by dropping its first two games and stood 2-4 after the first game on June 18. After that first game the Sharks went on a seven game winning streak that ended with the championship.

Sunniland Corporation, meanwhile, went the other direction, leading the league with a 6-2 record on July 2, but lost three of its last five games.

The Sharks finish the season with a 9-4 record, while Sunniland Corporation was 8-5. Completing the standings were the She Devils (7-5), Club Paradise (4-8) and the Blue Angels (2-10).

The awards ceremony and organizational meeting for the fall league will be held this Tuesday, June 8, at 6 p.m. at the Downtown Youth Center in Sanford City Hall. For more information call 330-5697.

Sunniland Corporation also had 12 hits, but it was never able to really mount a challenge to the Sharks as it did not score until the top of the sixth innings when it plated both runs.

Georgia takes Prep championship

By DEAN BIRTH
Herald Sports Editor

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Georgia proved it had the strongest team and Mississippi finally ran out of gas as the Babe Ruth Baseball Southeast Region 13 Year Old Prep All-Star Tournament came to a close Tuesday at Eastmonte Park.

Mississippi, from Meridian, scored nine runs in the top of the sixth inning to put away the Florida champions, Sans Souci from Jacksonville, 17-7 for its fifth straight win, after an opening game loss, to advance to the championship round opposite the undefeated North Columbus, Georgia squad.

But Mississippi, which had put up some impressive numbers getting back to the finals, had nothing left for a strong Georgia team that scored six runs in the top of the first inning and never looked back in winning the game, and the championship, 12-1, in five innings. Winning pitcher Rocky Hutchins scattered five hits, striking out four.

Georgia, which went 4-0 in the tournament, will advance to the World Series in Dickson, North Dakota looking to follow in the footsteps of the Longwood team that was the 1996 champions.

Jacksonville took a 3-1 lead in the bottom of the first on the strength of a home run by Chris Bikes and led 6-3 after three innings.

But Mississippi scored four runs in the fourth inning to take a 7-6 lead and broke a 7-7 tie by scoring a run in the fifth inning, setting the stage for the big sixth inning.

Michael Collins' grand slam was the big blow of the sixth inning.

Service Elite shines

From Staff Reports

LAKE MARY — Service Elite put together a nearly flawless performance as it maintained its two game lead in the City of Lake Mary Department of Parks and Recreation Men's Wednesday Night Spring Slowpitch Softball League with a 12-3 victory over Fitzgerald's last week at the Lake Mary Sports Complex.

Service Elite collected 21 hits in the game, but took little bites in building its lead, scoring in every inning, but never scoring more than two runs in any one inning.

And except for a lapse in the second inning, the winners' defense was also impressive, holding Fitzgerald's to only three singles. Two errors in the second inning by Service Elite led to all three of Fitzgerald's runs.

In the other scheduled game, Beer:30 took over second place with a 7-0 forfeit victory over Home Depot.

Tonight, Home Depot (1-6) challenges Service Elite (6-1) at 7 p.m. and Beer:30 (4-3) takes on Fitzgerald's (3-4) at 8:15 p.m.

Contributing for Service Elite were Frank Lubinaskas (three singles, run), Brett Moran (triple, single, run, two RBI), Mel Goings (double, single, two runs, RBI), Raphael Raphael (double, single, run, RBI), Mike Smith (double, single, run) and Paul Motkowski (double, single).

Also contributing were Mike Fratrik (two singles, run, two RBI), Ben Fratrik (two singles, run, RBI), Bob Palagano (two singles, two runs), Chuck Sudak (double, run, RBI) and Russ Sudak (single, run, RBI).

Providing the offense for Fitzgerald's were Jason Musik (two singles, run), Casey Lynch (single), Curtis Spangler (run, RBI) and Jeff Blair (run).

Summer freezes feel just fine

By MARNALISA GALYA
NEA Food Writer

Among the ways that one can choose to divide up the world, there's this: people who live for dessert and those who don't. Personally, I'm not a huge dessert eater. At a restaurant, I'm far more likely to order a second appetizer while my companions are oohing and aahing over their triple mousse torte. When cooking for friends, dessert for me is an afterthought, not the purpose of having guests.

I claim no virtue here. The truth is that I'll always pick the potato chips over the doughnuts; salty, savory - yes, even greasy - foods appeal to me more than sweet, buttery ones. Also, I lack the patience for elaborate baking projects, and the artistic talents that go into making most baked goods look beautiful. But I am also too proud to just go out and BUY dessert.

The simplest solution to my problem, I've found, is homemade ice cream or ice. Ice cream and ices are simple to prepare; almost everyone loves them, and the homemade variety taste so much better than anything you can buy at a store. They go down easily after a big meal, and can be accompanied, if you MUST have something decadent, by chocolate truffles or fancy cookies.

The good news is, you don't need an ice-cream maker to make ice cream. The late Richard Sax, whose book "Classic Home Desserts" is beloved by even a nondessert-maker like me, details the "still-freezing method" as follows:

Place the prepared ice cream or frozen-dessert mixture in 1 or 2 shallow metal pans, such as cake pans or ice-cube trays without dividers. Place in the freezer and freeze until firm around the edges, but still slushy in the middle, usually 30 to 45 minutes. (My freezer may be weird, but it always takes longer.) Remove the pans from the freezer and stir the firm and liquid portions of the mixture together with a wooden spoon. Return to the freezer until the mixture is again firm around the edges. Repeat 1 or 2 more times, freezing the mixture until it is uniformly frozen the last time.

Sax notes that ice creams and sorbets made this way won't be quite as smooth as those made with an ice-cream maker, but you will have spared yourself some expense and still be able to enjoy home made frozen desserts.

Ann-Hodgman, the author of the wonderful "Beat This!" and "Beat That!" cookbooks, details yet another method in her recipe for watermelon ice (below). I've used this method with great success in making ices, but it probably wouldn't do for ice cream.

WATERMELON ICE

3/4 cup sugar
1/2 cup water
Zest of one lemon, finely chopped (optional)
4 cups chopped, seeded watermelon pulp
1/3 cup freshly squeezed lemon juice
2 tablespoons creme de cassis liqueur
Watermelon seeds (a few for decoration)

Over high heat, combine the sugar, water and lemon zest in a small saucepan. Stir constantly until the syrup boils, then lower the heat, cover the pan and boil the syrup gently for 4 minutes. Allow to cool.

Puree the watermelon in batches in a food processor or blender. You need 2-1/2 cups of pureed melon.

Combine the puree with the thoroughly chilled sugar syrup, the lemon juice and the creme de cassis. Puree into your ice-cream maker and freeze according to the manufacturer's directions. Alternately, pour into a shallow pan and freeze overnight. The next day, put the ice through a food processor and puree to remove large crystals. Pack into a plastic container and refreeze.

When you serve the sorbet, sprinkle with a few watermelon seeds for cuteness.

Yield: 1 quart
-- Recipe adapted from "Beat This!" by Ann Hodgman (Chapters Publishing, 1984).

ESPRESSO CINNAMON ICE CREAM

3/4 cup espresso coffee beans
2-1/4 cups milk
1 cup heavy cream
2 cinnamon sticks
1 vanilla bean, split lengthwise, or 1-1/2 teaspoons pure vanilla extract
4 large egg yolks
2/3 cup sugar

Scatter the coffee beans in a dry skillet and set over medium heat. Roast, stirring constantly, until the beans begin to release their oils, about 10 minutes (do not let beans darken). Cool beans briefly. Grind them coarsely in a coffee grinder or electric spice mill.

In a heavy saucepan, combine the ground coffee beans, milk, cream, cinnamon sticks, and vanilla bean (if using vanilla extract, do not add it now). Bring to a simmer, turn off the heat. Cover and let the mixture steep for at least 30 minutes.

Strain the mixture through a fine sieve into the rinsed-out saucepan. Reserve the vanilla bean. Bring the liquid nearly to a boil over medium heat.

Meanwhile, in a bowl, whisk together the egg yolks and sugar until blended. Very gradually whisk the hot milk mixture into the egg yolks. Return the mixture to the saucepan and cook the custard over medium-low heat, stirring almost constantly, until it thickens lightly and coats the back of a spoon, about 8 minutes. Do not boil. Strain the custard into a clean bowl. Scrape the seeds out of the vanilla bean into the custard or stir in the vanilla extract. Lay a sheet of waxed paper or plastic wrap directly on the surface to prevent a skin from forming and refrigerate until well chilled.

Four into an ice-cream maker and freeze according to manufacturer's directions, or use the "still-freezing method" detailed above. Pack into a plastic container and freeze at least 1 hour before serving. If necessary, let ice cream soften slightly in refrigerator before serving.

Yield: 1-1/3 quarts.

-- Recipe from "Classic Home Desserts," by Richard Sax (Chapters Publishing, 1984).

ICE CREAM SOCIAL PEACH ICE CREAM

3 medium-sized fully ripened peaches, peeled, stoned and chopped (about 1-1/2 cups)
1/4 cup plus 2 tablespoons sugar

1-1/2 teaspoons pure vanilla extract
2 cups half-and-half, or 1-1/2 cups whole milk plus 1/2 cup heavy cream

In a bowl, using a potato masher or a wooden spoon, break up the peaches with the sugar and vanilla until coarsely mashed. Stir in the half-and-half or milk and cream. Taste and add more sugar if needed.

Pour the mixture into an ice-cream maker and freeze according to the manufacturer's directions. (You can also use the "still-freezing method," detailed above.)

When the ice cream is thickened and frozen, scrape it into a plastic container, cover and freeze for at least 1 hour. Let the ice cream soften slightly in the refrigerator before serving.

Yield: 1 quart

Parents long on regret for aiding son short on cash

DEAR ABBY: Thirty years ago, when my husband and I were married, our parents helped us out financially, for which we were grateful. Of course we paid them back as we promised to - so much each month.
Our children are now grown and have children of their own. Last September our son asked us to co-sign a loan so he could purchase a $3,400 computer system for his wife and children. He promised to pay it back in six months. He also asked to borrow our credit card to pick up some toys he had on layaway for our grandchildren last Christmas. He promised to pay it back in January this year. We also co-signed a three-year lease/purchase contract on a house.

Nine months later, we received a notice from the bank that there had been no payment in two months. Our son explained that he was short of cash and couldn't make the payments, so we found ourselves stuck with them. He now says he doesn't know when he can pay us back. We have also discovered that they are consistently late with the lease payments for their home.

Abby, we never thought this would happen to us - especially when our children grow up? And what happened to "Honor thy father and the mother?"
TOO TRUSTING IN DELAWARE

ADVICE
ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR TOO TRUSTING: Sharing your disappointing experience in an effort to warn other overly generous parents is noble and appreciated, but please don't tar all adult children with the same brush.
Most parents who help their married children as you did are repaid (as promised) by responsible children who honor their commitments.
I will repeat what I've said in the past: Before you lend money to a family member, make sure the terms of repayment are set in writing, with an agreed-upon consequence for nonpayment. It should be signed by both parties and notarized.

DEAR READERS: "When a man says, 'I lie,' does he lie, or does he speak the truth?" "If he lies, he speaks the truth. If he speaks the truth, he lies." - Mark Twain (1835-1910)

Is melatonin a sleep inducer?

DEAR DR. GOTT: Can you please tell me if melatonin is helpful as a sleep inducer, or does it have harmful effects?

DEAR READER: Melatonin is a natural chemical, secreted by the brain, that aids sleep. Recently, synthetic melatonin has been marketed as a pill without prescription in health-food stores.

Unfortunately, the product does not come under the jurisdiction of the Food and Drug Administration. Consequently, there is no government-regulated quality control in its manufacture: You may be getting more (or less) than indicated on the label, or the pills may contain adulterants. Moreover, there have been no studies concerning the safety of long-term use of the chemical.

As far as I know, it is harmless—and, in some people, effective. However, I hesitate recommending it for the reasons I mentioned.

To give you more information on sleep disorders, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Sleep/Wake Disorders." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10158. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My son was recently diagnosed with Bell's palsy. He has no insurance, and his doctor indicated the test would only be for diagnostic purposes, that there is no effective treatment. My son leads an unhealthy lifestyle, smoking and drinking too much. Could this have led to the palsy, and is his doctor correct that we should wait it out?

DEAR READER: The cause of most cases of Bell's palsy (weakness on one side of the face) is unknown. However, herpes virus infection can cause it; so can Lyme disease.

Therefore, at the least, your son should have a blood test for Lyme disease and, if that's negative, he should consider seeing a doctor for a possible prescription for an anti-viral drug (Famvir and others). If the Lyme test is positive, extended antibiotic therapy is mandatory.

Regardless of cause, many patients with Bell's palsy can be helped by using prednisone (corticosteroid) pills for a few days.

I don't agree with your son's doctor. Complete recovery is, indeed, the rule with partial nerve paralysis. However, total paralysis (both upper and lower face) may be permanent, without treatment.

Your son may have to take some responsibility for his affliction. Hard living, drinking and smoking could have compromised his immunity, so that he was more prone to Bell's palsy. Also, if he passed out in an alcoholic haze and lay with his cheek on a hard surface for hours, the nerve could have been injured by compression.

MEDICINE

PETER GOTT, M.D.

Thus, his palsy may well constitute a "wake-up call": This is probably a good time to change his life around before he suffers really disastrous consequences from his unhealthy habits.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have high blood pressure. My doctor gave me a half Tenormin a day. He retired and his replacement wants me to take two pills a day. I'm afraid of what the increased dosage might do to me. Is this safe?

DEAR READER: Tenormin (atenolol) is a beta-blocker used to treat heart disease and hypertension. Ordinarily, the dose of the drug is adjusted depending on how the patient responds; that is, increasing amounts are prescribed until the blood pressure is controlled.

Evidently, your blood pressure has risen to an unacceptably high level, and your new physician has suggested that you take two pills a day instead of a half.

This is acceptable medical procedure. You will not be receiving too much—unless your blood pressure drops too low (in the range of 120/60 or lower). Follow the doctor's directions and continue to monitor your blood pressure, either at home or in his office.

WIN AT BRIDGE

Pedal to success

By Phillip Alder

An easy question to start: Which country is the largest bicycle manufacturer in the world?

Defending at the bridge table is like riding a tandem. Both defenders must work together to achieve the best result possible.

This deal occurred during the semi-final match between Canada and Sweden in last year's Bermuda Bowl.

In the other room, Canada had been doubled in two spades and lost 500 points when West invidiously led the spade nine. Now the defenders collected only two trump tricks to go with two hearts, two diamonds and one club.

At this table, the Swedish pair seems to have had a misunderstanding over North's double. North was clearly chasing a juicy penalty, but South appears to have thought it was for takeout. Against four spades doubled, West, Mark Molson, did well in leading the diamond king. He continued with the diamond jack. After winning with the ace, East, Boris Baran, timed the defense perfectly by switching to the heart 10: jack, queen. West cashed the heart ace and club ace before returning another heart to South's king.

Declarer tried the spade jack, but East won with the ace and played a diamond. West overruffing South with his spade nine, South ruffed Molson's heart exit, but Baran still had to score the spade 10. That was five down for a successful 1600-point penalty and 14 international matchpoints to Canada.

The 1995 world bridge championships were held in China, home of the largest bicycle manufacturer on the planet. Last year, 40.45 million bikes were made there.

If you have been hoping to receive recognition, either socially or in regard to your career, it will happen in the year ahead, but not in the way you anticipated.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you get involved in a difficult endeavor today, use all of your skills, especially your memory, your instincts and your logic. Know where to look for romance and you will find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2.75 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1758, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10158. VRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Important assignments can be concluded to your satisfaction today, provided you have the will and the desire to follow through with your promises. LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) If you think that a current project is being mishandled, don't complain on the sidelines. You must step in and take action.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If you've accumulated a surplus this week, spend it on loved ones today. It will be more heartwarming than wasting your money on a novelty item.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Associates might not be as perceptive as you are today. If you think you can improve on their ideas, present your game plan. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You should be grateful for any benefits or perks that will come your way through others today. Instead of expecting more, think of a way to repay those people.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) You might not understand every aspect of a current endeavor. Instead of pretending you do, ask questions in order to get the informa-

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Constructive developments will be possible today as long as you perform in accordance with your highest ideals and standards. TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You can achieve your basic objectives today, if you do not get involved with individuals who are unable to contribute their ideas.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Today, honor previous agreements, even though after contemplating the matter you might see how you could have done better if you had bargained more boldly. CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your feeling of self-worth and your self-esteem will be enhanced today if you put forth your best effort.
