Barbara Hughes-Gregg, Seminole County extension director, coordinated the Great Seminole County Waterway Cleanup this past weekend. Among the items the cleanup crews from the Orlando Airboat Association found in Lake Jesup were some tires, a barricado, a guard rail, some tarps and the burned remains of a boat hull. The items were hauled to Cameron-Whight Park. All of the items are being catalogued for Environmental Protection Agency studies. The final statistics are not in, but the boat has been declared the largest item retrieved during the cleanup.

Longwood eyes 12 acres for recreation

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — The late afternoon sun heated the cavernous rooms to a slow simmer but some Longwood officials had visions of basketball courts, indoor soccer venues and shuffleboard games.

Four city commissioners, the city clerk and Longwood Parks and Recreation director Sondra Lomax toured the 12-acre site at 881 Warren Avenue owned by Sprint/United of Florida Monday afternoon.

Included on the site is a 45,000 square foot light industrial, metal building, filled with the cast-off trappings of a "right-sized" corporation. Office chairs of nearly every hue in the rainbow, desks, shelves, cabinets and partitions filled nearly every area. The points of origin for the nearly new looking furniture read like a state map, from Leesburg to Ocala. Impressionist prints and modern art work which probably graced the walls of executives' offices are propped against the wall of a small office.

The property is being offered for sale for between $1.195 and $1.245 million depending upon the closing date.

Mayor Bill Winston, deputy mayor

Jim Carrico and commissioners Iris Benson and Ron Sargent conducted a special meeting at the site before their regular meeting. The commissioners agreed to have an inspector look at the facility to report on the condition of the structure including the insulation, air conditioning, septic system and plumbing.

The building, which was built in the late 1960s or early 1970s was used at one time by the National Guard. A portion of the building is air conditioned while the high 10,000 square foot, bay-type areas are not.

The commission is investigating the feasibility of consolidating city services in a central location as well as acquiring recreational lands for park use. The property contains a small pond.

City offices are housed in three buildings in the historic district with separate public works office, police and fire departments. Recently, Lomax's office was moved out of city hall to an office constructed at a city park and the vacated City Hall space earmarked for records required to be kept by law.

Commissioners are examining the possibility of using money from the sale of the Longwood Healthcare

State pays $7.75 million for land near mall

Staff and Wire Report

SANFORD — The state said the land was worth $4 million. Developers wanted $12 million. So the state compromised and is paying $7.75 million for eight acres to be used for a toll road.

The amount, thought to be a record for Central Florida, was for a strip of land near the new mall for an interchange that will tie Interstate 4 and the Central Florida GreeneWay.

"It sounds like a lot, but it could have cost a heck of a lot more," said Larry Gendzier, an attorney for the state.

More than half of the price to be paid by the Florida Department of Transportation is to offset costs to the developer for losing 7.97 acres from the 131-acre Seminole Towne Center mall.

The mall is under construction and was redesigned. It is scheduled to be completed and opened by mid-September. The state saved

Students won't pig out at lunch

By VICKI DESORMIER
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — Students in Seminole County need not worry about having to pig out when they eat their lunch at school this year.

While students elsewhere can expect more ham and ground pork at the school cafeteria this fall because a hog surplus is helping write the menu, Dan Andrews, director of the school district's food service department, says that probably won't happen here.

"I haven't heard anything about this," he said, "but I certainly don't expect to be using a lot more pork this year."

Following pleas to Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman from hog-state lawmakers, the department said June 21 it would buy $30 million worth of pork for the National School Lunch Program and other feeding efforts.

"But when you break that down, it comes to maybe...maybe...2,000 pounds of pork for this county," Andrews said. "That's one meal."

Pork, with its tubby reputation the industry is paying millions of dollars to try to change, hardly seems the commodity of choice for a department that also wants to cut the fat in school meals.

"We handle pork the same way we handle beef," Andrews said. "We get the leanest meat we can possibly get, usually 80-20 (80 percent lean and 20 percent fat)."

The 20 percent of fat is the lowest amount available from government sources, Andrews said. The county also has the choice of 30 percent fat, but in their ever-expanding effort to make school lunches leaner, they never choose that option, he said.

He noted, also, that the county usually received its pork allotment in the form of ground meat. There is not much one can do with ground pork, he noted, so most often it is sent to a processor

Man struck by lightning

MIAMI — A man was in serious condition today after being struck by a lightning bolt that left a four-inch hole burned in his baseball cap.
 Alex Rodriguez, a 29-year-old dental technician, was piloting his 13-foot boat Sunday in waters off southern Dade County when he was knocked unconscious by the bolt. His boat then struck a jetty.
 Fisherman Troy Stevens and his family were heading for shelter from the same thunderstorm when they came across Rodriguez's boat. Rodriguez's head and hands were burned and he was about to fall into the water.

Radar loss puzzles officials

MIAMI — Aviation officials, unable to determine why airplane radar systems have failed at Miami and Fort Lauderdale airports, now have a new mystery: unexplained outage of a weather radar system.
 The weather radar failed at 12:55 p.m. Sunday for 24 seconds at the Fort Lauderdale-Hollywood International Airport, Kathleen Bergen, a spokeswoman with the Federal Aviation Administration in Atlanta, said Monday.
 "One Delta flight encountered some turbulence, but I don't know if that is a result of the radar failure or not," Bergen said.
 No one was injured on Delta flight 1982, from Miami to Atlanta, that took off minutes before the weather system failed, Bergen said.

Abbell asks judge to retain lawyer

MIAMI — Michael Abbell, the former Justice Department extradition expert charged with aiding the Cali cocaine cartel, asked a federal judge not to disqualify his lawyer.
 "I feel very strongly that in matters of this importance — my life and my career — I need the best lawyer I can possibly get," Abbell said Monday in his plea to keep prominent Miami attorney Roy Black. "I believe Mr. Black is that lawyer."
 The red-haired, spectacled Abbell, who faces a possible life term if convicted of racketeering and conspiracy, has had little to say since he was charged in a sweeping indictment of the Cali cartel last month.
 He appeared in court Monday to respond to District Judge William Hoeveler's question whether he felt Black could fairly represent him. Hoeveler said he would rule later on whether to disqualify Black.

New glaucoma drug discovered

GAINESVILLE — A new form of eye drops researched by University of Florida scientists is now available for improved control of glaucoma.
 The drug, now being marketed under the name Trusopt, is hailed as a significant discovery because it has very few side effects in contrast to other glaucoma medicines.
 Approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, the drug is being marketed by Merck and Co. Inc., under an exclusive licensing agreement with the University of Florida. UF holds a patent on the concepts underlying the development of Trusopt, also known generically as dorzolamide.
 Ophthalmologists nationwide are now obtaining the eye drops, which are designed to act specifically within the eye to reduce fluid formation and restore normal inner-eye pressure. Patients with glaucoma lose their sight through a gradual build-up of inner-eye pressure due to poor drainage of eye fluid.
 More than 2 million Americans are visually impaired and more than 60,000 are blind because of the disorder.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Welfare experiment Reform project to expand 6 more counties

By ADAM YBOMANS
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Florida's unique effort to move welfare mothers off the public dole by providing job training, day care and other assistance will expand to six more counties this year.
 The state will spend $19.6 million to expand pilot projects that began 1 1/2 years ago in Escambia and Alachua counties. Added are Duval, Lee, Orange, Pinellas, St. Lucie and Volusia counties.
 "These sites were selected because they have in place right now what it takes to succeed," Gov. Lawton Chiles said Monday at a news conference to announce the new sites.
 He said he hoped to convince a wary Legislature next year to expand the welfare reform statewide. The governor had requested $28 million this year for the expansion.

The six-county expansion is based on the Escambia program, where a certain number of welfare recipients are required to participate. In Alachua, the program is voluntary.
 The Family Transition Program limits benefits to two years for most participants and three years for those with special circumstances. Recipients receive job training, education and day care and health-care benefits. They also get money for transportation.

"We know that these are the essential things that you have to have if you're really going to try to get people off of welfare," Chiles said.

Some restrictions on welfare recipients also are eased, such as federal rules saying benefits are available only to those who have less than $1,000 in savings or financial assets, and who own a car worth less than $1,500.

The program encourages savings and allows recipients to drive cars worth up to $8,150.

It costs the state more initially to provide the job training and benefits to welfare mothers. But Chiles said taxpayers will save money in the long run — about three years — as more recipients find jobs.

Denise Robinson, a 27-year-old mother of two, said she had been on and off welfare since 1992 when she was required to participate in the Escambia program last October. At first, she said, she resisted being told she had to partake.

At Monday's news conference, she thanked Chiles for helping her afford the education and job training needed to land a fulltime job that pays enough to keep her off welfare.

"I'm glad I was picked because it's just been wonderful to me," she said.

 Robinson, of Pensacola, now earns $16,500 a year working with emotionally disturbed children as a coordinator with the Lutheran Ministries of Florida. She said the state's program helps pay for gas for her car, day care and books and tuition she needs to complete her college education.

State officials hope the program's expansion into six more counties should move about 17,000 people off welfare into full or part-time jobs.

The counties were selected from 14 that applied based on their job market, transportation system, child care and health-care facilities, training programs and business-community support, said Ed Feaver, acting secretary of the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services.

The pilot projects will begin operating by January and, like Escambia and Alachua, apply only to recipients of Aid to Families with Dependent Children. The state-federal program provides cash to poor single-parent families.

In the expansion counties, the experiment will be countywide in Lee, St. Lucie and Volusia. In Duval, Orange and Pinellas, certain zip codes will be earmarked as the pilot sites.

Teen-age son charged in killing mother, hiding body

By BRENT KALLESTAD
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Kathryn Moore had high hopes for her son. She worked as a housekeeper, on her hands and knees, to provide for Aaron, her only child.

But she expected the 17-year-old to observe her curfew requirements and warned him to be careful about his friends, especially 22-year-old David Balty.

She couldn't have imagined what surprise her son had in mind for her when she came home from work June 29.

Aaron Moore covered his mother's eyes with his hands and led her into his bedroom. That's where police say he and Balty choked and bludgeoned the 41-year-old woman to death.

Moore and Balty were charged with first-degree murder Monday and were being held without bond in the Leon County Jail. Undersheriff Larry Campbell said additional charges could be filed pending autopsy results.

Campbell said the case was particularly disheartening because the mother worked so hard to keep her son out of trouble.

"That's the sad part," he said. "In our society today, we see where the parents aren't taking responsibility and ... [are] letting the kids run wild."

"This was a single mother who was working hard and trying to make her child do right."

Moore initially told investigators he had last seen his mother June 30 when he dropped her off at the Tallahassee airport for a flight to Chicago. But relatives in Chicago said they had not seen nor heard from her.

A neighbor or friend, suspicious of Mrs. Moore's disappearance, called police.

On Sunday, the sheriff's department took Moore into custody. After several hours of questioning, the youth directed authorities to the site where his mother's body was dumped 11 days earlier into an abandoned 30-foot-deep well.

The teen-ager showed no emotion, Campbell said.

"He was just kind of matter-of-fact," said Campbell. "He was just sitting there in the car."

Investigators were able to piece together details of the June 29 attack based on confessions from the two suspects.

After choking the woman and beating her with a blunt object, police said, they bound and gagged Mrs. Moore and put her in a closet because they weren't certain she was dead.

Then they cooked pizza, Campbell said. After their snack, the two hauled the woman's body out of the home and Balty took it to an abandoned well about 10 miles northeast of Tallahassee.

To cover up the death, Moore told neighbors puzzled about his mother's absence that she'd gone to Chicago to visit relatives.

But their suspicions persisted because "nobody had seen her and he (the son) was driving her vehicle," said Debra Grey, referring to Mrs. Moore's white sports utility vehicle. "I used to see her over on her back porch from my back porch reading."

Ma. Grey did not know Mrs. Moore, but she has taken custody of the dead woman's cat, now named Kitty, which had been a stray since the murder.

Moore had attended Lincoln High School in Tallahassee for three years and would have been a senior in the fall. He had not been in any trouble at school.

"There was really nothing that would place him in any category other than just a regular student," said principal Bill Montford. "An average kid."

Investigators continued searching Monday for evidence at the Moores' duplex in a subdivision recognized several years ago as one of Tallahassee's top neighborhoods.

"You could tell from the inside she had been trying to keep a good place," Campbell said. "Obviously the woman was trying."

POLICE BRIEFS

Drug possession arrest

Adam Carl Rogoskey, 19, 725 Creekwater Terr., Apt. 207, was charged with possession of a controlled substance by Seminole County sheriff's deputies on Saturday.

Deputies said Rogoskey was being arrested on a warrant charge (possession of marijuana) when they advised him that bringing drugs into a corrections facility is a felony.

Deputies said he told them he had some marijuana in his shoe. They found it and he was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility.

He was held there in lieu of $500 bond.

Burglary charged

Rachelle Louise Hoffman, 36, 309 McClintock St., Longwood, was charged with burglary by Seminole County sheriff's deputies on Sunday.

Deputies said Hoffman arrived at her ex-husband's home to pick up their son when a fight broke out between Hoffman and the father's present wife.

Though there are conflicting reports from the two women about what occurred, deputies believed that Rachelle Hoffman was the one who initiated the fight and that she had entered her ex-husband's home without permission.

She was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where she was held without bond.

Traffic stop leads to arrest

Jerardo Rodriguez, 20, of Orlando was arrested in Heathrow Saturday for having an altered tag on his vehicle and for possession of a controlled substance by Seminole County sheriff's deputies.

Deputies said they conducted a traffic stop and smelled marijuana in the car.

A search of the vehicle revealed a marijuana cigarette on the floor behind the driver seat.

The temporary tag was found to be altered as well.

Retail theft

Oscar Lumumba Duncan, 19, 2005 Osceola Rd., Geneva, was charged with retail theft by Seminole County sheriff's deputies.

The deputy's report stated he had attempted to leave the Target store in Oviedo without paying for several pairs of underwear that he had tried to conceal in his pants.

He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $115 bond.

Marijuana arrest

Toby Jay Winkler, 22, 236 Colony Dr., Casselberry, was charged with possession of less than 20 grams of marijuana and with possession of drug paraphernalia by Seminole County sheriff's deputies on Saturday.

Deputies said they executed a search warrant at his residence.

They found some marijuana in his bedroom and some smoking pipes and bongs.

He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $500 bond.

The working poor

Study says low-wage workers worse off today than in 1970s

By JENNIFER DIXON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Low-wage workers with children are more likely to be poor today than in the 1970s, and a study predicts they will be worse off if Congress passes spending on tax relief, Medicaid, food stamps and child care subsidies.

The Republican-majority Congress is considering cuts in programs that aid the working poor as part of efforts to overhaul welfare, balance the budget, rein in Medicaid costs and curb fraud in the Earned Income Tax Credit for low-wage workers.

The proposals signal an unraveling of political support for workers at the bottom rung of the economic ladder, after years of congressional efforts to improve their fortunes, according to a report Monday by the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, a liberal advocacy group.

The research group said the turnaround comes at a time when the share of working families with children who are in poverty has risen by nearly half since 1977.

At that time, 7.7 percent of families with children in which the head of the household worked were poor. By 1993, the poverty rate among these families had risen to 11.4 percent, the center said.

According to the group's analysis, just over half of all poor Americans, about 22 million people, live in households in which someone works full or part time.

The erosion in the value of the minimum wage is to blame for some of the decline in the fortunes of these workers, the center said, but other factors include a rising proportion of working poor families that are headed by a single mother.

The lack of education and skills also contributes to the problems of poor workers: one-third of the adults have not graduated from high school. In addition, physical or mental disabilities affect about one in nine poor workers, the researchers said.

Legislation to overhaul welfare and balance the budget could undercut the working poor even more, they suggested.

Isabel Sawhill, a senior fellow at the Urban Institute think tank and formerly with the Clinton White House's Office of Management and Budget, said it is "wrongheaded" to reduce support for the working poor at a time when the economy is already unfavorable to them.

The cumulative effect of the congressional proposals, she said, is to make work "a very unattractive proposition for those without much in the way of skills and education."

Congress is considering proposals to trim expected spending on Medicaid — the health insurance program for the poor and elderly — by $182 billion and to pare the Earned Income Tax Credit by as much as $21 billion, both over the next seven years.

Welfare legislation would also curb spending on food stamps, child care for the poor and child nutrition programs.

Judge finds Susan Smith competent to stand trial

By JESSE J. MOLLAND
Associated Press Writer

UNION, S.C. — Susan Smith is competent to stand trial in the drownings of her two young sons, the judge in her murder case ruled today.

Circuit Judge William Howard agreed with the state's chief psychiatrist, who said Ms. Smith was sane and competent to stand trial. However, Dr. Donald Morgan had warned that Ms. Smith was suicidal and might seek to sabotage her defense.

Ms. Smith, 23, could get the death penalty if convicted of the two murder charges.

She was questioned by Howard today about whether she understood the state was seeking two death-penalty murder charges against her.

"Yes, sir," she answered as she stood in front of him.

The judge also questioned her lawyers about whether Ms. Smith had cooperated with them. Lawyers David Bruck and Judy Clarke said she had, but they were afraid she would sabotage her defense if called to testify by asking jurors to sentence her to death.

The anti-depressant medication Ms. Smith has been taking seems to help her understand the court proceedings, the judge said.

"In that sense, Ms. Smith is rendered more rational and better able to understand these proceedings. I find that Ms. Smith is competent to stand trial and can proceed with this matter," Howard said.

Prosecutor Tommy Pope then asked Howard to order Ms. Smith to enter a plea, but her lawyers waived formal arraignment and no plea was entered. On Jan. 16 a judge entered an innocent plea for her after Ms. Smith's lawyers said she was not ready to enter a plea.

The actions cleared the way for jury selection to resume.

During a hearing Monday, Morgan said that if Ms. Smith takes the stand in her own defense, her growing suicidal tendencies may take over.

"She feels she deserves punishment and her desire would be not to continue living in prison," Morgan said. "If she got out of prison, she said she would take her life as rapidly as possible."

She also has crying spells and nausea and takes the anti-depressants to combat intense feelings of hopelessness, sleepless and worthlessness, he said.

Bruck has said his defense will be based on her mental state.

If she is found guilty but mentally ill, she could be sentenced to death. A verdict of innocent by reason of insanity, which means she didn't understand that what she was doing was wrong, would send her to a mental hospital. If she were later declared sane, she could be released.

Ms. Smith showed no emotion during Morgan's hour of testimony. He was the prosecution's sole witness, and Ms. Smith's lawyers did not put on any experts of their own.

Asked at an impromptu news conference if a person is competent to stand trial while incompetent to address the jury and testify, Bruck said simply, "No."

The longtime death penalty opponent said trying to save the life of a client who wanted to die did not trouble him. "When you see someone on the edge of a building, you don't let them jump," Bruck said.

Prosecutor Tommy Pope acknowledged the trial would be delayed if Ms. Smith is found incompetent, but insisted that Morgan's testimony supported a key state claim. "She was mentally responsible that night," Pope said.

Morgan's report, which said Ms. Smith was sane the night of her sons' death, also showed that doctors wanted to send her to a psychiatric hospital for treatment of depression and other problems when she was just 13 years old, but her family refused to cooperate.

If she had gotten help earlier, Ms. Smith, now 23, might not have drowned 3-year-old Michael and 14-month-old Alex last fall, Morgan said. "It would have made a difference," he said.

David Smith, Ms. Smith's ex-husband and the father of Michael and Alex, walked into court on the first day of jury selection wearing a photograph of his sons on his shirt pocket. He sat two rows back from his former wife. At times he stared toward her, at other times at the floor.

He and Ms. Smith's mother, Linda Russell, who also watched the proceedings, declined to speak with reporters as they left court.

For nine days after she drowned her sons last Oct. 25, Ms. Smith stuck by her claim that a black carjacker took them.

Who's minding the store?

It was saddening to hear that Florida Governor Lawton Chiles has been ill. Frightening to hear that his problems place him in a high risk category for a stroke. And happy to hear this time, no damage was done, and he's home again.

We believe it shows one point that every citizen must consider at election time. Not only should voters be concerned about the capabilities and health of a person seeking the top state job, but those of the person running on the same ballot, seeking the lieutenant governor's position.

The same holds true for vice president of the United States. Candidates run for election together. A vote for one naturally will bring about approval of the other.

Even though voters may prefer one particular candidate, they must ask themselves if the running-mate is also acceptable. If something happens to the top man (or woman), would we feel confident in having our state or nation managed by the running-mate?

Take a brief pause in your reading. Ask someone nearby to name Florida's lieutenant governor. While he has indeed played a prominent part in the state government, it is surprising how few remember his name is Buddy MackKay.

The lieutenant governor is often ignored. The 1994-95 and 95/96 local phone books (page 28) identify the governor, U.S. Senate and House of Representatives, and State Senate and House representatives serving the Sanford and Seminole County area. It does not, however, name the lieutenant governor.

Time in office most often comes and goes without any need to replace the top seat. This may be the case with Gov. Chiles. It should give us reason to give this matter some consideration however.

We have no objections against MackKay. He may be able to handle the office quite well. But when election time rolls along, who will be the running mates? Will they be persons who can truly handle the job if it becomes necessary? Or are they, perhaps, people selected by a particular gubernatorial candidate because of the person's home town area which often brings about an increase in votes at the polls in November.

We wish Governor Chiles a speedy recovery with no complications.

But when the candidates begin their tour to seek votes, we urge everyone to not only select the person they believe is best for the position, but the lieutenant governor and vice president candidates as well. Give them both equal considerations, because they may both end up running the government.

Thanks for fireworks

It was wonderful having the fireworks back over Lake Monroe on Sunday evening. Congratulations and many thanks to the efforts of several individuals and civic groups that enabled Sanford's fireworks display to return with such a "bang."

The spectacular show started on time, was the perfect length, and drew large crowds. It was so nice to once again enjoy our beautiful lakefront while celebrating the Fourth of July. I certainly hope that the same organization or individuals take on this project for next year, and that they get a head start by planning early so that we will have as good a display as this year's. They did so well with just a few short weeks, just think what they will be able to do with a whole year's worth of planning.

It is so important for a town with a rich history such as Sanford to celebrate our nation's heritage on the Fourth in such a manner. I'm sure many fellow citizens and visitors would join me in thanking all those responsible for bringing the celebration back home to Sanford.

What constitutes sexual harassment?

In various workplaces — including newspaper offices and law firms — an increasing number of male employees have become quite careful in how they speak to their female colleagues.

This caution is reinforced in some places by training sessions that further sensitize men to the dangers — to themselves and their employers — if they create a "hostile work environment" for women. The offender can be fired, and the employer can be sued.

A recent decision by the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals, however, defines verbal sexual harassment at work more precisely than has often been the case.

In 1987, Sylvia DeAngelis became the first female sergeant in the El Paso Police Department after six years as a patrol officer and detective. The promotion was not a cause of celebration for R.U. Withmi, an anonymous columnist for The Silver Badge, the newsletter of the El Paso Municipal Police Officers Association. It reaches some 700 policemen and policewomen.

The columnist identifies himself only as a patrolman who has been on the force for nearly 20 years "combatin' crime." He has made it clear that he would prefer that the force be entirely male. In one of his sardonic laments, he wrote: "Do you remember when there were no (police) women working the streets? (Ah, yes, those were the good old days! Sorry, gals, truth hurts!)"

At least 24 women officers complained about R.U. Withmi, but the police chief said he had no authority over the rank-and-file association that published the newsletter. The editor of The Silver Badge invited them to send letters responding to the offensive columnist. None did.

Sgt. DeAngelis did act. She filed suit against the El Paso Municipal Police Officers Association on the ground that R.U. Withmi's columns had brought about a hostile work environment for her. Not only had the columnist insulted and demeaned all women on the force, but he also had focused particularly on her. In one column, there was a reference to "Sgt. Dinky Woman." (Dinky being short-hand for dingbat.) And after DeAngelis had filed charges with the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, R.U. Withmi mocked her "E-E-I-O" complaint.

Yet another column made fun of her being one of the few officers who wore a flashlight on her belt in the daytime. Nor was the sergeant pleased at being among those of her gender referred to by the columnist in this way: "They were training some good-lookin' K-9s (dogs) up here, but I was told those were the female recruits. I swear, complete with collars. Oh, well, my mistake."

A federal district court jury found that the anonymous columnist had subjected the sergeant to a hostile, sexually harassing and abusive working environment. She was awarded $10,000 in compensatory damages and $50,000 in punitive damages.

The Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals overturned the verdict. Judge Edith Jones, writing for the court, said that "a claim for a sexually hostile working environment is not a trivial matter ... It expresses conduct so egregious as to alter the conditions of employment and destroy women's equal opportunity in the workplace."

A recent decision defines verbal sexual harassment at work more precisely than has often been the case.

DONNA BRITT

Not much different than slavery

WASHINGTON — Recently, my sons returned home from a three-on-three basketball tournament talking about a fight they witnessed.

A white, adult player, my sons said, was angry at having lost a hard-fought game and exchanged words with several black women who'd accompanied the winners.

"The white guy said something mean," said one son. "A black guy said, 'Don't talk to a woman like that.' Punches were thrown before bystanders pulled the men apart.

It was, the boys observed, one of the few times that the intense rivalries at such contests escalated into a fight. Usually, skin color differences are surprisingly unimportant. What, we wondered, did they mean here?

Despite my independence and real hatred of fighting, a tiny part of me enjoyed hearing about a black man insisting that an African-American woman be treated with respect.

I thought about that when I read about Mike Tyson's triumphant return to Harlem recently. And I wondered: If the guy who'd dished those women had been black, would the men have reacted the same?

Perhaps. Still, it's sad but true: While the Tawana Brawleys of the world have many black men's undying support after accusing white men of misdeeds, women like Anita Hill and Tyson's accuser, Desiree Washington, receive many black men's ire — plus the outrage of some black women.

Tyson's charisma was clear to me years ago, when my then-toddler son burst into tears upon hearing that unknown boxer Buster Douglas had defeated him. If such a powerhouse could be vanquished, my son reasoned, who's safe?

That some people still have difficulty seeing Tyson, or any prominent black man, as vanquished was evident in Harlem, where several hundred fans cheered the ex-champ's return after he finished serving three years in an Indiana prison for rape.

A more elaborate welcome was abandoned because of protests by Harlemites — mostly women — who balked at a convicted rapist being feted as a hero. More than 100 of them held a candlelight vigil Monday protesting the celebration.

But those who attended Tyson's welcome home made it clear that they wouldn't be told whom to celebrate.

"Don't you dare tell us we can't welcome a brother back to the family," said local radio personality Gary Byrd. Ministers compared Tyson to the Bible's prodigal son, whose return to God and family was cause for rejoicing.

Said Tyson: "The powers that be didn't want you here and didn't want me to speak to you. But we'll beat them, because God is on our side."

But in this case and others divisive to African Americans, the "powers that be" aren't white, they're other African Americans.

The black women outraged that a man who'd served time for brutalizing one of their own are the mothers, wives and daughters of those who celebrated him. What gain could there be in "beating" such community pillars, as Tyson suggested?

And if God is on Tyson's side, who is on the side of the then 18-year-old beauty contestant who in 1992 charged that Tyson — her father's idol — raped her? Ever since, Washington, a Sunday school teacher, fine student and acknowledged naïf, has been spoken of as if she were a fool and a slut by those infuriated that she dared to accuse a black hero of rape.

Ironically, the same people who'd have been up in arms if a white boxing idol had raped Washington lined up to repudiate her. When Tyson was asked if he was sorry for the rape, promoter Don King shouted to the crowd: "Sorry for what? Come on!"

The tenor of Tyson's homecoming frustrates me. That doesn't keep me from understanding why people still recovering from having come to this nation with no choices would chafe at being told whom to admire and why. I understand why a community in which frightening numbers of men are imprisoned — some for crimes that wouldn't have resulted in jail had they been white — would distrust the criminal justice system and embrace some who've escaped it.

And I know how serious members of that community can be about the religious notion of forgiveness — "what community has had more to forgive? But if Tyson and company are going to cite God's all-encompassing compassion, they, too, should be encompassing. Tyson is hardly the only one who has suffered. Celebrants belittled and ignored the pain of a woman — a "sister," but that shouldn't matter — forced into an act that should be every woman's choice. That's tragic.

At this point in African American history, we should acknowledge that black people can, and do, hurt other blacks. And we should support their victims.

If being free means embracing all black men no matter what they do — and rejecting black women who dare to challenge their brutality — then it doesn't look much different from slavery to me.

I thought about that when I read about Mike Tyson's triumphant return to Harlem recently.

Are these women really happy?

There's a scene in "The Handmaid's Tale" that I will never forget. In Margaret Atwood's science fiction novel, the United States has been taken over by a puritanical government, which requires all women to cover their hair and wear long, nunlike robes that conceal their sexuality. One day a Japanese tour group visits this new republic. The Japanese women wear Western-style dress — knee-length skirts, high heels, lipstick, nail polish — and as they look curiously at the former Americans, they ask their interpreter if these medieval-looking women are happy. "Yes," one of the women lies. "We are very happy."

I think of that scene when I see fundamentalist Islamic women on television. Shrouded in black, showing only the oval of flesh around their eyes, one would guess that these women had grown up wearing this cumbersome garb, that sacklike cloaks and long black veils were all they had ever known. How else could they stand it?

But actually many Muslim women grew up in Western dress. In Iran, for example, fundamentalist clothing, called hijab, was outlawed in the 1930s. After the Islamic revolution in the late 1970s, the opposite law came into effect, and now women who flout the Islamic dress code can be sentenced to 80 lashes.

At a time when hate and xenophobia seem to be mounting, it is tempting to shrug off the human rights abuses of women in other nations. They are the products of different cultures, cultures we should not be so arrogant as to criticize. Besides, it's their fight, not ours. If they don't have a problem with it, why should we?

But of course, that's the question: Do they have a problem, or are they really very happy?

Does the Muslim woman really embrace the Islamic laws that say her husband may legally beat her, or forbid her from leaving the house, or divorce her by saying "I divorce you" three times, which automatically dissolves all of her custodial ties to her children?

Does she agree with laws that forbid her from traveling without written permission from a male relative, or from checking into a hotel room by herself?

Does she mind that one in five Muslim girls lives in a community that sanctions the genital mutilation of girls or that girls as young as 9 can be married off to middle-aged strangers?

To help unravel these mysteries, Geraldine Brooks, a former Middle East correspondent for the Wall Street Journal, started talking to Islamic women. She details her findings in a recently released book, "Nine Parts of Desire" (Anchor). Brooks provides Western readers with a thoughtful and balanced look at the world of Islamic women. She reports, for example, that many non-Iranian Islamic women wear hijab voluntarily. They say the heavy garb makes them feel safer, and therefore freer. And for many women, hijab is a way to reject Western culture and embrace their own. "Why imitate everything Western? Why not try something of our own?" said Sahar, an Egyptian translator who converted to Muslim fundamentalism.

But Brooks also met many women who are trying to fight the oppressive laws of Islam. There are the Eritrean doctors who teach women to read the Koran so that they can see that it never advocates clitoridectomies. There are the Saudi Arabian professionals who drove down the streets of downtown Riyadh, protesting the country's ban on women drivers.

At a time when hate and xenophobia seem to be mounting, it is tempting to shrug off the human rights abuses of women in other nations.

shooting report. When they arrived, officers Robert Mitchell and Mark Kovacs reportedly found Jackson on the ground outside the establishment, with two gunshots in his chest.

"Officer Kovacs leaned over and asked Jackson who shot him," Whitmire said, "but even though Jackson was slightly conscious, he reportedly didn't respond. People standing around by this time however, pointed out Brown, who was reportedly in the crowd, as the man who did the firing."

Whitmire continued, "Brown stepped forward and told the officers, 'I shot him and I'll tell you why,' and 'I shot him with my rifle.'"

The officers then asked where the rifle was and they say Brown indicated it was on the porch of a nearby residence. Officers recovered a semi automatic 22 caliber rifle and took it as evidence.

Jackson was taken to Central Florida Regional Hospital in Sanford for treatment of his injuries, but Whitmire said Jackson died within a short time after reaching the hospital.

"When officer Kovacs was driving Brown to jail," Whitmire said, "The officer said Brown reportedly told him that Jackson had harassed him several times, and that was the reason why he shot him."

Brown has been charged with first degree murder, possession of a firearm by a convicted felon, and discharging a firearm in public.

Sunday night, both armed with handguns, and both apparently wearing face masks.

Police Commander Dennis Whitmire said one of the men went to a clerk, and with a gun pointed at her face, demanded all of the money she had. "The second man went to a jewelry case, broke it open, and loaded a large amount in a bag he was carrying."

Whitmire said the men then fled from the store, firing two shots as they ran into the parking lot. No one was injured in the incident.

They both got into a yellow Chevrolet Caprice, and drove off.

Whitmire said one of the men is approximately six feet one inch tall, 180 pounds, and was wearing a large green cloth bag over approximately half of his body, plus blue jeans.

The other was about five feet nine inches tall, 170 pounds, wearing a green or gray mask and blue jeans.

A short time after the robbery, Whitmire said officer R.H. Shull found the vehicle, abandoned in the parking lot of the Wal-Mart plaza, 3707 S. Orlando Drive.

The Chevrolet was discovered to have been reported as stolen to the Winter Park police department approximately one week earlier.

Whitmire said Sanford police are checking out a number of leads in the case at the present time.

where it is made leaner and shaped into breaded steaks or patties.

"The pork we serve is very lean," he said. Pork, the USDA said, is leaner than ever before, deserving a place at the tables where 26 million children eat each day.

Besides, a law in place since the 1930s requires the department to help boost farmer prices by purchasing commodities. Although the money falls short of the billions used to subsidize crops, it makes an impact on farmers' pocketbooks and the futures market.

Seminole County has been recognized as a leader in the national effort to make lunches lower in fat and higher in fresh fruits and vegetables than other school districts across the nation.

Two years ago, the district began offering salad options to the regular fare. The other meals also contain lower fat meats and more fresh fruit and vegetable choices.

"We have been making an effort to be sure the meals are as lean and as healthy as they can be," Andrews noted.

Meanwhile, Public Voice, a consumer group that has campaigned for leaner lunches with more fruits and vegetables, says the purchase shows that USDA puts the interests of agribusiness ahead of school children and consumers.

"This is yet another example of the tail wagging the dog over there," said Art Jaeger, communications director for Public Voice.

Even if pork may be leaner than some beef products, the group says, the pork is potentially crowding out a yet leaner commodity.

"This purchase is very consistent with our goals and missions," says Ellen Haas, undersecretary of Agriculture for nutrition and a founder of Public Voice. "There is a place for pork products, beef products, in a healthy diet."

Andrews pointed out that the youngsters in Seminole County are far ahead of their counterparts elsewhere in terms of the leaner, tastier, fresher diet.

"We're serving very healthy meals here," he said.

Al Tank, vice president of public policy and trade at the National Pork Producers Council, says it's wrong to exclude pork from a healthy diet, especially considering the progress in making hogs leaner. "We think this is an extremely important shot in the arm for pork producers," he said. "It also reflects on, we think, the partnership we have with USDA to produce and supply a high-quality healthy product for school children that they want to eat."

The fresh-frozen hams and roasts are 95 percent fat free, while the ground pork is 82 percent lean, he said, noting that the Agriculture Department in the past five years has required leaner products.

Seen the other way, the ground pork is 18 percent fat. By comparison, lean hamburger is 22.5 percent, with a three-ounce patty giving one-third the recommended daily limit for fat.

For farmers, the purchase can mean a 60 cent to 70 cent increase in the price of each 240-pound hog sold over a three-month period — not bad when multiplied by 23 million hogs.

School lunches are big business, closely watched by most commodity groups. After all, schools get more than $4 billion each year in direct payments from the Agriculture Department, including the cost of free and cut-price lunches for poor children.

They also get about $650 million in foods purchased by the department. On top of that, the Agriculture Secretary has $300 million available for special commodity purchases to provide disaster relief or drain off surpluses.

Matters will change little if the full Congress goes along with the House Republican bill turning school lunches over to the states. The measure says 9 percent of the grants to states would be in the form of commodities.

Last school year, the department bought more than $185 million worth of frozen beef, nearly $50 million worth of frozen pork and more than $17 million worth of canned meats, both beef and pork.

Included in that total was a special purchase of more than $48 million worth of beef roasts and hamburger announced in July 1994 to help cattle producers weather a surplus.

And if students recalled getting more salmon croquettes than usual, that was because the government bought $9.9 million worth of canned fish to draw down supplies.

Information from the Associated Press was included in this report.

Center and property in Columbus Harbor to fund the purchase of the Sprint property. A $1.2 million bond is proposed in the 1995-96 parks and recreation budget for renovating and operating the property. Lomax also noted grants may be available to develop the property for recreational use.

Under a city charter amendment, the city must conduct a voter referendum on any capital program which cannot be paid for within one year.

The charter amendment reads: "Unless authorized by the voters at a duly held referendum, the city commission shall not spend or allow to be spent any funds derived from any source for the purpose of construction of any capital improvement or lease or purchase of real property, the payment of which extends beyond the end of any fiscal year."

Talks about acquiring the property are preliminary and more information must be gathered before the referendum question is addressed.

Lomax is enthusiastic about the recreation possibilities at the site.

"This has great potential," she said. "I'm almost scared to think about it for fear it won't come true. We could use some of the rooms for activities for seniors, and have indoor soccer and basketball courts for youths."

Planning and building director John Brock said a physical inspection of the building would be necessary before he could offer his opinion on whether the Sprint site could be converted for city uses.

"I don't have a comfort level with the lifespan of the structure," Brock explained, noting the age and type of building.

Although the commissioners conceded the project would take a lot of money, they also indicated the building has potential for the proposed 20-year plan.

In other business, the commissioners:

- Questioned repeated absences of commissioner Annamarie Vacca who did not attend Monday night's meeting due to an emergency with her babysitter. She had missed the previous meeting as well. The charter provides a commissioner may be removed from office after missing three consecutive meetings without being duly excused. The meeting minutes usually state an absent commissioner is excused and when the commission approved the minutes, it is deemed an excused absence.

- Approved $10,058 from the contingency fund to finish work on renovations to the fire station.
- Approved funding for three commissioners to attend the Florida League of Cities Conference Aug. 17-19 in Kissimmee.
- Accepted petitions to pave 14th Avenue, First Place East the 13th Avenue.
- Urged officials not to consolidate Seminole Community College and Valencia College.
- Scheduled budget work sessions July 17, 18, 19 and 24.

money by negotiating a deal before completion, said Thomas Callan, the developer's lawyer.

"If the state had waited until the mall was open and operating before they purchased this, you would be looking at astronomical numbers, maybe in the range of $40 (million) or $50 million," Callan said.

The DOT also will pay $895,232 in attorneys' fees.

The state still needs hundreds of acres to complete the toll road encircling the Orlando area, with land costs estimated at $69 million.

AROUND THE STATE

Marlins sign draft pick

MIAMI — The Florida Marlins have signed their 68th-round draft pick, pitcher Andy Bair.

Bair, a standout at Calvert Hall College High School in Baltimore, had agreed to play baseball at the University of Miami. The 6-5, 240-pound left-hander posted a 29-0 record in high school. In 1995, he was 9-0 with a 0.14 ERA, with 104 strikeouts in 63 innings.

Bair has been assigned to the Marlins' Gulf Coast Rookie League team.

ELSEWHERE

Jags ink Stephens

STEVENS POINT, Wis. — The Jacksonville Jaguars signed cornerback Eric Stephens to fill out their 90-man training camp roster.

The spot opened when tight end Ty Hallock, acquired in a trade with Detroit, decided to retire rather than report to the expansion Jaguars. Stephens was in uniform Monday for the first practice of training camp.

The 24-year-old Stephens started for the London Monarchs of the World League this year. He was signed by the New England Patriots in 1994 as an undrafted free agent but failed to make the cut in training camp.

Stephens played college football at Jacksonville State, a Division I-AA school in Alabama where he started all 37 games of his career.

NASCAR duo elected to Hall

DARLINGTON, S.C. — Driver Benny Parsons and team owner Raymond Parks have been elected to the National Motorsports Press Association Hall of Fame.

Parsons and Parks, whose election was announced Monday, will be inducted Sept. 2 during the NMPA's annual banquet at the Darlington Country Club.

Parsons won the NASCAR Winston Cup Series championship in 1973 and 21 races in a 25-year career, including the 1975 Daytona 500. He won nearly $4 million before retiring in 1988.

Parks was one of NASCAR's first gentleman owners, always showing up to races in a sharp suit and a Cadillac.

In 1949, Parks' cars won the first Winston Cup championship, then known as the Strictly Stock Late Model Championship. Parks, now 77, also owned the winning car in NASCAR's first sanctioned race, which was run in Daytona Beach, on Feb. 15, 1948.

Longwood Majors claim Area crown, head to state

Special to the Herald

OCALA — Longwood used outstanding pitching and the home run ball to earn a return to trip to this Friday's Babe Ruth Baseball Major A State Tournament.

Longwood, the defending state champion, blasted nine home runs in sweeping the three games and the title of the Area Tournament, a new tournament layer for this year, at Ocala Highlands Park.

Longwood, which is now 5-0 in All-Star play, topped Winter Haven 6-1 in the opening game last Friday, bested Palatka 5-2 on Saturday, then left no doubts in the championship game Sunday, crushing Winter Haven 14-2 in four innings.

"We knew we were deep in pitching," said Longwood manager Mike Bono. "But I didn't really expect to hit this many home runs. Our defense has been outstanding too."

Longwood will return to Ocala this Friday, this time at Brick City Park, to join host Brick City, Santa Fe (from the Gainesville area) and a team from the south, normally either Tampa or Miami. The winner of the event will advance to the Southern Region in Altamonte Springs.

"Last year we hosted the state in Longwood, so this year we have to win three tournaments on the road to get back to Regional (which Longwood lost in the final game at Gainesville

Thomas tops Belle in home run derby

By RONALD BLUM
 AP Sports Writer

ARLINGTON, Tex. — When it came to the All-Star home run derby, major leaguers didn't have a million-dollar swing Monday.

While no one came close to hitting the scoreboard above the right-field porch at The Ballpark, a target more than 500 feet away, Frank Thomas of the Chicago White Sox beat Cleveland's Albert Belle in the final, averaging 432.5 feet per homer.

On top of the home run porch — designed as a tribute to Tiger Stadium in Detroit — is a Sony Jumbotron scoreboard. To the right is a white sign that reads "HIT

IT HERE & WIN A FREE SUIT 501 FT.," a takeoff on Abe Stark's "Hit Sign Win Suit" billboard on the right field scoreboard at Ebbets Field in Brooklyn.

The Texas Rangers and Pinnacle Brands, a trading card company, had committed $1 million to charity if any player hit the scoreboard, the four billboards on it or the roof of the office building in left or right fields.

Thomas averaged 438.9 feet for eight first-round homers, while Belle was second with a 421.9 average for seven. Each player swung until he made 10 "outs" — swings that weren't homers. After the first round, the field was cut to four, and then the final two.

Strike? What strike? If they're playing, we're going

What I did on my summer vacation, Part II.

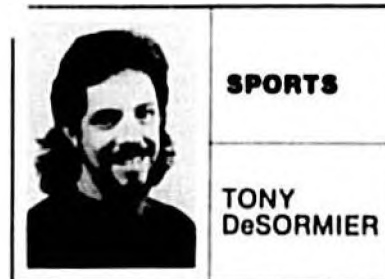

Being that we're some 1,400 miles (give or take a construction detour or five) away from my family, the primary objective of every vacation is some form of a reunion in southeastern New England.

The secondary objective, for me, at any rate, fits neatly into the busman's holiday category: baseball games, as many as we can squeeze in, at any level and anywhere within driving distance.

That quest has taken us to Tiverton, R.I. (a nephew's Little League game), New Britain, Conn. (Eastern League), and Pawtucket, R.I. (International League).

This summer, we managed a pair of trips to Fenway Park and, on the way back, a stop at Oriole Park at Camden Yards.

Since the strike — which wiped out potentially one of the most remarkable seasons of the current generation — it's become vogue to trash the sport of baseball. Many fans said they'd never go back, that they'd never go to another game again.

SPORTS

Great... better seats for me.

We don't have the room here to get into they whys and wherefores of the debacle that was the recent installment of baseball labor unrest (if you're interested in the history that set the stage for last summer's strike, read "Lords of the Realm" by John Helyar).

Besides, when it comes down to meeting Vacation Objective II, none of that matters. Quibbling over billions of dollars — we should all have such worries — has nothing to do with the game.

While the players give the game personality, they're transitory — Ted Williams gave way to Carl Yastrzemski, who gave way to Jim Rice, who gave way to Mike Greenwell. Players come and go; the game's the thing.

Mark "The Coach" Daniels, who has the afternoon drive time slot at 540 AM The Team, has challenged callers who say they've sworn off baseball, saying that once the pennant races heated up, they'd start heading back to the ballpark.

A week ago Sunday, we were part of the largest crowd at Fenway Park this season, squeezing our way in to watch the Red Sox and Detroit Tigers, the top two teams in the American League Eastern Division, close out a four-game series.

Last Wednesday, we were three of the 38,845 at Camden Yards to watch two teams struggling at the other end of the spectrum, the Baltimore Orioles and Minnesota Twins.

Tonight, Major League Baseball

puts in its Midseason Classic, the All-Star Game, at The Ballpark in Arlington. It'd be interesting to know how many people who said they'd never watch another game will be tuning in.

This isn't my baseball bias speaking... once the NHL resolved its strike, I was back in front of the tube, watching whatever ESPN or Fox would send us. Ditto for the year of replacement players in the NFL and for whenever the NBA gets its act back together.

Without a doubt, strikes and lockouts are a royal pain in the keester for fans. And while they may interrupt momentarily the natural rhythm of our existence, they're just another dot on the timeline.

Nothing that happened during the baseball strike — and a lot of nothing happened — lessened the enjoyment of the days my family and I spent at Fenway or Camden Yards this summer. And that's what the game's all about.

Volunteer of the Week

His work helps the poor and needy

By SUSAN WENNER
Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — Employees and volunteers at the South Seminole Christian Sharing Center were found ranting and raving about Manuel "Manny" Garcia Tellerias' superior work performance. Flo Eckstein, volunteer coordinator for the center said, "He's a terrific guy. He's a loving and sweet person. He never says no to any work we need him to do."

Tellerias is among the 75 volunteers and three paid employees who work with the organization. Eckstein proudly displayed the three scrapbooks of people and events that shows activities that has brought the group together. The individuals assisting the center all say that they have a great love and concern for the poor and needy.

The center was formed in 1986. According to its brochure its goal is to show Christian kindness by strengthening the inner resources of needy families without duplicating services already provided by other area agencies. The center relies on the financial support of local churches to fund its work so that they may refer those in need to the center for help and case management.

Tellerias has been one of those faithful and committed volunteers who believes wholeheartedly in the organization's goal. He has worked with the center for three years.

He formerly volunteered at Florida Manor visiting with the residents there and brightening their day. Tellerias and his wife of 32 years, Maria, attend the St. Augustine Catholic Church in Casselberry. The couple have two children, Rafael and Isabel, about whom he proudly speaks.

Delivery, cleaning, pantry and whatever duties are necessary for efficient running of the center. He is on call. "I work for one to six hours a day sometimes five days a week," he said. "I work whenever I am needed."

He continued by saying, "I am a Christian. I promised Jesus I'd do something good for others in my free time. I want to help the poor and needy."

Gardening: Marigolds durable summer plants

Marigolds are reliable and durable annuals for the summer garden. This versatile plant is highly resistant to pollution and smog, and tolerant of a wide range of soil and weather conditions. Few flowers provide so many blossoms through summer and fall.

Marigolds were insignificant little weeds from the New World, but it was really modern hybridizers who caused the marigold to blossom into such an array of good garden plants.

Don't be misled by the name African marigolds. They started with an American species, Tagetes erecta, and in early development were generally large flowered, free blooming plants of some size. Modern day breeders have substantially reduced plant size while still retaining the large flowers. Now there are many large-flowered hybrids with a compact growth habit. Many of these also bloom earlier than their taller counterparts. And many of the taller African marigold varieties have flowers with long stems which make good cut flowers.

French marigolds are also American, springing originally from the species, Tagetes patula. These mighty midgets are generally early blooming, fairly uniform in plant size with many blossoms. Many hybrids have been created by crossing plants within this species.

French marigolds are also American, springing originally from the species, Tagetes patula. These mighty midgets are generally early blooming, fairly uniform in plant size with many blossoms. Many hybrids have been created by crossing plants within this species.

Still a third major kind of marigold has been developed in recent years, hybrids known as triploids. The triploids have been developed by crossing African marigolds with French marigolds. The result is flowers up to 50 percent larger than those of French marigolds, a very early blooming habit and a strong free flowering ability all summer long.

Many of the new marigold varieties are triploids including "Encore," which bears primrose yellow flowers on plants which reach 10 to 12 inches in height and with as wide a spread.

Two good examples of compact French marigolds are "Bonanza Yellow," sporting clear yellow flowers on plants of 10 to 12 inches, and "Torch," a striking combination of gold and red.

The taller varieties of African marigolds are always spring planted because it takes longer for them to reach their peak performance but the compact Africans, the French marigolds and triploid hybrids can be planted as late as midsummer to still provide a good season of garden color.

Marigolds can be seeded directly in the soil outdoors but for early bloom they should be started indoors. They germinate best at 70 degrees. Sow in a good starting mix, but do not cover with soil for they germinate best in light. Water thoroughly, then cover with clear plastic to keep the humidity high and place in bright light but not direct sunlight. When seeds have germinated, remove the plastic and grow in direct sunlight. Transplant into pots when the first true leaves have formed.

Since marigolds are one of the most popular plants for summer color, they're widely available in nurseries, garden centers and just about any place that sells plants.

Marigolds are good container plants, producing faithfully and lavishly. A major benefit from the breeders' expertise is a broad color range starting with green through creamy white to butter cup, lemon, canary and golden yellows. The tones deepen to orange, tangerine and gold, then orange through deep bronze reds. It's difficult to duplicate the color spread of marigolds with any other flower.

Make sure shots are up-to-date

DEAR ABBY: I would like to correct the immunization information provided in your response to the woman whose father nearly died from tetanus, or "lockjaw," as the disease is more commonly called.

First, the schedule you reported stating when children should receive protection against tetanus was incorrect. The American Academy of Pediatrics recommends that DTP (diphtheria-tetanus-pertussis) shots be given when the child is 2 months, 4 months, 6 months, 12 to 18 months, and between 4 and 6 years of age. An additional dose of Td (diphtheria-tetanus toxoid) should be given between the ages of 11 to 16 years, and then one dose every 10 years.

Second, the information provided about tetanus vaccine for adults does not tell the full story. Even though Td is a routine vaccination that should be given every 10 years, it is not always given to everyone who needs it. Many adults visit their clinics frequently but leave without this important vaccination.

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) in Atlanta, only about 50 percent of surveyed adults reported having had a tetanus shot in the past 10 years.

Abby, please let your readers know that they should check with their physicians at the next visit to make sure their tetanus shots are up-to-date. And while they are there, they should ask about pneumonia and flu shots. According to a recent CDC survey, only 50 percent of adults reported receiving a flu shot in the previous year, and fewer than 30 percent of eligible adults had ever received their pneumonia shot, which is recommended one time for every adult 65 and over.

Thank you for this opportunity to convey to you and your vast readership the most current information on the importance of vaccinations.

DEBORAH L. WEXLER, M.D., EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR, IMMUNIZATION ACTION COALITION
DEAR DR. WEXLER: Thank you for the vitally important, updated information concerning immunizations.

DEAR ABBY: I need your help. Here's the situation: I have been dating my boyfriend since April 1994. We plan on announcing our engagement next month.

He is churchgoing, loving, kind, doesn't cheat, and he has never hit me. He seldom drinks, doesn't hang out too much with his friends, and doesn't stay out late unless we are together. However, while eating, he chews his food with his mouth open.

I say that this is a rude, not classy, and it spoils my appetite. Sometimes I get so irritated I don't even want to talk to him. He says he enjoys eating his food that way, and I shouldn't try to change him.

What do you think, Abby? Should I count my blessings and leave him alone about this? Please respond. We both admire your wisdom.

TURNED OFF AT MEALTIME
DEAR TURNED OFF: Don't rush to the altar — there is more involved here than meets the eye, and the mouth. The fact that he is unconcerned about your feelings in this regard should be a warning sign. His insensitivity may extend to other, more important issues.

It is bad manners to expose one's dining companions to half-eaten food in an open mouth. Tell him you are not trying to change him; you are trying to spare him any further embarrassment by teaching him something he should have learned a long time ago.

DEAR ABBY: We received a lovely engraved wedding invitation recently. At the bottom of the reply card was printed: "Please make gifts in the form of contributions toward the purchase of a family car."

Can you believe it!

DEAR AMAZED: Yes, I can believe it. I once received a letter about a wedding invitation that advised the guests that the couple was registered at a travel agency, and they could use cash towards a honeymoon in Hawaii.

Another invitation specified a minimum of $50 for the gift, while still another instructed guests to deposit money in the couple's savings account, listing the bank and account number!

(Problems? Write to Dear Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Dear Abby, P.O. Box 60440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90066. All correspondence is confidential.)

Fruits and veggies: Juicing vs. eating

DEAR DR. GOTT: A good friend indicates that the juice from vegetables extracted via blender is better for you and reacts quicker in the system. He squeezes carrots, asparagus, celery and almost everything, while I'm eating mine raw or sometimes cooked. My thinking is that it's better to bite down on a hard carrot than to drink the juice. Who is right here?

DEAR READER: As in most issues, each of you is correct -- depending on your goals. Vegetables and fruits are composed of packets of cellulose that envelope the nutritional contents of the plants. Unlike cows, humans cannot digest cellulose. Therefore, unless the cellulose fiber is mechanically broken down (by cooking, chewing or a blender), the very essence of the plant is not available for use in the human body. This is the reason why many experts recommend that, to enjoy the fullest benefit from eating fruits and vegetables, consumers should cook them or chew them thoroughly. The authorities add that mastication is also beneficial for strong teeth and healthy gums.

The electric blender has revolutionized this situation. Now, with a flick of the switch, people can break down the cellulose walls in plants, thereby releasing the full nutritional potential of the food.

In this sense, your friend is correct. Blender-extracted vegetable juice is certainly more digestible than the same foodstuffs that are merely chewed. (Vegetable juice is probably not more digestible than cooked vegetables.) I don't know whether such juice "reacts quicker in the system," but it is surely easier to consume.

On the other hand, by blending the vegetables in a machine, you are deprived of the benefits of chewing and savoring each individual taste.

Therefore, if you like to bite down on a raw carrot or piece of celery, you're going to miss out on one of the pleasures of eating. When you think about it, all food could be mechanically blended and made into a nutritional "soup."

However, I wouldn't want to drink every meal and be stuck with a potpourri of sameness. It's more pleasurable to enjoy each texture and flavor. I suggest a compromise. Both

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

Who holds the most world bridge titles? Well, until some time on Friday, May 12, when he died at the age of 72, it was Italian Giorgio Belladonna. He was the only person to play in all of the Blue Team's 13 Bermuda Bowl and three Team Olympiad victories.

Belladonna loved life. After the bridge was over, he was the first person onto the dance-floor at the victory banquet. He had a great sense of humor and was always fun to be with.

Giorgio would be on everyone's list of the 10 best players ever. He was known as an aggressive bidder and a superb card-player. In today's deal, for example, most declarers would go down, then complain that everything was wrong. Belladonna got home despite the distribution.

After winning the club lead,

Belladonna started with the spade king, the standard safety-play. He continued with a spade to dummy's ace, getting the bad news. Most players would take a diamond finesse now and fail to defeat. Belladonna, though, cashed his other club winners, discarding dummy's heart 10, played a heart to the ace and exited with the heart queen.

East won with the king and switched to a diamond, but Belladonna just finessed his 10. After West won with the queen, he could cash the spade queen but was then employed. A diamond return would be in South's tenace, whereas a heart or club switch would concede a ruff-and-discard. Declarer would ruff in the dummy and discard his diamond nine.

Belladonna was an approachable and friendly fellow. The bridge world is much the poorer without him.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
July 12, 1995

Although you may prefer independence in the year ahead, much you hope to do will require the support of others. From this day forward, start developing helpful alliances.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If too much emphasis is placed on your independence today, you may fail to cooperate with others in ways that could be mutually advantageous. Avoid tripping over your own feet. Cancer, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $2 and SASE to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You will need to plan if you hope to be truly productive today. If you don't know where you're going and attempt to do too much, everything could suffer.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

Although you are usually your own person, you may yield to peer pressure today and do something against your better judgment.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Analyze situations realistically today. If you underestimate your opposition, you might come out as just a competitor instead of as a winner.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) An individual who thinks he or she is always right, but often isn't, might try to coerce you into rejecting your own ideas which might actually be better.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You might not make a good deal today if you shop with an impulsive attitude. Desire for instant gratification can distort a person's sense of values.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If you and your mate cannot agree on an important issue today, it might be helpful to get an objective friend, not a relative, to arbitrate the matter.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Lukewarm interests aren't apt to receive your earnest efforts today. To be an achiever, you will need strong motivation.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If you play in a competitive, social sport today, don't try to overwhelm your opponent. If you can't play for the fun of it, tear up the score card.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) In career situations today, beware of those who tend to use others like puppets in a marionette show.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Try not to enter into serious discussions today if you don't know your subject and hope to bluff your way through. The chances of this working are slim.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Instead of expanding your indebtedness at this time, curb your urges to spend. This will free you from financial bondage quicker than you think.
