County Options Eyed For Jail; Bids Too High

By MAX ERKILETIAN

reviewing options for construction of a new iail at the county's Five-Points complex in light of bids on the facility that exceeded projections by $1.4 million.

The county has $3 million in federal funds from the Economic Development Adminis tration (EDA) to construct the jail. The low bid for the project was $4,398,669 by Standard Construction of Maitland. The two other bids were: Stratton Construction, Tampa, $4,787,781 and Norfolk Construction, Orlando hids this morning, according to County Planner John Percy. Percy serves as project coordinator for the EDA grant.

"We basically came up with two options said Percy. "We can accept the bids as they are, or we can re-bid them." If the project is re-bid, approval will have to be gained from EDA. That agency had placed a June 9 deadline for the beginning of con-struction on the jail. The deadline would have to be extended to allow time to re-bid, according to Percy.

"We have already talked to people at the EDA and they said we probably could re-bid, but one person does not speak for the EDA. We'd have to make the application to extend the deadline and see what they do, if we decide to re-bid."

Percy said he hopes to bring the problem to the commission at its meeting next Tuesday. 'I really don't know what we're going to do," Commissioner Harry Kwiatkowski said today. "One thing is for sure, we don't have the $1.4 million."

Commission Chairman Dick Williams agreed the money is not available in this year's budget.
"We might be able to have some sort of phased construction over an extended period of time," said Williams. "We might be able to Eleanora Moro's much to government plans for a state funeral coincided with the sudden resignation of Italy's interior minister in the face of despening controversy over the handling of the Moro affair.

Israel: Split Views On Peace

For the first time since Israel gained nationhood 30 years ago today, the granite of Jewish unity has been broken; there is a growing schism among Israelis over the unyielding policy of Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

Israeli professors and intellectuals have signed a petition urging him to be more flexible in the search for peace. And members of Israel's military forces have urged an exchange of territory for

A muted, behind-the-scenes debate among U.S. Jews came out in the open recently when a group sent a message of their support to a dissident peace group in Israel that is urging more flexibility on

Martin Peretz, editor of the New Republic and one of the signers, termed the message "a dissent from some of the positions of the Begin government which we think are neither ethically nor politically

The anguish involved in this rupture was summarized in Peretz' statement that "no one who signed . . . was taking a position against Israel or, for that matter, for the current policy of the American government.

This breaking of Jewish ranks away from the Begin government is a major development that deserves more attention than it has received.

Until now, many U.S. Jews have been hostage to fears that they would betray Israel if they differed from the Begin government's negotiation position with the Arabs.

They recoiled from adding strength to those in Washington and in Western capitals whose "evenhandedness" has been dictated by Arab oil; they dreaded the apparent withdrawal of support from three million Israelis under siege by 100 million hostile Arabs lest miscalculation jeopardize

The declaration by some leading Jews, in-cluding Nobel laureate Saul Bellow, says something new indeed: That with the remarkable material support from U.S. Jews, there will go also their influence that will not always be uncritical; they are serving notice that they are not automatically bound to every twist and turn of Israeli diplomacy

This is a healthy development that President Carter would do well to understand and cultivate as it could lead to a broader Israeli-American-Arab understanding than would otherwise be possible. Begin, as tough as he is, cannot stand alone against the reasoning of his own countrymen allied with leading American friends.

He must develop some new approaches toward a settlement or fall from power as he faces a divided constituency that is without parallel for a millions of American homeowners who were hit by electric bills that in some areas averaged more than $400 a month during the coal strike.

Federal officials say some electric utilities may have overcharged customers substantially during the 110-day strike by using such things as improper fuel adjustment fees and inflated If preliminary findings are supported by a full-scale is

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission says an initial staff audit of just three power pool system shows "extraordinary operating and billing practices" boosted wholesale po during the strike that ended March 25.

Unusually high wholesale costs are passed immediately to retail consumers in many areas of the nation through such things as the fuel adjustment clause. Alerted by the staff audit, the commission ordered an investi gation Wednesday of virtually all emergency wholesale power transactions during the strike. The investigation covers an area bounded by Virginia and New York in the East and Kentucky and Illinois in the West. It includes sales of electricity by utilities that had oil-fired generators or adequate coal supplies to those that were short on coal, as well as transmission charges by utilities that served as conduits for power shipments from one part of the country to another. "As a result of a preliminary staff audit of a limited number of (sales of) ... wholesale electric power during the recent power shortages resulting from the coal strike, the commission had concluded that some utilities may have collected revenues in excess of a just and reasonable rate for the involved tran sactions," the commission said. The staff report said just one questionable billing practice boosting the price of emergency shipments of electricity each time they crossed utility system boundaries on the way to powershort areas instead of charging a fixed mileage transmission rate — "produced substantially more revenues than would have been the case had the fixed transmission charge ... been utilized." Add-on charges "appear to far exceed" real transmission costs,

Sugar Ray Ain't Misbehavin'

NEW YORK (UPI) - Most of the old trademarks are gone the long pink Cadillac, the slick high pompadour and the pretentious peacock-like swagger.

Sugar Ray Robinson ain't misbehavin' anymore. Partly through circumstances but primarily by design, he has changed his life style completely. Where big money and bright lights were once his chief preoccupations, he now devotes virtually all his time to kids.

He says he has never enjoyed anything so much in his life. As chairman of the board of the Sugar Ray Youth Foundation in Los Angeles, with additional outlets in Orange County, Calif., Las Vegas and San Francisco, the 56-year-old former middleweight and welterweight champion works with the Board of Education in dealing with the problems of youngsters. it stire process trees by living works, "At the start they see you so busy, you don't even have time to die. I love children and always have. The kids we work with range from 6 to 16 and we have both girls and boys. Our program takes in music, drama, everything."

Robinson won 174 of his 201 professional bouts, including 109 by knockouts. Along the way, he won the middleweight crown five different times and became recognized as probably the best fighter ever pound for pound before retiring for good in 1965. On Tuesday, the Boxing Writers of America voted Sugar Ray not only the best boxer of all time, but also the best middleweight

Joe Louis beat out Muhammad Ali as the best heavyweight, Archie Moore was named best highl heavyweight and Rebarto Duran, the current champ, was voted the best lightweight in the balloting, conducted by Herne Box Office. The pay-TV network finished on top in three separate categories, Robinson didn't

"You're joking," was his immediate reaction.
"I'm overwhelmed. It would make anybody thankful and proud greatest ever, two fellows come to my mind - Henry Armstrong and Joe Louis. What a little fighting guy Henry was! And Joe had the fastest hands I ever saw.

Biggest kick he ever got in boxing, Robinson reveals, was knocking out Britain's Randy Turpin in their second fight at the Polo Grounds in 1961.

"Turpin wasn't a bad guy," Robinson says, "but what made me feel so good about beating him was that it avenged my loss to him in London two months before and I also brought the title back to Robinson was stopped only once in his 25-year career and that was by light heavyweight champ Joey Maxim in 1962 when the temperature at ringside reached 96 degrees at Yankee Statium. Robinson was so dehydrated, he couldn't answer the bell for the 14th round. He went into that fight weighing 159 pounds and came

Teddy Brenner, President of Madison Square Garden Boxing, tells of the time near the end of Robinson's career when he tried to get him to fight Joey Giardello in Philadelphia as a favor to Philadelphia promoter Herman Taylor.

Sugar Ray, 43 at the time, balked at first because he felt he'd have to train too hard at that stage of his career. "I think you should take the fight no matter how tough it's liable to be," Brenner said. "Why?" asked Robin "I'll tell you why," said Brenner. "The only great black fighter

he hasn't fought is you. He deserves your name on his record and you deserve his an yours." "You're right," Robinson agreed.

They fought and Giardello won a decision. That victory earned Giardello a title shot against Dick Tiger in his next fight, which Giardello won to become the middleweight champion.

Had it not been for Sugar Ray Robinson, Giardello never rould've even gotten the chance. And if it wasn't for Sugar Ray neon now, a lot of kids might not be getting a chance today.
