The event will be held behind the 7-Eleven store at the intersection of Lake Mary Boulevard and Country Club Road, beginning at 10 a.m. Prices are $2 per car, and $4 for vans or larger vehicles.

Jackpot jumps

TALLAHASSEE — You've got company if you played the Florida Lotto game and didn't win the $7 million jackpot. No one else did, either, making for a rollover jackpot worth an estimated $16 million this week. Lottery officials said Sunday.

The six numbers drawn late Saturday were 4-28-37-41-47-48.

Although there were no six-of-six winners, 128 tickets were sold with five of the numbers, and they are worth $2,488 each. There were 9,198 four-of-six winners, worth $83 each, and 184,567 three-of-six winners worth $5.50 each.

Lotto grand prize estimates are based on projected sales, funds from any rollovers and long-term investment rates for a 20-year payout to one winner.

Countdown begins Discovery

CAPE CANAVERAL — NASA today began the third countdown for the launch of space shuttle Discovery, grounded for nearly a month by mechanical failures and a meteor shower.

"All that's behind us now, and we're ready to try again," NASA spokesman Bruce Buckingham said as the countdown clocks started ticking at 9:30 a.m. Liftoff is set for Thursday morning.

The satellite-delivery and spacewalking mission by Discovery has been on hold since July 17, when launch attempt No. 1 was foiled by a failed electronics switch. The switch is part of the rocket-release system at the pad.

NASA came within 19 seconds of launching Discovery on July 24. That countdown was halted because of a problem with one of two steering mechanisms in Discovery's right solid rocket booster.

NASA replaced both the bad switch and the power unit containing the faulty steering mechanism, and aimed for an Aug. 4 launch, but liftoff was delayed until Thursday to avoid the annual Perseid meteor shower this week, expected to be more intense than usual.

Child holds shotgun in theft

BALTIMORE — A boy no older than 9 held a shotgun on a security guard at a General Motors storage lot while an adult tied the man up and stole a new van, police said.

Another security guard was beaten with a pipe and stabbed by the adult man during Sunday's holdup.

Several hours later, police stopped a van with a license plate matching the stolen van's and took a man, woman and three juveniles into custody.

Police were not sure if the child who held the shotgun was among those in the van.

The man was charged with driving a vehicle with a stolen tag, but police did not immediately know if he was involved in the robbery.

Seminole High pilots medical study coop

By VICKI DeSORMIER

SANFORD — The start of school is still a few weeks off, but some of the students at Seminole High School got an early start on things when the Academy of Health Careers welcomed its inaugural class last week.

An orientation and barbecue in the school cafeteria marked the first time the students who will be studying a variety of medical careers together over their high school careers, met together.

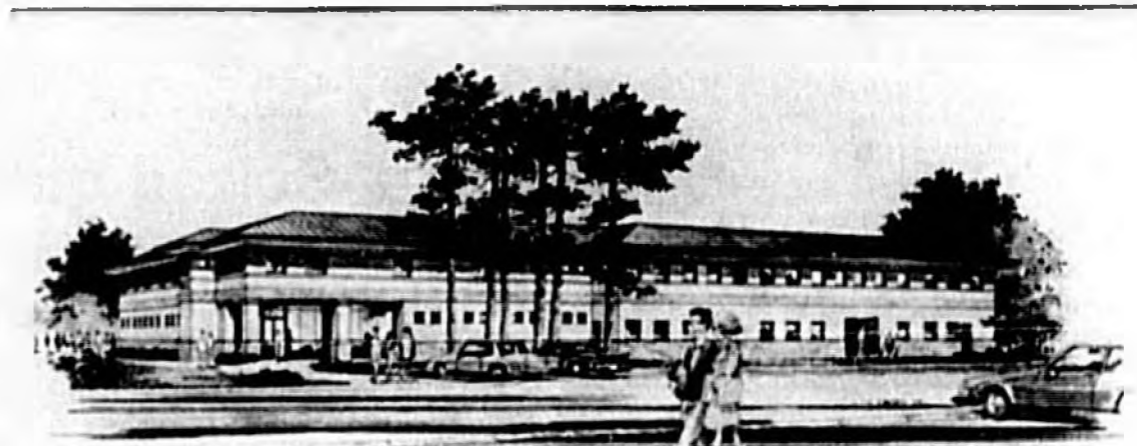

The students will be preparing for careers ranging from medical receptionist to doctor.

Fields of study at the academy will concentrate on the practical application of all subjects from English to math to science.

Seminole will be the first school in the district to try out the academy, or school-within-a-school, concept. Fifteen schools statewide have been selected to pilot the new approach to learning.

Since two out of seven jobs in the future are expected to be in the health care industry, the decision was made to expand Seminole's already successful Health Occupations program into the

Apopka vet wins national honor

APOPKA — Jim Sursely of Apopka, has been named Outstanding Disabled Veteran of 1993. The honor was given by DAV headquarters, in Washington, D.C.

Sursely, 45, lost both legs and his left arm above the elbow to a land mine in Vietnam. He was cited by the DAV, "for his ability to lead an independent, inspirational life despite his disabilities."

"Jim is an extraordinary individual who held on to his beliefs and principles during the most difficult period of his life, his rehabilitation from severe disabling injuries," said DAV National Employment Director Ron Drach.

Not only has he successfully rehabilitated himself through aggressively pursuing recreational and professional interests, Drach continued, but he's also helped the public understand the impact of disabilities by sharing his experiences with community and school groups.

DAV National Commander Joseph Zengerle will present the award to Sursely during the DAV's 72nd National Convention in San Francisco, Aug. 14 through 19.

Among his many accomplishments since his injury, Sursely obtained a real estate license in 1978 and has become a successful entrepreneur, owning his own roofing company at the present time.

Several 'ifs' attached to land offered city

Sanford commission to consider donated land parcels tonight

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The Sanford City Commission will consider an offer of three parcels of adjacent land tonight. The property would be donated to the city, but subject to a number of conditions.

Two of the three lots are located on Holly Avenue, at 9th Street. The third lot is between the two and the railroad track right-of-way.

According to City Manager Bill Simmons, who has contacted the Seminole County Tax Assessor regarding the property, it is valued at approximately $6,700.

Simmons has found that there is a code enforcement lien against the property however, in the amount of $11,040 plus interest. As of July 19, 1993, he reported a fine of $100 per day is continuing against the property for failure to be in compliance with the code.

The offer of the properties is being made by owners Helen and Nicholas Constantine, and Constance and Charles Fox.

In a letter offering the property to the city, the four have listed several conditions. That the city accept the donation with the understanding the owners will seek a tax deduction on their individual Federal tax returns, the city and code enforcement board will waive all of the $100 per day fines currently imposed, the city will be responsible for trash cleanup and land improvements, the city is responsible for outstanding taxes, the transfer will be by Quit Claim Deed, and the owners will provide no abstract or title insurance.

Simmons has informed the city he has had preliminary discussions with Amelka Geuka of GoldenRule, and understands that, "GoldenRule would be willing to accept a direct donation of the property from the current owners if such were offered in consideration of the waiving of

According to Police Commander Dennis Whitnir, "At about 11:30 Saturday morning, the baby's aunt, Donna Frank, was leaving the parking lot in the 3600 block of Orlando Drive, when she was confronted by Cox, who told her he wanted his daughter back."

Panel to report to school board

'urgent need' for technology plan

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — A committee charged with studying the state of technology in Seminole County will report to the school board tomorrow afternoon that there is an "urgent need" for the district to make a "major commitment to technology for administrative applications."

The recently completed study by the committee shows that the school district has more than 5,000 employees serving more than 50,000 students. They said there are only 576 computer work stations for those employees and that only 344 of those work stations are able to log-on concurrently. That is, the report states, only eight percent of the work force is able to access computer equipment at one time.

"The data clearly indicates," the report shows "that the Seminole County Public School District is unable to keep pace with the complex data management needs required for tracking all aspects of student information, generating state and federal reports and utilizing standard business functions."

The committee will recommend that the school board authorize a long-range plan for the systematic implementation of a technology plan.

Supt. Paul Hagerty said that during his first year as superintendent in the district he has observed a need for greater technological capabilities to meet the administrative needs of the district.

He formed the committee, comprised of school and district administrators and teacher, to interview district employees about their technology needs and to make recommendations to the school board about possible solutions.

The committee found that in addition to a limited system, the employees also had limited training on the equipment currently in use, that there is difficulty in accessing the existing data and that there is a need to use the technology more efficiently for purchasing and budgeting purposes.

Navy threatens contract cancellation

TAMPA — Citing serious performance and financial problems, the Navy threatened to cancel a contract with The American Shipbuilding Co. because Pentagon officials feared the shipyard cannot finish two ships.

The company has severe cash-flow problems, making it difficult to pay suppliers and causing work on the two fleet oilers at the Port of Tampa to fall far behind, according to unnamed Navy officials quoted in a story to be published Monday in Defense Week magazine.

Navy officials also allege the company misspent federal money — in one case to buy two used Cadillacs. American Shipbuilding denied the allegations in the Defense Week story. Company officials were not available for comment Sunday, according to a security guard who answered the phone.

George M. Steinbrenner, flamboyant owner of the New York Yankees, is majority owner of the shipbuilding company. Loss of the contract could devastate American Ship and its sole subsidiary, Tampa Shipyards Inc., which employ hundreds of workers.

Do spectators bother loggerheads?

ORLANDO — Naturalists have guided pre-dawn "turtle walks" for years to watch loggerheads nest on Florida beaches, without investigating whether the spectators interfere with the egg-laying.

Now biologist and turtle specialist Steve Johnson is making a study of the effects on loggerhead nests of thousands of people who go on state-sponsored walks aimed at increasing support to save the threatened species.

"We were surprised to learn that no one has done any work on whether this has an effect on the turtles," said Karen Bjornald, director of the University of Florida's Archie Carr Center for Sea Turtle Research.

"As we've seen in our national parks, you can love your resources to death," Bjornald told The Orlando Sentinel for a story Sunday.

Johnson guided a group of 23 bleary-eyed turtle-watchers that gathered around a nesting loggerhead one recent night, watching scores of pingpong-ball sized eggs fall into the 2-foot-deep nest.

Some 12,000 people a year take part in official turtle walks, state officials say. No one knows how many more watch the egg-laying without the supervision of the volunteer tour guides, who have government training and permits.

Jacksonville is refugee refuge

JACKSONVILLE — While many areas greet immigrants with more hostility than hospitality, authorities and relief agencies know Jacksonville as a melting-pot success story.

An immigrant can learn English, find a home, get a job and assimilate in a matter of months, said officials of the U.S. State Department, the state Refugee Programs Administration and local relief agencies.

"In Jacksonville, all the players — the schools, businesses, city government, resettlement agencies — seem to get along fairly well together," said Jackie Spithourakis, policy and research manager for the Refugee Programs Administration.

"What's worked well in Jacksonville, it seems, is that the egos haven't come into play," Spithourakis told The Florida Times-Union for a story Sunday.

Though not a big international port of entry for people, Duval County received about 650 refugees a year from 1990-92, the third-highest number in Florida behind Dade and Palm Beach counties.

The city is known nationally as a good resettlement location for individual refugees, said Russell Bloom, immigration director for Lutheran Social Services, the city's largest relief agency.

"We're used to helping single people get acclimated to the community," Bloom said. "And we can usually have them acclimated — enrolled in an English course, in an apartment or house and with a job — in about three months."

Cyclists raise millions in 192-mile ride

PROVINCETOWN, Mass. — Tim Nash of Orlando and his three brothers spent the weekend bicycling 192 miles through eastern Massachusetts together because their mother died of cancer.

The three brothers joined 1,400 other cyclists to raise about $2.1 million for the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

"This ride is very difficult," Nash said Sunday. "I don't ride normally, but I kept keeping in mind what I was doing and who I was doing it for, and it made it a lot easier."

The bicycle ride from Sturbridge to Provincetown raises money for the Jimmy Fund, which pays for cancer research and treatment at the Boston cancer institute.

Organizers bill the Pan-Massachusetts Challenge as the most successful fund-raising event of its kind. It has raised $10 million since 1980.

Sixty percent of the riders are recovering cancer patients or have close friends or relatives who suffered cancer, organizers said.

Democrats back deficit bill

By CURT ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — All but one of Florida's Democrats in Congress may have some explaining to do in the upcoming recess — and in next year's elections.

Nine of the 10 House Democrats and Sen. Bob Graham chose to back their party and President Clinton by voting for the deficit reduction bill despite heavy opposition back home. Only Rep. Earl Hutto of Pensacola voted with the Republicans.

Parts of the bill criticized most by voters who telephoned their representatives and senators were the 4.3-cent gas tax increase and the higher income taxes on the wealthy and higher-earning Social Security recipients.

Another unpopular item makes the taxes retroactive to January, which Republican Sen. Connie Mack called "the arrogance of power at its worst."

At Graham's offices in Washington and Florida, calls last week were running 10-to-1 against the package.

"We will not reduce our federal deficit until we genuinely reduce government spending. This budget reconciliation bill does not cut spending enough to be called a deficit reduction package."

-Rep. Earl Hutto

Even though the measure is aimed at slashing the federal deficit by $496 billion over five years, the taxes are certain to be a big issue in the 1994 elections for the Democrats.

"It's going to be a millstone around everybody's neck," said Republican Rep. E. Clay Shaw of Fort Lauderdale. "It's going to be a problem."

Hutto, who has one of Florida's most conservative districts, voted for the original House version of the bill but decided to oppose the compromise. Hutto's main reasons: no caps on entitlement programs and not enough spending cuts.

"We will not reduce our federal deficit until we genuinely reduce government spending," Hutto said. "This budget reconciliation bill does not cut spending enough to be called a deficit reduction package."

Hutto may have pleased his Panhandle voters. It remains to be seen if his abandonment of the Democrats hurts in the long run when he seeks money for projects in the district.

Rep. Sam Gibbons of Tampa, who has faced a lot of tough votes during his 31 years in the House, said he anticipates some fireworks at upcoming meetings with constituents.

"You've got to explain it to people," Gibbons said. "You've got to be willing to stand up and say, 'This is why I voted the way I did.'"

Seized guns returned to public arena

By Associated Press

JACKSONVILLE — Guns seized by police are often traded back to wholesale gun dealers in exchange for such equipment as radios, shotguns and other items.

Police in Jacksonville seized an average of six guns a day — about 21,000 — in the last decade. About one-fourth of those firearms went back to the public, trading them to dealers in exchange for other equipment.

Just in the past 18 months, the department traded 5,000 seized guns to wholesale gun dealers for $300,000 in radios, shotguns and other items.

Sheriff Jim McMillan defends the policy, which is also used by other cities around the state. He said it's economical, practical and doesn't defeat efforts to keep the peace.

"If I thought for one moment that doing away with the policy of trading legal guns back to dealers would keep criminals from getting a gun or keep a crime from being committed, I'd stop it tomorrow," McMillan told The Florida Times-Union in an interview for Sunday editions. "Criminals are going to be able to get guns, whether we stop this or not. Stopping it would be simply symbolic."

Way Back When

About a year ago old timer Jack Kanner relayed information to Julian Stenstrom, "Way Back When" columnist, about a blacksmith's shop located on the corner of Sanford Avenue and Third Street, "across from Jack's father's department store. Kanner, who now lives with his wife Cora in Inverness, said he was fairly sure the shop belonged to a Curtis Hickson. Believe it or not, after all this time this picture was located of the shop or "livery stable," which did not belong to Ellis Maddox Howard, grandfather of Helen Hickson Dunn. Curtis Hickson was "affectionately" known to his family as "Pa." He was also the father-in-law of Robert Jack Hickson, longtime Sanford and Seminole County law enforcement officer, and Sanford's artist-in-residence, E.B. Stowe. R.J. Hickson and Stowe are brothers-in-law since they married sisters. Both Stowe and Hickson are in their upper 90s and reside at the Hillhaven Healthcare Center on Mellonville Avenue.

Soldier killed in Somalia dreaded mission

By Associated Press

TAVARES — Army Spc. 4 Keith D. Pearson left for Somalia from Kansas after his name was drawn out of a hat three days ago to serve in the peacekeeping mission.

"He wasn't happy about going, but he had to go," said Burton Pearson after learning that his 25-year-old son was killed when the vehicle he was riding in struck a land mine Sunday.

It was the deadliest encounter for American forces since arriving in the famine-stricken east African nation last year. It was the third ambush of U.N. forces since Wednesday. Two Americans were injured in a land mine blast Thursday.

The soldier, a member of the 977th Military Police Company, had left for Somalia from Fort Riley, Kan. on Thursday.

The elder Pearson said his son was one of about 30 soldiers whose names were drawn out of a hat to serve in the peacekeeping mission to Somalia. The 30 completed a unit that was short-handed, Pearson said.

"If your name was drawn, that was it. You couldn't get out of it.

That was what they were told," the elder Pearson said. "His name was drawn and he had to go."

Besides Pearson, Spc. Mark Gutting, Grand Rapids, Mich. and Sgt. Christopher Hilgert, 27, of Bloomington, Ind., were also killed. The three were from the 977th Military Police Company in Fort Riley, Kan.

Also killed was Sgt. Ronald N. Richerson, 24, of Portage, Ind. Richerson was part of the 300th Military Police Company in Fort Leonard Wood, Mo.

The four soldiers belonged to the U.S. Logistics Support Command based at the main U.N. headquarters in Mogadishu, said U.N. military spokesman Maj. Dave Stockwell.

Members of the company provide security for convoys, help keep main supply routes open, provide security in the compounds where soldiers live and provide law enforcement, Henry said.

Burton Pearson and his wife fought tears as they remembered Keith.

"He said he'd call me every week," Pearson said. "It's just a nightmare right now. It's unbelievable right now."

Gas prices continue to drop

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

HEATHROW — Surveys on both sides of the nation indicate gas prices are continuing to drop. AAA headquarters in Heathrow says prices have been dropping slowly in the Central Florida area.

AAA's Tom Shroder said the most recent survey was taken in July, but that a new one was ready to get underway, and he expected the prices to continue showing a summertime decline.

On the statewide average, prices for self-serve regular unleaded gasoline had dropped 1 cent to $1.131 per gallon. Prices for mid-grade and premium unleaded were down .7 cent.

"We may finally be seeing the results of low crude oil prices and the traditional mid-summer lapse in demand for gasoline," Schroder said. "Both factors would tend to lower prices at the pump."

Across Florida, the highest self-service gasoline prices recorded by AAA were in the Palm Beach area, were premium unleaded gas was averaging $1.410 per gallon. Lowest prices were in Port Richey, at $1.268 per gallon.

On the west coast, prices at the gas pumps reportedly dropped nearly a penny a gallon over the past two weeks, continuing an unusual downward trend during the traditional peak summer driving season.

A Los Angeles survey indicated national average prices, including all grades and taxes, were 114.57 cents a gallon, down 0.92 cents from two weeks earlier and down 1.99 cents from a month ago. The statistics were supplied in the Aug. 6 Lundberg Survey of 10,000 gas stations nationwide.

The drop was caused by lower prices for crude oil and wholesale gasoline, industry analyst Trilby Lundberg said Sunday.

"However, the wholesale market is falling a bit less rapidly than it was in our past few surveys, suggesting we may be nearing the end of the price cuts," she said.

According to the bi-weekly survey, average prices at self-serve pumps were: regular unleaded 107.63 cents; mid-grade unleaded 118.94 cents; premium unleaded 126.80 cents; and regular leaded 109.84 cents.

At full-serve pumps, which account for less than 5 percent of sales nationally, the averages were: regular unleaded 145.17 cents; mid-grade unleaded 154.10 cents; premium unleaded 161.04 cents; and regular leaded 137.83 cents.

Regulators ask for closer look at power alternatives

By BILL BERGSTROM
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Florida should look harder at likely environmental damage and alternate electricity sources before building new power plants, environmental officials say.

A Department of Environmental Protection report to be submitted at Thursday's meeting of the governor and Cabinet recommends changing power plant licensing and the way utility profits are determined.

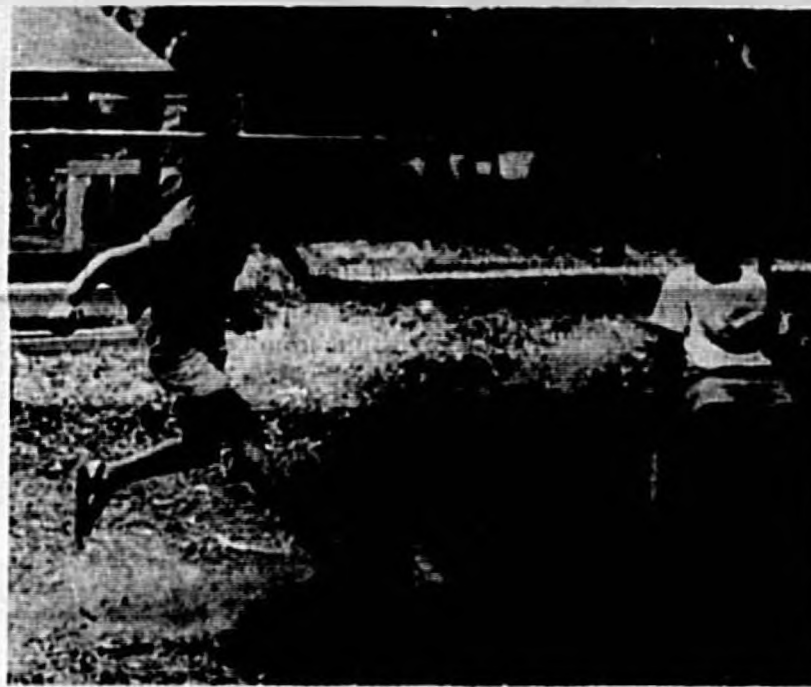

The state would need fewer plants if utility profits didn't depend on how much power they sell, said the report by DEP assistant general counsel Richard Donelan Jr.

Utility representatives argued that customers may balk at possible higher costs of avoiding environmental harm, and the state Public Service Commission said it is already looking at some of the recommended changes.

Currently, every kilowatt sold adds to earnings, every kilowatt saved or replaced from alternative sources cuts earnings, and conservation is discouraged, said Donelan's report.

"It is reasonable to assume that any reasonable utility will attempt to maximize its profits by selling as many kilowatt hours as it can; if a utility can build a new plant and sell that plant's output, it will do that, too," the report said.

Profits can be "decoupled" from sales. Since 1978, California has based utility profits on revenue needs: if sales exceed utility revenue needs, customers get rebates, and if sales are less than expected they're billed for surcharges to make up the shortfall.

Switched at birth trial nears its conclusion

By JAMES MARTINEZ
Associated Press Writer

SARASOTA — When Kimberly Mays cried on the stand last week, it drew only blank stares from the biological parents who have pursued her since a hospital baby swap came to light five years ago.

"I saw no emotion from them," Robert Mays, the man who raised Kimberly from birth, said during a break. "I would think that somebody who loves and cares for her as much as they claim they love and care for her would show more emotion than that."

Such is the bad blood that has simmered through the trial that will leave a judge with the Solomon-like quandary of how, or if, to divide a 14-year-old girl between two feuding families.

The trial before Circuit Judge Stephen Dakan was expected to end with closing arguments either late today or Tuesday.

But first, court-appointed psychologist Herbert Goldstein was slated to testify in favor of Kimberly getting a "divorce" from birth parents Ernest and Regina Twigg.

Kimberly wants to cut all ties to the Twiggs and remain with Mays, the man she has known as her father since the 1978 swap at a rural Florida hospital.

The Twiggs want visiting rights.

Goldstein has already submitted a report saying Mrs. Twigg has psychological problems that result in her putting her needs ahead of her child's.

Kimberly has said she turned so adamantly against the Twiggs because of Mrs. Twigg's suspicions that Mays was somehow involved in the hospital baby switch. Mrs. Twigg also participated with the author of a book last year that portrayed Mays as an abusive father.

The switch occurred at a hospital in nearby Wauchula when identification tags were somehow exchanged, sending Kimberly and another baby girl home with the wrong parents.

Study: Older drivers with health risks continue driving

By Associated Press

CLEARWATER — Many older people keep driving when they know they have medical conditions that could impair their performance, a new study indicates.

Half of those with Parkinson's disease said they continued to drive, as did two-thirds of those who suffered a stroke in the past year or passed out, according to the Florida Geriatric Research Program in Clearwater and the University of Florida.

To Dr. William Hale, director of the geriatric program, the findings indicate doctors need to establish medical standards to advise older patients when it is time to stop driving.

Drivers were asked if they suffered from conditions that "would seem to preclude safe driving."

The study noted people with recent strokes, Parkinson's disease, hospitalization and some eye problems were more likely to quit driving than others.

Cold War bunker way become museum

By Associated Press

PEANUT ISLAND — The scenario could have been straight from a Cold War thriller based on the Kennedy years.

With Soviet missiles on their way in a nuclear attack on the United States, the president, his family and top aides take a speedboat to this tiny island.

They open a heavy steel door in the side of a knoll and walk down a long tunnel. After showing in a sealed decontamination chamber, the president sits at a thick oak desk in the corner of his underground command post and plots America's response.

That Cold War scene was never played out, of course, but the physical setting was real enough.

Right after the Cuban missile crisis in October 1962, the Secret Service and the U.S. Navy built a secret command post under a hillock on Peanut Island, across the Intra-coastal Waterway from the Kennedy estate on Palm Beach, and stocked it with food and water.

"He would have been all set up to be on a hotline, to communicate with anywhere in the world," said John Grant, founder and president of the Palm Beach Maritime Museum at the nearby Port of Palm Beach.

The bunker was abandoned after Kennedy's assassination in November 1963. It has since served mostly as a curiosity for visitors, and for vandals who knew how to find it while avoiding the U.S. Coast Guard station that shares the island.

Now, Grant and some volunteers are scraping three decades' of grime and rot from inside the 25-by-50-foot bunker in hopes of restoring it as part of the Maritime Museum. George Milldrag, a Detroit automotive engineer with a home in Palm Beach, is financing the $250,000 project.

A bigger challenge than the restoration is the effort to chronicle the bunker's brief official history. Grant told The Sun-Sentinel of Fort Lauderdale.

A friend of the Kennedys received the oak desk as a gift years ago and has offered it to the museum. Otherwise, Grant can only speculate how the bunker was furnished. And he has not yet found anyone who saw the inside during the Kennedy years.

"We've gone to every source we can think of," Grant said. "Nobody has anything."

Kennedy aides Theodore Sorenson and Arthur Schlesinger and National Security Advisor McGeorge Bundy all said last week they knew nothing of it.

However secret the bunker was then, Grant now wants it to stand out as a memory to Cold War era. When finished, visitors will see a video on the missile crisis and get a glimpse of what could have been the nerve center of the free world.

"It should give an aura of the time," Grant said. "It'll give an indelible impression to people who visit there."

Keep tabs on politicians' voting records

Representatives and Senators voted generally along party lines regarding President Clinton's compromise tax bill. Pressure by lobbyists failed to convince hardly any of them to change direction.

With a Democrat in the White House, democrats supported the plan. Many of these same people opposed a different plan last year, when it was presented by a Republican president.

It is clearly a case of decisions being made by political parties. It was not based on the will of the people, or as the case may be, based on individual legislator's beliefs supported by the clear understanding of a proposal. We suspect many in our nation's leaders voted without a full understanding of the pros and cons of the president's bill.

Here at home, citizens observe the activities which will have a serious effect on our tax dollars. Regardless of the decision, an immediate response is to argue about it with someone who has an opposing view. Others may seek sympathy and support from people of similar beliefs.

A few may even phone a call-in talk-show and vent their frustration about the events in Washington, during a nationwide gripe-fest.

None of this, however, will bring about one iota of difference. This is a situation where talking serves very little purpose.

The response, whether in the form of objection or approval, must be made in the voting booth. Regardless of party affiliation, if a person disagrees with the way a lawmaker has voted, and there is reason to believe the public's welfare is not being protected, he or she should not be re-elected.

This practice should be carried into the state and local government elections as well.

When election time draws near, candidates will be jumping up and down on their platforms expounding on their good points. These are certainly worth considering when making a choice.

What is often overlooked however, is the way unfavorable votes may have been made during the previous term in office. By election time, politicians who may seek re-election try to smooth these over.

People should begin to formulate the direction of their voting at the next election today. Pay attention to what those in office do. If they don't give the people logical reasons for their actions, it's time to ask why.

If mistakes were made in choices at the polls last November, it's good to know we will eventually have the opportunity to correct them, on election day.

LETTERS

Defending Younger

I would like to respond to a letter attacking Evelyn Younger which appeared in the July 18th Letters to the Editor.

Ms. Younger had questioned why the Humane Society of Seminole County appeared on the television evening news on June 16th soliciting donations because they were, quote, "almost broke," when two days later, in an updated newspaper article it was stated that since the night of the fire on April 14th, almost $780,000 in bequests and donations had been received. Ms. Younger simply wanted to know where all this money could have gone. How can this be deemed the ranting of a bitter woman?

I have known Ms. Younger for 10 years. She is a very religious woman and is extremely active in her church. She is also a very generous woman, giving freely of her time for many a worthy cause.

She had been involved in animal welfare for many years and established an animal rescue organization in Puerto Rico before her move to Orlando 22 years ago. It was Evelyn and several other "forgotten" lifetime members who are responsible for the Humane Society of Seminole County being in existence. Her work for this organization up until 1992 is immeasurable. Her resignation was in part because of the unrestricted spending of donated money which eventually took this organization to the brink of bankruptcy in the fall of 1992.

To characterize Evelyn as a bitter woman is wanton hyperbole of the lowest caliber. Like so many others, she is deeply concerned about an organization that was once known for its honesty, truthfulness and impeccable cleanliness.

Stealing the First Amendment

Student journalists are used to defending themselves against threats of censorship from college administrators, but they have been unprepared for a new form of prior restraint.

In recent months, according to the Student Press Law Center in Washington, newspapers on at least 16 campuses have been stolen before they could get to their readers. Two thousand copies of the Yale Daily News Magazine disappeared in February. Its cover story, says the Law Center, was about the status of women in Yale's "Party of the Right," a debating society. There were no witnesses, and no evidence was left behind.

During three weeks at the beginning of April, the Dartmouth Review was taken from residence halls by members of the Dartmouth Afro-American society and the Black Freshmen Forum. Those thought police were objecting to what they called the Review's racist content.

A spokesman for Dartmouth College blithely said that everyone has a right to distribute publications in the residence halls, but Dartmouth has no responsibility to protect those materials. Besides, said a college official, the Dartmouth Review is "liter."

In the regular college daily, The Dartmouth,

Will Griffin, a junior, wrote that the dispute "makes it clear that neither the black race nor white race has a monopoly on fools. Ignorance transcends race and bridges the generation gap."

As happened at Yale, in the majority of thefts and destruction of newspapers, there has not been evidence on which to base a prosecution. And sometimes, the prosecutor isn't interested.

Last October, for instance, at Trenton State College in New Jersey, 5,000 copies of The Signal were stolen. As reported by the Student Press Law Center, "The papers were taken by supporters of a student representative on the board of trustees, who had been the target of a front-page campus investigation when she used a relative's ID to get into a campus pub. When the campus police questioned the county prosecutor's office, they were told that no one had broken any laws -- the newspapers were free.

Yet the First Amendment does not say that freedom of the press is guaranteed only if you have to pay for the newspaper.

At Southeastern Louisiana University in Hammond, La., the local prosecutor did become interested when, in March, 2,000 copies of The Lion's Roar were stolen. The alleged planner of the raid, Mark Morice, has been indicted for "criminal mischief."

Dori Colona, editor of the paper, tells me that the president of the university and members of the board of trustees have tried to persuade her to drop the charges.

The person indicted is the student member of the Board of Trustees of State Colleges and Universities, which runs most of Louisiana's public colleges. He was also president of the Student Government Association, and the issue of the paper that disappeared included an article critical of that organization.

Dori Colona insists, however, that "a wrong was committed here. Not just by my staff but to the entire university community."

Unified Europe relies on U.S.

Secretary of State Warren Christopher has been winging back and forth across the globe with unflagging energy if meager results. His apparent object has been to demonstrate by motion and word what he has not yet been able to prove with sustained deed, which is that the United States is and intends to remain totally engaged in the world. Nowhere is the need for such proof more evident than in Europe, which is unraveling almost as quickly as U.S. forces are coming home from their former NATO ramparts.

The evidence is readily available in the daily newspapers and evening network reports, but it was emphatically driven home for me in a recent trip to Europe. A central theme, repeated at several stops and from widely disparate sources, was that a Europe without active American participation is a Europe bound for disintegration.

The pessimism I encountered was as remarkable for its overnight emergence as it was for its depth and breadth. Less than two years ago, it was widely predicted that 1993 would usher in a mighty new Europe with a unified currency, vast common market and coordinated foreign policy. Instead, this year seems to be the harbinger of a modern version of the old Europe of ethnic hatreds, petty provincialism, and the cyclical settling of old scores.

Everyone is daily made aware of the problems of the Balkans. What is less fully appreciated is how much events there have evolved in their present form precisely because Western Europe has itself detoured into the swamp of nationalism.

Germany, once the engine of European unity, has turned inward, drawn there by the economic, psychological and political consequences of reunification. Its troubles are a reminder that you should be careful about what you wish for. Two generations of passionate hunger for reunification and a few short years of exhilaration after the fall of the Berlin Wall have been subsumed by a sea of contemporary troubles. It will take another generation before the former Communist-run territories are fully absorbed and integrated. In the meantime, Germany dreams no big dreams of a pan-European era.

France has never been fond of real European union and even less entranced with the Atlantic partnership. Its foreign policy has been built upon the twin pillars of close association with Germany on the Continent and independent action everywhere else. With a divided government and lame duck president, France today is a sodden, sullen lump of grievances. When it takes a hand in current events, it is as often to play Puck's bad boy as to offer constructive solutions.

Great Britain has always looked first toward the "special connection" with Washington and only then, quite reluctantly, across the English Channel. Parliament's recent brush with de facto rejection of the treaty of European unity is evidence not only of Prime Minister John Major's political impotence but of Britain's fundamental ambivalence about Europe. In London, Yugoslavia is seen as a "distant" land, though Iraq, much farther away, was considered a fit subject for military action two years ago.

All of this is being played out against the background of American withdrawal from its forward military position in Europe. What was once a NATO-committed force of 500,000 will soon be less than one-third that number. Congressmen and commentators alike frequently warn Europeans that the day is not far distant when 50,000 men will be the outside limit of our force level there.

Much of this is the normal result of the collapse of the Soviet Union. Much is driven by America's budgetary difficulties. Whatever the reason, the American presence is shrinking rapidly, and with it, American influence. As we pull back, we are viewed less and less as protector and ally, more and more as competitor and distant scold.

"You have to understand that without the United States, there is no Europe," a distinguished political-military analyst advised me in Denmark. "The Atlantic Alliance is central to the exercise of European unity. If you do not lead, if you do not maintain a vigorous presence here, 'Europe' does not exist."

His comments were in reply to a question about the failure of the major European powers to take decisive action in the former Yugoslavia. As he, and at least three other people with whom I talked, saw it, the United States was being unrealistic when it looked to Paris, Berlin and London for leadership. Europe has never been able to forge a common front in the absence of American pressure, participation and ideas. Take away the United States, they said, and you undermine European unity.

The answer is not American rhetoric, but sustained American policy. The Clinton administration should not have asked Europe to tell it what should be done in the Balkans, for instance. It should have devised a policy and then forcefully sold it, refusing to take no for an answer.

A Europe without active American participation is a Europe bound for disintegration.

Gibbons prepares to succeed Rostenkowski

WASHINGTON — The man Tampa, Fla., residents call "Silent Sam" may soon become a booming voice on Capitol Hill.

For more than a quarter century, Sam Gibbons, D-Fla., has worked in the shadows of other representatives on the powerful House Ways and Means Committee. If current Ways and Means Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., is the pit bull of the House, Sam Gibbons may be its poodle.

Friends and foes alike describe him as Capitol Hill's nice guy. Even his campaigns are free from mudslinging and marked by civility — not exactly the prototype for a leader of the most powerful committee in the House.

If Rostenkowski, who's under investigation for embezzlement, is indicted and forced to relinquish the chairmanship, Gibbons would become interim chairman of the chief tax-writing committee in the House. Rostenkowski has been under investigation for allegedly scheming to exchange postage stamps and vouchers for $20,000 cash at the House post office.

The specter of losing Rostenkowski has the administration and congressional staffers fretting. The White House had counted on Rostenkowski to be its field general for some major domestic priorities in the coming months, notably health care reform and the North American Free Trade Agreement.

On health care, Gibbons' ideas clash with the administration, having proposed a plan that would expand Medicare to cover everyone, in effect creating a single-payer system. Even on free trade, which Gibbons has supported for decades, he was passed over in favor of fellow committee member Robert Matsui, D-Calif., as the committee's chief vote-getter on NAFTA.

Political speculation in the House has centered on the possibility of a more collective leadership at Ways and Means if Gibbons becomes chairman. Nagging doubts about Gibbons' leadership have led some to speculate that longtime committee member Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., would be picking up some of the slack on major issues. If Rostenkowski's troubles ultimately drive him from office, Rangel might end up challenging Gibbons for the chairmanship.

"(Gibbons) is part of a smallish, somewhat diminishing clique of Southern and South-Central Democrats on Ways and Means who are for things like capital gains (tax cuts)," one senior congressional staffer said. "They do not represent the mainstream of the committee, and Gibbons is very much their leader. He doesn't have a major voice in Congress, and is rarely heard from except when his vote is vital."

Gibbons won't speculate on Rostenkowski's future, but the prospect of taking over Ways and Means has been a goal since he joined the committee 25 years ago.

"I've wanted to be chairman ever since I've been here," Gibbons told our associate Jan Moller. Though he and Rostenkowski have clashed at times over the years, it's doubtful that Gibbons ever wanted to rise at Rostenkowski's expense.

On the possibilities open to him should a leadership change occur, Gibbons will only say that "the longer one stays here, the more one learns not to take anything for granted."

With speculation running high about Rostenkowski's future, Gibbons' campaign coffers have been overflowing. Campaign contributions are the lifeblood of incumbency in Congress, and Gibbons appears to be taking full advantage of his peculiar position.

The man Tampa residents call 'Silent Sam' may soon become a booming voice on Capitol Hill.

Some services returning after big 'quake in Guam

By The Associated Press

AGANA, Guam — Power and water service was being restored today as damage assessment teams spread across this U.S. territory, shaken by one of the strongest earthquakes of the century.

Cars tumbled from bridges and buildings were damaged on the west Pacific island, but — unlike other great quakes — no deaths or life-threatening injuries were reported from Sunday's temblor, which measured 8.1 to 8.2 on the Richter scale.

"I was up on the second floor and I thought the building was going to collapse. That's how big the earthquake was," said Civil Defense Director Joe Terfaje. "It was really scary. Everybody was screaming."

Some 49 people were treated for quake-related injuries, mostly bumps, bruises and cuts, Guam Memorial Hospital administrator Peter John Camacho said today.

The Tafolofol Bridge collapsed and several others were declared unsafe, said Public Works Director Benigno Palomo.

Cars tumbled on bridges and there were reports of rock and land slides, said police Lt. Phil Dennis.

A number of hotels sustained structural damage, including the Guam Hilton, where Betty Marie Bolton was working at the reception desk when she heard a loud noise.

"Then I started feeling the earth move and shake," she said. "I ran out of the hotel into the street. I thought I was going to be swallowed up."

Firefighters had to break down doors to free some guests at the Royal Palm Hotel after two floors collapsed, said Jon Anderson of radio station KGUM.

The temblor brought an island-wide blackout, but most of the island had electricity back by this afternoon. Full service was expected to be restored by the end of the day, according to Civil Defense Agency spokesman Carl Gumataotao.

Running water was restored to some areas of the island, but Public Utilities Agency official Pete Camacho said it could take two days to restore full service because of broken water lines.

Damage assessment teams had yet to compile a dollar estimate of the damage, Gumataotao said.

The 60-second quake struck around 6:35 p.m. Sunday (4:35 a.m. EDT Sunday). Its epicenter was 50 miles west-southwest of Agana, the capital.

The quake, in an area known for strong tremors, measured 8.1 on the Richter scale, said Frank Baldwin of the National Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo. Suzanna Loper of the University of California Seismographic Station at Berkeley said the quake measured 8.2.

Several aftershocks were reported, the largest measuring 5.5, said Marvin Carlson of the earthquake center. More were expected.

Guam, population 133,000, is located west of the international date line, some 3,800 miles west of Hawaii and 1,500 miles south of Japan. The island is 30 miles long and 8 miles across at its widest point.

The Richter scale is a gauge of the energy released by an earthquake as measured by ground motion. A magnitude 8 earthquake is considered great and capable of tremendous damage.

The last great earthquake was one measuring 8.2 in the Macquarie Islands in the South Pacific on May 23, 1989, said Stuart Koyanagi of the National Earthquake Information Center. A quake of 9.5, the largest on record, was measured off the coast of Chile in 1960, he said.

Guam was still recovering from last summer's Typhoon Omar, which destroyed 2,000 homes and caused $250 million damage.

Lawyers: limiting damages won't lower doctors' fees

By LAURIE ASSEO
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — Limiting damage awards to people injured by medical malpractice does not necessarily hold down the overall cost of health care, say lawyers who argue against such laws.

"Caps on medical malpractice claims will make no significant impact on the cost of health care," said Daniel Sevart of Wichita, Kan., one of more than 12,000 lawyers attending the American Bar Association's annual meeting.

Chicago personal-injury lawyer Philip H. Corboy added: "I've never found any victim who has been seriously injured and believes that their damages should be limited to some arbitrary figure of $250,000."

"This is really a fight between consumers who happen to be victims of civil wrongs and the insurance companies representing the health care industry," Corboy said. "I know the complaint (from doctors): They only have one Mercedes."

Many states in recent years have set limits on so-called non-economic damages in medical malpractice cases. Such damages are intended either to punish health-care providers who caused the injury or to compensate victims for non-financial losses such as pain and suffering. States don't limit actual financial losses, such as hospital costs and lost earnings.

For some people — such as a homemaker who is blinded — non-economic damages are the main loss they suffer, Corboy said.

The ABA has long opposed limits on non-economic damages, and a working group released a report Sunday that said states with such limits are not seeing any overall drop in their health care costs.

"Caps on non-economic damages have not had the dramatic impact that supporters think," said Clifford D. Stromberg of Washington, chairman of the ABA's working group of health care reform.

Massachusetts and California, which do limit such damages, saw their per-capita health care costs double between 1982 and 1990, the report said. Per-capita costs rose by about 95 percent in Arkansas, Kentucky and Mississippi, which do not have limits.

Medical malpractice insurance premiums are less than 1 percent of overall health costs, while administrative costs are one-fourth of the overall health care tab, Stromberg said.

"So if you really want a bang for the buck, (administrative costs are) where you look for the reforms," he said.

Sevart said only a small number of lawsuits result in large damage awards. The vast majority of medical malpractice cases are won by the defense or result in relatively small damage awards or settlements, he said.

Justin L. Vigdor of Rochester, N.Y., said he might favor some limits on malpractice damage awards if they were coupled with other changes, such as limits on the amount of money doctors can spend to defend against malpractice lawsuits.

Vigdor also suggested changes in trial procedures to shorten lawsuits and provide quicker payment for injuries.

"If they could develop a nice package of those things, that might be a fair approach to health care reform," Vigdor said.

Many lawyers expressed support for a health care plan that would provide coverage for all Americans.

He has also entered the political arena, and ran as a Democratic candidate for Congress in 1976.

Regarding his position in life, Sursely said, "I've always been positive and upbeat. All my life, the word 'no' to me has meant, 'I don't understand. Please explain to me why I can't do this.' I've never shied away from anything because I thought it might not work. Sure, there's pain associated with thoughts of where you were before, having two legs and two arms. But I'll take what I have today, an opportunity to work, my family, wife and kids."

He added, "How much better could it be? You could always wonder why, but it would be a waste of time."

"He apparently knocked both the woman and child to the ground," Whitmire continued, "but a man and woman who were in the area helped pull him away from Frank. She then ran into a nearby store, where the employees locked the door and attempted to protect her."

"When the police arrived," he said, "they reported finding Cox in front of the store, banging on the glass door, trying to get in."

Cox was charged with attempted kidnapping, battery, and child abuse.

Whitmire said at the time of the arrest, police had determined Cox was on probation in Georgia. "He apparently had a violent crime history," Whitmire commented, "so the arresting officer made note of that when he filed his report."

new academy program. As with a magnet school, students will come from all over the school district to study at the academy. Students had to apply and be accepted to attend the academy.

The entrance requirements were based heavily on a student's willingness to commit four years to the program. Grades were secondary to that commitment, according to principal Gretchen Schapker.

"The students have to be willing to stay in the program for the full time," she said. "We don't want students who are just trying it on for size."

The district will provide transportation to those who must travel from across the district to attend school at Seminole.

Director Nancy Julian is excited about the academy and the opportunities that it will bring to students.

"The students will be prepared for the workplace by the time

The cooperative program will blend the academies with technical training and on-the-job work experience at local hospitals like IICA Central Florida Regional Hospital and at institutions of higher learning like Seminole Community College.

They also pointed out a need to correct the problem of accessing, manipulating and sharing information about students.

They said they felt technology could be better used to communicate and manage parent and community information and resources.

They found an inconsistent and incomplete instructional database.

The committee will recommend a plan that will cost the district between $3.5 and $5.1 million over the next three years.

They believe, however, that the money would be well spent as it will improve the district's efficiency, reduce paperwork, increase teacher effectiveness, better prepare students, improve communications and the attitudes of the students and staff and that it will improve school image and the access to information.

The committee said that the commitment to the technology for administrative use is not "instead of" a commitment to instructional technology.

"Information technology is a platform on which to continue to build as the district moves toward the strategic plan goal of infusing technology into all areas of instruction and operations of the district," the report concluded.

The committee will present its plan to the board at the meeting on Tuesday at 3:30 p.m. The board meets at the district headquarters, 1211 Mellonville Ave., Sanford.

The matter will be presented for initial consideration at the Sanford City Commission meet-

The Sanford City Commission meeting will begin at 7 p.m., this evening, in the Sanford City Hall, 300 N. Park Avenue, in Sanford.

'Kampers' enjoy arts, nature

SARABECCA ROSIER
Herald Columnist

During the week of July 26 through July 30, Kid's Kamp at Holy Cross has been a beehive of activity. The Kid's Kamp was offered in partnership with the Orlando Science Center and the Orlando Museum of Art. It was for boys and girls entering kindergarten through 6th grade in the fall of 1992. Camp hours were from 9 a.m. until 2 p.m. with After Care available from 2 p.m. until 6 p.m.

Each day the campers experienced the arts, nature works and drama. Cheryl Faben, instructor from the Orlando Museum of Art, taught the children shapes, forms and colors. They were studying the artist Georgia O'Keeffe, who died seven years ago. O'Keeffe was one of the most esteemed American artists of the 20th century. She was also one of the major leaders of the American modernism movement.

Some of the accomplishments during this week by the campers were windsocks, a combined project of a pre-Columbian doorway and a large collection of thumb print art hung on hangars around the room.

The campers were anxious to explain that the thumb print art was made because they were studying the work of Chuck Close, the artist who became a paralytic and painted with paintbrushes strapped to his arms. He also started making thumb prints and turning them into animals, clowns and other things. The campers made a variety of different animals with their thumb prints, such as bears, rabbits, cats, dogs and many more. They also made people and clowns out of their thumb prints. On Wednesday, July 28, the campers learned to draw a toucan and after their instruction, Cheryl Faben reviewed their pencil work, they were going to color the toucan.

Midweek into camp, the nature works or science campers were studying earthworms. We had a little catastrophe yesterday, said instructor Deirdre Englehart from the Orlando Science Center. We were going to take home some worms as pets but they got away or didn't make it. We are now reading all about worms to see what happened so we can learn from our mistakes.

In the drama camp, the campers participated in dramatic experiences through a variety of theater related activities, including games and a special presentation they were preparing for their Friday evening performance. The dramatic play was presented by Jeff and Rachel Hoyer, members of New York City Theater Group. For the four to six year old group, the goal was to have them learn to cooperate with each other,

Lake Mary lifeguards make splash at the local YMCA

Splash Splash, she's not taking a bath. In fact, she can be seen either lifeguarding or instructing swim lessons at the YMCA in Lake Mary. Actually, "she" is Heather Cohen. Heather is a 1992 graduate of Lake Mary High School and a sophomore Reptile at the University of Florida in Gainesville.

This is Heather's second consecutive year at the "Y" and she is loving it. "I love working here at the 'Y' for many reasons, mostly the kids also. I get a great tan and — oh yes, the wonderful personnel I work with!" said an enthusiastic Heather. She continued, "I've said it before and I'll say it again, nothing gives me greater pleasure than to take a child who has never swam and see them turn into little fish in just two weeks of lessons. With so many lakes and pools in the Seminole County area, I cannot stress enough to parents the importance of being able to swim regardless of your age."

Heather has spent her entire summer attending SCC (Seminole Community College) taking summer classes in addition to working. When not at the Y or SCC, Heather can be seen running around the Longwood Lake Mary area. "I run an average of about six miles per day." In addition, Heather is playing indoor soccer with a group of her old teammates from Lake Mary High School. Heather said she is anxious to return to Gainesville and resume classes there, as she is really enjoying the University of Florida. Her mom's comment to that is "hip hip hooray!" "Honestly," she said, "Heather will be greatly missed around home."

The other lifeguard at the YMCA in Lake Mary is Travis Crawford. Travis is going to be a junior at Lake Mary High School. He enjoys football and wrestling and is on the honor roll. Travis said, "I really do enjoy working with the kids at the Y, and this is my first year at the Y as a lifeguard. I would like to do this from now on each summer. I enjoy giving swim lessons and instructions in life saving. The classes are small, five to seven people in a class ranging in age from infant to adult."

Barter and business

On Thursday, July 29, between the hours of 5:30 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. the Greater Lake Mary Heathrow, a member of Commerce, held their Business After Hours at Dorco's International Restaurant.

This After Hours was hosted by a new member in the chamber, The EXchange, Scott M. Whitmer. The president of the EXchange, Whitmer said, "I began this business 11 years ago and have over 1150 business owners who participate by exchanging their products and services to offset normal cash expenses." The EXchange became a new member of the chamber by exchanging their membership fee to join and the chamber will benefit by obtaining office equipment through The EXchange.

The EXchange showroom is located on Edgewater Drive in Orlando. The showroom is unusual in that it does not accept cash. It is open only for bartering. Whitmer lives what he preaches. He wears starched monogrammed shirts, jewelry, sharp shoes — all purchased with trade dollars. Whitmer left a career in Chicago 11 years ago to start a barter franchise. He took the company independent two years later when the parent company failed. The EXchange is now one of the 10 largest barter houses in the county. Before money was invented bartering was the only way to go. But each party had to want the other party's products or services.

At the EXchange if the client cannot find anything it needs but has something to offer, it can receive trade credits, trade dollars for use on future purchases. Members receive a monthly statement of transactions and trade credit balances.

Whitmer is also a real estate agent and offers clients no money down real estate financing. He approaches home owners with purchase offers in which the buyers' down payment is payable in trade dollars.

It works well when the seller wants to move the property, Whitmer said. "It's a win-win situation. You have an anxious seller and a buyer without cash."

Bartering isn't for everyone. Only businesses can join The EXchange and companies peddling high profit goods and services benefit the most. Whitmer said. For example, consumer electronics and tires are low margin products difficult to trade for while accountants, ad agencies and restaurants have big margins. Also, companies can't trade for utility bills, salary, rent and many other fixed overhead costs. A company has to earn cash for those expenses. No clients can use modern barter exchanges to avoid sales and income tax. The EXchange must submit reports to the Internal Revenue Service on its clients' barter sales.

This Chamber After Hours was well attended. Not only did guests have a chance to network and meet old and new friends, they also ate well. There was a beautiful array of food consisting of fruit salad, spicy cold pasta salad, mixed green salad, heated turkeys filled with Chicken Scarpiello with rotini pasta, ravioli with Dorco's marinara sauce, blackened Chicken Orleans, lemon pepper grouper with yellow rice and sugar grape peas prepared by Dorco's Chef Sandra Aravey, who has been with them for one year and four months.

Tribe girls to participate in UCF camp

By TONY DeSORMIER
 Herald Sports Editor

SANFORD — While the start of their academic school year is still a couple of weeks away, the athletic school year for Seminole High School's girls volleyball team starts in earnest Tuesday.

By the end of the week, the Seminoles may be looking forward to getting back to school just to get a break.

"The girls are going to the camp at the University of Central Florida all this week," said Seminole coach Beth Corso. "In all, we've got 21 kids going to the camp. All the varsity players are going and several of our incoming freshmen are going as well."

Among the returning players from last year's varsity team expected to participate in the UCF camp include Catherine Foye, Yuleyma Otero, Jill Jasewic, and Kelly Richards.

According to Corso, it'll be a full week for the Tribe netters.

"The camp goes from Tuesday through Saturday," Corso said. "They'll be playing volleyball 12 hours a day."

Corso and her Seminoles, both the junior varsity and varsity squads, will begin practice for the start of their season next Monday, Aug. 16, at 10 a.m. A preseason jamboree involving the six Seminole County public schools is scheduled for the week of Aug. 30.

Seminole will open its 1993 campaign with a pair of matches on the road, playing at Deland on Tuesday, Sept. 7, and going to Leesburg on Wednesday, Sept. 8.

The Tribe will compete in 4A-District 6 this year along with Kissimmee-Gateway, Leesburg, Orlando-Cypress Creek, and St. Cloud. The district tournament will be played the week of Oct. 25.

Two of the four returners from Seminole's 1992 varsity volleyball team are Jill Jasewic (No. 34, left) and Yuleyma Otero (No. 5). The others are Catherine Foye and Kelly Richards. On Tuesday, the Tribe will begin their 1993 season by taking part in the University of Central Florida camp.

Martin wins in spite of lug nut snafu

By MIKE HARRIS
 AP Motorsports Writer

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. — Engines occasionally blow up and race cars run out of gas sometimes. Soft lug nuts, however, are not supposed to lose a race.

Mark Martin thought his racing team found yet another creative way to lose Sunday, the latest problem in a season when the fates have seemed to conspire against him.

The record-setting pole winner for the Budweiser at the Glen certainly had the fastest car all day, leading the 90-lap, 220.5-mile race four times for a total of 47 laps and seemingly passing any other competitor in the 38-car field at will.

But twice the 34-year-old Martin found himself sitting helplessly in the pits during what should have been routine caution-period stops while his team strained to take off a damaged lug nut and get his tires changed.

In the end, however, Kyle Petty and Dale Earnhardt had the bad luck, crashing together just six laps from the end, allowing Martin to drive his Ford Thunderbird through.

Wyche not bothered by Bucs' bomb

By FRED GOODALL
 AP Sports Writer

TAMPA — It'll take more than a poor performance in the first exhibition game to shake coach Sam Wyche's confidence in his Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

Bucs quarterbackbacks were a combined 18-for-35 passing and threw five interceptions in Saturday night's 23-7 preseason-opening loss to the Denver Broncos.

The Broncos returned two interceptions for touchdowns and used two others to set up the rest of their points as Wyche's plan to give his No. 1 quarterback a chance to pull out a victory in the fourth quarter failed.

"I don't care what the scoreboard said, we're looking at a better football team," the coach said Sunday.

"The test is not how you came out of the first preseason game, but how you handled it and whether you moved on and got better ... The first game is over, and now we move on."

Wyche held Steve DeBerg out of the game until the fourth quarter.

What will it take to get you to wear a helmet?

Dummies. Is that a little harsh? How about fools or dolts?

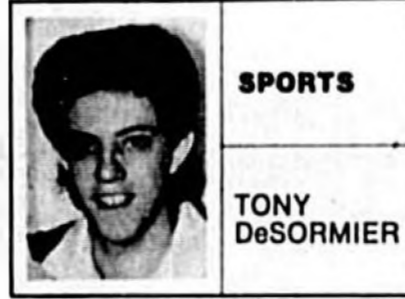

Those are the most polite words I can find (and the only ones I can use in a family newspaper) to describe those individuals who choose to ride bicycles in traffic without the proper safety equipment, namely, helmets.

Dummies, dummies, dummies. Who am I to pass judgement? I'm someone who got knocked down by a Mercedes Benz while riding his bike through Winter Park last week and probably escaped serious injury because he was wearing his helmet.

To give you some context, I ride regularly, often three times a week, and have for several years. I feel very confident riding on main streets, often navigating my way through lunch-hour traffic.

It's not as dangerous as it may sound, especially when following the rules of the road: signal for turns, ride to the extreme right side of the road, obey traffic signals, maintain a position of high visibility, and always be checking the traffic around you.

All that, I still got knocked down. Accidents happen. That's why I always ... always wear a helmet. If my daughter goes with me, she wears her helmet. As a matter of fact, she's on her second helmet, having outgrown the one she wear as an infant.

SPORTS

It's saved her a couple of times. About 18 months ago, I hit a crack in the asphalt and we fell. I was able to break my fall some, the fact that she was belted into her seat and was wearing a helmet protected her.

One time, she fell asleep while we were out on a ride. She dropped her head off to one side, the top of her helmet extending just beyond the back of her seat. I didn't realize it at the time and passed too close to a bush. The sound a branch made biting the helmet scared me to death; she never noticed it. I cannot overemphasize the importance of wearing a helmet when two-wheeling.

Last weekend, the other local daily newspaper conducted a telephone poll asking whether or not it should be mandatory for children to wear helmets when bicycling. Over 70 percent of the callers said that they should.

It should go further than that: all bicyclists, children and adult, should be required to wear helmets. In fact, I wonder if that's not an extension of the law requiring motorcyclists to wear helmets. After all, bicycles are considered vehicles by the state of Florida and are subject to the same laws.

Why is riding a bicycle on the street without a helmet any different than riding a motorcycle without a helmet? It shouldn't be.

It appears that the biggest problem with getting adults and children to wear helmets is a distant cousin to the resistance baseball and football players had to the wearing of helmets in their sports.

Can you imagine either sport without helmets today? Helmets should be as second-nature in bicycling; riders should put them on with no more thought than they give to putting on their shoes.

Adults could advance helmet use among children, primarily by serving as good examples and wear helmets themselves. It's amazing how adults miss the incongruity of trying to get kids to do something while not doing it themselves.

Schools, especially middle schools, could play a significant role in the education of students regarding appropriate safety equipment for bicycling. High schools have automobile drivers' education classes, so why couldn't middle schools have bicycle riders' education classes?

Ultimately, helmets should be a necessity whenever you leave your yard for a ride, adult or child. Common sense should tell you how potentially dangerous the activity is, especially if you're going to be riding in or near traffic.

But it appears that's not the case. Earlier tonight, I saw an adult male and two young girls out for a Sunday evening ride along U.S. 17-92. None of them were wearing a helmet.

St. Augustine grass is the best choice for Florida lawns

St. Augustine is one of the most popular lawn grasses used in this area. It is a fast growing warm season turfgrass that provides "the" look that most of desire in a lawn and it grows well on most well-drained soils. St. Augustine is considered a high maintenance turf that requires ample water and fertilizer for optimum quality. But it's still our best choice for shady areas.

Cultivars of St. Augustine differ in their resistance to plant pests. Only the cultivars Floratam and Floratam have tolerance to the southern chinch bug and sod webworm. Brown patch and grey leaf spot fungus can also cause damage. Proper lawn management practices are the best means of avoiding pest problems. Pests come in many forms and includes insects, diseases, weeds and nematodes.

Turfgrass quality depends on maintenance, in other words, how much time, money and energy are you willing to put into the lawn. These considerations dictate the amount of fertilizer and pesticides needed each year. To reduce maintenance requirements, lawns should be fertilized 2-3 times per year. To reduce the need for pesticides the lawn should be monitored weekly and spot treated if damage is excessive.

GARDENING

TRICIA THOMAS

Fertilizer should be applied at the rate of one pound of nitrogen per 1000 square feet per application (6.25 pounds 16-4-8 equals 1 pound nitrogen). The first application should follow spring green-up, the second in mid-summer and last in fall.

Although nitrogen is the element most commonly applied to turfgrass, other vital elements should be part of a fertilizer program. Complete fertilizers (N-P-K) containing micronutrients such as manganese, iron, sulfur, magnesium, and boron are also good choices, especially if micronutrient deficiencies are suspected. A slow release nitrogen source will extend nitrogen response and discourage rapid flushes of growth or nitrogen loss due to excessive rainfall. Using iron during summer instead of nitrogen will restore the dark green color without the undesirable flush of new growth. Remember excessive nitrogen at this time may encourage chinch bugs or disease development.

St. Augustine should be mowed at 3 inches or (as high as possible with a home rotary mower). Use only a sharp, balanced mower blade and return clippings on the lawn unless clumping occurs. If clippings are excessive, allow them to dry in the sun and scatter them by mowing, blowing, or raking. Clippings left on the lawn can supply 1-2 pounds of nitrogen to the lawn.

Frequent, intense rainfall is normal for this period. Thus, irrigation is needed only to supplement what Mother Nature provides and as-needed is best. Apply 1/4 inch of water at each irrigation and wait until the turf shows signs of wilting (blue-gray color or footprinting occurs) before irrigating again.

The best method to control weeds is through a healthy, vigorous turf. Applying any postemergence herbicides during summer may injure the turf. St. Augustine grass can be damaged by certain herbicides (MSMA, DSMA). Follow label directions and use all pesticides with caution. Do not apply herbicides unless grass and weeds are actively growing and not suffering from drought stress and air temperatures are below 85 degrees.

Check for chinch bugs by removing the ends of a coffee can, insert one end through the soil at the margin of damaged areas and fill with water. Chinch bugs will float to the surface within 5 minutes. Check for additional insects such as armyworms, sod webworms and mole crickets by mixing 1-2 ounces of dish soap in a 2-gallon sprinkling can full of water. Drench a 2 square foot area with soapy water. If insects are present, they will surface within minutes.

Important disease symptoms are usually expressed as circular brown patches, one to several feet in diameter or by yellow, brown or purplish spots individual leaves (gray leaf spot disease). Many times these result from over irrigation or excessive nitrogen fertilization. If damage is extensive a fungicide application may be necessary.

Call the Cooperative Extension Service office for the latest pesticide recommendations. And for more information about how to better care for your St. Augustine turf call our office at 323-2500 ext. 5550 or drop by the Ag. Center and ask for a copy of the St. Augustine Maintenance Calendar.

Oh, Quackers

A mother Muscovy duck recently led her little ones along the road on Seminole Boulevard near Lake Monroe in Sanford. The chicks, most of them still yellow and fluffy are beginning to darken and look more like their mother. The ducks cross the road at a designated spot on the street.

Reader finds smokers selfish

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago, Janice Wingard described smokers as "amiable and gracious." Don't make me laugh! How about selfish and inconsiderate?

Why does Ms. Wingard think we need legislation in order to protect the rights of non-smokers who wish to breathe clean air? Is it because smokers have absolutely no consideration for non-smokers?

Only now, in the 1990s, with the Environmental Protection Agency signing on to the report categorizing secondhand smoke as a "Class A carcinogen," are we beginning to recognize the rights of non-smokers who do not wish their health imperiled. Smoking is an addiction, folks! If you have any doubt about it, notice the smoker who goes out in zero-degree weather smoking a cigarette between his or her gloved fingers — and those who are unable to drive a car without cigarette in hand or mouth. Society owes no accommodation to those who choose an addiction. Also, when was the last time you saw someone smoking in a car who used an ashtray, rather than discarding the butt on the street for someone else to dispose of? You may use my name.

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

OREN M. SPIEGLER, PITTSBURGH

DEAR OREN M. SPIEGLER: You must be a new reader or you would know that I have little patience and even less compassion for smokers. The city of Los Angeles (population 3,433,600) recently outlawed smoking in public restaurants, but the restaurateurs were able to overturn that ruling. Stay tuned — the battle is not over yet. It's not easy fighting a multibillion-dollar industry.

DEAR ABBY: I used to stand outside liquor stores and wheedle customers who were over 21 into getting me what I wanted to drink. I am now paying for it. I am 21 years old and an alcoholic and drug addict. I thought drunks were old and smelly and living on the streets. I was young and clean, living at home with decent, churchgoing parents, but I got myself into a lot of trouble because I had an "addictive personality" and wasn't aware of it. I thought I was too young to be one of "them" — but I've learned how easy it is to become addicted. I'm proud to say that I have been sober for a year now, and the fun is just beginning.

As they say in A.A., "One day at a time"; things do get better.

I want to warn those adults who buy beer and liquor for minors: Please don't — it could be your kid.

WISED UP IN YAKIMA, WASH.

DEAR WISED UP: Thank you for wanting to "wise up" others. DEAR ABBY: There is a steak dinner riding on your answer. My sister says that you are divorced. I say that you are still with your husband of many years. I have read in your column what a great guy he is (Phillips?), and you have much praise for your in-laws. Please set the record straight.

HEATHER BARKLEY, BRIDGEMAN, ALA.

DEAR HEATHER BARKLEY: Your sister owes you a steak dinner. My husband, Morton Phillips, and I recently celebrated our 54th wedding anniversary.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a high school student, and since I constantly have to fill out forms (test forms, job, doctor, etc.), I have noticed something that bothers me. When you have to indicate "gender," "male" is always listed before "female." Why is this? Doesn't "F" come before "M" in the alphabet? I would like to see "female" first for once. Is there anyone you could consult to find out why this is? I would appreciate it because I am very curious.

FED UP IN NEWPORT BEACH

DEAR FED UP: Spoken like a true budding feminist. I acknowledge that the practice is usual and customary, but I don't see it as a put-down for women. (I almost said "the weaker sex"; Old habits die hard.)

Keeping up with bathroom hygiene

DEAR DR. GOTT: In health class many years ago I was advised not to sit down on a public toilet because of possible germ transmission. Two nurse friends indicate this is absolutely not true, that germs cannot live long enough to be transmitted from one person to another. Who is right?

DEAR READER: Years ago, before the advent of antibiotes, public toilet seats were believed to be the repository for horrendous hordes of man- (or woman-) eating germs. Clearly, this was an exaggeration. Anyway, our skins are normally covered with bacteria, so a few more on the tush shouldn't make a difference. Your nurse friends are correct that most bacteria die when exposed to air, which causes them to dry up.

Nonetheless, if you had an open cut or sore on your bottom and sat on a wet toilet seat immediately after an infected person had used the facility, you could possibly be the recipient of an unwanted infection that could cause problems.

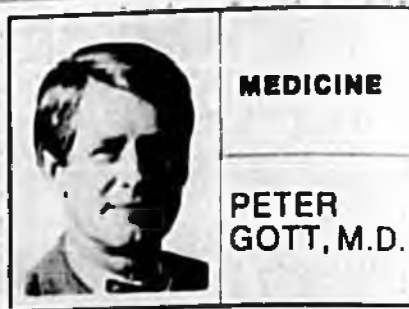

Also, some viruses, notably genital herpes, may be spread from one person to another by a contaminated surface. So, while the risk of acquiring an infection by this route is certainly less serious than we were told in our school health classes, there is some risk. As long as the seat is dry and cold, you don't have to worry.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've been told I have an unspecified connective tissue disease. Would Paget's come under this tissue disorder?

DEAR READER: Connective tissue diseases, such as lupus and rheumatoid arthritis, appear when the tissue that holds organs together becomes inflamed or scarred. Because this may be due to the body's misperception that normal tissue is foreign (and must be destroyed by the immune system), treatment includes drugs to combat inflammation. Lupus and scleroderma are examples of connective tissue diseases.

Although the cause of Paget's disease is unknown, the disorder is not considered to be a connective tissue problem. Rather, the bones themselves are affected. Paget's disease causes areas of bone to break down; almost simultaneously, this is accompanied by the formation of new calcium-poor bone, causing pain and a susceptibility to fractures. Treatment includes drugs, such as calcitonin, which accelerate the calcification of this new bone.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

Have you become a duplicate player and spotted that the opponents' convention cards have a lot of writing on them, whereas yours is relatively blank? Would you like to add to your repertoire of conventions so that you can bid more hands perfectly? If so, you might like to buy a new book, "Bridge Conventions, Defences and Countermeasures," by Australian Ron Klinger (Gollancz, $25.95, 800-274-2221).

The book details many conventions: not only how they function but also how to compete against them. The author makes many sensible suggestions, though for the American market there is the sporadic unnecessary addition — for example, the Kabel Three No-Trump Opening Bid, something I had never heard of — and an occasional unfortunate omission — like Cappelletti against one no-trump.

When your opponent makes a splinter bid, showing at most a singleton in the bid suit and a good fit for partner, how do you interpret a double? There isn't much point in doubling to ask for a lead of that suit when the opponent might have a void. Klinger suggests that the double should ask for a lead of the suit below the splinter suit.

He gives this deal as an example of the negative inference available when you have this agreement.

If East had doubled North's splinter bid, he would have been asking for a club lead. When he passed, there was an implication that he wanted a heart lead. Without a heart lead, South would have won 12 tricks. After a heart lead, he went one down, losing three hearts and one spade, not having ESP about the trump suit.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Aug. 10, 1993

Be alert for an opportunity in the year ahead which could take you off into an entirely new field of endeavor. This opening could come through an old business relationship you previously established.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) It's important today you be realistic regarding goals and objectives you set for yourself. If your desires and expectations exceed your reach, you might be disappointed. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it.

The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you encounter more obstacles than usual on your path today, there is a strong possibility they might be of your own making owing to poor planning.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

Don't let yourself be manipulated today to a point where you feel forced to take a position that opposes the will of the majority. This could happen if you're not watchful.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your chart indicates you might be more successful in your independent endeavors today than you will be in involvements that require a collective effort.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Distasteful tasks could be made even more difficult today if you approach them with a negative attitude. Try to take pride in what you hope to accomplish.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Maintain control over important personal matters today, because in situations where you delegate assignments to others, things could go awry.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Even though you might not be in a mood to do so, it may be advisable to pamper your mate a bit today instead of taking a position that opposes him/her.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If you don't have anything nice to say about others today, it's best not to say anything at all, because your comments might be distorted and taken out of context.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You're a bit of a risk taker to begin with and this trait might be emphasized in your financial affairs today. Be cautious and don't take chances where you shouldn't.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be protective of your own interests today, but try to do so in ways others won't find offensive. If they do, they might take counter measures against you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be helpful to others if you can today, but also be careful not to let them palm off onto you responsibilities to which they should be attending themselves.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Doing business with friends today may not turn out too well. Even though both parties won't want to do anything to deliberately hurt the other, nevertheless each might.
