VILNA HAS LONG BEEN A PLACE OF IMPORTANCE.

Made Capital of the Province of Lithuania in the Fourteenth Century-Figured in the Disastrous Campaign of Napoleon.

They call Vilna "Little Paris," The resemblance is not, however, striking to the western eye. When you have discovered that Vilna stands on a river, with hills rising above it, you will find little more suggestion of Peria. Its river, the Villya, can hardly be 200 yards wide, and flows through many winding gorges or defiles densely shadowed by fir and birch. The town is crowded in narrow and not too savory streets on the slopes of the hills, and above it, on the summit, called Zamkooaya Gora, or Castle hill, stand the ruins of an eight-sided tower of red brick, the remains of the castle which Gedynim, grand prince of Lithuania, built early in the fourteenth century, when he established Vilna as his capital. But the site has a much older history. Whatever the primitive faith of the Lithuanians may have been - and strange are the stories in old chronicles-it is reasonably certain that far away in the dark ages they were worshiping a sacred fire kept forever burning, like the flame of the Roman Vestals, at the foot of this Castle hill. We may, therefore, assume that Vilna, like Chartres and many another city now forever associated with the glories and the mysteries of the Christian faith, was a shrine of an older and grimmer religion long before its hills had heard the message of Christianity. On the spot where the pagan fire flamed stands now a place like a Greek temple, the Cathedral of St. Stanislas, wherein is the silver comin of the great Polish saint, Casimir, But there is a sanctuary in Vilna more is true to the best of my knowledge and belief. honored. Above the old town gate near the railway station there is a Subscribed and sworn to chapel which possesses an image of the Virgin far-famed for miracles. Catholics of the Latin and of the Greek church unite in their faith in the Virgin of the Ostra Brama chapel.

Vilna is the headquarters of the governor general of the Lithuanian provinces and of an army corps. It is an important educational center. It has a large trade in timber and grain. At the present time its population may be estimated at 200,000 people. But its chief importance is neither administrative nor commercial. It stands better at the junction of the railways from stores of large and Berlin and Warsaw to Petrograd, that Banking Bones I menus and is, it is one of the greatest centers of communication in Russia. From the Day German frontier it is 120 miles distant, from Petrograd more than 400. From Warsaw it is 257 miles. But Hessnar Stania these railways, though the most important, are not the only lines which converge on Vilna. It is connected by a line running southeast, through Carried Front Minek, with Kieff and the great resources of southern Russin, while yet another branch gives communication due south with the fortress of Brest liltovsk and the Pripet valley and Royno. BIG LEAGUE MAY TRAIN

WOULD LIKE TO MAKE OUR CITY TRAIN: ING CAMP

Sanford has within its grasp seculing a national base ball club for their training season. .

Through the personal friendship existing between Otha Wathen, the owner of the Louisville Base Ball Club and Walter Adims of the Thatcher Realty Co. of Sanford Mr Wathen is agreeable to bringing his club and gewspaper men numbering 28 in all to Sanford for their winter training season under more favorable terms than is offered elsewhere. There are four trained newspaper men who accompany the club including a staff artist.

These newspaper men are a lively, busy set Each day they send off to their home papers fell the little happenings of the club, including numerous personal matters pertaining to the individual members and punctous photographs of the surroundings, making intensely good reading matter for the home people. The nest thing thousands of people will do on packing up their paper is to turn to the base ball news to see what each of the players did the day before. In this way, Sanford or at , other city where the Dubs are in the ring is kept prominently in The purious eye and will derive; the full- t measure of publicity during the training season. London Nov 30 -The British public is not inclined to the German story that the Serbian campaign has been brought to a successful conclusion. The hope is expressed here that wintry weather will afford a chance to the Anglo-French troops to be reinforced until they are strong enough to assume the offensive and before the invaders consolidate their forces in Serbia.

In the meantime the only military activity seems to center around Monastir, the fate of which is obscure. Reports concerning it are most contradictary. Farther to the north it is reported that the Serbian armies are divided into two sections and are retreating in Albania and Montenegro

Winter, I crown thee king of intimate delights. Fireside enjoyments, home-born happi-

And all the comforts that the lowly roof Of undisturbed retirement and the hours Of long, unintercupted evenings know.

What man with the bounding blood of youth in his veins will look upon the falling snow with > a sigh on his lips? Instead. It brings a smile and a warm glow to his heart. Before him are visions of sleigh rides, with the girl he loves best sitting by his side. To the bash ful young man such a pleasure means much. He would never think of being so beld as to take a seat by the girl on a sofa. But in a sleigh she cannot be arm's length

He can have her all to himself, without the annoyance of having a third party about. Her cousins and her aunts cannot expect an invitation to The Lake Breeze Council No. 31 Junior | accompany him as his cutter holds but two and, perforce, they must sit snugly Meets every Wednesday at 7:30 P. together at that. What delight to air fast keen enough to bring the roses to their cheeks and to exhibitate their spirits'. Each the horse is on his mettle and fairly flies over the crisp ground. No young man who has a sleigh or can rig up anything on run ners to look like one would miss his sleigh ride with his dearte on a bright, starry, mounlight night

Of course, the young men are expected to pay strict attention to their frinky steeds. If, perchance, they forget-and Cupid siyly steals the reins from their grasp for a moment, there's pretty apt to be a spffl-out. Couples who race by shout with laughter. They guess, intuitively, by their own experience, that Dobbin must have gotten that he has not received the full measaway while his master was popping ure of love which makes married life the question to the fair one by his complete side. For how could be pay strict atreins the same time?

It is an odd fact that more proposals of marriage have taken place while sleigh riding than on any other occain the world for the man to whisper to the girl so near him the secret that he has held so carefully in his heart, "I love you!" and in his next words to breathe the hope that has been the one thought of his life. "Will you be my wife?" If the girl really loves him, he wins from her that timid confession and with it the promise that she will marry him if he can gain the consent of her loved ones at home.

The girl who goes out sleighing with a prosy young man, who is indifferent as to whether the robe is tucked in about her or if his conversation is interesting or not, treating of the weather or the crops he hopes to harvest in the spring, his business problems, etc.; is not apt to remain out very long with hlm. Nor will she be in a hurry to accept another invitation from him to go sleighing very soon.

Wintry evenings are fleeting and sleighing does not last long. Few girls want to waste time on the young man who has no intention of wooing and wedding. He who lets winter slip by may, flit in summer. Beaux, make haste in proposing marriage to the girl you love best while the chance is yours In dear old sleighing time. Be not like the young man who could not be with his awcetheart at aleighing time to ask her the all important question. He had to content himself by writing her.

A man may have a beautiful wife, an excellent business, a fine house, and yet be without a heart mate and have no home. Development of Redingote Style

The difficult part of making ready | the picture and it is safe to pin one's the winter wardroffe now, lies in deciding upon just what one wants If it is a question of the street suit that is to be decided, a sale answer lies in two directions at least. severely plain tailored suit, with plain skirt, cut shoe top length and moderately wide, or a shited skirt, may be chosen, to be worn with a semifitted coat having a flaring akirt portion, long plain, rather close-fitting coat sipeves and a fluish of bone buttons and inconspicuous stitching. The plain, tallored suit does not "come back" each season, for the simple peason that it hever goes out. It is always with us. In this suit the skirt is not extremely wide. It has a flat panel at the front and back and is shaped to flare, with inverted plaits where the side gores are set in. It should be shorter | lookeut for a newer flame to kindle in than it is pictured here, extending not more than an inch or two below the top of the average walking shoe. It fits smoothly (but not tight) about the hips, and fastens at the side.

The long coat is long-waisted, with arm seam which makes of it a samilitted model. It is becomingly double Breasted, and this is a point that woma narrow cuff of velvet, headed, with a Then there are suits on decidedly band of skunk fur. The collar and new lines. He has no privacy, even at his own fireside.

The wife who brings such discomforts upon the man who has married her has not his interest at heart. No matter how fond a man may be for gathering friends about him and giving them a happy evening, there are times when he needs the quiet consolution of a home where no stranger may intrude. If a business blow strikes him unawares, it is not to a group of merrymakers he would go for cheer and counsel, but to his wife's side in the home. In such an hour he would bless and value the companionship of a loving woman's presence, one to whom he was dearer than all the world beside, one who would feel his sorrows more deeply than he, take his hand, stroke his brow fondly while she whispered words of home to encourage him and lift the weight of wee from his heart. A man must feel that his home is his haven of rest, his wife his jewel in his casket whose benutiful light shines only for him that the whole world in nothing to her compared to him and his interests. There should be happy evenings at home, with just two at their log fire, as in their courting days. The husband provides the house, the woman makes tho

A happy home is heaven on carch. Few men are wandering from it, deliberately, willfully. They can see for themselves when everything is being done to make the home nest the dearest spot on earth for them. There is much depends upon the girl a man choses to make a happy home life for

CLINGING TO A BROKEN STICK.

To suffer woen which hope thinks infinite: To forgive wrongs darker than death or

To lave and bear to hope till hope creates From its own wreck the thing it contemplates

A girl with ordinary good sense ought to make a very clear guess as to how the man who has courted her and asked her hand in marriage should turn out. If he is an energetic young man making a confidant of her as to his business plans and his ambitions, as to the future, if he is possessed of that splendid sterling habit of saving a part of each week's salary, dresses moderately within his means, is kind and considerate of her, anxious to gir her the pleasure outings that his purse can afford, she may be sure that she is getting a jewel when she marries him. On the other hand, if he is a goodnatured, happy-go tucky, "come-day, go day, the devil take care of Sunday" sort of fellow who wasn't averse to shirking work whenever he could and didn't trouble himself about accumulating and, as long as he was provided for today, wouldn't bother his head over the anticipated troubles of tomorrow or make any provision to warding them off, ber judgment might tell her she would have a sorry enough life of it if he took her to the altar.

The more clever the girl the more aut she is to take it for granted that every man is destined to prosper if he has some ability. There never was a greater mistako.

& man may have great ability, but If he basn't push to start the ball of success rolling he is a lagging runner who will soon be out of the race for fortune winning. No woman can live on a man's promiser to make good or that he is going to turn over a new leaf. That won't keep the post a-boiling, fill hungry mouths or drive want from the door. Some men can save enough from $15 a week to make their first start in life, Others novet know how to economize on double that amount. If a man has the drinking habit and the has not influence enough to cause him to break from it, it is a dangerous signal which she obstinately shuts her eyes against and will not see. If he has a tendency toward flirting with pretty girls that's another danger algnal. He might as well-proclaim to the world that he is not satisfied with her, but is on the his stagnant heart. There is sensible loving and foolish loving. The girl who deliberately weds a broken stick should realize it is but little avail tocomplain. Girls should do a good deal of thinking while they are single and allow their head to have some say so in deciding their future, not leave it all to their impulsive hearts. If a man will not change his ways for love's sake before marriage, she can depend upon it he is not apt to do it after the knot is tled.

Hon: Elihu Root On Woman's Sphere

The question of Woman Suffrage in an issue before the American people, Twolve states have adopted it. four more grates vote upon it this fall, and it is strongly motive of man." urged that it become a platform demand of the national political parties. It is therefore the privilege and the duty of every voter to study carefully this subject. Hon. Elihib Root, in discussing this question before the constitutional confication of New York, recently said in part:

"I am opposed to the granting of suffrage to women, Cause I bulleve that it would be a loss to women, to all women and to every woman; and because I believe it would be an injury to the state, and to overy man and every wooden in the state. It would be useless to argue this if the right of suffrage where a natural right. If it were a natural right, then women should have it though the heavens fall. But if there be any one thing settled in the long discussion of this subject, it is that suffrage is not a natural right, but is simply a means of government, and the sole question to be discussed is whether government by the suffrage of men and women will ba better government than by the auffrage of men alone.

'Into my judgment, sir, there enters no element of the inferiority of woman. It is not that woman is inferior to man, but it is that woman is different from man; that in the distribution of powers, of capacities, of qualilies, our Maker has created man adapted to the performance of cortain functions in the economy of nature and society, and woman adapted to the performance of other functions.
"Woman rules today by the sweet and noble influences of her character.

Put woman into the arena of conflict and she abandons those great weapons which control the world, and she takes into her hands, feeble and nerveless for strife, weapons with which she is unfamiliar and which she is unable to wied. Woman in strife becomes hard, harsh, unlovable, repulsive; as far removed from that gentle oreature to whom we all owe allegiance and to whom we confest submission, as the heaven is removed from the earth

"The whole science of government is the science of protecting life and liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. In the divine distribution of powers, the duty and the right of protection rests with the male. It is so throughout nature. It is so with men, and I, for one, will never consent to part with the divine right of protecting my wife, my daughter, the women whom I love, and the women whom I livespect, exercising the birthright of man, and place that high duty in the weak and nevertee hands of those designed by God to be protected rather than to engage in the stern warfare of government. In my judgment, this whole movement arises from a false conception of the my judgment, this whole movement arises from a false conception of the duty and of the right of both men and women.

"The time will never come, when the line of demarcation between the functions of the two sexes will be broken down. I believe it to be false philosophy: I believe that it is an attempt to turn backward upon the line of social development, and that if the step ever be taken, we so centuries backward on the march towards a higher, mobiler and parer civilization, which must be found not in the confusion, but in the higher differentiation of the season.

This much has been demonstrated in many ways by the merchants refusing to fall for the many and devious methods for separating them from their good money that goes out of town to the travelling fakir

In order that the merchants of Sanford shall not be bothered any longer by every fly by night advertising scheme the Sanford Commercial Club at the last meeting decided to have a censoring committee appointed that will investigate every foreign advertising scheme and if it is punk, as most of them are, they will be turned down.

President Lake in a few words expressed the sentiment of the merand if there is any advertising to be done the local papers should be patroutzed first and if there were any schemes outside of the newspaper it should be done by local people and not the travelling fakir
