Women Behind Bars

Being Female Means Being Short-Changed

By Susan Loden Herald Staff Writer

Women are a decided minority in the Seminole County Jail. That fact combined with state orders that male and female prisoners be forever separated leaves women inmates with the short end of the stick when it comes to participation in jail programs and privileges.

That's a major complaint of some female inmates and it's a problem jail officials acknowledge, but they say they hope to overcome it within the next two years when the jail is expanded to more than double its present size.

The jail's female poulation usually tops out at about 25, within a total population which usually hovers around 275. On an average day there might be 8-10 women inmates, according to corrections officer Sylvia Bodison.

Jail administrator Luke Stallworth said the jail expansion will add 48 women's cells to the current 16, and other additions will expand the women's recreation areas.

State chief prison inspector Russell Smith said that male and female inmates are required to be treated equally, but if there are too few women in a lockup to make up their own group to participate in a jail program, that's not considered discrimina-

To his knowledge, Smith said, no female inmate in a Florida jail or prison has ever filed a sex discrimination suit against a

2nd Heart Recipient Selected

Transplant Set For Early Sunday

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) . Artificial heart transplant ploneer Dr. William C. DeVries has chosen a 52-year-old Indiana grandfather to receive the world's second permanent artificial heart implant.

In making the announcement Friday night. Dr. Allen M. Lansing, medical director of the Humana Heart Institute International at Humana Hospital-Audubon, said William J. "Bill" Schroeder of Jasper, Ind., would receive the Jarvik-7 in his chest in the historic procedure early Sunday morning. Schroeder, suffering chronic non-operable congestive heart failure, was a patient at the hospital in "serious" condition when selected. Lansing said.

DeVries implanted the world's first artificial heart in Scattle dentist Barney Clark at the University of Utah Medical Center on Dec. 2, 1982.

The life-supporting mechanical heart Schroedel will receive is nearly identical as the Jarvik-7 that beat 12,912,400 times in Clark's chest before he died of a colon infection 112 days after the implant. Lansing said. After it was discovered Clark had emphysema, DeVries had said he would prefer a candidate with no other disorders. However, it appeared Schroeder's deteriorating condition led to him being selected for the second procedure. Lansing said the hospital's Evaluation Committee unanipersonal interview.

Beach-Eating Waves Threaten Fla. Coast

By William Harwood United Press International

A gale-driven storm which pounded

Florida's east coast for two days, grounding a freighter, collapsing a tavern, closing roads, forcing the evacuation of a resort beach and killing a man who stepped on a downed power line, eased up today. Officials warned, however, that the danger is not over.

Indian River County officials ordered a four-mile stretch of Vero Beach oceanfront evacuated late Friday because severe erosion endangered several buildings. The National Weather Service said flood warnings would remain in effect today for virtually all of Florida's east coast and said 35 mph winds combined with high tides would inundate low-lying areas.

Gale-force winds and a 12-foot surf combined to collapse a seawall in front of the Oceanside Holiday Inn at Vero Beach. eroding the sand to within 2 feet of the building. The hotel was evacuated, but employees remained behind.

We're sweating it out," said hotel manager Bill Bomas. "There's not much between the ocean and us."

The Ocean Grill, a 50-year-old landmark tavern in Vero Beach, was washed away by winds and scas.

"It's the worst beach crosion I've seen in 10 years, worse even than Hurricane David," one man said, recalling the 1979 huricane that killed 1,000 people in the Dominican Republic before pounding Florida's cast coast.

The National Weather Service said the storm, caused by a stationary front in the Florida Straits and a high pressure system in the Atlantic off the central Florida coast, broke up sea walls from Fernandina

Beach southward to Palm Beach. The 230-foot freighter Mercedes I broke engines, going and finally crashed into a seawall at an oceanfront home next door to Rose Kennedy's estate.

The ship's 12 crew members were evacuated by stepping onto the concrete wall next to Millie Wilmot's swimming pool where they were served coffee. By late Friday, the ship had plunded a huge hole in Wilmot's scawall. Highway AIA along the Atlantic Occa was under knee-deep water and closed to traffic in several areas. Officials at Patrick Air Force Base near Cocoa began sand-bagging along A1A. fearing they would lose part of an atrifeld and a housing unit as the tide came in.

A few miles north at the Cape Canaveral Air Force Station, a helium-filled radar balloon known as "Fat Albert" broke lose from its tether Friday and plummeted into the ocean. A light airplane headed for Tennessee crashed into a wooded area shortly after takeoff from Orlando in a rainstorm Friday afternoon, killing all four people on board. Federal Aviation Administration officials said they did not know if the weather caused the accident.

All four were from Clermont and were pronounced dead at the scene near John's Lake at the Orange-Lake County line. Palm Beach County officials said Anthony F. Borodauchuck, 40, was electrocuted when he stepped on a fallen wire carrying 7,630 volts of electricity and Florida Power & Light Co. reported scattered power outages all over the southeast part of the state.

For the first time in the city of Sanford's 107-year history, city commissioners will not be elected at-large in the Dec. 4 municipal election.

By court order, four distinct city commission districts have been established (see list and boundaries below), while the candidate for mayor continues to run at-large.

And, since only two of the four commission seats are up for election this year in districts 1 and 2 — voters in each of those two districts will select one commissioner each, although they can also vote for the mayoral candidate. Voters in the other two districts, 3 and 4, may vote only for the mayoral candidate, since the commissioners in those districts are not up for re-election until 1986. To further add to the need for Sanford voters to pay particular attention to this year's municipal election, there are four voting places (precincts), one for each of the new commission districts, instead of the single voting place as in previous elections - Sanford Civic Center. Sanford Civic Center, located on N. Sanford Avenue between Seminole Boulevard and First Street, is now a polling place only for those residents of Commission District 1. The other three commission districts and their polling places are: District 2 - West Side Recreation Building, Persimmon Avenue at McCracken Road; District 3 - the Church at the northeast corner of Park Avenue and 24th Street: District 4 - Fire Station No. 2 on the west side of U.S. See DISTRICTS, page 5A

Some Of Seminole's Best Teachers Fall Prey To Burnout

Everyone needs a vacation now and then. The problem in Seminole County is that a few of its best school teachers are in Arkansas, a Thanksgiving deer-hunting expedition cost five men their lives when a pickup truck failed to make a curve on a rural mountain road and plunged to a creek below. Two men died in a similar accident in idaho.

A United Press International count showed at least 148 people had died on the nation's roads since the holiday weekend began at 6 p.m. local time Wednesday. Eighteen people were killed in California, 15 in Florida, 14 in Texas and 11 in Arkansas.

A Florida Highway Patrol spokesman said at least six traffic fatalities in that state were alcohol-related, despite a vigorous campaign by state officials to crack down on drunken driving.

The National Safety Council predicted as many as 500 people would die and another 17,000 to 20,000 would suffer disabling injuries before the holiday weekend ends at midnight Sunday.

Police took extra precautions Friday, saying they expected more drunken drivers would be on the nation's roads Friday and Saturday nights.

Baby Fae's Parents: 'We Had To'

NEW YORK (UPI) - Baby Fae's parents say if they had not granted permission for their daughter's historic baboon heart transplant, they would have wondered if they had done their best to save her life.

The baby's parents, identified only as Teresa and Howard, broke their silence in the first of a two-part series published in

People magazine.

In the interview, released Friday, the parents told of their agonizing decision to go ahead with the experimental surgery and what their lives were like before the three-week period the baby survived with the animal's heart.

"We weighed all the pros and cons back

After the operation, she said, "We said a prayer thanking God, because I felt that if God hadn't wanted this to happen she would never have made it through surgery."

Taxes There's Still Time To Set Up An IRA

Editor's Note: This is the first of four articles on saving on income taxes for 1984. Part two will run in Monday's Herald.

By Robert Metz Newspaper Enterprise Association

There's no stepping back into yesterday. Once the year ends, the tax books are closed. The only thing most can do to reduce the past year's taxes is pay into tax-deferred retirement plans, Keoghs and

Here are some facts on Individual Retirement Accounts.

You can add to an IRA until April 15, 1985. Also, you can set up an IRA from scratch at any time before that deadline.

IRAs are an efficient way to cut taxes. You're not only defg taxes on that much income, but, because your contributions to a retirement account are subtracted from your gross income, you may also drop yourself into a lower tax bracket.

Income placed in an IRA is not taxed until you withdraw it - upon retirement when you are likely to be in a lower tax bracket. The interest and dividends you earn in an IRA also accumulate on a tax-deferred basis until the funds are withdrawn.

Tax Tip: In this high-cost era, we need all the tax deferral we can get in preparing for retirement. The IRA should be viewed as a welcome supplement to Social Security and pension benefits.

IRA sums are not paltry. You may contribute up to $2,000 of your earnings to an IRA. If your spouse works, each of you may set up a separate IRA and contribute up to $2,000 for a family total of $4,000.

1985 CUT YOUR OWN TAXES AND SAVE

The way the law is written, one can contribute $2,000 to a 1984 IRA even if that sum represents the worker's entire earnings for the year. That's a godsend to parttimers, particularly working mothers.

If the taxpayer has a non-earner spouse. the IRA family contribution maximum is $2,250. This form of IRA is called a Spousal IRA. You and your spouse may apportion this money between you any way you like so long as no more than $2,000 is apportioned to one spouse.

Tax Tip: The sooner you act, the sooner your tax-sheltered income will begin earning tax-sheltered money. Actually, you should set aside your IRA money as early as you can. It is not generally realized that IRA cial News Network and a syndicated columfunds can be put to work for 1985 as early as next Jan. 1, 1985. That puts the money to work for you on a tax-sheltered basis for the accounting firm of Main Hurdman.

15 1+s2 months before the deadline for filing your 1985 tax return.

Tax Trap: If you add to your retirement account after the close of the calendar year. be sure to specify to your financial institution which year the contribution is for. Tax Tip: For 1984, a non-working divorced spouse gets a tax break by putting up to $1,125 a year from allmony and other payments into an IRA. Spousal IRAs must have been set up at least five years before the divorce. In 1985, it will be possible to contribute up to $2,000 if receiving alimony up to that amount.

Tax Trap: If you must withdraw some or all of your IRA contributions before you are 59 1 + s2 years old you pay a penalty. Look for two charges. You are immediately charged 10 percent of the amount withdrawn as a penalty tax. And, the full amount withdrawn is subject to income tax. Remember, you didn't pay income taxes on it when you put it in the IRA.

Tax Trap: If you set aside more than the maximum of $2,000, you face a 6 percent penalty tax on the extra amount. The tax is assessed year after year, so long as the excess remains in the IRA. No penalty tax is imposed if the excessive sum is withdrawn before income tax deadline.

PBA May Resume Flights Sunday On Some Routes

NAPLES (UPI) - Provincetown-Boston Airline, shut down two weeks ago for safety violations, expects to be granted a new operating certificate and resume limited flights Sunday on 21 Florida and New England routes.

The nation's biggest commuter airline said Friday it expects the Federal Aviation Administration to issue a limited operating certificate allowing PBA to operate small aircraft only — its nine-passenger Cessna 402s and 19-passenger EMB Banderiante planes.

It was not known when the FAA would approve the use of PBA's larger aircraft.

Mike Fenello, a vice president in PBA's operations department, said the airline initially planned to operate about 296 flights daily to 21 markets. They would include 180 flights to 12 Florida markets and 116 flights to nine markets in the New England-New York area, Fenello said.

He said PBA plans to expand service to all its markets by the end of next week.

Although a delivery man urged her to pocket the money, she decided to put the checkbook in the store office expecting the customer to return.

Who'll Stay, Who'll Go In Reagan's Second Term?

UPI White House Reporter

WASHINGTON (UPI) - President Reagan has encouraged top White House staffers and members of his Cabinet to stay put in his second term. but some personnel changes are inevitable.

A possible candidate for Donovan's job is John Erlenborn, ranking Republican on the House Education and Labor Committee, who retired this year after 10 terms in Congress.

Also reported to be in the running for the Labor post is Edward Rollins, Reagan's campaign manager, who undoubtedly will get a plum. Rollins recently lost out on a bid to become postmaster general.

Kirkpatrick says she wants to return to "private

There are no openings now unless Reagan decides to create a White House advisory position for her, which would not sit well with other foreign policy aides who view her as a hardliner on relations with communist countries.

Aides said Reagan passed the word personally to his national security advisers that he did not want to break up "a winning team" of Secretary of State George Shultz, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, national security affairs adviser Robert McFarlane and CIA Director William Casey. In the 60s, Americans have moved increasingly to Florida and the Southwest. The population, meanwhile, has decline in some cities in the Midwest and Northeast.

Sun Belt Population Growing Steadily; Political Clout, Federal Aid At Stake

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Americans are percent; Wyoming, 9.5 percent; Arizona and still flocking to the Sun Belt, with states in Oklahoma, 9 percent; Colorado, 8.6 percent. the South and West dominating population growth, the Census Bureau reports.

The 10 fastest growing states in both numerical and percentage increase between the 1980 Census and mid-1983 were in the South and West, including the sunshineblessed are from the southern Atlantic coast, along the Gulf of Mexico and up the Pacific shore, the bureau said.

The Midwest region, including part of the Frost Belt hard hit by decline in heavy industry, was sapped by migration. Four states — Michigan, Ohio, Indiana and Iowa - suffered net losses in population, based on provisional July 1, 1983, estimates compared to the official 1980 nose count.

The bureau's report, "Estimates of the Population of the States: 1970 to 1983," said the population shift to the South and West "has been even more pronounced in the first three years of this decade than in the 1970-1980 period."

Fopulation shifts are important because with them go political clout — seats in the House apportioned according to population and federal aid programs often are doled out on the same basis.

The 10 fastest growing states during the 1980-83 period were Alaska, up 19.2 percent; Nevada, 11.3 percent; Utah, 10.8 percent; Texas, 10.5 percent; Florida, 9.6

and New Mexico, 7.4 percent.

In actual numbers, California had the most growth, up 1,506,000. Texas increased almost as much, rising 1,494,000. Florida added 933,000, Oklahoma 273,000 and Georgia 269,000.

The increases in Texas and Florida were due largely to immigration, as Americans pulled up stakes and headed for the sunshine. The Lone Star state had a net gain of 922,000 immigrants, accounting for 62 percent of its growth. Florida's net immigration of 831,000 equalled 89 percent

The South and West had more than the lion's share' of the nation's increased population, which rose 7.4 million over the period. The two regions accounted for 94 percent of the total rise.

Regionally, population in the West rose 6.5 percent, the South went up 5.5 percent, the Northeast gained 3.3 percent, and the Midwest increased a mere 0.8 percent.

Michigan's population dropped off by 2.1 percent - representing a loss of about 193,000. Ohio's total dipped by 0.5 percent. lowa's by 0.3 percent, and Indiana's by 0.2

Winter Park Turns Rams Into Lambs

Harris Romps For 198 Yards

By Sam Cook Herald Sports Editor

WINTER PARK - Question: How do you turn a Ram into a Lamb?

Answer: With Elroy Harris, Rich Esposito and 444 yards rushing.

Winter Park's Wildcats. behind an offensive line which could knock down the Great Wall of China, turned Lake Mary's Rams into Lambs by a 33-0 count for the Region 4A-5 football championship Friday night before 6,000 freezing fans at Showalter Field.

'It was a massacre," said Lake Mary coach Harry Nelson. "I felt like George Custer at the Little Big Horn. They had the ball the whole night."

Lake Mary, 9-2, completed its best season in the brief four-year history of the school. Winter Park, 10-1, now awaits the outcome of Monday night's Vero Beach and Lake Worth's John I. Leonard class, which was postponed because of horrible weather conditions Friday.

The weather conditions weren't much better at Showalter Field. A daylong rain made the surface extra slippery and a whipping 20-mile-an-hour wind made any attempt at throwing the ball fruitless.

Rain or shine, however, Lake Mary was no match for coach Larry Gergley's Wildcats. Winter Park didn't even attempt a pass. With its 444 yards rushing, it didn't need to.

Offensively, tallback Eiroy Harris and quarterback Rich Esposito were brilliant. Harris rumbled for 198 yards on 17 carries. Esposito, who Nelson labeled a "magician with the ball," used his slight of hand to pick up 136 yards on eight

Defensively, the Wildcats were just as tenacious. With Mattland linebacker Bill Lee roaming sideline to sideline, the Lake Mary

One Move Lucarelli Didn't Use

By Sam Cook Herald Sports Editor

Charlie Lucarelli's best moves come on the football field. The Lake Mary sentor is a master of the cutback. It's nothing for him to be cruising full-speed and hit a 90-degree turn against the grain which produces a touchdown.

There was a time three years ago, however, when Lucarelli was considering a move on a different field. Disappointed at the progress of Lake Mary's football program after his sophomore season, Lucarelli very seriously thought about transferring to Lyman or Bishop

"It was 50-50 whether I was going to go or not," said Lucarelli. "I considered both Lyman and Bishop Moore but I was leaning more toward Lyman because my sisters went there and it had a good football program at that time."

It was a move, however, that he didn't make. And now, in retrospect, he said he realizes it would have been disastrous. "That would have been a very big mistake," Lucarelli said Friday. "It would have killed me to miss the fun we've had here the past two years."

It has been fun - and successful. Which is the way it started for Lucarelli and his senior teammates three years derwood, Don Meyer, Patt Mur-

ORLANDO - It's a new season, and there are a lot of different faces, but the rivalry between Seminole and Orlando Edgewater is still an intense one. The Lady 'Noles and the Lady Eagles locked up in another heated battle Friday at the University of Central Florida and it took an overtime period to decide the outcome.

Seminole, which came back time after time in regulation. acored the first basket of overtime then got the ball back and went to its four-corners offense. Edgewater hung on to a sixpoint lead, 15-9, and had the ball in the last seconds of the quarter, but Smith came up with a steal and raced down court for a layup at the buzzer to cut the Eagles' lead to 15-11.

The two teams traded buckets throughout most of the second quarter and Edgewater maintained a three-point lead, 23-20. until Benton came up with a steal and made a nice move to the hoop for two points and Smith hit a Jumper to give Seminole it's first lead since early in the first quarter. The Lady Seminoles took a 28-27 lead at halftime as Smith made another layup at the buzzer.

Edgewater scored the first six points of the second half to take a 33-28 lead and Merthic was then slapped with a technical foul. Tari Phillips, who had 19 points and 12 rebounds for the Eagles, made one of the two free throws to give Edgewater a 34-28 lead.

Rams Must Drop Tampa?

TAMPA (UPI) - The Los Angeles Rams will try and bounce back from a big loss last week and remain in contention for a wildcard berth in the playoffs when they go against the Tampa Bay Buccaneers at Tampa Stadium Sunday.

The 7-5 Rams trail San Francisco (11-1) by four games and while mathematically remain in contention for the NFC's Western Division title, one more 49er victory will take that out of reach, leaving only the wildcard opening.

A victory Sunday is a must for the Rams, because the New York Giants, the Dallas Cowboys and the Washington Redskins all are at 7.5 in the Eastern Division, New Orleans is just one game back in the Western at 6-6, and in the Central Division.

Chicago is 8-4. Tampa is out of the playoff picture at 4-8. The game will match-up two of the top runners in the NFL in Eric Dickerson of Los Angeles and James Wilder of Tampa, and will feature two former University of Southern California coaches — John McKay of the Buccaneers and the Rama' John

Jeff Kemp took over the Rams' quarterbacking in the third game of the season when Vince Ferragamo went out with a hand injury and has thrown 10 touchdown passes.

Roy Green Turns Back On Defense

ST. LOUIS (UPI) - Coach Jim Hanifan's hunch that a second-string defensive back might help the St. Louis offense has turned up one of the National Football League's top wide receivers.

"We were desperate at the time," said Roy Green. "Coach Hanifan had the idea to try me at receiver. I wasn't starting on defense at the time and he needed receivers. He just wanted to see how it worked."

The year was 1981 and the Cardinals were hurting for receivers. Teams doubled up on Pat Tilley to shut down the St. Louis passing attack. Hantian was pondering his problems after a practice and noticed Green taking passes from the quarterbacks.

Green, a fourth-round draft pick out of Henderson State in Arkansas in 1979, welcomed the added responsibility on offense. He had failed to break into the starting secondary on defense and was backing up Lee Nelson at strong safety.

"Everyone wants an opportunity to start at any position," Green said. "You want to contribute as much as you can. Everyone in the league is very competitive. You want the chance to start and be

The transition to wide receiver proved so successful last year, his first full season at the position, that Green landed a Pro Bowl berth after finishing the season with 78 receptions for 1,227 yards and 14 touchdowns.

Green announced at the beginning of this season that he planned to top last year's figures. Twelve games into the season, he was second in the NFL to James Lofton of Green Bay with 1,183 yards in receptions. He's averaging 20.8 yards per catch and has hauled in nine touchdown throws from quarterback Neil Lomax, including

When asked how to defense opposing coaches have a three-word game plan:

"They think things like 'He's got a big head.' I just try and balance it all out. I try not to be too high or too low. I just take it as it comes.'

Green is on a pace that would net him 1,700 yards, 46 less than the single-season record set by Charlie Hennigan of the Houston Otlers in 1961 in a 14-game American Football League season. Green points to two reasons for his success. He says his calm demeanor on and off the field allows him to concentrate while catching the ball.

UCF Draws Gators

Chuck Machock's Central Florida Knights open the college basketball season Saturday night with the Florida Gators at O'Connell Center. Tip-off has been set for 7:30 p.m. UCF and Florida have never met on the basketball court.

Machock's squad tuned up for that game by defeating Calgary (Canada), 65-50 in an exhibition game at UCF last Saturday.

UCF placed four players in double figures Saturday night, Sam Alexander led UCF with 15 points. The junior from Point Fortin. Trinidad and Brevard Community College was supported by senior Dan Faison's (Bartow) 13 points. And, the team got 12-point performancel from freshmen Stan Kimbrough (Cleveland) and junior guard Julian Butler (Key West).

Faison, however, is the team's only experienced returnee. He led the Knights in scoring and rebounding during last year's 15-13 campaign, averaging 15 points and just more than eight rebounds per outing. Sophomore guard Tom Cubi (Sharon Hill, Pa.) was a part-time starter last season, chipping in an average of four points per game.

Most important to me is that we did two things," Machock reflected about the exhibition contest. "We stayed within in our philosophy and played within our physical capabilities."

The next year, though, wasn't any fun. Lake Mary, playing juniors and sophomores, undertook its first varsity schedule. Horribly overscheduled, the team lost nine of 10 games. The only victory was over Wymore

"We got killed," said Lucarelli. "Half of those teams went to post-season bowls or the playoffs. We felt real good before the season, but it just didn't work out."

Lucarelli rushed for just 123 yards. He ran for 85 of that total in the win over Wymore Tech. It was that game in which he secred his only two touchdowns.

"I never had a bad year before that one," said the 18-year-old senior. "I guess I couldn't handle Lucarelli recalled with trepidation his first encounter with Nelson. "I was scared to death." he said. "I had never met anybody like him. But I was impressed with his reputation and knowledge of the game. "Still, he was the craziest guy

I'd ever met in my life. He kept calling us 'pussies' and said that he was going to make football players out of us. I thought some of us were pretty good football Which is just what happened.

Granted, Lucarelli, a 5-10. 180-pounder has always had the natural ability as a football player, but he credits Nelson with engraving the dedication.

On the next effort, he scored, and hasn't stopped hitting the end zone since. This year, he rembled for 693 yards in eight games, missing one with a painful hip pointer. He won't make his 1,000-yard goal, but he said that is of little concern.

"Last year, (Donald) Grayson led in receiving. Caughell led in tackles and I led in rushing." said Lucarelli about the county frontrunners. "This year, none of us led in anything but it doesn't matter because we're more of a team and we like that better."

Not to mention twin district and conference championships and a 9-1 record entering Friday night's 4A-5 Region championship clash with Winter Park.

And in the next six months, the easy-going senior hopes to realize that dream which almost prompted him to pull up stakes a college scholarship. "I don't know where I'll play," he said. "I just want to play somewhere at running back or defensive back. I might go to a junior college for two years and then take a chance on a major college."

Eagles Pull It Out Hail Mary, Hail Flutie —

MIAMI (UPI) - All the hopes and play. fear-

a about what Boston College's Doug Flutie and Miami's Bernie Kosar would do to the opposing defenses came true Friday.

There was pre-game talk of 1.000 yards total offense. It turned out to be 1.282. And there were jokes about the last team with the ball wins. That's what happened in Boston College's stunning 47-45 win over the Hurricanes.

In a football game with dozens of spectacular plays, only one will be remembered - the final BC coach Jack Bicknell calls it the "flood tip." Elsewhere it is known as a "Hail Mary."

Three Eagle receivers are supposed to meet in the end zone and when Flutie throws it, they tip it around and hope one of them catches it. It didn't work that way Friday. With Miami leading 45-41 and only six seconds remaining. Flutte dropped back from the Hurricane 48, dodged a tackler and fired a desperation pass from about 65 yards out into the end zone and his roommate, Gerard

Just 28 seconds earlier, the Hurricanes had scored to take a 45-41 lead, but Flutie and the 10th ranked Eagles weren't giving up.

the ball to Evans on a reverse. He skipped 24 yards down the right sideline for a first down at the Lake Mary 48.

On the next play, Winter Park, which accumulated 105 yards in penalties, was detected holding which moved the ball to its 33. No probeim. Harris took a toss right, reversed his field and jetted 60 yards before safety Ray Hartsfield Jerked him down at the Lake Mary 7.

"Harris runs where he wants to run," said Gergley, who admitted the play was designed to sweep right. 'If you overpursue, he'll kill you."

Lake Mary was hit with an offside penalty on the next play which moved the ball to the four. Harris then tried the massive line twice, acoring from the two on the second attempt with 8:16 left in the quarter. Jay Jane, a 280-pound kicker, booted the lead up to 7-0.

"We knew they were good," said linebacker Caughell. "Coach Gergley said it was the best team he's had in 10 years They were just too big. We couldn't get down in the trenches with on a slippery field with a team that big."

Things didn't get any better on the next series. Charite Lucarelli, who was held to minus yardage for the night, bolted for five yards on first down but Hartsfield lost two on a rollout. Hartsfield got five back on third down but he was still short so Caughell was called on to punt.

The snap from center, however, went over his head and by the time he could track it down and get away a 21-yard punt. Winter Park was sitting pretty at the Lake Mary 48.

Then it was Harris again. Same play, same move. Taking the toes right, he reversed his field and raced past the bewildered Rams. Only

But not this time. Hartsfield dove at Harris' knees but the acrobatic senior simply hurdled the fallen Ram and romped in the for the score. Jane's PAT pushed Winter Park up, 14-0, with 5:59 left in the first quarter. "He just faked me out," said the usually sure-handed Hartsfield after the game. "He is a great back and that big line really comes off the ball."

Hartafield had trouble on the next series, too. After quarterback Mike Schmit fired incompete on first down, he pitched to Hartsfield who was rolling left. Unable to find a receiver, he was buried for a 10-yard loss by Lee. After Caughell picked up six on third down, he unloaded a 45-yard punt to the Winter Park 16 which was returned to the 37.

Lake Mary's defense, though, stopped the 'Cats cold on this series and Winter Park booted its only punt of the night to the Lake Mary 35. That decent field position, though, was quickly crased with a holding penalty as the first quarter expired.

Lucarelli was held to one yard and Patt Murray the same on the next play. On third down, Lucarelli was tossed for a 10yard loss as he tried the left end. Caughell's punt against the wind traveled just 22 yards.

Taking over at the Lake Mary 35, the Wildcats needed just four plays. After a procedure call set them back five. Harris broke one for 14 and Esposito, faking expertly, turned the corner for 19 more before Brett Molle and Meyer knocked him down at the Lake Mary 7.

Harris bulldozed the final seven for his third TD and Jane again boomed the PAT for a 21-0 lead with 8:24 left in the half.

Jane, kicking with the wind, booted the ball in the end zone. forcing the Rams to start on their 20. After Scott Underwood was buried for no gain, Schmit fired short and then was sacked for a five-yard loss. Caughell punted it 43 yards to the Winter Park 42.

This time it took a little longer. After a procedure penalty, Harris powered for 14 yards and Esposito picked up 13 more. Harris then went for six twice in a row and Esposito picked up the first down with a 16-yard scamper. Harris followed with a nine-yard burst to the Lake Mary

Winter Park then called a time out, seemingly undecided on whom to let score the touchdown. The 'Cats decided Hartsfield, angling from the on fullback Terry Miller who Harris was 13 for 171. Schmit then found a hot hand and hit his only three passes as Lake Mary moved the bail to the Winter Park 20. The junior QB hit Donald Grayson for eight yards and Underwood rumbled for seven to the Lake Mary 32. A procedure penalty and a de-fensive holding flag moved the Rams to the Winter Park 49 from where Schmit hit Harsfield for nine yards to the Winter Park

Underwood bolted for 10 for a first down at the 30 and Lucarelli picked up three to the 27. Schmit hit Grayson for three more to the 24 and Caughell bowled over a tackler for four yards and a first down at the 20.

On the next play, however, disaster struck. While fading to pass, Schmit was separated form the ball and Bill Knox recovered on the Winter Park 27.

Esposito, who said he didn't throw the ball because "it felt like a bar of soap," faked to Harris, pulled back the ball and darted up the field. He cleared the first line of attackers immediately and had just one man to beat.

As he was figuring what move to put on Lake Mary's Kirk Pritchard, teammate Art Austin came up from behind. Espostio. seeing his teammate, slowed just enough for Austin to wedge between he and Pritchart. Austin delivered the block and Esposito completed his 73-yard scoring dash.

Jane missed the PAT but it was all over with 5:52 to play.

Gergley said he thought the first drive was the key. "We were going against the rain and the wind but we still ground it out for a touchdown." he said. "If Lake Mary stops us there, they are in good shape.

"I was worried about the conditions because a soggy field can be a great equalizer. But we've been moving the ball like this since the Colonial game. Harris is a great talent and Rich (Esposito) is a talent in his own right."

FOREST CLOBBERS RAMS

Lake Mary's boys, meanwhile, didn't fare as well in the Ocala Breeders Tournament at Forest High School. The host school took them to cleaners by a 69-41 margin.

"We fust didn't have the emotion of the first night," said coach Willie Richardson. "I don't know if Forest was as good as St. Augustine (who Lake Mary beat Thursday), but we definitely didn't have it."

Daryl Merthie led the Rams with 14 points, George Williams added 11 and Chris Jackson chipped in nine.

The Rams, 1-1, plays tonight at 7 against Savannah, Ga. for the consolation title. Forest and Jacksonville Ribault play at 9 p.m. for the championship final.

Jones Wins

Several region football playoffs ran a foul with the weather Friday night, but the Jones Tigers joined Winter Park as Orange County winners when they whipped Sparr North Marion, 27-21, at Orlando Stadium for the 3A-3 Region championship.
Leon Perry, who rushed for 122 yards, almost fumbled away the Jones' chances at the five-yard but the ball rolled harmlessly out of bounds with two minutes to Three plays later, quarterback Al Moody leaped play. Benton then made the shot of the game when she doublepumped and banked one off the glass. She was also fouled and converted the three-point play to cut the Eagles' lead to two. 49-47, with 2:17 remaining.

Edgewater had two chances to add to its lead in the last minute of play. Harrison missed the front end of a one-and-one with 59 seconds left but Dana Johnson grabbed the rebound for the Eagles and was fouled on the follow up. But Johnson missed both free throws.

Seminole then tied the game at 49-49 when Temika Alexander swished in a jumper from the free throw line with 38 seconds left. Edgewater then ran the clock down to 10 and called time out to plan a last shot. But the Eagles never got a shot off and Seminole had the ball with seven seconds left. Alexander's shot at the buzzer was just off the mark, though, and the game went into overtime.

Edgewater won the tip to start the overtime period but Jackie Sessier's shot was off the mark and Benton grabbed the rebound and whipped the outlet pass to Smith who hit Alexander for a layup and a 51-49 Seminole

Edgewater failed to score on its next trip down the floor and Seminole got the ball back with 1:50 left in overtime and went into its four corners. Seminole ran the clock down to 50 seconds when Benton spotted Anderson in the open for an easy layup and a 53-49 Seminole

"I had it (four corners) in the back of my mind the whole game," Merthic said. "But I never could use it because we were behind most of the game."

Harrison made a layup with 20 seconds left to pull the Eagles within 53-51 and Seminole almost made a critical mistake as it took two shots instead of stalling and trying to run out the clock. But Edgewater couldn't get down court in time to set up for the tying basket.

"I hope we learn from that experience," Merthie said. "We didn't need those last two shots.

COCOA BEACH TRIUMPHS

While gale force winds and heavy rain were wreaking havoc on their home town, the Lady Minutemen of Cocoa Beach were destroying Winter Park's Lady Wildcats in the Hoop-De-Doo Tournament.

Statewide Standards: What's Ahead

Q. A great deal was written about the Omnibus Education Act of 1984. particularly the aspect of it that called for statewide curriculum and standards. Could you elaborate on what's

A. Since 1976 Florida has been consistently pursuing a program of increased performance for all aspects of public education, with particular emphasis on public school students. We have set out goal to reach the upper fourth of states in educa-tion! achievement. The goal is the expression of the leadership and the citizens of Florida that the education of the state's children should be among the best in the nation - and they want to see results in terms of improved student performance. Numerous programs using student perforniance as an accountability ineasure have been developed and put into place since

The Omnibus Education Act of 1984 set the direction for taking another step in Florida's continuing performance-based approach to accountability. The law now requires a systematic, integrated approach to bring four key elements together: curriculum, instructional materials, student assessment or testing, and intended out-comes, that is, the vital elements of a particular course Curriculum Frameworks: Districts will develop, maintain, and includes.

SCHOOL TALK

Commissioner of Education Ralph D. Turlington

review curriculum frameworks to ensure consistency of instruction within the academic disciplines of public schools. These outlines of what a particular course includes must be developed for courses approved for graduation credit, for major subject areas in grades 6-8, and eventually for any other subject area or area of study approved by the State Board of Education. These frameworks will go a long way toward ensuring that American History or Algebra I in one county is comparable to the same course in another county. .

Instructional Materials: This portion of the law calls for development of guidelines which will assist district and state level adoption committees as they review various instructional materials and computer software. These guidelines will include standards and procedures which will ensure that those materials adopted for a particular course are consistent with the curriculum framework for that course. In simple terms, the guidelines will ensure adoption of textbooks that cover what the curriculum framework says the course

Rules will be adopted for statewide tests and procedures for all approved subject areas or areas of study. Testing is to take place in the spring of 1988-89 with the results reported in the fall of 1989. By 1989-90 we will be reporting how Florida students perform on nationally normed tests taken by students throughout the United States. Comparisons and rankings will be made to show how students in Florida's schools, districts and regions are performing when compared with their national counterparts.

Intended Outcomes:

These are closely related to the curriculum frameworks discussed earlier. Using the framework, what material and content a given course should cover, uniform statewide performance standards can be developed. These intended outcomes, the main elements of a particular course, will then be used in the development of tests which measure that knowledge.

Unifying the various components of the educational programs that have been developed in Florida will not be an easy task, nor will it be accomplished overnight. The Omnibus Education Act of 1984 will help to focus our efforts by dealing comprehensively with four key areas: the content of our courses, what we expect our students to learn in them, how we test that knowledge, and what instructional materials we should use.

IN BRIEF

Florida Ranks Sixth In Third Quarter Homeles

Florida ranked sixth in the nation in existing home sales during the third quarter, according to a press release put out by the National Association of Realtors

Florida had 129,400 sales, compared with California's 353,200. California was number one in sales.

Despite slightly higher interests rates, 16 states had higher rates of existing-home sales in the third quarter than in the same quarter of 1983, according to the NAR.

"The strong demand for housing is evident in the third quarter resale figures; however, the dampening effect of continued high interest rates can also be seen." said Frank Katusak, vice president of the NAR's economics and research division.

Following California in top ten sales, were: Texas, with 192,500; Pennsylvania, with 168,000; New York, with 157,500; Michigan, with 137,000; Florida, with 129,400; Ohio, with 125,700; New Jersey, with 119,200; Illinots, with 114,300; and North Carolina, with 93,000.

Crows Bluff Marina Sold

Crow's Bluff Marina, located at state Road 44 west on the St. John's River, was sold this month by its president, Terry Jorgenson, for an undisclosed amount.

The new owners, Rudi Gresham and Terry Adolph, also own the 60 boat fleet of Sunshine Line rental houseboats and dayboats at Holly Bluff Marina four miles south of Adolph will be president and administrative manager of both marinas and Gresham will be chairman, concentrating his efforts on sales and promotions. The daily operations of both marinas will be handled by the existing staffs.

Forget Financial Planners

Common Sense The Best Investment Strategy, Harvard Consultant Says

By Gail Collins

UPI Business Writer NEW YORK (UPI) - The difference between Justin Heatter and most other financial planners is that Heatter doesn't really believe people need professionals to help chart their investment future.

"Most of it is common sense and fundamental basics," he said. "There's no reason to absorb huge fees. I think it's all just another fad."

Heatter, president of Justin Heatter & Associates inc. investment counsel, is also director of the Program in Personal Finance at Harvard University's Center for Lifelong Learning. The program offers a series of one- to five-session courses on subjects such as banking products, tax planning and portfolio management.

Similar courses are offered at many universities and other learning centers. Heatter said, and provide an ideal first step for the novice eager to get a grip on his or her finances.

Those programs can get you a long way ... It's in an environment that isn't frightening. You share with your peers. It's informal," he said.

But beyond the classroom, the only real way to learn how to handle money is to do something with it, Heatter said. "Trial and error and experience - that's how I learned."

An investor who proceeds slowly and cautiously really is not putting himself at serious risk, Heatter said. "As long as you don't bet the store at every turn. It's very hard to do anything wrong. You may get hurt a little, but it's hard to be terminal."

To learn about the stock market, for instance. Heatter suggests the novice start with one or two mutual funds. "Most times you can get in for $500," he said. "You go through the selection process, then you look at the quarterly reports, watching the underlying companies they buy and sell. See If it makes sense to you.

"Eventually you may lose part of your $500, but it's extremely unlikely you'll lose all of it. From the experience comes your learning and confidence. It's an extremely small tuition to pay."

Heatter does not approve of the trend toward borrowing money in order to gain tax deductions and finance investments.

People get into their minds the interest they pay is free because it's tax deductible." he said. People who remortgage their houses in order to get funds for investment, he said, "are loony, unless they have a valid place to put the money. Just to say 'invest' doesn't get you anywhere.

Creative borrowing is knowing when to use it for opportunities that are just staring you in the face - like a chance to start a business of your own."

Heatter has written "Take Charge of Your Finances" to "try to encourage people to take control." The book, published by Scribners, suggests readers take a first step by "looking in the mirror" and taking stock of their finances.

'Most people are afraid to do that," he said. "They don't want to face up to it, but my experience is that most people are pleasantly suprised. They're better off than they think they are, and with that comes

Soviets To Buy Record Grain Load McDonald's

By Senja Hillgren

UPI Farm Editor
WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. and Soviet negotiators met in the first of two days of routine semi-annual talks on U.S.-Soviet grain trade, which is booming after the sixth disappointing Soviet harvest in a row.

It was the first time routine grain consultations were held in the United States since 1979, before President Carter's 1980 embargo of grain in retaliation for the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan. The first talks of this year were held in London in January.

There was no report from Tuesday's first day of talks, but leaders of Soviet and U.S. delegations smiled and shook hands twice for the benefit of television cameras and photographers invited to record the talks at the Agriculture Department.

Soviet grain buying was so heavy this summer that President Reagan did not wait for these talks to raise the amount of grain that private exporters may sell to the Kremlin this fiscal year under terms of the current five-year agreement.

10 million tons more than a maximum guarantee under the agreement that Agriculture Secretary John Block signed last August in Moscow.

American analysts believe the Soviets will import a record 50 million tons of grain in a marketing year that began in July. They already have bought about 30 million tons of that total. about half of which originated in the United

Americans estimate the Soviets' sixth disappointing harvest at 170 million tons. The routine talks dealt with world grain supplies and demand, American supplies and Soviet needs as well as a recurring problem with treatment of grain for insect infestation.

The nine-member U.S. delegation was led by Daniel Amstutz, undersecretary of agriculture. The American delegation included seven Agriculture Department officials.

There were flashy videos on the screen synchronized with all those mega-decibel commerical songs that get stuck

Or all those Ronald McDonald film clips from the early Sixtles, with Mustang convertibles and wholesome

And nobody got up and said anything about 50 billion hamburgers laid end to end would reach to Venus. Or would make a lumpy brown carpet covering all the states cast of the Mississippi - with South and North Dakota thrown in.

Everyone was optimistic about the future.

How To Make Your Business Phone System Profitable

By Haribar Krishnan UPI Business Writer

DALLAS (UPI) - Corporate communications systems usually come under the heading of costly necessities but, in the current climate of deregulation. they can become money makers. according to a telecommunications specialist.

Bill Edwards, with the Dailas office of Price Waterhouse, international accounting and management consulting firm. said corporate planners generally consider telecommunications "costly liability and a neces-

In the aftermath of divestiture and deregulation in the industry." however, "telecommunications managers can convert their operations from cost centers to profit centers," he said.

The key is in using the dormant capacity of the system after business hours, at nights, during weekends and holidays or reselling that capacity to other businesses, Edwards said.

"The volume of call-processing capability and network capacity that is dormant is staggering ... Why not resell your network to other businesses or even the general public?"

He said most advanced communications switches provide a means of remote access, allowing any caller equipped with the proper codes to utilize the switch and its network.

similar to a regular telephone station.

Edwards said smaller businesses may permit employees to use the system for private long distance calls from their homes by dialing into that system through individual codes. The office can then deduct the charges from the employee's

The average long distance call from home costs about 42 cents per minute, Edwards said. The same call would cost a company about 30 cents per minute or less. Charging the caller 35 cents per minute would let the company make 5 cents or more profit and still let the employee come out at least 7 cents ahead on his calls.

Edwards said with a modern telecommunications switch, it would be possible also to resell answering services.

"The company functions as your answering service. Even outside profer Ionals can use the system for a fee that may be much less than what they must pay professional answering

Edwards said his plan can be especially effective for the developer of a major high-rise build-ing who must offer modern telecommunications as a feature to potential tenants.

The developer or the telecommunications provider actually becomes the telephone company in that building. By providing a portion of the telecommunication system and network capacity to other tenants in the building, the developer, in effect, becomes the full-service telephone company to the users."

Typically, Edwards said, a tenant in a building would have to pay between $900 and $1,000 per telephone station in a modern system. But If that tenant were to rent the system from a developer, he could save 30 percent through the economy of scale. Renting the system also allows the tenant to expand and deal with one person instead of several vendors for his communications needs.

'The developer can provide both local and long distance service to the tenants, in addition to moves and changes, maintenance and consultation. all at a potential profit."

Edwards said it is estimated that by 1990 the shared tenant industry will be bringing about $10 billion in revenue per year for the developers and those providing telecommunications scrvice.

"With the divestiture and deregulation, a lot of people are confused and finding it difficult to deal with vendors ... This is a very attractive deal for those who don't feel they should devote the time to develop their telecommunications. With a well-informed developer, a tenant can shove the responsibility on him to make it as costeffective as possible."

Retired Admiral Changes Command To Women's Cause

Herald Staff Writer

Retired U.S. Navy Rear Adm. Pauline M. Hartington didn't set her career course with plans of becoming the first woman commander of the Orlando Naval Training Center three years ago, but she said she was in the right place with the right abilities and things just fell into place. Now in her retirement she is working to help things fall into place for other Central Florida women.

Adm. Hartington of Longwood, is on a board with other women she called "prominent in the community who have a background in doing who are talented in many, many ways and who have resources they can call upon." The board In developing a Women's Resource Center.

The resource center will, she said, serve as a clearing house for information on all local agencies, business groups, clubs, organizations, hobby groups - any and every source that women might turn to for assistance, information or social contact. By calling the center, women will be able to reach whatever source of assistance they need.

Fifty-three-year-old Adm. Hartington has been named chairman of the group which is expected to soon send out a newsletter to providers of women's services informing them of the establishment and the purpose of the resource

"Our primary goal," she said, "is to convince groups that are in existence that we're not here to wipe them out or to absorb them. We're here to highlight them, to put them in the limelight where they belong so more people will know about them. Then their programs will grow and flourish, whereas, if nobody knows about them and uses them they will wither and die eventually. It's our challenge to bring it all out and together and not to threaten what women have established.

We want women to know there's a benefit in banding together, in not trying to go it alone. There's strength and safety in numbers," Adm. Hartington said. She added that eventually the center might play the role of "power broker."

For example, "If the mayor of Orlando needed a woman to serve on a board he might come to us for a recommendation," she said.

Strength and organization are two things this veteran of 31 years in the Navy knows something about. She likened her position as commander of the training center to that of being mayor of a large city.

As a woman, Adm. Hartington said she met some resistance when she took the helm of the training center, but the primary reason for that was, she said, people's resistance to change.

"I don't think there' a difference (between a male of female commander). There are certainly differences between men and women and we're grateful for those, but leadership is leadership. Most men I have dealt with have been supportive but there are always men and women who resist change.

"When I came here I ran into people who, because I had never been to sea, questioned whether I could run a training center which is landbound.

"I'd had extensive experience in Washington, D.C., with the Joint Chiefs of Staff and a previous major command in San Diego. I was certainly able to manage money and programs and yet my ability to manage an organization as big as a training center was in question. In a short matter of time there wasn't any question I was capable. There was still some resistance. but they couldn't argue with the fact that the job was being done properly."

A native of Rhode Island and one of seven children, Adm. Hartington initially planned to be a teacher but was lured into the Navy by her desire to do something different and at the urging of a friend.

She never dreamed she would achieve the rank of admiral, something that wasn't an option for women when she began her career.

"All most of us did," she said of herself and her fellow female officers, "was to prepare ourselves and take the kinds of assignments that were career enhancing, so that if things did change and opportunities opened up at least we'd be prepared. We had the opportunity to go

Reviewing information on the Women's Resource Center, Adm. Hartington says, 'Our primary goal is to convince groups that are in existence that we're not here to wipe them out or to absorb them. for advanced education and for challenging jobs that gave a broad spectrum of experience. I went to the National War College and had duty for the Joint Chiefs of Staff which is a qualification requirement for command.

We took the opportunites, not knowing where they would lead so were prepared when the opportunity to compete with men came

"My philosophy is you ought to be looking ahead even though you don't see the opportunites there at the moment. Prepare for it by gaining as much diverse experience and education as you can absorb or is offered you.

'it was a challenge to be accepted into jobs that had normally been filled by men. Women had to prove each and every time they accept a job that thay are capable.

"I was fortunate enough for whatever reason to step in a different direction. I don't think I'm unique. I just think I was lucky to be in a time and a place where I did what I did and I enjoyed what I was doing. I had opportunities to marry but the alternative was such that I like the Navy better. I guess I made the right decision for me.

"I have a great deal of respect for what women do everywhere. I do a lot of motivational speaking to women in the day-to-day work force. I seem to be able to relate well to them. I give a great deal of time to that because the things that got me where I am are the same basic things that all women can aspire to and that's work, hard work and training.

"I think when people see a successful woman they ought to think there's hope. Maybe your situation is such that you can't do what that person is doing, but there is some vicarious pleasure in it. Women have become somewhat so they can bask in the glory of another woman achieving. They can have hope for their daughters. A lot of women just need some support that says, 'Yeah, you can do it.'

We ought not lose sight that being in public isn't the only way for women to go. Each of us has to go where our abilities are. This world would be rotten if we didn't have mothers at home taking care of the children. We tend to glamorize one part of our group and then say the other is not important. I try not to do that.

"I guess I never married because I liked the Navy and I wanted to stay in. I knew I couldn't do both and I don't know how other women manage full-time careers, manage a household and raise a family, because to my mind each is a major undertaking and more power to them is all I can say.

Adm. Hartington has always maintained an interest in her community and she plans to stay in Central Florida and will continue her work with the United Way, The Greater Orlando Crime Commission, the Women's Resource Center and other organizations.

She said she is enjoying her retirement and has recently caught up on visits to friends and relatives. Adm. Hartington also enjoys golf and the beach. Her affinity for the wildlife of the sea is shown in her collection of whale figures. which come in all sizes and forms from the comical to the the artistic.

"I became fascinated by the fact that people think whales are so evil and vicious when really they're very gentle. I have a great deal of admiration for the creatures of the sea. I was born under the sign of the sea, the crab, Cancer. I supposedly wax and wane by the moon and am drawn to the water, which I am," she said.

Adm. Hartington got involved in the Women's Resource Center, "because I believe strongly that women who have been successful as I have been didn't get there by themselves. I didn't get where I am by myself. I had lots of other women and men who paved the way and who were mentors to me.

"It's almost a social obligation when you get ahead you've got to help other women come along. I still think the greatest strength for effecting change for women will be through education, through power in the marketplace.

When women are aware of what their rights are, what's available to them, what their alternatives are, they won't be captives of a lifestyle that perhaps they were thrown into because perhaps there was no alternative. That's my commitment," she said.

Adm. Hartington is enjoying the freedom of her new unstructured life. She has a wealth of outside interests that fill her days and she looks back on her life with no regreta.

You do the things you do because there you are," she said. "I'm a victim or a beneficiary of circumstances. For instance the women who preceded me (in the Navy), many were certainly

Pet Health

It's Important To Prepare Animals For Winter

With the onset of cold weather them to move. The important it is important to review a few thing is to get into the habit of points about problems with pets during the winter. We'll continue with the series on new pets next week.

Patches, a neighborhood cat, came in on an emergency basis through the chest wall, a fractured femur (thigh) and her tail crudely amputated. She is a common example of a sat seeking shelter and warmth under the hood of a car during cold weather. Often called a fan belt injury the damage is usually the result of the cooling fan blades. The injuries vary with each individual but it is the most common reason for short tailed cats other than the Manx breed. That's the bad side.

The good side is that the problem can often be avoided. Before starting your car you should either rap sharply on the hood or blow your horn. This will warn the cats who are sleeping in and usually convince doing this each morning especially if there are cats in your neighborhood.

Alex was a young doberman who came to the hospital in November. He was an outdoor with a deep 4-inch laceration dog who had always been healthy. A few days before he became depressed, began losing his appetite then started vomit-

A physical exam did not give a reason for his tilness, and no parasites were found. A blood sample was taken which would reveal problems with his liver or kidneys. This is a common way to evaluate some internal organ systems. Blood analysis showed that Alex was in renal (kidney) are thirsty. The toxin in-an-failure. A urine sample revealed tifreeze damages the kidneys changes which verified the and they loose their ability to kidney problems.

It turns out that the owners

information pointed to a diagnosis of ethylene glycol intoxication (antifreeze poisoning). Antifreeze toxicosis is a potential problem during those times of the year when we prepare our cars for winter or summer. The fluid has a sweet taste which is appealing to animals especially when they filter the bodies own toxins. Treatment very early after had changed the antifreeze in ingestion may help to avoid their car a few days before. They kidney failure. Treatment later had left the old antifreeze in a on is difficult and the average pan near the garage. All of the animal clinic is not set up to handle this problem. Theoretically if you can keep the animal alive for 10 days or more the kidney tissue which was damaged may regenerate. In order to gain this much time peritoneal dialysis can be used. This is not a common procedure and It requires 24 hour intensive care so it is usually done at a veterinary college because of the difficulties involved. As with the fan injuries the best medicine is to avoid the problem. Don't leave antifreeze in containers or puddled in the road. If you suspect or witness antifreeze poisoning contact your veterinarian immediately.

There are other things to consider with your pets during cold weather. Dogs kept outside should have adequate shelter from the wind and rain. Increase the amount of food they are getting since they will be burning a lot of calories just to keep warm. You should avoid bathing the animals unless they can be completely dried before going back out. Point the opening of the doghouse to the south to avoid the colder North winds. Leakproof the house with plastic sheeting or caulking.

Rabbits kept in outdoor butches may have trouble adjusting to rapid temperature changes. The hutch should be closed in on three sides with plastic or wood leaving the open end pointing south. Check the temperature in the hut during the hottest part of the day so that the animal doesn't overheat by day. Besides wind chill moisture is the other major problem. Check the bedding daily and remove any moist material.

Pet birds are a special interest of mine and their popularity demands some attention. Even pet birds can stand a great deal of cold if they are allowed to adjust slowly over a period of time. Birds which are left outdoors should have shelter from bedding should be checked frequently.

Parrots which are kept indoors year round should not be taken out on cold days. Avoid placing their cages near doors since the temperature changes may be extreme. During the winter cold air which is heated is very dry and many parrots are used to higher humidity than is present during the winter. With this in mind it may be harmful to place the cage too close to the heating ducts. This dry air may contribute to respiratory problems. A humidifier built into the heating system may be helpful.

Monkeys kept outdoors can develope frostbite if they are exposed to freezing temperatures and dampness. If in doubt bring them into a better environment.

Snake owners should avoid allowing their animals to be burned by exposed light bulbs, the wind and rain and additional electric heating pads or com-food and water available. If the mercial "hot rocks." If you have birds are ground dwellers their any questions please write.

Riding at anchor in the ports of Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Charleston were proud vessels eager to take you anywhere. Sails billowing daily, they embarked for Europe. Africa and the Orient.

But you couldn't book passage for Dakota territory. So pioneers loaded covered wagons for the trek West. It always makes sense, when you know where you're going, to go the best way!

Some poetic fellow, seeing the canvas rippling in the wind, dubbed those wagons "prairie schooners."

You'll find many earnest friends and neighbors worshipping when you come to Church this week. They have a goal, a destiny, it still makes sense...when you know where you're going... to go the best way!

Evangelist Bowdoin Plans New Satellite TV Ministry

By Jane Casselberry Herald Religion Editor

Evangelist Herbert L. Bowdoin, who has been sending his message over the radio since 1948. Is stepping into the Space Age with a new satellite television ministry for United Method-

Dr. Bowdoin is launching the new World Parish Satellite Television Network under the auspices of Methodist Hour International, of which he is president. The ministry, which moved to the Orlando area in 1973 from Lexington, Ky., has its headquarters on State Road 436 in Altamonte Springs.

An approved United Methodist evangelist with the Florida Conference for 23 years, Dr. Bow-doin is not new to television. For Il years, he was associated with Evangelist Ford Philpott as president of The Story, America's first color religious TV series.

Although the starting date for the satellite network depends on how long it takes to sign up churches around the country to the negotiations that are underway for satellite space, the evangelist said his goal is to get underway in March with 100 churches participating.

"We've had tremendous response from United Methodist bishops and church leaders," Dr. Bowdoin said. "It's a big undertaking, but if Methodism's founders, John and Charles Wesley and Francis Asbury. were alive today no doubt they would lead the way in this new approach in television. United Methodists must become pioneers again in new ways of reaching people for Christ. During our bicentennial year and the beginning of American Methodism's third century is a good time to do this."

He said that several churches such as Community United Methodist in Casselberry, already want to tie in to the network and there are about 25 and producing the programs. to 30 others also interested.

Ghost Of KKK Haunts United States

Once claiming a membership of close to 4 million, the Ku Klux Klan today has a following of only 6,000. All the more reason for the United States to be on guard. according to the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith.

It says that history has many examples of terrorism erupting in the wake of the failure of radicals to win mass support. The league is warning that desperadoes, frustrated by the KKK's failure, are plotting a campaign of terror and assassination.

The Klan had a revival of sorts in the 1970s and very early '80s as it attempted to exploit discontent over busing and racial quotas. Membership in 1981 was estimated at 11,500, up from 5,000 in 1973.

The Ku Klux Klan was begun as a social club in 1866 in Pulaski, Tenn., by six young men with nothing better to do after the Civil War than to put on disguises, engage in horseplay and hold secret initiations. They adopted the name Ku Klux Klan from the Greek word for circle, kuklos.

Dressing in hooded white robes they accidentally discovered their antics and nocturnal rides frightened the Negroes. Somebody got the idea this would be a good way to control the recently emancipated

The Klan idea grew. Societies were formed throughout the South. Many resorted to violence and became bands of outlaws, protecting society from immorality and

Saints And Sinners

Things got so out of control that in 1869 the Klan was disbanded.

It was revived in 1915 by a Georgia preacher named William J. Simmons as a society devoted to the protection of womanhood and the maintenance of white Protestant supremacy. To its earlier hostility to Negroes it added an anti-Catholic, anti-Jewish, anti-foreign bias. The Klan conceived its role to be the guardian of a society threatened not only by aliens, but by nightclubs, roadhouses, sex and scandalous behavior. The Kian's estimated membership in 1926 was nearly

Then the power of the Klan began to fade. The next Klan revival came after World War Il in opposition to the government's increascivil liberties. Kidnappings and floggings were resorted to under the guise of

But this time a vigorous counterattack by state and federal governments reduced the Klan's power.

One study has shown that Klansmen come primarily from the "upper rungs of the working classes and the lower rungs of the middle class. Thus their status is insecure and they are anxious."

At the same time, the study added, "They generally lack the resources, skills and education necessary to improve their life chances." Thwarted in progressing toward the success goals of American society, the Klansman "seizes upon the symbols of 100 percent Americanism and his membership in the white race, which gives him a sense of identification and security."

Frustrated in his hopes to advance higher in society, the Klansman, the study said, 'easily comes to see himself as the victim of inscrutable conspiracies and enemies e.g., Jews, communists, the big-city press." Because of his own insecure and weak position in the social structure, "the world about him seems hostile and evil."

It is said that the exaggerated emphasis given by the Klan to symbols and nomenclature (Imperial Wizard, Grand Dragon, Grand Titan, Exalted Cyclops, etc.) "provides the Klansman with the status he

YOUR BIRTHDAY,

By James Jacoby Some of the most unnatural defensive plays can be justified by a little common sense and logic. After South had reached the slam via the bidding in the box, the first problem for the defense was the opening lead. Usually the best shot against a small alam would be a lead of the unbid suit, since it has the most potential for developing a trick or even taking two tricks. Thus leading away from a king or queen is a normal practice. So why didn't West lead a diamond? The answer is in the bidding. When North was re-sponding to the Blackwood inquiries for acce and kings, East had two opportunities to make a lead-directing double. Since he a marin manager of the same to be a second as a second as a second failed to double either five or six diamonds, it was a fair assumption that he lacked as much as the diamond queen. Hence the opening lead of the spade deuce.

The opening lead was only half the battle for the defenders. South called for the spade queen from dummy and East won the king. Since it was apparent that declarer had all the aces (he had tried for a grand slam by asking for kings), the only chance was to deprive him of tricks from the club suit. Accordingly East returned a spade right into dummy's A-10. Declarer now had to lose a second trick no matter how he played, since he no longer had an entry to dummy to cash any club suit winners that were stranded.

VDP Refunds INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) - RCA Corp., which decided earlier this year to stop making video disc players (VDPs), is now quietly compensating customers who ask for refunds or exchanges.

RCA's video disc operations, based in Indianapolis and Bloomington, lost the company approximately $580 million in three years.

W. T. Collins, vice-president of consumer affairs for RCA, said compensation is on a case-bycase basis.

"We have no formal pro-gram," Collins said, adding that the company did not want to make public its compensation procedure. RCA was the only company to make disc players, but the pro-video cassette recorder, which not only shows tapes but allows the customer to record programs as well. About 550,000 video disc recorders were produced from 1981 until last April, when the company announced its plan to end production. So far, RCA has refunded the purchase price to more than 100 owners or given video cassette recorders in exchange.

Ernie Butler

An All Around Nice Guy Who Licked Cancer Shares Words Of Wisdom

By Susan Loden Herald Staff Writer

Sanford's Ernest R. Butler is a giver. He gives of himself and his time to his community and Butler says his generosity probably stems from the influence of his family.

In his 14 years as a Sanford resident, Butler has been involved in the Optimist Club of Sanford. The motto of that group is, Butler said, "The friend of youth," and that's what he is.

"I spend an awful lot of time with the Optimist Club because "I like people and I like kids. I'm not going to put myself on a pedestal, but I'm a hard worker. I want to do things and I want to do them right, 69-year-old Butler, who is president of the Optimists, says.

Tears came to Butler's eyes when he said. "My dad always said you put in 110 percent. The 10 percent is for your investment in your future, you see. And do the best you can.

Butler's father and stepmother had a great influence on his life, even though as a youngster he was separated from his father because of his parents' divorce, he said.

"My stepmother was probably the greatest person in the world, except for my mother. I'm sure I lost out not being with my father as a child," Butler said, and his childhood family situation may have helped him develop his sensi-tivity to the needs of youngsters.

"It's in my makeup, or something like that," he said. "I really feel so genuine and I get so involved.

An Optimist Club event Butler really gets involved in with special interest is the annual Seminole County High School Band Festival.

That's because he's an old-time trumpet player who, as a youngster, blasted out the big band sounds in California honky-tonks, until at about age 16 he was invited to Chicago to visit his father and to end their long separation.

At the urging of his stepmother and with the support of his mother Butler was encouraged to give up his budding music career and study at Northwestern University and to become an accountant.

But before packing away his trumpet. Butler had his day in the sun when he played first chair in the 1932 Olympic Games ceremonies. He also picked up his horn occasionally in college to earn funds to help finance his studies. Although he said his lip is now too stiff to allow him to play well, he can't help but drag out his vintage trumpet and hit a few notes about every six months.

When Butler reunited with his father he also got another benefit. His step- mother introduced him to her favorite niece, Maude. That girl became his wife and the Butlers have been married 49 years.

"We're really kissing cousins," he says. "We like many of the same things, we're both athletic and play golf. We're together because we respect each other. She has her freedom to do what she wants. But she doesn't do anything unless I'm with her.

'I've had my freedom too. Perhaps more than I should have, because I've been involved in many youth activities and community Marities almost to the slighting of my family to a certain extent. I think perhaps I could have been a little closer to my family, to my kids. Of course, we were really always together.

The Butlers' children, Ernie, James and Mary Ellen, also served to spur Butler's interest in community service. He volunteered as a Cub Scout leader when Ernie was a youngster and went on to become head of all Cub Scout leaders in his Illinois commun'ty.

But when his daughter became involved in Job's Daughters a some don't." he said. "There's But'if general. Sanford is probably masonic group for girls, Butler nothing wrong with a person who pretty much like other cities and to the complete to a four-year term to who do what'they have to do, and stream and sway with the breeze. But if general, Sanford is probably nothing wrong with a person who pretty much like other cities and willages." Butler, said.

DONALD LAMBRO

Don't Raise Taxes - Cut Spending

WASHINGTON - The pre-1985 skirmishes over the budget deficit are now going on in this town, and they tell Americans very little of what they really need to know about getting control of runaway federal spending.

Budget director David Stockman has trotted out new budget forecasts which predict that the deficit in fiscal 1986 — which doesn't begin until next Oct. 1 — will be more than $200 billion. This has given new ammunition to the taxincreasers who cry that unless business and personal income taxes are raised, the deficit can't be cut.

But can Stockman's figures be trusted?

It's useful to remember that in January, Stockman and the Con-gressional Budget Office predicted that the fiscal 1984 deficit would be more than $200 billion. As it turned out, they were off by $25 billion, the deficit having come in at $175 billion.

Why was the deficit lower this past fiscal year than the CBO and the Office of Management and Budget, with all of their computers.

predicted it would be? Revenues were up slightly more than anticipated, thanks to the economic recovery. The Pentagon spent its money at a somewhat slower rate than had been expected. Medicare expenditures were lower than projected because of a decline in hospitalizations.

There were other factors, but the point is that a decrease in spending. combined with increased revenue from a buoyant economy, does reduce the deficit — without raising

In other words, if Congress were to apply enough restraint to future spending, the revenue from a growing economy would do the rest. After all. Washington's tax take is expected to jump by an additional $80 billion next year.

Somehow this lesson has been lost on the pundits and politicians who are throwing up their hands and saying that the deficit will never be slashed unless Uncle Sam raises taxes on Mr. and Mrs. Taxpayer.

Some say that entitlement programs, especially for the needy -food stamps, aid to dependent children, Medicare, etc. - must be slashed before spending can be reduced. Others say that it must come out of the hide of the nation's military muscle. On election night, CBS anchorman Dan Rather suggested during an interview with Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada that the only way to cut spending without raising taxes is to dig deep into the Pentagon budget. The truth is that they're all wrong. The federal budget is loaded with hundreds of discretionary expenditures that need only to be modestly reduced or frozen where they are in order to substantially cut the deficit.

For example, if Congress an-nounced next year that it would grant no cost-of-living increases in pay, pensions and other entitlement programs, it would cut the deficit by $12 billion - and not one paycheck would be reduced.

If Cong.cas trimmed the govern-ment's $18 billion in yearly economic and military foreign assistance by a mere 10 percent, it could cut $1.8 billion from the sharing program by a modest 30 percent — by eliminating assistance to wealthy cities and towns like Dallas and Beverly Hills — it would cut $1.35 billion from the deficit.

If Congress enacted legislation to make corporate and private jets pay their share for using air traffic comptroller assistance, and to impose user fees on commercial and private boats for Coast Guard services, the deficit could be trimmed by $2 billion a year.

Just a 10 percent reduction in the government's $21 billon farm subsidies, as part of a gradual reform program, could chop $2.1 billion from the deficit next year.

The Export-Import Bank's subsidized loans benefit America's richest corporations. We could save nearly $1 billion simply by eliminating Ex-im's direct loan program.

All of this would cut the deficit by $20 billion - savings that would compound in future years. And there are many more opportunities for budget savings where they came from, no matter what Dan Rather

Try To Do It In The Market

Economic recovery came to a dead halt last summer. Gross national product edged up a tad, but only because inventories piled up. Total production actually sold didn't rise at all in the

The Reagan administration, loathe to begin a second term with a recession, is considering a bold new program to make sure the GNP numbers look good this quarter. It would be called Operation DIM.

Operation DIM (the "DIM" stands for Do It in the Market) would be aimed at people who do things for themselves, things which thus don't get counted in GNP. The chief culprits are people who insist on doing their own household work - cleaning their own houses, cooking their own food, looking after their own kids.

Los Angeles police officers Joe Thursday and
Frank Grammon, stars of the not-yet-popular Dragnet spin-off, Net, have already been called in to get people to Do It in the Market, so that their activities will be counted in GNP:

Thursday: This is the city. Los Angeles. California. They call it the City of Angels. Most of the angels Do It in the Market. Some don't.

That's where I come in. I carry a badge. Thursday: Thursday, 8:23 a.m. My partner Frank Grammon and I were working the DIM detail out of Encino. It hadn't been going well.

Grammon: Ugh. This coffee tastes like it's been on the stove since Christmas. Don't knows why I drink it. The wife makes great coffee grinds it fresh. You ought to come by for some,

Thursday: Stow that, Frank. Drinking coffee your wife made is just the sort of thing we're trying to stop.

Grammon: Huh? Thursday: Look, Frank. Your wife grinds the coffee, brews it, serves it to you at no charge.

Grammon: So? Thursday: So it doesn't get counted in GNP. You should always buy your coffee at a shop, or have your wife sell it to you. Make sure it gets counted. We've got to keep GNP from falling. Grammon: What difference does it make, Joe? Thursday: A falling GNP means a recession, Frank. Do you want to be responsible for a Grammon: Sorry, Joe. I didn't think.

Thursday: 8:58 a.m. We got a complaint about woman in North Hollywood. She had been Thursday: 9:12 a.m. We were on our way. It was a beautiful, sunny day. Lots of people were out, washing their own cars, mowing their own lawns. It made me sick. Grammon: Boy, look at all those people out working. The wife wants me to work this weekend, too. I've got to paint the house. Thursday: Not this time, Frank. Hire a painter. We've got to get house-painting counted Grammon: You know, Joe, I'm beginning to like this DIM program. I'll tell the wife I can't do

Thursday: 9:42 a.m. We found the suspect's house. She answered the door, invited us in. Her name was Mabel Hensley. She told us to call her

"Granny." We did. Granny: Have some tea, Officers. I was just knitting some socks for my grandson. "Knitting, knitting, 8, 9, 10, I knit socks for gentlemen..."

Grammon: "I love muffins and I love tea; knitting, knitting, 1, 2, 3!" I love those nursery rhymes; don't you. Joe? Thursday: Sure. Look, Granny, are you going to sell those socks to your grandson?

Granny: Heavens no. Officer! What do you take me for?

Thursday: I'm taking you in for knitting socks that won't be counted in GNP. You're not Doing It in the Market.

Narrator: Granny was tried and convicted on a charge of producing goods that would not be counted in GNP. She was sentenced to five years of hard knitting in a local crafts shop, where her efforts will count. With dedicated officers like Thursday and Grammon, we can all hope that we will all Do It in the Market, get it in the GNP, and keep the recovery going.

Promotion Well-Deserved

Well, it's been a long time in coming, but it couldn't have happened to a nicer guy.

Sanford Police Sgt. William "Bill" Bernosky has been promoted to lieutenant and will assume his new role as a shift commander, sharing that title with five other lieutenants in the department.

At first glance, some might be inclined to say the promotion deserves little more than the attention one gives to routine news of auch events.

But in Bernosky's case, it's a little different. Bernosky has been with the Sanford Police Department some 15 years now, and in that time has been a moving force in community law enforcement. He has been a strong advocate of "people" law enforcement, involving himself in those areas dealing with youth, neighborhood crime-watch programs. and has played a vital, if not frustrating role, on a task force against the use of drugs and alcohol, especially by youth.

Those who know Bernosky are aware that he's always prepared to deal with problems local citizens have which require help from local law enforceme : :: just seems to listen well to the problems, then sets about finding a solution.

Police Chief Ben Butler pinned a gold badge on Bernosky symbolizing his new lieutenant status. We're confident Bernosky will wear the badge with the same pride and commitment to public service in law enforcement as he's done wearing previous badges.

Cruel Inhumanity

Afghan children shipped off to indoctrination camps in the Soviet Union are the latest victims of the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan.

Western diplomats told The Associated Press that more than 800 Afghan children. aged 7-9, were recently separated from their weeping parents and sent to the Soviet Union. where they will be schooled for 10 years. The regime called the program a "magnificent friendly gesture by the Soviet Union toward the Afghan people."

We call it the kidnapping and indoctrination of helpless youngsters.

Some zealous parents were undoubtedly convinced by the Communist Party that sending their children to Russia was the right thing to do for their future. It is imagine the bright promises of professional and party rewards being dangled before the parents: Your children will return to Afghanistan as the vanguard of socialism!

But undoubtedly many parents were coerced into giving up their children. The pain of the mothers and fathers who may never see their children again, or who, once reunited, will find their children changed by indoctrination, is difficult to imagine.

The Soviets justify their occupation of Afghanistan by comparing it to U.S. military intervention in Central America. But we can remember no time in U.S. history when this country forcibly took young foreign children to be indoctrinated in America.

Communism is based on an ideal of building a new society of equality. But it relies on using children as guinea pigs. Of the inhumanities done in the name of communism, the abduction of children is one of the most cruel.

Creating Downbeats For Downspouts

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Bob Burns, a pretelevision radio comedian, used a lot of air time playing a musical machine — I wouldn't dignify his invention by calling it an instrument known as a "bazooka."

I had always considered this collection of pipes, tubes and funnels and other plumbers' helpers, probably including a monkeywrench or two, as the ultimate in concert weaponry.

But recently I heard about a physics professor in Wisconsin who can play a downspout.

I'll concede that downspouts don't rank with tubas and trombones, and possibly even bazookas, as symphonic, jazz and marching band implements. But it takes real talent to pick out a tune on one.

Although rain gutters may never become namesakes of military weapons, as the bazooka did, a downspout virtuoso may be even more gifted than Burns was. Musically speaking.

Even so, I question whether this represents the true direction the music world is taking.

To set new trends - to be a part of the real avant-garde - music must not only have charms to soothe the savage breast, it also must be capable of soothing savage beasts.

For that reason, I am sticking with composcr-planist Kirk Nurock as an authentic musical bellwether. He is the only classic composer I know about who has written music for animals.

After Nurock's original score for bass, saxophone and Siberian husky was given its debut. other concerts featuring woodwinds and Guinea pigs were scheduled. His works have been rendered, if that is the word I am groping for, at such temples of sound as Carnegle Hall and the Bronx Zoo.

To my ear, the most musically accomplished of all animals is the otter. I particularly love to hear otters perform operatic arias. Their tonal quality truly is an auditory treat.

But, alas, musicologists rarely get a chance to hear them perform. Otter recitals have been notoriously infrequent, perhaps because so little music has been composed that would showcase their talent.

Because seals can be taught to play the harmonica and other woodwinds, some nature-lovers, if not music-lovers, try to claim they have more natural ability. Bosh!

Musical seals have been excessively acclaimed. An otter has more native aptitude in one whisker than a seal has in its entire body.

Naturalists tell us otters "use various kinds of chirps, chuckles, screams and squeals to express their feelings." Although I can't speak for others. I can say that otter chirping is music to my ears.

A concerto for violins and otters surely would produce many demands for encores.

On second thought, make that a concerto for

Although an otter solo definitely should be underscored by strings, the cello, being more contrapuntal than the violin. Is a more appropriate accompaniment.

If Nurock can be presuaded to pen an original score of otters - say a concerto for downspouts and aquatic fur-bearing mammals having webbed feet and long tails - I'm sure he would never regret it.

What's America Want?

On Nov. 6, 1984, the Evil Empire was reinstalled in office for four more years.

While more than nine out of every 10 blacks, two-thirds of Hispancia and two-thirds of the Jews were voting for change, President Ronald Reagan assembled a massive coali-tion of the comfortable, the callous and the smug.

Whether viewed as a mandate for the president's policies or as an endorsement of his personality, the outcome was impressive and dra-

As stunning as it was for those who believe in Ronald Reagan and his program, it was a dark day for those who do not.

The inevitable exit polls and other surveys, taken both before and after the damage was done, disclosed a dangerous racial and class stratification in the American electorate and promised hard times ahead for those who believe that government ought to help those who cannot help themselves.

Sixty-six percent of voting whites — men and woman — chose the president, while 90 percent of blacks and 65 percent of Hispanics were saying "no." Seventy-three percent of white Protestants, 55 percent of Catholics, and 80 percent of white "born-again" Christians chose Reagan, as did a majority of Americans from every section of the country.

But personal income — unlike education and age - did make a difference in presidential choice: The more money a voter made, the more likely he was to want Reagan again.

Only 46 percent of those Americans who make less than $12,500 g year voted for the president. But 57 percent of those who make between $12,500 and $24,999, 59 percent of those who make between $25,000 and $34,999, 67 percent of those who made between $35,000 and $50,000, and 68 percent of those who make more than $50,000 a year thought the president's policies should continue.

And race - race more than income, education or religion determined whether a voter wanted four more years or a sharply different prescription for the nation's ills.

If the 1984 election leads to a conclusion, it is that almost all blacks and most Jews and Hispanics and some white women agree that civil rights laws ought to he enforced; that the social safety net ought never to be so fragile a minnow could escape; that ketchup never was and never will be a vegetable;

A Wonder Woman

Some people bring out the best in others. Lucky are those who pass their way.

in New Mexico, there are thousands of Hispanic and Indian children who have succeeded as adults because their lives were touched — and inspired — by a teacher named Maria Gutierrez-Spencer.

Last week, this veteran educator. 65, was in New York to be acclaimed a "Wonder Woman." She and 13 other achievers, all over age 40, received grants of $7,500 each from the national Wonder Woman Foundation. The foundation annually pays tribute to individual women for their risk-taking efforts in areas of peace, equality and creativity.

Ms. Gutierrez-Spencer will use her award to continue building the unique educational materials she has created to help bi-cultural children overcome the handleap of what she calls "cultural poverty." She has a special sympathy for these children because she herself was spanked and shamed by a teacher for not knowing English when she entered school.

She explains: "Bi-cultural children come to school with a poor grasp of English as well as not knowing middle-class values. Yet teachers reward what the middle class brings to school. Mexican-American and Indian children, for example, haven't been atrongarmed to learn to sit still, so they come to school with a thousand wiggles. They have not seen people like themselves as bankers. architects or lawyers, so they have very few expectations."

Turning all that around, turns on Ms. Gutierrez-Spencer. She calls her innovative program BOLD, which is as much an adjective for her as an acronym for Bi-cultural Orientation and Language Development. Having earned a national reputation, BOLD includes demonstration classes as weil as teacher-training. With federal and state monies, the bi-lingual program began in Silver City, N.M., 21 years ago, and continues today in Deming, an old railroad town 32 miles north of the Mexican border. BOLD's originator is now its national free-lance consultant.

"I have three objectives in my teaching," says the award winner. First, I try to improve each child's self-image so he or she feels worthy. I beckon with my hands, so they know I am eager to hear what they have to say. I never point because that makes a child feel guilty.

Her second goal is each child's mastery of English. "If you don't know English." I tell my students, "you're not going to make it in this society."

Thirdly, she gets students to think and question, to value their opinions: "I sometimes reward them with gingerbread men for asking questions if they don't un-derstand something. When I bring in a piece of scientific equipment. I urge them to guess what they are going to learn. Then the class votes on the guesses.

"Of course, by then they are curious and eager. It's just like going to a horse race. You may have a good time just watching, but when you be: $2 on a nag, the adrenalin begins to flow."

Ma. Gutierrez-Spencer, whose husband. Lewis, is a retired music professor from Western New Mexico University, says keeping the bi-cultural child in school is imperative, both for the child and for

Deep Slant Talks

NEW YORK (NEA) - 1 met my anonymous informant, Deep Slant, under our favorite Potomac bridge one mild November evening not long after the election. He is a ranking member of Washington's liberal media elite, but he has secretly sickened at their behavior. Nowadays he moves among them effortlessly, accepted as one of the crowd and privy to many confidences; but when he talks to me about them there is an edge of contempt in his voice. As always, his face was invisible in the shad-

"Well, how did your friends enjoy the election?" I began brightly.

"They didn't, naturally, But they were prepared for it. In fact, they are now taking bows for having been honest enough to report Reagan's lead — not, of course, that they had any choice. It was so overwhelming that failing to report it would have ended up hurting the media far worse than it would have hurt Reagan."

"So the media are fairly free from pain?'

Not altogether," he replied.

"They can fan Mondale's humiliation. What's a lot harder to bear is their own. Remember that the liberal media have pounded Reagan day and night ever since the end of his 'honeymoon' - about June 1981, after he'd recovered from the assassination attempt. First, when he proposed his budget cuts and pushed them through Congress, the media spent five or six months interviewing every elderly welfare recipient they could get before a camera on how she was going to enjoy starving to death. Then, when the stock market failed temporarily to take off, the media reverently interviewed Henry Kaufman, Felix Rohatyn and every other Democrat they could find on Wall Street, asking 'what signal the market is giving us.' Of course, when the market finally did take off, the media didn't stick around to ask anybody what the new signal was.

"After that," Deep Slant con-tinued, "the big story was unemployment. Boy, how they tracked those monthly increases announced by the Bureau of Labor Statistics! Remember all those interviews on the evening news shows with guys out of work? But when the statistics turned around and unemployment headed down, how many upbeat interviews did you see? Instead, we got a bunch of stories about the pockets of poverty' that remained.

Failure To Recall Fords A Mistake

WASHINGTON — New informa-tion gathered by the National Highway Trame Safety Administra-tion makes shockingly clear the adency's 1980 decision to accomagency's 1980 decision to spare Ford Motor Co. the largest auto recall in history continues to exact a grialy toll of death and injury.

In the three years and eight months following the decision, the agency's own figures show at least 48 deaths and 1.084 injuries from accidents allegedly caused by faulty transmissions in Ford vehicles. But transmissions in Ford vehicles. But Rep. Tim Wirth, D-Colo., and the non-profit Center for Auto Safety suspect the death toll is much higher — more than 70, in fact.

Safety advisers at NHTSA con-cluded four years ago that components of automatic transmission systems in nearly 10 million Ford. Mercury and Lincoln cars in model years 1970-1979 were dangerously defective. The defect can cause the gear to shift from park to reverse when the motor is left running.

The safety experts advised a recall, which would have cost Ford about $200 million. The company argued - and insists to this day that the accidents were the result of driver error. Neil Goldschmidt, then secretary of transportation, agreed with the company and overruled his advisers' recommendation for a recall. Instead, he ordered Ford to mail each owner a warning sticker - 1-by-5 inches, black on gray - to put near the gearahist as a reminder to be careful when parking.

From July 1977, when NHTSA began its investigation of the faulty transmissions, till Goldschmidt's decision in December 1980, the agency's figures show 114 deaths and 2,006 injuries in accidents linked to the park-to-reverse pro-

But Roger Maugh, Ford's director of automotive safety, continues to fault driver error, not the transmission. "A transmission in good working order will not jump or slip out of park," he told my associate Tony Capaccio. "Nor can such a transmission fail to engage or hold in park."

Matgh also said that "unexpected movement of driverless vehicles" is not a Ford-only phenomenon."

Both Ford and NHTSA consider the warning-sticker mailout an adequate solution. Maugh said 88 percent of the stickers were deliver-

Ruby Weinbrecht of McLean, Va., was one of the 12 percent who didn't receive the warning sticker. She suffered severe contusions last year when she tried to stop the rearward lurch of her 1978 LTD after she set the gear in park and got out to dump garbage.

"Although the settlement required Ford to notify the owners of all defective cars," Ms. Weinbrecht wrote NHTSA. "we did not receive auch a notice even though we are the original owners of the car."

The safety agency director, Diane Steed, in a statement to Wirth last year, said of the Goldschmidt de-cision. "At the present time I am not inclined to disturb this settlement."

Footnote: Although Ford insists there was nothing wrong with its automatic transmissions from 1970 to 1979, the design was changed for

1980 models. THE NEW BOY NETWORK: At one time, El Salvador's leftist guerrillas received help from the Sundinistas in Nicaragua in their sixyear battle. They still may be getting some assistance. From their point of view, that's only fair. In the late 1970s, the Salvadoran rebeis reportedly lent the Sandinistas $10 million to $11 million (obtained from kinds ransoms) to finance the fight against the Somoza dictatorship. Once they ousted Somoza, the Sandinistas began returning the favor to the Salvadoran guerrillas. ...Lay off me, will ya'?!..

OUR READERS WRITE

am amazed, shocked, even terrifled by the disclosure in your front page story in last Sunday's Evening Herald (Nov. 18) that our county sheriff John Polk and Longwood Police Chief Greg Manning have confessed to the "heinous crime" of engaging in a poker game at a private picnic! And bets went as high as ten dollars! Horror of horrors!

But worse yet is the fact I just learned that as many as a hundred poker games take place in private homes in Seminole County every weekend, and in almost half of the homes having TV sets, the residents actually be money on the outcome of football games, basketball games, baseball games, even hockey games! My, oh my! I never dreamed "crime" was so widespread here! So, I propose that Seminole County immediately organize a special vice squad of perhaps 100 skilled people to fan out and swoop down on these suspects and put a stop to this "criminal behavior." I estimate that an initial budget of about $2 million would be enough to get started. Of course, more would be needed in a few weeks, as the operation is extended to surveillance of all golf courses, where it is reported that side bets range all the way from a bottle of beer to a full course meal - and sometimes even cash money is wagered! And we must not overlook the Senior Citizens who pitch horsehoes They often bet as much as a whole dime on the outcome of a game.

It certainly is not fair to single out just two men who gambled when there very obviously are so many all with their conduct?

Then, on second thought, perhaps it would make more sense — and cost a lot less — to ASK OUR STATE LEGISLATORS to re-examine the state's gambling laws, and make revisions to clarify the real intent of those laws, which never were intended to infringe upon the timehonored "Saturday night poker game," but were aimed at organized gambling activities.

All the "hoop-la" over Sheriff Polk's and Chief Manning's "gambling" is very similar to the affair of the "Six Old Men" of a neighboring county whose arrest for gambling brought them national fame. Of course, those men only bet dimes and quarters, not (heaven forbid!) ten whole dollars!

Perhaps this incident can serve to underscore what a ludicrous situation can develop when a well-intended law is mis-applied.

Anyone Know A Good Trash Pickup Firm?

Re: Lake Mary Commission meeting vs Danjohn Garbage Disposal.

1, too, would like to know which Danjohn employee won the prize for broken and banged up garbage cans as expressed by a lady at the Lake Mary City Commission meeting. However, damaged garbage cans are not the only problem with Danjohn.

Danjohn expects payment two months in advance so that they can use our money for operating capital. and then they fail to pick up garbage on the scheduled days.

We have been were lively him rever since they bought out the previous company whose name I cannot remember, but I know we have been using this service for a number of years. And most of the time have not had too many complaints. Since mid-summer Danjohn seems to have forgotten where we live, and when I wrote complaining. I was informed by the manager that "you and your neighbors are lucky that the garbage was picked up at all during those past years because the rules say that cans must be placed a certain distance from the highway." He went on to tell me that he was notifying all my neighbors accordingly.

It seems strange to me that for all the months prior, his trucks managed to drive over the state right of way to our property line which is 50 feet from state Road 46 where the cans were placed, but all of a sudden and without prior notice to us. Danjohn chose simply not to pick up at all. This occurred during the latter part of August and first part of September. When I wrote (after numerous phone complaints), Mr. O'Conner sent me a surly letter implying that I was fortunate that they had picked it up all these months and I should have been charged $40 monthly for special service. I had asked for a credit on my billing, but instead received my regular billing with a substantial increase.

If anyone out there presently is being serviced by a reliable, pleasant. conscientious garbage company with reasonable rates, please let me know.

Anti-Furman Article Lawyer Propaganda

An attorney in Orlando wrote an article recently defending the Bar Association's revenge against Rosemary Furman. I think it should be taken with a grain of salt. It's lawyer propaganda.

Blaming the clogging of the courts on Ms. Furman is a shameful attempt at an alibi for criminal lawyers who waste the taxpayers' money on appeal after appear for criminals who rape and murder repeatedly.

Our legal system has too much power. Most of our representatives and senators are lawyers. Either they are incompetent or they unintentionally make laws that can't be interpreted easily, another excuse for long court battles.

If you doubt that lawyers are too powerful, and very greedy, just review what happened to Amendment 9, recently.

Lawyers didn't put up that big fight over the rights of the doctors' patients. It was to protect their own fat fees. And they won over the medical association.

I am not saying all doctors are above greed but most of them do a lot more for humanity than lawyers. And doctors are never promoted to the Supreme Court!

I admire Governor Graham. If he is as fair and strong as I think he is, he will pardon Rosemary Furman. She doesn't deserve a jail sentence, or a

Bitter Pills For Business

By Michael K. Evans United Press International

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Businessmen who voted Republican in this election on the grounds that their own pocketbooks would thereby be enhanced had better brace themselves for some bitter medicine next year.

For the way tax policy in Washington is shaping up, corporate income taxes will rise anywhere between 20 to 50 percent in 1985.

The decision has all but officially been made not to raise personal income taxes: any tax reform for individuals will be revenue neutral, at least in an ex ante sense.

However, no such immunity is being extended to the business sector. In fact, even as this is being written, Democrats around town are busily distributing information purporting to show that the ratio of corporate income taxes to profits plus depreciation — the amount of money the firm retains after paying all current expenses - has declined dramatically in the past two decades. It has fallen from 30.6 percent in 1963 to 18.5 percent in 1983.

Why should corporations get these breaks, it is argued, when individuals are still paying a higher tax rate than 20 years ago in spite of the 25 percent rate reduction of the past three years?

The old hoary arguments dredged up time and again by the business community simply are not going to work this time. It used to be argued that inflation distorted depreciation allowances, since replacement goods cost more and hence the amount set aside was inadequate, thereby ballooning profits.

However, the latest Commerce Department figures show that the excess of corporate depreciation allowances relative to the shortfalls caused by inflation reached an annual rate of $59 billion last quarter, while at the same time the overstatement of profits due too apprectation of inventory stocks dropped all ay to $0.5 billion.

Business also used to argue, with some success, that their lower tax rates spurred higher capital spending, which led to greater increases in productivity and therefore raised the standard of living for everyone.

Unfortunately in the past three years, the ratio of capital spending to GNP has declined from 12.7 to 12.1 percent, an argument which the tax increasers have scized on in great gice to show why previous tax breaks have been worth-

The final argument, namely that this is an investment-led recovery, also falls on fallow ground when it is pointed out that the only reason capital spending recovered so rapidly in the past year is that it went down for the count with a direct hit during the Great Recession.

What Newspapers Across The Nation Are Saying

By Any Other Name, It's Still A Tax Increase

Tulsa World

President Reagan is sticking by his campaign promise not to raise taxes. But that doesn't mean Americans won't be paying higher taxes. It means the extra payment won't be called a tax Increase. For example, one proposal now being circulated in the administration would reduce the income tax deduction on medical expenses. Get it? It isn't really a tax increase, just a change in the tax law that would result in millions of taxpayers paying

The good news is that President Reagan realizes the government is going to have to collect some extra tax if the budget deficit problem is to be controlled. If he wants to call it something other than a tax increase, well why argue?

Walter Mondale argued about it during the campaign and insisted on calling a tax increase a tax increase. And look what happened to him.

Since Americans are going to have to pay more tax in any event, maybe we will all feel better if we call it tax reform or tax simplication anything but a tax increase.

Waterbury (Conn.) Republican

Nicaragua's melodramatic call for the populace to brace for an imminent U.S. invasion is more theatries for the world's consumption than it is legitimate fear of the Yankees. But that doesn't mean it isn't shrewd theatries.

The episode of the aparently phantom MiGs is beginning to look like a Nicaraguan and Soviet tease designed to test President Reagan's mettle. If the Sandinista government were so provocative as to accept MiGs - aircraft that could be used as offensive weapons against Nicaraguan neighbors - then the government would do well to worry about a U.S. military response.

But in the absence of such significant shift in the region's military balance, Nicaragua probably doesn't need to fear a conventional invasion by the United States.

There may be, and rightly so, attempts by the U.S. to intercept Soviet arms shipments to Nicaragua and continuing American surveillance of what's being unloaded at Nicaraguan ports. ... But there's a second motive to the Sandinistas' frantic calls for the citizenry to leave the fields and take up weapons. It's an ages-old ploy for to focus on an outside enemy. The Boston Hereld

The Soviets, ever creative in acts of repression. have devised new and ingenious ways to discourage Jewish emigration ... The communists have all but elimiated the once thriving emigration movement, which offered support to would-be emigrants. ... Some who seek to save Soviet Jews believe Moscow can be shamed into letting them go. This mistakenly assumes that the communists care about their public image. A far more effective tactic would be to use trade and-or negotiations as a bargaining device. For example, tell the Soviets, "No more grain deals until you liberalize emigration procedures and begin issuing reasonable numbers of visas." Since the commissars have no shame, but are highly pragmatic, this may be the best approach.

Seattle Post-Intelligencer

Arturo J. Cruz, the moderate Nicaraguan who was jailed by the right-wing regime of Anastasio Somoza and now opposes the leftist government of the Sandinista succession, happened to be in Scattle this week, just as reports circulated that the Chilean police state was rounding up suspected dissidents in Santiago.

Cruz, who served in the Sandinista junta before eventually denouncing it as yet another dictatorship foisted on his nation, did not mention Chile by name ... But he noted during his visit that right-wing dictatorships are a read to left-wing dictatorships, that there is a pendulum effect, one regime feeding off the excesses of the other and then succeeding it. This is an apt point to remember as Chile's police and armed forces surround yet another neighborhood with the aid of tanks and helicopters and then haul off all the adult males to that infamous soccer stadium for questioning and identity checks. These are not the acts of a regime with which the United States should be identified.

Chilean dictator Augusto Pinochet's declaration that he is an ardent anti-communist should not suffice for admission to the democratic club. Pinochet, whose military regime took over 11 years ago and shows virtually no signs of moving toward decency, should be shown a cold U.S. shoulder.

An embarrassed Department of State moved terms.

governments faced with internal difficulties to try with alacrity to distance itself from 21 U.S. ambassadors' endorsement of Sen Jesse A. Helms of North Carolina, a Republican, during his re-election campaign.

But the real question isn't whether the department officially condones blatant political activity by ambassadors, but what sort of environment made their expect to get away with

The ambassadors broke no law. As appointees of the president ... they are not covered by the laws that restrict political participation by most federal employees. ...

But ambassadors play key roles in the execution of U.S. foreign policy ... foreign governments and peoples must not be given reason to suspect their motivations. . An administration that respected the tradition of separation, and the reasons for it, would have told its ambassadors so in terms so forceful that they wouldn't have dared to make such an endorsement. What the 21 politico-diplomats did reflects not just poor judgment and unprofessionalism on their part, but neglect by those in charge.

Dallas Times Herald

The Modern Language Association concludes in a new report that colleges and universities are reinstituting foreign language requirements abandoned in the late 1960s and that, as a result. high schools are finding it easier to recruit students for foreign language courses. Enrollments have increased dramatically in the past several years.

This development may not strike many people as particularly important. But in fact it is. Because of a long-standing misonception that foreign language study is of little practical value. the U.S. has been hurt in a couple of significant ways. Not only has the nation's foreign trade been undermined, but its diplomatic efforts have been handicapped at times as well.

Tongue-tied Americans have put themselves at a severe disadvantage with trading partners. When the United States' economic power was unchallenged, the inability of Americans to speak their clients' languages did not matter much. Hut as this nation loses its competitive edge, that shortcoming is being felt. U.S. businesses are losing deals because they have failed to learn how to speak with the rest of the world on its own

Colonel Khadafy of Libya has taught us a good deal in his bungled attempt to reach into Egypt to kill a political opponent. ... Thanks to superb Egyptian police work, one of these sordid plots has now been fully exposed. Shrewdly misled, Khadafy's "dipiomata" and radio boasted about a killing that naver occurred. That was good news. But it's not good enough if the world does nothing more to punish a now-documented case of state terrorism, involving flagrant abuse of diplomatic Khadafy's trespasses are no longer conjectural. He has used Libya's oil wealth to subvert his neighbors and his diplomats to murder his enemies aboard. Is the world so hungry for his oil that it will go on pretending he conducts business in the normal fashion?

Where are the proposals to punish his conduct? Who will finally move to close Libya's embassies and otherwise isolate its agents? Who will present the case for sanctions at the United Nations? And who will go on defending the grant of diplomatic immunity to proven murderers?

The Secremento (Calif.) Bee

After months of total allence on the subject during the election campaign, the Reagan administration has now filled the news with "leaks" about its plans for solving the federal tax problem. Unfortunately, it's chosen the wrong problem to solve.

As a result, we are now off and running with a full-scale national debate about the virtues of a simplified tax system, combining lower and flatter income tax rates with few tax deductions

It's not the fairness or the complexity of the federal tax system that is our most pressing economic problem ...

The emergency is a level of federal debt that . is growing at a speed the nation cannot keep up

Of course, one could, as the president proposed during the election campaign, simply wait and hope that the problem will disappear in a burst of economic growth. But to do the trick, the growth would have to be sustained at levels greater and longer than the country has ever managed before

The problem is, rather, to reverse the conditions that threaten to stifle growth. And that must start with an attack on the federal deficit, which the president remains wholly unwilling to make.

Something Butler is willing to share with some of his friends is his experience in beating cancer."I got a second chance."

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) -After three decades of writing and a string of best sellers. John Updike admits he has slowed down.

He once said a typical day included eight hours of writing and eight hours of sleeping with eight hours left to worry about his writing.

Now he says he tries to sit down to write every morning from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., and sometimes in the afternoon, but he seems content with two to three hours of good writing.

John Madden's Book Should Come With A Warning Label

By United Press International Hey Wait a Minute, I Wrote a Book, by John Madden, (Villard Books, 224 pp., 814.95). On Aug. 12 1978, the crowd fell silent at the Oakland Collecum. In front of a shocked, sold-out crowd, New England wide receiver Darryl Stingley received a fearsome hit from Oakland Raiders safety Jack Tatum and was left paralyzed for life. On the sidelines, Raidera coach John Madden stood hoping that somehow, some way. Stingley would get up off the turf.

All three men would never be the same again. All three men's NFL careers would soon come to an end.

Madden starts out his new book "Hey Wait a Minute, I Wrote a Book" describing the feelings he went through as an NFL coach seeing the Stingley Incident. He discusses the frustration and help-lessness that went through his mind while visiting Stingley in the hospital. He also talks about Jack Tatum, not as the killer he was port ayed to be, but as a human being.

It is the single most important chapter of his book.

The rest of the book falls victim to Madden's television personality. The reader expects it to be filled with funny stories, but disappointingly it is not.

Instead, Madden at times rambles, throwing in a group of facts that seem to have little continuity. Everybody knows Madden has a fear of flying and instead takes trains everywhere. However, the book's tales of train travel are not written in a humorous manner.

But that may not be Madden's fault. The book, as most books by sports figures are, was written with the help of a famous sportswriter. In this case, it was New York Times columnist Dave Anderson. It was Anderson's job to make the book readable, but instead he has chosen to write in a dry newspaper style. Madden may have been better off teaming up with a magazine writer. Madden's book, though, does offer the sports fan a unique opportunity. There have been very few sports events in which the reader has had the opportunity to view the event from two sides. If a fan were to read Jack Tatum's book, "They Call Me Assassin," (Everest House, 251 pp., 012.95) and then Madden's book, the reader would have an inside view of the psychology of professional football.

Madden describes Tatum as a victim of the game.' A person who grew up programmed to function by the rules of the game of football. Madden says he thought that Tatum wanted to go to the hospital to visit Stingley, but didn't because of the way his mind had been programmed.

However, Madden makes no judgment on whether such programing is right or wrong.

Tatum, on the other hand, blames the football establishment. Madden's book should come with a warning label. If you are looking for a humorous, non-thinking book, don't pick this work up. But if one wants to look inside what makes people in the game of football successful, then "Hey Wait a Minute, I Wrote a Book" is well worth picking up. -William D. Murray

Kasserine, the Battlefield Slaughter of American Troops by Rommel's Afrika Korps, by Charles Whiting, (Stein and Day, 242 pp., illus., $17.95). In November 1942, thousands of wet-behind-the-cars American troops surged onto the shores of North Africa to liberate French-held countries from Nazi domination. The French, not wanting the "liberation" as much as their allies, fought back, killing 1,000 Americans and wounding another 1,000.

The dead were the first Americans killed across the Atlantic in World War II. The incident was a number omen of the disaster to come.

This book by military historian Charles Whiting details the bickering between American, British and French commanders - most of whom had not seen combat since World War I - as they prepared to battle the Nazis.

Whiting explains how the untested American troops had to contend with Arab spies and turncoat Frenchmen.

The campaign culminated on Valentine's Day, 1943, in a showdown at Kaseerine Pass overlooking the road to the strategic port city of Tunis. The three-day battle pitted combat-weary. undersupplied, badly commanded Allied troops against the dreaded, experienced Afrika Korps commanded by Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, one of the Nazis' most brilliant battlefield tacticians.

The outcome was inevitable. Of the 30,000 Americans who went into battle. nearly one-fourth were killed, wounded or captured. The only thing that saved the allied front in North Africa - and the subsequent invasion of Sicily - was the decision by a disease-racked Rommel to call off the attack.

Whiting issues a scathing indictment of the bumbling, inept Allied leadership that nearly lost the North African campaign. He tells the tale of "youthful innocence sacrificed at the altar of the god of war by incompetent, complacent old men, who lived on to die in bed. The sacrifice was, as it always is in war, in the blood of century. She acknowledged that after the defeat of Walter Mondale and Gerry Ferraro the woman's movement may appear to be marking time in the United States but that definitely if not the case elsewhere in the world.

WOMAN'S WORLD

The prediction about a robust feminist crusade in the wings, underway and on the way internationally - depending on which country you have in mind - came from Robin Morgan, feminist best known for her tome, "Staterhood is Powerful."

She believes the international feminist movement is more viable than it ever was and is forming stronger linkages to shape "planetary feminism." Morgan speaks from the perch of to Z (for Zimbabwe). a highly informed insider.

"The biggest issues are peace, sexual politics, and power," Morgan said, reached by phone while running a supersecret meeting -"The first global feminist think tank."

The think tank came to earth somewhere on Long Island, N.Y., recently to develop a global feminist strategy. It was not small potatoes. Kingpins from the world's feminist movement answered the roll.

Funding wasn't the pinchpenny type. The money, in fact, came from grants bestowed by The Ford Foundation, the L. J. Skaggs and Mary C. Skaggs Foundations, the United Methodist Church - World Division. General Board of Global Ministries.

"We are very excited and very full of hope," Morgan said. speaking of stronger cooperation to achieve planetary feminism. Morgan, an activist in the international women's movement, said among strategists plunging into the think tank were American-born Margaret Chant Papandreou, wife of the president of Greece, co-founder and current president of the Women's Union of Greece, and Maria de Lourdes Pintasilgo. former prime minister of Portugal and Portugese ambassador to UNESCO.

Many of the women who participated in the "think tank" strategy session are among contributors, Morgan said. There also are celebrity feminist authors. For one example. Simone de Beauvoir of France. But some writings are from women in exile, underground or writing under a made-up name while writing from such nations as Cuba, South Africa. Morgan said among issues addressed at The Sisterhood is Global Strategy conference were: -the crisis in world population in the context of women's right to reproductive freedom. -the rising rate of illiteracy among females. -the increasing dangers of nuclear war.

-the crisis in the world economy as it affects women who suffer from "GNP laross national product) invisibility" in labor. -the increasing problems of the world's elderly, the majority of whom are women and are also the primary caretakers of the elderly in almost all cultures.

"Feminism is the politics of the 21st century." Morgan says. "The goal is to develop concrete, practical and original proposals which will enable national governments, the United Nations, all non-governmental organizations and independent feminists to bring about pro-
