Police awaiting autopsy results

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Police are awaiting autopsy results to determine if Charles T. DeLatour, 34, who was a hemophiliac, bled to death following a Wednesday night fight.

DeLatour was found dead at his home at 312 Barkley Ave., Altamonte Springs, at about 9 a.m. Thursday. Witnesses told Altamonte Springs police he was in a fight at his home the night before, but police have not yet questioned the other fighter. Detective Jerry Warriner said today.

Warriner said it is too early to tell where the investigation might lead, but that DeLatour's death appears to have been accidental.

Station offers Elvis reward

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — This is a contest for die-hard Elvis fans.

A Nashville radio station, saying it wants to dispel rumors Elvis Presley is still alive, is offering $1 million to anyone who can bring the rock 'n' roll king to Nashville for an interview.

"Sightings of Elvis have been reported from all around the world — a restaurant in Germany, a Burger King in Michigan and a trailer park in Tennessee," station WYHY said Thursday.

The station, which calls itself "Y107, the outrageous FM," said until August it would pay $1 million "to anyone who can bring the real, one and only Elvis, Aaron Presley to Y107's Studio at 810 Division St. Nashville, Tenn., for a one-hour exclusive interview."

Religious smoker must pay fine

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (UPI) — A man who claims marijuana is the body and blood of Christ can tell it to the state's Supreme Court.

Hampden Superior Court Judge William Simmons ruled Wednesday David Nisenbaum must pay a $5,000 fine within six months for his 1983 conviction on marijuana trafficking.

Nisenbaum's conviction stems from a raid two years earlier at his 54-acre Monson farm, from which authorities seized 103 pounds of marijuana, 9.9 grams of hashish and $7,000 in cash.

Nisenbaum served two years in jail, was placed on probation and ordered to pay the $5,000 fine. His wife, Christine, was also convicted and placed on probation for her role in the drug trafficking.

Charter discussion heated

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald staff writer

CASSELBERRY — The issue of county authority in cities remained heated to the very end as members of the Seminole County Charter Advisory Committee put the finishing touches on their proposed charter for the county.

The changes made Thursday night left County Attorney Nikki Clayton declaring the county could be weakened by allowing cities to opt out of countywide ordinances they don't like.

"It appears to substantially weaken those powers that currently exist within the county," Clayton said.

The clause met with the approval of several city representatives from Altamonte Springs.

"We can accept it as it is," said Altamonte Springs Mayor Dudley Bates.

Last month, committee members decided on wording stating city ordinances will prevail over county ordinances where a conflict exists. The county ordinance would remain in effect in cities until the city commissioners or council members pass ordinances opting out of the county ordinance, except where state laws give the county specific rights to pass laws throughout the county.

But in an attempt to take a positive approach with the cities, the committee changed the wording requiring cities to adopt their own ordinances accepting the county ordinance. Until that city ordinance is passed, no county ordinance will prevail in a city, unless the state has granted specific rights to the county to pass such laws.

Clayton said the change might allow a city commission or council to decide not to accept a "bed tax" for hotel and motel rooms, even if county voters approve the proposed bed tax this November.

Clayton said the cities might not conduct a thorough review of the subject before deciding to opt out of the county ordinance.

County Administrator Ken Hooper said he's afraid the change might prevent the county from collecting voter-approved local option gasoline taxes in cities. But committee attorney Harry Stewart said the gas taxes are a power granted by the state to counties.

The committee's proposed charter is not the document voters may see in November, however. County commissioners reserved the right to make changes in the proposed document before placing it on the November ballot for voter approval. If approved, the charter will take effect Jan. 1.

Although it leaves Seminole County government essentially the same as it currently is, the charter alone gives county residents the power to say how they want Seminole County to govern them.

The five-member, at-large county commission remains in the proposal, although the charter recognizes a voter initiative might change the commission to a single-member form. The sheriff, clerk of courts and other constitutionally-mandated elected officers remain unaffected by the proposed charter.

As a bonus for voters, the charter allows them to pass ordinances or repeal certain existing ordinances that don't have to do with taxes, budgets, bond issues, capital improvements, rezonings or salaries of employees.

PUBLIC HEARINGS

County residents will have an opportunity to voice their opinion on the Seminole County Charter Advisory Committee's proposed charter — the county constitution — at two public hearings.

July 19 at 7 p.m.: Seminole County Agriculture Center Auditorium, Five Points Complex, 250 West County Home Road, Sanford.

July 21 at 7 p.m.: Main Seminole County Library, 215 Oxford Road, Casselberry.

Longwood cuts merit bonus plan for employees

By JANE CASSELBERRY
Herald staff writer

LONGWOOD — Rejecting the advice of its city administrator and management consultant, the city commission, in a 3-2 consensus, agreed to eliminate the entire employee merit bonus program from the proposed 1988-89 city budget.

The cut was part of $250,000 slashed from the proposed $5,431,419 general fund operating budget at the second budget work session Thursday.

Mayor Dave Gunter said the merit bonus for exemplary employees is called for in the city's personnel policy and it would be unfair to put $180,000 for street reconstruction on the backs of employees.

City Administrator Gene DeMarie pointed out there is no relation between employees and the cost of capital improvements. He said the effect will be devastating on employee morale and would mean practically nothing to the tax rate. Even with the cuts, some tax increase is expected to be necessary for the needed street reconstruction, but not as much as the $1.50 per $1,000 assessed property valuation discussed Thursday night. The budget, as proposed, does not call for a tax increase.

Budgeted replacements for three old police patrol cars and an infrared night scope were cut from the police budget.

City Commissioner Hank Hardy, who had demanded $650,000 be cut from the proposed general fund budget, was not satisfied and wanted even more cut.

Efforts by Hardy to eliminate the position of full-time attorney and the 5 percent cost of living allowance failed. The commission, in a 4-1 consensus, agreed to keep the full-time attorney and evaluate the position quarterly for cost effectiveness.

Commissioner Ted Poelking went on record in favor of eliminating all merit pay and the full-time city attorney's office. Deputy Mayor Lynette Dennis went along with them on dropping the merit pay.

Hardy proposed that only $50,000 be included in the budget for legal services because he had been told by an unnamed individual that is the price for which he would contract to be a part-time city attorney. City Commissioner Rick Bullington said he, too, was approached.

Gunter called the proposal the most unethical thing to come before a city commission. City Attorney Michael Kramer said, "This is highly improper that

Animal control review intensifies in county

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — The focus of attention on the Seminole County Animal Control Department escalated this week.

"There are problems out there," County Administrator Ken Hooper commented when asked about the intensity of the review of the department.

Hooper said Thursday the U.S. Department of Labor Wage and Hour Division will investigate the Animal Control Department beginning July 20 regarding an apparent complaint about overtime hours. No other details were available and the division does not confirm investigations.

Meanwhile, the county's own review of the department has become more acute. Wednesday, three animal control employees, including two shelter workers, discussed conditions at the department with Hooper. Hooper said much of the discussion centered around department director Bob McIntosh.

Hooper said the three employees discussed McIntosh's management style. Inconsistencies in his directions and the employees' resulting misunderstanding of department rules.

Those complaints were the main reasons cited by five employees, including the two top department supervisors, when they resigned earlier this year. The five employees reported McIntosh was inconsistent in his statements and would frequently say one thing to an employee in private, but would say something else a short time later when another employee was present.

The two supervisors who resigned complained McIntosh would frequently change their employee reviews and reverse their directions to employees under their supervision.

Hooper said he told McIntosh and newly-appointed chief animal control officer Tom LaCrosse Thursday they are to report directly to him, bypassing Dr. Jorge Deju, director of the county health and Human Services Division. Deju is McIntosh's direct supervisor.

Hooper said the chain of command change was not due to any problems regarding Deju, but to allow Deju to devote his time to completing negotiations with local hospitals for an indigent mother maternity program and other pressing matters.

Hooper said he will also begin daily visits to the department to

County murder cases increase

By WAYNE MIZE
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — If the murder rate in Seminole County continues at its current pace, 1988 will show a 20 percent increase in killings.

In 1987, 20 murders were committed in the county.

To date, 14 murders have been committed at a rate of approximately two per month. If the trend continues, 24 murders will be committed in 1988.

"I can't remember a year in the county when we've had 24 murders," said Sanford Police Chief Steven Harriett, whose law enforcement career began in 1974.

Harriett said he believes the increase in killings is a direct result of a national drug problem.

"The society that we live in at this day and time appears to be more violent than the past," said Harriett. "Ten years ago our priorities were not the same. Now, almost everything we do in law enforcement is related to illegal drugs."

"I think you will see eventually that this increase in murders is a result of a drug problem."

Congressmen urge Eastern contract

MIAMI (UPI) — Ten Florida congressmen, spurred by Miami business leaders, have agreed to sign a letter urging the National Mediation Board to solve a contract dispute at Eastern Airlines, a congressional aide says.

The letter, circulated Thursday among lawmakers in Washington, urges the three-member panel to set a deadline for resolving talks between Eastern and its largest union, said an aide to Rep. Charles Bennett, D-Jacksonville.

Missing child found in swamp

ST. AUGUSTINE (UPI) — An 18-month-old boy was found alive and well in a snake-infested swamp Thursday after an all-night search by 200 volunteers and law enforcement officers equipped with dogs, helicopters and an infra-red detection device.

Jonathan Kelly was found shortly before 11 a.m. by volunteer Larry Shook, an ROTC advisor at St. Augustine High School.

"I'm glad we found him and he was safe," Shook said. "I heard a voice and I went to the right, and I heard a cry. So I called his name and he cut loose. Then I knew I had him. He was a tough little kid."

The little boy had some cuts and numerous mosquito bites, but no serious injuries. He was found in a brushy ditch about three-quarters of a mile from the home where he disappeared.

"I just want to thank everybody," said the youngster's father. "Just thank God he is alive."

Lt. J.D. Cannon of the St. Johns County sheriff's office said the youngster was playing on a swing with his 5-year-old brother when both disappeared from the home 7 miles north of St. Augustine where the family was visiting.

"They left together and the 5-year-old came back," Cannon said.

When asked if there were snakes in the area, he replied: "God yes. It's a pretty rough area."

Murderer sentenced to life

JACKSONVILLE (UPI) — Petty Officer Ruben Colon was sentenced to life in prison Thursday, one day after he was found guilty of murder, kidnapping and robbery in the March 15 slaying of a pay clerk aboard the USS John Hancock.

After an impassioned plea by Colon, the jury of five Navy officers considered deliberating further the guilty verdict reached Wednesday, but decided to stick with the original decision.

During the sentencing hearing, Colon, who did not testify during the trial, said he was stunned by the verdict because he did not think the government's case was adequate for a conviction.

"I was also stunned by the simple fact that I didn't do it," he said. "Ask yourselves if money and a safety deposit box are enough to convict me of robbery and murder."

The jury returned about four hours later with the sentence. Colon, 34, could have been sentenced to die.

He was arrested in April on board the Hancock and charged in the robbery and death of Lt. J.G. Rattiah Prasad, 24, of Park Forrest, Ill.

Prasad was shot once in the head at close range on pay day aboard the Hancock and his body was dumped inside a walk-in closet. Navy officials said they later discovered more than $94,000 in cash and checks missing from a safe in the ship's disbursing office.

State prisons begin early release program

By United Press International

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — Another 103 inmates were released from the chronically overcrowded Florida prison system under a revised early release program that for the first time subjects the freed inmates to supervision.

Of those released to make room for new arrivals under the new provision credit mechanism, 44 faced outstanding charges and were held for state or local law enforcement agencies, said Bob Macmaster, spokesman for the Department of Corrections.

The releases were achieved through an award of 20 days provisional credit. Unlike the old administrative gain time program, which released inmates free and clear, the new system allows authorities to keep an eye on the inmates released.

"The main difference is that now we can bring them back if while on provisional release, they violate supervision," said Paula Tully, a spokeswoman for the department.

Inmates are ineligible for provisional release if they are serving time for first degree murder or the mandatory portion of a minimum-mandatory sentence for any other capital offense, such as a firearms or sex offenses.

Inmates are ineligible if they were convicted or ever have been convicted of any sexual offense involving children under age 13.

The period of supervision is 90 days, during which the inmate must maintain a permanent residence or job, refrain from criminal behavior and the company of criminals, and get along with others.

In the first 30 days, probation officers must visit the freed inmate at home at least twice and contact his employers or relatives at least twice. In the second 30 days, one inmate visit and one employer or family member check is required, and in the final 30 days, only one inmate visit is required.

The releases are triggered whenever the system hits 97.5 percent of its capacity under a federal court order. The court-ordered population limit is 34,319 inmates.

On Wednesday, when the release was ordered, the system held 33,581 inmates.

Supreme Court issues legal definition of 'professional'

By United Press International

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — Insurance agents are not professionals and so are not protected by the statute of limitations on professional malpractice suits, the Supreme Court says.

The court had to establish a new legal definition of "professional" to render the ruling Thursday. Under that definition, Floridians must hold a four-year college degree in a vocation that requires a degree for state licensing to be legally considered professionals.

The court ruled in the case of Donald Pierce, whose insurance company successfully blocked Pierce's lawsuit by arguing the two-year statute of limitations on filing a professional malpractice suit had expired. Central to that defense was the company's assertion that insurance agents are legally professionals.

Pierce was injured in a traffic accident caused by an uninsured motorist in 1981. His insurer, AALL Insurance Company, said Pierce had not purchased uninsured motorist insurance and refused to pay his claim.

Pierce filed suit against the AALL agent who had sold him his policy in April, 1985. Among other charges, Pierce claimed he had requested uninsured motorist coverage and that the agent told him he would be fully covered.

Pierce's case was summarily dismissed by both a lower court and the 5th District Court of Appeals. The appeals court, however, asked the Supreme Court to rule on whether an insurance agent is a professional.

In making its ruling, the Supreme Court found that Florida statutes do not specifically define who is or is not a professional.

Taft latest contender for secretary of state

By United Press International

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — Democratic secretary of state candidate James Taft says he can beat Republican incumbent Jim Smith despite Smith's vast lead in experience, money and name recognition.

Taft, a Citrus County realtor, announced for the Democratic nomination on Thursday.

He is the only Democrat in the race. Former Democratic state senator Frank Mann dropped out last month because he felt he did not have a realistic chance of beating Smith.

Smith has already raised more than $1 million, has a multimillion-dollar personal fortune he can draw on and is one of the best-known politicians in Florida. But Taft, who has not yet begun raising money for his bid, said he believes he can win.

NATIONAL BRIEFS

Hayride shows 'somebody cares'

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Midwestern farmers, their spirits lifted by the knowledge that "somebody somewhere cares," gratefully accepted 50,000 bales of hay hauled in the "Hayride 500" by Southerners on a mission of goodwill.

Seventy-five tractor-trailers, many driven by stock car racers, rumbled into Columbus Thursday evening to complete a 12-hour journey from Charlotte, N.C., with the precious hay for distribution today to cattle starving in the drought.

Crowds of well-wishers lining the highway waved signs of thanks and cheered the Southerners who were repaying Ohio farmers for donating 20,000 bales of hay to the Southeast in 1986.

Congress OKs defense spending bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan now will see on his desk a $298.8 billion defense spending bill that thrusts the Pentagon into the war on drugs, but he may not sign it because of its arms control and "Star Wars" provisions.

The fiscal 1989 package marks the fourth straight drop in annual defense spending, down 1 percent below last year's level and 11 percent under the $334 billion peak of Reagan's military buildup in 1985. It also reflects a leaner armed forces with the closing of several air wings, early retirement of some ships and helicopters and canceled plans to activate several Army operations.

Both the House and Senate gave final approval to the legislation largely along party lines Thursday. The House vote was 228-183, with 147 Republicans and 36 Democrats opposing the measure, while in the Senate it was 64-30 with 28 Republicans and two Democrats in opposition.

Reagan wants drought bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan, having walked through sun-blistered fields with Illinois farmers, says he is itching to sign drought relief legislation — and Congress has taken the first step to send it to him.

One day after being confronted with dozens of amendments threatening to slow the process, the House and Senate Agriculture committees pushed through them Thursday and wound up with bills very similar to the "core" legislation filed early this week. The Senate panel sent its bill to the floor for debate, and the House panel gave tentative approval and agreed to meet again July 26.

Reagan made a flying tour of Illinois and Iowa Thursday and called at each stop for speedy action to help drought-stricken farmers, who face "the worst natural disaster since the Dust Bowl of the 1930s."

Disident writers appeal to board

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A disident group of 21 top screenwriters appealed to the National Labor Relations Board to invalidate Writers Guild of America rules that restrict their ability to leave the striking union.

Action by the labor board would enable the writers to go back to work in defiance of a 4-month-old walkout by the 9,600-member guild that has crippled television and movie production.

Bush says Iran must share blame

By J.T. HOUYEN
United Press International

UNITED NATIONS — Vice President George Bush, challenging Iran to accept a U.N. plan to end the Persian Gulf war, told the Security Council that Tehran must bear a "substantial measure" of the blame for the U.S. downing of Iran Air Flight 655 over a combat zone.

Bush, a U.N. ambassador under the Nixon administration, returned to the world body Thursday on orders of President Reagan to defend the U.S. position on the shooting down of the Iranian plane with the loss of all 290 people aboard.

In a high-profile appearance aimed in part at bolstering candidate Bush's diplomatic credentials, the vice president countered charges by Iran's foreign minister, Ali Akbar Velayati, that U.S. policies are the "root cause" of the conflict in the Persian Gulf.

Following the statements by Velayati and Bush, Security Council President Paulo Nogueira-Batista of Brazil adjourned the meeting until today to give 13 other nations an opportunity to speak on the issue.

Bush accused Iran of rejecting the world body's calls for a cease-fire in the nearly 9-year-old war Iran-Iraq while at the same time complaining over the consequences of the conflict.

He said it was that defiance of international pressure to end the war and Iran's stepped-up fighting that led to the July 3 shooting down of Iran Air Flight 655 by missiles fired from the USS Vincennes. Officers on the U.S. warship, which was patrolling the gulf to defend oil tankers from attack and had just clashed with Iranian gunboats, believed the airliner was an Iranian F-14 jet fighter.

"The time has come for action to bring this war to an end," Bush told the Security Council without naming what measures should be taken. Washington has called for arms sanctions against Iran for rejecting the cease-fire.

"I call today on both sides to accept an immediate and comprehensive permanent cease-fire — on land and sea and in the air," he said.

Bush said U.N. Resolution 598 remains the basic document to work out the permanent cease-fire and urged its implementation. Iran has refused to abide by it, demanding that the United Nations brand Iraq the aggressor in the war before peace talks can begin.

Iraq said it will accept the resolution if Iran does the same. The ambiguous position of the two nations has stalemated U.N. diplomatic efforts in the past year.

Resolution 598 was adopted unanimously by the Security Council last July 20. It called for an immediate cease-fire, peace talks and an international body to determine who started the war.

"We respect Iran's right to air its grievances," Bush told the Security Council. "But Iran cannot have it both ways. Iran cannot simultaneously complain to this body and defy it."

Velayati, in contrast to Bush's 20-minute speech, spoke for almost two hours. His detailed accounts of the incident and strong accusations against Washington at times made many council members uneasy and impatient.

"The foreign minister knows better," Bush said when it was his turn to speak. "He knows that the tragedy was an accident. He knows that by allowing a civilian airliner to fly into the area of an engagement between Iranian warships and U.S. forces in the gulf, Iran must bear a substantial measure of responsibility for what has happened."

"I call on Iran today to reroute civilian air traffic away from areas of active hostilities," Bush said.

Velayati read for council members the whole transcript of exchanges of conversations between the pilot of Flight 655 and the air tower in Bandar Abbas, Iran, where the plane took off for its ill-fated flight to Dubai, the United Arab Emirates.

He said Washington's claim of self-defense "would fly in the face of reason, humanity and international law." He called American explanations of the accident "awkward."

"The Security Council cannot but condemn the United States for its unjustified shooting down of the civilian airliner" of Iran, Velayati said.

The United States, as one of the five permanent members of the Security Council, can veto any resolution condemning its actions.

Iran retreating to its border in "no war, no peace" policy

TEHRAN, Iran — Iran, faced with a three-month string of Iraqi victories in the Persian Gulf war, is changing its military strategy.

The shift was disclosed by Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani, Iran's combined military and parliamentary leader, in a speech over state television Wednesday night in which he said "certain changes in Iran's defense policies are inevitable."

What he did not say, but what has become apparent to diplomats in the region, is that Iran is now engaged in a "no war, no peace" strategy as politicians and clerics jockey for power in the dying days of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the country's supreme leader.

That represents a major turnaround from a year ago when Western officials were fretting about the very real possibility of revolutionary Iran winning the war started by Iraq in 1980.

One theory circulating among analysts in Tehran is that Iran is facing a manpower shortage all along the front, and wants to wind down the war without having to accept a cease-fire required by a U.N. Security Council resolution seeking to end the war.

The analysts say Iran cannot accept a cease-fire without "losing face," until Iraqi President Saddam Hussein is removed from power — a demand it has made for several years.

Tehran, however, is starting to fulfill the other key part of the resolution, a pullback of troops to the international borders.

If Iraq, as expected, restrains its troops, that would produce a "no war, no peace" situation with the troops facing each other in trenches across the frontier, in something of a Middle East replay of long stretches of World War I, this time complete with desert and palm trees.

"Iran's mullahs need the war to stay in power, but they don't necessarily have to fight it," one Western envoy said. "It can also be a war on paper while they consolidate power as Khomeini comes to the end of his life."

In his speech Wednesday night, Rafsanjani said the country's leaders had "decided that reforms must take place in organizing the armed forces in order to prepare them for a long-term defense" and added, "to attain our goals we have to be prepared for long-term war."

The turnaround in the war began April 18, when Iranian troops suffered a stunning defeat at Faw, in southern Iraq.

WORLD BRIEFS

Afghan rebels kill 20 with rockets

MOSCOW (UPI) — Afghan rebels fired more than 20 rockets into the Afghan capital of Kabul today, killing 20 people and wounding 34 others, the official Tass news agency said.

The attack was one of the boldest and heaviest on Kabul by the U.S.-backed rebels since the start of the withdrawal of Soviet troops May 15.

"Extremists fired more than 20 missiles at the Afghan capital this morning, killing 20 and wounding 34 people," Tass said. The one-sentence dispatch from Kabul contained no other details.

The rocket attack followed a series of car bombings in Kabul and the eastern city of Jalalabad last week that left 42 people dead and more than 100 injured.

Western diplomats in Pakistan have reported recently that guerrilla forces were massing in the Paghman Hills a few miles west of Kabul after scoring several successes in the countryside against the retreating Soviets and the Afghan army.

Chinese ask Shultz to expand ties

BEIJING (UPI) — Senior leader Deng Xiaoping told Secretary of State George Shultz today he is pleased with the progress of Sino-U.S. relations under President Reagan, but urged an expansion of ties between the two nations.

Shultz, who arrived in Beijing from Hong Kong Thursday for a 44-hour whirlwind visit, assured the 84-year-old leader that the outcome of this fall's U.S. presidential election will not harm American relations with China.

"During the term of office of President Reagan and during your tenure as secretary of state, Sino-U.S. relations have developed quite steadily," Deng said.

Shultz, who met with Deng for 75 minutes in the Great Hall of the People, said whether Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis or Vice President George Bush is elected president, America will continue to pursue good relations with China.

Jewish settlers raid West Bank town

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Jewish settlers, angered by a stoning that wounded a 12-year-old boy, raided a town in the occupied West Bank and smashed windows before soldiers persuaded them to leave, Palestinian sources said.

A senior army officer met with the settlers and talked them into leaving the town of Qalqilya early Thursday. The army then clamped a curfew on the town.

The settlers entered Qalqilya late Wednesday night singing and breaking car windows with stones. Fighting then erupted between the residents and Jews, the sources said. No injuries were reported.

Sources said the raid occurred after a car carrying a settler family was stoned and a 12-year-old boy was hit in the eye. The army confirmed the stoning and the settlers' raid but said no violence occurred within the town.

Jackson accepts apology; leaves open challenge possibility

By United Press International
 ATLANTA — Jesse Jackson accepted an apology Thursday for not being told in advance he had been bypassed as the vice presidential nominee, easing the strained relations between him and Michael Dukakis that threaten to ruin Democratic unity at next week's national convention.

leaders making the key decisions and said it was an "open question" whether he will challenge Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen for the vice presidential nomination. Top Democrats said they hoped the Dukakis-Jackson breach would be short-lived and sought to mollify the fiery civil rights leader by assuring him he will be a key figure in the presidential campaign. And former President Jimmy Carter apparently also was seeking to quell the rift between Dukakis and Jackson. A spokesperson for Carter said the former president had a "conversation" with Jackson by telephone during the day but she did not know who initiated the call or the contents of the discussion. She also said she did not know whether Carter talked with Dukakis. Carter has played no role in the battle for the nomination, but Bert Lance, his former budget director, has been one of Jackson's chief political strategists and advisers since the beginning of the campaign. Jackson, in Indianapolis late Thursday, told reporters it was he who called Carter in the morning "because I have so much respect for him." "Maybe at some appropriate time he can play a real role in facilitating a meeting between the parties," the civil rights leader said, "to get us on the right road, the road to party expansion, the road to the kind of agreement that will allow all Democrats to leave Atlanta with their heads held high, a sense of esteem and great motivation."

Paul Kirk, chairman of the party, and House Speaker Jim Wright, chairman of the convention, both predicted that Democrats will come out of next week's conclave in Atlanta "arm-in-arm" and avoid the blood-letting that has marked many of their presidential nominations. "When we leave there we will leave united," Wright said in Washington. "We will come together before the week's out."

Not only was the selection of Bentsen made a day after Jackson said he would accept the second spot on the ticket, Dukakis also failed to reach Jackson by telephone to let him know before the decision became public knowledge. Shortly before leading a seven-bus caravan on a three-day journey to the 1988 Democratic National Convention in Atlanta, Jackson told reporters in Chicago he received the apology from Paul Bruntz, the top aide who conducted Dukakis's search for a running mate.

Nixon gives Bush campaign advice

By United Press International
 WASHINGTON — Former President Nixon told Vice President George Bush in a confidential note that the Democrats have chosen a strong vice presidential candidate, and he offered advice for countering the move. The New York Times reported Friday. Nixon, whose unsuccessful 1960 bid for the White House is being likened by Democrats to the 1988 campaign, told Bush that Democrat Michael Dukakis strengthened his standing among many voters by picking Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, as a running mate.

into a major political battleground this year, the newspaper said. He recommended that Bush, the certain Republican presidential nominee, counter by making California a battleground or by strengthening his hand elsewhere, such as with conservatives in the South. When Dukakis announced his choice of Bentsen as a running mate this week, he drew comparisons to the John Kennedy-Lyndon Johnson Democratic ticket 28 years ago. Kennedy went on in 1960 to defeat the Republican Nixon, who was vice president. Nixon predicted Dukakis's choice will not cause a major backlash among supporters of civil rights leader Jesse Jackson, who hoped to be the vice presidential candidate after finishing second to Dukakis in the race for the party's presidential nomination. And Nixon said Dukakis may gain support in some parts of the country even if Jackson and the Massachusetts governor do not make complete peace.

Cold-allergy reactions are not at all unusual

Peter H. Gott, M.D.
(C)1988, NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.

DEAR DR. GOTT: On our first really cold, windy day, I went for my daily walk. Before I arrived back home, my knuckles became red, swollen and itchy. I applied cortisone cream and as they warmed, they stopped itching. What could have caused this new sensitivity to cold?

DEAR READER: You have described a typical cold-sensitivity reaction, during which histamine was released into the skin, causing the same reaction as any other allergy. This happens to all of us once in a while and, as an isolated event, should not be of concern. However, if you experience recurring attacks, check with your doctor, because some diseases, such as those associated with temperature-sensitive proteins called cold agglutinins, can begin as a cold allergy.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I feel so inadequate and cheated. I am 37 and have never had an orgasm. I faked things for 16 years with my alcoholic husband, and now am having to fake responses with my new man. What can you suggest?

DEAR READER: Counseling. Indeed, you are being cheated; however, the chances are good that your lack of response has a psychological, not a physical cause. I believe that psychotherapy would help you to cope with your unresponsiveness, as well as with your anger, guilt and frustration. I'm interested that you are "having to fake responses." Why? Perhaps if you were less concerned about maintaining a certain image, you could relax and begin being honest with your partner. It seems to be that this is a problem you both share, so honesty may be the first step in solving it. I think you will feel better about yourself if you will set aside the charade and allow your partner to share your secret. In this way, you can begin to work constructively. You've taken the obvious first steps: shedding an alcoholic husband and being honest with yourself. Now you are ready to grow. Seeking counseling and being honest with your partner are the next steps.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby
Grant Baze was the shrewd declarer in today's deal who hoodwinked expert opponents into letting him get away with nine tricks in three no-trump. After Grant had shown a blanced hand and 23-24 high-card points, North elected to just bid three no-trump rather than search out a possible 4-4 heart fit. Still, after the low club opening lead, and with East holding the ace of hearts for a quick entry to allow him to lead back through declarer's club king, the chances were not good for the contract. Baze was lucky in that his adversaries were experienced players.

After winning the seven of clubs in his hand at trick one, he laid down the king of hearts. East, to deprive declarer of an entry to dummy with the heart queen, ducked. Next came the jack of hearts, on which West discarded a low spade. East ducked again. The ace and king of spades were now played, and East congratulated himself for not taking that heart ace. Obviously his shrewd decision was going to deprive declarer of ever making a trick with the spade queen. Sure enough, when Baze played the 10 of hearts, that was also allowed to win. Unfortunately for the defense, declarer now exited with a club. West was able to cash four club tricks. He then had to lead away from his Q-10-4 of diamonds into the A-K-J to give Grant Baze his game in no-trump.

East was shortsighted. He should have realized that West was going to be endplayed. Ironically, most beginners would have grabbed the heart ace and returned a club to set the contract.

James Jacoby's books "Jacoby on Bridge" and "Jacoby on Card Games" (written with his father, the late Oswald Jacoby) are now available in bookstores. Both are published by Pharos Books. (C) 1988, NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.

What The Day Will Bring...
By Bernice Bede Osof YOUR BIRTHDAY July 18, 1988
Advancement in your chosen field is a strong probability in the year ahead. Talents previously unnoticed will now come to the attention of the right people.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) Spell out all of the details in advance in you transact business with a close friend today. It will help avoid problems later. Trying to patch up a broken romance? LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) In career developments today you should receive the monetary compensation that you are entitled to, but the pats on the back you're expecting won't be forthcoming.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Spend less time thinking today and more time acting. You'll impede your progress if you dwell too much on intentions instead of doing what needs doing.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Friends are willing to go to bat for you at this time, but not to the extent you anticipate. You'll be disappointed if your expectations are unrealistic.
SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Today you may feel strong inclinations to try to please everyone with whom you will be involved. Unfortunately, this is unrealistic.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Select specific targets today and pursue them with vigor. If your objectives are not clear, you are likely to shoot wide of your mark.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) In situations that call for a calculated risk today, let your common sense, experience and logic prevail. If you react impulsively, it could lead to regrets.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Neither you nor your mate may be as prudent as both should be today in financial matters. Each could make judgments independent on the other that will prove wasteful.
PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Today, if some types of gains are derived from the efforts of others, as well as from yourself, be sure there is parity in the division. Don't expect the lion's share.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) Instead of focusing on ways to add to your resources today, you may be tempted to do the opposite. You're better off to add, rather than subtract.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Look out for your own interests today, but be very careful not to do it at the expense of anyone else, especially a family member.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If you attempt to impress others by embellishing your recent accomplishments, you're not apt to be too successful. Use humility, not hot air.

GARDENING

Staghorn fern flowerless, finicky, but exotic

Ferns, of which there are more than 10,000 species, are nonflowering perennials that offer versatile usage in home and in the landscape.

One of the most unusual ferns is the staghorn fern. The staghorn fern is an epiphytic air plant that is normally found growing on the side of trees in its native habitat. The generic name Platycerium comes from the Greek word meaning "broad horn." These plants are grown for their attractive antler-like fronds (leaves). The plant bears 2 types of fronds: the sterile fronds that are flat, round and located at the base of the fern and the fertile fronds that are irregular, lobed and usually ascending from the plant. Spores appear as brownish masses on the tips of the antler-like fertile fronds. These spores will produce new plants when sown on moist, sterile peat moss. However, this is a slow method of reproduction and most new plants are obtained from suckers (pups), which develop from the mother plants.

The staghorn fern can be used to create the aura of the tropics and add interest to a patio wall. In frostless areas specimens thrive on palm trunks or on branches of wood trees.

The culture of the staghorn fern is not difficult except that the plants are sensitive to the lack of drainage, low temperature, and low humidity. These points of culture should receive special attention. For a moist atmosphere and warm temperature should be provided for the best development of the plants. Staghorns grow best in shaded areas and will not endure the Florida sun. The medium upon which they are growing should be allowed to dry slightly between waterings.

These plants are usually grown on a slab of pecky cypress, redwood or tree fern. They also can be grown in hanging baskets. Unless the material to which they are attached naturally has a porous and spongy surface, a bed of sphagnum moss should be placed on the wood before the plant is attached by wire or other means. The roots can grow in the moss and this material also aids in maintaining a high humidity.

All of the many species of staghorn ferns require or grow best in a high temperature, 60-70° F or higher. However, the common staghorn fern (Platycerium bifurcatum) will tolerate a temperature of 50° F and is best adapted for use in the low humidity conditions of the average home.

Syringing the plants periodically will help to maintain a high humidity around them. However, they should not be syringed during the winter. That causes spotting of the leaves.

KFC amateur songwriting contest open

NASHVILLE — Hit singer-songwriter

Michael Martin Murphey, as guest artist for the 12th Annual Kentucky Fried Chicken Amateur Songwriting Contest, will select two grand prize winners in the nationwide contest and record their songs for national distribution.

With an entry postmark deadline of Sept. 2, the contest is designed to inspire and reward talented amateur songwriters hoping to break into the music business. More than 330,000 songs have been entered in the contest in its first 11 years.

"I've always enjoyed writing and performing," Murphey said, "and I hope that through the Kentucky Fried Chicken Amateur Songwriting Contest, I can help some talented people move one step closer to their dream."

The contest's eight winners will be awarded prizes from Kentucky Fried Chicken. Forty other songwriters will receive honorable mentions and a certificate signed by Murphey.

The contest officially runs from Aug. 1-31 and is open to any amateur songwriter who has never had a song distributed nationally.

To participate, entrants must submit an audio cassette recording of an original song less than three and a half minutes long. Entrants may submit as many different songs as they wish, but each entry must be recorded and mailed on a separate tape.

Entry cassettes must be returned before mailing and marked clearly with the composer's name, address, phone number and song title on the tape case as well as the lyrics. A written version of the lyrics, along with a signed statement of originality and amateur status, must be included with the entry.

In addition, an entry sheet with the song title, composer's name, address and phone number (work and home), must be wrapped around the cassette and secured.

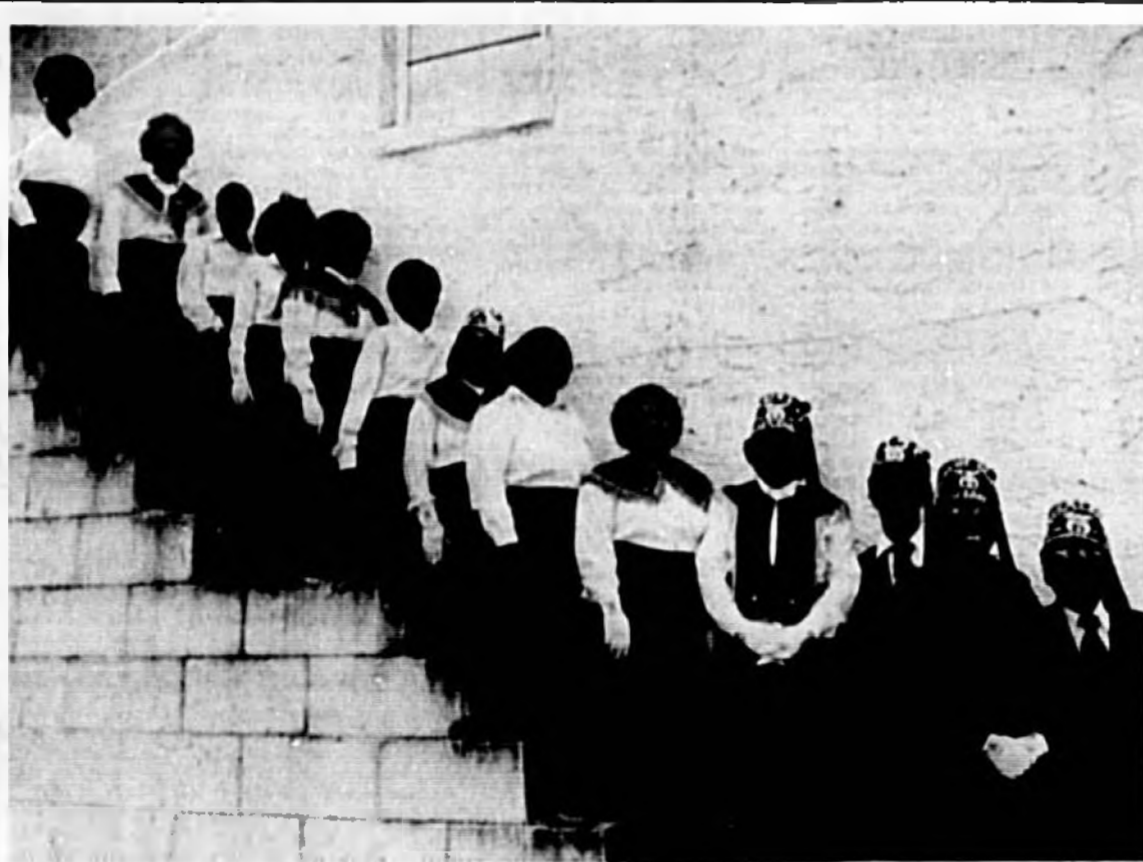

Songwriters may send their entries directly to KFC Amateur Songwriting Contest '88, Dept. N, 3688 Beverly Blvd., Los Angeles, CA 90004. Tapes will not be acknowledged or returned. Composers of the top fifty winning songs will be notified in late September.

The contest was initiated by Colonel Harland Sanders in 1976 because he realized many of the unrecognized songwriters in America could begin achieving their goals if they were encouraged and received opportunities in the field of competitive music.

Murphey, influenced in his youth by Hank Williams, Bob Wills and Woody Guthrie, has been called everything from a "musical pioneer" to a "socially conscious frontier sonneteer." He has recorded the music of numerous songwriters and has climbed into the Top 10 of the Billboard and Radio & Records charts.

Her many family, friends and out-of-town guests, including Ralph Coverdale of Philadelphia, volunteered their talents in the recital. Soloists Victoria Smith, John Burgess, and Marshall Holloway sang songs of comfort to the family of the late Deborah Holloway Redding.

Oliver is an active member of St. Johns Missionary Baptist Church in Sanford, where she served as Sunday School superintendent and played for the Sunday School. She recently retired from 30 years as a teacher in the public school system, and still serves on Usher Board No. 1 as president.

Happy Birthday to Betty Anderson, Freddie, Lenora Mobley, Latta Mobley, Lacey Baker Mobley, and Betty Roberts Washington, all of Sanford.

Family mad after live-in girlfriend twists his arm

DEAR ABBY: Recently, "Alan," my live-in boyfriend, was invited to a graduation party for "Danny," his favorite nephew. It was held at a local restaurant and was given by Danny's parents, who are Alan's brother and sister-in-law.

They did not invite me, saying it was for "family only." Well, Alan went to the party without me, and I was so hurt and angry that I refused to allow him to go to Danny's graduation exercises and the festivities that followed. Please understand, Abby, Alan and I have a very serious commitment. We've lived together for three years—we just aren't ready for marriage yet.

Now Alan's brother and sister-in-law are mad at me. So is Alan's mother. They say I ruined Danny's graduation day. Danny is also mad at me because I deprived him of the presence of his favorite uncle at his graduation.

Abby, do you think I should be blamed because Alan didn't go to his nephew's graduation? He really didn't want to go very much, but I know he would have gone had I insisted he do so. And don't you think I should have been invited?

FUNNY GIRL FROM CALIFORNIA

DEAR FUNNY GIRL: Your live-in boyfriend is a medical miracle. How did he manage to live for so long without a spine?

Yes, I think you should have been invited to the graduation party. But since you were not, you should not have forbidden Alan to go to his nephew's graduation exercises. And Alan would have shown more manliness had he made his own decision instead of permitting himself to be jerked around like a puppet on a string.

DEAR ABBY: Why are the waiting rooms of doctors, dentists, etc. usually furnished with soft, low furniture from which people find it very difficult to get up? It would seem to me that this furniture is chosen by decorators with only appearance in mind.

In the May 30, 1988, issue of U.S. News and World Report, Surgeon General Koop says in part: "You hear people say, 'My mother fell and fractured her hip.' Have you ever heard someone say, 'She fractured her hip, and fell?' That's what happens."

"People pick the worst seat in the room—soft, low sofas. They have trouble getting up, and the hip fractures—then they fall! Pick a firm support when you stand."

Abby, you would be doing another public service by bringing this to the attention of many people who place this unsuitable furniture in public places.

ALVERA ELIJIO, SUN CITY, ARIZ.

DEAR ALVERA: Your point is well-taken. Doctors, dentists, etc., please pay a visit to your waiting rooms and sit down. If you sink into one of those soft cushions from which it's difficult to get up, consider replacing your furniture with the firm upholstered kind when it comes time to spruce up your office.

(Problems? Write to Dear Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Dear Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. All correspondence is confidential.)

Star Speak

Talking with Bruce Willis

By Frank Banello
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

"Blind Date," Bruce Willis' 1987 film debut, was a box-office hit. His second film, "Sunset," failed to excite movie audiences or the critics early this year. This summer, Willis tries his hand again with "Die Hard."

"Die Hard" is a roller coaster of a film about terrorists who hold workers hostage in a high-rise office building. Willis plays an off-duty cop who finds himself stuck in the building when the terrorists seal the place off. He wages an unnerving one-man battle against a platoon of heavily armed bad guys.

Willis' real-life success must be heady stuff for the former 84-an-hour security guard at a New Jersey nuclear power plant and New York City bartender.

But the 33-year-old actor left all his dues-paying days behind him, first on Broadway in 1984 when he starred in Sam Shepard's "Fool for Love," and then in 1985, when he originated the star-making role of David Addison on ABC-TV's classy hit, "Moonlighting."

Here, Willis talks about jumping out of a three-story building, getting beat up on the set, and swearing off booze.

Q: Any predictions about the success of your new film, "Die Hard"?

A: Just that it's going to be the monster hit of the summer. Everybody keeps saying there are at least 10 times in this film where you literally scream your head off... well, not literally, but you're on the edge of your seat most of the time.

Q: There are some spectacular stunts in "Die Hard." Did you do any of them yourself?

A: I probably did 70 to 80 percent of the stunts. It was pretty hairy. I did one of the wildest stunts I ever did on a picture. I jumped off the roof of

'I live my life soberly now.'
—Bruce Willis

a three-story building into an air bag while they blew up the roof!

Q: Any injuries?

A: They beat the hell out of me. I never really got hurt where I had to miss work, but during the entire 12 weeks of the shoot, I was cut, bruised and banged up. But that was my choice. I could have used a stunt double a lot more, but I chose to do most of my stunts because it adds more production value.

Q: Your next film, "In a New Country," about the adjustment of Vietnam vets to civilian life, sounds more serious than anything you've done to date. Is that the direction you want your career to take?

A: Not necessarily. The direction I would like to take is to keep moving around and not just be tied to one form of entertainment. I love doing comedy, making people laugh, having a ball. But I also liked making "Die Hard" because it satisfied a lot of macho things in me. I got to be a hero and carry a gun and kill bad guys!

Q: Have you changed your mind because you had a problem with alcohol yourself?

A: All I'm going to say is I live my life soberly now, but how I stay sober is my own personal business. I don't — can't — share that.

Safe boating means more fun in sun

Authorities crackdown on unsafe boating practices

By Susan Loden
Herald Staff Writer

While having fun in the sun on Seminole County waterways, some boaters forget to put safety first. State officials advise that safe boating practices and properly equipped craft are major factors to consider when you take to the water.

Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission officers have beefed up enforcement of boating safety laws and report that one out of every 15 boats on Florida's freshwaters does not have proper safety equipment on board.

In April the commission launched operation SWAMP (Sportfish, Water Sports and Alcohol Monitoring Program) in an effort to reduce the number of alcohol related accidents on waterways. Wildlife officers have also been checking boat safety equipment, registration and fishing licenses.

Since then 198 wildlife officers have spent more than 4,700 man-hours checking more than 15,000 boats and 40,000 boaters.

More than 100 people were killed in boating accidents in Florida last year and about two-thirds of those accidents were alcohol or drug related, statistics show. There were more than 800 boating accidents in the state during 1987.

Seminole County's state wildlife officer, Jesse Baker, said about 90 percent of boaters mix alcohol with their fun, and about half don't know when to stop before their abilities and judgment are impaired. The laws pertaining to drunken boating are similar to those related to driving a vehicle while under the influence of alcohol, Baker said.

"The good news is we've had to arrest only seven people for operating a vessel under the influence of alcohol," said Col. Brantley Goodson, the commission's law enforcement director. "The bad news is that too many boats are operated with improv-er safety equipment onboard."

Baker added that the rules of the road for boaters are harder to define than for drivers because waterways don't have the demarcations of roadways; there is no centerline for an intoxicated boater to weave across. Speed is also hard to judge and erratic travel is the rule, not the exception, on rivers and lakes. Boaters are also not licensed as are drivers.

All boats less than 16-feet in length must have one Coast Guard-approved personal flotation device per passenger, Goodson said. This could be a life vest, seat cushion or ring buoy. If the boat is longer, each passenger must have a lifevest and the boat must have at least one throwable seat cushion or ring buoy on board.

"Another piece of safety equipment often overlooked is the fire extinguisher," Goodson said. "Any boat with a permanently installed fuel tank must have a fire extinguisher. There are several other criteria relating to the use of fire extinguishers and we'd be glad to explain the requirements to anyone who contacts us."

A boat 16-feet or longer must also have Coast Guard-approved visual distress signals on board.

Wildlife officers have arrested or warned more than 1,000 boat operators for safety violations during Operation SWAMP. In addition, 183 boaters have been cited for reckless or careless operation.

Among other violations encountered by wildlife officers were invalid or no boat registration, water skiing in restricted areas and fishing law violations.

So far this year, wildlife officers have investigated more than 29 boating or water-related accidents in which 20 people were injured and seven killed.

"Obviously," Goodson said, "there is a much greater chance of being seriously injured in a boating accident than in an automobile accident."

Goodson said the commission plans to continue its emphasis on patrolling Florida's waterways throughout the summer.

"Some people use their boats for fishing, while others enjoy water skiing or pleasure-boating," he said. "We want to make sure all boaters use their vessels safely and without infringing upon the rights of others. We encourage all boaters to maintain their boats to meet the U.S. Coast Guard requirements."

Carrie Fisher lays Princess Leia to rest

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Reporter

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Carrie Fisher is one Hollywood offspring who has been through the fire and emerged relatively unscathed, if not a little strange.

The glare of publicity that surrounded her as the daughter of Debbie Reynolds and Eddie Fisher, the scandal that involved her parents and Elizabeth Taylor and problems with her stepfather were part of her growing-up years.

Carrie touched all the wrong bases for a typical American childhood. At 13 she was singing with her mother in Las Vegas and at 15 she dropped out of high school to study drama in London.

There was her own failed marriage, drug problems and a see-saw career.

But Fisher has triumphed and has become a straight-talking — albeit off-the-wall — writer-actress who is a complete contrast to Princess Leia, the goody-two-shoes role she played in the "Star Wars" trilogy.

She apparently carries the right genes that made both her parents stars, and while she may never achieve their stature, she has surpassed them in terms of audience exposure via her appearances in the "Star Wars" films.

Fisher is undoubtedly a free spirit, and perhaps the best expression of that is her home, which roosts at the top of a crag in the hills surrounding Benedict Canyon above Beverly Hills.

Her cottage, almost hidden from sight on the narrow, twisting road, is protected by an electrically controlled metal gate. Nearby, an official-looking highway sign reads: "Fried Neck Lizard Next 7 KM."

The house appears to be a log cabin with a wide veranda running around its perimeter. The windows look out across deep green canyons with neighboring houses dotted here and there.

Fisher's sitting room is a collection of artifacts from near and far with absolutely no relationship to style, form, an interior decorator's pretentious eye or efforts at garage sale chic.

A wooden airplane propeller dominates one wall. There is a collection of doll houses converted into lamps, a string of Christmas lights near the fireplace. A miniature log cabin sits near the hearth beside ceramic reproductions of the seven dwarfs from "Snow White," a gift from Walt Disney when she was a child.

Her eclectic tastes include an imposing set of moose antlers, some delicate Chinese figurines, a rather scruffy wooden Indian and a miniature railroad car.

Various signs, carved in wood, woven into cloth, etched in metal or neatly painted can be found throughout the house. One particularly large admonition in the kitchen reads: "NO SPITTING."

Overall, the decor reflects a child's delight in toys and a sophisticate's sense of humor.

She giggled at a photograph of her mother and father taken when Debbie and Eddie, a happily married young couple, posed beside Elizabeth Taylor, and ventured that her mother was none too pleased by its prominent place.

At the moment, Fisher is having her garage wallpapered and partly furnished with bedroom pieces to give the impression to people driving into the garage that they have pulled into the wrong part of the house.

Dressed in a short, black crepe dress, the dark-haired, brown-eyed Fisher curled up on a couch, tucked her bare feet beneath her and spoke of her career as an actress and novelist.

"I'll probably never break away from the image of Princess Leia," she said, then waved her hand at her living room decor. "It's not really Leia's style."

"I guess if I want to get away from her I'll have to do 'Laverne and Shirley' and play both parts for a couple of years."

"But I'm doing what I can to break away from that image. I just finished co-starring with Patrick Dempsey in 'Loverboy.' They bleached my hair blonde. I play a neglected wife, but nobody will see it until next year."

"Right now I'm playing the wife of Tom Hanks in 'The Burbs' — which is shorthand for suburbs — and I'm playing the mother of a 9-year-old son. Yea! My first part as a mom."

"There's a lot of firsts coming up for me. After this I'll be working for (director) Rob Reiner with Billy Crystal and Meg Ryan in 'Changes.' And for the first time I'll be getting married on the screen."

"Playing a wife and a mother should help make people forget my association with Princess Leia."

Divorced from musician-composer Paul Simon, she smiled at the suggestion that she and her former husband resemble one another.

"That's been remarked on before," she said. "I guess a lot of people begin to look alike when they've lived together for a long time. Only Paul and I weren't married that long — two years."

Her best-selling, highly regarded novel "Postcards from the Edge" — 70,000 sales in hard cover — is now available in paperback and she is involved in promoting the current edition.

She continues to deny that the critically praised novel is autobiographical, yet she purposely seems to hint that it well might be.

"Certain parts of it are autobiographical because all writers use their own personal experiences when they write a novel," she said with a grin. "but my book isn't a roman a clef. I really made the people up."

"To be honest, I never expected to write a book. It wasn't my idea. I was approached, but I had written all my life, putting down on paper things that happened to me in private journals."

In PBS's "Tribute to Fred Astaire," singing on "Evening at Pops," singer/dancer Tommy Tune (above) helps pay tribute to legend Astaire. It airs Saturday.

'Santa Barbara' is out of the kitchen

By JOAN HANAUER
 UPI Feature Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Viewers who looked closely at NBC's "Santa Barbara" a few weeks ago would have seen a statuette lurking in the background of every act — the Emmy the show had won as outstanding soap opera of 1988.

"We just did it that first day (after the show won)," said Jill Farren Phelps, the daytime drama's executive producer. "We were so elated."

"I had seen them do something like it on 'Hill Street Blues' and this was in the same spirit. Every once in a while I like to do something Steven Bochco (creator-producer of "Hill Street") would do. If he could put an Emmy in Frank Furtillo's office, I figured it might be a little inside but it was worth it."

"Santa Barbara," which taped its 1,000th episode on July 9, must be doing something right.

It went on the air in 1984 and competes against "Guiding Light" on CBS and "General Hospital" on ABC. "Guiding Light" began as a radio soap opera in the 1930s and is the longest-running soap on television. "General Hospital" made its debut in 1963.

This was "Santa Barbara's" first Emmy for outstanding soap opera, although individual cast and production people had previously won statuettes.

While it has been slowly working its way in the Nielsen ratings against the long-entrenched competition, it currently is rated as the No. 1 prime time dramatic series in France, where it has aired since 1985. The "Santa Barbara" craze even has prompted a French tourist boomlet in the real Santa Barbara.

The show also airs overseas in England, Australia, Belgium, Luxembourg, West Germany and Finland.

Sticking an Emmy on the set is typical of "Santa Barbara," the soap opera of the '80s.

"We are a little more irreverent, we have a funnier slant on things," Phelps said. "We don't mind stepping outside the genre for a second here and there to have some fun with what we do."

"I don't like to lit a lot because we don't want to lose the audience's belief in what we're doing, but I don't mind a little satirizing now and then."

Among other oddments, the characters in "Santa Barbara" — a real place, unlike such soap opera locales as Genoa City and Oakdale — sometimes have little devils or angels on their shoulders to prompt their consciences.

"I think audiences are more sophisticated today," Phelps said, "so we can afford to take chances. Audiences are hipper and you need to surprise them."

These are the days of time-delayed taping, when career women as well as housewives can keep up with their favorite soaps.

You'll never see characters in "Santa Barbara" holding a kaffeeklatch in the kitchen — there has never been a kitchen set on the show, although these days one character has a kitchenette.

"That was the original decision, that there would be no kitchen sets on the soap opera of the '80s," Phelps said. "It's not exactly a doctrine, but we didn't want people sitting and talking over coffee in the kitchen. I don't think most soap operas do that any more."

"Santa Barbara" also moves faster than the usual soap opera pace. Traditionally, soaps dwell in a kind of time bubble. Tune in every three months and you'll keep up with the story line.

"Our head writers are much more episodically oriented than most soap operas," Phelps said. "More happens and ends within the space of a single episode, so it tends to go faster. We have not yet taken the traditional weeks and weeks waiting for a revelation."

"We don't tease the audience. I can't bear a slow, drawn-out attenuated theme. It's much more fun if it crackles along."

"Santa Barbara," like other soap operas, has toned down promiscuous sex and bed-hopping as a way of moving the plot along, because of the AIDS epidemic.

"As for love scenes," Phelps said, "we are as steamy as we are allowed to be as long as it's tasteful. I have a 9-year-old daughter and I never want to be uncomfortable about the fact that she could be sitting home watching 'Santa Barbara'."

"Santa Barbara" does not break all the old soap opera traditions. Amnesia, which used to run through the old radio soaps like a measles epidemic, also has afflicted a "Santa Barbara" regular.

"But it only lasted a week," Phelps said.

Aluminum

Aluminum. The World Almanac reports, is the second most abundant metal in the earth's crust, next to silicon. Bauxite is the main source of aluminum. Vitamin A Vitamin A promotes good eyesight and helps keep the skin and mucous membranes resistant to infection. notes The World Almanac. Good sources: liver, carrots, sweet potatoes, kale, collard greens, turnips and fortified milk.

Old trees The oldest living trees, reports The World Almanac, are reputed to be the bristlecone pines, the majority of which are found growing on the arid crags of California's White Mountains. Some are estimated to be more than 4,600 years old.
