Justice Slaps Supreme Court On Death Penalty

Handling Perpetuates 'Mockery'

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Justice death penalty in this country is virtually William Rehnquist says the Supreme Court has helped perpetuate a system by aluggishly handling death penalty cases.

Rehnquist, the court's most conservative member, charged Monday that the court's slow action on such cases encourages a kind of "vigilante justice and lynch law" evident in the Atlanta child murders.

"Although 30-odd states have enacted" capital punishment statutes, "apparently in the belief that they constitute sound social policy, the existence of the an illusion," Rehnquist said.

"I do not think that this court can "mockery" in the criminal justice continue to evade some responsibility for this mockery of our criminal justice system," he said.

> Since the Supreme Court's landmark 1976 ruling that held as constitutional capital punishment, more than 750 persons have been sentenced to death in the United States. Only four have been executed.

> The other sentences have been either overturned or are under appeal.

Rehnquist blasted his fellow justices after the court refused to hear the appeal of Georgia death row inmate Wayne C. Coleman, convicted in the 1973 tortureslayings of six members of a Donalsonville, Ga., family.

He wanted the court to hear the case for an opportunity to issue what would have been basically a major statement promising to speed up the laborious appeal process for death penalty cases. Said Rehnquist:

"When people begin to believe that organized society is unwilling or unable to impose upon criminal offenders the punishment they deserve, then there are sown the seeds of anarchy - of self-help, vigilante justice and lynch law."

A Niagara Falls, N.Y., man sentenced to death three times for killing women in Virginia, Georgia and Florida has won a stay postponing his execution in Virginia's electric chair Thursday.

Buddy Earl Justus was to be electrocuted at the State Penitentiary in Richmond this week, but the execution date was automatically postponed for the second time because the Virginia Supreme Court has not yet ruled on his appeal, authorities said Monday.

The court is not expected to issue a ruling before September. Justus, 28, will await a ruling at the Mecklenburg with the 13 other convicted murderers on Virginia's "Death Row."

Shuttle Coming Home

'OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) - The space shuttle Columbia, bolted atop a jumbo jet, took off today in clear weather on the final leg of its homeward flight to the Kennedy Space Center in Florida.

People who arose early to watch the 7 a.m. CDT departure lined area streets and the nearby interstate highway. Work-bound traffic nearly came to a stop as motorists gawked at the shuttle, mounted piggyback on the glant jet.

The arrival of the Columbia late Monday attracted 100,000 cheering specators who lined both sides of the Tinker Air Force Base runway, where the shuttle spent the night.

"All of us, in our hearts, were waving a great big American flag," Oklahoma Gov. George Nigh said Monday on behalf of the throng of onlookers estimated by base officials as in excess of 100,000 people. The modified Boeing 747 mother ship with the space orbiter bolted on top nearly 10 minutes before making the final approach for its 3:53 p.m. CDT touchdown.

Pilot Tom McMurtry said the 747shuttle combination maintained a speed of about 345 mph and flew at 13,000 feet, to avoid rain, on the trip from Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

He said it would continue at that altitude Tuesday on the second half of the 2,300-mile journey to the Kennedy Space Center in Florida.

Cars were stacked bumper to bumper for miles outside Tinker's main gate. filled with people awaiting their chance to drive through the base to take pictures or just get a closer look at the spacecraft.

Hundreds of people abandoned their cars on the shoulders of highways and city streets and hiked more than a mile to the public viewing area, about 1,000 feet from where the craft was parked for the Return of the Columbia to Cape Canaveral, where it lifted off April 12 for a space journey that took it around the world 36 times, had originally been planned for last Tuesday.

"It seems like everything that could happen to us happened, but we're glad they happened on the ground and not during the flight," said Deke Slayton, NASA space flight test director, of the

Monday morning's takeoff was delayed three hours because of a damaged tailcone strut. An earlier delay was caused by high winds across the Mojave Desert which prevented the fitting of the tailcone over the shuttle's three aft

One NASA spokesman said the postflight servicing took longer than engineers had planned because "it just hadn't been done before."

The Columbia, the first reusable spaceship, spent 54% hours orbiting the earth on its maiden voyage and made a spectacular landing before a crowd of more than 300,000 people at Dryden's dry lake bed runway April 14.

Slayton said NASA anticipated using Edwards Air Force Base as the landing site for at least three more shuttle space flights and the orbiters would probably stop at Tinker on each of the return flights to Florida.

At the Kennedy Space Center, Columbia will be refurbished for its next orbital mission, expected in the fall. Like the other three ships in the shuttle fleet, it is designed for about 101 space, missions.

Columbia, once at the Cape, is to be outfitted with a more comfortable crew module than it had for its first mission. It will make the next five orbital missions.

Could It Be Clearer? The message seems clear enough: "No Dumping." Do it and, if caught, you'll be arrested. But apparently, people aren't taking the threat seriously and are dumping willy-nilly on this property on State Road 46 just west of Interstate 4 across from the Seminole County fire station. Perhaps if the sign read, "Please Dump," people would take their trash elsewhere, leaving this field clean and green. Then again, dumpers might take the request so literally the sign would be totally obliterated by a mountain of garhage.

Sanford Patrolman Sues City For Bigger Share Of The Pot

Sanford Motorcycle Patrolman Anardi "Andy" Collazo received the following injuries as a result of a collision with an automobile while he was escorting a funeral on Nov. 21, 1980: -Fracture and displacement of left collarbone:

-Displaced fracture of the first through sixth left ribs; -Fractured nose with multiple scars;

-Bleeding Into and collapse of his left lung. Today he stands to receive about $2,500 for his pain, suffering and disfigurement from the accident. And he and his attorney, James Cunningham of Orlando, don't think that's Cunningham, on Collazo's behalf, has filed a suit in circuit court at Orlando seeking a larger share of the $20,000 insurance policy which Homer Gleason, driver of the other vehicle involved in the accident, carried. The city of Sanford is seeking reimbursement of the $10,764.89 it has paid for Collazo's medical expenses. Collazo's attorney is seeking $6,666.66 in attorney fees. Court costs so far are about $60 which is also to be deducted from the $20,000. Collazo's suit asks the court to "more equitably divide the insurance", specifically by reducing the city's claim.

The Sanford City Commission, informed about the court action Monday night, took no action to reduce its claim for reimbursement of the full amount it has spent for Collazo's medical care.

Assistant City Manager Steve Harriett said today the city has paid every medical bill presented by Collazo. In addition, Harriett said the city has paid him full salary since the accident and permitted him to resume work on "light duty" Dec. 2. Collazo is assigned to a desk job and is attending radar school this week.

Harriett said the city will continue to pay any and all future medical bills for Collazo which result from the injuries he received in the accident.

Cunningham agreed today "The city has been good to Collazo." He added, however, that the "petition for equitable distribution" asks the court to decide how much Collazo's pain. suffering and disfigurement are worth.

Since there is a limitation on the amount of insurance, the city's claim for relmbursement should be reduced in direct proportion to the amount Callazo's entitlement is reduced, Cunningham said he is representing Collazo on a contingency basis, with his fee determined by the amount Collazo recovers from the insurance.

Parents Push For Police-School Project

At a 4:30 p.m. press conference along with Winter Park Police Chief Ray Berry and Lt. Beau Taylor of the Seminole County Sheriff's Department, the two groups spoke out against the use of drugs in middle and high schools, vowing to fight back with the police-school liaison Urging Seminole County area parents to get behind the project and push for its implementation in county schools.

"The Deputy in the Schools Program does work! Juvenile arrests in Orlando have been reduced by 64.5 percent since the program was started in 1978." According to Taylor, who will be in charge of the program in Seminole County, the concept provides for a specially trained deputy to be placed in each middle and high school - not as a disciplinarian but as a resource person.

The deputy will teach several classes on law awareness and counsel students on problems they may be having in school or at home.

"He really gets to know the kids. The officer comes across as a human being, After the first few weeks, he wears his uniform only once or twice a week," Taylor said.

"And the beauty of it all is that he actually effects a change in the attitude of the kids, Calhoun added, "He dispels many of the mistaken and distorted ideas they have about the police and the law." After hours, Taylor explained, the officer patrols the neighborhood where his students live, making personal contact with the students and parents. Also on hand to endorse the school deputy program was Political Action Committee Chairman Patty Brantley, who said the project is a top priority with her organization.

Calhoun expressed parent's hopes that a pilot deputy project at least go into effect this fall in which the program will be tested at one Seminole County middle school and one high school.

The program, that will cost $26,000 per year at each school when fully implemented, will be jointly funded by the school board and the county. The Seminole County Commission is expected to consider funding the project next week. Members of the school board unanimously approved the concept at their regular meeting on April 1.

The $26,000 includes vehicle equipment and materials as well as a $11,900 annual salary for the specially trained officer.

American Priest Vanishes

In Downtown San Salvador

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) -- An American priest vamished in downtown San Salvador, the apparent victim of the political violence gripping the Central American nation where three American nuns and a lay woman worker were murdered late last year. Chicago television station WBBM Monday said Roy Bourgeois, 42, a Maryknoll priest and native of Lutcher, La., who was acting as a translator for the station's television crew in El Salvador, disappeared shortly after leaving his motel in downtown San Salvador early Sunday.

A spokesman for the Ossining, N. Y.-based Maryknoll Order sald President Jose Napoleon Durate promised to assign three detectives to search for the missing priest.

News of Bourgeois' disappearance surfaced Monday as the Salvadoran government denied reports six National Guadamen had been identified as having raped and murdered four American churchwomen last Bourgeois flew to El Salvador five days ago. He was the third person connected to American news media to have disappeared in El Salvador.

John Sullivan, 26, a freelancer from Bogota, N.J., disappeared from the Camino Real Hotel Dec. 31. Rene Ternsen, a Salvadoran citizen who lived in Washington, D. C., and worked for radio station WHUR, has been missing since February 1980.

Beatles At Ringo's Wedding

LONDON (UPI)- In a Beatles reunion of sorts, the three surviving members of the famed group got together for the marriage of drummer Ringo Starr to svelte New York-born actress Barbara Bach.

Starr, 41, arrived last ma red London cab with Miss Bach, 32, a top fashion model who played the seductive Russian major in the James Bond movie thriller "The Spy Who Loved Me." It was the second marriage for both.

The screaming began when Paul McCartney together with his wife Linda and their child edged apprehensively around a corner of the building housing the registry office and dashed inside.

It redoubled when Starr and his bride-to-be dashed from their red taxie and slipped into the building between a double avenue of police, Miss Bach in a cream silk dress with red roses and Starr all in black black suit, black shirt, black bow tie.

After the ceremony, the wedding party drove to Rags, and exclusive Mayfair club, for a wedding reception that brought together the surviving Beatles - Starr, George Harrison and McCartney - for the first time in public since 1969.

Red Brigades Kill, Kidnap

NAPLES, Italy (UPI) - Suspected Red Brigades terrorists shot to death two armed escorts and kidnapped the former Christian Democratic president of the Naples area as he stepped from his bulletproof limousine.

The Monday night abduction of Ciro Cirillo, 60, one of the most prominent Christian Democratic politicians in the Naples area, was Italy's first political kidnapping in more than four months.

A person claiming to represent the Red Brigades terrorist gang called a newspaper and claimed responsibility for the abduction and killings, Police said the call followed the gang's past patterns and probably was legitimate.

Hayden Guilty, But Released

Hayakawa Proposes English As Official Language

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Sen. S.I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., says it's time the government stopped leading immigrants to believe they can fully assimilate into American society without speaking English.

· The rise of bilingual programs, says the Canadian-born semanticist of Japanese ancestry, has eliminated the need for many immigrants to learn English.

And to clarify the "confusing signals" being sent out, he proposed a constitutional amendment Monday that would declare English the official language of the United States.

"I believe we are being dishonest with linguisitic minority groups if we tell them they can take full part in American life without learning the English language," he said.

Havakawa noted the requirements for U.S. citizenship require immigrants to be able to "read, write and speak words in ordinary usage in the English language." But he noted many states require bilingual ballots and the Carter administration proposed requiring certain schools to teach courses entirely in a student's native tongue. "If I spoke no English, my world would be limited to the Japanesespeaking community, and no matter how talented I was, I could never do business, seek employment or take part in public affairs outside that community," he said.

Hayakawa said the amendment, which would have to be passed by committee and two thirds majorities of both houses before going to the states for ratification, would:

-Establish English as the official language of the United States to be used for all official government business.

-Do away with requirements for bilingual election requirements.

- Prevent "dual-language" education for non-English-speaking students while allowing transitional instruction to help immigrant students become proficient in English.

-Prevent a city council from enacting a law requiring council meetings be conducted in any other language.

He said the amendment would -Prevent the establishment of foreign-language schools such as Hebrew schools or Japanese

Sinkholes Swallow 2 Cars, Citrus Trees

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (UPI) - Sinkholes that developed just outside the Cypress Gardens tourist attraction damaged the highway and parking lot and swallowed up a portion of an orange grove where a shopping center was planned.

The sinkholes opened up in the pre-dawn darkness Monday and were discovered when two cars drove into one that caved In a section of State Road 540.

Newspaper delivery man William Pope said he had just signaled to turn into a motel.

"I looked back at the road and all of a sudden it was gone," he said. "I knew right away what had happened." The hole was about 30 feet in diameter and about four feet

Nearby in the orange grove, a hole 150 feet in diameter and about 30 feet deep had opened up, taking with it between 20 and 30 citrus trees. Pope, 34, and Key Pittman Cozart, 41, whose car followed that of Pope into the smaller hole, suffered minor injuries but their cars were heavily damaged. .

Half-inch cracks appeared in the parking lot of the tourist attraction about a hundred yards away and that lot was closed. One of the attraction's restaurants also was closed Monday as management sought to determine if cracks in that structure might have been caused by the sinkholes or are a result of normal settling over the past few months,

The restaurant, parking lot, hole in the highway and the hole in the grove are on a relatively straight east-west line and within a few hundred yards of each other.

"When a big one goes in like this, you always have a bunch of smaller sinks," said state Department of Transportation engineer R.M. Johnson.

Johnson said it probably would be a few days before the road is repaired and reopened.

IN BRIEF Son Of Former President Dead

NEW YORK (UPI) - Recently retired senior vice president and member of the board of Bache Halsey Stuart Shields Inc., John A. Roosevelt, the youngest son of the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt, has died of heart failure. He was 65.

Roosevelt died Monday at New York Hospital to which he was admitted several days ago.

Roosevelt, the youngest of the president's four sons, and the only one who was a Republican served in the Pacific with the U.S. Navy during World War II.

He is survived by his wife, the former Irene Boyd, one, son, two daughters and his three brothers.

Hundreds Flee Acid

FONTANA, Callf (UPI) Hydrocholoric acid leaking from a railroad tank car spread sickening furnes over a wide area, forcing hundreds to flee their homes and causing stomach aches in 17 children walking to school, Officials for Santa Fe Railroad said about 10 gallons of the acid spilled from the tank car Monday.

There were no serious injuries and the 200 people evacuated from their homes shortly after dawn returned about four hours later.

Bike Rider Shot

NEW YORK (UPI) - A 13-year-old boy shot a bicycle rider to death on a Harlem street corner. After she had fallen to the ground, another youth picked up the bike and rode away.

Police said the incident occurred about 3 p.m. Monday when Susan Langley, 30, stopped for a traffic light.

They said a boy walked up to the woman and shot her in the head and back with a .45caliber pistol.

After Ms. Langley fell to the ground, a second youth picked up her bicycle and rode away. Police suspect the two boys were acting together.

Ms. Langley was pronounced dead at the

'Model Prisoners'

CUMBERLAND, Va. (UPI) - Three convicted drug smugglers were released from a Virginia prison before serving their terms because they served as "model" prisoners, a defense attorney for one of the men says.

Attorney Michael Morchower offered the explanation Monday after the early release ordered by Circuit Judge John R. Snoddy Jr. drew criticism and congressional scrutiny.

Feds And Interferon

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The government has begun a program to determine the cancer-fighting capabilities of interferon, an anti-viral agent produced by the body as well as recently by laboratories.

Health and Human Services Secretary Richard Schweiker announced the program Monday and said it would be headed by the National Cancer Institute.

FLORIDA

IN BRIEF

Executions

Are Delayed

TAMPA (UPI) - Convicted murderer Gary Alvord has been spared his May 6 date with the electric chair and his appeal and that of Willie Jasper Darden are in the hands of federal judges.

U.S. District Judge Ben Krentzman gave Alvord's attorney 20 days Monday to respond to a state motion to dismiss his appeal, carrying the court action beyond the May 8 expiration date of the death warrant signed by Gov. Bob Graham.

Alvord, who is under death sentence for the 1973 strangulation of three Tampa women, is making his first federal court appeal of his conviction and sentence, having exhausted his state court avenues of appeal.

Darden, sentenced to die for the 1973 slaying of a Lakeland furniture store owner, was to have died May 23, 1979 along with John Spenkelink, but was granted a stay by U.S. District Judge W. Terrell Hodges.

Woman Wins Suit

JACKSONVILLE (UPI) - A 26-year-old Lake Worth woman has won a $1.25 million out-of-court settlement after she filed a negligence lawsuit, claiming a loose hand rail on a motel swimming pool's water slide caused an accident that left her a quadriplegic.

Days Inn of America Inc. agreeed to pay Christine Rothenburg $1,001,000 and Aquasiide 'N' Dive Corp. settled for $250,000.

In the Aug. 9, 1979, accident at the Days Inn motel near the Jacksonville International Airport, Miss Rothenburg said she lost her balance when she tried to hold onto the hand rail and plunged head first down the 6-foot-high slide into three and half feet of water, severing her spinal cord.

Killer Gets Chair

TITUSVILLE (UPI) - Drifter Jeffrey Daugherty was sentenced to die in the electric chair Monday for the 19 hitch hiker LaVonne Sailor.

Daugherty already had been sentenced to 107 years in prison as a result of four separate murders during a crime spree which stretched from Virginia to Florida in

Police say Daugherty picked up Miss Sailor as she was hitch hiking and then shot her five time in the head with a .22 caliber

Body Recovered

TAMPA (UPI) - The body of scuba diver Daryl Harvey, 21, of Brandon, was recovered from a sinkhole in Hillsborough County Monday afternoon.

Harvey and an instructor were diving in the sinkhole Saturday when they encountered trouble, possibly an underwater condition known as nitrogen narcosis.

The instructor, Ronald Clark, managed to get to the surface and was taken to Shands Teaching Hospital in Gainesville for treatment of the bends.

Harvey's body was found pinned against the ceiling of a cave about 100 feet below the

Reagan Budget Moving Ahead With Momentum

WASHINGTON (UPI) - President front. Reagan's budget has picked up strong momentum in the Senate and a back-handed boost in the House from the Democratic leadership.

Senate Republicans Monday all but resolved a two-week-old dispute focusing on projections for a balanced budget in 1984 and GOP members of the Senate Budget Committee who earlier rejected the plan were now expected to approve it.

Meantime, House Democratic leaders sent mixed signals about the fate of a party alternative that makes fewer cuts than Reagan proposes in food, health, education, transportation and other social programs. The confusion indicated how much trouble Democrats were having in projecting a unified

The House Rules Committee planned to meet today to set the rules under which the House will consider the 1982 budget resolution Thursday, On Congress' first day back from its Easter break, Speaker Thomas O'Neill, D-Mass., conceded "many Democrats" are likely to jump ship and vote for a modified version of the Reagan budget rather than the Democratic plan he supports.

O'Neill questioned whether Democrats could stop Reagan and told reporters an administration media blitz in conservative Southern Democratic districts "has had a tremendous impact" on swing Democrats who will determine the outcome of the budget fight.

Statewide Tourist Tax?

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) - House leaders may have found a fallback position if the Legislature refuses to boost the sales tax to raise more money for roads, schools and law enforcement.

House Tourism and Economic Development proposed statewide tourist tax may be offered as an alternaltive if the Legislature rejects the penny sales tax being pushed in the Senate.

The announcement was a further sign legislative leaders are committed to raising taxes this year and they're now scurrying around for some politically-palatable way to

A fifth cent sales tax only on meals, rooms and other tourist-related expenditures would generate $106 million in 1961-82. Crawford proposed using $21 million for tourismpromotion activities run by the new commission, with the rest going to cities and counties.

Chairman Bob Crawford said Monday a .. The tax is an attractive one because the main sales tax would remain at four-cents-adollar, Crawford said. It might get through the Legislature if a general sales tax increase cannot, and would form the center of a smorgasbord of taxes generating about $150 million for general state needs.

> A penny general sales tax increase would raise $720 million a year, which is more than some legislators are willing to do.

Atlanta Victim Pulled From River

Reprocessing Nuke Fuel Is Good Sense

A decade ago, reprocessing of spent fuel from nuclear power plants seemed like a good idea. Today it is still a good idea, but it has fallen into disrepute.

The Reagan administration should rescue the privately owned reprocessing plant which stands nearly complete and idle at Barnwell, S.C. It should be operated by the government as part of the nation's nuclear energy program.

Each ton of spent fuel contains enough uranium and plutonium to generate, when reprocessed into new nuclear fuel elements, the energy equivalent of 1.early 200,000 barrels of oil.

And reprocessing would reduce the waste disposal problem from nuclear energy plants.

The federal government persuaded Allied Chemical Co. and General Atomic Co. to build the Barnwell plant. A permit was applied for in 1968. Construction started in 1971. The partners each invested nearly $200 million of private money in the venture. The government invested nothing, but did help make a site available.

But in 1976 President Gerald Ford, in a surprise announcement, created a task force to study the wisdom of nuclear fuel reprocessing And the next year President Jimmy Carter suspended hearings and declared that there would be no reprocessing.

Allied Chemical and General Atomic were left with no return on their investment and no way to recover the investment. They want the government to buy the plant and operate it.

The government has operated several reprocessing plants for spent fuel elements from the government's own military reactors.

A similar reprocessing plant for civilian fuel rods is justified by economics. France and Britain have big ones. There are 17 all told around the world on this side of the Iron Curtain.

The U.S. plant was shut down primarily because of fears that the spread of reprocessing technology around the world would increase the dangers of nuclear proliferation. But the technology is spreading, whether we like it or not. And we will pay a heavy economic penalty if we don't use it.

Other nations operate their reprocessing plants as government enterprises. We should too. Government regulations and political policy changes make it impossible for private enterprise to do the job in this era of public controversy over every aspect of the nuclear power industry.

It may go against the grain of policy-makers in the Reagan administration to take over a private enterprise. But the government has an obligation to Allied Chemical and General Atomic, based upon the fact that they built the plant at the government's request. And a takeover would be in the national interest.

Bolstering Defense

The increase of almost $26 billion in fiscal 1982 defense funds over the amount sought by the Carter administration will have more impact if accompanied by applied "economization."

The term used by the National Heritage Foundation translates to reforms in Department of Defense management under which President Reagan and his advisers could increase efficiency and economy.

Multi-year contracting alone, according to foundation experts, could save up to 15 percent of unit costs. The concept simply calls for systems or material delivery over a period of years with annual funding.

Reform is pusible in all phases of management, facilities, supplies, manpower and support systems. Retirement procedures should be reviewed. Service publications should survive on subscriptions, not subsidies.

Changes in the conduct of warfare itself are not beyond conprehension.

Such an ambitious restructuring program would demand close involvement of Congress and the Defense Department as well as the White House. The demand for preparedness within budget restrictions more than justifies such an

ROBERT WAGMAN Is DOE's Data Reliable?

Carter was running for president five years ago, he was sure that he had found a national scandal: The federal government was dependent upon the oil and gas companies for information on energy supplies. The Federal Power Commission even admitted that it had no independent means of gathering data or even of confirming the data that it received from the energy companies.

So, Carter pushed through Congress legislation establishing the Department of Energy. Many senators and representatives voted for the new department chiefly because its Energy Information Administration would be capable of gathering and verifying energysupply information.

But David Schwartz, a former consultant to the Energy Department, says that the federal government still is unable to obtain accurate data on energy supplies and is dependent upon the oil companies for most of its raw data.

Schwartz was called in to evaluate the department's information-gathering abilities after it had incorrectly forecast a world-wide shortage of crude oil at the time of the 1979 Iranian revolution.

In early 1980, Schwartz turned in a report highly critical of the accuracy of DOE's data and of the way in which that data was obtained. He found that much of the inaccurate information published by the department had been supplied by the industry. The study was suppressed by DOE officials and only recently was made public.

According to Schwartz, the department reported a dramatic drop in U.S. oil imports at the height of the Iranian crisis in early 1979 The American Petroleum Institute had reported oil imports of 8.8 million barrels for January 1979 and of 8.7 million barrels for the following month. The Energy Department, wanting to be conservative, lowered the API figures by half a million barrels and reported that as the official government estimate of oil

At the same time, data from the Customs Service and the Treasury Department indicated that petroleum imports were much higher - 9.1 million barrels in January and 9.9 million in February. Schwartz says that the Energy Department knew of the Treasury's figures, tried unsuccessfully to reconcile them with the API's and finally sided with the industry. Six months later it became clear that the Treasury figures had been accurate.

The difference was critical. The API said that U.S. oil imports had fallen short of demand, while the Treasury said that imports had exceeded demand. You may recall that gas prices at the pump spurted upward shortly afterward.

Schwartz's main recommendation was that the Energy Department use audit teams to review the information supplied by the oil companies. He advised that these teams "examine company records, documents, correspondence and memoranda in order to assure accurate and reliable data."

A DOE spokesman defended the department's gathering of data as well as its fallure to release the Schwartz study or to implement its recommendations. "We feel that our data gathering is accurate to within a percent or two each week," he said. "The study is simply the opinion of one man."

The spokesman dismissed the proposed audits as "very costly" and "not necessary". He added, "There is really no incentive for the oil companies to give us bad data, and we have no indication they have ever knowingly

Re: "Auto Inspections Generate Revenue" Letter.

U. S. Vehicle Safety Association of Florida had a pretty good argument until the last paragraph - "It makes little sense to eliminate a program which not only cost the taxpayer nothing" - just where does Mr. U.S. Vehicle Safety Association of Florida think the funds to pay for the certificate sales of $1.34 million come from, not to mention the other little "goodles" cited in the letter, comes from, if not out of the taxpayers pocket?

It is seldom I agree with Gov. Graham, but this is one time I think he is right on target. I will surely do as the letter writer suggests-write my Representative. Not only will I do that, I will send a copy of this letter to the Governor.

Would the Evening Herald please run an article on this outfit, U. S. Vehicle Safety Association of Fla. telling who they are, where located, and just how much of a vested interest they have in the continuation of this rape of the taxpayers' pocketbook, It is further to be noted that the writer does not mention all the time the taxpayer has to spend in getting these inspections. Of course, the taxpayers time isn't worth anything, to him, when he-she is producing revenue for the Vehicle Inspection Program. So this does not have to be taken in to account, One would think, from U.S. vehicles reasoning," that the taxpayers were mere chattels of the state, do they so consider them?

How To Fight Crime

I am startled that we are contemplating a government expenditure of $6.1 million for the Sheriffs Department of Seminale County to fight crime. I have lived in Seminole County since January, 1965 and have seen crime continue to grow in spite of an increase of 1,120 percent in the Sheriff's Budget; from about $500,000, in 1970, to $6.1 million in 1981-82 with the population only doubling.

This year's budget was $5.2 million. It makes me wonder if crime will be reduced by continued larger outlays of the taxpayers' money for police officers, administrative employees and prisons. I believe Chief Justice Burger come out recently for stiffening the penalties heavily for criminal acts. Possibly there is merit to this.

Of course, the real answer is the family. If you want to do something about crime, and other problems in our society, it seems there is only one answer - the restructuring and reinforcing of the family.

In Washington, President Reagan has proposed to Congress a program to cut federal spending and federal taxes.

Perhaps on a local level we should do more searching for other solutions to our problems besides tax and spend.

Louise Glipin, former Guidance Counselor at South Seminole Middle School, is a member of the Advisory Council and she has many accomplishments to her credit but being the oldest member of the council is not one of them. She fails short by almost a decade and that particular credit goes to Molly Steudle, who is referred to in the same article.

I think its time that Seminole County has a regulation that all bicycles have bells so that when they are ridden down the side walk, the rider can warn pedestrians that he is behind and wishes to pass.

News About

One country appears to be drawing close to its goal of controlling the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

That's bad news. Not necessarily, because the country is Saudi Arabia, the most Western-oriented of the 13-member cartel's major producers and the one with the closest political ties to the United States.

To hear Skeik Ahmad Zaki Yamani, the analgesically reassuring Saudi oil minister, tell it, the current surplus of oil on the world market that is undercutting the prices of the higher rollers among the producers is a Saudi plot. It is the product of sustained overproduction from Saudi fields for the deliberate purpose of causing enough distress to lower their prices to levels favored by the

The expectation is that having proved their ability single-handedly to determine whether the world oil market is tight or soft, the Saudis will be in a position to persuade their partners at the May 25 OPEC ministers' meeting to go along with a unified price structure. What the Saudis want is agreement among all producers on a basic price determined by world inflation rates and the economic health of OPEC's major industrial customers. If the other 12 go along, the Saudis will cut back their production - currently at 10.3 million barrels a day, more than a third of the OPEC total - with the consequent prospect of a swift firming of the market.

That's good news. Well, not necessarily. While the $32 a barrel the Saudis are currently charging is certainly preferable for Western buyers to the $40 Libya and Algeria have been holding out for, the Saudis are not acting out of altruism. Their interests are several - all self-

They need the assurance of a steady return on their oil resources to finance an ambitious long-term economic development program that is approaching an annual expenditure level of $100 billion. They can use their economic leverage for political advantage, a possibility the current pressuring of the United States for super-sophisticated aircombat equipment is only beginning to realize. And above all they do not want either to milk Western economies to the point that they are plunged into depression, limiting ability to buy oil, or to pressure them into even swifter retreat from energy dependence upon oil. That retreat is already under way. It is noticeable in a worldwide decline in consumption, encouraged in part by recession symptoms in Europe, but most of all in the United States, which alone burns up a third of the non-Communist world's oil. U.S. imports in March, according to the reckoning of the American Petroleum Institute, were down 18.1 percent from the previous year. Domestically, gasoline consumption had declined 5.8 percent.

Carried too far, the exporting positions of the oil producers could be undermined to the point that the oil cartel would collapse. Now that would be really good news.

Don't count on it. A collapse of the cartel would mean the abrupt end of even the erratic pricing relationships of the last few years. The weaker members could be expected to. dump their output on the market for whatever price it would bring, sharply lowering import costs for the consuming nations but also likely catching many of them - the United States most prominently - with expensive and suddenly overpriced alternative fuel projects

Oilmen Made Bundle On Label Switch

WASHINGTON — The paladins of justice are relentless in their pursuit of street criminals and small-time embezzlers. But when it comes to really big-time crime, the glant corporations with their high-priced attorneys seem to be able to flout the law with Here's the latest sorry example: American consumers were robbed of an estimated $526 million in 1978 - not at gunpoint, but at the res pump It was a complex paper-shuffling exercise involving three major oil refiners and several crude-oil middlemen.

Here's the rub, though: A 27-page "referral," or memorandum, laying out the scam was prepared last August, but, Department of Energy officials sat on it. Now they are belatedly trying to get the case ready for the Justice Department. Because of the Reagan administration's proposed drastic slash in DOE's enforcement budget, the effort may be too late. The whole investigation may

The still-secret referral alleges that Carbonit Houston Inc., Armada Petroleum and other crude oil resellers changed certification labels on oil from "domestic" to foreign."this not only earned them a bigger commission, but allowed three refiners - Mobil, American Petroleum and Tesoro Petroleum - to sell the refined products at much higher prices, the document explains.

"In a series of apparently sham transactions." the relevant thanges, Mobil converted 750,00 barrels of West Texas Sour Crude Oil from domestic to foreign with the help of Carbonit and Aramada. "By refining the West Texas Sour Crude Oil fabely labeled to foreigh, Mobil made $4,272,315," the

The domestic oil actually went — on paper - from Mobil to one middleman, then to the second middleman, where it was certified as a foreign and resold to Mobil, the DOE investigators determined. "In the steps which led from Mobil's sale to its repurchase, Carbonit appears to have had knowledge of each step," the memorandum states. "Carbonit personnel arranged to purchase the crude oil from Mobil and sell it to Aramada."

Interestingly, Carbonit's president, Richard Johnson, worked for Mobil from 1959 to 1974. Company officials confirmed that at least five other Mobil employees were hired by Johnson.

"The Carbonit group made illegal profits of $757,000," the referral charges, adding: "All told, these activities resulted in an approximate overcharge of $43 million for September 1978. However, the activities were continuous for the period of January through November 1978 ... or approximately $526.8 million for 1978."

The DOE document states that "although DOE has only circumstantial evidence of grand design ... the multiplicity of false certifications and resulting benefits could not have occurred by chance."

Carbonit's general counsel told my associate Tony Cappacio that he hadn't read the DOE document, but that alligations of conspiracy were "absolutely false." He said: "If you know the oil industry, you know that the people ... mentioned don't sit around and rub each other's backs." The oil company's lawyers also threatened to subpoena my reporter to obtain the DOE material.

We submitted quotations from the DOE referral to Mobil for comment. More than two weeks later, a spokesman replied: "Without knowing the full contents of the report, Mobil cannot respond to the questions about it and will not attempt replies to select pieces."

Footnote: Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, is investigating why it has taken so long for the DOE to refer the case to the Justice Department.

signing of receiver James Scott, 29, who played out his option with the Chicago Dawkins Knows Celtics Will Come Out Fighting

By United Press International Darryl Dawkins knows the Boston Celtics won't be lying on the ropes Wednesday night.

"You know they're not going to give up; they're going to come out fighting," sald Dawkins of the Celtics, who are down three games to one in the semifinal playoff zeries. "We've got to keep working."

The Celtics aren't the only ones on the brink of destruction. The Kansas City Kings are also down three games to one in their semifinal series with the Houston Rockets and must win at home Wednesday night.

The Celtics, with visions of Bobby Jones' last-second steal still clear in their mind, are coming off a 107-105 defeat Sunday by the 76ers. They have lost 11 straight at the Spectrum and are hoping Boston Garden will provide the proper change of atmosphere.

The Kings, trying to claw their way back from the rubble left by Moses Malone, dropped a 100-89 decision Sunday to the Houston Rockets. Malone, in a wanton show, finished with 42 points and 23 rebounds.

At the Spectrum Sunday, the 76ers let a 19-point lead evaporate in the second half and nearly let the entire game go that way as well. With three seconds remaining and the Celtics looking to tie, Nate Archibald threw a pass threequarters of the court intended for Larry Bird under the basket. But Jones, like a cornerback crossing over the middle, intercepted the ball and the 76ers had a two-game lead.

"Everyone is looking forward to Wednesday's game, then possibly coming back here (Philadelphia) to get the monkey off our backs," said Boston's Chris Ford, who had 16 points in 29 minutes. "It is tough but not impossible."

And the Rockets, as the last game in Houston attested, have considerable faith in Malone.

"The big guy knows we can all talk brave and say we'll do it without him," said Houston forward Robert Reld. "But, in the end, he's the franchise."

Hard work, however, is not enough for Malone. He wants results.

"I won't be happy until it's over," he said. "This series should have been 4-0. I thought we played bad in Kansas City. We didn't play singet."

Kings' guard Otis Birdsong, still hobbled with a sore ankle, said Kansas City has come this far and is capable of going further.

"I know one thing - it's not over," he said. "It's frustrating not being able to play like I can, but I have two days rest now and I think I'll contribute."

Pittsburgh Sues To Keep Bucs

PITIZEURGH (UPI) - The City of Pittsburgh filed suit in federal court Monday to stop the representatives of New Orleans and the Louisiana Superdome from talking further with the Pittsburgh Pirates about a possible move to their city.

In New Orleans, Cliff Wallace, executive director of the dome, responded the suit was unfounded.

Unbelievable! Valenzuela Blanks 4th Foe

UPI Sports Writer Unbelievable!

Rookie pitching sensation Fernando Valenzuela pitched his fourth shutout and fifth straight victory and ran his batting average up to .438 with three hits Monday night in the Los Angeles Dodgers' 5-0 triumph over the San Francisco Giants.

"He seems to think there's a better league somewhere else," said Los Angeles Manager Tommy Lasorda of his 20-year-old phenom, "and he's trying to pitch himself out of here."

Valenzuela, a native of Sonora, Mexico, drove in the Dodgers' first run and stretched his string of scoreless innings to 28 1-3 while dropping his ERA to 0.20.

If that news isn't bad enough for the opposition, Valenzuela says his confidence has increased.

"At the beginning, after the first two games. I was surprised at how well I'd done," Valenzuela said through an interpreter, "But I'm not surprised any more. Now I know what's going on out there"

The Glants, the only team to score against Valenzuela this season, bad at least one runner on base in each of the first six innings, but Valenzuela used his super screwball to escape unscathed. He walked four and

The triumph was Philadelphia's fourth straight and snapped a sixgan a winning streak for the Expos. "He looked like he (Ruthven) was

"He's my right arm! I'm not sure we would run this office without him," exclaims Lake Mary Elementary School assistant Principal Marlene Kinnee.

Nonplused, sitting at a desk piled high with papers, Retired Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP) volunteer Harry Bergstrom continues his work.

Like most volunteers. yes...even in anticipation of . National Volunteer Week, April 27 through May 3, Bergstrom doesn't like a lot of fanfare about what he's doing. But staff members of the schools and agencies who benefit from volunteer service are exuberant in their praise, "This has been the best year for volunteers. I can't be more pleased." says Mrs. Kinnee. It's been fanbeen so loyal. If they say they're going to be here, they will be here."

"When Mr. Bergstrom comes," she continues, "he assists me in all types of clerical work. He helps me with anything I ask him to do. What he's doing now would take hours and hours to complete. If I had to do this project myself, I would have to take time away from doing those things I have to do for my teachers."

Taking a break from the check-out desk, Mrs. Flammger says she looks forward to her time at the library, "I don't think the city would have enough money to run this library without the Equally pleased with the volunteers," she says, adding that she "enjoys the people nonprofit organizations. In addition, they also respond to calls for assistance by agencies throughout the county. In just one week, Mrs. Sorenson, a former secretary at a hospital who retired at the age of 74 and did her first volunteer work through RSVP at 83, assisted at the Seminole County Mental 'Health Clinic, Mrs. Gray, who worked all her life until a heart condition forced her retirement says, "Before this, I just sat at

And, she continues smiling, "It gives me something to talk about with the family," noting it was her daughter, Beverly Sobik who encouraged her to get involved.

Mary Clady also worked all her life until moving to Florida, "When I came down here, I was really disgusted," she admits. "I didn't know anybody here and I was cooped up until I joined the JOAN MADISON volunteer program. Now I have friends...we joke, we kid. When I work here (with the sewing group) I laugh. I can't wait until Mondays come." Her enthusiasm for the program rubbed off on her husband, Ed, who now spends hours making wooden items for the RSVP Christmas

When he's not working at Lake Mary School Harry Bergstrom, a former nurse, helps at Crossroads Treatment Center in Sanford. His supervisor, RN Merrily A. Sutherlin reports, "Mr. Bergstrom has made himself available at all times of the day and night in our Detoxification Program. Because of his professional background, he is great asset to our staff."

During the first three months of 1981, RSVP volunteers donated 15,289 hours of service to Seminole County. This contribution. based on minimum wage, amounts to $51,218 worth of services for the three month themselves to RSVP service in Seminole County. All are determined to help make this torment with a group of 19 high county a better place in which school students. Narrated by Edward Asner

Conceited Creep Acts Like A Real Fathead

Harry Bergstrom assists Lake Mary Elementary

DEAR ABBY: A month ago I met a gentleman in a nightclub. I gave him my phone number and the next day he called me for a date. We went out and had a wonderful time just talking and getting to know each other. I told him I had recently lost 40 pounds and planned to shed another 25. I didn't hear from him for a month. Then I received this letter:

"Hi. You are probably wondering why I haven't called you, so I might as well tell you the truth. First let me say I think you are a nice, cute girl and a wonderful person to talk to or I wouldn't have taken you out. I like you and I think you like me, but before I take you out again you must lose 25 pounds!

"I am very picky about girls. They have to be TRIM! When you've slimmed down, call me. Take care."

Since receiving this letter I have lost more weight - for myself, not for him. Abby. please tell me, do you think this gentleman was trying to do a fat girl a favor? Or was he just showing himself for what he is - a concelled creep? What should I do?

FAT CHANCE DEAR CHANCE: Revenge is sweet (and zero calories), so indulge yourself. Slim down, but don't call him. Arrange to run into him "accidentally," and if he asks why you haven't called, tell him you are "picky" about men. You prefer men who judge a woman by her character and personality, not her weight

DEAR ABBY: We have a big problem at work. We are two women who manage a women's retail store. The dressing room is next door to our boss's office. We have found small holes in the walls in his office, which enable him to look into the ladies' dressing room. (The holes are covered by pictures.) Do you have any ideas, Abby? We can't come right out and confront the boss or we might get fired.

NO NAMES, PLEASE DEAR NO NAMES: A confrontation is not necessary. Every morning, check the dressing room wall for "boles," then cover them with adhesive paper. Do this routinely and your boss will soon realize that you are on to his dirty little peeping game. DEAR ABBY: Should we be thankful for having more "choices" today? When I was in high school 30 years ago, my English teacher would stress, "You have a choice - you can go to the movies or you can stay home." Never would she say, "You have two choices, you can go to the movies or stay

Was my teacher right? Everything you read today has "two choices."

STYMIED READER DEAR STYMIED: According to my word maven, William Safire, "You can have a choice or two choices. Both are correct. But you cannot correctly say, 'You have two alternatives.' An alternative is the other

Outstanding Mom

With Mother's Day fast approaching, The Herald is embarking on a search for that outstanding Mom.

So, we're turning to our readers for some help. If you know of a woman who, in your opinion, is deserving of mention as an outstanding mother, let us know.

We'll accept until noon, Thursday, April 30, letters submitted by readers, about one to one-and-a-half pages of standard size sheets, telling briefly why a particular woman in our area is deserving of such recognition. We'll take it from there.

Readers should mail their selection to: OURSELVES Editor, Doris Dietrich, The Evening Herald, 300 French Ave., Sanford, Fla. 32771.

Let Senkarik Help You Spruce Up For Spring

Spring is here and it's time for fixing up and beautifying your home or business. Whether you are planning to paint, redecorate, install glass or invest in art supplies, make your first stop Senkarik Glass and Paint Co. at 210 Magnolia Ave. Sanford.

Chances are you will have to look no further for your needs, whether big or small.

One of the most versatile paint and glass stores in Central Florida, Senkarik has been synonymous with quality and service in the Sanford area for more than 35 years. Founded by John Senkarik, the business and tradition are still carried on by his sons, Jerry and Eddle.

Senkarik carries a full line of nationally famous, Sanfordmanufactured Pen Paints and Benjamin Moore Paints for interior and exterior paint jobs as well as all types of painting supplies, brushes and rollers.

The Senkariks are always glad to give painting advice and will even go out to your home to discuss special painting problems and estimate the overall cost of materials needed to

For any wood that must weather the outdoor elements, the Senkariks recommend McCloskey's Man o'War Ultra Spar Marine Varnish.

Senkarik carries a large selection of wallpaper designs, including photo murals and grass stock, from which to choose.

Senkarik specializes in all types of glass, including table tops, custom residential glazing, mirrors, glass replacement, storefront commercial and auto glass. They also stock Plexiglas in four thicknesses.

Do-it-yourselfers need not be afraid to tackle the job of refinishing old furniture because of the tedious work involved, lack of know-how or proper aides. Senkarik has all the necessary products and advice for a professional looking job or restoring old furniture, antiques and picture frames.

Lacquer, varnish or shellac can all be removed with the Hope two-step method of instant refinishing Hope's refinisher removes old finish with no stripping, no paint brushes and no sandpaper. Follow this up with a finish coat of Hope's Tung Oil and your furniture will be ready for use the same day.

Artists — whether beginners or professionals — will find a large variety of art supplies with such quality name brands as Grumbacher, Delta, Winsor-Newton and Liquitex. If you don't find what you want in stock, they will be glad to order it for

To frame your work of art, Senkarik has a large selection of frames and several hundred types of moldings in stock, The store is open Monday through Friday, 7:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Starting Business Involves Planning

Starting your own business -- whether it's a plant-care service out of your own hasement or a multi-million dollar advertising agency is part of the American dream. But, unfortunately, not everybody succeeds. Especially in these belttightening times, the would-be entrepreneur has to be practical to turn his or her dream into a reality.

What does it take? According to the U.S. Department of Labor, success requires a combination of a special instinct for the free market and a lot of forethought and planning. The free booklet, Being Your Own Boss, available by sending a postcard to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. $39J. Pueblo, Colorado 81009, contains worthwhile advice for the entrepreneur.

The market is a hard taskmaster, And, to strike out on your own takes a rare person. After all, you're risking your career, family life, and personal funds. How do you think you'd measure up? Let's see how you respond to this

- Do you enjoy setting difficult objectives for yourself?

 Do you find yourself constantly moving on to a new and greater challenges? - Are you the type of person who likes to find innovative ways of doing things

- Can you make fast, accurate decisions? - Can you give guidance to others and inspire confidence and loyalty in others? - Can you write and speak articulately? - Can you assume more risk than most?

 Can you accept responsibility toward employees, clients, and part-

If your answer to three or more of these questions is "no," perhaps you should reconsider going into business for yourself. Of course, you may not need all of these qualities. Self-employed artists or craftspersons sometimes can be successful

New Process: For Power

Tuesday, April 28, 1981—3B

NEW YORK (UPI) - A new method of making electricity from coal without burning the coal at the power plant offers the long-range possibility of eliminating most air pollution from that source.

It also may lead to cheaper ways of getting gas from coal than those presently planned in the national synfuel project. It also would produce an enormous amount of hydrogen that either could be burned in power plants, turned into motor fuel or used in chemical plants.

The patent on the process has been granted to Dr. Richard Williams, a fellow on the staff of RCA Laboratories at Princeton, N.J.

Williams' process carries a step further the old "waler gas" manufacturing method which was one of the principal ways of making illuminating and heating gas from coal in Europe and America before the widespread development of natura! gas pipelines. It converts water gas into sodium formate and hydrogen, both of which can be used to power fuel cells and make electricity without combustion.

Water gas, made by passing steam over hot coal, contains equal molecular quantities of carbon monoxide and hydrogen. This means substantially equal amounts of the two in BTU's.

-Williams' invention calls for reacting the carbon monoxide with hot sodium hydroxide to create sodium formate. Both sodium formate and hydrogen can be used to make electricity chemically in fuels.

Fuel cells, conceived 150 years ago, have undergone development since World War II by the Germans and by several American firms, chiefly Allis-Chalmers Corp. of Milwaukee. So far they are small and are used in aerospace and other high technology fields, but Williams told United Press International there is no real reason why it cannot ultimately be scaled up to large industrial sizes.

Conceding the process he has patented will involve largescale investment if it is adopted, Williams said he is convinced the cost would be justified because its potential efficiency would convert 50 percent of the energy in coal into electricity as against a maximum of 30 percent for making electricity by burning coal directly. It also would be much more efficient, he said, than the other projected syngas programs.

In his laboratory work on the program, Williams has used anthracite and other high grade coals. He concedes the process would be relatively less efficient with high-sulfur, low-grade coals. "However," he said, "if we need to gasify these inferior coals, there will be a great incentive to use a superior process like my sodium formate method instead of the conventional processes."

RCA Corp. said it intends to grant non-exclusive licenses to the Williams patent throughout the world. Although Williams and RCA are concerned primarily with use of the Williams process for large-scale output of electricity from fuel cells, others doubtless will see in the process another good future source of hydrogen as a reasonably priced general purpose fuel.

It has been pointed out that coal deposits of the United States contain enough hydrogen to solve all the nation's energy problems. So do the waters of the seas, lakes and rivers. Chairman William T. Seawell of Pan American World Airways is on record as saying hydrogen should be the airline fuel of the

A number of inventors and several companies are working on ways to extract hydrogen more economically from water. Perhaps now we will see a race to determine which is the quickest and most economical source of hydrogen, water or

Wave Of The Future?

College Sponsored Industrial Parks

park looks like a wave of the future in America.

Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute of Troy, N.Y., the oldest degree-granting engineering school in the English-speaking world, has just announced such a venture.

President George M. Low said RPI will contribute 1,200 acres in North Greenbush near the RPI campus and $3 million cash to build roads, sewers and other necessary improvements to get the park started.

RPI's primary interest is to provide large-scale practical experience opportunities under advanced industrial working conditions for its faculty, its 4,300 undergraduates and 1,300 graduate students. Ultimately the park may provide income for the college, but Low told United Press International that would be far in the future. It could, however, bring an ultimate payroll of $100 million a production of $200 million of goods and services and more than $5 million a year in state and local tax revenues. The college-sponsored industrial park is not original with RPI. Low said much of the inspiration came from Stanford's success with its Silicon Valley developments, Princeton's Forrestal Center, the University of Utah's magnificent industrial park, the Route 128 developments around Boston associated with MIT, University Research Park near year to the Troy-Albany area, jobs for 9,000 persons, annual Charlotte, N.C. and Research Triangle near Raleigh, N.C.. "The fundamental object from RPI's standpoint is to enhance teaching and research opportunities and let faculty and students become more familiar with the real world of manufacturing and high technology industry," he said.

This would appear to be a more modern approach to what the University of Cincinnati and Antioch College set off nearly 60 years ago when they went into co-op education with students alternating time between the campus and jobs in factories or Low predicted college-sponsored industrial parks will increase. He said he understood the University of Rochester and the state university at Stony Brook, Long Island, are planning parks and there others in the works around the country. He said while the parks involve some financial risk to a college or university, they are thoroughly justified by the need of colleges, industry and the nation for more rapid and diversified technological progress. In a study of industrial parks last year for Gov. Hugh Carey and the New York legislature a committee headed by State

Sen. Kenneth P. LaVaile concluded that "a marriage of higher education and industry" probably is the first essential to a good long-range industrial park program. The permanence of the faculty and goals of a university or engineering college as contrasted with what may be shifting goals in individual industrial companies is an important reason for that. But the committee said the scientific equipment, library facilities, pools of graduate students and a labor pool of undergraduates wanting partiline jobs also are important. The part-time jobs for students and increased employment opportunities for graduates are valuable to the colleges along & with the expanded research and teaching opportunities cited

Art World Begins To Accept Graffiti

NEW YORK (UPI) - Even as the city transit system spends a sizable fortune each year to wipe off graffiti from the subways, a few of New York's better known "graffiti artists" are gaining acceptance in the art world and earning hundreds of dollars for their works.

"It's really beginning to happen," said Futura 2000, a 25-year-old graffiti writer, who prefers to go by his "tag" (graffiti name) rather than his real name - both for professional reasons and possible legal ones,

"I have two works hanging on Park Avenue and one on Sutton Place. People are beginning to see that graffiti is legitimate art."

Works by Futura, a native New Yorker living near Spanish Harlem, and other "graffiti artists" recently were featured at a fashionable Soho art gallery that had on display the graffiti artists tools - spray cans, different sized nozzles for variation, colored markers and for the well-equipped, skeleton keys to subway cars.

"In the beginning I did it to get my name in the subway cars, it was something to do, strike out against the establishment and gain respect from," said Frederick Brathwaite, 23, of Brooklyn, whose "tag" of "Fab Five Freddie" has been seen by thousands of subway riders across the city. "But now we're becoming more refined and some of our 'pieces' are really major works of art. Interest is basically in Europe."

Brathwaite has had his graffiti-based works, including scrawlings of his "tag" and the word "sex," shown - and sold - in an Italian art gallery.

Both Brathwaite and Futura, who have never been caught in their nine years each of graithti-writing, say they've already netted about $5,000 each from their works.

Futura said he recently sold a work to a collector for $1,100 and one of Brathwaite's pieces is up for auction at the

Street Warfare Preparations Grow In Northern Ireland

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) - Pope John Paul II's personal envoy talked with IRA activist Bobby Sands for an hour but failed to persuade him to give up a 60-day hunger strike that has left him near death, the government said today.

The condition of Sands, placed on a waterbed early today to ease his pain, worsened and he again refused food, As both Roman Catholic and Protestant communities prepared for open warfare on the streets, papal envoy Rev. John Magee requested a meeting with the British minister for Northern Ireland, Humphrey Atkins.

A government spokesman said Atkins had agreed to the request "on the clear understanding that there can be no change in government policy in relation to the hunger

Sands, serving a 14-year sentence for firearms possession and who was elected to the British Parliament on April 10, was twice given the last rites of the Roman Catholic Church and barely kept a grip on consciousness. He briefly lost his sight, hearing and speech at one point and has been placed on a water bed to alleviate discomfort.

Rev. Magee, an Ulsterman himself, made no statement after going to Sands' bedside in the Maze prison Tuesday night. Sands has repeatedly said he will only end his fast to death if IRA prisoners are given the status of political prisoners by the British government.

A Northern Ireland office spokesman reported "no dramatic result" from the meeting and the condition of Sands, 27, continued to deteriorate.

A police spokesman blamed the build-up of siege preparations in both Roman Catholic and Protestant communities on para-military groups "attempting to provoke a confrontation for their own cynical purposes."

He said the police had detailed plans to counter any bid by extremists to provoke such a confrontation. He said a special command control room with sophisticated computer technology had been set up at police headquarters to monitor the situation.

The hoarding of vital food supplies such as bread and milk, already rampant in the ghetto areas, Wednesday spread to the inner city itself.

"Powdered milk and tinned foods are in big demand and our bread supply has been sold out." a supermarket manager said. Paramilitary leaders have told families to stock up on food and other supplies in the event of possible prolonged violence should Sands die.

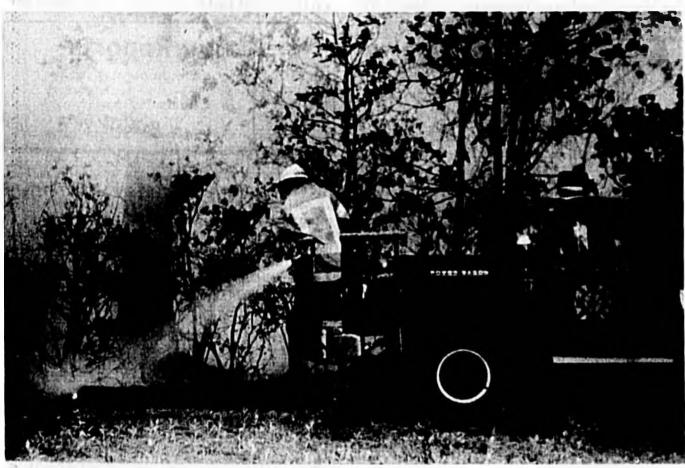

"War is no doubt going to be unleashed upon us," if Sands dies, said Protestant leader Rev. Ian Pailsey, expressing fear of all-out fighting in the British-ruled area, where more than. 2,000 people have been killed in bombing and violence since

"If Mr. Sands persisted in his wish to commit suicide, that was his choice," Atkins said Tuesday.

But in California, Cardinal Timothy Manning, the Irishborn archbishop of Los Angeles, appealed to Britain "In the name of all concerned with human rights" to compromise on Sands' other two demands - to allow IRA prisoners to wear civilian clothing and do no prison work.

The New York Times said in an editorial today Mrs. Thatcher "is right in refusing to yield political status to Bobby Sands," but "there are other areas where the British could honorably yield. On the petty question of prison clothing, for example: Why shouldn't protesters be allowed civillan clothes provided by their families instead of by prison officials?"

Reagan Urges Americans: Try New Thing — His Recovery Plan

budget assured of approval by half the Congress, a raspy-voiced President Reagan dismissed a Democratic substitute as "an echo of the past" and urged Americans to try something new - his plan for economic recovery.

The president's Republican teammates said his latest pep talk would rouse the nation. Democrats grumbled it was misleading and some of his figures inaccurate. In his first public appearance since being shot less than a month ago, Reagan addressed Congress and the nation Tuesday night both to win over the two dozen or so House Democrats needed to put through his budget reductions and, perhaps more important, to demonstrate he is, indeed, running the government. Although fellow Republicans said they were happily surprised at his appearance, the usual blush was gone from Reagan's cheeks and his voice was strained - the result of a bullet wound to

He was unable to gesture as loosely as before, but the 70-year-old president never faltered and was pumping hands vigorously as he walked up the main aisle of the House of Representatives after the speech.

As he mounted the rostrum earlier, the joint session gave him a sustained 2minute, 45-second ovation punctuated by rhythmic cheers from the Republican side. After his introduction by House Speaker Thomas O'Neill, Reagan received another 45 seconds of tribute.

It was his third appearance before Congress on behalf of the economic program he says he was elected to carry out, and it came on the eve of his 100th day in office, the mythical milepest for

It was a chance for Reagan to gather momentum for what could be a difficult fight in the House, which must choose by next week between his budget of roughly $690 billion or the Democrat-controlled House Budget Committee's $715 billion alternative, which restores some funds for social programs be wants reduced.

The Senate is expected to give Reagan what he wants next week. Then the House must start work on the more controversial part of his package - a threeyear, 30 percent across-the-board tax

Smoke Blankets Seminole County

By DONNA ESTES Herald Staff Writer

Smoky conditions can be expected to continue during the early morning and early evening hours in Seminole County for at least two more days.

Gill Artman, Florida Forest Ranger supervisor, said the smoke which blanketed the county early this morning came from forest and muck-like fires from as far as 35-to-100 miles awar.

The only hope for putting out the fires is a steady, long-lasting drenching rain, Artman said, And there is no prediction of such rain in the near future.

The Weather Service predicts a slight chance of rain Thursday night and Friday morning.

burning currently in the Orange-Osceola-Brevard counties area. The forest fire closest to Seminole was discovered Tuesday afternoon south of Ovledo, in the area of Orange County bounded by University Boulevard to the south, Dean Road to the west, Econlockhatchee Trail to the east and the old sports stadium to the north. Artman said this fire and the 30 mucklike fires are expected to smoulder for at least two days longer.

No forest or muck-like fires are burning in Seminole County at this time, he

The smoke, rather than rising from these fires and drifting off, is falling into the Orlando-Seminole County area, Artman said. Artman said the fire near the University of Central Florida went through a swamp. "The water table is so low, the fire going through the swamp acted like a muck fire," Artman said.

"When swamps are up to their proper water level, we steer fires toward them," he said. "Now, however, the fires are running right through the swamps and giving off smoke. The smoke from the dry swamps is not as long-lasting as a true muck fire," he said.

Artman said the water table currently is down in excess of 22 inches.

"It would be nice to get that level returned. It would take a heck of a lot of rainfall," he said. If rain does come and is too heavy too fast, he added it will do little or no good at all.

"If we got four-to-six inches of rainfall in 24 hours the water table would come up only one-half to three-quarters of an inch," he said, "We need some nice light-type rain over a period of time." Artman said he is surprised sinkholes haven't been seen in Seminole because of the low water table. "We are going to hear about a lot of wells going bad and caving in," he

"The unfortunate thing about these forest fires is that the trees are giving off new growth and sap is flowing freely are totally devastating," he said. Artman said major landowners, "who have a lot of wood burning savvy and who have practiced a policy for years of burning off pasturelands, have been losing control of burning.

their 30 years experience of burning woods, they have never seen conditions like this. They are ready to hang up their drip torches," Artman said. The purpose of burning pastureland and small woods areas is to enrich the soil with the carbon and to reduce the accumulation of forest floor fuels to lessen the danger of wild fires.

have worked in the past, but the landowners now are seeing these fires burning with more intensity and getting out of control, he said.

Artman advised motorists to practice the normal fire safety measures while traveling through woodlands, reminding that burning cigarettes should not be thrown out of car windows.

Artman said 90 percent of Seminole County is classified as wildland, grassland or forest land. In the four county Florida Forest Service district, including Seminole, Osceola, Orange and Brevard, 1.8 million acres are designated wildland, forest land or grass land and could easily burn.

Capt, John Kent of the Dommerich-Goldenrod Fire District said the division of Forestry, Union Park and Lake Barton fire departments are assisting his department in battling the blaze near

"It's under control," Kent said. "We have fire breaks all around the fire and through it," he said.

The cause of the fire has not been determined, Kent said. Another fire in Orange County Tuesday burned more than 400 acres in northwest portion of that county. The fire burned over the Orange-Seminole county line into less than an acre in Seminole, southeast of Chuluota.

The below normal rainfall this year has caused the water level in lakes to drop, underground water supplies to dwindle and homeowners to use more water on lawns and gardens.

Mack Lazenby, utilitles director for the city of Sanford, said the city's 8,000 water customers are using water as never

"Yesterday (Tuesday) between 6 and 9 p.m. they were using water at the rate of 9.3 million gallons a day reducing pressure," he he said.

Lazenby blames the increase use not only on lack of rainfall, but also Daylight Savings Time, which gives residents more time to work in their yards after they get home from work. "They see their neighbor out watering his yard so they turn on their sprinklers, too. It's contagious," he added.

By MATTHEW C. QUINN

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The speech President Reagan hoped to use to cekindle momentum for his economic program brought predictable cheers from his fellow Republicans, but unusually harsh criticism from top congressional Democrats

The two top Democrats in the House, where Reagan's tax and budget cuts face their sternest test, came down hard on the president. Elsewhere, there were no indications his overture changed any House Democratic Leader Jim Wright accused Reagan's advisers of using inaccurate figures that led to false budget would mean higher taxes and a bigger deficit. "It is unfortunate in the extreme that some of those who provided statistical information for his data did President Reagan a grave disservice by describing the House Budget Committee's resolution in factually inaccurate ways," Wright said.

Wright said Reagan was incorrect in stating the Democrats' proposal would boost spending by $141 billion above his own budget, reduce the defense budget and increase tax payments by over one-

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Nelll, criticisms a Democratic alternative eschewing the political caution that often prevails in the aftermath of a presidential address, 2aid, "The president's assertion the Democratic budget cuts essential defense spending is unfair and misleading."

"The latest version of the Republican budget begins the abandonment of the government's responsibility in the fields of health and education. That is the major reason I cannot support the latest version of the president's budget and why I will work for the Democratic proposal," O'Nelll said. Among Republicans, who have seen Reagan's economic package battered during his convalencence, the reaction to the president's appearance on Capitol Hill was warm, and in some instances effusive.

"President Reagan was forthright, courageous and to the point," said Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind.

Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker said, "I think it's the best speech he's ever given."

And Sen. William Roth, RDel., coauthor of the tax-cut proposal Reagan has adopted, called the speech "one of the most dramatic events I have ever witnessed in my 14 years in the Congress. The Gipper gave us a locker-room speech that would make Knute Rockne proud." There was at least one dissenting voice among the GOP cheers.

Maverick Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., blasted his fellow Republicans, charging the nation had enough "weakkneed vaciliating leadership" under the Carter administration. "Unfortunately, we no sooner booted the weak knees from the White House than they suddenly seemed to show up all over Capitol Hill."

But Reagan's speech drew laurels from leaders of the Conservative Democratic Forum - a group of 44 Southern Democrats who comprise a key bloc of swing votes in the House.

'In case of smoke, don't breathe. That was the message given this morning by health officials when a thick bank of smoke from a series of Orange County fires rolled into Seminole County about 8 a.m.

While smoke hung heavy over the county for more than an hour this morning, Dr. Betty Vaughn, assistant director of the Orange County Health Department, said the situation was "not serious enough to pose any real health

"For the average healthy individual, this smoke will probably cause nothing more severe than maybe some coughing. burning eyes, and overall discomfort," Vaughn said.

"This is mostly to affect only people, especially elderly people, who have existing respiratory problems such as emphysema, asthma, and allergies," she "But it would take a massive inversion holding the smoke in an area for several hours before even they would be seriously affected."

Should that happen, Vaughn advised persons with respiratory problems, those who already have diminished lung capacity," to "get out of the area during periods of high smoke concentrations." If that's not possible, the next best thing is to "stay indoors in an air-conditioned environment where most of the irritating smoke is filtered out."

Of course, "you could stop breathing," Vaughn joked. "That's very effective. The only trouble is you can't do it for long."-BRITT SMITH
