'Boom-box' bill leads to arrest

SANFORD — A loud car radio led to the arrest of a Sanford man Wednesday on weapon and driving charges. Seminole County Deputy Vince Laffer reported seeing a 1978 Cadillac driving south on Southwest Road at about 10:30 p.m. with the radio "blaring loudly." The Florida Legislature passed the "boom-box" bill in 1990 which prohibits playing a radio loud enough to be clearly heard 100 feet away. The law has been in effect for eight months.

Laffer reported he knew the driver, David Wayne McKnight, 39, 84 William Clarke Court, Sanford, to have an expired driver's license. After the car stopped, Laffer reported seeing a file knife on the floorboard. A computer check revealed McKnight's license was suspended indefinitely in 1981 and cancelled indefinitely in 1991.

The Florida Parole Commission also had an active warrant for his arrest, Laffer reported. McKnight was taken to the Seminole County jail on charges of unlawful operation of a radio, driving with a suspended license and carrying a concealed weapon.

End of recession near

WASHINGTON — Almost three-fourths of the nation's top economic forecasters predict the recession will be over in five weeks, but nearly all say the recovery will be weaker than usual, according to a survey released today.

"The U.S. recession is almost over," said a summary of the survey by the National Association of Business Economists, or NABE.

The survey showed 11 percent of the 58 professional forecasters polled in early May contended that the recession already had ended. Sixty percent said it would hit bottom during the quarter ending June 30.

In its previous survey last February, 22 percent of the forecasters said they expected the recession to conclude during the first quarter, 51 percent in the second and 18 percent in the third.

Still, 27 percent of the forecasters said the recession would not end until the third quarter and 2 percent said the trough would occur even later.

But regardless of when the recession ends, 93 percent of the forecasters said the recovery "would be slower than normal."

Sheriff backs jailer

Training of personnel to be reviewed; apprehended escapee won't be back

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Sheriff Don Ealinger gave his support to chief county jail officer Maj. Duane Rutledge, saying the correct policies and procedures were in place to prevent escapes, despite three breakouts this year.

"It does raise some alarm, of course," Ealinger said. "But I believe the proper policies and procedures are in place. All three could have been prevented if individuals had followed our policy. Maj. Rutledge is one of the best correctional managers, tacticians, in the state. If they're needed, I'm sure he can institute the changes."

Ealinger said an investigation is continuing into the escape of Richard Barefoot Monday while he was in the prison exercise yard. While a correctional officer in the exercise yard was apparently distracted at about 2 p.m., Barefoot scaled a 22-foot fence climbed over a coil of razor-sharp wire and ran along the top of the jail to safety in a nearby wooded area.

Barefoot was tackled 32 hours later at a highway restaurant near Jacksonville by two U.S. Marshall deputies and taken into custody.

Barefoot was scheduled to appear before U.S. District Judge Mary Patricia C. Fawcett at noon today for a first appearance on escape charges. Deputy U.S. Marshall Brenda Lewis Ferebee said this morning Barefoot will be kept in the Osceola County jail indefinitely. See Page 8A

Founder of nature center and educator to retire

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — At the end of this school year Bettie Spratt is retiring after 38 years as an educator in the Seminole County schools.

The founder of the district's environmental study center and coordinator of science and environmental education, Spratt had previously taught chemistry at Oviedo High School for many years.

When she began her career in Seminole County nearly four decades ago, she said that science was "a man's world." Even her classes were made up almost exclusively of boys.

"Science was for boys in those days," she said. "Girls took English classes to prepare for college."

A graduate of Valdosta State and the University of Georgia, Spratt earned her masters degree at Rollins College.

It didn't bother her that she was the lone woman in a man's world. See Spratt, Page 5A

LONGWOOD — Bettie Spratt knew about the retirement party her friends at the Seminole County school district were throwing for her yesterday afternoon.

What she wasn't expecting was that they would name the main building and museum at the environmental study center she had worked so hard to create in her honor.

"We thought that it would be appropriate. She has done so much for that center," said Bob O'Dell, the acting director of curriculum services, who spearheaded the drive to have the building named for Spratt. See Dedication, Page 5A

Empty Zayres Plaza may get new tenant

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The new landlord of Zayres Plaza could begin leasing space in the 110,000-square-foot facility next month.

The Seminole County Expressway Authority completed the $3 million purchase of the shopping center two weeks ago from former owners Brenda Properties. And Expressway director Gerald Brinton said Habitat for Humanity is prepared to lease the former Walgreens drug store for a fund-raising flea market and their offices.

No terms have been completed, but Brinton said the lease arrangement suggested by Seminole County Habitat director Don Nolt called for an unspecified monthly lease payment and a percentage of market proceeds. Brinton said the lease could be finalized by authority members June 19.

"We just as soon keep it occupied and generating revenue for the authority to help repay county loans," Brinton said.

A state-required inspection for asbestos found the potentially deadly material in only floor tiles, Brinton said. The tiles present no hazard unless they are removed, he said.

The shopping center has lain vacant for more than a year while Brenda Properties sued the authority in 1989, saying plans to build the expressway through the shopping center site drove off Zayres, Walgreens and other tenants and deterred other tenants from leasing.

Brinton said he preferred leasing the store space to non-profit organizations and small businesses that would not attract customers. By limiting traffic at the center, the authority's liability in the case of an accident is also limited, Brinton said.

Brinton predicted the plaza would not be demolished for at least four to five years. The state has not financed the construction of the six-mile link from U.S. Highway 17-92 to Interstate 4, although $7.3 million has been earmarked by the state for the design of the segment. To prevent accidents and liability,

"We just as soon keep it occupied and generating revenue for the authority to help repay county loans."

Gerald Brinton
Expressway director

Brinton said he will close the popular short-cut route through the shopping center parking lot. Since stores have left the center, traffic between Airport Boulevard and South Orlando Drive have taken advantage of the parking lot in front of the stores and the State Street traffic light.

In other action, expressway members narrowly approved "Greenway" as the name for the expressway throughout central Florida. The name had been recommended by a committee comprised of representatives from the Seminole and Orange County's expressway authorities and county officials from Osceola and Lake County where the expressway will one day pass.

The recommendation was opposed by Seminole County Commissioner Fred Streetman, who said a number would be easier to remember. County commissioner Pat Warren opposed the recommendation, saying she didn't consider a highway a "green way." Lake Mary Commissioner Paul Tremmel also opposed the name.

The name was also opposed by Paul Barton of Orange County. Barton said the name is used by environmental organizations and land planners to describe green strips of land and animal corridors, not roads. County commissioner Larry Furlong said one greenway is a highway in Tennessee.

County commissioner Jennifer Kelley said the name might encourage the state transportation department to provide extensive landscaping for the roadway. Expressway planners prepared a landscaping proposal for the expressway.

Ride bikes like the wind for 100 miles

By NICK PFEIFAU

SANFORD — Eight local area bike riders will set off from Sanford on June 1, to make a 100 mile ride to St. Augustine. It's the Century ride, sponsored by the Sanford Cyclers.

Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce Executive Director Dave Farr, who is one of the entrants in the ride, said the club hopes to leave Sanford by 6:30 a.m., and reach the Fort at St. Augustine by 2:30 p.m. He said earlier today that there were only eight who have signed up for the run so far, "but this is a serious trip," he said. "Not everyone is capable of making it."

Farr suggested persons interested in making the trip should have previous experience in long bike trips, and be able to ride at speeds of 15 to 18 miles per hour for several hours at a time. Non-members are invited to join in the ride. They are required to supply their own helmet and provide their own transportation back to Sanford.

While in St. Augustine, the group will have a brief tour of the historical sections of the city, before returning to Sanford by car with family and friends.

More adults hit the road on bicycles

By BILL SCHULZ
Associated Press Writer

Each weekend throughout the year millions of Americans hop on their bicycles and take off — 10, 50 or even 100 miles.

"More and more folks go out riding with other cyclists. It's a very different event than riding by themselves," says Dan Schaller, administrative director of the League of American Wheelmen.

An estimated 88 million Americans ride bicycles, and the cycle industry estimates 48 million of them are adults, Schaller says.

Organized group rides range from little five- to 10-mile practice events to the "Pedal for Power across America," a 47 day trek from Los Angeles to Boston. This year's ride is May 11 through June 27.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

TaxWatch: No 'turkeys' in budget

By DAVID J. HARRIS
Associated Press Writer

This year it was a turkey famine.
-Dominic Calabro

TALLAHASSEE — The virtual elimination of special local projects in the new state budget that drew praise from a government watchdog group might be easier next year, two influential legislators said.

Florida TaxWatch Inc., a non-profit group, said in its annual "Turkey Watch" report released Wednesday that it could find some of the so-called "turkeys" as the projects have become known in the $88.3 billion budget for fiscal 1991-92.

Sen. Winston "Bud" Gardner, D-Tallahassee, who represents Brevard County, and Rep. Ron Saunders, D-Key West, both said the positive light cast on the budget process by the report will help them repeat it next year. The two chair the Appropriations Committees in their respective houses.

"I think when legislators see the favorable feedback from their constituents, they'll want to continue this next year," Saunders said.

"The initial discussions of the good notices we've received, I think, mean to all of us we'd like to do it that way again next year," Gardner said. "If we can do that, it will set a precedent that will be difficult for future speakers and presidents to ignore."

TaxWatch President Dominic Calabro said the budget for the fiscal year beginning July 1 generally kept the no-turkey promise made by Gov. Lawton Chiles, House Speaker T.K. Wetherell and Senate President Owen Margolis.

"This year it was a turkey famine," Calabro said. "We can't say there are none in there — no way, no how. But we didn't find any that meet our criteria."

Just last year, TaxWatch identified 400 objectionable projects worth $115 million. And over the past four years, the organization located $457 million worth of projects, which often took money away from crucial statewide needs such as health and elderly programs.

Correctional officers dismissed

CROSS CITY, Fla. — Five correctional officers convicted of conspiring to beat inmates following a prison riot at Cross City Correctional Institution were dismissed by the Department of Corrections.

Former sergeants Eddie L. Baker, 40, Charles J. Johnson, 35, David O'Steen, 27, Sammy L. Williams, 28, and Sammy D. Royal, 37, all of Cross City, were convicted by a federal jury in Gainesville on Tuesday. They were fired the next day.

All men were convicted of conspiring to violate constitutional rights by agreeing to injure and intimidate inmates following an hour long riot at the prison on Oct. 3, 1989.

All five had been fired by the DOC last year but were reinstated in a compromise agreement earlier this year. The reinstatement agreements were reached about a month before the officers were indicted by a federal grand jury. The officers were on paid sick leave during the trial.

Man found guilty of gruesome murder

PORT LAUDERDALE — A Broward County jury found Charles Commander guilty of second-degree murder for killing and then dismembering the 20-year-old daughter of a Metro-Dade police officer.

Commander was indicted on first-degree murder last year in the slaying of Julie Murphy. But after 3 1/2 hours of deliberations Wednesday, jurors were not convinced Commander had a premeditated desire to kill Ms. Murphy.

Her head and arms were found May 7, 1990, near the New River in Fort Lauderdale. She had been shot in the head four days earlier and homicide detectives later discovered Ms. Murphy's torso in a nearby field.

Crack ring busted

PORT LAUDERDALE — A well-organized, family-run crack distribution ring that allegedly operated from Indian River to Broward counties for 16 years was rounded up by FBI and local police.

Authorities also seized $3 million in property Wednesday ranging from a city block in Vero Beach to homes, cars, boats and even dump trucks, said William Gavin, director of the Miami FBI office.

The ring was allegedly led by Ivory L. McCutcheon, 50, of Dania, and his brother-in-law, Stanley Jennings, 31, of Vero Beach, and included a total of 15 people charged in a series of nine indictments.

U.S. Attorney Dexter Lehtinen said the federal government would aid local police any time an organized crack cocaine ring appeared to be in action.

Study will analyze road work

GAINESVILLE — Engineers at the University of Florida are spending 18 months and $94,000 to prove what any frustrated Interstate 95 driver could testify to — roadwork ought to be done at night.

By researching the benefits of doing construction at night, the civil engineering department will develop guidelines for night construction on all state Department of Transportation projects, said UF civil engineering professor Ralph Ellis.

The high volume of traffic on many Florida roads makes it impractical to do daytime construction, Ellis said.

"There's no way we could close I-95 during the day," he said.

The 18-month study, paid for by the state and the U.S. Department of Transportation, will address the safety, quality, productivity, equipment and cost of doing road work at night.

Vendors may be banned

WEST PALM BEACH — A hot dog vendor wearing pants and a thong bikini may bring an end to all roadside vending in West Palm Beach.

Commissioner Mary McCarty suggested a ban on roadside vendors at a meeting after complaints about a woman wearing the revealing garb while selling hot dogs.

"I don't want to look at it as a clothing or non-clothing issue," McCarty said. "I just want to get rid of roadside vendors."

Hundreds of residents asked commissioners to take action several months ago when women hot dog vendors began wearing revealing thong bathing suits. But commissioners declined to get involved after a traffic study showed the women posed no safety hazards.

Everglades expansion unveiled

Associated Press

MIAMI — Federal authorities, unveiling one of the most ambitious wetland restoration plans in Florida history, plan to buy 108,000 acres to expand Everglades National Park.

The National Park Service presented a five-year plan to purchase the land from an estimated 10,000 West Dade landowners at a hearing in the Metro-Dade Center Wednesday night.

Private landowners currently hold about 66,000 acres of the expansion area. The state and Dade County will donate the rest.

"We have to purchase it in order to really restore the River of Grass inside Everglades National Park," said Joe Podger, chairman of Dade County's Friends of the Everglades. "This will nearly double the actual Everglades part of the park, and will ensure the survival of the rest."

The government plans to buy several businesses along Tamiami Trail, some small farms, two gas stations and several other businesses. But the bulk of the purchase will be undeveloped land.

Man found guilty in slaying of Domino's Pizza employees

Associated Press

ST. PETERSBURG — A North Carolina man has been found guilty in the execution-style slaying of three Domino's Pizza employees in Vero Beach three years ago.

The 15-member jury found Michael Gene Lovette, 33, of Statesville, N.C., guilty on three counts of first-degree murder and sexual battery, as well as multiple counts of armed robbery, kidnapping, grand theft and arson.

State Attorney Bruce Colton was pleased with the 15 guilty verdicts.

"It's clear the jury did what we asked them to do," said Colton.

"You never know what a jury is going to do."

Chief Assistant Public Defender Clifford Barnes said he was disappointed with the verdicts but added, "You can't quarrel with it."

The jury reached its verdict after 3 1/2 hours of deliberation. The trial was moved to St. Petersburg because of pre-trial publicity in Indian River County.

The penalty phase was to begin today. The state is seeking the death penalty.

Lovette's co-defendant, Thomas Anthony Wyatt, 27, of North Wilkesboro, N.C., has been convicted and sentenced to death for the same murders.

Lovette and Wyatt were acquainted with the Vero Beach pizza store on May 17, 1988, and then fatally shooting the manager-in-training William Edwards, 27, raping and shooting his wife, Frances, 29, and shooting driver Manoud "Matthew" Bornoosh, 27.

Authorities say Lovette and Wyatt had escaped from a North Carolina prison and stolen a car in Jacksonville before arriving in Vero Beach.

Defense attorneys argued during the trial that Lovette was guilty of armed robbery and other crimes, but not of murder because he was not the triggerman.

Judge OKs release of HRS records

Associated Press

TAMPA — The state said it would appeal a judge's ruling that permits release of usually confidential health records in the case of a child who died from abuse or neglect.

Hillsborough Circuit Judge Guy Spicola ruled last week that the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services should make the records available. The ruling came in response to a suit by The Tampa Tribune after a March 4 petition by HRS to have all records kept secret in the case of Melissa King.

In a letter to Spicola Tuesday,

HRS Deputy General Counsel Linda Harris said the agency is against releasing records in the case involving the slain foster child because it is in juvenile court.

The order could force HRS to reveal names of people who should be shielded, such as brothers or sisters of abuse victims, said HRS spokeswoman Lynda Russell.

In her letter, Harris suggests Spicola's order, issued last Thursday, specify the names of people who make abuse reports be blacked out.

Harris argued before Spicola that reports of cases that are part of a criminal investigation should be withheld according to a state law that takes effect in October.

A decision to appeal came this week from top HRS managers, including the agency's acting secretary Robert B. Williams, Harris said.

HRS has no legal grounds for an appeal, attorney Jaye Ann Terry maintained.

The Tribune sought the records under Florida law, which was changed July 3 to allow anyone to petition a judge to release such information, which usually are confidential.

The order becomes final when Spicola signs it.

Orlando Navy base closing debated today

By RON WOOD
Associated Press Writer

JACKSONVILLE — Representatives from four states are trying to convince an independent commission that the decision on which military bases to close was ill-conceived and will devastate local economies.

Testimony was scheduled today on the proposed closing of seven bases in Florida, Georgia, Alabama and South Carolina.

The Defense Base Closure and Realignment Commission is holding a series of public hearings around the country to decide the fate of 42 bases. The independent commission must submit a final list to the president and Congress by July 1.

Today's agenda included Orlando Naval Training Center. Officials there are relying on studies that show that the Navy would save more money by keeping open the land-locked base, instead of those at San Diego and Great Lakes, Ill.

The Navy plans to transfer most of the activities at the 23-year-old Orlando base, including recruit training of men and women and its nuclear schools, to the Great Lakes.

The Navy said the Orlando base has the least military value of its three training bases, but Orlando officials point to a General Accounting Office audit that criticized the Navy's selection process.

The military's own estimates show that closing the Orlando base would not save any money until 2008, the second slowest time-span among the 31 major bases on the Pentagon list.

The base has 18,000 military and civilian workers with an annual payroll of $223 million. It is Orlando's second largest employer behind Walt Disney World, which has 30,000 workers.

Other bases to be considered today include Fort McClellan, near Anniston, Ala.; MacDill Air Force Base in Tampa; Myrtle Beach Air Force Base in South Carolina; the Naval Coastal Systems Center at Panama City, Fla.; the Naval Electronics Systems Engineering Center in Charleston, S.C.; and Moody Air Force Base in Valdosta, Ga.

The base closures have drawn strong comments from the regions affected.

"If they close the base, they might as well drop an atomic bomb on the courthouse," said Harrison Cooper, who plans to use his Valdosta radio station to "educate and motivate" the public on Moody Air Force Base's importance to a 15-county area of south Georgia and north Florida.

At a hearing Wednesday in Washington, U.S. Sens. Bob Graham and Connie Mack of Florida criticized the Navy's process for choosing which bases to close.

Assault with vehicle charged

As Jim E. Hunt, 1801 Wynnwood Drive, Sanford, was driving North on Sumner Avenue, in Sanford Tuesday evening, a 1987 Ford pickup truck, driven by Mark Kelly Depote, 38, of 9481 Wynnwood Road, Geneva, struck her vehicle in the rear, according to police reports.

When she continued to drive, the truck apparently struck her 1988 Honda a second time. Trying to elude the truck, she pulled into a neighbor's yard and ran to a house to call for the police.

When Sanford police arrived, they conducted an investigation and charged Depote with aggravated battery with a motor vehicle.

During a check of his truck, police reported finding a plastic bag which contained partially smoked marijuana. Depote was also charged with possession of less than 30 grams of marijuana, and placed in the John E. Polk Correctional Facility.

Car-ranming startles neighbors

LAKE MARY — Residents of Sun Lake Apartments near Lake Mary were awakened early Wednesday morning by a loud sound — the sound of Sanford man driving a truck repeatedly into a car. Seminole County deputies arrested Dante E. Ensign, 27, 819 W. First St., for disorderly conduct.

Apartment residents reported they were awakened shortly after 3 a.m. by the sound of a pickup truck driving into a car parked in the parking lot. Deputies reported Ensign didn't own the truck. Damage to the victim's car was estimated at less than $1,000. No explanation was reported for the incident.

They do it in Finland

Sanford police were called to investigate a man swimming in the nude in a swimming pool at Bridge Water Apartments, 500 Airport Blvd., Tuesday evening.

By the time police arrived, Riku Huhtala, 23, a native of Finland and a resident of the apartments, had left the pool and moved into the sauna.

According to police, Huhtala reportedly told them it was a custom to go swimming in the nude in Finland. Huhtala is an aviation student currently residing in Sanford.

Police reported a strong odor of alcohol on his breath, and charged him with drunk and disorderly conduct. He was transported to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility wearing only a towel.

Robbery attempt at theater

A robbery attempt was made at the box office of the General Cinema, 3851 Lake Emma Road in Lake Mary Wednesday night.

An unidentified man approached the clerk, Cecilia Gonzales, at the ticket window and demanded all the money. He reportedly threatened to shoot her if she failed to turn over the cash.

When Gonzales hesitated to respond, the bandit left the theater and fled in a dark blue small compact car. The Seminole County Sheriff's department is investigating the incident.

SANFORD — The top students at Sanford High School will be gathered with parents, teachers, administrators and community leaders this evening to accept the accolades they have earned over the course of the year.

Seminole's Awards Night will begin at 7 p.m. in the school's auditorium, 5701 Ridgewood Ave.

"These are our top students," said Wayne Eppe, principal.

Eppe said that the students who are being honored tonight are the recipients of more than $600,000 in college scholarships. Some are academic scholars and some are athletic scholarships.

According to Eppe, while they're all important, this is the night for the scholars and community service students to shine.

"There is a special night for the athletes to be honored," Eppe said. "Tonight we honor students who are outstanding scholars, leaders and citizens." In addition to announcing the scholars, Eppe will honor the academic classes and the individuals who excelled in scholastic competitions throughout the year.

Among the students who will be honored tonight are a National Merit Scholar finalist, four commended National Merit Scholars, top writers in the district, the winner of a German language contest and a member of the district's academic tournament team.

"Some of these students would not get any recognition for what they do otherwise," said Eppe. "In citizenship, for example, these students would not be getting recognized for the things that they do."

Eppe said that he believes the students need an evening like this to allow the community, the teachers and their parents to lead them for the hard work they have been putting in all year.

"We're proud of their efforts," said Eppe, "and we want to let them know that."

Lake Mary hires engineer for public works projects

By BOB PFEISFAP
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — Bill Temby will take over the position of Lake Mary City Engineer beginning Monday, June 3. Temby replaces former engineer Tim Weaver who moved to Springfield, Ohio last month to accept a similar position.

His annual salary will be $38,500.

According to his resume, Temby has more than adequate previous experience in the job. City Manager John Litton said Temby comes to Lake Mary from the Utility Department of Collier County where he served as engineering director since May of 1988.

Prior to that time he served as City Engineer for Apopka for three years. It was during that time he became well acquainted with many of the engineering and staff members in the City of Lake Mary, who have praised the recent hiring of Temby.

Temby has also worked for nine years with the utility system in Brevard County, and for a number of years at Fort Pierce.

He is a certified civil engineer with his degree from the University of Wisconsin. He is also a member of several national engineering societies.

The City Engineer is responsible for inspecting all public works projects as well as reviewing plans and specifications for them. He is also responsible for inspection of sanitary and storm sewers, water distribution, paving and drainage construction throughout the city.

"We are very fortunate to have a man of Temby's caliber join the city," Litton said.

Ride

so many people want to ride across the country, but they don't want to ride alone. They want some support," Schaller says.

Another major event is one that goes from Illinois to Florida, a 25-day journey. It's scheduled Sept. 21 to Oct. 12 this year.

Most of the 350 to 500 local clubs affiliated with the league do not prepare such a demanding program.

"It's not unusual for a club to do a 40- to 50-mile ride, often what we call 'ice cream rides,'" Schaller says. "They pick an ice cream store 20 to 25 miles away, ride to it, eat ice cream and ride home."

A strenuous test is the "century ride," or 100 miles in one day. "Typically, clubs will do a quarter century or a half century," Schaller says.

While most clubs, whether or not they are affiliated with the league, sponsor weekend rides through the warm months, some sponsor off-road rides and "we do have clubs in Minnesota that will do winter rides," Schaller said.

Group riding provides support for riders, providing some safety, and some additional dangers.

"When it's dangerous, you don't ride side-by-side, you ride behind each other, signal to each other. If they're doing it right, they're communicating with each other all the time, 'car up,' 'car back,' 'car left,' warning each other about dogs, about glass, about a pothole, that kind of thing. They have learned to ride in a group."

Scides can include thousands of people and he said he doesn't think any ride is too large.

"Two people can be too large a group if they're not conscious of their responsibility of sharing the road with other vehicles. Hundreds of riders can ride together if they're conscious of their responsibility."

"I have been in rides of 15,000 bicyclists that have been very safe and successful."

The league has the only certification program for instructors, according to Schaller. "A lot of what we try to teach is safety."

Correction

One of the girls receiving hero awards from the Sanford City Commission was incorrectly identified in story on Page 8A Tuesday.

The girl's name is Andrea Lopez, daughter of Bertha Lopez.

Clarification

Avery Smith, a first grade student at Goldboro Elementary School in Sanford, was shown in a Page 1A picture May 15 expressing his enthusiasm about the Dividend of the Year award won by Annie O'Neill. She is a volunteer at Goldboro. A retired first grade teacher, she devotes extensive time to first graders.

That work includes substitute teaching and afternoon tutoring of at-risk students as well as other activities such as the book club. Avery, who was identified in the caption as one of her charges, does not take part in the afternoon sessions; he does take part in the book club.

Parental warning

"Hey, kid! I'm the Easter Bunny. Get a pencil and write down my secret phone number (or) great stories, filled with fun, magic and happiness (and) a free Easter Bunny gift."

This was the gist of an animated commercial enticing children to call a 900 number, at a rate of 82¢ for the first minute and 45 cents thereafter. It was cited recently by the Federal Trade Commission as an example of deceptive advertising specifically targeted to children by unscrupulous companies operating within the pay-per-call industry.

The FTC filed complaints against three 900-number telephone services for airing such commercials aimed at children. Two of the three settled out of court by accepting FTC guidelines for future ads. These new guidelines have the support of the pay-per-call industry and may very well become the unofficial industry standard for advertising to children.

The pay-per-call industry would much prefer to conform to the FTC's voluntary guidelines than be subjected to government regulation codified in law. Congress already is considering legislation that would bring 900 services under strict regulatory supervision. Industry leaders worry that regulation will impede pay-per-call's stunning growth.

Pay-per-call has been around since 1980, when ABC television used it to poll viewers during the Reagan-Carter presidential debate. The industry really took off four years later with the breakup of AT&T.

During the last seven years, pay-per-call has grown faster than virtually any other American industry. From less than $1 million in revenues in 1984, pay-per-call jumped to $100 million in 1988; $235 million in 1989; $600 million in 1990, and a projected $919 million in 1991. The growth curve continues, with pay-per-call revenues expected to reach $1.5 billion by 1995.

It is this explosive expansion that has prompted a handful of fast-buck artists to set up 900 services. Their abuses reflect unfavorably on the entire industry, although most of the 7,000 companies providing 900 services are legitimate. Most 900 services charge reasonable rates to provide callers with such worthwhile information as weather reports, stock quotations, sports scores, legal advice and various kinds of over-the-phone entertainment.

The FTC has done a creditable job in setting down guidelines for companies that advertise 900-number services to children. Now perhaps it might consider developing voluntary advertising standards for the entire pay-per-call industry.

A cure for social ills?

"Fat Truck Driver, M. 40, tired of living like a hermit looking for old-fashioned country gal who cares enough to help me through the transition..." the personal ad read.

You'll never hear that kind of honesty in the singles' bar, where people meet over drinks and then blindly set out to explore an obscure similarity or two.

Some critics say that personal dating ads take the romance out of dating and relationships. But what's so romantic about a 52 percent divorce rate?

The truth is that the growth in personal dating ads has exploded in recent years for a very simple reason: People want them and need them.

Arranged marriages have never caught on in the United States. But with more liberal views of courtship and great changes in the traditional roles of men and women that have emerged during the past few decades, many people are confused. They don't know how to go about meeting another person with whom they are compatible.

Enter the personal ads. Until fairly recently, they were looked upon as an amusement. Then came voice-mail and private postbox addresses so that you could screen out the nut cases and cull the honest responses for someone who fit your interests.

Personal dating ads took off. They are very popular in the cerebral New York Review of Books. It's a healthy social trend.

When you think about it, leaving to chance something as important as a relationship — and its possible results of marriage, children, family — seems awfully risky.

Could W. Mandela get justice here?

Would a trial for Winnie Mandela in a U.S. court have been fairer than her trial in the South African court? Would you be distressed if I suggested that the verdict might have been the same?

Answering affirmatively to both questions merely reflects an American delusion that a trial by a jury of one's peers insures a fair trial and that a jury trial is preferable to a trial by judge. To denounce the Mandela verdict because she was tried, convicted and sentenced by one judge is to ignore certain malevolent similarities between the judicial systems of South Africa and America.

Democracy does not guarantee fairness. It only ordains "a consummation to be devoutly wished." Jury trials in America are as subject to manipulations based on racial and regional biases as single-judge trials in South Africa.

Coretta Scott King and the Rev. Jesse Jackson ignored those sociological realities. Within hours after Mandela was sentenced, both King and Jackson denounced the verdict because she had been convicted "by a single judge in a racial legal system" and not "by a jury of her peers."

Of far more significance was the cautious reaction of Archbishop Desmond Tutu, who was shocked but did not challenge the verdict's harshness (six years). His statement even implied she might have been guilty. "The movement will continue and will honor her for the good things that she did and recognize that human beings are human beings." The bishop is a true Christian.

But can one forgive America's racially two-tier criminal justice system?

Consider the following racial disparities:

Black American males are imprisoned at four times the rate of black South African males, according to the Washington-based Sentencing Project.

The proportion of black Americans arrested for aggravated assault in 1987 was more than three times greater than the proportion of whites, according to the FBI's National Crime survey, even though the racial rates for the crime were almost identical. Translation: Whites were warned and released; blacks were imprisoned.

Juvenile arrests for violent crimes between 1977 and 1982 were numerically almost the same for black and white teenagers, but blacks were imprisoned at a rate of 44 to 1!

And a jury trial is not always a trial by one's peers. In Philadelphia, a white assistant district attorney, Barbara Christie, was rebuked two months ago by a federal court for systematically excluding blacks from a jury in a murder case involving a black man.

White attitudinal racism operates much the same way in America and South Africa. In both countries, whites and blacks share an indisputable equality of criminal propensities.

Both countries share another disturbing pathology. In 1991, black-on-black crime is as iniquitous as Ku Klux Klan-on-black lynchings in 1941. The mutual slaughter between black South Africans today is as lethal as the white South African police force's history of murdering blacks exercising their God-given right to freely speak the truth.

In the Winnie Mandela case, some of the evidence was shaky.

Democracy does not guarantee fairness.

Doubts plague nuclear dump

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — The nation's first permanent repository for the radioactive wastes generated in the production of nuclear weapons originally was scheduled to open here in New Mexico in 1988. But the federal government will be lucky if its problem-plagued facility begins operations by 1998.

For much of the past decade, the Department of Energy's Waste Isolation Pilot Plant — expected to cost $800 million in public funds — has been beset by technical errors, engineering blunders, structural flaws, management lapses and political miscalculations. Many remain unresolved.

Located 26 miles east of Carlsbad, N.M., in the state's far southeastern corner, WIPP is supposed to serve as a final disposal site for transuranic waste, a special class of plutonium-contaminated materials with low to medium levels of radioactivity.

During an initial five-year experiment, DOE plans to entomb 6,500 barrels of that waste in a maze of caverns, crypts and tunnels carved from a 225 million-year-old subterranean salt formation it says is "essentially stable and virtually unaffected by earthquake... activity."

Moreover, the department says the salt continues to grow new crystals that eventually will tightly wrap around the drums, further insulating and protecting them.

If the test is successful, as many as 800,000 drums of waste from DOE's weapons facilities in Washington, California, Nevada, Idaho, Colorado, New Mexico, Illinois, Ohio, Tennessee and South Carolina could be buried at WIPP.

But a technical analysis prepared several years by the Environmental Protection Agency warns that flammable gases could leak from the drums containing radioactive and chemical wastes, producing an explosion in the salt beds 2,150 feet underground.

Other troubling questions have been raised about the seepage of water into compartments DOE insists will remain tightly sealed for centuries, the quality of construction at the site and other safety-related issues.

"WIPP is a disaster waiting to happen," says that group's Don R. Hancock. "The new DOE says it wants the public's trust, but leaky facilities aren't going to inspire much confidence."

Early this year, DOE antagonized many of the state's leading politicians by securing possession of the 16-square-mile WIPP site from the Interior Department through an administrative transfer rather than congressional action.

That infuriated all five members of the state's congressional delegation — three Republicans and two Democrats — who fear that abandoning nuclear waste in the repository on the accelerated schedule DOE has established will compromise New Mexico's health and safety concerns.

Supported by the state's Democratic governor, those two senators and three representatives now vow to reverse the transfer through litigation or legislation. (DOE initially promised New Mexico veto power over important decisions affecting WIPP, but subsequently agreed to only a "consultation and concurrence" arrangement.)

DOE's handling of WIPP is especially important because it is among the initial projects in a long overdue, expensive and ambitious cleanup of the department's nuclear weapons facilities everywhere in the country. (The entire effort could consume $200 billion in public funds and require 30 years to complete.)

Indeed, that work already has been criticized by the Office of Technology Assessment, a respected congressional agency that conducted an 18-month-long independent investigation, then concluded that DOE's waste management program is seriously flawed.

Specifically, the recent study said that the department lacks the required expertise and organization to deal with a cleanup of awesome proportions and that environmental and public health concerns are not being adequately resolved.

EPA warns flammable gases could leak from the drums.

Packwood takes direct approach

WASHINGTON — Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., knows how to corral campaign money as well as anyone in the Senate. Yet he now manages to raise multimillion dollar war chests without taking a penny from big-business political action committees.

Packwood has refined the fund-raising science of what some would call junk mail. He sends letters to strangers across the country soliciting contributions to his reelection campaign. Packwood has mastered wallet-limbering solicitations that begin with this line:

"Dear Friend, Please forgive the informal nature of this letter, but it is late in the evening, and my secretary already has gone home. When I want to discuss with you Israel's future, I simply could not wait until morning."

As the reader visualizes hunt-and-peck Packwood at his typewriter, the three-page letter continues: "Instead of spending all my time raising money for my own reelection campaign, I'd prefer to devote my time and energies to protecting and defending the security of Israel!"

The letter contains 10 conspicuously crossed-out typographical errors and concludes with: "Whether you give $25 or $250 today isn't nearly as important to me as knowing I can depend on you as a special, caring friend."

The image of the earnest, hardworking late-at-his-desk senator apparently works. Packwood has already raised $1.9 million through direct mail for the 1992 campaign. His re-election campaign has sent out a total of 52 different mailings since Oregon re-elected him for a fourth six-year term in 1986.

In the process, Packwood believes he is taking the higher ground in campaign fund raising. He has forsworn all PAC contributions because of its "dirty money" stigma. He argues that he is "not taking special interest money" now, but just soliciting help from his supporters across the country.

Packwood may have an admirable aversion to PACs, but he has little compunction about playing to people's emotions. In one letter to a carefully selected audience, Packwood laments the consequences of being a "staunch friend" of Israel:

"Over the years, I've become a kind of lightning rod for the political opposition. Each time I run for re-election, I attract powerful, well-financed opponents determined to bring about my defeat."

Rep. Peter DeFazio, D-Ore., told our associate Jim Lynch that the claim was "blatantly deceptive" and "ridiculous." In 1986, Packwood outspent his rival by more than a 100 to one ($6.5 million to his opponent's $64,000). In 1980, Packwood outspent his opponent almost 10 to one. In his 1974 re-election bid it was four to one.

A Packwood spokesperson explained that the 1986 opponent was considered "powerful" and that the senator's upcoming, yet-to-be-named foe, was expected to be "well-financed."

Last year, Packwood voted against legislation that would have set campaign spending limits on candidates. The measure passed the Senate, but the house dodged it. A similar bill is on deck this year. It puts campaign finance limits for senators on a sliding scale with the population of their states. If it passes, an Oregon senator would be limited to a maximum of $1,990,848 on a Senate race.

Packwood says he hopes to raise at least $5 million for his 1992 campaign, and expects to attract 150,000 to 250,000 contributors through the mail. He will stick to the patented formula.

Packwood has mastered wallet limbering sales pitches.

The object of the contest is to match all the baby pictures to the correct "grown-up" picture in each ad.

Three tips to get you started:

2. Read the clues...new ones will be added each week.
3. Still stumped? Visit each business, where applicable. Each advertiser has their baby picture displayed, just to help you win!

Once you've decided who each baby is, write their name beneath the picture. Next, clip the entire form and mail or bring in to the Sanford Herald office. Just one correct entry per family, please. All entries must be received by June 12, 1991. Winners will be chosen at random drawing from all correct entries received. Employees of the Sanford Herald, and their immediate families, are not eligible to win.

Going once, going . . . Longwood sets plans for its annual auction

By NOCK PFEIFFER
Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — Plans have been finalized for the City of Longwood annual auction of surplus city equipment. The date will be Saturday, June 8.

Items available to the general public this year range from a baseball bat to a flatbed truck. Vehicles in addition to the 1980 Chevrolet truck include a utility body 1980 truck, and four 1982 to 1985 4-door sedans, all formerly used by the city's Public Works Department. From the Finance Department, items for sale include a variety of office and computer equipment. A number of IBM computer keyboards and screens will be available from the Water and Utilities Department. Auction items from the Longwood Police Department include office equipment, mostly audio equipment, and a selection of lost items whose owners have not been located. They include wallets, purses and baseball equipment.

During its most recent meeting, the City Commission agreed to approve a bid from Auction Associates, Inc., of Orlando, to conduct the auction.

Prior to the auction for general public purchasing, the original list of items was circulated throughout all departments of the city, to be certain the could not be utilized in other areas. Those that remained have been classified as being obsolete and no longer useable by the city.

City Administrator Don Terry said the auction will be conducted on the City Hall property, 156 W. Warren Avenue in Longwood. No specific starting time has been established, but it is expected to begin during the morning hours, with an amount of time previous to the start of bidding to allow citizens an opportunity to examine the items.

Auctions of surplus property are generally annual events. Sanford holds it in conjunction with Seminole County during the fall months. Lake Mary's surplus auction is also held later in the year.

Illegal dumping case trial delayed

LAKE MARY — The trial of the owner of a Longwood landclearing business charged with illegal dumping on his Art Lane land has been delayed until July 18.

Scheduling conflicts forced a delay of the trial, scheduled to begin Tuesday, said Beth Rutberg, assistant state attorney.

Frank J. Sobotka, owner of JCL Landclearing Inc., is charged with illegal dumping on land he owns with a couple at the northern end of Art Lane, located in an unincorporated enclave between Lake Mary and Sanford. State and county officials have sought to stop dumping at the site since 1983. Sobotka and Rodney S. and Carolyn R. Laval bought the land in 1986, county files show.

Rutberg had pursued illegal dumping charges against Sobotka for a site on Leon Street near Altamonte Springs, but she said she will be unable to pursue that case because of evidence neighbors had been using the site for dumping before Sobotka had.

Flexibility sought in roads spending

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Congress is being invited to look into the future of American transportation and shape a more flexible, integrated and efficient system as the era of building interstate highways comes to a close.

The Senate Public Works Committee took the first step on Wednesday, voting 13-1 to approve a five-year, $105 billion authorization bill that gives mass transit, commuter rail and other transportation modes a better chance to compete with highways for federal dollars.

In sending the Surface Transportation Efficiency Act of 1991 to the Senate floor, lawmakers said they were responding to President Bush's March 6 challenge to Congress to pass transportation legislation within 100 days.

But the Senate bill postpones action, perhaps permanently, on the central feature of Bush's transportation plan — a proposal to spend a larger share of federal dollars on a new 150,000-mile system of key national highways and proportionately less on the nation's other roads.

Instead, the Senate bill permits states to choose their transportation priorities to meet their specific needs.

"Half the money in this bill will be available at the state's option for either transit or highway projects depending on what the best transportation solution seems to be," said Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., a member of the bipartisan coalition that wrote the carefully balanced bill.

"That flexibility will enhance our goal of moving the nation's people and goods in the safest and most efficient way," Chafee said.

In acting on the measure, the committee adopted amendments intended to prevent the spread of long, multiple-trailer trucks to all U.S. highways and to help eliminate most roadside billboards. The panel:

—Voted to ban double and triple trailer tractor trucks weighing more than 80,000 pounds from operating outside the 20 states in which they are now permitted.

—Adopted a Chafee amendment to return control of billboard use to the states, to ban new billboards along interstate and other principal highways and to give states more financial options to eliminate billboards.

—Agreed to provide financial incentives and penalties to encourage states to adopt mandatory safety belt and motorcycle helmet laws.

Inmate executed

HUNTSVILLE, Texas — An inmate was executed by injection early today for his part in a bloody, 11-day prison siege in which he and two other convicts tried to break out by using a rolling blackboard as a shield.

Ignacio Cuevas, 59, was pronounced dead at 12:18 a.m., about five minutes after receiving the injection.

Bush loses first abortion vote of this Congress in defense bill

By SONIA SABBATA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — President Bush lost the first major vote on abortion in this Congress when the House voted to allow U.S. servicewomen and dependents to undergo abortions at military hospitals overseas at their own expense.

The 230-208 vote on Wednesday marked the first time either body of the 102nd Congress had addressed the issue. And abortion rights advocates hailed their narrow victory, even though the provision still must clear the Senate and face a veto threat by Bush.

"The passage of this measure is a major show of strength for the pro-choice forces in Congress," said Kate Michelman, executive director of the National Abortion Rights Action League.

The National Women's Law Center said the vote "means that servicewomen will no longer be subjected to the additional hazard of illegal abortions or substandard health facilities."

David Andrews, executive vice president for Planned Parenthood, said it is "unacceptable that women serving our country abroad are treated like second-class citizens to satisfy the administration's anti-abortion political agenda."

The amendment, which was added to the fiscal 1992 military budget that the House passed 268-161 late Wednesday, allows some 65,000 military women and 400,000 dependents overseas the right to an abortion, at their own expense, at Defense Department medical facilities.

The amendment represents one of the few tests of abortion on demand — with none of the provisions of rape, incest or when the life of the mother is in danger.

"It's incredibly significant that this was the first vote," said Rep. Les AuCoin, D-Ore., the amendment's sponsor. "It's doubly significant in that it dealt with all the rights available under Roe v. Wade," the 1973 Supreme Court decision that legalized abortion.

The Senate still must vote on the issue. Sen. Tim Wirth, D-Colo., plans to introduce a similar amendment that gains momentum from the House vote, AuCoin said.

Whether it is approved by the Senate or not, the issue still would be on the agenda in the House-Senate conference on the final defense package. A leader of that conference will be Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, who last year softened his anti-abortion stand.

The National Right to Life Committee said Wednesday that Bush will veto the defense budget bill if the abortion amendment survives.

Douglas Johnson, legislative director of the committee, said lawmakers who voted for the amendment are requiring "unrestricted abortion throughout pregnancy in military hospitals."

'Smokers' rights' ignites fight among puffing foes

By BARLENE SUPERVILLE
Associated Press Writer

TRENTON, N.J. — Should smokers be protected from job discrimination just as the handicapped or minorities are?

Thirteen states think so and have passed such legislation. New Jersey is on the verge of doing so, and bills are pending in 11 other states.

Proponents of such laws say they are needed to protect people who won't quit smoking, even if it's just at home, from being fired or passed over for jobs. They frame the issue as a matter of privacy and individual rights.

"If we're going to start picking and choosing the OK behaviors, good Lord, we're going to have to ban ice cream and all sorts of things," said Dave Brenton, president and co-founder of the Smoker's Rights Alliance in Mesa, Ariz.

Anti-smoking forces say that protecting the jobs of people who refuse to stop smoking promotes a harmful habit, hurts worker productivity and raises health-care costs.

"It's bad public policy. They're protecting an activity that's known to cause numerous health problems," said Kathleen E. Scheg, legislative liaison for Action on Smoking and Health, a Washington-based anti-smoking organization.

"I think one of the things that states are not looking at is that this is not only going to hurt private employers, but the citizens of the states are going to have to pay higher health insurance costs."

The American Cancer Society says smoking claims 390,000 lives annually and that second-hand smoke kills 53,000 a year. The organization has identified smoking as the leading preventable cause of death in the United States.

Colorado, Indiana, Kentucky, Mississippi, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Oregon, Rhode Island, South Dakota, South Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia have adopted smokers' rights laws.

A PENNY COULD TAKE US A LONG WAY!

May 23, 1991

Dear Seminole County Resident,

Over the past two years the County has been developing a long range plan for our community. We have taken a long, hard look at what our community is and where it is headed. Here is what we found:

Seminole County is a high-quality community. We are fortunate to live in a community with safe neighborhoods, an abundance of natural beauty, good schools and government services. It is these things that make us want to stay in Seminole County.

Needed road improvements threaten this quality of life. Congested roads mean longer driving times to work, school and shopping, wasted gasoline, increased air pollution, more accidents and more cut-through traffic on our neighborhood streets.

The Florida Growth Management Act requires County action. The 20 year road building plan that Seminole County started in 1987 does not meet the requirements of this legislation. Gas taxes and impact fees alone will not cover the cost of needed road improvements over this new, shorter time period. We estimate the shortfall in the first 5 years alone to be nearly $100 million!

A 1¢ sales tax for 10 years will pay for a decade of needed improvements. The sales tax revenue will be used exclusively for major transportation improvements. To fund our road needs, the only alternative would be enormous increases in property taxes.

The sales tax is a fair way. Roads paid for by everyone - not just property owners - makes sense. Many drivers on our roads do not own residences in Seminole County. For example: Altamonte Mall estimates that 27% of their customers come from outside Seminole County; visitors staying in our hotels spend an estimated $118 million a year; 22% of the jobs in Seminole County are filled by people who live elsewhere. They will all help pay for our roads if the sales tax passes.

On July 9, you will be asked to vote on this 1¢ sales tax. We are all interested in maintaining our high quality community and in keeping our property taxes low. The sales tax is a fair way.

The choice is yours.

Sincerely yours,

BOARD OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS

Fred W. Streetman Jr.

NASA says bad sensor posed shuttle danger

By MARGIA BURN AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL — NASA says it escaped catastrophe by removing a leaky fuel-temperature sensor in September that the agency later learned was cracked and could have caused the shuttle Columbia to blow up.

More of the cracked sensors may have been aboard Columbia when its latest mission was scrubbed Tuesday — one day before liftoff, NASA said. Because of a mixup, the agency didn't learn of the problem until late Monday, officials said.

Columbia's launch with seven astronauts was postponed until at least June 1 so workers can replace all nine sensors, along with faulty computer equipment.

NASA today awaited tests on those sensors to learn whether they, too, were cracked. But the problem already appeared larger — cracks were found Wednesday in the stainless-steel welding of two sensors in the shuttle Discovery and two others look suspicious, officials said.

Other sensors, including those in shuttle Atlantis, are still to be checked. Officials said the new shuttle Endeavour has all new parts and shouldn't need checking.

Discovery, Atlantis and Columbia have each flown since the leaky sensor was pulled from Columbia last September. Endeavour has just entered the fleet.

Had NASA known the extent of the sensors' damage earlier, it would have grounded the shuttle fleet until sensors on each spacecraft were checked, said Keith Hudkins, director of the shuttle orbiter division.

Dan Germany, manager of the orbiter projects office at Johnson Space Center, said that if the pencil-sized sensor had remained on Columbia, it could have broken. Pieces would have then dropped into the spacecraft's fuel lines, gotten caught in a high-pressure fuel pump and caused main engine failure and probably an explosion, he said.

"We dodged a bullet on that," Germany said Wednesday.

He said he didn't know how many more times the shuttle could have flown before that occurred.

"It would have been just a matter of time," he said. "It was good we found the leak and we got it removed."

An explosion just after liftoff in 1985 destroyed the shuttle Challenger and killed all seven astronauts aboard.

Hudkins said a detailed analysis of the original sensor pulled from Columbia in the fall was delayed 2½ months when it was sent to a valve company in California instead of sensor maker RDF Corp. in Hudson, N.H., for tests.

"Somebody thought they knew where that goes to and just didn't take the time to look it up, and that cost 2½ months," Hudkins said.

"Yeah, it bothers me, but it's not unexpected. You don't have a system this complex and extensive without having an occasional escape."

But the second-place Geico Blazers also lost, putting the top three teams within a game of each other.

Oviedo Gun and Pawn beat the Magic 68-61 while Hungry Howie's topped the Blazers 98-59. In the third game of the evening, the Pretenders defeated the Noids 58-49.

Dan Michalak led the Magic with 25. Troy Kessinger added 20 despite sitting out the second half with a leg injury. John Phillips contributed 14 while Joe Huggins added two.

HIRINGS and FIRINGS

Royals show Wathan the door

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The Kansas City Royals, who have lavished more than $33 million on free agents the past two years without rising higher than next-to-last, on Wednesday fired manager John Wathan.

Coach Bob Schaefer was named interim manager on his 47th birthday. General manager Herk Robinson said a permanent replacement would be named, possibly as early as Friday. Immediate speculation included former New York Mets manager Davey Johnson and Hal McRae, a member of the Royals' Hall of Fame who was offered the job in 1987 ahead of Wathan. McRae is now hitting coach at Montreal.

Cubs cast lot with Essian

NEW YORK — The Chicago Cubs chose youth over experience Wednesday, hiring Jim Essian from the minors a day after firing manager Don Zimmer.

The 40-year-old Essian became the youngest manager in the majors, taking over a team loaded with big names and big salaries but just an 18-20 record.

The Cubs won their first game under Essian, beating the New York Mets 5-2 Wednesday night. Essian moved Shawon Dunston, who had been batting eighth, to the leadoff spot in the lineup, and he reponded by going 2-for-5.

Knicks offer job to Riley

NEW YORK — Pat Riley, who led the Los Angeles Lakers to four NBA titles in nine years, is the New York Knicks' choice to be their head coach, the club said Wednesday.

Team president Dave Checketts has said he wants a coach for a long-term period, and reportedly will offer Riley a five-year contract for $5 million. However, Riley makes more than $1 million per year from his job as an NBA analyst with NBC-TV, speaking engagements, endorsements and other ventures, and reportedly wants $1.5 million per year from the Knicks.

Bussard pulls away in Pinehurst play

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Pounding out 25 hits, including three doubles, a triple and a home run, Ed Bussard's Pro Bass Guide Service strengthened its hold on first place in the Sanford Recreation Department Wednesday Night Men's Softball League at Pinehurst Park.

Bussard's rolled over Enaley Inc. 19-4 in the nightcap of a tripleheader Wednesday. In the earlier games, Bikini Beach knocked off Regency Mazda 11-5 and the Wrecking Crew rallied past H.D. Realty 7-6.

Now with a 4-1 record, Bussard's leads the six-team league. They are followed by Bikini Beach and the Wrecking Crew (both 3-2), H.D. Realty and Regency Mazda (both 3-3) and Enaley Inc. (0-2), a recent addition to the league.

Action began Wednesday night with Bikini Beach using a six-run sixth inning to pull away from Regency Mazda. Bikini Beach broke a 4-4 tie with a run in the top of the fourth, then out the game on ice with its sixth-inning explosion.

Bobby Flowers hit three doubles and scored three runs to lead Bikini Beach's 18-hit attack. Mike Dick hit a double, single and scored three runs. Tim Duimstra and Billy Warnock both hit two singles and scored a pair of runs.

Also contributing were Jim Troxell (triple, single), Arnie Van Zyll and Jerry Dick (two singles each), Richard Barry (double, run scored) and Mike Bromwell and Al Sumner (both with a single and a run scored).

Leading Regency Mazda, which collected 11 hits, were Bob Borake (single, two runs scored), Keith Sparks (two singles, run scored), Don Causeaux and Scott Pensala (two singles each), Scott Bass (single, run scored), Steve Woodley and Kelly Wayne (one single each) and Jerry Brussel (run scored).

First-place Ed Bussard's Pro Bass Guide Service put together a 25-hit assault that carried it to a 19-4 rout of Enaley, Inc. during Sanford

Wednesday Night Softball League action at Pinehurst Park. Bussard's now has a one-game lead over Bikini Beach and the Wrecking Crew.

Going into the hole
 Regency Mazda shortstop Bob Borake went to his backhand to make this play and came up throwing during Wednesday night's game with Bikini

Beach at Pinehurst Park. Borake also contributed a single and two runs scored, but it wasn't enough to keep Bikini Beach from winning 11-5.

U-18 Syndicate finishes second in tournament

Special to the Herald

The Syndicate, an Under-18 boys' select team from the Seminole Soccer Club, captured the runner-up trophy in the prestigious Wrangler-McDonald's Cup tournament played in Greensboro, N.C., May 18-19.

The locals rolled through the tournament undefeated until the championship match, where they lost to the North Carolina state champions, the High Point Stars, in rain-soaked conditions and temperatures falling to 30 degrees.

Many of the Syndicate's members also play for local high school teams. Rob Kenny and Rob Fuller attend Lake Brantley; Mike Sells, Toby Leiben, Marcus Dewberry, Joel Dewberry, Curt Fisher, Mark Ramagosa and Steve Sher go to Lyman; and David Yurick, Tony Lagos, Fernando Lagos, Nick Regiacorte, John Zissman and Brian Caduto are from Lake Mary.

Both goalkeepers — Kenny and Marcus Dewberry — performed well under pressure during the tournament. Kenny also played in the field as well, combining with Fisher, Tony Lagos, Joel Dewberry, Ramagosa to anchor the defense.

The midfield of Yurick, Sher, Zissman and Leiben did an outstanding job of creating scoring

Under-16 Gators breeze through tournament field

Special to the Herald

The Seminole Gators, an Under-16 girls soccer team representing the Seminole Soccer Club, won its age group championship at the Wrangler-McDonald's Cup tournament played last weekend in Greensboro, N.C.

After sweeping through the tournament field, the Gators (20-1-1) won the championship game in anticlimactic fashion when the Top Hatters, the Georgia state champions, forfeited the final game. The two teams will meet again in the U.S. Southern Regionals, scheduled for June 12-16.

To get to the finals, the Gators had to win three games. They opened with a 1-0 win over Atlanta Gatagraphic on Saturday, May 18. Lake Mary High School's Adriane Hemmerly scored the game's only goal on assist from Nicole Delahoussaye (Lake Brantley High School).

The Gators then advanced to blow out the North Carolina Tornados 5-0. Danielle Garrett (Lyman High School) scored all five goals with Hemmerly and Marc Stark (Lake Brantley) each collecting one assist.

Sunday's semifinal game against the North Carolina state champions, the Greensboro Shamrock Flyers, was played in cold, rainy conditions. But the Gators didn't let the weather

Florida hopes hot play continues in regional

Associated Press

GAINESVILLE — More of the same in what Florida coach Joe Arnold is looking for from his top-ranked team in the NCAA East Regional beginning Thursday at Perry Field.

The Gators (15-7) have won 21 of their past 25 games and swept the double-elimination Southeastern Conference tournament with four consecutive victories last weekend at Louisiana State.

"We have to continue to do what we have done the last six weeks," Arnold said Wednesday. "We have to remain loose and play confident."

"Our players had a chance to relax on and get nervous last week at LSU, and they didn't. They're just a confident bunch right now."

The Gators are seeking their second trip in four years to the College World Series in Omaha, Neb. On Monday, Arnold predicted they would make it.

Some regard the six-team Gainesville field as the weakest of the eight regionals across the nation.

"I wouldn't try to kid you by saying this is the toughest region," Arnold said. "But I don't want to sell this region short. Any time you want to get to Omaha, all the clubs will be fighting and scrapping."

Jean McGregor (Lake Brantley) netted two goals while Stark collected two goals and three assists. Cheryl added a goal and two assists. Guest player Sarah Kase (Lyman) scored a goal. Hennessey had an assist.

The Gators went to the tournament without three of their starters: Liz Bellard, the anguished Christian Bennett, Stephanie Feulner (St. Johns Moore) and Amy Thompson (Lake Brantley). They were also without goalkeeper Linda King (Lake Howell), who was the star to finish.

The tournament championship is another step in the Gators' quest to repeat as the U.S. Southern Region champion for the third consecutive year. The Gators have been state champions four of the last five years: 1987, 1988, 1989 and 1991.

Garret, who helped Lyman to the Class 4A state championship this winter, leads the Gators with 33 goals and 14 assists. Feulner has collected 11 goals and 10 assists while Hennessey has nine goals and 15 assists.

Also contributing an offense for the Gators are McGregor (13 goals, four assists), Stark (10

Auxiliary distributes poppies

Once again the American Legion Auxiliary will be distributing poppies to the Sanford area Memorial Day weekend, May 25 through 26.

The small red poppies have their roots in the battlefields of World War I. The wild poppies grew where thousands had died.

The poppy of Flanders Field became a symbol of all those soldiers buried under the rows of crosses marking those lost in battle.

The American Legion adopted the campaign of remembrance so that the veterans would not be forgotten. The responsibility of distributing these poppies was given to the American Legion Auxiliary in 1924.

The poppy program is one of the most beneficial and worldwide rehabilitation programs for veterans.

All poppy money is used for veterans of all wars.

Poppy chairman this year is Claudia Blair, second vice president of the auxiliary.

Poppies will be distributed at the Sanford Post Office, Publix, Wal-Mart and Winn Dixie in Sanford.

On Monday, they will participate in the services starting at 9:30 a.m. They will proceed to Sanford and participate with their colors in the Memorial Day Parade starting at 10:45 a.m.

Support groups offer comfort and direction

DEAR MARY,

I have heard about support groups for adult children of alcoholics (ACOAs). I don't know if my father was an alcoholic because he only drank on weekends. He was a good father when he was sober, but he certainly made everyone miserable when he was drunk. I'm not very happy with the way my life is going and I've thought about trying out of these groups, but I'm not sure whether I would be allowed to go, or that it would be helpful, since I'm not sure whether Dad was an alcoholic. What goes on in these group meetings, and do they really help people get more out of life? LOVELY AND SAD guide to save living regardless of what dysfunction a person is battling. Group members learn to acknowledge their feelings, let go of outcomes and control issues, make amends for past transgressions and forgive themselves and others who have harmed them.

DEAR LOWELY,

First, let me assure you that anyone who wants to, or thinks he or she might be helped by a support group for ACOAs is welcome to attend meetings. Perhaps a better name for these groups would be "Adult Children of Dysfunctional Families" because the effect on young children in a family is the same whether the "problem" is abuse, addiction, incest or any other dysfunctional behavior.

Twelve step programs are loosely structured and each member progresses at their own pace, and in their own way. It is a spiritual program of recovery, but has no religious affiliation. All you need to benefit from a 12 step program is an open mind and the willingness to try. You may be surprised by your spiritual and emotional growth.

These support groups are based on the 12 steps and 12 traditions originally developed for Alcoholics Anonymous. Twelve step programs have proven to be a most effective

Some proud parents have tunnel vision

DEAR ABBY:

One of my best friends, "Julia," has moved far away, and we keep in touch by telephone. My problem: Julia has a 3-year-old son, and every time we talk, she puts "Kenny" on the phone to say hello and chat a while. She does this so the rest of the time he will be quiet and hopefully we can talk without his whining.

Kenny is a very bright boy, but once he's on the phone he doesn't want to get off, and I find this very irritating. This has annoyed me for over a year now, so I finally wrote to Julia asking her, not to put Kenny on the phone every time we talk. She was highly offended and said I didn't understand her life or I wouldn't have made such an insensitive request.

Abby, my children are grown now, but when they were young, I never put them on the phone to talk to any of my friends unless they requested it.

It makes no difference if you are 8 years old or 65; if you are lucky enough to have a mother, sit down and write her a letter. It doesn't have to be a literary masterpiece — just a few sentences telling her how much she

I'd like to add that all during Julia's conversations with me, Kenny keeps interrupting to get his mother's attention — and when she sends him away and asks him to please be quiet, he makes all kinds of disruptive noises just to bug her.

And be sure to date it, because long after the nightgowns, purses and hankies are worn and discarded, I'll bet your letter will be tucked away for safekeeping with other cards and letters your mother just couldn't bring herself to throw away.

How do I know? My letters were.

Victory party honors No. 1 Sound of Sunshine chorus

A gala victory party for the Sound of Sunshine Chorus was held recently to celebrate members winning Champion Chorus in Florida for 1991. Video tapes of the winning performance and also of the show package the champions presented that evening after competition were viewed with great elation and pride.

The chorus recently sang at Florida Hospital South to help celebrate the beginning of Nurses Week.

The next 18 months will be spent preparing for international competition in Baltimore. Not only a lot of practicing with music and choreography, but a lot of hard work will be needed to raise the $65,000 necessary to take the whole group to Baltimore and provide costumes, music and accommodations. The chorus will perform locally to raise the needed funds.

The festivities also included the installation of officers presided over by Ardyce Aagaard. New officers are: Judy Sorg, president; Marsha Williams, vice president; Claudia Radebach, corresponding secretary; Karen Davis, recording secretary and Mae Partridge, treasurer. There are 27 committee chairmen and their assistants who handle the many functions and activities of the chorus.

Your children need to know about drugs.

Teaching your children the ABC's is fine, but you also need to teach them about drug abuse and the special importance of the letter "D". Teach them the drug alphabet early in life, and help them from becoming another statistic in America's fastest growing disease — drug and alcohol addiction.

Calcified 'stones' should be analyzed

DEAR DR. GOTT: For the last two years I have been passing organic and mineral artifacts. I'm told these are not stones. I've had my gallbladder out, and I do have Crohn's disease. My doctor cannot explain this to me. Can you?

DEAR READER: I'm not sure what you mean by "artifacts," unless you have been eating the remains of ancient cultures. Ordinarily, the indigestibles that we ingest are expelled from the body and, in my experience, the variety of foreign objects in the stool — including coins, pills and unidentifiable material — is astounding.

I suspect that you are asking whether Crohn's disease, a chronic inflammatory bowel disorder, is associated with the passage of strange looking "things." Not to my knowledge, although the disease, which often causes malabsorption of nutrients, is associated with kidney stones and gallstones. Perhaps some bizarre chemical reaction is taking place in the inflamed portions of your intestine, resulting in unusual, calcified "stones" that you then pass in your stool.

In any case, you can obtain more information by having your "artifacts" analyzed. Once their constituents are known, your doctor should be able to provide at least part of the answer you are seeking. Let me know what the analysis shows.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Will lecithin and chromium lower the blood sugar level of a diabetic?

DEAR READER: No. The high blood sugar that characterizes diabetes can be lowered only by one or all of the following methods: strict avoidance of dietary sugar, weight loss (for obese patients), exercise, medicine to stimulate the production of insulin by the pancreas and supplemental insulin itself by injection.

Lecithin is not classified as a vitamin, despite the claims of the health-food industry, because the body can manufacture it. High doses of lecithin are not associated with any health benefits.

Although chromium is a trace mineral needed to maintain normal blood sugar levels in conjunction with insulin, it is plentiful in most foods, such as meat, cheese, grains, eggs and fresh fruits.

By Phillip Alder

When you are in an apparently impossible contract, try to find a play that gives an opponent a guess — he may get it wrong. Remember, he presumably cannot see your cards.

Today's deal occurred during the Open Pairs in Atlantic City. The bidding is typical of a pairs event when both sides have a fit. Everyone continues bidding to at least the four-level.

In bidding three no-trump, South hoped that no-trump would produce the same number of tricks as hearts, in which case he would score more points. On a spade lead, he would have been right, but not if West found an inspired diamond start.

However, when East proceeded to bid out his two-suiter, South competed in hearts to the five-level. He won the spade lead with his ace and cashed the ace of hearts, West dropping the nine and East the jack.

Reading the position perfectly, declarer realized West had dropped the nine as the start of an echo to show three trumps. With no noticeable pause, South led the 10 of hearts to trick three. (Would you have even thought of that play?)

Time stood still. Eventually West decided his partner must have started with K-J doubleton in hearts, so he played his five. The 10 of hearts won. Declarer cashed the king of hearts, drove out the ace of clubs and won 12 tricks. Plus 480 was, of course, a top score.

Who was this magician? Jeff Meckstroth of Reynoldsburg, Ohio, who has won three world titles: the Bermuda Bowl in 1981, the Open Pairs in 1986 and the Team Olympiad in 1988.

YOUR BIRTHDAY

Circumstances could be rather unique in the year ahead, and you should have opportunities to take advantage of things that are not apparent to others. Capitalize on your insight.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You may experience some pleasant, unexpected social turns today that you hadn't anticipated. Enjoy yourself; it shouldn't interfere with anything vital you're pursuing. Get a jump on life by understanding the influences that are governing you in the year ahead. Send for Gemini's Astro-Graph predictions today by mailing $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Something in which you're presently involved can be satisfactorily concluded today — if you make it your primary objective. It's best not to let this matter dangle any longer.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Try to see situations for what they are today without anticipating negative developments that may never occur. Deal with reality, not supposition.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You may be more adroit at handling commercial or financial matters today than you will be tomorrow. Don't let indifference cause you to coast on by when you should focus on it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be sure to properly acknowledge those who cooperate with you and help you in your personal endeavors today. There's a strong possibility you'll need their assistance later.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If you can do what needs to be done free from outside influences today, you'll be more productive. Being alone will enhance your concentration and enable you to focus your thoughts.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Reflect on possibilities today regarding things you'd like to do and how you'd like to do them.

Your visionary abilities will help you perceive a sound blueprint.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your intuitive ability to tune into the pulse of developments today can be a big asset in helping you attain a desired goal. Trust your senses.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Have faith in your ideas today, and don't let associates dissuade you before you've had a chance to try them out. You're moving in the right direction.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Something that has been hampering your progress can be altered today — if you have the fortitude to do so. Thus far, you haven't quite convinced yourself that this is within your power.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) A friend of yours who usually talks too much could have something of importance to say today. Instead of tuning this chatterbox out, listen intently.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Keep your nose to the grindstone today or, if possible, maybe even push a little ahead in your work. You'll be glad you took these measures come tomorrow.
