Second 'chop shop' broken up

WINTER SPRINGS — Seminole County sheriff's investigators have broken up a second motorcycle "chop shop" operation in Winter Springs.
Ed McDonough, public information officer for the sheriff's office, said the operation is not related to the one allegedly run by Harold Krohn. Krohn, who is facing eight felony charges in connection with an illegal chop shop operation at his home, is presently out of town and has not been taken into custody. Investigators are holding $50,000 in cash found in Krohn's home as an inducement to bring him back to Seminole County.
The suspect in the second chop shop operation is expected to turn himself in at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility this afternoon.
In the second operation, deputies have seized two Honda 600 motorcycles and parts of a third Honda 600 were also found in the home.

God in the classroom

Lawmaker: Put religion in history lessons; Teacher: It's there

By VIGGI DESORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — While Rep. Tom Feeney is pressing fellow lawmakers to include more religion in the history books in public schools, local teachers believe that God was never really taken out of the classroom in the historical sense.
"I don't know how we could possibly teach historical concepts without the mention of God," noted Andy Williams, chairman of the history department at Seminole High School. "It is impossible in history class or in literature class to discuss early expression or historical development and not speak about God and religion."
Feeney's bill, which has cleared the House Education Committee by a 19-2 vote, would allow, even encourage, teachers to include references to God whenever it is historically significant. The bill, Feeney explained, would allow references to God in famous speeches or documents, for example.

He told fellow lawmakers that, in an effort to separate church and state, American history books no longer have the religious references they once contained.

"I don't know which history books he has looked at, but the books we use here in Seminole County do not fail to mention God," Williams said.

Williams said he would never try to preach Christian theology in the classroom, but he believes that this country was founded on religious principles and many historical events have hinged on a religious tenet.

He said his classroom is diverse, with students representing beliefs across the theological spectrum. The background of Christian beliefs that shaped the actions and writings of the founding fathers must sometimes be explained to the students who do not share the common heritage, but it is discussed only

Service station robbed at gunpoint

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — A service station was robbed at gunpoint shortly before midnight last night. Two men escaped with an undetermined amount of money.

According to Sanford police Commander Dennis Whitmire, "At approximately 11:45 p.m., two black males entered the Highway Oil station at 2425 S. French, and robbed the store, firing one shot inside the building, and one outside."

Whitmire said two clerks were in the store at the time, Clarence Van Clive, 17, of Sanford, and Ernie Offenpirtz, 57, of Deltona. "In addition to the money in the store, one of the clerks also had his wallet taken," Whitmire said.

"In the parking lot," he continued, "a witness said he saw the men running from the building carrying a white bag, in which we assume they had the money. When the man tried to go after the robbers in his pickup truck, they reportedly fired two shots into the truck, then two more at the man, apparently trying to frighten him off."

Whitmire said no one was injured by the gunshots.

Your electric bill will drop slightly

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Electric bills will be dropping slightly in Sanford and Seminole County beginning next month. The Public Service Commission on Thursday established new fuel adjustment charges for customers of three of Florida's major utilities for the next six months.

From April 1 until Sept. 30, a residential customer of Florida Power & Light Co., the state's largest electric utility based, will pay an average of $1.05 a month less with the average bill decreasing from $72.36 to $71.31.

Bill Swank, spokesman for Central Florida's FP&L coverage area said the prices have gone down several times. "Last summer we were charging approximately $77 on the basic rates," he said, "then in January, we do what is called a mid-course correction, and we found the oil and gas prices were lower than we had projected last year."

"We then submitted our lower price projections to the PSC and they responded by allowing us to reduce the rates," he added.

Swank stressed that the lower rates were recommended by the power company, rather than demanded by the PSC.

FP&L serves Sanford and a large part of Seminole County.

Residential customers of Florida Power Corp. will pay 26 cents less a month, with the average bill decreasing from $80.58 to $80.32.

"Our nuclear plant is running very well," said FPC's Bill Warren. "It's just a good economical operation, and with the cost of oil and gas lower than what we expected, we just naturally reduced the rates."

Warren said the changes would not make any difference in FPC's operations. "The fuel charges are a direct cost for us," he said, "and when they go down, it's mandated that the bills are adjusted accordingly, as long as there isn't any

Hemispheric summit to be held in Miami

WASHINGTON — Miami will host a summit meeting of democratically elected leaders from Western Hemisphere countries, officials said.

A formal announcement from the White House is expected today.

An administration official, asking not to be identified, said Miami was chosen in part because the conference will give President Clinton high visibility in a state he lost by a narrow margin to President Bush in 1992.

The major themes of the summit, to be held in December, will be environmental issues and the possibility of expanding the North American Free Trade Agreement to other hemispheric countries. NAFTA covers Canada, the United States and Mexico.

The summit also will celebrate the advent of democratic rule to virtually all hemispheric countries since 1979.

The conclave will attract leaders from Canada to Argentina, including the independent nations of the Caribbean. According to current plans, leaders from Cuba and Haiti will not be invited because they are not democratically elected.

The decision to host the summit in Miami was first reported in Thursday's editions of the Miami Herald.

Weather satellite nears launch date

CAPE CANAVERAL — A high-tech weather satellite that will help forecasters track killer storms is moving steadily towards its launch date after years of delay, officials said.

The U.S. Geostationary Operational Environmental Satellite was moved Wednesday to a pre-launch facility in Titusville for fueling. It is scheduled for launch on April 12.

GOES-11 is the first of a series of five meteorological satellites to be launched for the National Oceanic Atmospheric Administration. It will ensure dual-satellite coverage for the United States into the next century.

"It is part of a very advanced new-technology, next-generation weather satellite," NASA spokesman George Diller said Thursday.

Once the satellite is blasted into space aboard an AC-73 Atlas 1 rocket, it will not be fully operational for NOAA for about six months while tests are completed, Diller said.

The satellite was originally to be in orbit in 1989, but the project has been beset with problems. Hurricane forecasters have been left to watch the hemisphere through the eyes of two aging satellites.

Church criticizes newspapers, police

CLEARWATER — The Church of Scientology is distributing 125,000 copies of its publication which criticizes a newspaper and police officials for wasting taxpayer money and ignoring the church's good deeds.

Targeted by the special, eight-page edition of the Freedom magazine are the Clearwater Police Department, the St. Petersburg Times, the Poynter Institute for Media Studies and the now-defunct Clearwater Sun.

A Scientology story written by Richard Haworth, a Scientology spokesman at the international headquarters in Clearwater, discusses the church's community activities, including a winter festival and a drug-free campaign.

"You probably never hear about these or other activities of the Church in our community," the article says. "You certainly did not read much about them in the St. Petersburg Times — and what you did read made them sound controversial."

The St. Petersburg Times in January reported the Clearwater police keep investigative files on Scientology, though there was never a criminal prosecution. The church has a suit pending against the city to have the files purged. Haworth criticized the Times and the police department for the probe.

Haworth also questions the tax-exempt status of the Poynter Institute, a not-for-profit educational institution which owns the Times.

Zink held without bond

ORLANDO — A concern he may flee is keeping an Orlando pediatric orthopedist in jail without bond on charges of possessing child pornography and sexually molesting a boy patient.

Prosecutors are investigating complaints made by three other children Dr. William Zink fondled them. The Florida Department of Business and Professional Regulation also is looking into the case.

Zink, 42, has a host of supporters who describe him as a dedicated, compassionate physician who helped pull patients through tough medical times. They have created a legal defense fund.

Eight of Zink's friends and peers testified Wednesday about the doctor's attributes when he sought his release on bail. Circuit Judge Michael Cymanick denied the request, and Zink lawyer Kirk Kirkconnell said he would appeal the ruling.

Prosecutor Robin Wilkinson told the judge Zink has ties to Guatemala, where he adopted a son and does medical missionary work.

Lawmakers push to limit state government spending

By ADAM YEOMANS
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Reacting to public outcry over the increasing cost of government, state lawmakers are pushing to get a spending cap before voters Nov. 8.

A proposed constitutional amendment is headed to the House floor after the House Appropriations Committee approved the measure 31-0 Thursday. A similar measure is being considered in the Senate.

Supporters of the measure said it would force the state to budget more responsibly and focus on its greatest needs, such as education, criminal justice and roads. This year, the Legislature is debating a record $38 billion budget, almost 2 1/2 times greater than the 1986 state budget.

"We're attempting in some reasonable fashion to control the amount of spending the state does by limiting the amount of revenue that we take in," said Rep. Buddy Johnson, R-Plant City, who is one of the sponsors.

The House proposal (CS-HJR 2053) would limit the growth in state revenue to the increase in the average growth in personal income for the previous five years. It would take effect in fiscal 1995-96 starting July 1.

"It will change the way we govern here in the state of Florida. There's no question about it," said Rep. John Long, chairman of the appropriations committee.

Long said he wasn't thrilled about the spending limit but sponsored the resolution after he became convinced a stricter limit being promoted in a citizens' initiative petition would succeed this year.

"If a referendum is on the ballot then it will pass," said Long, D-Land O'Lakes. "If we don't take a very pro-active role here in the Legislature, that referendum will be more restrictive."

State plans to spend $2 million to attract visitors

By ADAM YEOMANS
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — To help the state's slumping tourism business, Florida lawmakers said they plan to spend $2 million on tourism advertising this spring.

Industry officials said they would match the state's effort with at least $2 million of their own.

"We want to send a very strong signal that our state remain as the number one tourist destination in the world," Rep. Alzo Reddick, D-Orlando, and chairman of the House tourism committee, said Thursday.

The state's $31 billion tourism industry has been hurt by headlines worldwide last year about attacks on tourists and increased competition from other countries and states.

State tourism officials had requested $2 million for additional advertising last fall after a British tourist was killed at a rest stop along Interstate 10. Legislative leaders declined until they had statistics showing tourism was hurt.

Figures released last week showed Florida counted more than 41 million visitors in 1993, a slight increase over 1992. But the number of visitors in December fell 7.6 percent to 3.2 million, prompting lawmakers to announce Thursday they would release the advertising dollars.

Rep. John Long, D-Land O'Lakes, and chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, said they have agreed to release $2 million from a trust fund that collects a $2 a day surcharge on rental cars.

Officials said the effort is needed to fight the state's crime-plagued image and compete with other states that are advertising heavily for travelers from the northeast and midwest.

Parasite killing Everglades nestlings

By Associated Press

WEST PALM BEACH — A parasite spawned from human sewage is killing 80 percent of the baby egrets and herons at the last major nesting colony in Everglades National Park, researchers warn.

It also has infected birds at other sites, biologists told South Florida Water Management District board members Wednesday.

Wading birds in Delaware, Louisiana and Texas also have been infected with the parasite, according to Marilyn Spalding, whose research was detailed last year in the Journal of Wildlife Diseases.

But experts say the parasite could pose a particularly severe problem in the Everglades, where populations of wading birds have plunged by more than 90 percent since the 1930s.

"This is the highest priority in wading bird research so far," said Everglades National Park biologist John Ogden.

But Ogden said the park can't afford to study the parasite. And Spalding has yet to obtain grants for further research since her work was completed in 1990.

"It is very frustrating," she said.

The Eustrongyldes ignotus parasite was found in Florida during a study that began in 1987 at the Rodgers River Bay nesting colony in the Everglades.

Spalding, a University of Florida infectious diseases researcher, told water managers the Rodgers River nestlings died after the parasite burrowed through their stomachs.

A possible link between the parasite and human sewage was uncovered when researchers monitored foraging habits of adult birds from the Rodgers River site. The birds had been fitted with radio transmitters.

The birds were preying on fish in ponds about five miles away. The ponds had been contaminated with sewage from a private hunting camp's overflowing septic tank, said Steve Davis, the water district's top ecologist.

The fish in these ponds probably were infected with the parasite after eating tiny worms called oligochaetes, Spalding said.

Oligochaetes thrive on the nutrients found in sewage.

Fired trooper accused of using stolen credit card

By The Associated Press

FORT MYERS — A fired rookie Florida Highway Patrol trooper from Sanford is accused of buying more than $1,200 worth of car parts with a stolen credit card, sheriff's deputies said.

Derrick Vann, 27, of Sanford was charged Thursday with grand theft for allegedly using a credit card stolen from a man involved in an accident Vann handled as a trooper before his firing in December.

Vann has denied the charge, saying someone else stole the credit card, and his lawyer says the charge against the black former trooper is "racially motivated."

Vann surrendered and was released from the Charlotte County Jail on $2,500 bail.

Defense attorney Phil Wasserman said it appears someone found the credit card in Vann's patrol car and used it.

"It must have fallen out of the wallet into the car and was found when the patrol car was cleaned," he said, without saying who could have found it.

The victim told authorities his wallet was in his car when he was taken to the hospital. The man's wife said Vann returned the wallet at the hospital the same evening.

The man contacted authorities after realizing his credit card was missing when he received a monthly bill listing purchases he had not made.

Court documents show two store clerks identified Vann as one of two men who made a purchase on the card. The second man was not identified.

Clerks at both stores said the two men discussed whether the credit card charge would be approved, according to court documents.

Two days after the purchases, Vann returned to one of the stores to return an item. Vann completed the refund invoice with his name, address and signature, according to the store clerk.

Harding slated to skate in world championships

By BOB BAUM
AP Sports Writer

PORTLAND, Ore. — Only the possibility of an indictment stands between Tonya Harding and the chance to skate in the world championships later this month.

Meanwhile, The Oregonian reported today that Harding won't face federal charges.

Writing to local prosecutors Tuesday, James Reynolds, chief of the Justice Department's terrorism and violent crimes division, said it would be harder to try the case in federal court.

"This is not to suggest that we believe it clear that we could not prevail, but only that the jurisdictional hurdles make a federal prosecution more difficult and the outcome more uncertain," Reynolds wrote in the letter obtained by the newspaper.

The national figure skating association said Thursday that it won't immediately appeal a court order delaying its disciplinary hearing on Harding.

The hearing, which had been scheduled for Thursday, could have ended Harding's amateur career. A new date has not been set.

Harding's ex-husband says she was involved in the clubbing attack on Nancy Kerrigan before last month's Winter Olympic Games. Harding denies it and has not been charged.

U.S. District Judge Owen Panner ruled Wednesday that Harding would not have had enough time to prepare a defense if the hearing had been held as scheduled.

Harding is "just thrilled" that she can skate in the competition scheduled for March 22 in Chiba, Japan, said coach Diane Rawlinson.

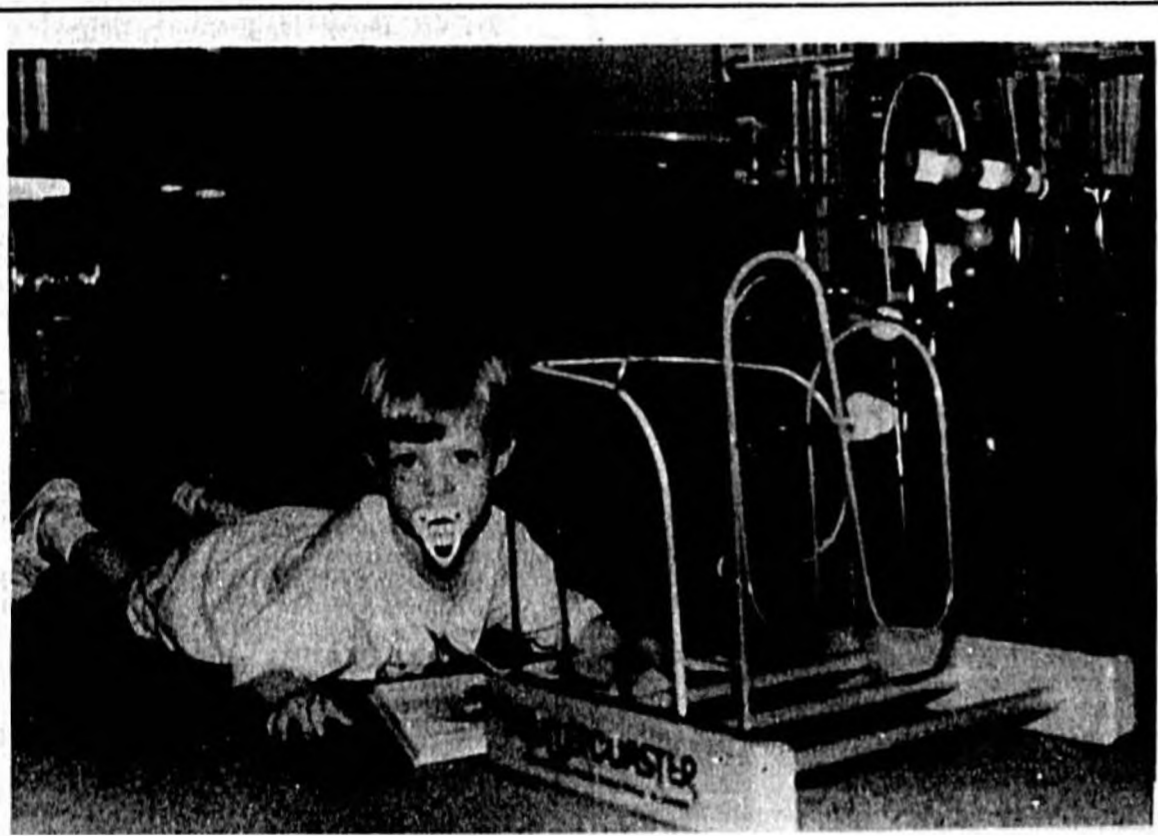

"Right now, skating for us will be Michelle Kwan and Tonya Harding," said Jerry Luce, executive director of the U.S. Figure Skating Association. "We hope they both do well."

The only potential stumbling block is the criminal investigation. The grand jury is expected to report by March 21.

If Harding is indicted, she would need permission from an Oregon judge to leave the state.

If indicted and permitted to leave, the association would let her skate in Chiba, Luce said.

Harding's ex-husband, Jeff Gillooly, told authorities that the couple hatched the plot against Kerrigan after a competition in Chiba last year, when Harding thought the judges gave her unfairly low scores. He pleaded guilty to racketeering in the attack.

Welfare plan: Some could collect indefinitely

By JENNIFER DIXON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — U.S.-born children of illegal immigrants will be allowed to collect welfare indefinitely under a Clinton administration welfare reform plan that would limit cash benefits to other low-income families to just two years.

But the parents of these "citizen children" will not be offered the education, training, day care and subsidized jobs the Clinton administration intends to give other young families on Aid to Families with Dependent Children.

Bruce Reed, a co-chairman of the president's welfare reform task force, said the decision to exclude citizen-children from welfare reform was especially difficult.

On the one hand, their parents, because they are here illegally, are not allowed to work or collect AFDC. But the children, who are citizens, are legally entitled to a monthly check.

Reed said the two-year time limits and work requirements of the president's welfare reform plan, due out next month, would not apply to such child-only cases, who receive smaller benefits than families with a parent on the rolls.

"The most important thing we can do to prevent such cases is to strengthen our border patrol efforts, which the administration is fighting to do anyway," Reed said. "It's a tough issue and the best way to deal with it is to keep people from coming here illegally in the first place."

The question of welfare for immigrants is one of the most emotionally charged issues surrounding the nation's growing welfare population.

In another controversial proposal, the administration is considering cuts in Supplemental Security Income benefits to low-income legal immigrants who are elderly or disabled. The savings would be used to help pay for welfare reform.

Some welfare and immigration experts believe the availability of welfare benefits to children born in the United States lures illegal immigrants across the border and taxpayers end up with the tab for the hospital bill and the child's monthly welfare checks.

But Hispanic rights activists say cutting off welfare to children will do nothing to control immigration and will irrevocably harm the larger community.

"The problem is that you can't put children to work and parents cannot work legally. So what do you do?" asked Cecilia Munoz, a senior immigration policy analyst with the National Council of La Raza, a civil rights organization.

"One way or another, these children are growing up in the United States. We can help them become productive members of society. It's not in the country's interest to starve young children," she said.

Dan Stein, executive director of the Federation for American Immigration Reform, which favors tougher immigration laws, says giving citizen-children unlimited welfare is unfair to other families whose mothers will be pushed off the rolls and into a job after two years.

"Mothers who have the temerity, the willingness to break immigration laws and have a child in this country are rewarded with more favorable treatment," Stein says.

In California, the children of undocumented aliens comprise the fastest growing segment of the state's AFDC population, according to the congressional testimony late last year of Theresa Parker, formerly of the state Department of Social Services and now undersecretary of the Department of Finance.

The state had 176,800 citizen-children on its welfare rolls in 1993, more than the combined

AFDC populations of 25 other states, Parker said. It spent $236 million on their benefits.

According to Sandra R. Smoley, California's secretary of health and welfare, 40 percent of births paid for by Medi-Cal, the state's Medicaid program, are to illegal immigrants.

"It's a national problem and national policies are driving the problem," Smoley said in an interview this week in Washington. "We're saying 'Don't come if you're not legal. But if you're here, we'll reward you with Medicaid and aid (AFDC).'"

Eloise Anderson, director of the California Department of Social Services, said, "The act of birth should not necessarily make you a citizen."

Donald Huddle, a professor of economics at Rice University who has studied the impact of immigration on the economy, does not believe welfare is a magnet. Illegal immigrants cross the border, he says, because they want a better life for themselves and their children. But when they arrive and can't find a job, they end up on welfare.

"It develops, it happens once someone's here. Of course, they have to do everything they can to survive," Huddle said.

Album offers voice for homeless to sing of life

By SANDY SHORE
Associated Press Writer

DENVER — Mitchell K. Teasley III stepped hesitantly to the microphone in the crowded, stuffy basement room, adjusted his saxophone slightly and began softly playing, "Amazing Grace."

"I feel rejoiced when I play music," Teasley told the crowd after the soulful notes died away. "It just puts me in another dimension."

In a quiet, unemotional voice, Teasley said he became homeless after he lost a job in Casper, Wyo., and couldn't find another after moving to Denver. "Right now, I'm fed up with everything. I'm losing my self-esteem," he said.

Teasley captivated the crowd in the Denver Rescue Mission library Wednesday, particularly Rex Neilson, who is searching for homeless people to perform on a new album called, "Voice of The Homeless II."

Neilson is founder of the San Diego-based MAG Records, which this year released its first album, "Voice of the Homeless," a collection of 12 country, rock, blues and rap songs by homeless people.

Since its release, between 3,000 and 5,000 copies have been distributed, and all but four of the performers have found homes, said David Chenoweth, MAG talent coordinator.

Half the royalties are paid to the singers and writers; half to the sponsoring St. Vincent de Paul Society, a major Catholic charity.

Two years ago, Neilson was earning a lucrative living selling cars in San Diego. "I thought that homeless people 99.999 percent of the time were lazy, and if I walked up to one and offered him a job, he would refuse," Neilson said.

But then, he began listening to street people who performed along public sidewalks, often with an open instrument case at their side.

He heard quality in voices, instrumentals and rap.

Neilson began carrying a tape recorder, approaching the homeless on sidewalks, in alleys and shelters to ask if they could sing for an album he wanted to produce.

He invested $100,000 of his own money and convinced St. Vincent de Paul Society to sponsor the project.

Neilson and a group of friends then auditioned about 300 homeless people in San Diego, Washington, D.C., and San Francisco to find the 27 featured artists.

Neilson said he began the talent search for the sequel in Denver because the city responded well to the first album. More auditions are planned in Washington.

MAG Records received 200 calls in the first 48 hours after a Denver newspaper wrote about the album in January. Some came from homeless people, who called a toll-free number from pay telephones, Neilson said.

The auditioners ranged from Teasley to Donna Harvey, who recited an original poem entitled, "Billy," that left Neilson wiping tears from his eyes.

In the mission's basement library, Neilson and two colleagues used bare-bones equipment to record about 30 candidates.

Report: Hazard in nuclear warhead?

By ROBERT BURNS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The nuclear warhead that arms the Navy's most modern missile could undergo an accidental chain reaction in certain "abnormal situations," the warhead's designers told the Navy in a still-classified report.

The report did not describe the possible consequences of such a reaction. Private weapons experts told The Associated Press it probably would cause radioactive contamination and possibly an explosion but not a bomb-like detonation.

Navy officials said Thursday the service's experts judged the potential hazard to be too slight to justify redesigning the warhead, which is deployed with Atlantic fleet Ohio-class submarines carrying long-range Trident II ballistic missiles.

Lt. Jim Fallin, a Navy spokesman, said the Navy is confident the weapon is safe.

"The W-88 warhead as used in today's Trident missiles was thoroughly evaluated for safety in all credible accident scenarios prior to its deployment. The system was approved for service and there are no outstanding safety issues," Fallin said in a statement prepared in response to an inquiry.

The likelihood of "abnormal situations" as described in the designers' report is not clear. Private experts said it seemed highly unlikely that the right combination of adverse circumstances would occur, but they said it could not be dismissed.

"We are talking about minute levels of danger," said William Arkin, a leading private expert on nuclear weapons.

The technical basis for concern about this was described by Los Alamos National Laboratory and Sandia National Laboratories in a September 1988 final report on development of the warhead, designated the W-88. Los Alamos designed the warhead. Sandia developed its arming, fusing and firing assembly.

The report is classified secret. Portions of the report were provided to the AP and some other news organizations by Kathie Harine, who until last December was a nuclear physicist at Lockheed Missile and Space Co. The company worked with Sandia on the warhead and is the manufacturer of the Trident II missile that carries the W-88 warhead.

Ms. Harine was laid off at Lockheed last December as part of a cutback in the overall Trident program. She now is a consultant based in Sacramento, Calif.

Although the Trident missile system has been the subject of congressional hearings and was the focus of a special report to Congress on nuclear weapons safety in December 1990, the existence of the potential hazard described in the September 1988 report had not been revealed publicly.

About 400 Trident II missiles with W-88 warheads are deployed aboard Ohio-class submarines, whose home port is King's Bay, Ga. The warhead, which went into service in 1990, no longer is in production.

Ms. Harine said that when she first read the 1988 report she was alarmed at the safety risk it implied. She said she pointed it out to her superiors at Lockheed but was told not to pursue the matter or discuss it with others.

"I see it as a hazard that is greater than previous hazards that had been known," she said Thursday.

At Lockheed's headquarters in Sunnyvale, Calif., spokesman Eric DeRitts said there was no evidence Ms. Harine had voiced her concern to the proper company officials. If she had, DeRitts said, the matter would have been pursued. A basic rule of nuclear warhead design is that the enriched uranium and other nuclear fuels in it must remain "subcritical" at all times before a deliberate firing. That is, the materials should be in a physical state that prevents them from undergoing a sustained chain reaction leading to a nuclear explosion.

The September 1988 report said all required design characteristics of the W-88 warhead had been met, "with the exception of criticality under abnormal situations."

The authors of the report appeared to give credence to the situations it said could be a problem for the W-88: water flooding and physical damage.

Whitewater casts different spotlight on Mrs. Clinton

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Hillary Rodham Clinton's role in the Whitewater controversy adds yet another complex layer to a first lady who already challenged Americans to accept a new kind of political wife.

Mrs. Clinton has not been accused of wrongdoing, but she was involved in some of the legal and financial dealings now being probed by a special counsel looking at the Whitewater Development Corp. and its ties to a failed Arkansas savings and loan.

And on Thursday, her chief of staff and press secretary were the leadoff witnesses before a grand jury examining, among other things, whether White House aides had improper contacts with Whitewater investigators.

Until now Mrs. Clinton has been identified almost entirely with the administration's crusade to reform the health care system. It's been a perfect mix for her: traditional first-lady compassion in public, high-wattage policy formulation in private.

Ever since the rude awakenings of the 1992 campaign, when her offhand remarks about cookie-baking and standing by her man provoked a backlash, Mrs. Clinton has tried to balance conventional expectations with her own professionalism and independence.

"I am not anyone's stereotype," Mrs. Clinton, who was an influential Little Rock attorney, declared in a recent interview.

So far that seems fine with most Americans. Two-thirds in a CNN-USA Today-Gallup poll this week said she's a good role model and a positive influence. But her support in many areas has slipped since September.

Mrs. Clinton has been in virtual hibernation this week in private meetings. Her office said the schedule was set long ago and nothing had been canceled.

But with Congress finally beginning this week to write a health-care bill amid waning enthusiasm for the administration version, some strategists say that ordinarily Mrs. Clinton would have been out front promoting her plan. She's scheduled to re-emerge Monday with an appearance in Denver.

Her friends and advisers say she is trying to keep her sense of humor and concentrate on what's important to her — primarily her family and health care.

"It is obviously not pleasant," said Diane Blair, an Arkansas friend. "Many people here have wanted me to convey to her their conviction that this is all just nuts."

A senior administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Mrs. Clinton is itching to defend herself, but only in a comfortable forum. Possibilities include a roundtable with news magazines or a joint TV appearance with the president.

The first lady did make some sharp comments in an interview last Friday with Elle magazine.

She accused her critics of mounting a "well-organized and well-financed attempt" to undermine the Clintons and their policies. "They have yet to come forward with anything other than the wildest kind of paranoid conspiracies," she said.

"You have to do the best you can, refute it and counter it," she said. She vowed she would not become "isolated and on the defensive and diverted," as her opponents would like.

This is the same woman who, a few days earlier, discussed schlumpy clothes, broken fingernails and Chelsea's birthday with four New York gossip columnists. She can do razor-edged politics. She also can do girl talk.

Researchers studying women in politics and business have found that people think women are more moral than men. "There's still a major presumption of innocence and honesty, of not being in the back rooms, not making the deals," said Celinda Lake, a Democratic pollster.

Mrs. Clinton acquired some of that moral aura last year in a series of speeches and interviews about finding meaning in life, politics and religion.

Sen. Jay Rockefeller, D-W.Va., underscored the image in a floor speech Thursday. "She has worked herself to exhaustion, past exhaustion," he said. "She buried her own father and went straight back to work."

But Mrs. Clinton has always had a shrewd and worldly side as well. Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., captured it last week in Chicago. "I've had the privilege of sitting at the negotiating table with Hillary, and let me tell you, she doesn't come new to the negotiating table," he said.

Water, land and air for visiting seniors

Thirty-two members of the Orlando Senior Center visited the Sanford Boat Works Tuesday for fun and games. The seniors took a nature cruise sponsored by the St. Johns River Cruises (right photo) followed by a seaplane ride (upper photo) over Lake Jesup. After the exciting water and air excursions, the group enjoyed a barbecue on land at the boat works.

Postal competition

Faxes, electronic mail hurt business

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Ever since invention of the telegraph, people have been predicting the demise of the post office. Today it's faxes and electronic mail that are putting a multibillion-dollar dent in postal finances.

Mail managers who designed the recently announced increase in stamp prices to reduce the U.S. Postal Service deficit had to consider another issue: How much could prices go up without driving away even more business?

They'll get the answer when the new rates take effect next year. Meanwhile, the battle for business continues in the face of competition from electronics.

Facsimile machines are the business convenience of the last few years, rapidly churning miles of paper into offices for the price of a phone call.

In estimating lost business, it's hard to measure what might have been — how many faxes and electronic-mail messages would have been letters in days past.

Fax machines are privately owned, and it's hard to guess how many messages they send every day. But postal marketing manager Kent B. Smith estimates that the Postal Service has lost about $2 billion in business to the machines since 1988.

An estimated 43 percent of the messages sent by fax machines replace mail and "that's a considerable hunk of business," Smith said in a recent interview.

Electronic mail is the coming attraction, as more and more Americans buy home computers and join commercial networks such as America Online and Prodigy that let them tap out messages to one another via their keyboards.

E-mail and electronic funds transfers have had an impact on the mail, Smith said, but he sees their threat more in the future than at present.

The congressional Office of Technology Assessment predicted in the mid-1980s that E-mail and faxes would cut the volume of first-class mail to 40 billion pieces by 1990. That didn't happen.

Instead, first-class volume climbed from 60.3 billion pieces in 1980 to 72.5 billion in 1985 and 89.2 billion in 1990. The Postal Service carried 92.2 billion pieces of first-class mail last year.

Affordable housing

SHIP program realization of American dream

There is a movement on in Seminole County to try and get affordable housing for all residents. Many individuals as well as organizations are working toward this goal. The SHIP program can provide a realization of the American dream of home ownership for many Seminole County families. The increased building of affordable housing will provide an economic boost to our community and enrich the lives of many as partnerships work together for a great common cause.

Different groups and organizations have applied for and received SHIP funding to be used to assist home buyers with down payments on newly constructed homes. A series of three classes will be given for a three-week period starting on Monday, March 14, from 7-9 p.m. The classes will be offered at the Cooperative Extension Service, 250 West County Home Road, Sanford. Lessons will be taught on pre-qualifying for a home loan, learning about the process, and accepting responsibilities of home ownership. These classes are offered in conjunction with those interested in receiving SHIP funding. Educational training is required with the SHIP program. This program is being offered in conjunction with Seminole County and the Seminole County Chamber of Commerce. The program will be limited to the first 100 people that call in. For more information and/or to register, please call the Seminole County Chamber of Commerce at 834-4404.

The educational programs will help to: improve potential for home loan qualification and protection from loan default of first-time home buyers through better financial and credit management skills, help home buyers make informed decisions through knowledge about home buying an loan acquisition processes, and assist new home owners to maintain property values and avoid loan default through learning and using money management skills, home maintenance, and repair skills and the development of community association groups.

Although this program is designed for those interested in applying for SHIP funds, for those first-time home buyers, this information would be very helpful also. It will give good information on the process needed and what you will need to know before you go through the steps of home loans.

Mom seeks 'crack' info

DEAR MARY: As a parent of a 14-year-old soon to be entering high school, I feel like I need some education. I've heard of "crack" and "crack babies," but to be honest, the stuff could be lying on the kitchen counter and I wouldn't have a clue what it is. My daughter has never given us a minute's reason to worry that she might be interested in any kind of drug, but I don't want to wait until a possible problem arises before I make myself smart, at least to the extent that I would recognize "the enemy" if I saw it.

DRUG COUNSELOR

MARY BALK

DUMB MOM Contrary to your signature, I think you are very wise. Parents who have made themselves smart about the problem of drug abuse among teens are at a real advantage in preventing the problem from harming their children. Crack (sometimes called "rock") is the street name for a more purified form of cocaine that is smoked. It is an extremely dangerous and intensely addictive substance. Crack, which may be as much as 90 percent pure, is five to six times stronger than the cocaine normally purchased on the street. Addiction can occur almost instantaneously. Side effects of use can cause violent behavior and extreme depression and paranoia. Crack is sold in small plastic vials and is in the form of small, white, gray or beige rough-shaped chunks that can be smoked in a marijuana or tobacco cigarette, or in a pipe. It can be purchased in small amounts enough for two uses for $5 to $10. Because crack is so cheap, easily available, and creates such an intense "high," it is extremely appealing to drug users.

Broken promises disappoint young mom

DEAR ABBY: After giving birth to twins, I decided to quit my job and stay home to take care of our babies. My husband and I are on a rather tight budget, and we needed two very expensive appliances because the ones we had broke down and it would cost too much to repair them.

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

My mother-in-law said, "Go ahead and buy them; I will help you with the payments."

Well, I took her at her word and signed for the appliances. Meanwhile, six months have passed, and not a word from my mother-in-law about her promise. When she was over at our house, I said, "Mom, how do you like the two new appliances?"

She said, "Oh, you showed them to me last time I was here; they are very nice." Then she changed the subject.

Abby, this is not the first time she has offered to help with payments. Three years ago, we went shopping for wall-to-wall carpet, and she promised us she would help with the payments, and that was the last we heard about it.

I am really upset about her broken promises. What should I do?

DOUBLE DISAPPOINTMENT DEAR DOUBLE: Once burned, shame on her; twice burned, shame on you. Talk is cheap — and so is she. Don't take her promises seriously and you won't be disappointed.

DEAR ABBY: I live in a large apartment complex. Each building has a laundry room with several washers and dryers. However some of us have a recurring problem with our neighbors.

Some people leave their things in the washer or dryer for a long time, which means that the rest of us have to wait to do our laundry until they remove their stuff.

How long should we wait before removing their laundry? The problem is that there is no place to put their laundry, and most people don't want anyone else touching their stuff. There are lighted timers on the washers and dryers, but I've had to wait sometimes 45 minutes until a machine is available.

I know this may not sound like a critical problem, but it is very frustrating. Sign me...

"WET HEN" IN WALNUT CREEK

DEAR WET HEN: It's common courtesy to remove one's laundry from washers and dryers within 15 minutes after the cycle is completed, so if your neighbors don't do so, do it for them. Put their laundry in their basket, if they left one; if there's no basket, put it on top of the machine.

Also, considerate tenants who do not have daytime jobs should do their laundry during the day in order to free the machines for those who must wash on weekends and evening. Perhaps if this were posted in the laundry room, your thoughtless neighbors would get the message.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "NEW BOY IN SCHOOL": If a man does not keep pace with his companions, perhaps it is because he hears a different drummer. Let him step to the music which he hears, however measured or far away." — Henry David Thoreau (1817-1862)

Legend has it that, long ago, the dogwood came into bloom on Calvary and that, afterwards, a cross was implanted into the flower itself, to remain for all time. You can see it if you look closely, rust brown against the white of each individual blossom.

Many of us carry crosses, faint like the dogwood's emblem, but with us, nevertheless. Somehow, in this Lenten season, we become particularly conscious of them and of our need for help...a certain kind of help that can be found only through the things we learn in God's House.

The Church doesn't pretend to banish our cares and woes, but its teachings realistically consider the experiences of life itself. No matter what our personal cross may be, we seem able to bear its burden with more strength.

Lent is a wonderful time in which to begin making church a regular part of your life - if you haven't already.

Leading those gone astray to God

By KELLEY MITCHELL
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The Lord does indeed work in mysterious ways.

Twelve years ago Chaplain Charles Pitroff came to the Good News Jail and Prison Ministry at the Seminole County John E. Polk Correctional Facility to turn those lives which had gone astray to God.

Today, he gives thanks for the thousands served in the name of Jesus.

"In 1993 we held 208 Sunday services here at the facility with 8,500 inmates in attendance, collectively," said Pitroff. "We had 869 Bible classes attended by 23,500 inmates and 18,000 Bible lessons graded by the staff here."

"But most importantly, there were 1,065 decisions for Christ, 535 for the first time and 530 commitments," according to Pitroff. "We thank God for His guidance and strength to help these young men and women."

On Friday, the ministry will hold its 11th annual benefit banquet at 6:30 p.m. at the Sanford Civic Center, 401 E. Seminole Blvd.

Chaplain Jim Brown, who recently retired after nine years of service here, will return from North Carolina to speak on the jail ministry.

Those in attendance will get an inside look into the facility as the women's chaplain Jo Anne Westmoreland, a volunteer for 11 years, and 12 female ex-offenders re-enact a Monday evening service.

"There is one female ex-offender who will give a testimony of the impact God has had in her life since she left the jail," said Pitroff. "She now owns her own business and grossed $500,000 last year."

"We're breaking that cycle of crime one life at a time," he said.

Awards for Volunteer of the Year, given by Sanford Mayor Bettye Smith, and Corrections Officer of the Year, by Sheriff Don Eslinger, will be part of the evening festivities.

There is no charge for the banquet, but a freewill offering will be received to cover the costs and help with this fast growing ministry.

For more information, call Chaplain Pitroff at 324-5221.

'A Child Is Waiting' campaign launched

By KELLEY MITCHELL
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — In the wake of rising poverty and childhood hunger, Bread for the World launched a campaign to reduce hunger among low-income children and women. The "A Child Is Waiting" Offering of Letters campaign seeks to guarantee full funding for the proven, cost-effective Special Supplemental Food Program for Women, Infants, and Children (WIC) to reach the nearly 3.5 million eligible women and children not currently served.

This federal program is designed to reduce malnutrition among at-risk children and pregnant women during a child's most critical period of growth and development. It provides nutritious foods rich in protein, iron, calcium and vitamins A and C, to nursing mothers and small children. These are the kinds of vital nutrients likely to be missing from the diets of low-income women and children.

The Seminole County Public Health Unit presently services 4,573 participants monthly in the local WIC program.

Pregnant women and children birth to 5 years old may be eligible for free milk, cheese, peanut butter, juice, cereal, eggs and beans. Carrots, tuna and fish are added to the list for breastfeeding women and infant formula for newborns.

"There is a need and desire to increase the caseload here in Seminole County," said Dorothy E. Richards, director of the WIC program at the health department. "Forty-two percent of the eligible population are not being served here in the county. If there is a medical and/or nutritional risk and the household meets the income guidelines, the service is there.

"Many working people qualify for WIC," according to Richards.

Children often bear the brunt of their family's circumstances, their needs magnified under the lens of poverty. As of 1992, 6.8 million children, almost half of all poor children, lived in homes where incomes were less than half the official poverty level. (In 1993 the poverty level was $11,521 for a family of three.) Forty percent of all poor American children are younger than 6 years old.

"Without writing checks — just a letter to Congress — Christians can help win nearly a billion dollars for vital nutrition and health-related services for low-income children and women," said David Beckmann, president of Bread for the World. The Christian citizens' anti-hunger advocacy group marks its 20th anniversary this year.

"If just a fraction of the more than 70 million Americans estimated in the pews on a given Sunday wrote letters on this issue, Congress couldn't ignore the massive outcry," said Beckmann.

During the past two years, Bread for the World organized churches to help win nearly $2 billion to expand three effective U.S. childhood hunger programs: WIC, Head Start and Job Corps. About a million low-income people, mainly children, are benefitting as a result.

To become involved in the "A Child Is Waiting" campaign, write to Bread for the World, 1100 Wayne Ave., Suite 1000, Silver Spring, MD 20910 or call 301-608-2400, fax number is 301-608-2401. Include $5 plus $3 postage and handling to order an Offering of Letters kit, or $25 to become a member of Bread for the World.

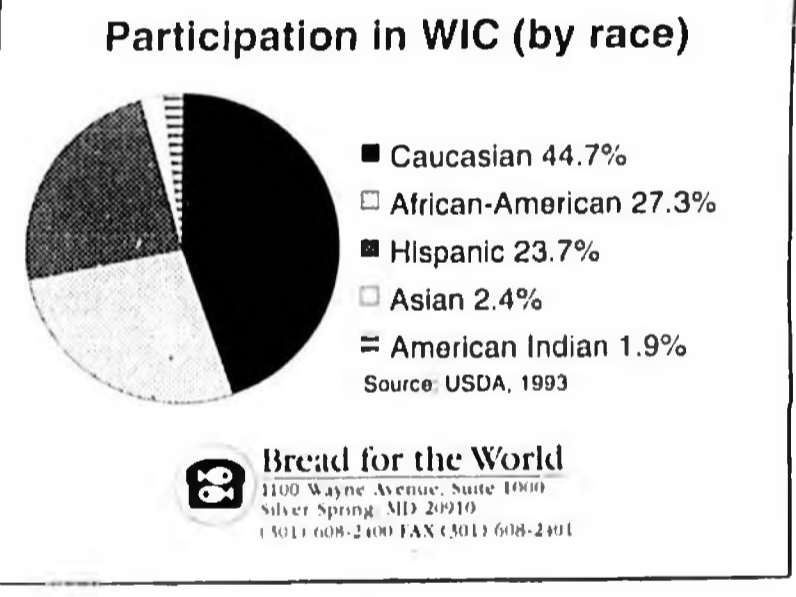

Walk for the hungry Sunday

SANFORD — The seventh annual central Florida Walk For the Hungry will begin at 2:30 p.m. on Sunday, March 13, from four different locations: Centennial Park, Sanford; Crane's Roost Park, behind the Altamonte Mall; West Orange and Church Street Station.

Sponsored by Church World Service, the walk raises money for the Second Harvest Food Bank of Central Florida, Catholic Social Services, South Seminole Christian Sharing Center, West Orange Daily Bread, the Sanford Christian Sharing Center, Rescue Outreach Mission and Grace N' Grits, Sanford.

Funds are also shared with people of Yugoslavia, Somalia, and earthquake victims in Los Angeles through CWS. Registration begins at 2 p.m.

Vertigo common in young adults

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've been diagnosed with vestibular neuritis and am very frustrated. How could I have gotten this disorder and what are the prospects of a cure? Sign me an unhappy newlywed.

DEAR READER: Vestibular neuritis can be an incapacitating disorder; it is caused by inflammation of the vestibular nerve (of hearing and balance), marked by sudden or recurring attacks of vertigo (uncontrollable sensations of spinning).

Typically, patients experience a severe, first episode of vertigo that lasts one to two weeks. Subsequent symptoms, which are shorter and less severe, occur every 12 months or so, for years.

This neuritis is more common in young adults and is believed due to a viral infection of the nerve.

The diagnosis is made by exclusion, after other more serious afflictions have been ruled out by appropriate tests, such as MRI scanning.

There is no cure, except that anti-vertigo drugs, such as Antivert, help to control symptoms.

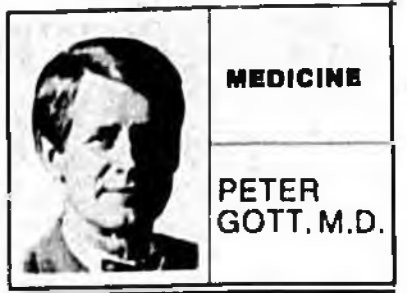

I don't know how you "got" this disorder; it is not spread from person to person. If you're patient and use medicine when necessary, the attacks will eventually abate.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Ear Infections and Disorders." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My 43-year-old daughter has an embarrassing problem that I hope you can solve. Her feet stink. Big time. She's tried foot powder, odor-eaters, sprays, all without effect. Her shoes are a disaster area.

DEAR READER: Foot odor can be a challenging problem. Often no treatable cause can be discovered. However, in some cases, the odor may be exacerbated by a chronic yeast

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Aider

Homer claimed, "Light is the task when many share the toll." But he was unaware of Alder's First Law of Clever: "For every statement there is an equal and opposite restatement." In this case we have the antithetical "Too many cooks spoil the broth."

In a bridge deal there are two defenders. Occasionally one must plan the defense on his own. But more often the two have to work in tandem. If one fails to pedal correctly, their bike crashes.

Defending against five spades. West led the club two: three, jack, queen. Declarer tried the spade queen, but West won with the ace and switched to the heart queen. Gratefully, declarer won with the ace, drew the last trump and claimed, conceding a trick to East's diamond ace. How do you assess the blame for the defenders' failure to defeat the contract?

The bidding was tricky. West did well to show his second suit over two spades. This made it easy for East, who knew about the double fit, to go to the five-level. To defeat five hearts, the defenders must organize a diamond ruff, which is difficult to do. North, with no defense, bid five spades.

The culprit was East. West's club-two lead must be a singleton. So East's priority, as his play is irrelevant in the club suit, is to make a suit-preference signal. At trick one, East should play the club four, showing that he holds a diamond honor, not a top heart.

West will switch to a diamond at trick three, get his ruff and finish with a plus score. Then, as Elbert Hubbard wrote, "Two grins grow where there was only a frown before."

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
March 12, 1994

Situations you were not able to control in the past look like they'll be manageable in the year ahead. This might be due in part to favorable outside influences.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Continue to be as philosophical as possible in your most important affairs. You're on a track to fulfillment, but the rails are a little weak. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) An associate who thinks of you in friendly terms has much more power and clout than you may realize. Today you might see some small evidence of this.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Partnership arrangements into which you enter today could work out very well for all the parties concerned as long as everyone continues to operate on the same wavelength.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Conditions are favorable in this cycle for getting together with persons who could give your career a boost. Deal directly with them and not surrogates.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) In order to advance your expectations in this time frame, you might have to take some calculated risks from which you've backed off previously. If conditions are right, don't be fearful.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you look out for persons with whom you're involved today as well as you look out for your own interests, both they and you could come off better than either could do independently.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your best asset today is your ability to introduce reasonable elements into serious deliberations or dealings. There's a definite need for what you can offer.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't accept defeat lying down today if you're financial projections haven't lived up to your expectations. Your chart indicates constructive changes are possible.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Today you might feel inclined to support an unpopular position. Fortunately, within your cadre you have some very loyal allies who believe in what you think.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your success today will be predicated upon the intensity of your motivation. If you want something strongly enough, you should be able to get it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A problem you haven't been able to successfully resolve on your own should be openly and frankly discussed today with three of your intimate friends.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Things should develop to your liking today in your commercial or financial affairs, provided you operate along traditional lines and have the courage to make changes where changes should be made.
