Mathis pleads no contest

A 16-year old Altamonte Springs youth faces 36-year prison sentence after pleading no contest in the 1991 shooting death of Wayne Sanzo, national president of the Warlocks Motorcycle Club.

An April 1 sentencing date has been set for Freddie Mathis who pleaded no contest Friday before Circuit Court Judge Alan Dickey in the Sept. 3 shooting of Sanzo.

Under a plea agreement, Mathis is to receive 36 years in prison and 15 years probation. He pleaded no contest to second degree murder, conspiracy to commit first degree murder, armed burglary and grand theft of a firearm.

Although Mathis denied he committed the murder, he told Dickey he was entering the no contest plea to the charges because he was tired of waiting.

Mathis is the last of four teenagers charged in Sanzo's murder. The victim's daughter, Tiffany, pleaded no contest and is serving four years in prison. John Valois was given two years house arrest and 13 years probation. Kami Trickett was placed under two years house arrest.

Presidents Day celebrated

Today is "Presidents' Day." Although banks and a few other operations connected with the Federal government are closed, the event is not highly commemorated.

All local government entities are fully operational today.

The third Monday in February was declared as a holiday through the adoption of the Monday Holiday Law by Congress many years ago. The intent was to combine holiday observances of George Washington, (Feb. 22) and Abraham Lincoln (Feb. 12), into one event.

Originally known as "Washington-Lincoln Day," the name was later changed to "Presidents' Day," with the recommendation from congress that all former presidents be given honor on that day.

Hawaii, Nebraska, and Ohio acknowledge the day through an annual state statute. The rest of the nation gives popular recognition through the federal statute.

No big ticket winner

TALLAHASSEE — Of the nearly 250,000 winning tickets sold for last week's Florida Lotto game, none can be redeemed for the $8 million grand prize.

So that gives players another chance at the big bucks, Lottery officials said Sunday. This week's grand prize is estimated at $18 million.

Of the 248,948 winning tickets, 199 have five of the numbers and are worth $1,739 each. Another 12,573 have four, and are worth $66 each, while 236,176 had half the right numbers and can be exchanged for $4.50 each.

The numbers drawn late Saturday were 1-9-15-20-33-49.

Grand-prize estimates are based on projected sales and long-term investment rates, funds from any rollovers and a 20-year payout to one winner.

Family leave law

Employers of 50 affected

SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

The family leave law scheduled to take effect in August may have an impact on some local companies, but many already provide leaves of absence for their workers.

During the leave period, companies are required to continue providing health insurance benefits if an employee was covered. After the leave, an employee would get his or her previous job back or one at the same pay level.

The law allows an employee to take as many as 12 weeks a year of unpaid leave for the birth or adoption of a child, care of a seriously ill child, care of a seriously ill spouse or parent, or recovery from a serious illness. According to the House Education and Labor committee, the leave does not have to be taken all at once.

All private employers and non-profit groups with 50 or more workers, local, state and federal governments and Congress are covered. In order to qualify, an employee would have to have worked for at least one year for a minimum of 1,250 hours during that year, which averages about 24 hours a week. The law does not distinguish between full-time and part-time workers.

Some key employees, whose salaries are in the top 10 per cent of the company's payroll, would be exempt as would those whose absence would cause the company economic harm.

Burt Fairchild, manager of industrial relations for Astronet Corporation, Lake Mary, said the company already provides up to three months unpaid leave to employees for medical emergencies. The company is a subsidiary of Mitsubishi Electric.

"What is significant about the bill (now law) is by mandating the leave, it is definitely going to get our attention," Fairchild said, adding the final decision on leaves at Astronet is made by the chief executive officer (CEO) of the company.

Although the company will be looking at the new law and formulating a policy accordingly, Fairchild does not foresee any difficulty filling in for a worker on leave.

"Perhaps for jobs at the lowest skill level we would introduce temporary workers," Fairchild explained, "but otherwise we would simply rotate our staff to fill a vacancy created by someone on leave."

Mica: Law a hoax

SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

The family leave bill signed into law by President Bill Clinton has been called a hoax by Florida's seventh district congressman because it does not address the real problem and covers only a portion of the nation's workforce.

Congressman John Mica said he voted against the family leave bill, when it was pushed through the House, because it does not deal with the entire problem. He SANFORD — The Sanford-Seminole Art Association held its annual art show yesterday afternoon. The works of member artists were entered in the competition.

The show was held at the Cultural Arts Building, on 5th Street at Oak Avenue in Sanford.

Among the top awards, Jim Quinlin was selected as the winner of the Peacha Wiggins special award, for his painting of General Henry Shelton Sanford in a citrus grove. The artwork was done from a photo, originally published in a Sanford Herald, maintained as part of the Sanford historical archives.

Janet Krikorian won the coveted E.B. Stowe award, and a painting by Bettye Reagan received the Best of Show award.

In addition, 13 other prizes were awarded from the 68 entries in the competition.

Although the paintings were restricted to members of the Art Association, the public was invited to attend the gathering.

According to President Paulee Stevens, "One of the things that has been bothering the association is the way the building is set up for art displays."

She continued, "Even though the building was renovated to provide for art displays, there

Sanford January rainfall wettest in area

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Seminole County was a good place for galoshes last month.

More than twice the average amount of rainfall was recorded at Sanford in January, making the area one of the wettest locations in the entire St. Johns River Water Management area which takes in all or portions of 19 counties. The district releases a monthly report on rainfall and other conditions affecting drinking water supplies.

A total of 5.26 inches of rain was recorded at Central Florida Regional Airport in January, 2.84 inches more than the 2.42-inch normal. Sanford also received more than 21 inches of rain above the normal amount during the 12-month period ending in January. It had received the greatest amount of above-average rainfall for the entire district during the past year.

All of the rain during the past year has done much to replenish underground drinking water supplies. In January, a district-monitored well in Geneva reached a new 11-year record high, topping the record set in October. The drinking water level was recorded at 21.81 feet above mean sea level (MSL), 0.32 feet above the previous record.

The January level was 5.05 feet above the lowest level the well reached during the past 11 years on May 31, 1991.

A district-monitored well near Longwood was recorded at 44.17 feet above MSL, far below the 42-year record set in September 1960 following Hurricane Donna. The January level was 10.18 feet above the record low level set on April 30, 1990.

The city of Sanford pumped an average of 4.67 million gallons per day (MGD) in January, 7 percent less than the average for the year and less than previous years. The city pumped an average of 5.02 MGD in January 1992 and 5.05 MGD during January 1991.

Fire bomb interrupts speech

GAINESVILLE — A fire bomb thrown at a Gainesville Right-to-Life office caused little damage but interrupted a speech given less than a mile away at a banquet held by the group.

Stephen Wood, president of the Florida Life Center, was speaking to about 80 members of the Gainesville Right-to-Life organization at the downtown Holiday Inn on Saturday when he was interrupted by Lois O'Malley, a director of the organization, who told him the office had been burned.

Gainesville police said someone threw a fire bomb at the Gainesville Right-to-Life office. A fire investigator at the scene said a fire bomb made from a beer bottle did not penetrate a window, but did blacken part of the building's exterior near the window.

Police said Sunday they were still trying to learn who threw the fire bomb.

"I feel very sad that people don't like us to help women in problem circumstances," O'Malley said. "I pray for the people who did it."

Officer back on job after sex change

JACKSONVILLE — Lt. Smith is back on the job as a corrections officer after an eight-year fight for transsexualism that ended with a $149,500 victory settlement.

She's back as Lt. Belinda Joelle Smith, instead of Lt. William Harvey Smith.

"I'm satisfied," Ms. Smith said last week after returning to work. "I needed to get my career back."

Smith was fired in 1985 for "conduct unbecoming an officer" after being observed dressed as a woman while off duty.

Arguments that he was about to undergo a sex-change operation and that it would be discriminatory to fire him were rejected by sheriff's officials.

The case went to the Florida Commission on Human Rights, which ruled on Feb. 21, 1992, that the firing was indeed an illegal act of discrimination because it was based on a disability — transsexualism.

Ms. Smith, who had the sex-change operation in September 1990, said she fought for her job not only for herself but for other transsexuals as well as other victims of discrimination, which she called "a crime against everyone."

After the commission ruled in her favor, the city agreed to bring her back to the Jacksonville Correctional Institution at her old rank.

State to be part of genetics mug book

ORLANDO — Florida law enforcement officials will be able to search the genetic records of criminals in other states in the first stage of what the FBI hopes will become a nationwide system, a newspaper reported today.

For example, if a rapist struck in Florida, Minnesota and Virginia, a computerized mug book of genetic "fingerprints" might tell police the same man was responsible for all three attacks — a pattern that otherwise might be missed.

By the end of the year, Florida law enforcement officials will be able to check records in at least 11 other states to see if suspects there match blood, semen, hair, saliva or skin found at a crime scene in Florida, according to The Orlando Sentinel.

"I think it's tremendous. I think it's one of the greatest things in law enforcement to come along," said Tim Berry, the Orange County assistant state attorney who prosecuted the country's first case in which DNA fingerprints were admitted as evidence.

Berry, who obtained the 1987 rape conviction of Tommy Lee Andrews of Orlando with the help of genetic fingerprints, said the nationwide databank will be especially useful in Florida because "we have a high frequency of out-of-state offenders."

Argentine tourists injured

ST. PETERSBURG — One Argentine tourist was recovering from gunshot wounds suffered in a carjacking while another recuperated after being run over by her husband, who was trying to escape an armed robber.

Elias Mejalelaty, 51, was in critical but stable condition early this morning, said a nursing supervisor at Bayfront Medical Center. He was injured Saturday afternoon while visiting The Pier, a waterfront attraction featuring shops and restaurants.

Mejalelaty, his wife, mother and mother-in-law were getting into their rental car, parked about halfway down the approach to The Pier, which hosted about 2,000 visitors at the time.

A man with a large-caliber handgun walked up to Mejalelaty and tried to rob him, police said. The women jumped out of the car, and Mejalelaty and the gunman struggled. Three or four shots were fired, striking both men.

Mejalelaty was hit in the chest, abdomen and hand. Michael R. Franke, 35, of St. Petersburg tried to check himself into a hospital with a gunshot wound shortly afterward.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

House speaker earns more with help, political clout

TALLAHASSEE — House Speaker Bolley "Bo" Johnson makes $3,000 a month as a consultant to a large Chicago bond company, a job he got thanks to political clout and a little help from another lawmaker.

Robert Beh, manager of the public-finance department of Clayton Brown & Associates, said Johnson was hired in late 1991 for his connections.

"Our particular business deals with governments, and he, being a part of that and knowledgeable, we find him a very effective support for us," Beh, who has never met nor spoken to Johnson, told the Tallahassee Democrat in a story published Sunday.

Johnson, D-Milton, said his background in commercial real estate and real-estate courses in Atlanta and Chicago prepared him to work in the bond business.

But he acknowledged that his connections were his selling point, that his rise in the House has put him "in a position of meeting more people — making contacts," the newspaper reported.

Johnson spokeswoman Kathy Putnam said Sunday her boss doesn't spend a lot of his time on consulting work.

"In the time that he's been with Clayton Brown, he's done one project," she said. That was a private residential development in Pasco County, she said, adding that Johnson has told the company he will not work on any public projects.

Clayton Brown is an investment banking company that sells tax-exempt bonds, issued by government agencies, to institutional buyers such as large pension or mutual funds, according to Rep. Michael Abrams.

Abrams, a Miami Beach Democrat who chairs the House Finance & Taxation Committee, got Johnson his job with Clayton Brown, the Democrat reported. Johnson reports to Clayton Brown through Abrams.

Clayton Brown has paid Johnson $3,000 a month since December 1991 for "professional services related to consulting on public financing in Florida," the company says.

Before Clayton Brown, Johnson got $1,000 a month for consulting services with New York's Chase Manhattan Corp., a similar investment banking company. He got that job through Abrams also.

Johnson didn't include the consulting fees on his financial disclosure forms, but Putnam said there was no attempt to keep the consulting jobs secret.

She said Johnson didn't report his 1991 income — $3,000 — from Clayton Brown because it didn't amount to 10 percent of the gross income of Bo Johnson & Associates, the commercial real-estate business that got the checks.

Under Florida law, elected officials are required to file forms letting the public know where they get their income. But revenue sources must be reported only if they total more than 10 percent of the gross income of an elected official's private business or company.

That means Johnson would have to report Clayton Brown income only if his company grossed less than $30,000 in 1991. Putnam said the company's net income last year was $58,000 and that the gross income would have been at least that much.

"It's real clear there's no violation (of law)," Putnam said.

She said the speaker will report his 1992 income from Clayton Brown, expected to be $36,000, since it will likely constitute more than 10 percent of the company's gross income. That form, however, is not required until this July.

Chiles would lose if election were today

By Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Fewer than one in five Floridians would re-elect Gov. Lawton Chiles if the election were held today, a poll indicated.

Indeed, some of Chiles' potential opponents from both parties next year appear to be more popular than he, according to the poll conducted by Mason-Dixon Political/Media Research Inc.

The survey of 814 voters Feb. 5-7 found 17 percent would vote to re-elect Chiles, 43 percent would consider another candidate and 38 percent would vote to replace him. Four percent weren't sure how they would vote.

The poll has a margin of error of plus or minus 3.5 percentage points.

The governor's rating is actually 10 percentage points lower than that of his Republican predecessor, Bob Martinez, at about the same time during his tenure. Martinez went on to lose the election to Chiles 57 percent to 43 percent.

The governor is still expected to seek a second term, but several key Democrats are considering a run should Chiles bow out.

Of the four most-talked-about contenders, three — Lt. Gov. Buddy MacKay, Education Commissioner Betty Castor and Attorney General Bob Butterworth — polled more favorably among voters than did the governor. Orlando Mayor Bill Frederick, another possible candidate, was not known by most voters polled.

Note of little help to FBI

TAMPA — The writer of a racial note left at the scene where a black tourist was set ablaze appeared to be either high on drugs or disguising his handwriting, the FBI has concluded.

The distorted writing on the note "in all probability does not exhibit the normal handwriting of the person or persons that prepared it," the FBI laboratory in Washington, D.C., noted in a report dated Feb. 11.

The note, written on a 3-inch by 5-inch piece of paper, was discovered by detectives on the ground. It read, "One less nigger, more to go. KKK."

The FBI concluded it could not connect the note to handwriting samples of the three suspects, Mark Kohut, 26, Charles Rourke, 33, and Jeffery Pellett, 18.

The trio is charged with attempted murder, armed kidnapping and armed robbery of Christopher Wilson, a 31-year-old stock brokerage clerk from New York City who was attacked New Year's Day.

Authorities have acknowledged evidence is lacking in the investigation.

Earlier last week, a Hillsborough County sheriff's detective testified at a bail hearing that there are no fingerprints, hairs or fibers to connect the three defendants to Wilson's attack.

Gray to be featured on 'Keepers of the Wild'

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The former elephant keeper at the Central Florida Zoological Park, will be featured on TV this Wednesday. The activities of Charlie Gray are to be featured in "Keepers of the Wild," a National Geographic Television special scheduled for 8 p.m., on Channel 24.

According to Andrea Farmer at the zoo, "Charlie was the elephant keeper here from January 1983 until May, 1985. He was a very dedicated and professional person."

She added, "Of course most animal keepers are dedicated, but Charlie had a special quality and always excelled in what he did and went well beyond what you would normally expect of a person in his situation."

At the present time, Gray cares for 12 Asian elephants at the privately owned African Lion Safari, west of Toronto.

According to National Geographic, "he does everything in his power to give the elephants the kind of freedom they would have in the wild. He takes them on long strolls to roam in nearby fields and forests, and brings them to a private lake to bathe and socialize with each other."

Gray also rehearses his veteran performers and trains the young for appearances in the circus, which helps fund their upkeep and provides physical and mental stimulation during the long Canadian winters.

Gray, 31, is listed as one of the most accomplished elephant handlers in North America. This is no mean feat considering that 10 elephant handlers have been accidentally killed on the job in as many years.

The Sanford zoo presently has two elephants, Maude and Mary. Farmer did not immediately know if she would have a TV set available for the pair to watch Gray. "But I'm sure if they saw him," she said, "they would remember, because an elephant never forgets."

Six slain in South Bronx

By Associated Press

NEW YORK — The execution-style slaying of three adults and three teen-agers, whose bodies were found in a crime-ridden area of the Bronx, may have been related to drugs, police said.

The victims' bodies were found Sunday morning lying face-down in an apartment in the Mott Haven section, said police spokeswoman Detective Kim Royster. All were shot in the head at close range.

Police ruled out robbery as a motive but not a possible drug connection, said Deputy Chief Edward Cappello, commanding officer of Bronx detectives. Officers found $4,400 in cash and no sign of forced entry.

Cappello identified the victims as the apartment's residents — a woman, her 17-year-old son and 26-year-old daughter — and three neighbors, the youngest 15 years old.

People in the area heard gunshots, banging on the door and the sound of people fleeing some time after midnight.

A time for action

Some people may say that the downtown Sanford area is dying. Others however, refuse to give up, and are doing something.

Tom Speer is having his building at 113 Magnolia Ave. cleaned and a new canopy installed to not only improve its physical appearance but to restore it to the original 1927 look.

Toward the lakefront, Sailpointe Apartments, although only seven years old, is refurbishing all of its buildings.

Toward the east, the Sanford Memorial Library and Museum is being completely rebuilt in a period decor that will be an asset to the entire city.

Whether work is being done on commercial, residential or municipal structures, the improvements will be, without a doubt, good for the entire downtown Sanford area.

We hope this is the start of something that could grow and expand to other buildings.

The Seminole Towne Center Mall is coming. Eventually, hotels and motels will be built near the mall, and the core of business will be moving to the western part of the city.

We can sit and wait for work to begin on the proposed Mainstreet Project, which could take several years before it starts to show a marked difference in the downtown appearance.

On the other hand, something can be done now. Follow the example set by Sailpointe, the Speer family and a few others, and let's see progress begin to move forward.

Certainly, refurbishing or making major changes to a downtown business will cost money. Rather than see it as an expense however, look at it as an investment in the future.

If the downtown area remains as it is now, even people who have grown up in Sanford will not continue to be loyal shoppers and customers.

If the city waits several years before someone else suggests how improvements can be made, it will still cost money, but it may be too late.

The mall will be bringing thousands of people into the area. Sanford could be an additional attraction or a ghost town.

Now is the time for action.

No easy answers to complex problems

Hear Ye, Hear Ye, Citizens of Sanford. "things are going to get worse," crime-wise that is, according to Mayor Bettye Smith from Monday night's city commission meeting. Unfortunately, the mayor is correct on this point.

I read a number of legitimate complaints from fellow citizens regarding drug and crime activity in their areas of residence. One complaint made by Mr. Bernard Mitchell about police response time being so slow is understandable. But, it's a fact that I believe the majority of the general public hold, although mistakenly.

I was greatly surprised at Whitey Eckstein's ignorance of the reasons for the slow response times, seeing as how he's an elected commissioner and should know these things. Mr. Eckstein's statement made it sound as if it might be due to a lack of aggressiveness on the part of patrol officers.

The simple fact of the matter is that response time is down because calls are up. The police department is woefully understaffed, overloaded, and overworked. We all must realize that units respond to calls by priority or severity of the problem. A call involving violence or probable violence is always going to take precedence over a call involving someone buying drugs with no immediate threat of violence involved.

The mayor and the commissioners' top priority should be in trying to make Sanford a safe place to live again, instead of wasting precious funds on beautification projects. It makes little sense to make Sanford the city beautiful, if people can't walk through it without the fear of getting robbed, beat up, or murdered. These people were elected to do a job, which seems they're incapable of doing. This commission meeting caused a lot of resentment in the police department, because it made it sound as if the police department is worse than it really is.

We need more officers on the road. Acting Police Chief Russell said the city would be hiring four more officers soon; the city could probably use 20. Again, the question comes to finding the money to hire all the people that are needed. Where's it going to come from? Besides, if we had double the officers we do now on the road, I don't believe it would make much of a dent in the drug trade. Counteracting the drug problem presents several unique problems. 1.) They are so mobile that it makes pinning them down difficult. 2.) They know us well as we do that you can't arrest and incarcerate them all, there's just simply not enough room. 3.) There's always someone to take their place.

A fact we all must face is that as long as we have social ills, we will have a substance abuse problem

ACLU's civil war on hate speech laws

Kevin Francis O'Neill, legal director of the ACLU of Ohio Legal Foundation, is a classic civil libertarian in that he believes, with Justice William Brennan, that the First Amendment secures all our other liberties and rights. Accordingly, O'Neill was involved in the successful attempt to have Ohio's "hate crime" law declared unconstitutional by that state's Supreme Court. The statute provided enhanced penalties for crimes committed with bias in mind.

"This is dangerous," said Ohio's Supreme Court, with O'Neill in enthusiastic agreement. "If the legislature can enhance a penalty for crimes committed 'by reason of' racial bigotry, why not 'by reason of' opposition to abortion, war, the elderly (or any other political or moral viewpoint)?"

The Ohio ACLU is in the minority among state affiliates of the American Civil Liberties Union that have taken a stand on adding to the prison terms for crimes committed by bigots. The New York affiliate is enthusiastically willing to punish speech in addition to the penalty for the crime in these cases. The Oregon ACLU not only supports added punishment for bias crimes but actually helped write the state's law curbing the First Amendment in this regard -- a law that has been upheld by Oregon's Supreme Court.

The three ACLU affiliates in California, as could easily have been predicted, prefer a civil rights rather than a civil liberties course in these matters. The civil rights approach is to demand that the government add penalties to crimes involving hate speech while those civil libertarians still in the ACLU believe -- as Leslie Williams, executive director of the dissident Vermont affiliate puts it -- "the legislature should not be able to add several years to a prison sentence for an already punishable crime because it finds the reasons for the crime offensive." Over 40 states have "hate crime" laws and the intent, as its advocates keep pointing out, is to send a message to blacks, gays, lesbians -- and other targets of bias crimes -- that the community regards such attacks very seriously and therefore will punish hate crimes more harshly than violent crimes committed without bigotry.

This approach, however, also sends a message to those in any community who are mugged or otherwise assaulted for no other reason than the criminal's lust for money. The message to those random victims is that the injuries they receive, however painful physically and psychologically, are of less concern to the community because the perpetrators in their case were blessedly free of bigotry.

After the Wisconsin Supreme Court declared that state's "hate crime" law -- in a case involving black-on-white crime -- unconstitutional, the Wisconsin State Journal, in an editorial, asked: "Is the mugging of an elderly black woman by a black youth suddenly a less serious crime in the eyes of the law than the same mugging committed by a white youth?"

The U.S. Supreme Court has chosen this Wisconsin case to review, during the present term, thereby probably deciding the fate of all the state's bias-crime laws.

Human rights before diplomacy

WASHINGTON — When President George Bush hosted a state dinner for Morocco's King Hassan II, the menu featured medallions of salmon in champagne jelly and caviar sauce. One thing that wasn't on the menu was human rights.

While Bush was praising Morocco for its help in the Gulf War and its "commitment to shared ideals," more than 700 Moroccans languished in prison. Several hundred "disappeared" Moroccans remain unaccounted for in a country where torture is reportedly common.

Morocco, which will receive more than $40 million in U.S. taxpayer-financed military education and training in the current fiscal year, is merely one of 18 countries which violate human rights with impunity, yet still receive slices of the $7 billion security-assistance pie. Every time a check is cut for Morocco, a U.S. law is being violated -- since laws forbid the disbursement of security assistance to any country that shows a "consistent pattern of gross violations of internationally recognized human rights."

Veteran foreign-policy hands blame this time-honored hypocrisy of American foreign policy on two major factors: Cold-war politics and "clientitis" -- the practice of some foreign service officers to put the needs of their host country above the U.S. national interest.

Secretary of State Warren Christopher chided adherents of clientitis during his Senate confirmation hearings, calling it a "malady characterized by undue deference to potential reactions of other countries," while promising a new era of diplomacy that will place a "much greater emphasis on problem prevention rather than crisis management."

President Clinton campaigned on a platform of human rights and pilloried President Bush for pandering to China after the Tiananmen Square massacre. Regarding China, Clinton has distanced himself from these promises faster than he ran from the middle-class tax cut.

With more than 4,000 career foreign-service officers below him, Christopher may not be totally in charge. But he understands that "clientitis" is to blame for some of the biggest foreign policy fiascoes, including the failed courtship of Saddam Hussein.

"There are eight levels of bureaucracy below the president," said one former high-ranking State Department official. "Reagan, Bush and even their very top advisers weren't the ones sitting there reviewing whatever the assistant secretary for human rights put out."

Strategic imperatives make it likely that the Clinton administration will continue channeling security assistance to countries like Turkey, which gets more than $500 million each year for military education and training. Turkey is yet another Gulf War ally that is getting a generous return on its investment, despite reports that torture is common practice. The methods most frequently used there include electric shock treatments and beatings.

"The question (in the past) was 'do they hold elections?'" James O'Dea, director of Amnesty International's Washington office told our associate Jan Moller. "If they did, we didn't worry much about death squads."

Every time a check is cut for Morocco, a U.S. law is being violated.

in some form. People that use drugs use them as a form of escape from the everyday pressures of just living. Eradicate the need to escape and you'd pretty well kill the drug trade. The gap between the have's and have-nots is widening, people are finding it more and more difficult to find their little part of the American dream. The drug trade feeds on the carcass of the discontented and disoriented, and leaves you with the bones of shattered dreams and lives. This is the big issue. These types of problems have to be dealt with on the state and federal levels.

Our problem is to find solutions on a community-based level which means we as citizens must get more involved. The mayor and commissioners are asking for our help. They were voted in so it is our civic duty to help them, even those of us who didn't vote for them. This is not to say that we should do the job for them, they need to use their little brains in this effort also. We're not paying them to sit on their backsides, collect a paycheck and spend our tax dollars frivolously.

Criminal behavior starts in the very young and becomes a self-perpetuating force as they grow older. Once you're in the saddle, it's extremely difficult to get off that horse.

I don't pretend to know all the answers to these problems, and as far as I know, the few answers I do give may be useless, but at least I'm thinking about these things, and am trying to help. We need to think about what kind of role models we are being for our children and the children of others we come into contact with. One of the first things we need to do is to start communicating with our children. This needs to be done in the schools as well as in the homes. Use examples of your own life's experiences. I try to do that with my daughter. I find as she grows older our conversations are more lively and interesting. Don't belittle what they have to say. Listen with an open mind. They may be dead wrong in what they're saying, but their views mean just as much to them as ours mean to us. And a big one is when you're wrong, admit it. It's funny how we try to instill in our children the importance of admitting when they're wrong, yet as adults we don't follow the same principle. I've had to do that a few times myself with my daughter, and I believe she was pleasantly surprised. I let her know that what she has to say is important to me. It is a truism that bad communication is better than no communication. At least you know how they feel, and have a point to work from. If you criticize them for something, be diplomatic about it. Fear of how you're going to react if they come to you with a problem is only going to close the door between the two of you.

As far as the drug dealers out there now doing business as usual, the greatest deterrent I can think of is to hit them where it hurts the most, in the pocketbook. Money is their sole motivating factor. You can also incarcerate as many as you can for as long as you can. Even if we have to erect a tent city, Florida's climate is such that they would at most be uncomfortable. The idea is to make it costly and uncomfortable. Leave the violent people for the prisons and the jail cells.

As for the user, once addicted, they need it like we need the air to breathe. I don't know any answers to that problem but if someone comes up with a way to restore a broken dream, I think we'll have taken a big step in the right direction.

Help kill proposal

Should a person who nets and sells our publicly owned fish and other marine animals be the same person who votes on how many he can take, and by what methods?

Obviously, such an occupational conflict of interest is undesirable and yet a bill in the Legislature would "require" that commercial and other specified interests be represented on the seven-member Florida Marine Fisheries Commission.

Citizens in Sanford and throughout Florida must help kill this fishing industry proposal that would make an already failing system of marine protection even worse.

The people are wresting control of this important conservation issue away from the politicians and influence peddlers who have let our marine populations decline.

Restored levels of marine life will provide maximum benefits for all -- including more overall jobs and more seafood on the tables of Floridians.

Little wonder that a proposed constitutional amendment to eliminate the big commercial nets from Florida waters has tremendous grassroots support. The Save Our Sealife amendment already has more than 280,000 signatures and is almost certain to be on the general election ballot next year.

Smart dropouts take charge of education

By CINDY ROBERTS
Associated Press Writer

MARIETTA, Ga. — Zhenya Berdichevsky was taking honors classes and making straight A's when she decided that wasn't good enough.

So the 17-year-old junior at Wheeler High School in Marietta went to the public library and returned with an armload of college textbooks. That was in October. She hasn't been back to school since.

"People probably think of me as a nerd," she said. "But I'm trying to do more than the basic curricula."

She is not alone.

"More and more high school students are saying, 'Enough of this, I'm wasting my time in traditional schools,'" said Pat Montgomery, who runs Home-based Education Program in Ann Arbor, Mich., a 13-year-old correspondence school serving 1,740 families.

They aren't always model students. Some may even be struggling. Others just want time to do their own thing, whether that is music, travel or, like Zhenya, cracking the books. They share some of the frustrations of high school dropouts, but they are not giving up.

"It wouldn't be fair to say all these homeschool teen-agers are taking the bull by the horn and going out there and learning quantum physics. But there are more and more of them, no doubt about it," said Patrick Farenga, president of Holt Associates in Cambridge, Mass. The organization publishes a magazine on home schooling.

All states allow home education in some form or another, said Patricia Lines, a U.S. Department of Education researcher.

The number of U.S. students in home schools has at least doubled in the last 10 years, she said. But just how many teen-agers are taking charge of their education isn't clear. The government can only say that of the estimated 248,000 to 353,000 home schoolers in grades K-12, the vast majority are elementary children whose parents disapprove of traditional schools for educational or religious reasons, Lines said.

"I think that smart dropouts are a phenomenon that has always existed," said Grace Llewellyn of Eugene, Ore., a former middle school teacher turned home schooling advocate. "But because of the preconceptions we have about dropouts, that has prevented us from noticing them in the past."

Ms. Llewellyn and other advocates argue that many students want the freedom to design their own courses of study and dislike the constraints of schools. Other educators think bright teen-agers are turned off by the quality, not the structure, of traditional schools.

If anything, Zhenya wanted more structure. She attended four schools, two private and two public, after her family immigrated from the former Soviet Union four years ago. She missed the rigor of the Gnesin School of Music, one of Moscow's top two music schools.

"Serious subjects in Russia start in third grade, like geometry and algebra," she said.

The turning point came when she was out sick two weeks.

"It took me much less time to study all this stuff than if I were in school," she said.

Zhenya's father, a professor in the Department of Aerospace Engineering at Georgia Tech, supported her decision to drop out from the start. It took several weeks to win over her mother.

"But now I see she is an adult," said Nadia Vasetsky, who has a doctorate in mathematics. "It was her idea, her decision ... she is competing with herself."

Zhenya, pronounced Jane, spends five to eight hours a day studying Latin, world history, literature, physics, mathematics and biology — not to mention two hours of violin practice. She hopes the effort will produce high test scores and get her into a top college, where she would like to major in biology and music.

Opinion varies as to how well home schoolers do. Gene Crawford, an education administration specialist in the Georgia Department of Education, said turnover in Georgia is high and those who return to public schools are often behind.

But home schooling advocates draw a line between young children whose parents are teaching them at home and teen-age superachievers who already have a basic education, and are seeking to enhance it, with independent study.

Ms. Montgomery said 80 percent of home schoolers in her program graduate early and go on to college. The program assigns a teacher to help each student get achievement tests and study materials.

Harvard University doesn't care where applicants get their smarts as long as they have the standard aptitude and achievement tests, said senior admissions officer David Illingworth.

"But what I've heard of the record is there are some schools which aren't even willing to consider these kids," he said.

Eight or so home schoolers are studying at Harvard this year in a student body of 6,400. But each year there are more applications, he said.

"It's interesting that people who opt out of traditional education at the secondary level are opting for Harvard, which is a very traditional school," Illingworth said.

Mica

added the new law adds more government regulations that create more work for businesses, local governments and schools.

With businesses, such as Sears and Boeing, announcing the layoffs of thousands of workers, Mica said, adding more regulations on companies which already have leave policies was unnecessary. He said 83 percent of the groups covered under the new law already have leave policies in place.

The law does not cover companies with less than 50 employees.

On companies and groups covered under the law, Mica said, the family leave law imposes more government regulation which will add up to more accounting, bookkeeping and compliance costs.

Mica said another reason he voted against the bill was that although Congress is covered under the new law, it exempted itself from any penalties for violations of the law.

The family leave bill was pushed through Congress in one day under a suspension of the rules and no amendments were allowed.

"One of my colleagues said he felt we were under marshal law," Mica said, referring to the speedy way the bill was considered.

Rather than being a boon for workers, Mica thinks it may cause discrimination against women of child-bearing age. A company might think twice about hiring a woman who would be eligible to take the unpaid leave. He said he thinks it will also create a bonanza for contract labor. Companies might not keep workers on staff long enough to comply with the 12-month, 1,250 hours service clause, opting to fill their needs with contract laborers instead.

Although some provisions were spelled out in the legislation Congress passed, Mica said specifics will be drawn up by the Department of Labor, which will enforce the law.

"This is a kind of 'one size fits all' piece of legislation that doesn't fit all," he said. Mica said he heard from many constitutents about the family leave bill, including seasonal businesses as well as schools and local government questioning the provisions.

"It is going to add another layer of reporting, recording and compliance for already burdened businesses," he added.

Mica, who voted against the bill as it was presented, said he would favor a leave policy which covered all of the work force, not just companies with 50 or more workers. Tax incentives and credits could be offered to encourage small businesses to provide unpaid leaves for workers.

Mica was meeting constituents in his district last week and attended the opening of his two local offices in Fern Park and Deltona.

Leave

Fairchild added, "We don't really look forward to the lost time, because it typically cuts into our productivity."

No new leave policy has been received in light of the new law by Jetstream Systems, Inc. a subsidiary of Barry Wehmiller Package Systems. Human resources clerk Brenda Edsall said the company has a leave package in place to cover illness or maternity. Any company policy change will come from the St. Louis office.

Currently, Jetstream employees are allowed eight weeks of paid leave for births, two weeks prior to the birth and six weeks after delivery. Employees receive a percentage of their salary under the company plan. A partially paid leave is also provided in cases of surgery or illness, she said. "I think it is great," she said, about the new leave law.

Jetstream makes conveyor equipment for industrial use.

Tom Brasseur of Lenco Electronics Southeast objects to government mandating employee leaves, which his company already provides. He fears liberal congressmen will push for paid extended leaves which will force small companies like his out of business.

Lenco employees are asked to notify the company as soon as possible if they will need a leave and how long they will be gone. Near the end of the leave, the employee calls the company and if his or her job has been filled, they are given the option to take the next available opening. Usually, Brasseur said an opening is available in less than two weeks. The company makes transformers.

Under the company's policy, Brasseur said, there has been an instance of an employee claiming his grandmother died three times in five years necessitating three leaves to attend the funerals.

In cases of extended leaves, Brasseur said he does not think it is fair to fire a worker hired when a leave-taker is ready to return. Although Lenco currently employs 25 to 30 workers, Brasseur said he has had as many as 70 employees

Latest drunken driving: lower thresholds

By ARLENE LEVINSON
Associated Press Writer

Many state lawmakers are pondering social arithmetic in the latest round of legislative assaults on an old menace, the drunken driver.

Bills introduced this year in 32 states reflect a push for more deterrents and stricter punishment for intoxicated drivers.

The most common proposal is lowering the intoxication level from 0.10 percent blood-alcohol to 0.08 percent — about a one-drink difference. Another popular cause is tighter penalties on young drunken drivers.

"It's reached a point where most of the states have sanctions they consider reasonable and effective," said Jeanne Mejeur, a policy analyst at the National Conference of State Legislatures in Denver.

"They're saying 'We've done what we can without impinging on people's rights. Now what can we do to get the problem drinker off the road?'" she said.

State criminal code books are filled with fairly new anti-drunken driving laws, enacted at a clip of about 150 a year between 1982 and 1990.

The years of new legislation, combined with education programs, have changed attitudes and driving behavior to help cut the carnage blamed on alcohol.

In 1982, alcohol accounted for 57.2 percent of the 43,945 traffic fatalities. Last year, drinking played a part in 46 percent of the 39,500 road deaths, according to National Highway Traffic Safety Administration estimates.

Washington state Sen. Adam Smith has proposed a bill to let drivers who drink know that drunken driving doesn't merit any second chances.

Trash may be school's treasures

In the past few years the schools have been hard-pressed to buy new equipment or school supplies due to budget restraints.

The Chamber of Commerce's Education Committee has talked with school principals and PTA presidents and have found that each school has special needs for supplies and equipment. Many businesses and/or individuals at one time or another have updated computers, fax machines, telephone systems, tables, chairs, etc. and don't know what to do with the old items. Sometimes they just collect dust in a closet and are eventually discarded.

The Education Committee would like these things put to good use. If you have anything that you no longer want, but believe a school might be able to use, please contact the Education Committee through the Chamber office. The Education Committee will check with school officials, and if there is a need for the item, arrangements will be made to transfer the equipment or supplies. "Remember, the schools appreciate our help, and it is our children who will benefit," said Michael A. Beim, DDS, Education Committee member. Call the Chamber office regarding the above at 333-4748.

Hagerty, Litton visit women's club

On Monday, Feb. 8, the Heathrow Women's Club held their February general meeting and luncheon at the Racquet Club at Heathrow. The guest speakers were Paul J. Hagerty, superintendent of Seminole County Public school system and John Litton, Lake Mary city manager.

Dr. Hagerty came to Seminole County in July of 1992. Dr. Hagerty was chosen as a top 100 administrator in the nation. He is a FSU graduate.

He chose to discuss Year Round Education (YRE) as the main topic of his time-limited talk.

"In the 'aftermath of the bond issue falling, we had to look at alternatives to building schools and that is YRE," he said. "Within the next two years every elementary and middle school will be YRE. School will start in mid-July and go for 12 weeks and then off 3 weeks. There will be both single track and multi-track depending on the overcrowding." He continued, "for every four schools scheduled on YRE it saves one school from being built. Multi-track is 1,000 - 5 for rotation of children."

Dr. Hagerty also gave his opinion as to grading.

"The system should have marks of 'A,' 'B' or 'C' (incomplete)," he said. "The 'C' would replace 'Cs and Ds' and if the child did not adequately complete the particular area with an 'A' or 'B,' that meant it needed further work or review or completion."

Another thought he left with us was that "for the first four grades children are learning to read and after the 4th grade, children are reading to learn."

This was a very informative dialogue and time ran out before the questions were all asked or answered.

John Litton, Lake Mary city manager, spoke to the group regarding Seminole County being the move with elected and non-elected leaders working together.

He told the club that the underground power lines should be finished in about 90 days and the new contractor is totally focused on completing the job on time.

We learned that Siemens Stromberg-Carlson, the largest Lake Mary employer, will be expanding and Goodings will be building a warehouse and distribution center in Lake Mary.

Litton said that the city will address the helter-skelter of boundaries.

Shootin' hoops

Thursday, Feb. 4, there was an exciting basketball game at the gym at Greenwood Lakes Middle School, Greenwood Lakes vs. Jackson Heights.

The GLMS team members included: Alphonso Davis #12, Jason Graham #14, David Ebaugh #13, Chris Cook #21, Roderick Davis #22, Jerome Bingham #24, Matt Townsley #25, Bryan Wright #31, Phillip Gamble #30, Steve Ortiz #15, Dennis Platt #32.

JHMS team was: Josh Greer #22, Chris Caldwell #21, Rob Carver #12, Anthony King #20, Bern Bock #30, Reggie Carwise #15, Nick Caldwell #13, John Harper #25, Ryan Boyd #14 and Rod Golden #24.

The final score of the fast-paced game was GLMS 40 and JHMS 44. The high scoring players for GLMS were Phillip Gamble with a total of 10 points and Steve Ortiz with a total of 8 points.

The high scoring players for JHMS were John Harper with a total of 14 points. Harper also achieved five out of six free throws in the last three minutes of the game to put it away for JHMS, according to Coach Chris Marlette. Josh Greer had a total of 9 points.

"This was by far the toughest game of the season and we've won every game so far," Coach Marlette proudly boasted of the Winter Springs basketball league game.

Coach Mike Mitchell of the GLMS "A" team said he was very proud of the players. "They worked very hard and this was a first place team," he said. "This was the second loss on our record, but the team played a great game."

Heathrow Elementary School had 72 students submit projects for the PTA Reflections competition. Congratulations to all for a job well done.

AROUND THE STATE

Another Dale wins 500

For Dale Earnhardt, it was another Daytona 500 to forget.

Jarrett battled in the lead pack of cars over the final 27 green-flag laps Sunday and outduelled Earnhardt, a five-time NASCAR champion and one of its fiercest competitors. Earnhardt did everything but win — again.

Jarrett's father, Ned, was leading the 1963 500 when he ran out of gas with two laps to go.

The win was Washington Redskins coach Joe Gibbs' first victory as a NASCAR team owner.

Jarrett passed rookie Jeff Gordon on lap 199 and caught Earnhardt in turn four. Their Chevrolets touched briefly and reached the start-finish line for the last lap in a dead heat.

Jarrett edged in front and pulled away on the backstretch. Earnhardt couldn't catch him.

Geoff Bodine finished third and Hut Stricklin fourth in Fords, followed by Gordon in a Chevy.

AROUND THE NATION

Courier wins again

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Winning in his own country and on an indoor court has helped Jim Courier take care of two problems.

"I'm very happy to win in the United States where I didn't win at all in 1992," Courier said Sunday after edging 96th-ranked Todd Martin 5-7, 7-6 (7-4), 7-6 (7-4) to win the Kroger-St. Jude International at The Racquet Club.

"Nineteen-eighty-nine was my last title indoors, so I killed a couple of birds with one stone here," he said.

Courier hadn't won in the United States since 1991, when he took three titles.

'Hounds overtake Rams

From Staff Reports

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Claiming six individual district championships, the Lyman Greyhounds rallied past the Lake Mary Greyhounds in the championship round to seize the 4A-District 4 wrestling crown Saturday night at Lake Brantley High School.

Going into the championship round, Lake Mary had a nine-point lead and nine wrestlers in the finals while Lyman had six. But the Rams won just two of their remaining nine matches while the Greyhounds went 6-for-6, including beating Lake Mary head-to-head in three finals.

Lyman finished with 180½ team points to Lake Mary's 171½. They were followed by Lake Brantley (116), Oviedo (90½), Lake Weir (74), DeLand (72), Deltona (58), Lake Howell (24½) and Maitland (7).

"I don't think we wrestled to our potential, but I can't say we didn't wrestle well," said Lyman coach Rick Tribit. "Lake Mary had a great tournament."

"We had some things go against us. For example, we had a lot of byes in the first round and that put us in a hole. Lake Mary was able to pick up advancement points plus points from pins. Then we didn't have a real impressive semifinal round. But to their credit, when we were down, we didn't fold. We came back and had great final round."

Winning district titles for Lyman were Nick Samero (112 pounds), John Altizer (119), Vinnie Samero (140), Charlie Defazio (145), Jason

Where Mitchell won his championship match (scoring a 6-1 decision), three Seminoles had to settle for second in their respective weight class.

Cyrus Patterman (112 pounds) and Reginald Braxton (152) both suffered pins in their finals. Ricky Peterson, Seminole's 220-pounder, forfeited his championship match to serve as an escort at Sanford's debutante ball Saturday night.

Third-place finishers for Seminole were Tarric Pendleton (130), Bill Cogburn (135), James Bradwell (180), and Alashaundrey King (Heavyweight), placing fourth were Brett Counts (140) and Steve Williams (189).

Raiders off mark, fall to Wolves

LAKE CITY — No matter how well you play, it's hard to overcome poor shooting.

Coming off its best shooting performance of the season on Wednesday night, the shorthanded Seminole Community College men's basketball team had one of its worst nights from the floor and dropped an 80-63 Mid-Florida Conference contest to the Lake City Community College Timberwolves at Howard Gym Saturday night.

"We did a much better job of running our offense tonight and controlling the tempo, but we just couldn't get anything to drop," said SCC head coach Bernard Merthie. "Our defense also played a pretty good game, but we gave up too many second shots. It was a good team effort, though."

The Raiders were playing without starters Phillip Williams (disciplinary reasons) and Evon Hammond (missed bus). And it showed early as Lake City, on four three-pointers, ran to a 17-4 lead over the first four minutes of the game.

After a timeout, SCC cut the lead to six points, 26-20, behind Troy Bruening and Mike Burch, but the Timberwolves hit another hot SANFORD — With the Sanford Recreation Department Youth Basketball League rapidly drawing to a close, eight teams in the boys' divisions still have a mathematical shot at their respective titles.

In the Senior Boys, A.B.B. Power Distribution (4-3) used a big fourth quarter to knock the Fleet Reserve Branch 147 (6-1) from the ranks of the unbeaten, 36-31, to keep that race alive among three teams, while the top five teams in the Junior Boys all won to keep that race going.

In the other Senior Boys' games, the American Legion (6-1) dumped A-OK Tire (3-4), 49-39 and Video Vault (1-6) got its first victory of the season, 44-31, over the Sunniland Seniors (1-6).

In Junior Boys' play, Calvary Apostolic Temple (6-1) clobbered Sanford Ace Hardware (2-5), 54-24; Sanford

Does playing actually support studying?

Is participation in interscholastic athletics a privilege to be earned or a viable path to a better life?

Consider:

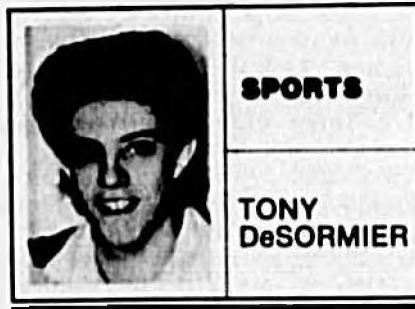

On Friday, 19-year-old Isaac Johnson, who quarterbacked Pasco County High School to the Class 3A state championship, was sentenced to four years' probation and 60 days in the Pasco County jail — to be served on weekends — for beating and robbing a pizza delivery man.

Johnson also has three other felonies on his record.

According to a report by the Associated Press, the light sentence came after friends and relatives testified for more than two hours that Johnson made a promise to his dying mother to stay out of trouble and to go to college.

The report said that Johnson had been offered a grant-in-aid to play at Florida A&M. Supposedly, the University of Central Florida also is planning to offer Johnson a scholarship.

Circuit Court Judge Lynn Tepper set tight restrictions on Johnson's probation: he must finish high school, maintain a C average, and attend college or vocational school after his graduation this summer. If he violates probation, he will be sentenced to seven years in prison.

SPORTS

Later Friday night, Johnson played in a varsity basketball game, leading Pasco County High past Zephyrhills.

Is this an example of kid getting a break from the justice system just because he is a gifted athlete; would the quarterback of an 0-10 team with no hopes of a college scholarship receive the same largess?

Or is it giving a kid another chance, a chance that happens to be in the form of athletics? Would anyone complain if, rather than having grants-in-aid offered for athletics, Johnson had financial aid from other sources in place to continue his education?

Finally, is society better served putting Johnson behind bars for an extended stay, increasing the odds that he will evolve into a worse burden on society? This is the fourth felony on Johnson's record; how many chances does one person deserve?

While preferring not to comment on Johnson's case, Oviedo High School principal A. Wayne Epps said that he feels athletics and other extracurricular activities can be important to keeping a borderline student in school as long as that student meets the appropriate academic standards and other guidelines.

"Athletics is a tremendous motivational factor in the welfare and development of the student," said Epps. "In many cases, extracurricular activities are what motivate a student to stay in school and achieve higher academic standards."

"The desire to compete or participate is the chief reason for some students to stay in school. As a result, they're able to go on to college, if they wish, and become a useful and productive member of society. And it's not just athletics. I've seen kids where band was their sole reason for staying in school; the music program was what they lived for."

Dr. Paul Haggerty, Seminole County's Superintendent of Schools, echoed Epps' comments, stressing that participation in extracurricular activities must be kept in perspective.

"Athletics are important for the total school atmosphere and can serve as an avenue out of a bad situation for some student athletes," said Dr. Haggerty. "But the greatest disservice we can do for student athletes is to give them the impression that they can get by with things that the rest of society can't get by with."

"When you look at programs of schools, the most successful programs are those that insist on high standards and high integrity. That's what you want coming through in all your activities. More students will be served better by insisting on high standards, integrity, and consistency for all."

Borders with interest

Herbaceous perennials continue to grow indefinitely

Herbaceous perennials borders can add color and interest to the landscape throughout the year if they are selected and used correctly. Once established, these plants require less maintenance than annual flowers, and can be a permanent part of your landscape.

Perennials are plants that continue growing indefinitely. The shrubs and trees in our landscapes are perennials, but these are woody perennials. Herbaceous perennials are plants that have soft, succulent plant tissue with little or no secondary, woody tissue. Some herbaceous perennials die back to the ground during parts of the year, but the roots survive and the foliage eventually reappears. Other herbaceous perennials are evergreen.

Plants which grow from bulbs, corms, tubers or other types of underground storage systems are also herbaceous perennials.

The herbaceous perennials listed in Circular OH-68 (available at the Agriculture Center) are proven performers in central Florida gardens. Many other perennials exist, but limited research has been done to evaluate their adaptability to central Florida's climate and soils. Don't be afraid to experiment and try a few of your favorites; they may do fine here in our Garden of Eden.

Herbaceous perennials are used to best advantage when they are planted in masses. Large groups of plants provide bold displays of color that are much more pleasing and effective than when individual plants are placed here and there. Evergreen shrubbery provides a beautiful backdrop for large drifts or clumps of herbaceous perennials.

Note the mature size, flowering season and flower color of each perennial you select. Does the foliage die back when freezes occur? How much sunlight does it require? These factors determine how and where the plants should be used in the landscape or perennial garden. Few perennials bloom all year round, but you can select plants so that a succession of color is provided season after season. Blue Daze, Cuphea Heather and Bush Daisy are a few choices that can provide nearly year round color.

GARDENING

The most important step in establishing herbaceous perennials is preparing the planting bed. Most perennials will remain in the bed for several years without being divided or moved making proper soil preparation essential.

Sandy soils should be amended with organic matter such as manure, peat, compost or leaf mold. Apply several inches to the soil surface and work into the top 10 to 12 inches. This is a good time to have your soil tested to determine the pH. As you hopefully know, we will test your soil on Mondays and Thursdays of each week and make recommendations. The test is $1.50 per sample. Fertilizer should be thoroughly mixed into the bed, three pounds 8-8-8, two pounds 8-8-8, or 1 1/2 pounds 10-10-10 per 100 square feet. Another option is a slow release fertilizer such as Osmocote, one application of it will last two to three months. The amended soil should be leveled and moistened before planting.

Space the plants in the bed according to their mature size and to allow for cultivation between them. Plant them in the soil so that the top of the root ball is slightly above the ground line. Mulch heavily, at least two to three inches, with an organic mulch such as leaves, pine straw or wood shavings. A good thick mulch will conserve moisture, moderate soil temperatures, and discourage weeds. Do not allow the mulch to touch the base of the plants. Re-apply mulch every year.

Most herbaceous perennials require little maintenance. They should be fertilized at least four times during the growing season using the same rates mentioned above. Occasional pruning may be needed to remove dead flower spikes, unsightly leaves or to reduce plant size.

Division is the quickest and easiest method of multiplying most herbaceous perennials. Simply dig the plants and shake off the soil. It will be apparent where to separate the plants into smaller units having roots and leaves. The best time to divide plants is after the blooming season or during milder times of the year. Perennials which are frozen back to the ground may be lifted, divided, and reset at that time with good results. Some perennials can be grown from seed or cuttings as well.

Herbaceous perennials should be inspected frequently for insects and diseases. If pests are detected early enough, control measures can be taken before the entire bed is infested. An infestation on a few plants can be controlled by hand-picking the insects or infested leaves. Herbaceous perennials add color, texture, form and excitement to the other landscape plants in our yards and they can be easy to grow and maintain. Start out with a small border and expand at will! For more information about herbaceous perennials call the Agriculture Center at 323-2500 Ext. 5558 or come by and see our newly installed perennial border.

Medical emergency no time for modesty

DEAR ABBY: I nearly choked on my breakfast when I read the letter from a Louisiana woman who thinks its "immoral" for medical personnel to treat the private parts of patients of the opposite sex.

If, as she claims, it is immoral, then all those people who have chosen to be doctors, nurses and medical technicians are immoral and should burn in hell for having healed all those sick people. Right?

ADVICE

To put it another way, if a man had a serious accident and his injuries were between his navel and his knees, and a medically trained woman was the first to arrive at the scene, she should just walk away and let him die?

Or, let us say that if your writer was the accident victim and her injuries were in the pelvic region and there was no female medical practitioner available, would she choose death in order to uphold her moral standards?

I have never read anything as ludicrous as that women's letter. I hope before she passes away, she will leave instructions with her loved ones to find an all-female mortuary to handle her remains.

If the signature "Shaking my head in disbelief in Nevada" is too long, you may sign me...

SHOCKED IN RENO
DEAR SNOCKED: If you had sat in my chair since 1958, you, too, would be shockproof. I am.

DEAR ABBY: The column you wrote about the importance of writing letters stirred up memories of all those lonely days and nights my husband and I were separated during World War II.

I'm glad you emphasized the importance of writing letters to each other every day. It not only helped to keep us out of trouble, it also paid off with a bonus more precious than you can imagine, because when we finally met again after a long separation, both of us were more at ease because of the daily communication we had during our separation.

My husband was away from me and our three children during the war for 3 1/2 years, with only one short leave at home. When he came home for good, it was as though he had never been away. He knew just what to expect of the children and me, and we also knew what to expect of him.

It was hard for me to understand why so many families had serious problems communicating when their men came home. Then it dawned on me what the difference was: There had been very little communication during the soldier's long absence. Maybe just a few hurried postcards with a few sentences — "Love you...miss you...kiss the kids" (from him) — and from her, longer letters, filled with all the problems, sacrifices, hard times and loneliness she was feeling.

The daily letters were the cement that held our family together.

EMILY, TAYLORSVILLE, KY.

DEAR READERS: Who said this? "I stopped believing in Santa Claus when I was 6 years old. My mother took me to a department store to see Santa, and Santa asked me for my autograph."

None other than Shirley Temple, who is now Mrs. Charles A. Black and will celebrate her 65th birthday in April.

Try exercises for 'pot-belly'

DEAR GOTT: By following a low-fat diet and exercising moderately (brisk daily walking), I am able to maintain a reasonably slim body. However, my belly protrudes and sags ridiculously. Not only is it unsightly, it's uncomfortable. What would be the best form of exercise for me? I should add that I had one Caesarian birth and a hysterectomy. Could either of these have contributed to the dilemma?

DEAR READER: Unfortunately, pregnancy stretches the abdominal muscles, which can lead to a protuberant belly as a woman ages. Also, abdominal surgery will exacerbate the problem because scar tissue tends to stretch and thin with age.

You can strengthen your abdominal muscles by performing two simple exercises: Sit-ups (with bent knees) will tighten the upper abdomen, leg lifts will condition the lower.

Remember, too, that most "middle-age bulge" is not caused by sagging muscles. Rather, as we age, we tend to deposit fat beneath the skin of the belly; this deposit exists irrespective of muscle tone.

If you are truly bothered by your "pot-belly" appearance, you might consider cosmetic surgery to remove unwanted tissue. A plastic surgeon can advise you. However, the exercises are cheaper, so you might want to try them first.

Should you decide to have surgical repair, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "An Informed Approach to Surgery." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to

P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder
An anonymous person once said, "What he doesn't know would make a library anybody would be proud of."

Well, anyone who knows everything in my bridge library would make a partner anybody would be proud of. For sure he would know the correct way to play today's four-spade contract.

West guessed well, leading a club. After East has played three rounds of the suit, how should South continue?

East opened with a weak no-trump, which is popular in those parts of the world that used to be known as the British Commonwealth. South overcalled in his major; North had an automatic raise to game.

South must assume the trumps are breaking 3-2, but he must avoid walking into a trump promotion. The wrong play is a spade to dummy's king. If East can win that and lead the 13th club, the defenders must get the trump promotion.

If East has only two spades, declarer can succeed by leading a spade honor from his hand at trick four. But with the given distribution, East wins with the ace and leads the last club. West's ruff effects the trump promotion.

The correct play is to cross to dummy with a diamond before leading a low trump to the queen. (The diamonds must be 3-2. If West had a singleton, surely he would have led it at trick one.) Finally, play the spade jack from hand. Now the contract is ensured. You can ruff the 13th club low in hand, overruffing in the dummy if necessary.

Look for a line of play that will work whatever the lie of the cards.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Feb. 16, 1993

In the year ahead, you might have two sets of totally unrelated ambitions. Rest assured, however, that each will have a good chance of being gratified.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Strive to do favors for others today, but do so in a way that does not make them feel obligated. They will resent feeling indebted to you. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Keep a low profile in your group involvements today, rather than trying to run the show. You'll have a better time, and your friends will appreciate it if you're not the czar.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Guard against inclinations today to allow your pride to fight for something that could produce a hollow victory if you win. Be both discerning and rational.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) The views and opinions of those you'll be involved with today are as important to them as your own views are to you. If you want respect, you must first be respectful.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If you are presently involved in a joint venture where you are responsible for the greater portion of the costs, it's time you reevaluate this situation to see if you should get out.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If you have trouble in your personal relationships today, the fault could lie with you rather than with others. Be honest in your assessments regarding who is to blame.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Someone undeserving might attempt to pressure you into doing something for him or her today that you've refused to do in the past. If you comply, it would be a bad choice on your behalf.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Just because a friend of yours is on the outs with someone you like, don't let this jeopardize your relationship with the maligned pal. Be your own person and make your own judgments.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Make it a point not to bring problems that occur outside of your house into your home today. It isn't fair to subject family members to situations for which they're not responsible.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If you set yourself up as an authority on a special subject today, you should base your statements upon facts. You could run into someone who doesn't think you know what you're talking about.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Someone you like, but who is a poor risk, might press you for a loan today. If you feel you can't take the chance, have the guts to say "no."

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Partners could turn out to be a hindrance rather than a help today, so think twice before you involve someone else in something you're quite capable of taking care of on your own.
