Seminole Migrant Clinic Gets A Clean Bill Of Health

Cause Of Blaze Undetermined Brothers Die In Sanford House Fire

By BRITT SMITH Herald Staff Writer

It was one of those cruel quirks of fate that took the life of 42-year-old Clifford Fillinger Wednesday night.

He had driven down to Sanford from Huntington, W. Va. Sunday for a visit with his brother Stanley, 52, of 2406 Holly Ave. He had planned to head back home this weekend. But things changed and he will be staying in Sanford . . . forever. He will be buried here Saturday.

He and Stanley died in a fire at the elder Fillinger's rented one-story, cinderblock home about 9:30 p.m. The cause shame, too. It only took us about three year-old daughter Linda came down for a of the blaze has not been determined, but minutes to put out the fire." investigators say arson not suspected. "It looks from all indications like an accident," said Sanford Fire Cheif William Gailey.

Firefighters found the two men dead in the burning house, Stanley still sitting in a chair by a closed living room window, Clifford sprawled out on the floor near a bar off the dining area.

The flames were confined to the living room, but the house was full of thick, choking smoke, according to Gailey. "They were apparently overcome. It's a

A dozen firemen, two pumpers, a water tanker, and a rescue unit responded to the scene. Besides the two dead men, the only injury reported was to firefighter R.R. Picklesimer who cut his left wrist on some broken window glass. The gash required 10 stitches to close.

Wednesday's tragedy wasn't the first to come on the heels of a trip south for a member of the Fillinger family. Five years ago, just after Stanley had moved to Sanford from Warren, Mich., his 20-visit, but never made it back home, Headed north through Perry, Ga., she apprently fell asleep at the wheel and had a fatal collision with a bridge support, family members said.

Five years earlier, Stanley lost his four-year-old son, Buddy, to a brain tumor.

Death seems to come in five-year increments for Stanley Fillinger. His turn came Wednesday. His body will be returned to Warren this weekend to be buried with his children.

UP, UP AND AWAY

Sanford skies filled with color this morning as 700 helium balloons were loosed and floated into the clouds at Pinecrest Elementary School. Nine-year-old Earnestine Walton, a third grader at Pinecrest, seems to be comparing her hand-held halloon with the larger one on the grounds for the event. Part of a "Weekly Reader" contest, the students filled their balloons with messages and will wait to see which balloon travels the farthest.

Cowgirls Stick 'Em Up

LOS ANGELES (UPI) - Police say they finally caught a tough-talking 12year-old kid dressed like a cowgirl who robbed several banks with her mother by threatening to detonate a hand grenade. Investigators said the girl "appeared to be the brains behind the holdups." They said she was especially familiar with secret bank security measures.

The unidentified youngster, hermother, Carlee Susanne May, 37, and a third suspect, Richard Covington, 26, were charged with holdups at nine banks in suburban areas of Los Angeles.

The girl was held by juvenile authorities. A spokesman said a petition would be filed seeking to make her a ward of the court. Police said the mother and daughter, both dressed in Western "cowgirl" outfits, usually entered the banks together and threatened to set off what actually was a dummy hand grenade. Covington usually stayed outside in the getaway car, officers said. In a holdup last Tuesday at the West Los Angeles branch of Wells Fargo Bank, where $3,879 was stolen, the girl supposedly swore at the teller, then whispered, "I'll blow you and the bank up."

The suspects were arrested Wednesday afternoon following a robbery in Torrance, Callf.

council voted to buy and convert the old chamber of commerce building on Country Club Road and Lakeview Ave. into new municipal quarters. Price tag for the project is estimated at about $59,000. The money may come from the sale of 10 acres on Rinchart Road the city bought two years ago for $50,000 and which councilman Ray Fox said could fetch close to $200,000 on today's market. No target date for moving into the 54-

Heathrow development west of the city, As it did at its March 12 meeting, the council tabled the annexation, which has already received tentative approval, when City Attorney Gary Massey asked for a delay, but would not publicly reveal his reasons for doing so.

The city has been trying to annex Heathrow since July 1977, but has been stymied by adverse court rulings and opposition from the Jenö Paulucci family, principal Heathrow landowners.

Storer's competitor for the Lake Mary contract, Orange-Seminole Cablevision, already serves a small area of the city. Councilman Gene McDonald requested this be allowed to continue as an exception to the exclusive franchise.

Councilman Dick Fess also asked Storer representatives to extend service to 26 homes in the far north end of the city which earlier plans had suggested might be left out of the cable TV picture. Storer officials said every effort would be made. --- BRITT SMITH hall.

By DONNA ESTES Herald Stalf Writer

The Sanford Crime Laboratory, which serves the law enforcement agencies of seven Central Florida counties, may be moving to new and more spacious facilities within the next two years.

Gov. Bob Graham has included $4 million for a new crime lab for Central Florida in his budget submitted to the Legislature for approval.

State Sen. John Vogt, D-Cocoa Beach, said today he supports the plans for a new facility and favors it being built in Seminole County.

"This has a fairly good priority. It might depend on how far the state's money will stretch, but I am supporting it," he said. Vogt added he, as a member of the Senate appropriations committee, still must evaluate conflicting priorities.

"The Sanford lab is the busiest crime lab in the state system and has some capabilities other crime labs do not have," Vogt said.

Vogt personally toured the Sanford crime lab on Wednesday and said the staff there is extremely conscientious. Claude Trubey is supervisor of the Sanford facility.

While the laboratory is currently operating with 40 forensic science analysts in 11,000 square feet of space at the Sanford Airport, Trubey said the proposed facility will have nearly triple the space - 31,000 square feet.

Among the sites being considered for the re-location, Trubey said, are a 10-acre tract of city owned property located off Rinehart Road in Lake Mary and a site in the planned research park at the University of Central Florida.

State Rep. Robert Hattaway, D-Altamonte Springs, chairman of the Seminole Legislative Delegation, was one of the legislators who speerheaded the move, at the request of law enforcement personnel, state funding for the crime lab in 1975. He said today he would like to see the crime lab retained in Seminole County. "The lab is beneficial to law enforcement in this area." he said.

Hattaway said there is no question the current facility is too small, but he said he has been kept in the dark about plans for expansion.

And, he said, it will probably take another grass root organization by law enforcement to get the approval for the funding of a new facility.

"If I don't hear from those concerned with the crime lab soon. I'll contact them." Hattaway said.

State Rep. Bobby Brantley, R-Longwood, said he definitely would like to see the laboratory stay in Seminole County, but "the issue came to my attention only Thursday." He said he will tour the current facility before he can say whether that much additional space is needed.

Trubey said the budget as submitted calls for planning and site acquisition the first year and actual construction the second year.

The Sanford Crime Lab was created in 1970 by law enforcement agencies from the region in a move led by Sheriff John Polk. Its operation with only two employees was funded with federal money through the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration.

During its last year of local operation before being taken over by the state, it served 27 counties, Polk said today.

"Law enforcement must have a good crime lab to bust a case involving murder, rape and drugs. The Sanford Lab has good people, but it is under-staffed," Polk said.

The current facility is operating out of an all-steel warehouse and a three-section mobile building which was moved in from Pensacola three years ago, Trubey said.

There is a backlog of 900 to 1,000 cases in the lab now, Trubey said, only half as many cases as was back-logged six to eight months ago.

"The police departments cooperated to cut down the backlog," Trubey said, by calling back cases there was no longer any need to process. "The departments are now being selective in what they send us."

The laboratory sections include: toxicology, a limited number of poison cases, documents for handwriting and typewriting analysis, fire arms and tool marks section; latent finger prints, micro-analysis and trace evidence; serology and a recently added section works crime scenes in major cases involving rape, murder, kidnapping and recovery of bodies by use of a vapor detector.

Space Shuttle Readied For Pre-Launch Testing

CAPE CANAVERAL, (UPI) - After 21/2 years of delays, the space shuttle Columbia underwent its last major pre-launch test today - a fueling rehearsal to clear the way for its maiden flight as early as April 9.

Engineers began pumping liquid oxygen, kept at 297 degrees below zero Fahrenheit, into the shuttle's huge External fuel tank at 7:10 A.M. EST and followed 40 minutes later with the flow of even colder liquid hydrogen.

It was the first time both propellants were pumped into the 154-foot tail tank simultaneously - the primary purpose of the test.

A lunch control center spokesman said the exercise was proceeding smoothly, in sharp contrast to a similar fueling drill Wednesday.

Jane Doe's Memory Jogged

FORT LAUDERDALE, (UPI) - Amnesia victim "Jane Doe" - her recollection of the past jogged by a picture of the family dog - has her identity back today but doctors say she still needs months of treatment to regain her memory.

"Her treatment will continue. There is still a long way for her to go," psychiatrist Dr. Jesse Kaye said Thursday after the attractive young woman known for six months as Jane Doe had a tearful, storybook reunion with her parents, Andrew and Irene Tomiczek of Roselle, Ill. - and with her name: Cheryl Ann Tomiczek.

Kaye said it could be months before Ms. Tomiczek's regains her memory. "She'll be with us for a while," Florida State Hospital spokeswoman Jackie Baker baid.

Three were Haltian refugees who had arrived on a boat Feb. 14, requesting political asylum in the United States, officials said. Except for those sent to hospitals, all were confined to the North Krome Avenue Haitian refugee camp on the western outskirts of Miami.

Members of the Lackawanna Junior College baseball team know all about stealing bases. But they were on the wrong end of another kind of steal Thursday when someone broke into the team car and stole their uniforms.

The team arrived in Sanford from Pennsylvania late Wednesday night for five days of exhibition play, but hadn't even completed their first practice before someone made off with their uniforms.

According to a police report, the theft occurred between noon and 4:30 p.m. from the team's rented car which was parked outside Sanford Memorial Stadium on Mellonville Ave.

Taken were several jerseys, jackets and a pair of sneakers.

MOTORCYCLE COP HURT

City motorcycle police officer Lt. Doug Bishop will be out of action for about a week as a result of Wednesday' morning's crash in downtown Sanford.

Following the 11:45 a.m. wreck, Bishop, 34, was treated at seminole Memorial Hospital for a gash to his right elbow which required 18 stitches to close, and multiple cuts and bruises.

According to Florida Highway Patrol Trooper P.C. Wright, Bishop was heading east on First Street with blue lights and siren when a westbound Lincoln Continental driven by Dan DeBruyne, 75, of 711 E. First St., turned in front of him onto Magnolia Avenue.

Bishop was responding to a Lioplifting call at a downtown grocery store at the time of the accident.

DeBruyne was charged with failure to yield to an emergency vehicle,

HRS Asking Volunteers Provide Shelter Homes

Seminole County has an urgent need for foster care and temporary shelter homes for youngsters in crisis.

The state's Health and Rehabilitative Services office in the county is seeking volunteers to provide such homes, said Dr. Bryden Moon, HRS youth services counselor,

"There's a severe need in Seminole County that has just never been filled," Moon said.

Needed, in particular, he said, are homes to provide shelter for children in crises and foster or group homes to provide a family living experience to youngsters who may never have had such experience.

Moon said those providing such homes will receive training and guidance from HRS staff and some reimbursement for costs incurred.

He said he is encouraging any persons who think they might be interested in providing a foster, shelter or group home to call him at 322-1661, ext. 166, for further information.

"We'll explain the whole process," Moon said, emphasizing those making inquirles will not obligate themselves in any way.

Currently, he said, there is a need for at least 10 foster and 10 crisis homes.

Thatcher Asks For Spy Probe

LONDON (UPI) - Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, acknowledging the man who headed British counterintelligence for nine years was suspected of being a Soviet spy, ordered an inquiry to ensure the nation's security is not penetrated by double agents.

In a 12-minute statement to Parliament, Mrs. Thatcher said Thursday no evidence was found in two interrogations that former MI5 head Sir Roger Hollis was a Soviet spy. But she confirmed allegations in the Daily Mail newspaper he had been suspected of being a Soviet double agent.

She told Parliament an independent inquiry would review security procedures to guard against Soviet penetration of the intelligence service and other sensitive government departments such as the Foreign Office.

Mrs. Thatcher also said a book, "Their Trade is Treachery," alleging Hollis may have been a KGB mole contained inaccurate and distorted material. But the author who also wrote the Daily Mail stories, Chapman Pincher, said Mrs. Thatcher was "enormously and badly" misled in denouncing his book. He pointed out at a news conference Mrs. Thatcher did not deny the allegation about Hollis.

Mrs. Thatcher said the investigations of Hollis, who headed British counter-intelligence from 1956 to 1965, "did not conclusively prove" his innocence. Hollis died in 1973. "Indeed it is very often impossible to prove innocence," Mrs.

FBI Says It Has Suspects In Atlanta Child Slayings

ATLANTA (UPI) - FBI agents say they have suspects in three or four of the 20 black child murders, but have no single suspect in the "pattern killings" -those believed connected because of the killer's method.

The revelation late Thursday by FBI spokesman Ed Gooderham was the first time federal authorities have acknowledged having any suspects in the slayings of the 20 children and the disappearance of two others over the past 20 months.

"We have suspects in three or four of the killings," Gooderham said. He indicated however, these were all in cases authorities believe are isolated. "We have no single suspect in the pattern killings."

It appeared today a black exconvict from New York City, arrested last weekend for abducting a 9-year-old black youth in Beacon, N.Y., was not considered a zerious suspect in the Atlanta slavings.

United Mine Workers President Sam Church Jr., heading for West Virginia and Ohio to explain the contract to strikers, is getting a tongue-lashing from some miners and union officials who feel he bargained away job security.

Still, Church predicts two-thirds of the UMW's 100,000 soft-coal miners will vote Tuesday to ratify the pact and return to work by Thursday.

Enquirer Jury Gives Carol $1.6 Million Damages

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) - A teary-eyed Carol Burnett, thanking the jury, said her $1.6 million libel victory over the National Enquirer will encourage other celebrities considering legal battles against the supermarket tabloid.

The Enquirer intends to appeal. Iain Calder, president and editor of the tabloid, said the verdict would not change editorial policy.

"Our job is to provide our readers with interesting, informative and accurate articles," Calder said, "and that is what we will continue to do."

In the first libel case against the Enquirer ever to go to trial, a jury Thursday ruled the tabloid must pay $300,000 in compensatory damages and $1.3 million in punitive damages to Miss Burnett for a 65-word gossip item which amounts to $24,615.38 per word.

The March 13, 1973 item implied she was drunk in a Washington restaurant, saying she argued loudly with Henry Kissinger and spilled wine on a diner.

"If they had given me $1 plus carfare, I would have been happy, because it's the principle of the thing," the entertainer said. Asked what that principle was, Miss Burnett said, "Truth, truth is the principle."

Miss Burnett said she would donate her damages to a charity she will name later.

Enquirer attorney William Masterson said the "excessive" judgment was motivated by passion, not reason, on the jury's part. He will move for a new trial and appeal the judgment if that motion is not granted.

"The verdict was an affront to the First Amendment, and it cannot stand," Masterson said.

Asked how her victory would affect testimony. other celebrities, Miss Burnett replied: "I think it's going to give them courage."

The Enquirer's appeal was expected to center on the judge's ruling the publication is a magazine rather than a newspaper, and consequently not entitled to special protection under California law. About 5 million people read the Enquirer each week.

The jury deliberated 13 hours over a three-day period following eight days of

With tears in her eyes, Miss Burnett shook hands with the panelists, six women and five men, and thanked them profusely as they filed out of the jury box.

"After we weighed each word," said juror Eloise Williamson, "80 percent of them proved to be false. And even when he found out it was false, he (the Enquirer editor) went ahead and printed it. That was what swayed it. Not that she was Carol Burnett. We thought of her as one of us."

Oil Stockpile: A Vital Need

Among the welcome changes in Washington since the first of the year is a renewed commitment by the U.S. government to put some oil away for a rainy day.

The plan to build up a Strategic Petroleum Reserve dates back to the Ford administration, but on-again, off-again treatment of the program during the Carter years has left us with only onefourth as much crude oil in reserve as the timetable called for by 1980.

As of now, there are approximately 115 million barrels in the government reserve - the equivalent of about 20 days of imports, The reserve should contain five or six times as much to provide the intended protection against a serious interruption in foreign supplies. The Reagan administration says it hopes to add about 200,000 barrels a day this year and 230,000 barrels in a day in 1982.

Those are ambitious targets. The oil must be bought and paid for at a time when there is a tugof-war for every dollar in the federal budget. Further, the government does not want to purchase oil for the reserve at a rate that would drive up prices. The worldwide glut of oil, which is now softening prices on the spot market, is a welcome development that our reserve program should not disturb.

Mr. Reagan's determination to build up the reserve will not please the Arabs, for obvious reasons. It will blunt the effect of their "oil weapon" if they choose to use it again as they did with their embargo after the Yom Kippur war in 1973. But that is also the most imperative reason for enlarging the stock-pile at the most prudent and practical rate we can devise.

We need to buy two insurance policies against an interruption of oil from the unstable Middle East. One is the Rapid Deployment Force that can project U.S. military power into the region. The other is the Strategic Petroleum Reserve, and the more oil we have in it, the less chance that trouble in the Persian Gulf will demand military action for the sake of our national security.

The fact that this is Child Passenger Safety Week in Florida didn't help little Latasha Kelly, 4, of Orange Park or Kendra Brown, 3, and Valierie Green, 4, of Penny Farms.

They were killed Monday when the car that was transporting them to a Head Start program went out of control and overturned three times. The three preachoolers were thrown from the car and crushed when it rolled over them.

Had the children been restrained inside the vehicle in safety seats, chances are they would have walked away from the accident unhurt. The driver and seven other children, who luckily were not thrown from the car, were uninjured. Incidents like this all too often, all too tragically, underscore what child passenger safety experts have been saying for a number of years: children riding in automobiles should be restrained in a safety seat or other device that will prevent them from being thrown from the car or impacting dash boards and windshields with the incredible forces produced when two vehicles crash - even at low speeds.

The state Department of Community Affairs reports that currently in Florida approximately 90 percent of young children ride unprotected. At the same time, studies by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration indicate that proper use of child restraints could reduce fatalities by 90 percent and injuries by 80 per-

Governor Bob Graham, in proclaiming this Child Passenger Safety Week, points out that injuries suffered by children in auto accidents are a major cause of epilepsy, paraplegia, disfigurement and other permanent mental and physical disabilities. In fact, emergency room physicians say traffic accidents are children's number one health problem, responsible for more pediatric mortality beyond the first year of life than the four worst childhood diseases combined.

In Florida in 1979, 35 children were killed and 4,454 injured in car crashes, an average of 6 killed or injured per 100 motor vehicles. In Seminole County in 1979, sixty-three children were injured, 5.6 per 100 motor vehicles. Dade County was worst in the state, with one killed and 994 injured at a rate of 9.4 per 100 cars.

If the experts are correct, more than 3,500 of those statewide injuries and deaths could have been prevented if restraints were used. More than fifth of those in Seminole County. Why then are so few children provided this measure of protection?

There are lots of myths and excuses, but none stand up to scrutiny. Groups promoting child passenger safety say most responsible parents are persuaded to use restraints when given the facts. A number of such groups statewide are attempting the dissemination of such information, but they lack funds to do the job. The governor's proclamation is a step in the right direction. But it is not good enough.

State lawmakers should immediately begin working on laws to protect child passengers. Rhode Island last year passed such a law; it requires that any child three years old or younger riding in the front seat of an auto be restrained by a device approved by the U.S. Department of Transportation. And Rhode Island lawmakers admit the law is just a start. Tennesses has also passed a law requiring the use of child restraints. Michigan is a leader in child passenger safety research and public education.

What is being done in Florida? Unfortunately this state spends more money printing tourist guides than in all its efforts to promote child passenger safety, according to Mikall Bowen, president of the association of women highway safety leaders.

The governor's Child Passenger Safety Week proclamation is a step in the right direction. But so far it falls far short of its promise to "do everything possible" to ensure every child passenger is protected.

More can be done, beginning with child restraint requirements for all who transport children to schools, day care centers and the like. The governor and state lawmakers know this. They should act now. It's already too late for Latasha, Kendra and Valierie.

Close Labor Loopholes

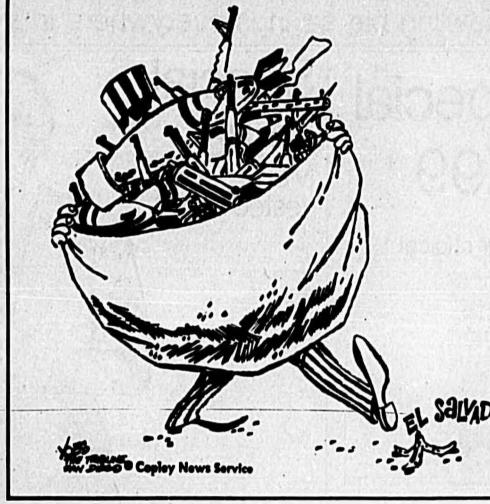

WASHINGTON - The end justifies the means-even when the means include threats to life and property, intimidation, coercion, sabotage and other forms of violence.

That extraordinary philosophy has been embraced by the U.S. Supreme Court in a ruling that, in effect, exempts labor unions from prosecution under a federal statute that is supposed to prohibit any form of extortion in interstate commerce.

The 1946 law, known as the Hobbs Act, established a maximum penalty of a $10,000 fine and 20 years imprisonment for anyone who "in any way or degree obstructs, delays or affects commerce... by robbery or extortion, or attempts to conspire to do so, or commits or threatens physical violence to any person or property ...

Although the intent of the law appears to be unmistakable, the Supreme Court carved a huge loophole in the statute when it handed down a 1973 decision in a case involving violence during a strike against a utility company.

RUSTY BROWN Computers Going Into Bedrooms?

Who would think that the computer would find its way into the bedroom?

But that's what may happen with a new electronic birthcontrol device that can accomplish three great things for women:

- Tell us when we can get pregnant.

- Spare us unwanted pregnancies. - Solve, once and for all, the hopeless rift between women about abortion.

The bedside solution is a computerized electronic sensor that records a woman's body temperature and flashes a green light when it's safe for sex.

A team of Florida and British scientists developed the sensor and named it (what else?) a sexometer. The name sounds like a joke, but its inventors seriously claim that it takes the guesswork out of birth control - for less than $40.

I'm counting on it for an additional bonanza. It could put an end to the irreconcilable differences, both political and religious, between two groups of women: those who call themselves pro-life and ----- vigrously oppose abortion and those who call themselves pro-choice and defend abortion as an option. In the eight years since the Supreme Court's right-to-abortion decision, it has pained me to see women pitted against women. Sadder still is that despite all the persuasive arguments for and against, all the protest marches and mass demonstrations, minds remain unchanged and feet are still firmly planted in ideological concrete.

What's The Rush?

It is not necessary for the Central Intelligence Agency or the Federal Bureau of Investigation to violate the constitutional rights of Americans, either in this country or abroad, in order to deal with the threat of international terrorism.

President Reagan is likely to revise Presidential Executive Order 12036, which was signed in January 1978 by former President Carter. Congress had failed to write a legislative -charter" for this country's intelligence comunity. So the Carter order is the central cument governing U.S. intelligence activities. It grew out of the revelations of abuses by the IA and the FBI during the Nixon years. Many strictions in the Carter order were originally posed by President Ford in 1976, based on the commendations of a presidential commission eaded by Vice President Nelson Rockefeller.

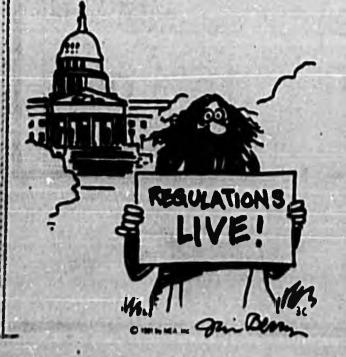

The CIA has suffered from a morale problem and a bad public image. Its effectiveness must be increased.

But the first draft of a new executive order, repared by an anonymous working group of fficials from various intelligence agencies, would relax current restrictions on activities lirected at Americans - searches, surveillance ind infiltration by informers. The draft has not been made public but concerns about its direction have surfaced.

Adm. Bobby R. Inman, deputy director of the JIA, FBI Director William Webster and Attorney General William French Smith have expressed such concerns.

There is no need for hasty, huggermugger action in this area. President Reagan should proceed slowly, making the proposed changes public and allow time for congressional hearings before final action.

BERRY'S WORLD

Hobbs Act, were indicted on charges of firing high-powered rifles at electrical transformers, blowing up a transformer substation and draining oil from a transformer. In a strained interpretation of the law's legislative history, the high court ruled 5-4 that the prosecution was improper because "the act does not apply to the use of force to achieve legitimate labor ends."

At another point in its extraordinary decision, the Supreme Court emphasized that it could find no precedent to "uphold the theory that the act proscribes the use of force to achieve legitimate collective bargaining demands."

In other words, any action or conduct (notably "the use of force") is legal if it is undertaken in the name of officially sanctioned labor-union organizing efforts.

Only the labor movement's most zealous apologists would deny that violence, coercion and extortion are a serious problem within a number of unions.

"Organized crime in organized labor is probably the most serious problem in the criminal field today," one senior Justice Department official said several years ago. "I can name four national unions now in the hands of hoodlums."

One suggestion of the scope of the violence involved comes from the Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, which issues an annual report that classifies by motive all bombings and other incidents involving explosives.

In the "labor-related" category (which includes employer as well as employee violence) the estimated value of property damage in 1978 and 1979, the most recent years for which information is available, totaled almost $4 million.

Efforts to close the unwarranted exemption granted by the Supreme Court through rewriting the law have been thwarted in Congress for years because the House and the Senate have been controlled by Democrats unwilling to antagonize the unions that provide most of the financial support for their campaigns.

Stockman In Demand

WASHINGTON (UPI) - David Stockman. David Stockman - It's the highest rated show on Capitol Hill these days, as the young budget director travels through the halls of Congress spreading the gospel of the Reagan administration.

Some say the show may be suffering from overexposure, but others clamor for more personal appearances by the former twoterm congressman from Michigan.

Stockman's roadshow is unmatched in recent years by any other administration official, least of all by a budget director.

Bert Lance, the Carter administration's illfated budget director, spent a good deal of time on Capitol Hill, but mostly trying to explain the tangled financial affairs that eventually led to his resignation.

Most budget directors do their work downtown and leave it to others to testify before Congress. Stockman has agreed not only to testify before the full committees of the House and Senate, but even goes so far as to appear before subcommittees - of which there are 189, as he ruefully noted last week.

Almost every working day since early February has seen Stockman at the Capitol testifying before committees, having breakfast or luncheon meetings with members of congress, or giving informal briefings. In all those contacts he explains why the administration's drastic budget cuts are needed and how the country will - in the long run be better for them.

Stockman is in such great demand because he is the chief architect of the massive budget cuts Congress is being asked to approve.

Cabinet secretaries are also called to testify, but most members of Congress feel Stockman is the one calling the shots. And this view has been reinforced by the poor performance of several Cabinet secretaries who have testified before committees.

Stockman, along with Secretary of State Alexander Haig and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, come across as the most knowledgeable and forceful members of the Reagan team, while some of the other Cabinet level officials seem to be struggling to keep up with the frenetic budget-slasher.

One of the most frequent questions put to Cabinet secretaries deals with whether they had anything to say about the cuts ordered in their own departments.

"Did you get your marching orders one by one," one Cabinet officer was asked last week.

"That's not what happened," insisted the secretary. He said there had been "give and take" in the budget discussions, "but sometimes matters had to go before the president."

The persistent impression is that Stockman usually prevailed in those cases, and thus he is the one to answer questions from members of Congress.

That impression is reinforced by the fact that Stockman goes before the various congressional committees prepared to field those quesions by himself.

Last week, Stockman went to a subcommittee hearing accompanied by just one alde. The day before that same subcommittee saw a Cabinet secretary show up with 17 assorted aldes and deputies.

Stockman is an able defender of the administration's economic program, but his appearances on the Hill do not always go smoothly. Under intense and hostile questioning by Rep. Parren Mitchell, D-Md., a leader of the Congressional Black Caucus, Stockman was moved to shouting.

And last week, after about an hour of answering questions, Stockman had to leave to attend a Cabinet meeting at the White House, But Rep. Mary Rose Oakar, D-Ohio, complained she had not had a chance to ask her questions.

"Either he can stay for a bulk of time or we can just forget it and we can vote the budget down immediately," she said.

As a reporter through the '70s, I often interviewed leaders on both sides of the abortion battle. Each time, I felt I wrote fairly. But each time, the opposing team cried "foul" and wrote letters of complaint to the editor.

The deeply-entrenched, smoldering feelings were certainly apparent in last fall's presidential campaign, when candidate Ronald Reagan was characterized as antiabortion. And now, sensing a popular mandate, the pro-lifers are not wasting any time making gains and friends in high places. The Human Life Amendment, which would ban all abortions, was introduced in Congress within days of the inauguration.

A few weeks later, the Chicago United Way came under fire from the anti-abortion guard for giving financial support to Planned Parenthood.

Such attacks are heating up the battle anew.

In such an impasse, the only way to solve the unsolvable is with something that mullifies the issue. Could the sexometer be it? It is a petite electronic thermometer (called a sensor) that a woman pops in her mouth each morning. The sensor transmits her body temperature to a miniature micro-chip computer that digests and stores the daily information.

I don't really understand any of that, but I do know what a green light means, and that's what comes on during the "safe" period in a woman's cycle - the days she can't conceive. The device has been proved 100 percent accurate on initial tests with 500 women.

Billions Lost In Phony Purchases

WARHINGTON - The Air Force is in line for a $14 billion budget increase in 1962. But a far smaller amount would do if the Air Force brans would only clean out the fraud and corruption that eat up billions of the taxpayers' dollars each year. The danger of throwing a few more megabucks at the generals and admirals is that they'll interpret the budgetary largesse as approval of the sloppy way they've been spending the public's money.

As another of my continuing reports on waste in the Pentagon, I'll focus today on the privately operated supply stores at Air Force bases, from which the ervice must buy spare perts and other hardware Mems.

The contractors have been ripping off the Air Force for years and getting away with it, possibly because of official connivance. There have been 41 separate investigations of the supply stores since 1977, yet for some reason the Justice Department has taken a ho-hum attitude toward the evidence of criminal misconduct.

A classified government report reviewed by my associate Indy Badhwar details the ripolis. Here are some of the more outrageous examples:

- A single International Harvester panel truck at one air base supposedly required the following inventory of replacement parts: 45 spark plugs in six months; two starters and two alternators in two months: a new twobarrel carburstor in March 1980, a two-barrel carburetor kit the same month and a fourbarrel carburetor kit three weeks later. Where the staff went is anybody's guess.

- A 1978 Chevrolet pickup truck was billed for eight new shock absorbers during a twomonth period when it was driven 3,000 miles.

- A firetruck supposedly required five new oil filters, though it had been driven only 199 miles.

- Twenty-five new spark plugs were purchased for one 1978 Carysler Volare sedan during a six-month period — enough for three or four complete changes with one plug left OVEC.

- A Chevy step van apparently required four new water pumps in eight months - yet none was replaced under the vendor's oneyear warranty, "Procedures broke down," officials lamely told investigators.

- At one base, 53 percent of all parts sold to the Air Force did not match the items listed on the sales slips. For example, an airconditioner compressor described on the sales slip as new was clearly identifiable as rebuilt.

- Investigators found that "sweetheart" companies were used to provide phony inflated price lists for the supply stores and to submit duplicate involces to enable the stores to bill the Air Force twice for the same item.

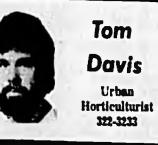

- The Air Force has paid its supply store proprietors $78 for a $47 carburetor, $40 for a $21 muffler, $2,100 for a $1,050 transmission, $21 for a $12 water pump, $12 for $6 concrete reinforcing rods, and $25 for $5 lock mechanisms.

If the Air Force is in such urgent need of funds, it might start by shooting down its supply store prices out of the wild blue yon-

Grow Exotic Staghorns With Ease

One of the most unusual and exotic plants you can grow in Florida is the Staghorn Fern. And, even though this plant is called a fern, it doesn't look anything like most ferns you're probably familiar with. The staghorn is an epiphytic, or air plant, that grows on the bark of trees, in baskets, or attached to pieces of thee fern or wood. Its leaves are long and leathery, and can be either broad or narrow. Leaves may be v-shaped, pointed, or even resemble a pair of antlers, which is how the plant got its name.

The staghorn is native to Australia and New Guinea but it grows very well in our area of Florida.

Growing staghorn ferns isn't complicated, but you will need to keep certain cultural factors in mind. These plants are sensitive to a lack of drainage, to low temperatures, and to low humidity. For the plant to thrive, it needs to have warm, moist air, and a location that's shielded from full sun.

Staghorn ferns are usually grown on blocks of wood or in hanging baskets, but before you attach them to the block or basket, you need to provide a porous and spongy surface, such as peatmoss, or spaghnum moss for the fern to root on. These materials will also keep moisture in the plant. The fern can then be attached to the wood block or basket with wire. Staghorn ferns also grow very well on the osmuda fern root.

All staghorn ferns grow best in high temperatures... at least 60 to 70 degrees farenheit. Some varieties, the common staghorn for example, can tolerate temperatures as low as fifty degrees. The common staghorn is also better able to withstand lower humidity than most varieties.

So, it is a good choice for indoor growing conditions. If you're growing another staghorn variety, however, such as the "gaint." or the "triangle," you need to place it in a shady, damp place, and maintain the humidity by syringing or spraying periodically. Staghorn ferns should be fertilized during the summer months. However, since their growth is relatively slow, only a small amount of fertilizer should be applied. Usually, a common house plant fertilizer diluted to half strength is sufficient. Staghorn respond very well to frequent spraying or syringing with water. In fact, you can syringe them several times a week, or everyday, if you have the time. During the winter months, however, the plants should be "dried off" slightly, and allowed to rest. Watering the plant during the winter months can cause spotting of the leaves and often, severe rotting to the crown. Large staghorns are also very easy to propagate. Simply cut off the small off-shoots or pups that the plant produces and attach them to their own growing medium. such as the osmunda tree fern root, or spaghnum moss, or something similar.

Amaranth Order Conducts Installation

Mrs. Homer (Eula) Scott, Longwood, and Howard Phelps, Altamonte Springs, were installed as Royal Matron and Royal Patron in the Order of Amaranth at the Masonic Temple, Casselberry.

About 75 witnessed the impressive ceremony by members of Seminole Court No. 59 who were dressed in formal, floor-length white gowns and tuxedos. Mrs. Scott was crowned by Mrs. Arthur (Marjorie) Putnam, the 1980 Royal Matron and given her Robe of Office by Mrs. John (Ruth) Carroll, the past Supreme Royal Matron.

The installing officer was John Carrol, past Supreme Royal Patron, Orlando.

The Installing Marshall was Mrs. Odell (Eleanor) Parramore, Past Grand Royal Matron and her aide was her husband, Odell Parramore, past Grand Patron, of Tampa. The Grand Royal Matron and Patron are the head of the Amaranth Order in the State of Florida: the Supreme Royal Matron and Patron are the leaders of the World Orders of the Amaranth.

. The main function of the Amaranth Order, according to Mrs. Scott, is to help take care of residents in the Masonic Home. The Masonic Home in St. Petersburg has 100 women, widows of Masons, and 46 Masons at the present time. Last year the local Amaranth Order gave two air conditioners to the home. Following the installation ceremony, refreshments were served.

Mrs. Charles (Pat) Howlett, Iris Drive, Casselberry, has been busier than ever since her retirement from nursing at Winter Park Memorial Hospital after 22 years service.

She went to work in 1958 and worked the 11 to 7 shift in the Obstetrics Department. This gave her an opportunity to be with her seven children during the day. All have left home except her youngest son, Pete, who is a student at Seminole Community College.

Both she and her husband belong to the Central Florida Mineral and Gem Society which has been a delightful hobby for both. They say they are looking forward to the

Barbecue To Aid Center

A chicken barbecue for the benefit of the Christian Sharing Center will be held Saturday from 1 to 6 p.m. The barbecue is being sponsored by the participating churches and will be served from Holy Cross Church, 410 South Magnolia Ave.

Tickets are now on sale at all churches and the Christian Sharing Center office at a cost of $3 for adults and $1.50 for children under 12.

The Christian Sharing Center serves the community and daily gives aid and comfort to the needy in the area.

DEAR ABBY: My husband just celebrated his 50th birthday, He's a physician who tells all his male patients who reach 50 to "slow down." If they smoke, he orders them to quit or cut down, but he's a two-pack-a-day man.

He puts all his overweight patients on diets, but he is considerably overweight himself and can't stay on a diet for two days. He insists that daily exercise is a must, but he doesn't exercise at all. He says that an annual vacation away from one's daily work is essential to good health, but he hasn't had a vacation in six years. And this will floor you: He wants all his patients to have a thorough checkup every year, but the last one he had was 12 years ago. What's wrong with him, and how can I get through to

DOCTOR'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: He's human. He finds advice much easier to give than to take. You can get through to him (maybe) by insisting that he consult a colleague for a checkup. And if he refuses, ask him to keep paying those life insurance premiums, so you and your next husband can retire in luxury. Cruel? Not really. Sometimes we have to be cruel to be kind.

DEAR ABBY: You recently quoted G.K. Chesterton, who said, "The truly great person is the one who makes every person feel great."

May I share an anecdote that illustrates that point beautifully: In Queen Victoria's time, a young woman had a good fortune of being escorted to dinner by William E. Gladstone, who was considered one of the most brilliant statesmen of the 19th century. On the following evening, the same young lady was escorted by Benjamin Disraeli, novelist, statesman and twice prime minister of Great Britain.

When asked for her impression of these two great rivals, she replied, "After an evening with Gladstone, I thought he was the most brilliant man I'd ever met. After an evening with Disraeli, I thought myself to be the most fascinating woman in the world!" A.H.C. BERWICK, MAINE

DEAR ABBY: A gay friend of ours has announced his intention to marry. In speaking with his intended bride, it is obvious that she unaware of her flance's homosexuality.

Should my husband or I discuss this with the gay groom? Or do you advise us to inform the unsuspecting bride?

FRIEND OF BOTH

DEAR FRIEND: A homosexual is not likely to marry. In all probability, your friend is not "gay," he is bisexual, in which case he is able to function equally well with both sexes.

Many bisexuals choose to go the heterosexual route, so since your friend has obviously made this choice, to discuss it with him would be presumptuous, and to discuss It with the bride would be meddlesome. Back off.

Florida State Players Charged

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — Six separately with one count of aiding and trafficking in about $13,000 worth of Florida State University football players and a former teammate have been formally charged with felonies in connection with merchandise stolen from a department store.

State Attorney Don Modesitt, who placed the charges, said the defendants will be arraigned next Monday.

The former player, Robert Harris, 19, was an employee of the Maas Brothers store. He was charged with trafficking in abetting Harris in retail theft, a thirddegree felony carrying a maximum sentence of five years in prison and $5,000, the prosecutor said.

The accused players include Ron Simmons, 21, an All American noseguard, and two other seniors who started for the fifth-ranked Seminoles last season, tailback Sam Platt, 22, and offensive tackle Ken Lanier, ?1.

The others were junior fullback said Harris stole an estimated $27,000 goods from the store, Modesitt said. The players were accused of "intent to deprive the merchant of the full retail value" of one television apiece, except for Lanier who was charged with possessing two televisions and Young who allegedly acquired a recorder as well as a TV. When the seven were arrested on March 11, police and store detectives

Burger King MVP's

Lake Howell's Bruce Brightman and Lyman's Sudie Ferritto as Most Valuable Players headed Burger King's All-County basketball team presented Wednesday night at Westmonte Recreation Center in Altamonte Springs.

Joining Brightman on the boys team were Semanole's Steve Grace, Lyman's Neal Gillis and Antoine Lemon, Oviedo's Kurt Kline, Ronnie Murphy and Bill Burgess along with Lake Brantley's Tommy Moths.

Seminole's girls team placed three first team members along with Ferritto. Point guard Johnnie Bennett, Robin Riggins and Tony Hardy were all accorded first team honors. They were joined by Lyman's Vikki McMurrer, Oviedo's fine freshman Fayetta Robinson and Jonkeeta Wiggins along with Lake Brantley super sophomore Rhonda Vasquez.

The athletes were feted with Burger King Whoppers and Superintendent Bob Hughes presented the "Coach of the Year" awards to Oviedo's Dale Phillips and Lake Brantley's Willie Richardson. Oviedo's Burgess received the Evening Herald Spotlight scoring award, while teammate Murphy received the rebounding award. Lake Howell's Tim O'Shaughnessy was awarded a plaque

Malfunctioning Van Can't Keep Seminole From Perfect Night

It may have been an all-time first for an award banquet in Florida.

Every boy and girl basketball player feted by Burger King for their accomplishments in Seminole County was in attendance.

But not without its anxious moments. Coach Cheryle Klein's Seminole Contingent, first slowed by a softball game in Apopka, and later by a malfunctioning automobile, made it just in time for their plaques.

"Spend a little now to

After Johnnie Bennett, Tony Hardy, Cathy Jones and Robins Riggins filed by for their honors, Klein was questioning the reliability of husband Bill's van.

"We were right underneath I4 when it quit the second time," fumed Cheryl. "After we leave here we have to push it to get it started." Sounds like one too many beach runs to me, Bill.

Getting back to the 100 per cent attendance, however, this is indeed a feather in Burger King's cap. No doubt the fact that Whoppers were being served helped the showing, but the athletes also deserve a pat on the back for reliability.

How many awards banquets have you attended where the coach will call out a name, only to be greeted by a smattering of applause and a missing athlete.

The coach then hems and haws about the jock "probably had to work or was sitting up with a sick friend."

It was also encouraging to see the towering figure of Seminole County School Superintendent Bob Hughes make the festivities. And Hughes responded on one day's notice. That's quite an accomplishment for any politician.

Hughes was introduced by Lake Brantley Assistant Principal Tony Mandeville, who coached Hughes as an aspiring forward at Bluefield State. 4

As to not date Tony too bad, he was only 24 years old at the time. Hughes, though, wasn't going to miss an opportunity, he professed to being "just six years old."

Hughes also ran into an old student of his - Ronnie Murphy - then a third grader at Lawton Elementary. When Hughes asked the all-around Oviedo cage standout if he remembered him, Murphy replied,

"Yeah, you're the guy that used to beat me." After the laughing died down, Hughes seized the opportunity to talk to the attentive group about the importance of athletics and the direction that it had given to his life.

"I feel that Seminole County is one of the top areas in the state for facilities and with the completion of Lake Mary I hope it will be on the top anywhere," Hughes told me between awards.

With the enthusiasm shown by Hughes and the rest of the athletes and coaches Wednesday night, that day may not be too far away.

Disgruntled Bucs Seek Vengeance

After being soundly thrashed in an earlier basketball meeting, a disgruntled and revenge-seeking band of Tampa Bay Bucs will return to Seminole High School for a rematch Tuesday, Arpil 7 at 7:30 p.m.

Due to a sellout for the last game, Seminole Business Manager Gay Alling encourages fans to take advantage of the $2 advance sales price. They will be $3 at the door.

Tickets may be purchased from Fighting Seminole students, who are out selling the ducats or by calling the high school at 322-4352 (extention 232) between 7:30 a.m. and 3 p.m.

Tribe faculty members expected to participate are Bill Payne, Lamar Richardson, Bobby Lundquist, Jerry Posey and Roger Beathard.

save a lot.

"I would say that any time you can spend a little money now to save a lot of money over a long period it's a pretty good investment. And that's how I feel about insulation and those other energy-saving features in our house," says Mr. Robert McMahon of Cocoa. He and his wife, Jean, estimate they save $30 to $40 a month because of their initial investment in the Watt-Wise Living¹⁰ package at the time they built their home.

What's a Watt-Wise¹¹⁴ package? It's a combination of features that meet FPL's energy-saving standards and can be easily included in the construction of a new home. Over a period of years they can save you substantially more than they cost. Naturally, how much you save will depend on your lifestyle and conservation efforts.

Watt-Wise homes have cost-saving features like extra ceiling and wall insulation, solar or heat-recovery units for water heating, a higher-efficiency air conditioner or heat pump. Power savers like fluorescent lighting and a microwave oven, and thermally efficient windows and doors, with glass areas planned to minimize heat build-up.

Today, there are many ways to save on electricity. without giving up comfort. You'll find them in FPL's Watt-Wise Living Program. Today, it's one of the wisest investments you could make. Stop by your local FPL office and pick up a free brochure.

DEAR DR. LAMB - I have heard that exercise is good for your heart. Some of my girlfriends have tried to encourage me to jog with them but that really isn't my cup of tea. I'd rather do something more interesting. I'm thinking of taking up aerobic dancing. Will this be good exercise for my heart? Just what does exercise do for your capability without straining heart? I can see where logging or dancing would be good for your legs when you that appeals to you more. work your leg muscles but what about the heart muscle?

One of the first things an aspiring bridge player learns is to return his partner's suit. It is mighty good general practice, but there is no need to overdo it. Once in a while you will do better to strike on your own.

Take today's hand as an example. You sit East and your partner opens the deuce of spades. You take your ace and South follows with the three. If you lead back a spade, declarer will attack diamonds. He will lose a finesse of his jack to your queen, but will proceed to romp off with nine tricks. There is no need for this to happen to you. You can proceed on your own and lead a low heart. All your partner needs for you to establish your heart suit is to hold three to the king or the queen. You lead your heart, West produces the king and leads a small heart back. You must take your ace right away. Don't make a mistake and duck. If you do, South might cash his black suit winners and throw you in with your ace to make you lead away from your queen of diamonds.

You are sure to get in with that card. Just make sure you can't be made to lead from it. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

Motorcycle Methods: 4-H To Offer Instruction

By CINDY MOOY Herald Staff Writer Vroom, Vroom, Va-rooooommmm

Have you ever seen a small terror of a child tearing down a sidewalk or driveway on his tricycle screaming that sound? Or a kid on a bicycle with playing cards clothes-pinned to the spokes for similar effect? Or perhaps you have heard a parent's agony and fear expressed when a teenager pleads for a motorized bike.

If you have, you have seen the varied effects of youth's fascination with the motorcycle, that two-wheeled vehicle that brings economical transportation and thrills to some people and terror and annoyance to others.

To suit both those who want to ride motorcycles and those who fear them, the Seminole County 4-H will sponsor in April a course on the correct and safe way to handle the machines.

Open to anyone age 15 or above, the 20-hour course will be intensive and begin with the basics, said Fred Roberts, 4-H program assistant. For people who have never or seldom ridden a motorcycle, the Motorcycle Rider Course will include everything from 'where's the starter?' to how to turn and shift body weight.

"They'll start at 'A' and go to 'Z'," Roberts said.

Roberts said he has even had a call from a 49-year-old woman who bought a motorcycle and wants to learn how to ride it.

The course, to be conducted over two weekends, will include 8 hours of classroom instruction and 12 hours of practical experience on a motorcycle. At the end of the course, participants take a written exam and a driving test.

After the sessions, students can receive a course completion card that can be used for a 10 percent discount on motorcycle insurance.

Rick Owens of Orlando will teach the course, which will be offered twice during the month. Owens taught motorcycle riding in the U.S. Air Force for 12 years and the U.S. Navy for four years and is currently a chief instructior of the Motorcycle Safety Foundation.

Planning to start a motorcycle riders' school, Owens will be teaching a course for instructors in addition to the basic course during the first session.

The first class is tentatively scheduled for April 4-5 and April 11-12 from 12 to 5 p.m. each day. The second is tentatively scheduled for April 18-19 and April 25-26, also from noon to 5 p.m. All the classes will be held at the Seminole County Agricultural Center on U.S. 17-92 at the county's Five Points complex.

Charge for the course is $30. A driver's license is required.

Roberts said the 4-H pilot program will be continued "if it works out and enough people are interested, it will grow in 4-H." Earlier this year, 4-H sponsored and put out a motorcycle safety book.

The cycles used in the course will be 100 and 125 cc. size. Honda or Orlando is providing six Honda cycles and R. C. Hill Motorcycle Center is providing three Kawasaki and three Suzuki cycles for the course.

Interested persons can register for the course by calling the agriculture center at 323-2500, ext. 183.

CIRCUS

Gunther Gebel-Williams, superstar on the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Balley Circus, poses with his family — wife Sigrid, daughter Tina and son Buffy — all appearing on "My Father the Circus King," a Project Peacock special Thursday on NBC.

Pat Boone Will Host Easter Seal Telethon

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Pat Boone, whose clean-cut image even the Easter Bunny might envy is, appropriately, the host of this weekend's 10th annual Easter Seal Telethon on 127 channels across the country.

Boone's white buck shoes, wholesome songs, insitutional milk commercials, frankfurter blurbs and personal religious fervor make him the optimum choice for Easter Seals.

Boone is this year's national chairman of the association which raises funds to help disabled children and adults at 1,124 rehabilitation facilities around the country.

In previous years the telethon has had many different masters of ceremonies, among them Suzanne Somers, Peter Falk, Jack Kiugman and Michael Landon.

The foundation hopes to make Boone its permanent host, much as Jerry Lewis is associated with the annual telethon for Muscular Dystrophy.

The Easter Seals telethon runs from 11 p.m. EST Saturday, March 28, to 8 p.m. EST Sunday, March 29. Boone will be on stage for all but a few hours, introducing stars, reading donation totals and asking viewers to give money.

In its first nine years the telethon has harvested $52 million. Boone would like to set a record this year.

Among the stars Boone has lined up to pitch in are Dennis Weaver, Priscilla Presley, Lanie Kazan, Shaun Cassidy, LaVar Burton, Cathy Lee Crosby, Burt Convy, Steve Allen, Florence Henderson, Bruce Jenner and magician Mark Wilson.

Boone is not exactly new to telethons. Some 20 years ago he hosted a 20-hour local telethon in his native Jacksonville, Fla., for either the United Fund or the Heart Fund, he doesn't remember which.

"I hadn't expected it to be so difficult," the singer said. "When it was over I was so tired I felt like a zombie.

"I hosted a telethon for the West Texas Rehabilitation center last year and one for cerebrai palsy in 1978. But this is my first national telethon and it requires a lot more work.

"It's like walking a tightrope or going over Niagara Falls in a barrel. You keep revising plans and timing right on the air to prevent people from waiting, filling in for no-shows, making allowances for people running long.

"There's no problem keeping your energy level high because the pace is so frantic. But your nerves begin to go in the last few hours when physical exhaustion sets in." Boone begged off when Easter Seal officials first approached him. He was already spread thin. Boone probably devotes more time to charities and good works than any other star in Hollywood.

He is deeply involved with the Save The Refugees Fund, which he helped found with Ronald Reagan a year and a half ago. He works with Bibles For The World, a foundation which aims to put a Bible in the hand of every telephone subscriber in the world. Another of his favorites is World Literature Crusade, which distributes Christian reading material. Boone also does TV commercials for "Compassion," a foster parents-type plan for children in many countries.

"There are a lot more," Boone said. "And I thought the Easter Seals might conflict with the charities I was already working with. But after talking to the staff, I just decided to go ahead and make the time.

"I guess I really agreed because I always find it difficult to say no. Unless something is impossible, I say yes. It's not to escape guilt feelings either. In a way, giving my time for charity is responsible for my becoming a professional singer.

"Back in Tennessee I used to sing for service clubs and religious and church groups for free all the time. The exposure and the experience eventually led me to become a paid singer.

"The other reason I give my time to charity is that I believe we are here on earth only once and I'd like to make as much of a dent as possible.

"Heck, when I was a kid in high school l even volunteered to be head of the cleanup committee. Now what kid would volunteer for a thankless job like that? But everybody pitched in and we cleaned up the school.

"I like to see things happening and make my life matter at as many levels as possible, including raising a good, healthy family."

Pat, accused of being the world's ultimate square, grinned good-naturedly.

"I don't deny being square," he said. "There's nothing wrong in that.

"In fact, I define a square in my new song, 'Are There Any More Squares Out There? I've performed it twice on the 'John Davidson Show' and with live audiences in concert and people go crazy.

"When I come to the catch phrase, 'Are There Any More Squares Out There?' the people yell back in unison, 'Yeah!'

"Those same squares are the people who send money to telethons which I think brings out the best in people."

It's Oscar Time Again

DeNiro And Moore Favorites To Win

On Monday night, approximately 80 million viewers will turn their channels to ABC and watch the 53rd annual Academy Awards. They will fidget through three hours of self-serving tributes and endless thank-you speeches until the final 15 minutes of suspense, when the big awards for film achievement are announced.

Johnny Carson will once again serve as emcee for the annual presentation by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. Many insiders would probably agree that there are several surprise nominees in the running this year; that makes the races somewhat more suspenseful than other recent Oscar contests, in which the nominations and winners were reasonably obvious.

The celebrity guests and presenters will have to provide this year's annual dose of fantasy, because it certainly won't be found in the five films nominated for Best Picture.

The films in contention are: "Coal Miner's Daughter," the biography of country music star Loretta Lynn that traces her career from her start as a naive teenager to her current superstar status; "The Elephant Man," the touching drama of a horribly disfigured man who courageously strives for respect in a prejudiced society; "Ordinary People," the story of a well-to-do family coming apart because of a young man's belief that his parents blame him for the accidental death of his older brother; "Raging Bull," which traces the personal and professional lives of colorful championship boxer Jake LaMotta; and "Tess," the Thomas Hardy tale of a sensual and beautiful young woman whose unfortunate early experiences haunt her in later years. Of these movies, "The Elephant Man" and "Ordinary People" are tied for receiving the most nominations overall, with eight each.

As is usually the case with Academy Award contests, numerous artists involved in the aforementioned films have also been nominated for their individual achievements. In the Best Actor category, Robert DeNiro is up for his portrayal of LaMotta in "Raging Bull" and noted British actor John Jurt is in the running as the title character of "The Elephant Man." (Hurt was nominated for a supporting Oscar two years ago for "Midnight Express.") Other possible winners include: Robert Duvall as the strict, Military-weaned father in "The Great Santini", Jack Lemmon as the always joking, high-powered press agent of "Tribute", and Peter O'Toole as the fanatical movie director in "The Stunt Man." It's interesting to note that two of these films — "The Great Santini" and "The Stunt Man" — were almost passed over for theatrical release, since Hollywood studios initially felt they had little commercial value.

Leading actresses competing for top honors are: Ellen Burstyn as the woman who-returns-to-life-after-death_in-"Resurrection", Goldie Hawn as the spoiled, Eventually culture-shocked "Private Benjamin"; Mary Tyler Moore as the emotionally cool, perfectionconscious mother of "Ordinary People"; Gena Rowlands as the plstol-packing, tough-talking mob opponent "Gloria"; and Sissy Spacek as Loretta Lynn in "Coal Miner's Daughter." Ranging the gamut from light comedy to the heaviest type of drama, this year's Best Actress nominees represent the widest range within that category in a number of years. The supporting performer contests also highlight a wide range of performance styles. Up for Best Supporting Actor are: Judd Hirsch and Timothy Hutton, both in "Ordinary People"; Michael O'Keefe in "The Great Santini"; Joe Pesci in "Raging Bull" and Jason Robards as Howard Hughes in "Melvin And Howard." This year's Best Supporting Actress choices are: Eileen Brennan in "Private Benjamin"; Eva Le Gallenne in "Resurrection": screen newcomer Cathy Moriarty in "Raging Bull"; Diana Scarwid as the waitress of "Inside Moves"; and Mary Steenburgen in "Melvin And Howard."

The envelope, please: Sissy Spacek, Mary Tyler Moore, Ellen Burstyn and Gena Rowlands (shown clockwise) are four of the Best Actress nominees on "The 53rd Annual Academy Awards Presentation," airing Monday on ABC. The yearly ritual saluting outstanding film achievement will be hosted by Johnny Carson and features the usual glamorous roster of awards presenters.

No Church Organ In Crosby Past; 'Time After Time' Co-Stars Married

DEAR DICK: I am writing for the centennial committee of our church, St. Patrick's, because we are planning our celebration for 1962. We have heard from a former parishioner that a Kate Harrigan played the organ in our church and later became the mother of Bing Crosby, the noted singer. Needless to say, it would be great if we could verify this information and publicize it during the centennial celebration. MRS. DONALD CROWLEY, Gadshill, Ostario.

Sorry, but the story is only partly true. Bing Crosby's mother's maiden name was Kate Harrigan, but she comes from the Seattle area. The family does not think she was ever in Ontario, let alone was a church organist there.

DEAR DICK: The great jazz violinist, Joe Venuti, had a partner at one time. Who was he? And what instrument did he play? Both are dead now - the partner died before Joe. GEORGE FARRAR, Columbus, Ohio.

I can find only a note that says that Venuti recorded often with a guitarist named Eddie Lang. I don't know if that qualifies as a partner, but perhaps it does.

DEAR DICK: To settle an argument, is Joan Leslie

DEAR DICK: I was in a movie called "Here Comes Bronson," with Michael Parks. Was it ever shown anywhere? I was only 3 years old at the time. C.J.Overton, Nev.

I think you must mean "Then Came Bronson," which was shown on TV in '69. It was a pilot for a TV series that made it for a brief while.

DEAR DICK: A chicken dinner will be bought by the one who loves. Is the star, Bowser, who sings with Sha Na Na, the same as the actor on "Laverne and Shirley?" CHICKEN EATER, Mountain Grove, Mo.

No, I don't know exactly which actor on "Laverne and Shirley" you are referring to, but it doesn't matter because Jon Bauman (Bowser) isn't one of them.

DEAR DICK: My daughter and I have a disagreement about the late acter Sal Mineo. How old was he when he died? I say he was in his early 30s. My daughter says he was in his 40s. Also, I'd like to know about another actor, the professor on "Namy and the Professor." When did he die and how old was he? M.C.R.N., Burbank, Ill.

Sal Mineo was 37 - so you were both a little wrong. Richard Long of "Nanny" died in 1974, when he was 47. DEAR DICK: Both my husband and I enjoy Carol Burnett's show. But we are getting tired of reruns. Is there any chance that we will see some new material in the near future? JEAN CARL, Montesano, Wash.

No, not much of a chance. Carol has stopped doing that show and has no plans to do any new ones. A special now and again, of course, but that's all.

DEAR DICK: We saw a remake of "Topper" on TV, and it set us to reminiscing about the original cast in the first "Topper" film. We remembered Carole Lombard, Cary Grant and Billie Burke, but cannot recall the name of the original Cosmo Topper. He was excellent. Could you supply his name? MRS. A.D. LEE, Auburn, Calif.

Yes, that wast he delightful Roland Young. DEAR DICK: Could you please tell me if I could ever meet John Schneider, the one on "The Dukes Of Hazzard?" KATHY, New Buffalo, Mich. The chances are pretty slim. He's in California, you're in Michigan, Even if you came to California, you probably wouldn't meet him. Pick a boy closer to home.

DEAR DICK: Is Diane Kenton related to the old-time comedian, Buster Keaten? And where can you buy the book about the lives of Teny Martin and Cyd Carisse? Is It in paperback? PAT JOHNSON, Saginaw, Mich.

The Keatons are unrelated. The Martin-Charisse book,

DEAR DICK: I saw Malcolm McDowell in "Time After Time" and thought he was absolutely wonderful. Could you please tell me if he's married and what else he's done. R.D. CARR, Ardmore, Okla.

McDowell is a very distinguished English actor - he was in "A Clockwork Orange," for one thing, and "O Lucky Man," for another. He and Mary Steenburgen, his co-star in "Time After Time," are now married and the parents of a baby girl.

DEAR DICK: I am writing to ask you about NBC's new show, "The Gangster Chronicles." I would like to know about the book it is based on, particularly the stories of Lucky Luciane; my husband is his grandson. When we were married, in 1974, he gave me a book about Lucky Luciano, but I loaned it to someone and never got it back. Could you tell me where I could get a copy of the book? NELDA JUNE LUCIANO, Joplin, Mo.

The people at the show tell me their stories are based on many books. They mentioned one -- "The Last Testament of Lucky Luciano" - that was purported to be Lucky's own story. But Ralph Salerno, the show's technical advicer, believes the authenticity of that book is doubtful. Incidentally, you may want to read a novelization of "The-Gangster Chronicles," by Michael Lasker and Richard Alan Simmons, just published by Jove Publications. Your library would probably have several books about Luciano and other gangsters.

DEAR DICK: Could you please tell us the name of the theme song played on "Prisoner Cell Block H"? Is it available as a recording? Who is the artist? ANNA VAN POOL, Juneau, Alaska.

It is called "On the Inside," and is sung by an Australian singer named Lynne Hamilton. It is not available here through ordinary channels. But the series' distributor, Reg Grundy Productions, say that if you will send a check or money order for $3 (three dollars) to them, they will send you a copy. Their address is 9911 West Pico Blvd., Penthouse I, Los Angeles, CA 90035.

DEAR DICK: What was the same of the actor who played the part of Jack Wilson (the man who had the big fight with Clint Eastwood) in "Any Which Way You Can"? He also played in "Condominium." He is so good looking! B. WARREN, Arcata, Calif.

That's William Smith. He's been around for a while and has done some marvelous things.

DEAR DICK: I am curious as to what performers use -monthwash, Sen Sen, etc. - to keep from offending each other when they are in close contact: singing, kissing, etc. KATHY, Williamsport, Pa.

Actors, remember, are people, even as you and I. So they use the same things we use. Some chew gum. Some carefully rinse their mouths with mouthwash. And there are those who are thoughtless and do nothing. Any actor will tell you stories about having to work with somebody like that,

DEAR DICK: When I was a very young girl, my aunt took me to the movies and I saw "Rhubarb," a cat, yellow in color, almost like Morris. That was roughly in the late '40s or early '50s. I don't remember the name of the movie. Can you verify that there was a "Rhubarb the cat''7 PHYLLIS A. WILLIAMS, Mendou, Mich.

"The Two of U," which incidentally, I wrote, is not in paperback. It may be out of print, but perhaps your book store can order it from the publisher, Mason-Charter.

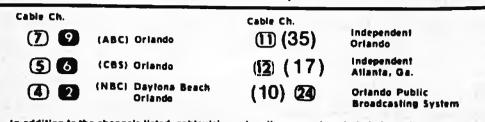

ACCEPTING MOST DENTAL PROGRAMS &

Consider it verified. The movie was called "Rhubarb" and it came out in '51, starring Ray Milland and Jan Sterling. It was a comedy about a baseball team owned by a cat, based on a famous story by H. Allen Smith.

DEAR DICK: A few years ago, at least 10, there was a western on TV starring Andrew Duggan, Andrew Princ and James Stacy. Could you tell me the name of this show? K. MOODY, Jersey Shore, Pa.

I think you must mean "Lancer," which starred Duggan, Stacy and Wayne Maunder, although Prine wasn't in it. That's the closest I can come to your description. the statistic sector and a sector and

'Tempest' Comes To TV As Full Length Ballet

Michael Smuin's new fulllength ballet, "The Tempest" will be aired live Monday as part of the "Dance in America" series on PBS' "Great Performances." Smuin is the codirector and choreographer for the San Francisco Ballet and began contemplating a new full-length ballet as soon as his "Romeo and Juliet" was completed in 1976.

Finding a plot that could be effectively translated into the choreographic medium was difficult, until Smuin took a second look at "The Tempest."

What finally made him pick Shakespeare's romantic comedy?

"The Tempest" is one of Shakespeare's most visual plays," he explains, "his least complicated and by far, the most magical. It's a farfetched fantasy really and terribly romantic."

The ballet is not a literal representation of setting, events or period. Smuin emphasizes the play's blend of illusion and reality: "If you deprive audiences of using their imagination, you're not really doing very much."

The presentation does, however, closely follow the Duke of Milan, lives with his daughter Miranda, along with Caliban, the evil, halfhuman slave and Ariel, a spirit serving Prospero. Helping to bring this environment to life was set designer Tony Walton, who won a Tony award for "Pippin" and an Oscar for "All that Jazz." The ballet begins when a ship carrying Ferdinand the Prince is caught in a tempest. When struck by lightning, Walton's ship breaks apart and becomes Prospero's mysterious island.

Topping Back, Twins In Tow!

By NANCY REICHARDT NEW YORK - Lynne Topping has returned to her role of Chris Foster on "The Young and the Restless," although for a while it looked like the part was slated to be recast. Lynne also will be bringing her twins onto the portraying Snapper and Chris' child. Riding off into the sunset this month, however, was Joe LaDue as Derek Thurston.

Mark Goddard has joined "One Life to Live" in the role

Reflecting On 'The Fonz'

By DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD - There is a tendency these days to look down on sitcoms as the dregs of artistic creativity. Sure they get high ratings and make lots of money, but when it comes to culture, they are nowhere.

On the other hand, there is one sitcom star whose costume has been enshrined Washington, D.C.'s In Smithsonian Institution; whose example for good is followed by millions of impressionable youngsters; who has used the sitcom he stars in as a springboard to producing first-rate TV films.

That star is Henry Winkler, known to the world as 'The Fonz,' the star of ABC's long-running "Happy Days." Now, however, he is equally proficient as a producer and he is proud of a film he dld for the network's series of afterschool specials, called "Run, Don't Walk."

Winkler has his own production company, Fair Dinkum. (The name comes from Australian slang; he heard it when he toured that continent and liked its sound.) His production company is no mere tax shelter or toy, as it is with so many stars. With him, it is a very active organization.

"It's not an in-name-only affair," Winkler says. "It's not just a company they give actors to keep them happy. I want my company, and my participation in that company, to be fruitful and important. I really work at it."

But, of course, he is still the Fonz, still part of "Happy Days." He is committed to the show for one more season after this one, and he is in no hurry to end the Winkler-Fonz association.

"I believe," he says, "that Fonz is a character whose the United States, the adulation has peaked, but he feels it's evolved into something even better than high-decibel worship.

"It's turned into a love." He is perhaps proudest of the positive contributions the Fonz (and, necessarily, himself) has made to our society. For example, in one show some time ago, the Fonz got a library card and expressed amazement at how easy it was, that just anybody could go in and get one.

"Later," he says, "the American Library Association told me that in the weeks after that episode was aired, applications for

> And he is proud that the Fonz (and, necessarily, himself) is loved by people from all social strata. When he and his wife go to New York, he says, they walk home from the theater to their hotel at night and everybody -- "from 42nd St. winos to ladies in ermine furs" - stops to say hello.

"We were walking along once,"-Winkler says, "and a tough-looking gang came over to us. These were the kind of guys who would bite your nose off. And one of them said, 'Hey, you The Fonz?' I said yes, and I introduced my wife. And we had a very nice visit."

tastes in automobiles. Finally, customers who need minimum insurance coverage are turned away repeatedly. To overcome these situations is my whole reason for being in business."

By STACI BIENVENU

"IF YOU'RE UNDER 25; if you own a van or a pick-up, or if you just need immediate minimum Auto or Truck Insurance coverage-you need to call me."

Yes, according to Ralph Kazarian, "You may be paying too much for your Auto Insurance..." Mr. Karazian is fully aware that we, as drivers, are tired of reading deceptive ads about how we can beat the high cost of our auto insurance, but there is something definite that sets him apart-specialization. He's an unusual man in his line of business, for he is willing to give hard-luck YOUNG DRIVERS a more-than-fair chance on their auto or truck insurance.

"I feel that young people, in many cases, are unjustifiably charged high rates, and I know that many may be short on cash. That's why monthly payments are our specialty. Furthermore, there are a large number of drivers under 25 that are paying high rates due simply to their age; others are penalized because of their personal

Yes, this all sounds quite promising, but just how can Ralph Kazarian afford to offer a truly better price to you and me?

"I've shopped for years to find companies who offer the best possible rates for my particular customers. As a result, I broker business with 30-35 Auto, Truck, Motorcycle, Motor Club, Mobile Home & Motor Home Insurance companies that target their effort to my particular customers. This allows me to give my customers the insurance they need at the price they want to pay."

And Mr. Kazarlan has proved himself to be quite successful in his approach. After 15 years in the business, he's established himself as an institution within the auto and truck Insurance business in Florida.

To prove his ambition and determination he's opened eleven offices in the last two years in the Central Florida area-in addition to his Orlando office which is located in the Bright-BLUE Building at the corner of Mills and Colonial (898-2454).

There are two additional Ralph Kazarian offices located in the Orlando-Sanford area: Altamonte Springs (834-2454) and Sanford (323-2454).

So...If you're really interested in finding out how to get the insurance you need...at the price you want to pay-stop by one of Ralph Kazarian's offices.

The Newbery award went to Katherine Paterson's "Jacob Have I Loved" (Crowell, grades 7-9), a haunting portrait of a young girl who has lived, since birth, in the shadow of her talented twin sister.

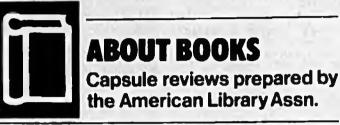

Louise reels under the taunts of her senile grandmother who uses biblical quotes to peg the young girl as an Esau, the despised elder twin from the book of Genesis. Even after she flees to the Chesapeake Bay, where her father is a fisherman, her friendship with a local boy is intruded upon by the pampered twin.

This year there were also two Newbery Honor books (runners-up). In Jane Langton's superb "The Fledgling" (Harper, grades 5-7), quiet little Georgie yearns to fly. She gets her chance after an encounter with a large Canadian goose. On moonlit nights when it taps on her bedroom window, she skims across the trees with her Goose Prince. Then two townspeople interfere. One of them ostensibly wins as he brings the goose down with a blast from his gun. But Georgie still has the Goore Prince's present - a rubber ball that is magically transformed before her eyes into an image of the earth — and his final words, "Take good care of it."

In Madeleine L'Engle's "A Ring of Endless Light" (Farrar, grades 8-10), Vicky

Donald Crews' "Truck" (Greenwillow, ages 2-5) begins with the large rear doors of a semitrailer shutting on a load of tricycles ready for shipment. The red diesel truck moves out into busy city streets, jockeys for position at the tunnel, pauses at an all-night truck stop for food and fuel, shifts down for rain-soaked highways, lumbers around multi-level intersections, creeps across fog-clouded bridges and finally backs onto the delivery dock at its destination.

Weitz Is Macho Man On 'Hill Street Blues'

NEW YORK - "Hill Street Blues" has been hailed by the critics as a gutsy, well-written and intelligent series about policemen. Cops like it, too, but NBC's "Hill Street Blues" has been fighting for survival. Ratings have improved since its late January premiere but its chief rival on Saturday nights is still ABC's blockbuster hit "Fantasy Island." Bruce Weitz plays the show's scruffy undercover detective who chews cigars and occasionally likes to nibble on the ankles of his suspects. Nonetheless, his penchant for biting has been reduced since the opening episodes, because some critics felt it was too peculiar a trait for a policeman.

Like the other actors on "Hill Street Blues," Weitz struggles under the cloud of insecurity. "We know the show is good," he says, "yet we're fighting for our life. It takes a tremendous toll on us psychologically.

He said "30 to 35 men" were in or on top of the building when it fell, with what witnesses said was a roar like a jet and a mighty "whump."

At the time of the collapse at 3:10 p.m., EST, workers were pouring concrete on the top deck of the 100-yard-long condominium being constructed by Dynamic Construction Co. of Merritt Island, Fla.

George Touhy Receives Chamber's Topper Award

By DONNA ESTES Herald Staff Writer

George Touhy, Seminole County business, civic and religious leader for the past 37 years, was singled out for special honors by the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce Friday night.

Touhy, director emeritus of the First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Seminole County, actively involved in the Presbyterian Church and in numerous charitable and civic activities, was presented with the highly coveted and prestigious "John S. Krider Topper" award for distinguished community service.

He is the 11th person over the years to be presented with the award.

presented with the plaque by John Y. Mercer, a past chamber president and last year's recipient of the award.

The presentation capped the chamber's annual awards banquet, attended by 150 business, professional and civic leaders, at the Sanford Civic Center.

The "John S. Krider Topper" award is the highest honor which the chamber can bestow on "distinguished civic leaders, who have done the most for their community over the years."

It is named in honor of John S. Krider, past manager of the chamber and a civic and business leader himself. Krider was the First Presbyterian Church, chairman given the award several years ago.

Mercer, in presenting the award, said Touhy is "completely dedicated to any task he accepts. He never refuses any Assembly and choir member. reasonable request to assist anyone whether for the city of Sanford, the church, Rotary or any other organization to which he belongs."

Rev. Dr. Virgil Bryant, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of which Touhy is a member, said, "He gives 120 percent of himself to anything he does." Touhy said his constant supporter in all his activities has been his wife, Louise, and credited her with his being honored. The Touhys moved to Sanford in 1944, after he completed a stint in the U.S. Touhy and his wife, Louise, were Army during World War II. The same year. Touhy became a director of the First Federal Savings and Loan of Seminole. In 1951, Touhy became executive vice president and chief management officer at the banking institution, continuing in that position until his retirement in 1971 when he again became a director. He retired in 1977, and is now "director emeritus."

Among those activities in which Touhy has been and is involved and the posts he has held or holds are:

Stabbing During Quarrel Is Fatal To Sanford Man

Being held in Seminole County jail Saturday without bond on a first degree murder charge is Ruby Edwards, also 41. Seminole Sheriff's investigators said the stabbing occurred during a domestic quarrel in the bedroom of the couple's home at Hughey and Sipes Avenue. Ms. Edwards, according to the investigators, stabbed Houston in the chest area with a pocket knife, severing an artery.

rousers, serving as against the demon fire.

So much for mystique. Now for reality. The job is monotonous, low-paying, and dangerous. Working conditions are atrocious: the 'office' is cramped, there's no indoor plumbing, and you can go for hours without seeing or hearing another human being.

Sounds about as inviting as a stretch in Sing Sing, right?

To some folks, maybe. But not to the crew of Ben Knox, Jack Jones, and Mike Slater at the Florida Division of Forestry fire lookout tower on Seminole County Road 427 near Longwood.

They like it fine, thank you. But then, that may be because in addition to looking for fires, they also fight them. And, of course, they carry Smokey's "Only you can prevent forest fires" message to area schools and civic groups. As Knox likes to say, "The one (fire) you prevent is the one you don't have to put out."

Unfortunately, the forestry trio have been doing a lot of "putting out" this fire season. In the first two months of 1981, there were more than four times as many fires affecting more than 15 times as many acres as in the same period last year.

With all due apologies to General Sherman, "Fire is hell," Knox says. "Sometimes it's a blessing to go up in the tower and rest."

It's a small world up there, 135 steps and 125 feet above the ground, but it offers the harried firefighter a blissful solitude interrupted only by the whistling of cool breezes and the occasional radio chatter of fellow lookouts.

"It's a very pleasant job," says Knox, a four-year veteran who gave up his department store sales spot after 10 years for a chance at the hermit's life. "There's the peace and quiet, the outdoors, plus the feeling that you've done something worthwhile, made some contribution."

Those fringe benefits help offset the low pay - $9,256 a year to start. Senior tower keepers, like the 29-year-old Knox, also get government housing ("three bedrooms and a garden") for $50 a month.

Although hours vary depending on fire and weather conditions, the spartan 6-by-6-foot Longwood tower is usually manned four or five hours a day, frequently longer in the dry season when the crew's 150,000-plus acres of responsibility becomes as volatile as a powder keg.

At other times, particularly the rainy season, "we're working on the equipment, giving fire prevention talks, doing control burning (to kill of dry underbrush or to make way for tree growth), or, of course, fighting fires," Knox says. "We're on call 24 hours a day."

It takes a lot of experience to be able to distinguish between a dangerous blaze and a barbecue by the size and color of the smoke column from eight miles off, seem simple. For hours they stare across the treetops; at the sight of amoke, they plot his coordinates, take a cross re with another tower via radio to establish the exact location, then radio warnings to the central forestry dispatcher in Orlando. Depending on the city or county fire departments to supply the water pumpers, the forestry men head into the blaze with a bulldozer, cutting trenches or firebreaks two or three rows deep in the fire's path. They may also start a backfire that will burn from the fireline toward the flames.

But business is not always so brisk. Up in the tower, lookouts can spend days or even weeks without sighting a puff of smoke, so the greatest challenge is to stay alert and keep staring. Television and books are discouraged. "They divert your attention from the horizon," Knox explains.

Strumming his guitar, doing pushups, or chatting with the wasps that nest outside his tower window during spring and summer helps Knox fight off the lonesome fire tower blues.

While the tedium may be the worst part of the job, the three-minute, winding trek up to his lofty perch runs a close second.

"You don't want to be climbing up and down all day so you don't go up hungry, and you make sure you have your jar (as the portable toilet is euphemistically known)," he said.

But atop the tower, standing tall against the cloud-streaked sky, life can also be aesthetic. On a clear day, one can see almost forever . . . 35 miles, anyway. Below, the cars look like toys, and the blacktop snakes off into the distance over gently rolling plains to meet the horizon. Eyes wander over a blanket of green and brown, the treetops stretching on seemingly forever until they end in a shadowy haze where land joins the sky.

"The sunrise and sunset are really beautiful from up here," Knox said, "You should see it. It really is something."

Knox's fire tower perch is 125 feet off the ground.

Lion's Share Not Enough

PITTSBURGH (UPI) - Three months ago aviation officials considered spreading lion manure on Great Pittsburgh International Airport's 11,000 acres to keep deer off the runways.

They reasoned the deer would whilf the dung, believe its source was in the area and be frightened off.

However, Pittsburgh Zoo officials informed them it probably wouldn't work. Even if it were workable, they said, they doubted the zoo's lions would be up to the task of supplying enough dung for the airport.

So the officials decided instead to approve a plan to construct 5 miles of 9foot wire mesh fence with 75 percent of the $172,940 cost paid for by the Federal Aviation Administration.
