Oviedo woman found dead

OVIDEO — The body of a 33-year-old rural Oviedo woman was found early today after she apparently fell from her horse and was killed during a night ride last night in the Black Hammock area.

Dead is Sandra Gastelec, of 2155 Stone Street. Gastelec's body was found at 5 a.m. today on a grassy shoal of Howard Avenue about one mile from her house. Seminole County Sheriff's Lt. Al Sanchez said. Rick Gastelec, who searched for his wife when she didn't return from an 8 p.m. horseback ride last night, found her body and reported the find to the sheriff's department, Sanchez said.

Sheriff's Chief Deputy Duane Harrell said a Black Hammock area resident reported to the sheriff's department and animal control that a horse with its saddle partially off had been found there before midnight last night.

Sanchez said that report came in about 10 p.m. and animal control took the horse at about 2 a.m. He said "there was some damage to the saddle," but investigators hadn't determined the cause of the damage early today.

Harrell said sheriff's deputies mounted an unsuccessful search for the rider last night.

The husband, Harrell said, told deputies it was not unusual for his wife to horseback ride at night.

Sanchez said an investigation has just begun and an autopsy is will be scheduled in Sanford.

Hunt free on bond again

SANFORD — A Sanford man accused of being part of an Ohio-based burglary ring who was rearrested here Wednesday on a Florida governor's warrant as he fights extradition to Ohio, has had his original $100,000 bond reinstated.

Roger Stanley Hunt, 45, 109 Briarwood Drive, Sanford, has again been released from the Seminole County jail to await April action in Seminole County circuit court to determine if he will be extradited to Ohio. In Ohio he faces charges of corruption, conspiracy and receiving stolen property.

Hunt was first arrested here in the case Jan. 5, when 28 Ohio residents were also rounded up there and in Florida. Florida and Ohio lawmen said they busted a burglary ring that operated in 10 Ohio counties for several years. Hunt, who operates Hunt's Used Cars in Sanford, allegedly acted as a fence for the gang. He is the only Florida resident arrested.

Owners believe new proposal will get season under way

United Press International

NEW YORK — Baseball union leaders were skeptical about a plan owners planned to present Friday in hopes of ending the 29-day spring training lockout. "It is not just another proposal," owners' negotiator Chuck O'Connor said. "We are holding nothing back. We have put together what we believe to be the most generous economic package in the history of this collective bargaining."

O'Connor did not disagree when asked if the proposal would be a "deal-maker," but officials of the Players' Association sounded skeptical.

"We anxiously await what he's talking about," said Lauren Rich, assistant general counsel for the union.

Gene Orza, the union's associate general counsel, was even more cautious.

"Beware of Greeks bearing gifts," he said.

When asked if there was hope for peace within the next day or so, Commissioner Fay Vincent said, "I don't know. I've been so wrong in my ability to judge. I know the PRC is going to make a proposal. I hope it gets accepted and I hope we play baseball."

ESPN reported Thursday that free-lance discussions outside the normal channels may result in the players accepting a contract.

The deal, ESPN said, would still allow players to have their salary demands arbitrated after they have been in the major leagues for three years, but provide $100,000 in minimum salaries and $54 million in pension benefits plus expansion guarantees and collusion protection.

The season would start on April 2, according to the report, and teams would carry 30-man rosters. See Baseball, Page 5A

THE NEW DEAL

According to ESPN, the latest proposal from the owners provides for:

- Salary arbitration for players after three years.
- Raising the minimum salary to $100,000.
- A $54 million contribution to the players' pension fund.
- Protection against collusion.

HUD well runs dry?

Sanford's rental rehab program likely to suffer

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Although Sanford's rental rehabilitation program got a $102,000 boost this week, it may be the last money the city's program will receive for more than a year.

And the city may have only four months to spend that $102,000.

Seminole County commissioners approved allocating the money to Sanford's rental rehabilitation program Tuesday. The money had been granted to the county by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development in 1988. Sanford operates the program as a subcontractor for the county.

But because the city had turned down similar 1989 rental rehabilitation grants, HUD has penalized the county by not honoring their rental rehabilitation grant requests until 1991. Buddy Balaglia, county community development planner, said Sanford may not receive new money for the program before late 1991.

Charles Rowe, Sanford community development officer, said the loss of the money is unfortunate, but the city has other community enhancement programs, including weatherization grants which allow low-income homeowners to repair their roofs. Seminole County commissioners allowed Sanford to shift $170,000 from a community development block grant (CDBG) drainage project to owner-occupied home rehabilitation this year.

The city is seeking $300,000 from the county's HUD-financed CDBG program this year.

SANFORD — Beginning next month, runaways and abused children in Seminole County will have a safe place to go.

Boys Town staff are preparing the 3500 Sanford Ave. shelter for opening April 3. A staff of about 15 social workers will counsel teens ages 12 through 18 who have been abused, neglected or thrown away by their parents, shelter coordinator Catherine Grimm said.

"Right now there's no place in Seminole County for runaways," Grimm said. "It's up to the youth to find their own way."

"What Boys Town has brought here is really a gift to Central Florida," she said.

Boys Town will provide counsel and treatment for abused children and for parents who want their children to come home. See Shelter, Page 5A

TALLAHASSEE — Long-time Death Row inmate Joseph Robert Spaziano, convicted for a 1973 mutilation murder, lost a fifth round of appeals Thursday when the Florida Supreme Court upheld the death sentence against him.

The court vacated Spaziano's latest stay of execution and said it would entertain no petition for a rehearing, according to the court opinion issued Thursday.

Spaziano has been sentenced to die in Florida's electric chair for the August 1973 mutilation murder of Laura Lynn Harberts. No date has been set for his execution.

Harbert's body was found in a trash dump Aug. 22, 1973, by the Seminole County Sheriff's Department, 17 days after she went on a date with

Mall plan prompts housing questions

By LAURAL SULLIVAN

SANFORD — Plans for a $100 million regional mall near the intersection of Interstate-4 and State Road 46 might be a good deal for everyone but Sanford's low-income residents, legal counsel for Sanford Housing Authority tenants said last night.

Bruce Scott, a Central Florida Legal Services attorney representing the Seminole Joint Tenant Council, urged SHA commissioners to petition the city to consider how an estimated 8,000 new jobs at the proposed Seminole Mall will impact Sanford's housing market.

Seminole Joint Tenant Council represents 480 families living in SHA's five subsidized public housing projects.

"Some of the tenants in the Sanford Housing Authority may be employed out there. They may earn enough money to move out there.

CAPE CANAVERAL — The shuttle Discovery, scheduled to carry the Hubble Space Telescope into orbit April 12, was hauled to the launch pad Friday for final processing, despite possible trouble with the ship's nose landing gear.

The 4.2-mile, six-hour trip from NASA's Vehicle Assembly Building to launch pad 39B began at 7:30 p.m. EST Thursday. 12 hours behind schedule because of concern about a 6-inch nut that holds

Stranded satellite put in 'storage' orbit; engineers ponder rescue plan

United Press International

CAPE CANAVERAL — Engineers radioed commands to a stranded $150 million satellite overnight Thursday, firing on-board rockets in a bid to boost the relay station into a safe, long-term storage orbit amid work to figure out a rescue plan.

Without the maneuver, the errant satellite would fall back to Earth around March 25. But if the procedure is successful, the satellite will remain safely in orbit for months if not longer, enough time for engineers to come up with a way to rescue the relay station if at all possible.

Intelsat managers are debating a variety of options to salvage the international communications station, including the feasibility of a shuttle rescue mission. NASA issued a statement late Thursday indicating the agency would consider such a flight if the satellite is placed in a safe orbit.

"NASA has not been approached for assistance in rescuing the Intelsat spacecraft, but it is following and is keenly interested in the Police investigate fatal hospital treatment

MIAMI BEACH — Police are investigating the death of an elderly man who received an overdose of ultraviolet light during a treatment for psoriasis at a hospital dermatology center.

Henry Homer, 80, took his clothes off and stepped into an ultraviolet light booth at Mount Sinai Medical Center four weeks ago for what should have been 20 seconds, said son, Mel.

Homer left the booth 20 minutes later after no one came to retrieve him, Mel said. "They put him in their and forgot him," he said.

Homer, a retired Chicago furniture dealer, received burns over most of his body and was immediately admitted to the hospital. He died Friday in the intensive care unit.

The cause of death was sepsis, a general infection "caused by complications from first- and second-degree burns" over 90 percent of Homer's body, said Dr. Bruce Hyma, who conducted an autopsy for the Dade County Medical Examiner's office.

Other contributing factors were the chronic skin condition psoriasis and cancer of the prostate, said Hyma, who officially ruled the death an accident.

Miami Beach police Detective Paul Scrimshaw said he is conducting "an open death investigation. Beyond that, I can't comment."

Dade County wildfire under control

MIAMI — A 5,000-acre wildfire was still burning in west Dade County Thursday but firefighters said it was contained and under control.

Roads in the area remained open and buildings in the area were no longer in danger, said Phil DeAngella, a spokesman for the Florida Division of Forestry.

The fire, just south of U.S. 41, began Tuesday and rekindled Wednesday, scorching 5,000 acres of sawgrass on the fringes of the Everglades. Firefighters brought it and a smaller fire north of the highway under control Wednesday night.

They remained at the site Thursday and were soaking the scorched sawgrass and muck to prevent another flare-up. There were no injuries or reports of property damage, DeAngella said.

Investigators believe the fire was started by an arsonist but have no suspects, said DeAngella, who said a $1,000 reward was being offered to anyone who had information that led to an arrest.

State audit blasts HRS spending

TALLAHASSEE — A state audit accuses Florida's welfare agency of sloppy spending habits and management practices that make it tough to determine if the state is paying too much to take care of the poor and abused.

Among other things, the audit says the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services did not take bids on millions of dollars in equipment and services, and then could not determine in some cases whether it got what it paid for, said the audit.

The Tampa Tribune obtained a copy of the audit, still in preliminary form, from HRS on Wednesday and reported on it in its Thursday editions.

The audit comes at a time when a House ethics panel is investigating no-bid contract awards by state agencies. Some lawmakers are already asking that a special panel be established to revamp state bidding requirements.

"It's not just HRS. Nobody's following the intent of the state law," said Rep. Norm Ostrau, D-Plantation, who chairs the ethics panel. "It's pervasive throughout the system. It's coating hillions."

Some legislators are also suggesting that a study commission be created to study whether to break up HRS into smaller, more manageable units. Similar efforts have been blocked in the past.

Activists stand up for greased pigs

STUART — Animal rights activists are wrestling with the organizers of a county fair to call off the popular greased pig contest, which they contend is "traumatic" and "stressful" to the Crisco-coated swine.

Advocates for the pigs showed a videotape Thursday night to the board of the Martin County fair board in which the squealing, slippery creatures were chased around a pen until being captured and held fast by their hind legs.

"I've found it to be horribly cruel," said Lacey Fox, a graphic artist who spoke for the animals. "I find that it's stressful for the pigs... big fat guys landing on them."

But the 15-member board, which staged the latest fair last week, decided to defer any action for now.

"It's a contest where small wild boars are covered with Crisco, and school-age children are given a period of time, like a minute, to try to catch one of the pigs and bring it to the judge," Gregory Bean, the fair's manager said. "It's my opinion that they're not mistreated."

Police say they found marijuana

CASSELBERRY — A female Casselberry police officer who took an apparently intoxicated woman home from her supermarket workplace reported finding two marijuana plants growing in the woman's bedroom.

Two more pot plants were later reportedly found in the living room along with drug paraphernalia.

The find led to charges of possession of more than 20 grams of marijuana and cultivation of the drug against Karin Harre, 48, 510 Polaris Loop 104, Casselberry. She was arrested at home at 12:26 p.m. Wednesday.

Police woman Janet S. Scott said she encountered Harre at Gooding's, State Road 438, where she was lying on the floor at her work station. Scott said she offered to take Harre home when her employer said she couldn't work and Harre said she had no one else to help her home. Harre reportedly asked for further assistance when entering her house and bedroom, and in the process of helping her, Scott said, she saw the pot crop in plain view.

Victim captures burglary suspect

SANFORD — A Sanford man told city police he was awakened by the sound of the chain on his wallet being moved in his bedroom at about 2:30 a.m. Wednesday.

He saw a strange woman holding his wallet. He grabbed her and held her for police. When police arrived at 507-2 Oak Ave., they charged Zina Davis, 30, 113 Castle Brewer Court, Sanford, with armed burglary, possession of burglary tools and grand theft. She was arrested at the victim's house at 2:44 a.m. Wednesday.

Police said the suspect used a knife to aid in forcing entry to the house and reportedly dropped a knife when the victim grabbed her. She allegedly stole $737 in U.S. currency and $26 in Mexican money from the victim's wallet, police said.

Man accused of imprisoning woman

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — A man accused of allegedly injuring his roommate by punching her face and stabbing her in the buttock and thigh Monday also allegedly prevented her from seeking assistance.

Altamonte Springs police said when they were called to the house of the couple Thursday afternoon, Para Lee Mahogany, 45, reportedly said the suspect wouldn't let her leave their house to seek medical treatment. She said she was held against her will.

The suspect, Joseph Carter London, 34, 249 Afton Square, Bldg. 5-207, reportedly told police Mahogany was injured Monday when she fell down a flight of stairs.

London is charged with aggravated battery and false imprisonment.

Sanford armed robbery suspect nabbed

SANFORD — A man who allegedly threatened two women with a gun during a robbery outside the Halfshell Restaurant and Lounge, 119 S. Magnolia Ave., Sanford, Feb. 9, has been arrested by city police.

The victims reportedly identified a suspect in a police photo lineup. That lead Thursday to charges of armed robbery, use of a firearm in a felony and possession of a firearm by a felon against Harold Charles Davis, 28, 1110 W. Ninth St., Sanford. He was arrested at the county jail.

Crack, pot reportedly found in house

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — A man who allegedly had a stash of crack cocaine and less than 20 grams of marijuana in his house during a City County Investigative Bureau search Thursday has been arrested.

Alton Williams, 30, 601 Plum Lane, rural Altamonte Springs, has been charged with possession of cocaine, less than 20 grams of marijuana and drug paraphernalia. He was arrested at home.

Lake Mary residents win land battle

By LACY DOWEN
Herald staff writer

LAKE MARY — Hills of Lake Mary residents won the first battle over a seven-acre parcel of land adjacent to their subdivision owned by Centrex Corp.

Residents have complained that the land, which borders their subdivision on three sides and is zoned commercial, when developed will cause unwanted traffic and noise. Centrex, of Grand Cayman, British West Indies, has said any zoning other than commercial will mean a financial loss for the company.

Centrex last night asked for a delay a second reading of the zone change request. Commissioners denied the request, then rezoned the parcel from commercial to professional office.

Centrex had been granted two 30-day extensions to develop plans for the site, located off County Road 46-A adjacent to the Hills of Lake Mary subdivision.

Residents of the subdivision favored the rezoning to limit traffic and noise. But Centrex failed to meet with residents to discuss the site development plans. "We were promised somebody would meet with the residents and nobody did," Mayor Dick Fess said.

"I'm tired of being told something will be done and finding out it hasn't been done. The downzoning takes care of our residents, and that's what we're here to do," commissioner David Meador said.

Centrex had worked with city staff to plan for the land's development. With city staff, Centrex had agreed the property would be used for a branch bank, pharmacy, child care facility, credit union office, beauty salon or barber shop, professional offices offering consulting services, real estate offices, a clinic that does not include overnight treatment, and personal service establishments.

With the rezoning, commissioners will now draft an ordinance to accept this plan.

Centrex attorney Duke Woodsen said Centrex would challenge any action by the commission that would interfere with Centrex's right to develop the property. "We're prepared to file a challenge to protect our rights as property owners," Woodsen said.

Commissioner Paul Tremel said the city and residents had operated in good faith by giving Centrex the previous extensions. He made the motion to rezone the parcel. "If the applicant wants to sue, we might end up with a professional office zoning and no developers agreement," he said.

Fess assured Woodsen the city was considering all sides of the matter. "Our attempts are to be fair to you, too."

Lake Mary woman announces candidacy for school board

By VICKI DeBORNIER
Herald staff writer

LAKE MARY — Sandy Robinson, mother of three, has announced her candidacy for the District 1 seat on the Seminole County School Board.

The seat, which represents Keeth, Lake Mary, Longwood, Winter Springs and Woodlands elementary schools, Greenwood Lakes and Rock Lake middle schools and Lake Mary High School, is currently held by Larry Betsinger, who has yet to announce his candidacy. Republican Bill Kroll, a former two-term board member, has also announced his candidacy for the seat.

Robinson, also a Republican, said her experience with parent-teacher associations and local school advisory committees in Seminole, Alachua and Escambia counties will stand her in good stead during the election.

"I'm a registered Republican and because of the Martin County ruling, I have to run on a partisan ticket," she said. "But, I have worked with the schools and the district at all levels. It's my experience that counts."

She said she is running because she feels she must take "the next logical step" in her school involvement, not because she was dissatisfied with the representation in her district.

Robinson attends many school board meetings wearing a button in the shape of the bright yellow school bus that represents her campaign. She said she is well known in the north part of the county and is making an effort to meet the people to the south.

Robinson has a bachelor's degree in fine professional arts from Kent State University. She has been president of the Lake Mary Local School Advisory Committee, a representative on the county-wide LSAC, chairman of the middle school rezoning task force, a member of the committee to determine county high school rezoning criteria, a member of the county high school rezoning committee, a band booster and a member of the Dividends program.

"But all that experience is nothing compared to being a parent," she said.

It is that parental experience, Robinson hopes, that will win her a seat at the school board. She believes she knows what parents want and that they need better representation on the board.

"Parents are very in touch with the needs at the school, but often they are overlooked," she noted. "There are people on the board who have backgrounds in administration, teaching and personnel, but there isn't anyone who comes as a parent representative."

Robinson's daughter Allison is a student at Greenwood Lakes Middle School and her sons Greg and Brian attend Lake Mary High School.

She hopes that despite the tight budgetary restraints the district faces, Seminole County will "continue to have the quality education we all expect." She admits, however, that will be difficult and does not claim to have a cure for the district's financial woes.

"But we have to deal with the growth now," she said. Not something to be put off into the future, Robinson suggests growth management solutions might include a modified school calendar, double sessions, the imposition of impact fees or an increase in the millage rate.

The key to success, she stresses, is in a multi-faceted approach to problem solving. She said the school board needs to work with other governmental agencies such as the Seminole County Commission and with the business community to find workable answers.

SHA workers vote to unionize

By LAURA L. SULLIVAN
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — The Sanford Housing Authority may soon begin collective bargaining with the International Union of Operating Engineers following an overwhelming vote for unionization by SHIA employees this week.

James Sweeting III, attorney for the housing authority, said SHIA employees voted 15 to 2 to unionize during an election Wednesday. If the Public Employees Relations Committee validates election results March 28, he said, collective bargaining negotiations will begin.

A personnel policy adopted by the board last year will be void if PERC calls the election valid.

SHA employees first moved to unionize in September following the board's negotiation of a private management contract, one later rejected by the federal government. Employees also complained when the board twice last year refused to grant cost-of-living pay increases called for in the personnel policy.

"This will forever change the relationship between the board and the housing authority employees," Sweeting said.

Make Sanford Shine group ready to act

By BRAD DILLING
Herald correspondent

SANFORD — They're unified. They're organized. They're tired of the trash in this city and they are going to do something about it.

They make up the Make Sanford Shine Committee and it held its third meeting in City Hall this morning.

The more than 16 groups that comprise it will be taking to the streets for an "all out assault" on city litter and trash this March 31, said Sanford Scenic Improvement Board Member Martha Yancey.

The group discussed the goals of their clean-up project this morning and assigned streets to each of the different groups that will be participating.

The clean-up area stretches from the waterfront to 13th Street and from Mellonville Avenue to French Avenue.

The effort will consist of washing downtown storefront windows, collecting trash that never made it to cans and washing sidewalks, said Yancey, a member of the Scenic Improvement Board that went to the Mayor's office to get the project off the ground one month ago.

While praising the cooperative civic effort, Mayor Betty Smith hinted that the project might be more than just an annual one. "We really need this," Smith

Correction

Due to an editing error, a story in Thursday's Sanford Herald stating Seminole County commissioners Tuesday approved immediate mandatory garbage collection is incorrect. Commissioners, during a non-voting work session, gave their verbal endorsement of the concept which would affect only unincorporated areas unless cities choose to join the program.

If given official commission approval in about a month, mandatory garbage collection is not scheduled to begin before October 1991.

Where has all the cash gone?

Government officials have determined that nobody's playing hide-and-seek with $180 billion, but it's missing anyway. That much cash has disappeared from the river of money flowing through Americans' pockets. Perhaps an old plan might help Washington find some of it.

The number of bills printed on government presses has matched the number needed for various transactions for years. But in late 1988, Federal Reserve officials noticed that the number printed has substantially exceeded the number needed for personal spending. The mysterious gap, which no one seems to be able to explain fully, totaled about $180 billion.

Some experts have suggested that most of the cash has left the country — stashed in foreign mattresses, you might say. Some is undoubtedly buried in fruit jars in the back yards of Americans who distrust the banking system. Some has been lost by careless people. Some may have disintegrated when it went through the family wash.

But the gap isn't fully explained by any of those things.

Several years ago, federal officials became concerned because of the large amount of cash being shuffled back and forth by drug traders. Concern ran so high that Congress included a provision in the anti-drug bill of 1988 that required the secretary of the Treasury and law enforcement personnel to study the feasibility of withdrawing $100 bills from circulation because they were the most common denomination used in drug transactions. No report has been issued.

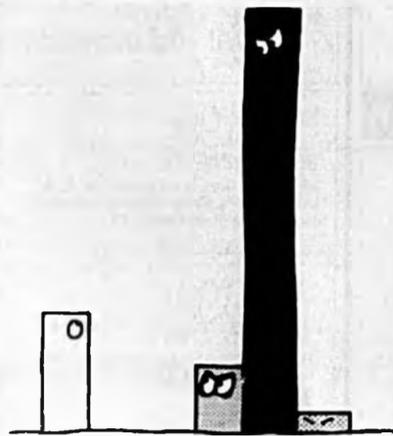

Others at the time suggested simply calling in all $100 bills and exchanging each for a new bill. That would have put drug dealers, who could have had thousands of the bills on hand, in a bind because they would have had to explain the cash cache.

Perhaps some of the missing cash is, indeed, hidden in the underground economy of drugs. Federal Reserve officials interested in tracing the missing money might reconsider the earlier proposals or come up with similar plans to flush out any drug cash that might be lying around. Their efforts also might help the Bush administration's battle against illegal drugs.

Pentagon has billions in unused goods

WASHINGTON — According to the General Accounting Office, the Pentagon's "attic" — its military warehouses — is bursting with $103 billion worth of supplies, from complete nuclear reactor systems to shirts and socks.

More important, though, the GAO found that these warehouses are filled with items the military does not need. In some cases, the Pentagon did not even know it had bought certain supplies; in other instances, it no longer knew why it had purchased some items.

GAO auditors also found that, over the last several years, Pentagon officials — due to unnecessary purchases — have had to devote increasing amounts of expensive storage space to obsolete goods. In some cases, the warehouses contain 33-year stocks of some items.

By the Pentagon's own reckoning, $34 billion of these supplies is in "unrequired" items. "Unrequired" is official terminology meaning not needed for a future war or required within the next two years in peacetime.

The GAO's findings, contained in three separate reports, were unveiled at a recent Senate Governmental Affairs Committee hearing.

"We believe the growth results from a tendency to stock far into the future," Assistant Comptroller General Frank C. Conahan told the senators. "This is fostered by a management philosophy that rewards obligating funds and filling orders. There is no corresponding emphasis on economy or efficiency."

The GAO found, among other abuses, that some Pentagon supply center supervisors increased requirements for items to prevent the computer from reporting current stocks as excessive.

In one case, a Defense Logistics Agency inventory manager found that he had more than the required six-month supply of fire-retardant shirts on hand. So he simply changed the requirement from a six-month supply to a five-year supply. This meant he had to order 1,078,000 new shirts to meet the new requirement guidelines. Today the military has 379,000 fire-retardant shirts in its warehouses and $8.7 million worth on order.

Much of the waste occurred during the Pentagon spending frenzy of the Reagan years.

GAO auditors found that the Navy — at an annual cost of $24 million — is warehousing 140,000 ship and submarine parts that have no current use and are not expected to be needed to meet any future requirements.

It has, for instance, 53 assemblies for a sonar system. But 51 of them, at a total value of $160,000, are not needed. The GAO says neither the Navy's item manager nor the branch chief had records or knew why the items had been purchased.

The GAO said that much of the waste occurred during the Pentagon spending frenzy of the Reagan years when Pentagon administrators found it hard to spend all the money they were given. But the GAO's Conahan said that even in more recent budget-restricted times, the military continues to spend billions of dollars annually for unneeded equipment and spare parts.

Even as the GAO reports were unveiled on Capitol Hill, there was an ironic event about 20 miles to the west. The "last" of the Air Force's SR-71 Blackbird spy planes was finishing a record-breaking (64 minutes, 17 seconds) cross-country flight at Dulles airport. It was turned over to the Smithsonian for display at the Air and Space Museum.

U.N. downplays abuse charges for hostages

WASHINGTON — The United Nations may be downplaying human rights abuses in Iran as part of an effort to free Western hostages held by Iranian-sponsored terrorists in Lebanon.

We have been reporting on the secret negotiations since last fall between Iran and Bush administration emissaries to release the hostages. The United States released tens of millions of dollars in frozen Iranian assets as a goodwill gesture that didn't work.

Now the U.N. has weighed in with a report that downplays extensive human rights violations by Iran.

The Iranians carefully choreographed the January trip to Iran by U.N. observer Reynaldo Galindo Pohl and kept up the pressure on Pohl when he went home. On Feb. 22, while Pohl was finalizing his report, an editorial appeared in the government-controlled Tehran newspaper calling for the release of the hostages. On Feb. 23, an Iranian-backed Shiite cleric in Lebanon said it was time to let them go. On Feb. 26, Pohl released his mild report.

Iranian President Hashemi Rafsanjani has been desperate to blunt international criticism of human rights abuses. Here are the behind-the-scenes events surrounding Pohl's investigation as revealed to us by intelligence sources:

●Nine days before Pohl arrived in Tehran, Iran began a massive transfer of thousands of political prisoners out of Tehran to prisons in other locations. Many of the prisoners were simply stashed in railroad cars while Pohl was in town.

●Six days before Pohl arrived, the former Iranian ambassador to the U.N. boasted to a parliamentary committee that Pohl was predisposed to accept the Iranian line because in negotiations before the visit he had established "a clear position in our favor."

●Pohl's arrival on Jan. 21 was blacked out by the Iranian press so dissidents could not seek him out, but the word passed through the opposition underground. Hundreds of people, many of them members of the opposition People's Mojahedin, staged a sit-in outside Pohl's hotel. Gangs of revolutionary guards attacked the demonstrators outside the hotel when Pohl was out of sight. While Pohl was still in town, a top Iranian judicial official confided to his co-workers that the Mojahedin followers would pay for their sit-in. "They have all been identified," he said.

●Pohl was taken to a show trial of an alleged murderer to demonstrate the civility of Iranian justice. The chief of the courts told colleagues he was warned in advance that Pohl was coming and was told to feign surprise and make sure everything ran according to law.

●The perfect picture was marred twice during Pohl's visits by government officials who obviously hadn't been clued in. An Iranian official publicly declared to Mojahedin officials in Iraq, "We take revenge on you. We put you in jail and kill you. This is a divine command." And another regime official shouted in a speech to the Iranian parliament, "When it comes to the Mojahedin, we go as far as killing and executing them. We also use the whip, prison, exile and all kinds of other punishments." Pohl left Tehran Jan. 28 after spending most of his time with "witnesses" supplied by the Rafsanjani regime and with government officials.

Supermarket glut of information

BOSTON — It is six o'clock at night and I am in the supermarket doing what all good Americans do there. I am reading.

The room is spacious. The lighting is perfect. The temperature is comfortable. The shelves are full. There is even a plotline of sorts traced through the words that have my full attention. The subject is nutrition.

I am surrounded by other readers, lips moving as we go down the sides of boxes. High-soluble fiber, low sodium, natural bran, low-fat, non-fat, low cholesterol, no cholesterol.

We do not talk to each other out loud, but read on silently: sucrose, carbohydrates, riboflavin, niacin, calcium, iron, potassium. A few, the sort who were grinds in high school, go to the small print: niacinamide, pyridoxine hydrochloride, palmitate, thiamin hydrochloride.

From time to time, one of my co-readers actually puts a box in her cart. I look up and ask myself, what has she learned that I cannot understand? If I take the same box, can I go home now?

Such pathetic scenes of Americans struggling through their supermarket libraries prompted Dr. Louis Sullivan to call the American grocery store "a Tower of Babel." Never mind that the Secretary of HHS had his images wrong (nobody is speaking here); he was quite right to describe the frustration that faces the average shopper.

Neither illiterate nor innumerate, we are faced daily with the possibility that we are in-nutritionate. We cannot separate the information from the dis-information. We can barely compare the sugar content of Alpha Bits with the fat content of Carnation breakfast bars or remember how many milligrams of salt is too many and whether potassium is good or bad.

"Consumers need to be linguists, scientists and mind readers to understand the many labels they see," said Dr. Sullivan. "It is a real mess."

So the good doctor has decided to clean up the mess by changing the nation's grocery reading. He is not the first public educator with this in mind. But if he has his way, the government will mandate a uniform label on manufactured foodstuffs to measure fat, fiber, cholesterol and calories among other things. There will be more labels, on everything from M&Ms to canned potatoes.

Well, I wish Dr. Sullivan good luck. May the people of America, to verily, come to know the difference between milligrams and nitrites.

nutrition and health. May his label become a best-seller. But my massive supermarket reading leads me to suspect that what we'll get from the government is more data and less comprehension.

Labels, labels, everywhere, from cigarettes to Twinkies. It's our way of striking a balance between a free-market economy and a healthy public. Manufacturers go on marketing anything that isn't illegal or immediately lethal. The government slaps a label on it. The consumer is left to beware.

This vast information glut does little more than increase the amount people are expected to know and the number of decisions we are forced to make.

Indeed, being a serious consumer has become a full-time job. In the same minutes, one person can read the label on a box of Heartwise cereal or an article on the ozone layer. He can make an intelligent choice between Weight Watchers and Stouffer frozen dinners or between competing national health plans. She can, in one year, read her way through the supermarket or through "War and Peace."

Dr. Sullivan may believe the government will streamline the profusion of labels and make our choices simpler. But anyone who buys that line should check the new "simplified" income-tax form.

What consumers want is less. Fewer decisions to make, labels that mean something. I'd rather be faced with an international ban symbol slapped on the cholesterol, a profile of chubby cheeks for the mega-fat system for health, very good for you, good for you, fair and "eat this and you die."

But what are we going to get? More data and more decisions to make. You can count on it. The next time you hit the market, forget the cart. Grab the nearest easy chair.

Manufacturers go on marketing anything that isn't illegal or immediately lethal. The government slaps a label on it. The consumer is left to beware.

Fire alarm system planned for city hall

LAKE MARY — City commissioners last night approved the installation of a fire alarm system for the new city hall. The fire alarm system was not designed into the building. The system will cost $14,225.50.

According to the National Fire Protection Association, any building with an occupancy of more than 100 persons must have an approved fire alarm system that works automatically and manually.

Sanford officials turned down the $102,000 rental rehabilitation grant in late 1988 after former city community development officer Richard Woods resigned. HUD said the department spent its administrative dollars from the county's HUD-financed grant before substantial rehabilitation work was accomplished. As a result, about $69,000 of a $103,000 1987 HUD rental rehabilitation grant was "deallocated" by HUD and never sent to the city.

The $34,000 remaining from the grant allowed eight rental units to be refurbished, Rowe said.

Sanford initially turned down the 1988 $102,000 rental rehabilitation allocation in late 1988, saying the 10 percent portion of it available for administration was too little. Sanford also refused a 1989 allocation. The city also refused to participate in the county's CDBG program in an effort to seek a larger grant from a HUD-financed state Small Cities Program.

The city was unsuccessful in securing a Small Cities grant and is rejoining the county CDBG program this year in an effort to secure the $300,000 housing rehabilitation grant.

Balagia said HUD officials contacted him earlier this month to see if the 1988 $102,000 rental rehabilitation was going to be spent. Balagia said HUD is going through a process of reallocating unspent federal grants and the county — and Sanford as its subcontractor — stood to lose use of the money.

Rowe said some rental units can be refurbished with the $102,000 and so the county commission Tuesday unanimously approved passing the money on to the city. Balagia said their HUD contract requires the money to be spent by July or risk losing all or a portion of it. Rowe said work can begin on the 14 units by then.

Grimm said. Twelve youth care workers, a family therapist and a parent trainer will work with children and parents to return children to their families or to find homes for teens whose parents no longer want them.

Teaching families to mediate problems helps them overcome the problems which sent the children to the shelter and problems which may arise later, Grimm said.

Even after youth have left the care of the shelter, Boys Town social workers continue to check their wellbeing, Grimm said. Aftercare is offered for a minimum of six months, she said.

When Boys Town first asked the city for permission to convert a two-story apartment building into a shelter last year, neighbors in Sanora and Pinecrest complained about placement of such a facility in their neighborhood. But Richard Luger, Boys Town of Central Florida director, said they have already improved the area by renovating the building and clearing knee-high weeds on the shelter's five lots.

"We're going to be better than their best neighbor," Luger said. Grimm said a basketball court and other outdoor recreation facilities will be added for teens at the shelter. Inside, the children will enjoy games and television during an average stay of two to four weeks.

Father Val Peter, Father Flanagan's Boys Town USA executive director, will come to Sanford for the April 3 opening with other officials from the Boys Town headquarters in Omaha, Neb. Boys Town social workers from Omaha are now training the shelter workers.

Grimm said the 12 youth care workers were chosen from a pool of 100 applicants. Interviewing for the positions was "intense," she said.

A national hotline for teens will help direct troubled youth to the Sanford shelter, Luger said.

"If there's a teenager standing down on Orange Blossom Trail, he can call the hotline and say, 'I've run away. I'm here,'" Luger said. Boys Town staff will be able to transport teens across Central Florida to Sanford.

Housing

We want that housing to be something they can afford, whether it's apartments or single-family homes," Scott said.

The five commissioners voted unanimously to formally request the Sanford City Commission to consider affordable housing stock in Sanford before approving the mall development order, scheduled for city commission review April 9.

State statutes governing approval of developments of regional impact require planners to weigh housing available near the developments.

Jay Marder, Sanford city planner, said this morning the Sanford area has sufficient affordable housing available in the city, surrounding areas in Seminole County, DeLtona and Lake County.

Some of the new Sanford developments, Marder said, would accommodate affordable housing needs are: about 300 homes starting in the $40,000 range planned for the Carriage Cove North development near the intersection of Lake Mary Boulevard and U.S. 17-92; a subsidized apartment complex planned for Hartwell Avenue, north of County Road 48-A; another 500 homes planned for a development between Oregon Avenue and Upland Road; several hundred apartments planned near Groveview on Lake Mary Boulevard; and plans still developing for at least 300 homes in an affordable housing venture off Celery Avenue.

During consideration of the mall development order March 9, the East Central Florida Regional Planning Council recommended to the City of Sanford requiring mall developer Melvin Simon & Associates of Indianapolis to build apartments affordable to the majority of mall employees whose income falls below the project median instead of the 400,000 square feet of offices planned for the development.

The planning council's recommendation is unrealistic because it requires all low-cost housing instead of a mix of housing ranges, Marder said.

"A developer would be much more likely to build a mixed housing development and really be able to achieve economic feasibility with units more in the luxurious end. That's expensive property out there," Marder said.

The 214-acre mall site was annexed into the city this week. The city commission this week also conceptually approved a plan to use property taxes collected from the mall property in its first 14 years of operation to build new roads and improve existing roads to accommodate mall traffic.

Groundbreaking for the 1.2 million-square-foot mall, which will be about 34,000 square feet smaller than Altamonte Mall, is scheduled for next year.

The only way to inspect the nut and make repairs, if necessary, would be to remove Discovery from its external tank and lower it to a horizontal position — a complex, time-consuming task that would require a roll back to the "VAB" and delay launch a week or more.

A source who requested anonymity said he believes there is a 50-50 chance the shuttle may have to be rolled back off the pad.

Julian met with the board of county commissioners Tuesday. "They agreed to split the legal costs 50-50 if the city agreed to share the legal burden," he said.

Julian also said the county requested that Lake Mary absorb any additional costs of a lawsuit. "They have asked us to pay the expense for expert witnesses or the expense of any adverse results from a lawsuit," Julian said. FPC has threatened to sue if the county ordered the utilities under ground.

Thomas Hlicka, FPC eastern division manager, said burial of the lines between Interstate-4 and Country Club Road would cost about $1.45 million. He said there was no legal basis for the order to bury the lines.

But Julian said the county will order the cables under ground, a move the city approved when it passed an ordinance earlier this year to require power line burial along Lake Mary Boulevard. A portion of the road is in the county and county commissioners agreed this week to order the cable burial.

EPA tries to avoid station shutdowns

WASHINGTON — The EPA, concerned about widespread shutdowns of service stations, Thursday postponed by one year impending deadlines for operators of underground gasoline storage tanks to get pollution liability insurance.

The "financial responsibility" requirements, designed to assure tank operators have sufficient money to clean up leaks, were supposed to take effect this year, but petroleum and service station industry officials have complained insurance companies have refused to provide such coverage.

The insurance rules are part of a major Environmental Protection Agency initiative to address thousands of leaking underground storage tanks across the country, many of which have contaminated ground water with gasoline and toxic chemicals.

Environmental Protection Agency Administrator William Reilly, acknowledging tank operators face "real problems" in getting insurance, said his agency was delaying compliance deadlines to avoid shutdowns of service stations, particularly in rural areas.

California allows super frogs in jump

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — California officials said Thursday they will issue a passport allowing giant African frogs to enter the state for the Calaveras County Jumping Frog Jubilee — if their owner agrees to prevent their escape.

The permit probably will be issued by Friday, provided amphibian collector Andy Koffman of Seattle agrees to a list of security conditions, said spokesman Lanny Claveccia of the state Department of Fish and Game.

Despite fears of some who believe the carnivorous frogs might ruin the competition by eating other amphibians and possibly injuring spectators, the nine-member Calaveras County Fair Board voted unanimously late Wednesday night to let the Goliath frogs enter the May 17-20 contest at Angels Camp, in the historic Mother Lode gold rush country.

Flu below epidemic levels

ATLANTA — Influenza is no longer at epidemic levels in the United States and the worst of the flu season may be over if no new strains appear, government researchers reported.

The federal Centers for Disease Control reported Thursday that by March 1, 6.5 percent of patients visiting doctors monitoring the illness reported symptoms of the flu, down from a season high of 8.9 percent reported Dec. 30.

As of March 3, 6.8 percent of the nation's deaths were attributable to flu or flu-related pneumonia. It marked the first time the death rate dropped below the epidemic rate of 6.9 percent since reaching epidemic levels the week ending Jan. 6.

Exxon skipper doesn't testify

By JEFF BERLINER
United Press International

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — Jurors will have to decide Joseph Hazelwood's fate without hearing the Exxon Valdez skipper's own version of what happened the night his tanker crashed into a reef and caused the nation's worst oil spill.

Testimony ended Thursday in the seven-week trial, and the jury is expected to get the case next Wednesday.

Superior Court Judge Karl Johnston asked Hazelwood if it was his desire not to testify, and with the jury out of the courtroom, the fired ship captain replied "That's correct."

Forty-five witnesses testified for the prosecution; 15 for the defense.

Besides Hazelwood, one conspicuous potential witness who never testified was Coast Guard Cmdr. Steven McCall, the Valdez port commander at the time of the grounding. McCall is heard on a tape recorded conversation with Hazelwood shortly after the supertanker went aground just after midnight last March 24 and dumped 11 million gallons of crude into Prince William Sound.

McCall's past comments have partially supported the defense and partially supported the prosecution, and apparently both sides were afraid to call him.

Hazelwood, 43, of Huntington, N.Y., faces up to seven years and three months in jail and a $61,000 fine if convicted of reckless endangerment, operating the tanker while intoxicated, negligent discharge of oil and criminal discharge — three misdemeanors and a felony.

Prosecutors say Hazelwood spent most of March 23 drinking vodka in Valdez bars before he sailed his tanker out into Prince William Sound that night with a load of 53 million gallons of oil. They say that he irresponsibly left the ship in the hands of unqualified crewmen while the tanker was on a detour around floating ice, and that he recklessly tried to rock the tanker free after it hit the rocks of Bligh Reef.

The defense acknowledges that Hazelwood had two or three drinks, fewer than alleged, but maintains he was not impaired and acted prudently.

If Hazelwood had taken the stand, he would have been subject to wide-ranging cross-examination about his drinking, and defense lawyers may have feared opening the door to Hazelwood's drinking history, including past drunken-driving convictions and alcohol treatment.

The judge scheduled legal debate for Friday and Monday over the laws Hazelwood is accused of breaking and how they will be explained to the jury of six men and six women.

E. German elections: Workers' paradise or W. German affluence?

By PATRICK MOSER
United Press International

EAST BERLIN — When East Germans go to the polls in their country's first free elections Sunday, they undoubtedly will confirm the end of 40 years of communist rule and opt for democracy and affluence, West German style.

The electoral contest is likely to be a neck-and-neck race between the Social-Democratic Party and the conservative Alliance for Germany, each of which can expect to garner between 30 and 40 percent of the vote.

New Forum, which played a key role in the peaceful revolution that ousted the hard-line communist leadership late last year, can expect to be even worse off than the former ruling party and is unlikely to gain any significant percentage of the vote.

A loosely organized group, New Forum defended the need for a separate East German identity, failing to respond in time to popular pressure for German reunification, on which the West German-backed parties have capitalized.

Indications are that the Social Democratic Party, known as SPD, will gain a slight advantage over its main opponent.

Analysis

The SPD's chances further improved at the last minute, when leading conservative candidate Wolfgang Schnur resigned after admitting he had worked for the once-feared state security police of the ousted hard-line communist leadership.

Democratic Awakening, which together with the Christian Democratic Union and the German Social Union formed the conservative Alliance for Germany.

The Social-Democrat's main candidate, Ibrahim Bohme, is confident he will become the first non-communist leader in the state's 40-year history, and probably its last before German reunification.

Paris fashion takes on a Moulin Rouge appearance

UPI report

PARIS — No need to buy tickets to the Moulin Rouge or the Lido — designer Thierry Mugler's fall-winter ready-to-wear show for store buyers and press looked like a Paris nightclub.

Mini dresses bared the leg right to its end and necklines were slashed to the waist. In back, the dresses flared into saucy peplums under supertight waists.

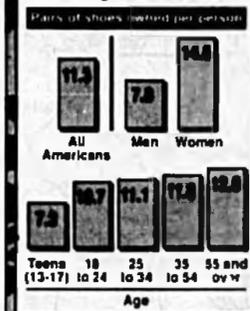

Add sequins, glitter, velvet, rhinestones. Mix well with songs and dances by aging Paris nightclub stars from the 1950s — Amanda Lear and Alice and Ellen Kessler.

Throw in skin-hugging tights and low-cut flared jackets in tough and shiny black vinyl, plus a transparent white stretch skin-hugging jump suit with rhinestones glued over the private parts, and you cooked up a girly show from a Champs Elysee nightclub that staggered Mugler's audience.

The talented Mugler did show a few wearable outfits — jackets in strawberry red, butter yellow, orange and blue that had tight waists curving into round shapes over the hips.

Other jackets had hems cut in slits like petals. Some were made of the newly popular silver stretch lurex. Khaki or

Israeli government kicked out

United Press International

JERUSALEM — Parliament brought down Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's government, approving a no-confidence motion after the Likud Party leader refused to compromise and accept a U.S. proposal for Israeli-Palestinian peace talks.

The Knesset, Israel's Parliament, passed the no-confidence motion on a 60-55 vote with five members absent. It was the first time since Israel's founding nearly 42 years ago that a parliamentary no-confidence vote had brought down the government.

The failure to achieve a last-minute compromise to hold the Likud-Labor coalition together means the Middle East peace process initiated by Shamir a year ago is likely to be stalled indefinitely while Israeli politicians try to form a new government.

Advancement of the peace process will be key to forming a new coalition.

The collapse of the government came less than two weeks after President Bush said there should be no new Jewish settlements in Arab East Jerusalem. The comment triggered new Israeli concerns about retaining control over a united Jerusalem and whether Arabs from the city should be included in an Israeli-Palestinian dialogue.

The government also has been under U.S. pressure to advance the peace process by accepting proposals by Secretary of State James Baker.

AIDS epidemic peak doubted

United Press International

BOSTON — Federal health experts expressed doubt over a study by two researchers that suggests the AIDS epidemic in the United States may be tapering off.

Using a mathematical model of epidemics, Dennis Bregman and Dr. Alexander Langmuir contend the even-numbered number of AIDS cases may total just 200,000 — far below previous estimates.

The study, published Thursday in the Journal of the American Medical Association, seeks to demonstrate that the number of new AIDS cases already has peaked and will drop to a relatively low level before the year 2000.

Indications are that "evidence of new cases has started to decline and will continue downward," Bregman and Langmuir wrote.

However, other AIDS investigators questioned the figures, noting government health officials recently estimated that 1 million Americans are now infected with the AIDS virus. If that is correct, AIDS cases by 2000 will "substantially exceed" 200,000, they said.

Bregman and Langmuir used a model known as William Farr's Law of Epidemics to predict that new U.S. AIDS cases among three groups considered most at risk — homosexual and bisexual men and intravenous drug users — will dip to 921 cases in 1995, about the same annual level as recorded in 1982. AIDS was first recognized in the United States in 1981.

According to Farr's Law, epidemics generally rise and fall in a bell-shaped curve, starting out with a small number of cases, rising steadily and then falling off at about the same rate.

In editorials accompanying the study, AIDS researchers at the federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta and Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore sharply questioned its conclusions and methods.

Poindexter, North computer files gone

United Press International

WASHINGTON — Almost 6,000 messages were deleted from the computer files of John Poindexter and Oliver North as the Iran-Contra scandal unraveled in November 1986, a former White House computer expert testified Thursday.

Kelly Williams, an Army staff sergeant assigned to the White House Communications Agency from 1982 to 1989, said the deleted computer messages were later re-created because the White House kept duplicates of information on computer disks.

Messages sent to North by Poindexter, the last of the original Iran-Contra defendants and the highest ranking Reagan administration official to stand trial in the affair, are central to the case against Poindexter.

Williams testified that White House backup computer tapes showed that between Nov. 22 and Nov. 29, 1986, a total of 736 messages were deleted from North's electronic mail files — only one remained out of 737.

During the same time period, a total of 5,012 notes were deleted from Poindexter's electronic files, Williams said.

The computer records showed that Poindexter "logged on" to the system for 15 consecutive hours on Nov. 24, Williams testified, beginning at 4:30 a.m. and continuing until 7:36 p.m.

On cross-examination, Williams said he could not say for sure who deleted the messages, but it only could have been done by someone who knew Poindexter and North's "system identification" and their personal computer passwords.

Poindexter, 53, a former national security adviser, is accused of five felony counts of lying to Congress and obstructing its investigation of the scandal. The affair involved the sale of U.S. arms to Iran and the diversion of profits to arm the Nicaraguan Contras when Congress had prohibited official aid.

Poindexter's lawyers were infuriated by the testimony. They sought a mistrial, but Greene denied the request.

The defense had claimed that prosecutors "doctored" an exhibit

Union formed for nation's 2.2 million nurses

United Press International

WASHINGTON — The American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees said Thursday it formed a new nurses union, warning hospital administrators "they're no longer dealing with Florence Nightingale but with Wonder Woman."

The new AFSCME unit, the United Nurses of America, will seek to organize all 2.2 million nurses in the nation, AFSCME President Gerald McEntire told more than 300 nurses attending the union's National Nurses Congress.

AFSCME counts about 325,000 health care workers, including 36,000 nurses, among its more than 1.2 million members. The American Nurses Association, a professional organization, is the largest nurses group, with 200,000 members.

McEntire said in addition to seeking higher pay, better conditions and more respect for nurses, the UNA would work to reform the health care system and make access to medical care the right of all Americans.

We say to those who would think nurses should stay put, follow orders and leave it to the powers that be to determine the future of health care in America. Enough is enough," McEntire told the gathering.

In a statement issued to announce the union, McEntire emphasized, "I hope the hospital administrators understand that I hope they realize that they're no longer dealing with Florence Nightingale but with Wonder Woman."

AFSCME officials said about 6 million health care workers, including more than a million nurses, remain unorganized by unions. Other unions organizing nurses include the Service Employees and the Teamsters, they said.

The co-chairwoman of the UNA are Fay Krohn, a licensed practical nurse from Minnesota, and Kathy Sackman, a registered nurse who has served since 1976 as president of the 6,000 member United Nurses Associations of California.

Sackman said the UNA would seek to give nurses a greater voice in a system that "has been taken over by bean counters," hospital and insurance administrators who "are never expected to get anywhere near a live patient."

She said nurses are paid half of what they deserve and thousands are "being burned out and stressed beyond their limits," resulting in a nursing shortage that is "going to get worse before it gets better."

Cop on child labor beat, U.S. says

By GARY SILVERMAN
United Press International

WASHINGTON — A three-day Labor Department crackdown that uncovered 7,000 child labor law violations failed to go far enough because the names of the businesses hiring children were not released, a congressional critic says.

Rep. Tom Lantos, D-Calif., chairman of the House subcommittee on employment and housing, promised he would identify companies found in violation of the Fair Labor Standards Act today at a hearing of his panel.

The Labor Department said Thursday it had found 7,000 children working illegally at 1,400 of the 3,400 businesses it examined during a three-day nationwide sweep by 500 investigators ending Wednesday night.

Department officials said their "conservative" estimate was that $1.8 million in fines would be assessed against the companies found to be breaking the law during "Operation Child Watch" but declined to name the businesses.

In announcing the operation, Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dole warned that increasing numbers of businesses might consider hiring children because of labor shortages developing in some sections of the country and pledged that her department would not tolerate such practices.

"Through 'Operation Child Watch' I want to deliver a clear message," Dole told a news conference. "The cop is on the beat. Violators, whether motivated by greed or ignorance, will not be tolerated."

But Lantos said the special operation, which utilized more than half of the department's more than 900 investigators, showed the need for more employees to check on violations every day of the year.

"What we need now is more Indians on the job not for three days but every single day of the year," he said.

Lantos also said violators of child labor laws should face heavier fines and be identified, calling adverse publicity a potent deterrent.

"The public has every right to know who is violating the laws," he said.

John Zalusky of the AFL-CIO called on the department to use its powers to seek criminal penalties against violators of the child labor laws, which limit the hours children can work and the jobs they can perform.

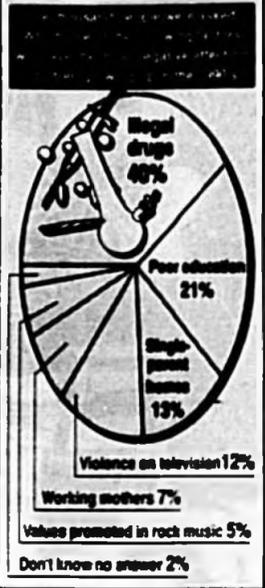

William Brooks, the department's assistant secretary, said companies were not identified because their cases were still open. He acknowledged some companies might never be named if they entered into consent agreements.

"I think that goes beyond our responsibility," Brooks said of releasing names. "I don't think we should come out with a laundry list."

Dole also said she was not yet prepared to ask for additional funds for enforcement. She said the task at hand was to "maximize those resources that we have right now" and see if they are sufficient.

Most of the violations uncovered by the sweep involved 14- and 15-year-olds working too many hours or too late at night. Brooks said 900 youths, usually 16- and 17-year-olds, were found performing hazardous jobs, and 199 violations involved youths under age 14.

Quayle taunts Castro

United Press International

BRASILIA, Brazil — Vice President Dan Quayle, having declined to meet with Fidel Castro, taunted the Cuban president for being the only one among 19 world leaders in a military uniform at the swearing in of Brazilian President Fernando Collor de Mello.

Upon the vice president's concluding his six-nation Latin American tour, Nicaraguan Contra negotiators said they would meet with Quayle in Washington today to discuss plans to dismantle their rebel army once U.S.-backed candidate Violeta Chamorro takes office April 25.

There was no confirmation from the Bush administration of the meeting between Quayle and representatives of the Contras, who have fought a U.S.-supported war against outgoing Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega for more than eight years. Chamorro defeated Ortega in elections Feb. 25.

Speaking at a news conference Thursday that was disrupted when a tropical thunderstorm knocked out the lighting and microphones, Quayle said when he looked upon the 19 heads of government assembled for the inauguration ceremony in Congress he was "shocked that there was one leader in a uniform."

"The other leaders were there because their people had elected them," Quayle said.

Castro wore his trademark uniform to the ceremony — combat boots and olive green. The communist leader sat in a different section from Quayle as required by protocol.

Quayle repeated his vow made Wednesday not to speak to Castro in Brasilia, but he said, "I have talked to Latin American leaders and asked them to speak to Castro so that he can do something to end the war in El Salvador." Quayle wants Castro to stop arming leftist rebels fighting the U.S.-supported government in El Salvador.

New Brazilian president hits economic woes

United Press International

BRASILIA, Brazil — President Fernando Collor de Mello, moments after being sworn in, acted to halt hyperinflation in South America's biggest country and said further austerity measures would be revealed Friday.

Collor, upon receiving the presidential oath Thursday from outgoing President Jose Sarney at the Planalto palace, signed decrees slashing from 24 to 12 the number of government ministries in a sign of his cost-cutting campaign to reduce the deficit.

He signed another decree authorizing the sale of apartments and homes owned by the government in Brasilia.

He said he would announce Friday other anti-inflation and stabilization measures to turn around a cost-of-living spiral that shot up by 2.751 percent in the 12-month period ending Feb. 28, battering the purchasing power of wage earners and discouraging investment.

Patriots, Hornets to defend Lake Mary Invitational titles

By TONY DeBORMIER
Herald Sports Editor

LAKE MARY — Seven boys' teams and 11 girls' teams will compete in the ninth annual Lake Mary High School Invitational track meet tonight at Lake Mary's Don T. Reynolds Stadium.

Among the field are defending girls' champion Haines City and defending boys' champion Lake Brantley.

Rounding out the boys' field are Lake Mary, Lake Howell, Oviedo, Edgewater, Deltona and DeLand. Joining Haines City in the girls' competition are Lake Mary, Lake Brantley, Lake Howell, Oviedo, Lyman, Deltona, DeLand, Edgewater, Winter Park and Dr. Phillips.

According to Lake Mary girls' coach Mike Gibson, the meet will start at 3 p.m. with the first five field events — the girls' long jump, girls' high jump, girls' shot put, boys' long jump and boys' discus.

Ideally, the turnaround will be at 4:30 p.m., when the boys move to the high jump and shot put while the girls compete in the discus. Competition in the boys' and girls' triple jump is also expected to begin at 4:30 p.m.

The running preliminaries will start at 5 p.m. Because of the relatively small size of the field, there will only be preliminaries in the girls' 110 high hurdles, 100 meter dashes, the 440 yard dashes, the girls' 330 low hurdles and boys' 330 intermediate hurdles, and the 220 yard dashes.

Competition in the pole vault is expected to start about 6 p.m.

The running finals are scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. with the running of the two-mile relay. Competition will then follow the standard meet schedule, starting with the high hurdles finals and going through the 100 meter dash, mile run, 440 yard relay, 440 yard dash, 330 hurdles, 800 yard run, 220 yard sprint, two mile run and the mile relay.

In other meets

Both the Seminole boys' and girls' squads will be on the road this weekend.

The Tribe boys won't have to go far, traveling to Winter Park tonight for a six-team meet at Showalter Field. Joining them in the event are Winter Park, Oak Ridge, Winter Haven, Titusville-Astronaut, Gainesville-Buchholz and Lake Wales.

Meanwhile, Seminole's girls are headed to Jacksonville this weekend to take part in the Bob Hayes Invitational hosted on Saturday.

According to Seminole coach Nate Perkins, the Hayes Invitational — which is hosted by Jacksonville-Raines High School — is a good test to determine where the Seminoles are in their quest for a fifth consecutive state championship.

Lyman High School's boys will also be making the trip to Jacksonville for the Hayes meet.

Lake Mary earns respect

Rams topple Pats to force three-way tie

From staff reports

Thanks to the Lake Mary Rams, the first half of the Seminole Athletic Conference softball season came to a close Thursday night in a dead heat with three teams tied for first at 5-1.

Playing at home Thursday afternoon, the Lake Mary girls upset Lake Brantley 6-3. Combined with Oviedo's 3-0 shutout of Lake Howell that puts Lake Brantley, Lake Mary and Oviedo all at 5-1.

Lake Howell is next at 3-3, DeLand 2-4, Seminole 1-5 and Lyman 0-6.

The teams will now concentrate on nine weeks' tests till next Thursday when the second half of the league season starts.

LAKE MARY 6 LAKE BRANTLEY 3

LAKE MARY — Tara Calvin's triple keyed a five-run sixth inning as Lake Mary came from behind to defeat Lake Brantley 6-3 Thursday afternoon.

The Patriots had been undefeated in SAC play entering Thursday's contest.

Lake Brantley started like it meant to remain unbeaten by jumping out to a 3-0 lead. The Patriots scored two runs in the second inning on a double by Michelle Karr and a home run by Christa Schroedel, then scored their third run in the third on singles by Tania Davis and Jennifer Soost, an error and a Kristi Wilson fielder's choice. Soost scored the run.

The Rams started their comeback in the fifth when Robin Williams singled. Dena Morasch walked and Heather Golden doubled to score Williams.

The deciding sixth inning started with a Marti Ciarella single. Calvin then blasted her triple to center to drive in Ciarella before scoring the tying run herself on Williams' single to right.

After Terri Peters reached on an error, Morasch singled to score Williams with the go-ahead run. Golden hit her second double of the game to score two runs and Paula Songer singled to finish the scoring.

"The bottom of our order did a good job of getting on base," said Lake Mary coach Karen Nolen. "And the top of the order did their job by driving in the runs. That's the kind of balance we've been looking for hitting from top to bottom."

Peters, Morasch, Golden, Songer and Renee Sanville had two hits each to pace the Rams while Diaz, Chris Rababa and Jennifer Masciarelli had two hits each for Lake Brantley.

OVIEDO 3, LAKE HOWELL 0

Casselberry — Oviedo bounced back from Wednesday night's 12-

Reason to celebrate

Lake Mary scored a major victory Thursday as the Rams rallied to knock off the Lake Brantley Patriots in a Seminole Athletic Conference softball showdown. The win creates a three-way tie between inning loss to Lake Brantley and ended Lake Howell's seven-game winning streak with a 3-0 victory over the Silver Hawks at Lake Howell Thursday.

Oviedo improved its record to 11-3 while the Silver Hawks fall to 9-4.

The Lions played excellent defense to win this one as Chex Bartels, Kristy Montecore and Claudia Taggart all made big plays to back the four-hit pitching of Lisa Hollon.

"We wanted this one badly after losing in 12 innings the other night," said Oviedo coach Jackie Miller. "We won this one with the defense. Lake Howell hit the ball hard and we made no errors."

The Lions scored their first run in the top of the first inning when Michelle Schrupp reached on an

100 in freefall formation

Skydivers establish new record in Florida

DELAND — Sport (men and women) parachutists set a new Florida state record Feb. 18 when they built a freefall formation containing 100 skydivers.

The big formation was built over Skydive DeLand, located on Deland Municipal Airport near Daytona Beach. It beat the previous record of 72 established in 1983.

The group of highly experienced skydivers spent four days chasing the record. They devoted the first two days to smaller "warm-up" dives involving 30 to 64 parachutists. The group of men and women was ready to attempt a 100-way on Saturday morning. After four unsuccessful jumps, it set the new record Sunday afternoon by building the 100-way.

Freefall formations containing 100 or more jumpers are quite difficult. Only five have ever been built; the last one was completed in August, 1988, in Illinois.

The skydivers were hauled to 15,000 feet in four aircraft: two DC-3s, a Dellavilland Twin Otter and a Fairchild Turbo Porter. It was filmed in freefall by three photographers who jumped with the group.

All four aircraft dropped their jumpers simultaneously while flying in formation. From that altitude, the skydivers had about 70 seconds to fly together and build the formation that loosely resembles six concentric rings. The group had repeatedly rehearsed the jump on the ground so each participant knew exactly where his position was.

The formation was completed at an altitude of about 6500 feet and held for seven seconds. The skydivers dropped their grips at the predetermined 5000-foot altitude and dove away from each other to open their parachutes. All landed on the drop zone located at one corner of the big but little-used airport.

The largest freefall formation ever completed in Florida is shown building while it falls at 100 mph. Three skydivers on the right side of the photo are about to dock while the skydiver in the

Many of the participants live in Florida, but some traveled to the record attempt from Europe, Canada and the western U.S.

Florida is a popular destination for skydivers because of its fine weather and well-equipped parachuting centers.

Skydive DeLand is a particularly popular place to jump. It has a small fleet of six jump aircraft that range in size from a 4-place Cessna 182 to a 40-place DC-3.

Its 10-passenger Turbo Porter and 20-place Twin Otter are the workhorses of its fleet. Those two turboprop aircraft climb quickly and have doors that can be operated in flight. The doors make winter skydiving more comfortable.

Skydive DeLand owner Bob Hallett contends he operates the world's premier training center.

It is the home of several world-champion competition teams. Each year competitors come from all over the World for several weeks of intensive training.

The next major event as Skydive DeLand is its annual Spring Fling scheduled for May 4 to 13. More than 300 skydivers will attend the Spring Fling to make a series of group jumps ranging in size from 8 to 64 skydivers.

Don't pick on unruly tots for dining out

DEAR ABBY: So "Indigestion in Anaheim" has had it with all those "cute" little toddlers in restaurants whose yelling and screaming make it impossible for other diners to carry on a conversation? Well, I have a message for her: Parents of toddlers like to eat out occasionally, too. It's nice when you can take the family out to eat and have someone else clean up the mess (and toddlers do make a mess).

Don't criticize toddlers for whining and crying — that's what children that age do. You were no different when you were a toddler. (Ask your mother.) Adults can be loud and irritating, too, so please don't pick on toddlers.

OFFENDED IN PHILLY

DEAR ABBY: I agree with "Indigestion in Anaheim." I, too, am tired of going to restaurants and having my evening ruined by families with small children. Here are some tips for parents:

(1) The party at the next table does not want to say "hi" 20 times to your toddler. (2) If a baby needs a shopping bag of toys to keep him busy, he is too young to be eating out. (3) If your child acts up, don't wait until he starts screaming at the top of his lungs. Take him outside immediately. Your waitress will be happy to pack up your leftovers and get you out of the place.

You say the reason you take your child to restaurants is to teach him how to conduct himself in a public place. Fine. There is something else your child needs to learn at an early age — respect for other people.

ROYAL OAK, MICH.

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Indigestion in Anaheim": People like you give me indigestion. We have three children under 5 years old, and we take them out to eat once a week. They are not always angels, but whose kids are? We are tired of the long sighs and dirty looks we get from other diners if one of our kids acts up.

We purposely avoid the "family" restaurants because they're full of kids, and it just doesn't work out. Where we come from, sitters charge by the child, which is too expensive. So when you see families with small children eating out, give us a break and don't treat us like we have some kind of contagious disease.

PARENTS WITH CHILDREN

DEAR ABBY: You may have noticed that the parents of children who misbehave in restaurants are the fastest eaters in the world. My wife and I enjoy eating out but we can't always find sitters; therefore, we have to take our children with us and hope they behave.

ADVICE

Children are unpredictable. At times, ours behave so well that strangers compliment us. Other times, we end up gulping our food and running out of the place red-faced.

SPEED EATERS

DEAR ABBY: Last week I invited some close friends to dinner. I specifically asked them not to bring anything because I wanted to prepare the entire meal myself. I spent the entire day planning and creating a well-coordinated meal, and I was looking forward to presenting what I thought was a knockout dinner.

Everything was fine, until one of the guests walked in with an entree, some appetizers and a dessert! Not only were these unsolicited dishes redundant, but they were totally unrelated to the theme of my dinner!

I had no choice but to thank her for her generosity and place her food next to mine. The other guests felt obligated to partake of her offerings, and felt that my dinner was ruined because my cooking had to compete with hers.

This is not the first time this guest has brought something — that's why I specifically asked her not to bring anything. However, she loves to cook, and this is the way she shows her appreciation.

Please tell your readers that sometimes generosity may not enhance a meal, but may, in fact, ruin it.

F.S.

DEAR F.S.: You say you had no choice — that you had to place her food next to yours on the table. Where is that written? You could have thanked her graciously, then placed her gifts in your freezer for "later."

(Problems? Write to Dear Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Dear Abby, P.O. Box 89440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. All correspondence is confidential.)

Who's cooking?

The Sanford Herald welcomes suggestions for cooks of the week.

Novice cooks and ethnic cooks, as well as experienced cooks and master chefs, add a different dimension to dining. Who is your choice? Maybe it's your mother, father, brother, sister, son, daughter, spouse, friend or boss.

Submit your nomination for Cook of the Week to the Herald People editor at 322-2611, ext. 34.

Churches asked to change Nicaragua policies

United Press International

WASHINGTON — The Institute on Religion and Democracy called on mainline churches Monday to change their policies toward Nicaragua following elections there that ousted the Sandinista government.

In letters to the Rev. Leonid Kishkovsky, president of the National Council of Churches, as well as leaders of other mainline Protestant churches, Institute Chairman Edmund Robb said Protestant churches and their missionaries in Nicaragua had a "distorted vision of Nicaraguan reality" in alleged support for the Sandinista government.

"When finally given a chance to express themselves freely, the Nicaraguan people resoundingly rejected their self-proclaimed liberators," Robb said.

Are our morals reflected by movies?

When "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" was given the movie censors' Seal of Approval in 1963 after an appeal by Warner Bros., the reports that followed of the imminent death of the Hays Office were not exaggerated.

The Edward Albee play brought to the screen a veritable avalanche of obscenities never before heard in a movie theater. The age of clean dialogue and happy endings was over.

"A fine reticence" gave way in the movies to tasteless realism. Happily, Will Hays was no longer around. He would never have understood what was happening.

As movie censor from 1922 to 1945, Hays had run a tight ship. Now it was taking on water and sinking rapidly. By 1968 the Hays Office, like Hays, would be dead.

Joe Breen, Hays' top lieutenant in Hollywood from 1934 to 1954, was still alive in 1963 (he was 73). But it seems safe to assume he never went to see

GEORGE PLAGENZ

"Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?"

Hays and Breen never thought of themselves as blue noses. They would have said they were simply enforcing the Production Code (as it was called, which had been drawn up by the movie industry itself).

True, the producers looked at the code from a point of view that was often at odds with Hays' and Breen's view. Hays complained that when a script called for a woman to cross her legs, the directors "would see how high she could cross them and still stay within the letter of the code."

Hays felt the criterion should be "to see how low she could cross them and still be 'interesting.'"

While the producers and authors understandably tried to go as far as they could with the censors, their protests that the Hays Office was ruining their creative efforts does not appear to have had much validity.

Variety, the trade paper of the entertainment industry, wrote in 1935 that "the belief that Hollywood under the Hays Office would only be allowed to make namby-pamby stories hasn't materialized."

TV critic Michael Medved, co-host of "Sneak Previews" on television, says that in the 1940s, when the Hays Office was going strong, over 90 million Americans — close to two-thirds of the country — went to the movies every single week.

Today, even though the country's population has doubled, the number of filmgoers is less than 20 million a week.

FROM THE PULPIT

What do ministers do when not preaching?

By G. RICHARD DANIELAK
Guest columnist

SANFORD — What do ministers do when not preaching?

It's not a foolish question. If you really think about it. In fact, you yourself may have asked it. What does a minister do when he is not preaching, once his Sunday message has been delivered? Does he steal off for the remainder of the week to some quasi-Mt. Sinai mountain top to commune with God and there gather his material for next Sunday's message? Or perhaps he's one who Monday through Friday puts in a few hours at the office, checks the answering machine for messages, takes care of necessary correspondence, and then it's off to his study (at home or course) to catch up on his reading. I suspect that while some may think these tongue-in-cheek scenarios are valid, most of you, I hope, know better. So the question persists. What DO ministers do when not preaching?

Being a minister, I begin my response with a quote from John Newton (18th century), writing about ministers. "The Christian ministry is the worst of all trades, but the best of all professions." Centuries earlier John Chrysostom along a similar vein wrote, "The minister's shortcomings simply cannot be concealed. Even the most trivial soon get known. However others, since everyone measures sin not by the size of the offense but by the standing of the sinner." These statements by holy men of God tell us something. For one thing, that when one becomes a minister there will be those in Christendom very much concerned over the lives and concerns of ministers, even to the point of wondering what they do when they are not preaching, even daringly wondering if, heaven forbid, they do anything at all.

Quite seriously let me be among the first to emphatically state that there is no other calling which can even come a close second to the awesomeness and loftiness of being a minister of God. As persons who feel they have responded to the call of Jesus Christ to serve, ministers have scaled the mountains of almost every emotion, soaring at times in solemn moments of prayer the highest realms of ecstasy, only in the very next breath to go hurtling downward into the pangs of Job-like agony. Which is to say that a minister true to his calling is involved in a way of life which has one constant: that of walking in the footsteps of Jesus Christ, and heeding the mandate to take up the cross and follow him, and at times rushing headstrong into areas and situations where fools dare to tread. What does a minister do when not preaching? Probably and likely he is involved in visiting the sick, talking to the imprisoned, finding shelter for the homeless and meals for the hungry, calling upon prospective members and trying to find out why John and Mary have not been seen in church lately, to say nothing about burying the dead and dispensing the sacraments.

What does a minister do when he's not preaching? On a day when the custodian may not be available you may find him setting up tables for tonight's meeting or locking up after the meeting. You may even find him pushing a broom to clean up an unexpected mess. Tasks which may not be on his job description, but then when is the task of a father or mother (note the implied analogy) limited to a job description?

My point in all this goes deeper than my concern for your thoughts on what a minister does when not preaching, wishing to open up your heart and mind to the fact that your minister is human, trying to be as God wishes him to be. I want to emphasize that he is limited yet special, in so many ways. As you, and perhaps more than you, he knows he is a sinner, weak in so many ways. Furthermore, he has hurts and needs, as you do. At times he may act as though he wears some kind of impenetrable armor or is impervious to the hickering he may hear behind his back, but perhaps that's because Christ has become his breastplate. He, too, has dreams and aspirations as you do. He seeks to be loved and appreciated just as anyone else. What does a minister do when he is not preaching? No, he is not in some Upper Room conversing with God and, no, he is not living a life of ease during the week.

More likely than not he is living a life filled with its share of anxiety and stress, searching for peace and happiness in Christ, as you are.

My message to you is simple — please reach out to your minister. He needs you. He needs the love and understanding of the Christ present within you. I recall once reading a piece of verse about a minister, bemoaning the fact that he, in response to the call of Christ to serve, had opened his heart allowing the Lord to send in one or two hurting souls. But to his surprise his heart was beset by hundreds begging for his attention. Finally in exasperation he cried out to God, "Enough! I am being consumed by this constant giving and giving. When will it end? When will someone give to me?" The verse ends with these words, "Yes, my child, it was I, your God, who called you to serve. It was I who caused you to open your heart and moved you to minister to those in need. But know this, that as you serve and as they who need you race into your heart I, your God, rush in with them." My message? Would you be the breath of God's love to your minister?

What do ministers do when not preaching? As people committed to serving others in the name of Jesus Christ they continue to give praise, honor and glory to God. Gregory the Great put it this way: "He who is required by necessity to speak the highest things is compelled by the same necessity to exemplify the highest things." Your minister walks on a pilgrimage leading to a heavenly Jerusalem. Walk with him just as Jesus Christ walks your pilgrimage with you.

Rev. G. Richard Danielak is pastor of First Presbyterian Church, 301 S. Oak Ave., Sanford.

Multiple-sclerosis research continues

MEDICINE

PETER GOTT, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: What is multiple-sclerosis virus? What are the symptoms and treatment?

DEAR READER: Multiple sclerosis is a serious, progressive neurological disease of young adults, marked by weakness, stiffness, clumsiness, tingling and numbness, double vision, lightheadedness, nausea, incontinence and impotence. The symptoms typically occur in a cycle of attacks and remissions. However, weakness eventually becomes permanent and inexorable, leading to a profound degree of handicap. Patients may need total nursing care. When the respiratory muscles are affected, breathing must be mechanically maintained. At present, there is no treatment for MS; symptoms are treated as they arise.

In the past few years, there has been considerable interest in whether a type of virus might cause MS. In animals, viral diseases resembling MS have been identified. The most extensively studied animal viruses are the murine encephalomyelitis virus, viana virus and the Johns Hopkins strain of hepatitis virus. However, to date, no virus has been identified as a cause of human MS.

At present, MS is a baffling tragedy for its victims and an enormous challenge for the medical profession. Nonetheless, experts are continuing to study this disorder, and new reports indicate that hope may lie in future methods to stimulate the body's immune response by artificially activating antibody-producing cells.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Please explain why I constantly get cracks on the sides of my thumbs and fingers. Is there a way to prevent this?

DEAR READER: When the skin of the fingers dries out, as is apt to happen in winter, painful cracks can appear. These cracks can be quite deep and difficult to treat. The problem is worsened

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

Because his no-trump openings showed 16-18, North bid one club. When East overcalled one no-trump, South should really have doubled. When his spade bid was raised, it was easy to bid game. Making 10 tricks was another matter. The trump lead by West was best. Declarer won and led a diamond. East won and led another trump. There was no time to ruff the third diamond, so South had to lose three diamonds and the club ace. But something could have been done about it. At the first trick, declarer can mark East with all the important high cards. If spades are 2-2, there is never a problem. But if East has three spades, a different approach may be effective. So declarer plays K-A and ruffs a heart. East discarding the nine of diamonds. Now a club is led to the king. If East takes the ace and plays back a spade, dummy wins and the last heart is ruffed. What can East discard? A diamond honor is no good — declarer will simply set up the diamond jack. And a club discard will allow South to play the queen and ruff a club, setting up the dummy's lowly four-spot. Suppose then that East ducks the first club led to the king. Declarer still ruffs the last heart, and East has the same type of discarding problem. Needless to say, if East hits upon the unusual play of ruffing a heart in front of declarer, South now makes 10 tricks by simply ruffing his third diamond.
