HAVOC REIGNS IN MANCHURIA AFTER BATTLE

Chinese Troops Flee Before Soviet Invasion Leaving Civilians To Red Fury

PEKING, Nov. 27.—(INS)—While the Chinese government awaited the results of its appeal to both the League of Nations and the individual signatories of the Kellogg pact to take steps to halt the Soviet "invasion" of Manchuria, tales of the privations of residents of the war-torn area poured in here today.

More than 10,000 Chinese and several hundred Russian refugees from the Harbin and Ussuriyevsk areas are now in Harbin where most of them are being cared for by the Russo-American relief committee.

Bombs from Soviet planes terrorized both the civilian population of the invaded districts and the defending Chinese forces. Large areas were devastated by fires resulting from the bombs.

But the refugees suffered their greatest hardships in attempting to get to Harbin. The Chinese Eastern Railway placed all available trains at the disposal of the refugees.

Frank-stricken soldiers of the demoralized retreating Chinese army, however, ousted the refugees from many of these trains and hundreds were forced to walk part of the distance to Harbin along the railroad tracks.

Those on the trains suffered other privations. Many were without food during the entire trip of 300 miles. Some were forced to ride on open flat cars or on the roofs of freight cars and suffered greatly from exposure.

Chinese officers were unable to control their troops, according to the refugees, and wholesale looting by marauding bands of soldiers resulted.

Chinese losses since the Russian drive began have been extremely heavy. The nationalist headquarters at Taitshar estimated that 4,000 Chinese soldiers were killed and 2,000 wounded in attempting to repel the invaders, but other sources place the casualties at much higher figures.

The Russian troops are now reported to be continuing forward at a leisurely pace, having practically no opposition to face. They are fast approaching the Manchurian mountains of the Khasan Mountains.

Soviet planes, now operating from bases more than 100 miles inside the Manchurian border, continue their air demonstrations far into Chinese territory.

Chicago University Plans New Research

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—(INS)—The University of Chicago today was planning a program of research in the field of secondary education following the presentation of a $1,500,000 gift from the general education board of New York, a Rockefeller agency.

President Robert M. Hutchins announced the latest gift from the Rockefeller interests which brings the total of Rockefeller financial support of the university to $47,500,000.

The grant was made because of the university's opportunities for usefulness in the study of children of pre-school age, the study of college education and the study of backward and abnormal children. President Hutchins announced.

Triple Murder And Suicide Disclosed

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Nov. 27.—(INS)—A triple murder and suicide apparently committed at least two weeks ago was revealed today with the finding of the bodies of F. M. Hensley, 60, farmer, his wife and two children in an isolated farm house near Nowata, 25 miles southeast of Oklahoma City.

The bodies were discovered by a neighbor living at some distance from the Hensley home who notified Sheriff Stanley Rogers. Examination of the bodies indicated that Hensley had shot his wife, Wanda June, 4, and two children, 1 year old, and then turned the gun upon himself.

Sanford Business Houses Will Close Their Doors To Observe Thanksgiving Day

With the business houses, banks, schools, newspaper office, and public buildings scheduled to be closed, Sanford people were making final preparations today for the observance of Thanksgiving Day. The day will be ushered in with an early morning union service in the Episcopal Church. In the afternoon many are expected to leave for Leesburg to witness the football game between the local high eleven and the Leesburg team, while others plan to use the entire day following their spot of hunting.

Pastors of the local protestant churches plan to have the Thanksgiving services in one church and at an early hour, in order that the members may spend the rest of the day hunting or fishing or in other recreations. It was announced this morning by the Rev. Mortimer Glover, pastor of the Episcopal Church.

The services will begin promptly at 7:00 o'clock at the Episcopal Church with the Rev. Mortimer Glover presiding, and will open with a Thanksgiving hymn by the Episcopal Choir, followed by the invocation by Dr. E. D. Browlee of the Presbyterian Church. The Rev. J. B. Root of the Congregational Church will conduct the Scripture reading and the Rev. W. P. Huhman of the Methodist Church will offer a prayer.

After the singing of "America" by the congregation, the Rev. W. P. Brooks of the Baptist Church will deliver the sermon. Following the offertory, the hymn, "Praise Ye the Father" by Gounod, will be sung. Benediction will be pronounced by the Rev. P. M. Marler of the First Christian Church. The choir and clergy will then recess to the ringing of a hymn.

"NIGGER NATE" IS EXPECTED TO PUT "PEP" INTO TRIAL

Gambler In Rothstein Case Will Testify About Alleged Feud

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—(INS)—Mr. Nathan L. Raymond, known as "Nigger Nate," and another gambler or two, are scheduled to inject a little "pep" into this journalistic "bust" known as the McManus trial just as soon as the monotonous business of reading old testimony to the "new" jury is completed at the trial of "smiling" George McManus for the murder of Arnold Rothstein, Broadway's gambling czar.

Raymond is the "big shot" gambler to whom Rothstein owed upward of $200,000, lost in a poker and high-spade game in which McManus participated.

This game took place less than two months before "A. R." was fatally shot in the Park Central on the night of Nov. 4, 1928. It is the state's contention that this "no limit" game led to a gambler's feud which precipitated the shooting of Rothstein.

For days, Raymond has been waiting around the old criminal courts building to testify. But one delay after another in the McManus trial has kept him off the stand. Other state witnesses are in the same boat.

Today, the McManus trial is catching up where it left off last week. The illness of Eugene A. Riker, a salesman, "joker number two," necessitated the selection yesterday of a new juror, Edwin A. Shotwell, automobile salesman.

Then, with the new juror in the box, it was necessary to read to him all the testimony that has been so far taken. Several of the other jurors have been enjoying a good nap while this is being done.

Judge Charles C. Noll Jr., concerned over charges that one of the jurors talked about the Rothstein case to two newspapermen in a Greenwich Village night club, has warned the jury again not to discuss the case with anybody. He absolved the juror in question, Norris B. Smith, exhuming the press in so doing for "annoying" the jurymen. At the conclusion of court last evening the judge pointed out that it has been necessary only in four or five major murder cases as far as he knew in the last 30 years—the Thaw, the Becker, and two others—has a juror been so "annoyed" that he has to be removed.

Therefore, from now on he wants the jury to remain in "semi-declusion," he told them.

MYSTERY CLEARED

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Nov. 27.—(INS)—Mystery surrounding the disappearance of C. H. Roman, of Pekin, Ill., student at the University of Illinois, who was last seen on the campus on Armistice Day, was partly cleared today when his parents announced they had received a telegram from him marked "Mobile, Alabama." The telegram, received last night, was a bare announcement that he was "all right." It gave no particulars as to why he disappeared.

SPLIT IN G. O. P. BODY APPEARS NEARING CLOSE

Reunited Republican Senatorial Party Is Seen As Probable Outcome Of Shakeup

By William K. Hatchinson
International News Service
Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—A reunited Republican senatorial party, fighting side by side on partisan issues in the next session of Congress, may be the probable outcome of the pending shakeup in Republican committee assignments.

The rebellious insurgents and the bolting Young Turks apparently will be pacified to the extent by a rearrangement of committee chairmen and new assignments of the most powerful committees. Republican party chieftains, at least, were hopeful of using the shake-up as a means of reestablishing peace in the Republican ranks, so recently torn by dissension and revolt.

Out of the welter of conflicting reports, it appeared entirely probable that Senator Wesley L. Jones, of Washington, would resign his post as assistant Republican floor leader to become chairman of the powerful Senate appropriation committee. This would be the opening wedge for a series of peace moves.

Senator Charles L. McNary, of Oregon, looked for the possibly choice for the new assistant floor leader. McNary has the confidence of both the insurgent group and the Young Turks. Jones meanwhile was assumed of the appointments committee chairmanship by Senator Reed Smoot, Utah, determined to retain his present post as chairman of the equally powerful Senate finance committee. Smoot, under the seniority rule, would be entitled to the appropriations post but was said to have decided to continue in control of tariff and tax reduction legislation.

With Jones named to the appropriation committee, there will be new chairmen on other committees due to the shakeup. Some of those changes will make Senator Johnson, California, chairman of the commerce committee; Senator Kuyper, of New Hampshire, chairman of the immigration committee; and For Fess, Ohio, chairman of the public buildings committee.

As a peace gesture to the insurgents, Senator Schell, Minnesota, will be made chairman of the intercommerce committee, succeeding Senator Alder, New Jersey, who resigned to become ambassador to France.

Charles Chaplin, "film genius" caused him to be mostly and to inflict mental penalties upon his wife it was alleged in the divorce which ended Miss Harris' marriage to the noted film funny man some years ago.

Their romance was for a time considered one of the great Hollywood love stories. Their baby died at birth and rumors of domestic difficulties began to circulate in the film capital. Miss Harris' suit against Chaplin attracted national attention.

After her divorce she went on the vaudeville stage for a time and later returned to pictures. She recently appeared in a talking picture, "No. 100,000."

In the early days of motion pictures, Mildred Harris appeared as a featured child player, under the direction of Thomas Ince. Later she worked under the megaphone of David Wark Griffith.

Her blonde beauty won her a foremost place among the young players and she was considered one of the coming stars when her marriage to Chaplin interrupted her picture work.

"MOVIES" WRECK 2ND ROMANCE OF MILDRED HARRIS

Film Star Sues For Divorce Because Husband Spurns Acting

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Nov. 27.—(INS)—Motion pictures today had wrecked the second romance of Mildred Harris, film player, married wife of Charles Chaplin. Miss Harris filed suit for divorce against Everett F. Perryman, Hollywood, Florida real-estate man and prominent amateur golfer.

"He" mean he don't like my playing in pictures and I've been in pictures since I was 9 years old besides, he wanted me to live in the East and I was raised out here.

"It was just a case of talking different languages. I mean, not in pictures are my life work and I can't let even my husband to interfere. I mean our marriage just wouldn't work."

Miss Harris alleged that Mr. Perryman deserted her without cause on Oct. 30, 1926. They were married in April, 1924.

She asked for the custody of 4-year-old son of the couple. According to the divorce complaint, Mr. Perryman receives an income from a real estate business.

Henderson promised the House he would give consideration to the suggestion of Sir Austin Chamberlain, former foreign secretary, that Britain initiate action by negotiating with the United States for joint intervention in the Asiatic squabble. CONFIDENCE IS REBORN DUE TO HOOVER PLANS

Mobilization Of U. S. Resources To Counteract Stock Crash Increases Optimism

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—(INS)—Mobilization of the country's abundant resources to withstand the effects of the severest blow ever administered to the American security markets has been complete, under the guidance of the President of the United States.

"The financial and industrial giant, no longer cowering under the hammer blows of a veritable madman from the speculative markets, has regained the confidence of the American people and given a pledge of his ability to build more strongly the wall of national prosperity.

An $8,000,000,000 expansion, construction and industrial improvement program has been directly ordered by the President's conference on business stabilization growing out of the stock market crash. Leaders of the railroad, utility and manufacturing enterprises have joined with federal, state and municipal officials in putting into immediate execution the constructive plans which might have been questioned in an indefinite future date in the absence of concerted action such as has been brought into being by the meeting of the master minds at Washington.

Briefly, the contemplated program, funds for which are definitely in sight, covers the following ground:

An aggregate expenditure of $1,100,000,000 by the American railroads for needed equipment, indicating if not surpassing the largest annual outlay for this purpose in the history of American transportation.

Prominent contributors to the expansion program are the Chicago and North Western Railroad, with an outlay of $70,000,000 for new engines, cars, tracks, etc.; Southern Pacific, with $50,000,000; New York Central with $40,000,000; Penn-Sylvania Railroad with $30,000,000; Rock Island $25,000,000; Am. A. & N. with an estimated expenditure of $20,000,000; Great Northern and Northern Pacific, $20,000,000 each.

Special residential construction and improvement, involving a total expenditure of $2,000,000,000 from funds made available in large measure by the release of the gold from the market. This by no means covers the whole field of construction.

LOCAL FOOTBALL TEAM IS BEATEN BY NEW SMYRNA

Seminole High Loses Hard Fought Game To Visiting Outfit

By PETER SCHAAL

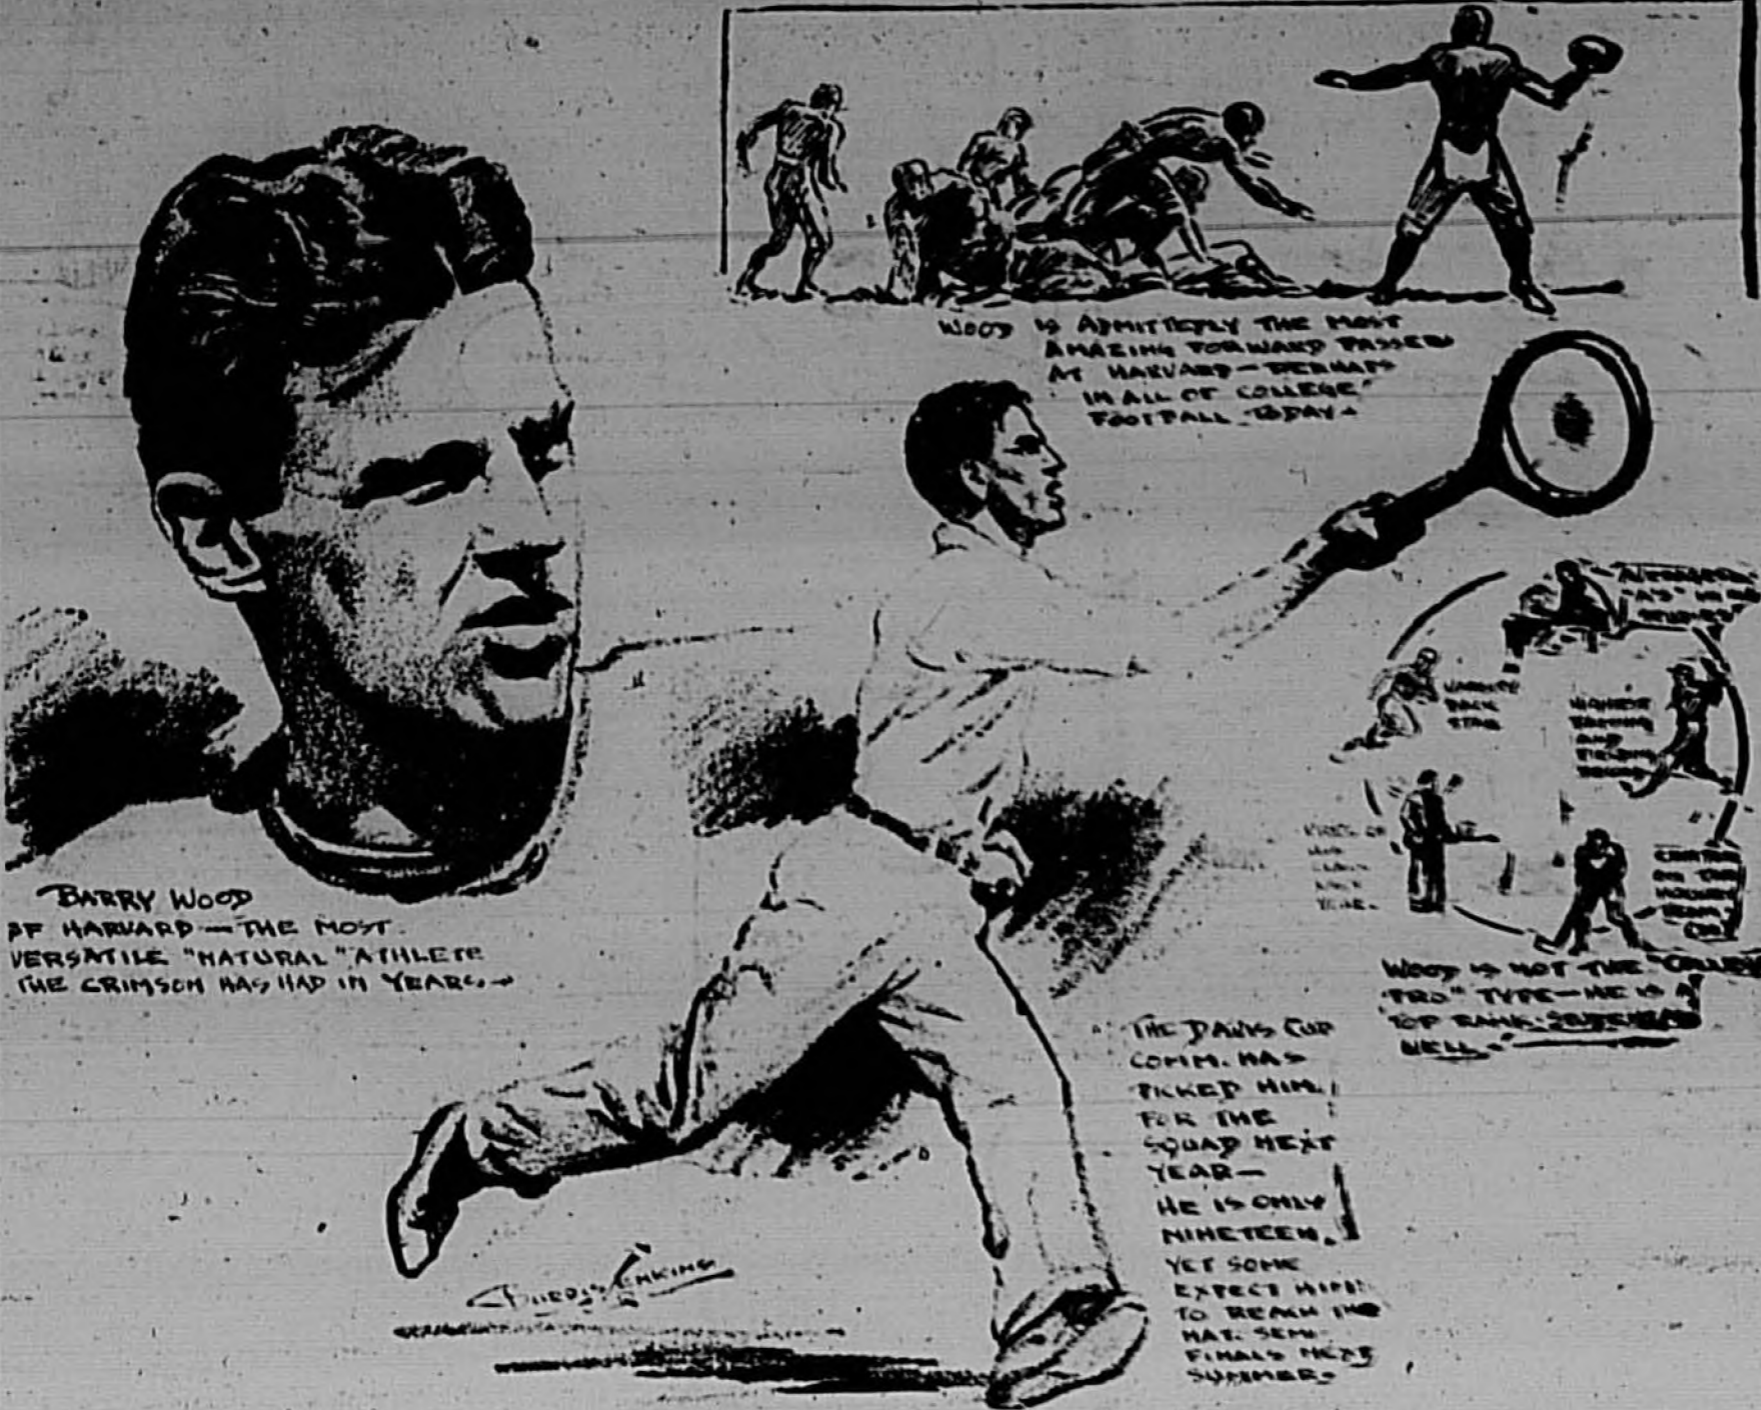

Their line attack stopped dead by a scrappy Sanford High line, the New Smyrna football squad went into the air to score a clean cut 14 to 7 victory over Coach Hugh Wheeler's Seminole High gridders at Municipal Field Saturday.

The game was rather slow except when the teams tried their aerial attacks, and gains through the lines netted but small yardage for both sides. For three quarters, New Smyrna was held to a series of punts and fumbles at the Sanford forward wall and netted them only 2 yards in 10 tries.

At the end of the brilliant air attack of the visitors, the Sanford line, patched and pieced together as it was, exhibited a marvelous game on both offense and defense. Shimpoler, Russell, Howell and Edelfield covered themselves with glory, with Russell leading the pack with any number of vicious tackles.

ANOTHER HARVARD PRODIGY!

and Moyle then pounced on Entenimier not away during this advance for the longest run of the six points. Higgins fumbled for the ball, but the local line gave the locals a great amount of confidence, but the visitors came right back after the kickoff and rolled up three first downs in possession of 16 and 11 yards to pace the ball in Sanford territory. The Sanford line here then for a six yard loss in three tries then, and McClendon pointed to Entenimier on his own 19 yard line. After two tries Higgins pointed back to midfield, and after three tries which included an 11 yard pass and a 5 yard penalty for fumbling, the quarter ended with Sanford having the ball on the Sanford 37 yard line.

The second quarter saw Sanford record their first touch-down late in the quarter via the air. Edelfield intercepted a pass in the first minute of play after the kickoff, and for a moment it seemed as though they were off to a score. The advance ended abruptly at Edelfield allowed Higgins' long pass to slip from his hands with the goal only 11 yards away and a clear field ahead of him.

New Smyrna took the ball on her own 27 yard line, made a first down through the line and the ball went to the Sanford 30 yard line as Sanford was prepared to try for roughness. After a short pass had failed, Furen tried another, and as the Sanford secondary defense was drawn in to the play, it worked, as Galbreath caught the 20 yard pass, and trotted 26 yards for a score. The play caught the locals flatfooted, as Galbreath was wide open, and it was the third time that same play was successful. McClendon passed to Furen for the extra point, and once again Sanford was trailing. Howell took the kickoff and gathered 15 yards only to fumble. Edelfield recovering, the locals went through the line for a first down at midfield, and the 3rd quarter ended.

GEORGIA WORKS TO STRENGTHEN RESERVE FORCES

BRUCE LANEY AND HELEN JONES WIN HERALD CONTEST

Bullfrogs Face 2 Difficult Foes In Bama And Golden Tornado

Two Contestants Get Misere Tickets By Selecting Winners

ATHENS, Ga., Nov. 24—With the Alabama and Georgia Tech games facing the Georgia team at the immediate future, the University of Georgia football coaches have been spending a large share of the practice time in strengthening the amount of reserve material. During the earlier part of the season the personnel of the Georgia team was so indefinite a matter that the reserve players did not get into many games. Since that time, with the varsity line-up pretty definitely decided upon, the coaches have been grooming a second string team to better use.

High Basketball, Chandler, Dick and Brouse all in good condition, the four regular backfield positions are almost a certainty for the last two games. Hugh and Davidson have had almost as much experience this year as Furen and Chandler, so there is little to be desired as far as backfield are concerned. Jack Roberts the All-Star Georgia Fresh has been doing such spectacular playing since when he has received both state and national attention a great deal of the spotlight away from the veteran fullback.

To Bruce Laney and Helen Jones goes the title of being Sanford's best football prophets of last week's games in the Herald's weekly "pick the winner" contest, the winners of which are given two tickets each to the Misere Theater.

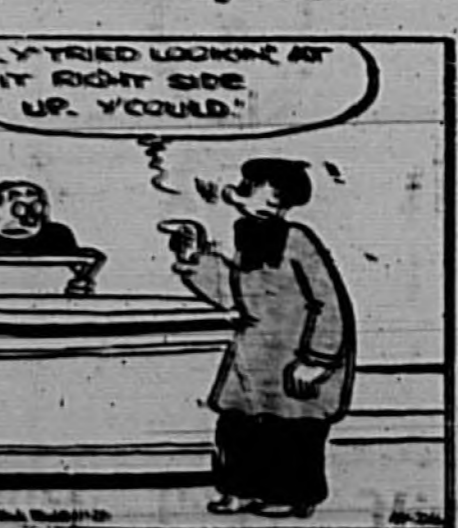

Mr. Laney and Miss Jones were not the only ones, however, who displayed unusual talent at prognostication, for 10 other contestants picked 12 winners also, but as was mentioned last week, the only 3rd etc. etc.

Wal, it's 'most Thanksgivin', Moth an' an' this year we air alone. Yes, th' ol' house does seem lone some sense th' children's gone. But they're thrivin' an' lay pros- pered, we've no reason 't' complain.

Why, th' barn an' cellar is so full they almost groan; An' we're hale an' hearty, Mothe, altho' mothe not so spry.

Es we yuz 'ere in th' eight-ye- guses I'd party nigh; Cheer up, Mothe! It's but nater children sometime hev 'em go.

Don't you remember how your moth er talked and cried, jest so? An' d' you remember, Mothe, how our 'er Thanksgiving night?

How th' ol' ol' galls wuz settin' in th' firelight; Hoastin' nuts an' tellin' stories, ev- erbody bright an' gay.

An' I tippled up and stole a kiss jest this here way; Ha, ha, ha! of you an' blushing! Don't you know, dear heart o' mine,

The th' time hev left its traces, it's only 't' refine; An' I know youthful dazzle, an' 't' me it brings no pain.

Two men in California loved the same woman. They resorted to pistols to decide who should have her. High was shot, both died, neither will have her now.

In 1863 a man was killed at Philada Park when the auto in which he was riding was struck by a train at a crossing. Relatives of the dead man brought suit for twenty thousand dollars claiming negligence on the part of the rail- road. The jury found other- wise. It decided that a man struck by a train at a crossing did not "stay, look, and listen."

England has a new miniature golf course. These new sporting de- sires are finding favor every- where they have been tried, in Minn- ouski, Jacksonville, Orlando, Tampa, Fort Lauderdale and Palm Beach. Some say Sanford will have one so that those who have all time to waste in the country Club, etc., can still maintain their club with regular and putter.

Wonder what a man think about when, diving from an alti- tude of ten thousand feet, he, like Lieutenant Murphy, tries to come out a thousand feet early to find he can't straighten up, and continues toward the earth at two hundred miles an hour for ten or fifteen seconds, a trial which but one which prob- ably seems like an eternity to the man who is falling.

In this country it all depends on where your crime is committed as to whether or not it is a crime.

Thanksgiving In Florida

As the days bring us closer to the last Thursday in November, our thoughts go back some three hundred years ago to the bleak New England coast where a sturdy band of pilgrims gathered together and gave thanks to God for their survival through a year of colonial hardships. We can picture them as they must have looked, a rugged lot, browned by the wind and sun, dressed in their sober garb, which was relieved and given a quaint charm by the wide white collars and cuffs.

The fruits of their labors grouped around them, supply the color which their costumes lack, the red gold of pump- ins, the russet gold of maize, or Indian corn, and the bronze of the turkey, the bird which was to become the symbol of Thanksgiving. In the eyes of the people, there must have been a look of achievement, of having carried on, of having stuck to their guns and saved the fort.

The scene naturally shifts to 1929 in Florida. Instead of wintry weather, the sun shines and the days are golden. The mellow glow of the pumpkin is in the grocer's wino- low, but the orange and grapefruit trees are gold with fruit, and in the fields in Seminole County, the green of celery and lettuce takes the place of maize and Indian corn. The turkey is still with us, and on Thursday, the people of this country today will count up their blessings just as their ancestors did on the first Thanksgiving Day. Their clothes are quite different, but the look in their eyes is the same. They too are pioneers. They too have shared in the work of building up a comparatively new state. They too have survived after a year of hardship, and they too, have a look of having been tried and not found wanting.

Florida will be thankful, not for the too easily won prosper- ity of boom days, but for the courage and endurance of her citizens who have taken the blows of adversity without faltering, and who, behind the barrage of extravagant silliness thrown out by temporary visiting realtors, have gone steadily on with their jobs, knowing that Florida will win in the end an ultimate and sane prosperity through the hard work and faith of its people.

Overworking Their Teeth

Addressing the Southern Medical Association which met recently in Miami, Dr. Senale Harris, of Birmingham, Ala., declared that many persons dig their graves with their teeth. It has been a well established fact, in the minds of all dentists, that teeth, especially bad teeth, have always been the cause of many deaths. But Dr. Harris has intended to convey by his statement a too generous use of the teeth, in other words, an overloading of the stomach.

It may be entirely unbecoming of us to speak of such a subject with Thanksgiving not twenty-four hours away, and we hope that the meat men will pardon us, knowing as they certainly must, that advice on matters pertaining to health is never taken seriously. But Dr. Harris says that if persons would eat moderately, chew their food carefully, and observe the other ordinary rules of health, there is no reason in the world why they should not live to be a hundred, barring, of course, accidents.

"The most important business in the world," says Dr. Harris, "is the maintenance of keeping well. Any young adult of good heredity should live to be 90 or 100 years of age and should be able to do a full day's work without this comfort up to 80 or 90, if he applies our present knowl- edge of personal hygiene." Most people, he contends, en- deavor to keep thin, into having tuberculosis.

Obviously one is as bad as the other. "Moderation in all things," "nothing to excess," are ancient good rules to go by when eating. We haven't the slightest doubt that somewhere in the country tomorrow, some jolly old fellow with blood pressure of two hundred or more will sit down to his turkey dinner, and after loading himself to the gills on soup, olives, celery, turkey, dressing, cranberry sauce, pickles, potato, yams, beans, cauliflower, squash, fruit salad, and plum pudding, will lie down and fall into a quiet and permanent sleep.

Perhaps he would rather it would be this way. Cer- tainly we have no objections if this is so. Forewarned, however, is fore-armed. Take this matter seriously. If you do not care, then go ahead and eat to your heart's con- tent; but if you do, if life still holds something good for you, stop just before you have enough. It is always well to go away from the table hungry.

ALL THE REALLY important millionaires are planning to continue prosperity. The nation probably will build roads, railroads will order steel, all big businesses will do what they can. But prosperity depends on the people themselves, and largely on their mental condition. If they spend their money and buy they will provide work for others. If they are cheerful, the nation will be cheerful. All the millionaires, all the great industrialists, all the congresses, and legislators cannot do for the people that which they must do for themselves—work and keep their courage. —By Arthur Brisbane.

TELLING THE WORLD

NOTHING BETTER THAN THE SEVENTEENTH ROW

The Actors' Equity refuses to permit Sunday performances in New York. The box office men are out on a limb and discourtesy to customers. And that is perfectly all right with us. In fact, it is exactly.

This conversation at a New York box office window is what everybody knows.

"CUSTOMER—Is this the fancy theatre box office?"

"BOSS-MAN—Yes, and wonder what?"

"CUSTOMER—A pound of ham, burger, steak, and two yeast cakes. You didn't think I wanted theatre tickets, did you?"

"BOSS-MAN—Tickets is all we got to sell."

"CUSTOMER—Well, I might buy some, at that. How about a pair in the orchestra next Tues- day night?"

"BOSS-MAN—The nearest I got to the orchestra is the second bal- cony. Take 'em or leave 'em."

"CUSTOMER—Make it a week later, on Tuesday. Maybe I could do better then."

"BOSS-MAN—Not a thing, Sol."

"CUSTOMER—How far in ad- vance do you sell tickets, may I ask?"

"BOSS-MAN—Eight weeks. Take it or leave it."

"CUSTOMER—Take it or leave it, what?"

"BOSS-MAN—Whatever you was

WASHINGTON DAY BY DAY

By Robert Barry

The story runs up again that "Boss Bill" Vane will not be sent out as a United States Senator from Pennsylvania when the Senate votes on his case next month, and that Joseph R. Grundy, the "Old Joe" of the lobby expose, will be offered the toga by his political protegee, Gov. John S. Fisher of Pennsylvania.

It is just as true to-day as it was when The Evening World printed it on Sept. 15. This time it is with a difference.

Grundy already has indicated he would not accept the appointment. Everyone in Washington regrets his decision. Not that they agree with Grundy nor that everyone likes him, but because no man could be more truly representative of Pennsylvania. I like Grundy for the same reason Senator Caraway of Arkansas, Chairman of the Senate Lobby Committee, shaking over and shook hands with the "caddy of the lobbyists," and ex- claimed:

"After all, you know I like you because you tell the truth, and I am going to report to the Sen- ate."

Senator Caraway might have phrased it differently.

Joseph R. Grundy is one of the last honest Republican conserva- tives in the United States. Senator George H. Moses is another, but he has a weakness for politi- cal-flapper wife-racking. Senator David A. Reed of Pennsylvania is another and a smarter one than either Grundy or Moses.

Disagree with all of them as much as you please, so long as you know where they stand and they make no shame face; acknowl- edgement of their political prin- ciples; you must respect them. They are not trimmers.

Current excitement reporting is the fact that Gov. Fisher may offer the Senatorship to Grundy and that Pennsylvania has come over so reluctantly, to a realization that Vane could not be seated. The Evening World is privileged to forecast the ensuing developments in this amazing and probably un- likely case.

They may be put down this way. Having been advised that Vane has no chance to be seated, Penn- sylvania Republicans, of whom there are an awful lot, are try- ing to get out from under the thumb of the Gov. Fisher will name to serve and the election in 1930.

Gov. Fisher has offered the place to Mr. Grundy. Mr. Grundy has declined it. Before it is offered to any one else there will be a public proffer to Mr. Grundy and a public declaration.

The political problem then will take a curious turn. The choice will narrow down to two men:

Owen J. Roberts, a Philadel- phia lawyer, who has just received a legal test of national importance in the conviction of Albert B. Fall, and Francis Shunk Brown, who has been the personal attorney of Wil- liam S. Vane for many years, es- pecially in the Senatorial con- viction.

Washington has been hoping that Henry P. Fletcher, late Am- bassador to Italy, might be named yet. Washington fears that Fletcher's selection would have no real significance and that his record of statesmanship is not to be considered.

That brings it down to the choice of Roberts, Brown and Grundy with the bare possibility of Gov. Fisher becoming sufficiently im- pressed to name an Edward W. Healy or an H. B. Rust. There is no vacillation here of propaganda link- ing the name of W. W. Aldrich with a Senatorship.

The situation is of a brand which might change overnight. A matter stood today the Govern- or's choice is likely to be between Roberts and Brown after the pub- lic proffer.

"CUSTOMER—Well, then, tell me this—"

"BOSS-MAN—Say, mister, don't get me mixed with Dr. Cadogan. I ain't here to answer questions."

"CUSTOMER—Quite right. You're here to sell theatre tickets."

"New do you, personally, sell any tickets in front of the seventeenth row or do I have to wait for Mr. Shubert or Mr. Eranger to show up?"

"BOSS-MAN—I'm here to sell you any tickets I happen to pick up of the rack."

"CUSTOMER—Well, will you tell me there any night in the future when you can sell me better tickets than the seventeenth row?"

"BOSS-MAN—I ain't a clairvoy- ant, either, for peering into the future."

"CUSTOMER—In other words, it's impossible for me to get bet- ter seats at any future perfor- mance?"

"BOSS-MAN—You heard me the first time, buddy. Seventeenth row and one of 'em's behind a post. Take it or leave it."

"CUSTOMER—I'll leave it. And you've been so friendly about this whole transaction I hope you get a front seat in a motor wreck."

JUST ANOTHER FUMBLE

Just happening for the edifica- tion of Grundy's personal vanity following his recent experiences in Washington.

Roberts is held to have every- thing to recommend him for the place. He would restore respect- ability to Pennsylvania in Wash- ington. As special Government counsel in the Fall-Doherty-Snyder oil lease frauds he has interested everyone with whom he has been thrown in contact.

He is an outstanding lawyer, the son of Philadelphia, Pa. He has served the White House, West Virginia Senator Alben Barkers, every one on which the Sup- reme Court of the United States has passed in the course of ruling out of the restrictions by Alben Barkers. He is secretary of the Inter- national Council of President Harding.

You remember how you used to slice the bread and then stick it on a fork... toast it over the gas stove or electric range? How you'd shift the fork from one hand to the other, but wasn't it? Sometimes the bread would fall off and burn.

Well, things have changed since then. You simply insert the slice of bread in the Automatic Electric Toaster and electricity does the rest. Isn't it easy? And just think, it costs only one-twelfth of a cent per slice toasted. Of course, you don't have to use the Automatic Toaster, but—

MICKEY WALKER HAS MADE MANY PAST RECOVERIES

Light-Heavy Was Declared Out As Welter Three Years Ago

By Davis J. Walsh International News Service Sports Editor NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—Some body once called him the Toy Bulldog and they might have done worse, for he has the build of a heavyweight, the size of a welter and the cold ferocity of a pit thoroughbred. It was an apt name in other words, yet some are beginning to suspect that it may have been a case of mistaken zoology. For the cent with nine lives is a sucker compared with Mickey Walker.

They have buried this guy, professionally, year after year. Any year after year, he rises from the dead, bigger and apparently better than ever. Right now he looks the part of the best light heavyweight in the world. Three years ago, he was all over and done with as a welterweight, two classes below.

Takea Beatings One of the outstanding champions of this division, he began to fight in 1925 when he tried to win the middleweight title from the late Harry Greb and won only a beating that was to last him five or six years. A month or two later, he defended his welterweight championship against Dave Elkins and took another beating, although the officials pulled one of those decisions out of the hat and gave it to Walker. Early the following year, he went down into the Pennsylvania coal fields and lost his title to Pete Latzo in a ten round fight. This was death No. 1.

He was resurrected and sent forth again as a title contender, the shortest of the many "lives" he has lived. It ended in the eighth round when the referee intervened and gave Joe Dundee, the Prostrate One, credit for a technical knockout. At this point, it seemed that Walker was dead, never to rise again.

He didn't even wait until his disfigurements were formally posted before being resurrected. Another life—no, a pass—was granted for the welterweight title, but he is the actual, breathing, living champion of the club now. It happened in Chicago, where the event took place only a matter of months after the Dundee disaster. I presume that the late Tiger Flowers and his managers thought they were doing business with a couple of champs when they tied up with Walker and Kearns.

Nearly A Hit Anyhow, they made the match and Walker was crowned with the title on a referee's decision that he had knocked out a man. Few liked the verdict but that was unimportant for it went and still goes to the day, the only difference being that when Walker was a discredited champion then, it stands today to day as the undisputed defender of the division. But that is extraneous to the story.

It doesn't, for example, tell us the ensuing two years, during which Walker did nothing with a few scattered successes and thus had the distinction of being the best of the division. It looked every inch of a great one during this interval and he ended it by going in there with Ace Hudkins in Chicago and being clattered around again, the decision was almost official. According to my eyesight, he lost everything in this fight except the decision.

A few months later, the "champion" was standing over the prostrate form of a very good light heavyweight, Arnold Daniels, in a Cold ring again. This knockout was followed by a fight with Tommy Longman for the light heavyweight title, which many thought Walker won, and a victory over Lou Lombard, one of the best of the contenders.

Come To Life Again The crowd had come to see the number one but when it had a decision to the Los Angeles contingent and the story got about that Walker was doing his road work up the middle of Hollywood Boulevard, they promptly left him off again.

They said he didn't have a chance in his next fight with Ace Hudkins, whereupon he stepped out and almost spoiled the Act in all times, this cleaning up the Chicago and laying a prize line to a third championship in the class above. Thus, Walker is back in the money again. And his faithful opponents Greb and Flowers are dead Dundees. Later had others, not about through. He has survived them all. Walker has been lucky—lucky to have Kearns for a manager, lucky to get the break on at least three occasions. But in the main he has earned his success. It takes a man to outlast a career like this.

All American Body Plans To Meet Soon To Select Mythical Team Members

By Davis J. Walsh International News Service Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—The private life of the golf, fish, it seems, is just a cloistered, monastic affair after all, free from intrusion and the eyes of a prying world.

They are going to pick an All American football team in Knute Rockne's bedroom on Sunday morning. This proves that the man is the football coach of the people, indeed. He can't even be sick in private.

The selection will represent the opinions of the old Rockne-Warner-Tad Jones All American board, with variations, and it is these that may have the Rockne side work looking like a detour of the Lincoln Highway. The three-man committee has been increased to four this time with the addition of W. A. Alexander, Georgia Tech coach, in order that the East, Middle West, Far West and South may have a voice. As it turns out, however, it may not be one voice or even four; it may be a choral society.

Not content with the four-way judgment on the youth and flower of the great nation, contemporary expert opinion has been invited to sit in and give its views. Biff Jones, the Army coach, is the head of this advisory staff, the remaining members of which are four newspapermen and four ex-players who were All American athletes in their day.

The latter include Harry Stuhl-

SYNOPSIS
Three friends, Ivan Armand, and Emil; a French girl, Marie; two Americans, Travis and Al; and a girl, meet on a Continental train. The three friends quarrel over the girl, but Travis and Al escape here and escape to Paris. Marie is elated. Marie believes Travis intends marriage, but he and Al return to America. Three years later Marie, heartbroken, finds the priest and the three friends at a breathing station. An air raid. Marie is unconscious. In the days of Noah, Miriam, Joseph's betrothed, is taken to become a sacrifice in Jaguth, and Joseph is imprisoned. Miriam is bound to the idol of Sin.

Wild, mad cries rose from every throat. Flowers filled the air. People danced up and down, rending their garments, striking at each other in the sheer joy of blood lust. The more the gong rang out, quelling the shrill cries of the people. Emil fitted a second arrow into the bow. But a second, and it whistled through the air and then struck, shivering. The girl on Miriam's right had cried out and then was still. For the third time the gong sounded.

With a start Miriam turned towards the King. "I, who am about to die, warn you once more!" Her voice reverberated through the temple. "By your wickedness you have brought down the wrath of the true God, and you are lost! Lost, I tell you, lost!"

The crowd fell back slightly, shifting uneasily again, scarcely knowing whether to be frightened to laugh. But Nephthim, sensing the impression that the girl's words were creating in the minds of his subjects, jumped to his feet hastily.

"Let the ceremony proceed," he shouted, raising his voice again. "Emil smooch the girl, a crowd waited in silent expectancy, straining against each other to obtain a better view of each move. The arrow, plunged into the air. There came a loud burst, and then a breathless hush. The weapon had stopped suspended in mid-air, he saw the head of the girl. Not a sound invaded the temple, and striking the gong. Suddenly, ordering a second shot to be fired. Hastily Emil fitted another arrow into the bow and let it fly. It stopped beside the first one like a bird reaching its perch. Without waiting for another shot the High Priest shot the third arrow. It rested beside the other two, forming an arc in the air, and then fell.

Now the crowd drew back to a real earnest, frightened, almost trembling hush. Nephthim glanced over the heads of the worshippers, and he seemed to see something more than a gong and some quills. He laid his hand on the King's arm.

"It's Emil's magic," he whispered. "He's stopped the arrows because he's trying to save the girl for himself. Don't you see it?"

"If I thought," Nephthim began, frowning. Then his teeth shut with a little click and he took a step forward as though to seize the High Priest.

But Emil had heard Nephthim's words, and with one leap he had jumped onto the dais. His hand dropped to the hilt of his griffin-sword, and he was already ready to spring at the slightest sign of movement on either side. And then Nephthim stepped between them, growling ominously. "Stop!" he warned, his voice low and muffled. "Don't you see that this crowd's ready for anything now? We dare not fight amongst ourselves!"

His words were interrupted by a sudden terrific gust of wind that whanged the temple doors back and
