It's spring garden time

For a bounty of garden-fresh vegetables this spring, it's not too early to start planning your spring garden. A lot of planning and soil conditioning are needed before the actual planting, according to garden columnist, Tricia Thomas.

Sheriff's series airs tonight

SANFORD — A new television program will air tonight in many homes throughout the county.

No, not "Star Trek Voyager," but "Seminole's Most Wanted." Sheriff Don Kalinge will host a new series of public service announcements featuring information about two crime suspects and Kalinge's "Daily Call" program for home-bound residents. The monthly feature costs $350 which is paid from the sheriff's seizure fund, comprised of cash and liquidated assets of felons.

A one-minute version of the program will air on TCI of Central Florida, which serves 20,000 homes in Lake Mary, Longwood and Altamonte Springs. 30-second versions of the "spot" will air in another 80,000 homes served by Time Warner Cable and Cablevision Industries.

In another outreach program, children who meet deputies will want to remember their experience with a set of Seminole County Sheriff's Office trading cards. Starting in late February, deputies will carry sets of cards featuring their photographs and information about their law enforcement careers. Patrol deputies will give the cards to kids they meet.

The cards will be manufactured by Pro Image Inc., which produced a similar set for the Volusia County Sheriff's Office. Of the $17,850 cost of the card sets, $14,000 will come from the sheriff's seizure fund. The remaining $3,850 will be donated by Seminole Greyhound Park in Casselberry.

A total of 186 cards will make up a set. Avid collectors and career criminals may collect 'em all.

Celebrants of all races honor Dr. King

By VICKI BOGGERMAN
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Nearly 400 people gathered at the Sanford Civic Center on Sunday afternoon to celebrate the life and teachings of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. on the 66th anniversary of the birth of the civil rights leader.

Celebrants of all races huddled into the civic center on a cool and rainy afternoon to warm their hearts and be inspired by the message of brotherhood and peace.

"There is some good in the worst of us and some evil in the best of us," Dr. King once said. "When we discover this, we are less prone to hate our enemies."

It is that peaceful approach to dealing with others that has inspired generations of black and white Americans to celebrate the King holiday even before it was sanctioned as a federal holiday 12 years ago.

Two years ago, when the state of Florida inaugurated its statewide celebration of the holiday, Sanford was selected as the site for the location of the state events.

More subdued, this year's celebration was no less important to local organizers and participants.

"We were very pleased with the turnout at this year's commemorative celebration," Kathryn Alexander, co-chairman of Sanford's celebration committee, said. "It was a fine celebration and the speaker (Rep. Alzo Reddick) was dynamic."

Alexander believes that many from Sanford will travel to St. Petersburg today to take part in the state ceremonies which have been scheduled for that city this year.

The theme for this year's celebration is "Help somebody! Every American can make a difference."

That philosophy was at the heart of Dr. King's teachings. The best way to achieve civil unity, King observed, was for people to help others in whatever way they are able to do so.

Those present at Sanford's celebration focused their attentions on solving society's ills, one person at a time. Making the difference in the life of one person, speakers emphasized, could make a difference for society as a whole.

They were encouraged to keep King's dream alive by feeding the hungry, housing the homeless, caring for those with AIDS, fighting drugs and crime, promoting interracial communication, justice and peace and much more.

SANFORD — Fund-raising, promotion, business retention and business recruitment were the four main areas focused on as the strategic planning session for Sanford Main Street wrapped up Saturday afternoon.

Tired but enthusiastic committee members presented their plans for downtown revitalization as the day-long session was completed. Most had also been involved in a similar session on Friday.

"I feel good about the work that all of the committees are doing," said Bess Simons, Main Street manager. Simons said that Sanford was actually ahead of other Main Street programs in the planning and implementing of a vision for a new downtown district.

One major area of concern is the work of the Organization Committee whose responsibility is to find the money that will help Main Street function. At the basic level, memberships are available in the non-profit organization, starting at $25 for an individual. Simons said the current membership stands at approximately 250 with a membership drive planned for the summer. This is a good base, Simons said, more than many Main Street programs can claim. There is a cross section of the population, and extends into all areas of what the market analysis shows as San-

Charter president gave SCC a firm foundation

When Weldon arrived, SCC was a grove

By VICKI BOGGERMAN

SANFORD — There wasn't much to Seminole Community College when Earl Weldon and his young family arrived in Sanford three decades ago.

In fact, there was no more than an idea and the blessings of the state Legislature.

Sanford was still a small, sleepy town nestled around the U.S. Naval Air Station, small farms and orange groves.

Weldon did not expect the changes that transformed Seminole County and nearby metropolitan Orlando into a thriving community.

"A week or two after I got here, I think, the Disney people announced the plans to build Disney World out there in Orlando," he said. "We never imagined how it would lead to such growth here."

Search on to replace SCC 'backbone'

By VICKI BOGGERMAN
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Replacing Dr. Earl Weldon as president of Seminole Community College is not going to be an easy task.

Beth Hattaway, chairman of the board of trustees at the college, said Weldon has been the "backbone" of SCC since the day the school opened its doors nearly 30 years ago.

"We are going to miss him, but we are now faced with the need to replace him," she said.

Since Weldon has been at the helm of the college since before the first brick was laid, there is no history at the school of a presidential search process.

"I would just like to clone him," Hattaway said, "but I'm not sure about how to go about doing that."

In reality, she said, she has sent for information on how the search

Board finds in favor of lifeguard

DAYTONA BEACH — A Volusia County lifeguard who sang the Gilligan's Island theme to beachgoers near an abandoned Cuban raft last fall didn't deserve a five-day suspension, a county personnel board decided.

Last October, beach department officials suspended David Dickinson, a 19-year veteran of the lifeguard corps. They also cited four cases in which he was accused of criticizing superiors or failing to file reports in a timely manner.

After a daylong hearing Friday, Volusia County Personnel Board members unanimously concluded the charges made against Dickinson were not serious enough to warrant such a strict punishment.

The board's recommendation will be forwarded to Acting County Manager Richard Kelton, who will make the final decision, possibly by next week.

Board members agreed Dickinson may have used bad judgment by breaking into song when the raft washed up on a beach during last summer's massive exodus of Cuban refugees.

Panther may be roaming Pinellas

ST. PETERSBURG — A Florida panther may be wandering around the state's most densely populated county. Residents in semi-rural sections of northeast Pinellas have reported seeing a large, tawny cat with a long tail moving ghostlike through their property.

Only bobcats have been caught so far. Bobcats seldom exceed about 30 pounds, while a male panther can weigh 180 pounds.

Bobcats are common throughout Florida. Panthers are among the rarest animals in North America.

Last month, clear tracks of what seemed to be a panther-sized cat were found in Brooker Creek Preserve by biologist Craig Huegel, who manages the 8,000-acre wilderness at the Pinellas, Hillsborough and Pasco borders.

The only known breeding population — about 50 panthers — is found in the remotest swamps and forests of the Everglades. To get to Pinellas, the big cat would have to maneuver around Tampa Bay.

Author's home a literary landmark

KEY WEST — Pulitzer Prize-winning author John Hersey's home has been designated a literary landmark.

Hersey, who died at age 78 on March 24, 1966, was remembered by fellow literary notables who gathered under a bright blue sky in front of his Key West home Sunday.

The dedication came on the final day of the 19th annual Key West Literary Seminar.

"Of all the artists I've known, John was the most sincerely adverse to publicity," said poet Richard Wilbur, who was Hersey's neighbor for 20 years. "He'd have been very alarmed to see us all flocked here in front of his house."

The American military campaign in Sicily during World War II served as inspiration for his first novel, the Pulitzer Prize-winning "A Bell for Adano." Hersey's other works include "Hiroshima," a report on the effects of the first atomic bomb, and "The Wall," a novel depicting the revolt of the Warsaw ghetto.

A bronze plaque was posted on the concrete wall outside Hersey's home.

Crime rate drops in Brevard

MELBOURNE — Florida's crime-ridden image may be diminished by Brevard County.

The number of murders in the Space Coast county dropped dramatically in 1994, lowering the murder rate to a level that would be the envy of almost any place in the country.

There were only 11 murders, about half the average of the previous 20 years.

It was the smallest total since 1978, when the county's population was half what it is now. That year the county had nine murders. In 1993 the county had 28 murders.

Last year's low total gave the county 2.5 murders per 100,000 residents. In comparison, the national murder rate was 9.3 per 100,000 residents in 1993, the most recent year national statistics were available.

Cocoa Police Chief Richard Masten said stepped-up law enforcement against drug traffic may have had an impact in Brevard.

According to a database developed by Florida Today, Cocoa averaged seven murders a year from 1991 through 1993, giving it the highest per capita murder rate in the county. Last year the city had only one murder.

MIAMI (AP) — Jean McArthur Davis, the chairwoman of McArthur Management Co. and active manager of cattle farms and citrus groves, has died of injuries from a fall. She was 70.

Mrs. Davis was leaving her Miami office Thursday when she slipped on a parking garage stairway and struck her head. She never regained consciousness and died Friday, said her husband, James L. Davis.

Teens die in lake

Cause of deaths has not been determined

By BOB SPENCER
Herald Staff Writer

DELTONA — The cause of death had not officially been determined by 9 a.m. this morning, in connection with the discovery of two bodies in a car submerged in a lake near Enterprise.

The Florida Highway Patrol said this morning that the investigation is awaiting a report from the medical examiner.

A mangled car was pulled Saturday from muddy Big Lake, on Doyle Road, near Enterprise. The bodies of Aaron Harrison, and Marvin "Joah" Barb, both 19, were inside.

The vehicle was found by Harrison's father Thurl, as he and a friend were driving home after an agonizing 24-hour search for his missing 19-year-old son and Barb.

According to the Florida Highway Patrol, the elder Harrison first noticed a tire lying on the side of the road, in underbrush.

The men peered through an opening along the roadway shore of the lake and saw another tire protruding from the water. And their hearts sank.

The teens were apparently headed to Harrison's home when the car went out of control after rounding a curve, then plunged into the lake.

"The vehicle ran off the road for reasons we don't know yet," said Florida Highway Patrol homicide investigator Glenn Altmaier.

"The driver lost control of the vehicle and it flipped upside down and went into the water....Initially it looks like they went off the curve and struck a sign."

Throughout Sunday, friends and members of the young men's families stood along the lakeshore, some praying, others just staring at the water in disbelief. By the time darkness fell last night, many flowers had been placed at the site.

The waters of Big Lake, at that location, were only an estimated 20 feet from the paved Doyle Road. The lake is just a few hundred yards from a curve on the roadway.

The two teens, constant companions for the past year, had graduated in May from Deltona High School.

Information from Associated Press is contained in this report.

Campaign against sugar planned

By The Associated Press

LANS WALKER — Environmentalists are hoping the new Republican-controlled Congress will support their campaign against price subsidies for the sugar industry, which they say helps keep the Everglades polluted.

Sugar executives say without the supports, the state's industry will disappear.

Members of the Everglades Coalition, an association of 30 groups working to protect the Everglades, held their 10th annual meeting over the weekend and developed their agenda for this year.

In addition to proposing a nationwide campaign to eliminate sugar supports, the groups and federal environmental officials approved a plan to acquire Frog Pond. The fertile farming community would be flooded to help restore the fresh water flow from the "River of Grass" into Florida Bay.

Environmentalists say the Everglades have been polluted by agriculture, whose fertilizers proliferates cattails and chokes the wetlands. Critics also say water management to suit sugar and vegetable farmers have hurt the environment, particularly Florida Bay.

Price supports will come before Congress for reauthorization as part of the farm bill this year. Without them, sugar executives say, the state's industry would disappear, taking 40,000 jobs and $130 million in annual salaries with it.

"There's no question that the real goal of the environmentalists is to eliminate the sugar industry," said Robert Baker, a senior vice president for U.S. Sugar Corp. "They said all this five years ago."

The Coalition believes the GOP would back the effort to make the industry less dependent. They say subsidies go against traditional GOP free-market philosophy.

"A free-market argument with regard to agriculture benefits the Everglades," said Charles Lee, senior vice president of the Florida Audubon Society.

Limbaugh rival gives liberals a voice

By GREGORY WALLACE
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — You haven't heard of him yet, but T.J. Walker would like to become the liberal version of bombastic, conservative talk show king Rush Limbaugh.

"We're tired of having Rush Limbaugh walk all over us," says Walker, who is based in Clearwater.

"For too long, liberals and Democrats have had a condescending attitude toward talk radio," he says. "They're just walking up and finding out it's a powerful, powerful political medium."

Walker, 33, has been around politics since he graduated from Duke University in 1988 with a philosophy degree. He has worked steadily since then promoting liberal views.

"I think people are really hungry for a breath of fresh air on the radio," says Walker, whose week-night program debuted last week. "The Limbaughs, Laddys and Buchanans, they're getting stale."

With Georgia Republican Newt Gingrich entrenched as Speaker of the House, Walker thinks he'll have as much ammunition for frustrated liberals as his conservative counterparts have enjoyed by castigating President Clinton.

"Newt Gingrich is an embarrassment of riches for anyone who wants to ridicule someone in power," says Walker. "He is a walking, talking contradiction."

"You have so many prominent conservatives in power who do so many insane things every day," he contends.

Walker says he admires Limbaugh's skills, but plans to take care of business in a more responsible manner.

"He has no respect for facts," says Walker. "I will. Part of the beauty of doing this from the liberal side is I don't have to make up things."

Like Limbaugh, Walker has written a book to detail his philosophy. Walker's "It's Great to Be a Liberal" was published last year.

"Buy this book now before conservatives burn it," reads a promotional strip on the cover.

While they disagree on issues, Walker credits Limbaugh with opening the door for partisan political programs by fusing serious issues and entertainment.

Life celebration Pastor fights back against 'spirit of death'

By WMA LASTER
Associated Press Writer

RIVIERA BEACH — In a week that saw a campus suicide by a high school student, his funeral under stormy skies and a train-van collision that killed four of his mourners, the Rev. Thomas Masters knew he had to fight back.
 "A spirit of death is hanging over the young people of our community," he told parishioners Sunday at his New Macedonia Missionary Baptist Church in Riviera Beach.
 "I have given the eulogy at six or seven funerals in the last month and most of them were people under 25. Everyone needs to pray for the youth of this community."

Masters has long fought for the young people of Riviera Beach — crusading against drug use and the high crime rate in the city of 30,000 just north of West Palm Beach.

But he'd never seen a week like this one.

Fifteen-year-old Robert Warthen Jr. shot himself at Palm Beach Gardens High School on Tuesday and died the next day. Friends say Warthen, a clean cut-up prone to moody spells, was upset by a fight with a former girlfriend.

Saturday, classmates mourned Warthen at a West Palm Beach cemetery while rains poured down and winds whipped trees. As the procession returned to Riviera Beach, a van carrying five mourners was struck by a freight train. Sixteen-year-old Crystal Andrews was seriously injured; three members of her family and her boyfriend were killed.

The dead were Pierre Exile Jr., 19 and born in Haiti; Crystal's mother, June Andrews, 34, a secretary at St. Mary's Hospital; her 14-year-old half-sister, Ilana Cyrpine; and her 4-year-old brother, Alan Andrews, Crystal's

Bishop commits suicide

BOSTON — The bishop of the nation's largest Episcopal diocese was found dead in his home Sunday from a self-inflicted gunshot wound, police and church officials said.

Bishop David E. Johnson, who had announced his retirement and was to begin a sabbatical next month, committed suicide, apparently on Saturday, diocesan spokesman Jay Cormier confirmed. Police said he died of a single rifle shot.

Diocesan officials said they had no idea why Johnson killed himself.

"This devastating time is filled with pain, anger and questioning for all of us who knew, worked with, loved and were loved by Bishop Johnson," said Johnson's successor, M. Thomas Shaw, who is to take over the diocese June 5.
 Johnson's body was discovered in his suburban Framingham apartment, where he had moved last summer after selling his home. He announced his retirement in November.

Johnson, 61, succeeded Bishop John B. Coburn in 1986 as bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Massachusetts, the nation's largest with 163 congregations and 65,000 baptized members.

Johnson planned to take a sabbatical beginning Feb. 1 to help other dioceses set up programs for children, a particular interest. He had established DoveMass, a program that recruits volunteers to work in public schools.

"He was a very warm, loving person, very committed to the ministry with people and with a particular interest in the well-being of children," said Suffragen Bishop Barbara Harris, who had assisted Johnson for six years.

Born in Newark, N.J., Johnson received a bachelor's degree from Trinity College in 1955. He served for three years as a pilot in the Strategic Air Command, where he rose to the rank of captain.

Johnson received his master's of divinity degree in 1961 from the Virginia Theological Seminary. He was ordained in 1962 and served as rector of the Church of the Good Shepherd in Little Rock, Ark.; St. Martin's Church in Fayetteville, Ark.; Calvary Church in Columbia, Mo.; and St. Boniface Church in Sarasota, Fla., before being elected vicar coadjutor of the Massachusetts diocese in October 1985.

father Allen is a baggage handler at Palm Beach International Airport and wasn't in the car.

Masters was called to the scene Saturday to comfort horrified funeral-goers who saw the wreck. He promised he would pray for Crystal, who was hospitalized in stable condition.

Sunday, he kept his promise.

He called for a special blessing of young people, then presided over a rollicking two-hour celebration of life, accompanied by a swaying choir, a hip-hop organ, and two sets of drums.

Masters planned to cite the van wreck in an appeal to the railroad company to take additional precautions at crossings during stormy weather.

Federal officials believe a crossing gate closed on the roof of the van, which continued across the track during a storm, the Palm Beach Post reported for today's editions. Luis Del Rio, a spokesman for the Federal Railroad Administration, said he didn't know whether the gates were working properly or signal lights were flashing when the van crossed the track.

And Masters also expected the suicide would heighten awareness of the dangers of guns in schools. He asked parents to demand metal protectors at county schools.

"We're trying to bring this community together to bring strength to the families," Masters said. "But we need better protection for our children in these schools."

After the service, Keesha Dillingham and her mother, Karran, recalled Warthen fondly and said they were comforted by Masters' efforts.

"This is a time everybody needs to stick together," Keesha Dillingham said. "I would never have imagined Robert would do such a thing."

Honoring the King

By an act of Congress in 1983, the third Monday in January is Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday. It's a legal public holiday throughout the nation.

Dr. King was born in Atlanta on Jan. 15, 1929. He was assassinated in Memphis on April 4, 1968.

Depending on the point of reference, he is known as having been a civil rights leader, promoter of non-violence, minister, and recipient of the Nobel Peace Prize in 1964.

In honor of Dr. King, his birthday is also known as Humanitarian Day, especially in Chicago where respect and honors are bestowed on numerous unsung leaders of the civil rights movement.

Many cities and communities will be observing this day with special parades, gatherings, speeches, and other festivities.

Many people believe Martin Luther King Jr. is one of the greatest black leaders of the 20th century. Naturally, there are a few who dispute this, claiming that others, blacks as well as whites, are more deserving of being considered as the "greatest" for this century.

The point here is not to give any ranking of importance to anyone, or specify any individual over anyone else.

Today however, is the anniversary of Dr. King's birthday, and as such, it should be honored. Additionally, people must consider what he suggested people do toward improving communications between the races.

Dr. King had a dream. We have all heard that phrase used time and time again. Perhaps it's time people put it into practice, where people get along with each other, and cared about the feelings of their neighbors.

Let's not just observe this as a legal holiday, or a day off work (for some people). Let's give what Dr. King stood for, what he proposed, what he said and dreamed about some serious thought. Hopefully it will lead to some positive action on the part of everyone.

LETTER

Main Street

The Sanford Herald has long been a supporter of Sanford Main Street and other downtown revitalization efforts. Therefore, we were very surprised to read your editorial of Jan. 5, 1988 suggesting that Sanford would be more economically viable if our older buildings were torn down to make room for new development.

Yes, Sanford is full of "very old houses and very old business buildings." But, despite the inference of your editorial, our historic buildings and pedestrian scale development are our community's greatest asset. Our city has a historic character and sense of place that is coveted by newer communities. One of those newer communities, Lake Mary, is now working on a plan to make their downtown a quaint shopping area with qualities similar to Sanford.

Sanford Main Street is committed to economic development within the context of historic preservation. Our program is based upon community self reliance and emphasizes downtown's traditional assets: personal service, local ownership, unique architecture and a sense of community. The Main Street program has been effective in hundreds of communities nationwide.

Let us work together to strengthen Sanford by building upon our many assets rather than imitating another city's development style.

Chris Cranias, President
Sanford Main Street

Editor's note: We couldn't agree more! The editorial questioned the need to save buildings that are not architecturally significant AND are far beyond repair. Even Andrea Duany in his town meetings several years ago said a building should not be saved JUST because it's old. We feel everything possible should be done to save the wonderful buildings Main Street is working so hard to save. But perhaps there are a few buildings and abandoned houses now standing in Sanford (or perhaps now sagging) that need to go as the city's facade becomes apparent.

Very bad day at Supreme Court

Several years ago, I was in Jerusalem for a conference on the ethics of journalism — a boundless subject. Also present was a prominent philosopher, David Hartman, who has his own institute in Jerusalem. We had never met. During a break, Hartman stopped me in the corridor. Without any pleasantries, he said, "What has been mankind's greatest achievement?"

For once, I didn't falter at being asked so grand a question. "Due process," I answered. "Correct," said Hartman. He strode on, and we never spoke again.

Due process — fundamental fairness — is the foundation of our system of justice. "Nor shall any state," the 14th Amendment guarantees, "deprive any person of life, liberty or property without due process of law."

When prosecutors and the lower courts ignore or deliberately abuse this essential protection, the Supreme Court is the last refuge for the desperate defendant. The high court sometimes fails the defendant and the Constitution, but never so appallingly — in modern times — as in the case of Jesse DuWayne Jacobs, who was executed by the state of Texas early on Jan. 4 for a murder he did not commit.

Just before Jacobs was dispatched, he said, "This is premeditated murder by the state of Texas."

It is not unusual for a doomed man to maintain his innocence while he can still speak, but Jacobs was joined in his claim that he should not be executed by Supreme Court Justice John Paul Stevens. In his dissent against the majority's refusal to grant a stay of execution — Justices Ruth Bader Ginsburg and Stephen Breyer also dissented — Stevens charged that it was "fundamentally unfair for the state of Texas" to kill this man. Jacobs had confessed to — and been convicted of — a murder. But later he unequivocally recanted the confession at the subsequent trial of his sister, who was also convicted of that murder. The same prosecutor who had mounted the case against Jacobs now declared before a jury that Jacobs' sister had been the sole murderer. Therefore, Jacobs' confession had been false.

Due process — fundamental fairness — is the foundation of our system of justice.

The prosecutor told the jury at the trial of Jacobs' sister that he had changed his mind about what actually happened. He said that Jacobs "was telling the truth when he testified that he did not in any way anticipate that the victim would be shot." Indeed, Jacobs was outside the house when the murder took place, and he did not know that his sister had a gun.

Justice Stevens protested the execution of "a person on the basis of factual determination that the state has formally disavowed.... At a minimum, Jacobs' execution should be stayed so that we may carefully consider his claims by way of our ordinary procedure respecting petition for certiorari."

Unlike former justices William Brennan and Thurgood Marshall, John Paul Stevens is not implacably opposed to capital punishment, but he does care about due process.

Sweeping answers are wrong

Perspective changes with age, and mine in 1988 is definitely that of a father and grandfather. What bothers me most are the issues destined to plague those who will inherit the world that my generation is about to bequeath. What that means above all else is the deterioration of the civil society, a fussy way of describing some hard facts and disturbing trends. As a result, like most Americans, I'm wide open to solutions.

But having lived through several decades in which confident pronouncements about public policy were followed by abject failure, I'm from Missouri. You have to show me. Since neither big government nor supply-side economics have impeded crime, improved public civility or restored family values, my operating assumption is that most panaceas are so much hot air.

Hope springs eternal, of course, which is why the Republicans now control Congress. As they see and proclaim it, government rather than money is the root of all evil. The welfare state is the direct cause of most of the rot around us, particularly among "them." Federal regulations are costly exercises in bureaucratic empire building which impede economic growth. More prisons and the death penalty deter crime. Prayer on public occasions and in public institutions will help restore morality.

Perhaps they are right, though I don't believe it. Western Europe has a more comprehensive welfare state than we ever dreamed of building, but its crime rate is a fraction of ours. People were once executed for stealing bread in England, but that did not stop them from stealing. They have been praying at the opening of every session of Congress all my life, but according to the verdict of the voters, Congress has nonetheless been a cesspool of self-serving corruption.

As for deregulation, the idea that power left to its own devices will do the right thing is as profoundly unconservative as it is ludicrous.

Conservatives have always understood that evil is a fact of human nature, as opposed to progressives' sunny optimism about the possibility of human perfectibility. Now that understanding can be squared with the thesis that you can trust big business (or big anything) to behave without countervailing power to hold it in check is well-nigh incomprehensible. Taxpayers are still paying the multibillion-dollar tab for the savings and loans looting of the 1980s, a crime spree all but guaranteed when the regulatory net around the savings and loan industry was torn apart.

But the urge to believe is as overpowering as it is understandable. Democrats or Republicans, liberals or conservatives, rich and poor, we long for a more stable, law-abiding and decent society. What the majority found tolerable so long as it was confined to minority precincts is totally unacceptable now that it reaches into our neighborhoods. Other approaches having failed, it is not surprising that harsher remedies — particularly when applied to "them" — are so attractive. We long for sweeping answers and we want them now.

Let us hope that we don't get what we want. Past failures should have taught us that giant leaps forward almost invariably result in painful falls.

Whether we call it the "Great Society" or "Contract With America," the sweeping answer is usually the wrong answer — as so often because the application is flawed as because its premises are wrong.

Where Newt Gingrich, the new speaker of the House who is leading this most recent charge into a brave, "New world, has it most right is in his emphasis on experimentation. Where he has it most wrong is in his big, bold and fraudulent leaps of political theology like the balanced budget amendment. At times recently he has seemed to be debating with himself, tinkering in public with the terms of his "contract," suggesting a little less inflexibility here and a little more give there.

That's the right approach, not only for the good of the nation but even for the Republicans' long-term political prospects. Overpromising can be counterproductive. Just ask the Democrats.

Rather than try to impose a new form of federally directed uniformity, Republican Washington should reassess the virtues of federalism, devolving power and responsibility. It should let the states continue to experiment with welfare reform before settling on one hard-and-fast program. It should wait, watch and evaluate, not just for a year or two but for longer, learning what actually works in the field as opposed to the computer model.

In the meantime, Gingrich and company can try to meet their supporters' longing for red meat by ruthlessly pruning those programs that are useful but not indispensable to the health and welfare of the people. Yes, that does mean programs such as the National Endowments for the Arts and Humanities, public television and Amtrak. It would be a mistake to do so on many grounds, but it would not be a fatal one.

What is potentially fatal for American society is the continuing slide from social cohesion into chaos.

As a result, like most Americans, I'm wide open to solutions.

Battle over U.S. troops in Golan

WASHINGTON — Democrats and Republicans aren't the only parties that will be slugging it out on Capitol Hill in 1988. As a sideshow to the partisan fireworks, Israel's Likud and Labor parties will be vying for congressional hearts as the Middle East peace process reaches another critical juncture.

Officials close to the peace talks fear that a public relations campaign by conservative Israelis may prompt Congress to unwittingly throw a wrench into the delicate negotiations.

Specifically, some members of Congress who style themselves as "pro-Israel" are openly questioning an anticipated call for American troops to monitor the Golan Heights if Israel and Syria make peace.

Some Israel observers believe this loose coalition of lawmakers is taking its cue from a lobbying campaign being waged by former officials of Israel's conservative Likud party. While individual members of Congress have their own reasons for questioning aid to the Middle East, Likud's agenda is quite clear: No concessions of any kind, especially land, to Israel's Arab neighbors.

Although no lawmaker will publicly oppose peace in the Middle East, sources in Washington who support Israeli President Yitzhak Rabin believe peace could be undermined in several ways. Some in Congress, for example, want to slap additional conditions and tighter monitoring on American aid to Yasser Arafat when Palestinian aid comes up for reauthorization in June. Others, like Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., are hostile to foreign aid in general, though aid to Israel will likely be off the table. But the loudest outcry in Congress — and the most serious threat to the peace process — will come from the prospect of sending American troops to the Golan.

"Many in Israel who oppose the peace process and oppose... any degree of compromise on the Golan Heights have the ears of some members of Congress," says Jaacov Isaacson, director of government and international affairs for the American Jewish Committee. "And they do not hesitate to become involved in the political process in the United States."

Supporters of Rabin and the Clinton administration fear that any pre-emptive actions by Congress could severely delay, or even kill the chances for an accord.

"If the parties were to ask us, as part of their peace agreement, to monitor the security arrangements — and we refused — we would be raising serious questions about our support for that particular treaty, and for the peace process more generally," a key presidential envoy in the Middle East told us recently.

"And secondly, if we were to decide in advance — as some of the opponents are arguing now — we would be prejudging the whole matter, and undermining our role in the process from the outset. That's why it's premature when it's raised on the Hill."

So far, the battle has been fought in the court of public opinion, as Israel's supporters from both ends of the political spectrum vie for Congressional attention. One lawmaker who has heard the call is Rep. Jim Saxton, R-N.J., who raised eyebrows last fall when he sponsored a forum to discuss the use of American troops in the Golan. Although people from both sides of the issue were invited, most of the actual participants were opposed to the introduction of U.S. troops. Yet Saxton maintains he is keeping an open mind.

Democrats and Republicans aren't the only parties that will be slugging it out on Capitol Hill in 1988.

Pope continues Asian mission after record crowd in Manila

By WETON L. GIBSON
Associated Press Writer

PORT MORESBY, Papua New Guinea — Warriors in feathered headdresses chanted and beat drums today to welcome Pope John Paul II from the Philippines, where security officials said terrorists had plotted to kill him.

The pope, reportedly unruffled by the assassination plot, predicted "a new springtime" for Christianity in Asia. And he told the faithful in Papua New Guinea that the church's task is to spread the faith through the continent.

Thousands of people, applauding and blowing whistles, turned out to greet the pope. But the crowd was considerably more subdued than those that followed John Paul everywhere during his four-day visit to the Philippines, Asia's only Roman Catholic country.

Moving slowly and occasionally relying on a cane, the pontiff was met by officials led by Prime Minister Sir Julius Chan, a Catholic, who kissed the papal ring.

Shortly after arriving Papua New Guinea, the 74-year-old pope led 500 parishioners in prayer at a sprawling church led by a single friar.

About 1 million of the 3.5 million people on the South Pacific island nation are Catholic.

It is my desire and purpose to strengthen the Christian faithful in this country," John Paul said. He called it a "great joy" to come to Papua New Guinea, which he last visited in 1984.

The pope ended his speech in pidgin English, the common tongue in Papua New Guinea, saying "God bless yu-pela olgeta," or "God bless you all."

He traveled from the airport in the back of a white pickup truck covered by a gold awning — in sharp contrast to the armored popemobile he used in the Philippines.

In Manila today, security officials said "terrorists" had plotted to assassinate John Paul during his visit.

Brig. Gen. Leo Alves, chief of the presidential security group that guarded the pope, said agents seized a copy of the pontiff's route through the streets of Manila from "terrorists," who were arrested.

The suspects had the "whole plan" for the pope's engagements in the Philippines, Alves told reporters after the pope left Manila today for Papua New Guinea.

Alves refused to give details on the plot or the arrests. "It was a threat on the life of the pope," he said. "That's all I can say."

John Paul, who survived an assassination attempt in 1981, was informed about the plot in the Philippines but "was not really concerned," he said.

On Jan. 6, police arrested two Arabs and seized bomb-making equipment in an apartment near the papal nunciature where the pontiff stayed in Manila.

Security had been heightened at airports across East Asia because of fears of sabotage by Muslim extremists protesting the pope's Asian tour. U.S. and Philippine authorities said extremists were planning to bomb an American plane.

In Papua New Guinea on Tuesday, the pope is to beatify Peter ToRot, a lay preacher executed by the Japanese in World War II. Beatification is the first step toward sainthood. ToRot would be Papua New Guinea's first saint.

In his farewell remarks in Manila, John Paul said the church's task in the coming century is to spread the faith through "the immense human geography of Asia," where only 3 percent of the population is Christian.

"Christ is working ... for a new springtime of Christianity in this continent," he said.

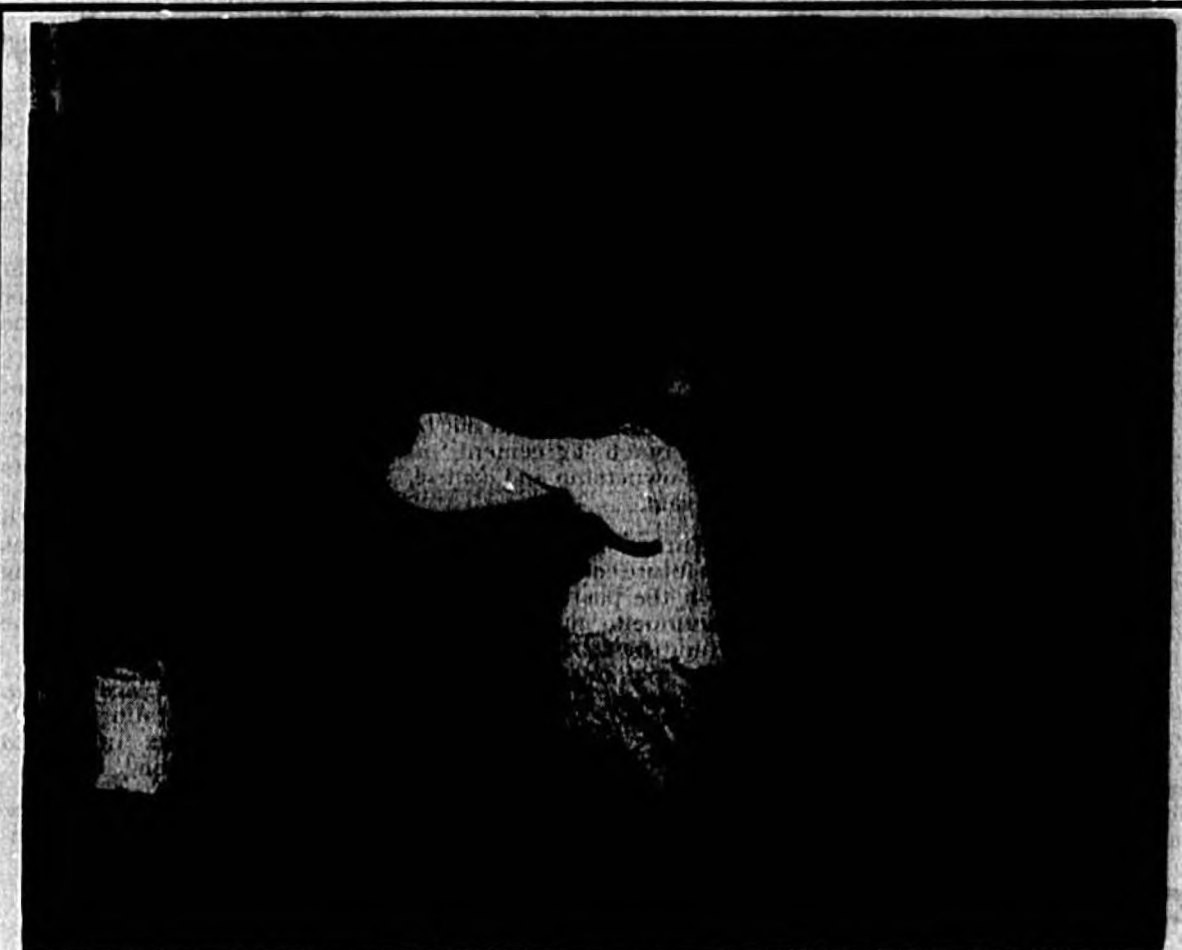

The 74-year-old pope is on his most strenuous journey since undergoing hip replacement surgery last spring. His slow recovery forced him to cancel a planned trip to the United States.

John Paul walks with difficulty, but appeared to be coping with the travel and heat.

"He's holding up very well," papal spokesman Joaquin Navarro said today. "It's not painful, but movement is limited."

The pope will be in Papua New Guinea until Wednesday, when he leaves for Australia. From there he travels to Buddhist Sri Lanka, the last stop of his 11-day trip.

The Catholic fervor of the Philippines, with its 400-year Christian heritage, is unlikely to be replicated in other Asian lands with ancient, rival religions.

ford's new trade area, which includes Lake Mary and Heath. The main work of the committee will be to find other sources of funding as government funding diminishes. The grant, from the state, started the Main Street program in Sanford, which will be completed in two years. At that point, most programs are expected to be self-supporting. The program also receives money from city and county grants, Simmons said.

The job of promoting the downtown area as a destination was accepted by Wynde Sparks, who has recently agreed to head the Promotion Committee. Reneke presented a schedule of events for the coming year that will "target a cross-section of the population." The objectives of this committee are sponsoring special events, creating retail events for business enhancement of downtown merchants and image enhancement. of a fall festival, Reneke said. And the year will be capped off with the annual Light Up Sanford events, Reneke said they also plan to work more with SHDWA to create events that can promote more sales, and speaking to civic organizations in and around Sanford to change the perception of Sanford. Tom Ingram, of the Samil Business Development Center at Seminole Community College addressed the goals of the Economic Restructuring Committee, specifically that of business retention. He said this would be approached with presentation to the merchants of what Main Street is trying to accomplish, education and customer satisfaction workshops, and possibly targeting a building downtown, that houses an existing business and showing what can be done to promote the building, historically, and increase customer traffic. Ron Jernigan, of Stratford Properties, said that one important function of business recruitment will be to offer the tax incentives available to pre-

Weldon, 65, is quiet as he talks about his retirement after 30 years from the college he has literally built from the ground up. He prefers to talk about the college and its successes over the years.

"We have done so much here over the years," he said. Weldon said the land where the college is built was an orange grove when he arrived in Sanford from Palatka, where he had served as dean of instruction at St. Johns River Community College.

"I remember the first time I came out here," he said. "It was in a Jeep and I just knew this was it."

The next day, the real estate agent who had shown him the property set up a meeting with the owners and the rest, he said, is history.

Weldon said one of his proudest moments was on the first day of school in August 1966. "Just sitting there at the front of the school and seeing all these people coming down that dirt road out of nowhere and coming out and going into the classrooms," he said.

He noted that the first instructors and students "really had the pioneer spirit." The college started in a wilderness of sorts, he said.

"There was nothing out here and we've built a great institution here," he said. Like a big, happy family, the faculty and staff (often accompanied by their spouses and children) worked well above and beyond the call of duty, building, decorating and preparing the college for its opening.

"We were all out here. My wife (Gerry) and all three of my kids, did a lot of work getting ready for the opening," he said. Weldon said the faculty and staff at the college are among the best in the country. In addition to being a fine institution of higher learning, he said, the location is superb.

"Everyone wants to live in Central Florida," he said. As the community has grown, so has the college. "I never would have suspected that we would have gotten so

The final decision about who will lead the school will be the board of trustees. "We would make the final cut," she said.

Hattaway said she hopes to have the citizen's committee in place before the end of February. "It will be a long, difficult process," she said. "I'm glad Dr. Weldon will be here through the start of next year."

Turner Broadcasting breaks off talks with NBC

By GAIL WEAVER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — Ted Turner has ended his courtship of NBC. His company, Atlanta-based Turner Broadcasting System Inc., said Sunday it had "discontinued discussions about possible business combinations with NBC due to the issue of ownership and control."

It could not be determined how much Turner Broadcasting, whose holdings include CNN and Turner Network Television, was willing to pay for NBC. Details on how a deal would be structured also were not disclosed.

Ted Turner, TBS' chairman, met with GE chairman John F. Welch and NBC chief Robert Wright on Friday and the executives realized they would not be able to reach agreement on issues of ownership and control, sources said.

But Turner did not close the door on future combinations. "As in the past the company will continue to pursue strategic opportunities as they arise in order to maximize shareholder value," Turner Broadcasting said in a statement Sunday.

Turner, who is one of the cable industry's pioneers, has made no secret in recent months of his desire to add a broadcast television network to his stable of cable networks, which also include Headline News, the Cartoon Network and Superstation WTBS.

He has reportedly talked at various times about buying or striking alliances with CBS as well as NBC.

Welch has hired the investment banking firm Allen & Co. to evaluate proposals for NBC, which GE acquired as part of its purchase of RCA Corp. in 1996.

But people familiar with Welch's thinking say he has been more interested in striking an alliance that could help NBC expand rather than in selling the media company.

After a few last-place finishes in the prime-time ratings, NBC's performance has improved markedly this season.

GE has reportedly had discussions about NBC with companies including Time Warner Inc., ITT Corp. and Walt Disney Co.

But a combination of NBC and

Turner struck many media analysts as a superior combination because of the savings the companies could achieve by combining their newsgathering operations and possibly coordinating their broadcast and cable sports activities.

Smith to be arraigned today in S.C. court

By GAIL WEAVER
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBIA, S.C. — The first time Susan Smith went to court after confessing to drowning her two sons, an angry crowd outside surged forward at the sight of her.

"Hold your head up! You're a baby murderer!" shouted one woman. Another yelled out that she should die like her sons.

Some of her hometown's venom seems to have subsided in the two months since Smith told a harrowing story of a carjacker driving off with her boys — then confessed.

"There's some people that say probably the best punishment she could get would be to leave her the way she is now, to have to live day to day with those thoughts in her mind," said Union County Council Chairman Donnie Breenbaugh.

Today she returns to court in Union, a rural community 60 miles northwest of Columbia, to face a prosecutor who is seeking the death penalty, her attorney said.

Mrs. Smith is charged with two counts of murder in the deaths of her sons, 5-year-old Michael and 14-month-old Alex.

Mrs. Smith's lawyer, David Bruch, said Sunday that Solicitor Tommy Pope told him he would seek the death penalty for Smith if she's convicted. Pope told The Associated Press he would not comment on Bruch's announcement.

Bruch added that Pope planned to have Mrs. Smith arraigned at today's hearing.

Because Mrs. Smith's previous courtroom appearances created such a frenzy, Bruch said he asked that she not be required to attend today's hearing, but Pope demanded her presence.

In her two-page confession, Mrs. Smith said she was suicidal and "emotionally distraught" over unrequited love Oct. 29 when she let her car roll down a boat ramp into a lake with her sons strapped inside.

Mrs. Smith, who was divorcing her husband, said she felt she could not be a good mother, "but I didn't want my children to grow up without a mom. I felt I had to end our lives to protect us all from any grief or harm."

"My children, Michael and Alex, are with our Heavenly Father now, and I know that they will never be hurt again. As a mom, that means more than I can say," she wrote.

For nine days, Mrs. Smith made tearful pleas for the carjacker to return the boys along with her estranged husband, David. The town helped search for the boys and prayed for their safety.

After she confessed to police and their bodies were found submerged in her car on Nov. 3, people in Union turned from support for one of their own to horror.

Since her arrest, Mrs. Smith has been held without bail at a women's prison near Columbia. Her trial date has been set.

Philadelphia cops tend to the problems of homelessness with touch of kindness

By WAYNE WOOLLEY
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA — The column of steam rises out of the sidewalk vent, through a tangle of urine-stained blankets and around the shivering body of a man before disappearing into the icy air.

A police van breaks the pre-dawn quiet as it rolls to a stop. Officers Tom Bray and John Brown jump out.

"Hey, Barry," says Bray, "we heard you were looking for us; heard you were thinking about coming in off the street. Is that true?"

Brown pipes in: "If that's the case, this is your opportunity. We'll take you in right now."

They aren't talking about taking Barry to jail, and he knows it. The policemen are merely offering to take Barry to a shelter.

The two veteran officers are part of a four-member unit created in September to deal with the homeless in downtown Philadelphia.

The idea, says squad commander Sgt. Mike Taylor, is to have the same officers go out day after day, building relationships with as many homeless people as possible — and offering a ride to a shelter or social service agency.

"Of course, we're swimming against the tide here," Taylor admits. "Most of these people want no help."

But by keeping a daily presence among the homeless, who number up to 15,000 in any given year, the officers say they also are able to pursue complaints filed by property and business owners against street people, curb aggressive panhandlers and lock up homeless people wanted for violent crimes.

The program, with a $970,000 annual budget, is funded by a three-year grant from the U.S. Justice Department.

The concept is not new. For nearly a decade, the New York City Transit Police have been using a special unit to deal with the homeless who populate the subway platforms and tunnels.

The department's homeless outreach program has grown to 45 officers, says department spokesman Albert O'Leary. They have had some success: Five years ago, 74 homeless people were found dead in the subways. There were 48 in 1993, and even fewer in 1994, though figures were not complete.

In 17 years as a patrol officer in Philadelphia, Bray estimates that he's personally seen 50 homeless people who have died.

"Stabbed, run over, frozen, you name it," Bray says. "With this (program), I see it as them getting another chance to ask for help."

More often than not, the homeless turn down that chance.

They find Richard Stanton, 31, huddled under a neat pile of blankets on a loading dock. "When it gets colder, I'll go to a shelter," he tells them.

"It's 26 degrees right now,"

Bray says. "That's not cold enough for you?"

It wasn't. "We do what we can," says Brown, 31, climbing back in the van.

There was the 6-year-old boy who lived with his father in a cardboard box. The father was a drug addict; the boy had a broken leg. Brown took the child to a hospital, placed him with an aunt, and charged the father with neglect.

"I take care of my kids and it made me mad to see that guy not care," said the father of four. "I guess some things come out all right."

But Barry's case — and his life — still hang in the balance. Bray and Brown say they've both come to feel responsible for his well being.

Both have stopped by on their day off at the corner of the 28-year-old man has called home for the past five or six years. They have given him shoes and clothes. Bray, 45, has even introduced him to his three children.

On this day, they made Barry the first stop of their 4 a.m.-to-noon shift for two reasons.

For one, Barry left a message with officers in their station house that he wanted to see them — he wanted to go to a shelter. They are also here to tell Barry that businesses have complained about his collection of blankets, bags and bottles and that he's got one day to clean everything up.

The boys were trying to get to Coffey's General Store when their weight apparently caused the wooden suspension bridge to dip into the creek. The rushing water caught the bridge and broke it from its moorings, said county emergency spokesman Dave Hill.

A witness, Hobe Probst, tried to telephone for help.

"I was looking out the window and quick as they went in, I ran up the road to call 911 — and the phone was dead," Probst said.

About 50 emergency workers had searched both banks of the creek. "Between the high water and the steep terrain, it was very tough," Coffey said.

Last summer, DuVall swam a mile to earn a scout merit badge.

Boy Scouts should have gone home

LENOIR, N.C. — Jimmy Poovey knew the rain-swollen creek was dangerous and he warned the three Boy Scouts to stay away. They didn't. A footbridge spanning the rolling waters collapsed under their weight.

"I told them to go home," said Poovey, who owns a cabin near the creek. "Ten minutes later, they were dead."

The three had been on their way to buy candy Saturday at a nearby store after their camping trip was canceled because of bad weather.

Two of the bodies were found a half-mile apart Sunday in the shallow water downstream from the bridge. The other boy was found less than a quarter of a mile from the collapse.

"I almost broke down crying. It was terrible," said 13-year-old Joe Gerald, who joined in the search for his friends. He had planned to join them, but hadn't brought his rain gear.

The weekend flooding left at least one other person dead and another missing. Rain forced dozens from their homes, washed out bridges and roads, caused mudslides and downed trees and power lines.

The boys, identified as Jacob Wise and Gerard Gougeon, both 14, and Kevin DuVall, 15, were among seven scouts and three adults from an Atlanta troop camping in the Pisgah National Forest. The troop had gone to a cabin owned by one of the

AROUND THE NATION

No three-peat for Dallas

SAN FRANCISCO — Steve Young and the San Francisco 49ers ended Dallas' hopes of winning the Super Bowl three straight times.

Eric Davis' 44-yard interception return, one of three early Dallas turnovers, sent the Niners on a 21-0 rampage in the first 7 1/2 minutes of the game en route to a 38-28 win over the Cowboys.

Young finally won the "big one" by throwing for two touchdowns and running for another.

Chargers bolt into Super Bowl

PITTSBURGH — The San Diego Chargers found a way over Pittsburgh's new Steel Curtain and charged into their first Super Bowl.

Dominated nearly all game by the Steelers' blitz and unable to convert on third downs, the Chargers won it by beating the blitz on a third-down, 43-yard touchdown pass from Stan Humphries to Tony Martin with 5:13 remaining. That dramatic play gave San Diego a 17-13 victory for the AFC championship, denying Pittsburgh a fifth trip to the Super Bowl.

The Chargers withstood a last-gasp Steelers' drive that carried to San Diego's 3-yard-line. Linebacker Dennis Gibson twice knocked down passes in the end zone — the last one on fourth down — preserving the Chargers' victory.

Issel hangs up whistle

DENVER — Dan Issel, who helped turn around a foundering franchise, resigned as coach of the Denver Nuggets Sunday, saying the duties and pressures of the job "have started to make me something I don't want to be."

Assistant Gene Little will become interim head coach for the remainder of the season.

Sofka (160 pounds) had a comparable day, pinning his Seminole and Pine Ridge opponents in the first and second periods, respectively, and winning by decision in the Poinciana match.

Kington (119) notched his pins in the Poinciana and Seminole matches and was credited with a forfeit win against Pine Ridge.

David Wyka (140) also won all three of his matches for the Patriots, notching a pin in the Pine Ridge match and picking up a pair of forfeit victories.

Prep sports underappreciated form of entertainment

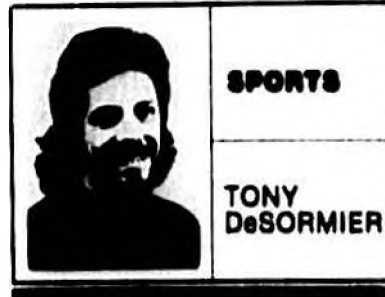

Have we gotten spoiled?

Year in and year out, Seminole County boasts some of the state's best high school athletic teams. In 1994, the Lyman girls' soccer team and Seminole girls' track teams won state championships. The Lyman fastpitch softball, Lake Brantley baseball, and Oviedo girls' volleyball teams were semifinalists.

Last week, the Florida Athletic Coaches' Association's Class 6A girls' soccer state poll included Lake Brantley (ranked 2nd), Lake Mary (4th), and Lake Howell (10th). The FACA Class 6A boys' soccer poll included Lake Mary (2nd), Lyman (8th), and Oviedo (9th). Seminole was receiving votes in the Florida Sports Writers' Association's Class 5A boys' basketball state poll.

And they're playing to ... near empty houses.

What's wrong with you people? What does it take get you to put your behinds in the bleachers?

SPORTS

TONY DeSORMIER

This isn't an appeal based on elite or scholastic loyalty. Nor is this a question of supporting teenagers participating in positive activities. We're talking the best bang for your entertainment dollar.

These kids can play, at a level of astonishing ability and with unbridled passion. Certainly, there are lulls and frustrating spells of seeming ineptitude (common to all levels of athletics), but that only adds to the dramatic tension.

And there are those of you out there that recognize the entertainment value of high school athletics, because you've turned out to see Vince Carter and the Mainland boys' basketball team (ranked third in Class 6A by the FSWA) when they've made their forays into Seminole County.

Certainly, Carter is an undeniable talent, regarded by many as the top high school player in the state and one of the top prospects in the nation. Watching Carter today might be compared to watching Emmitt Smith as a senior running back for Pensacola-Washington.

But is that what it takes to get you to turn out for a game, only the attraction of a superstar?

If it does, then you're missing out, like theatre buffs who eschew regional efforts for Broadway cast runs or music fans who'd rather be in a mob at an arena concert than check out the club scene.

Veterans of high school athletic competition can tell you stories of being involved in games where the gym or stadium is packed, SRO crowds who squeezed their way in to see the home team.

In a time not too far removed from today, that was a primary form of entertainment, events around which the rest of the week was planned. That was a simpler time, before satellite dishes and multiplex cinemas offered us a dizzying selection of distractions.

Does alternative reality or virtual reality compare with real reality?

Athletics is a never-ending drama, with never-repeated plot twists telling a different story every time. Teenagers — as any parent or teacher will tell you — are mercurial characters, can be brilliant and exasperating in the same moment.

Where else but at a high school game can you get that kind of entertainment for a $3 ticket?

Plan spring garden now

Proper planning key to garden success

Spring vegetable planting is only a few weeks away and I want to encourage "everyone" to give it a try this spring. If you are a first timer, start out small and enlarge your garden as your thumb gets greener. Vegetable gardening can also be done in containers, given the right growing conditions. You may even want to try tucking a few in your perennial garden or sunny, out-of-the-way shrub beds.

Proper planning is always going to be the key to successful gardening. Planning your garden: vegetable, flower or shrub should always be your first consideration. Locate the vegetable garden in a convenient sunny location. A garden should be convenient to the house so it will be handy to work in. Also, it should be near a faucet so watering will not be a problem. But most important in choosing a location is providing good light, and vegetables should be located where they can get a lot of sunlight all day long. In most backyards, you will probably have to choose between morning and afternoon sun. Full sun, especially in Florida, is better in the morning for growing vegetables. If your area does not get full sun all day, plant crops like tomatoes, corn, potatoes, cucumbers, melons and most root crops in the best area of sun you have. Leafy crops like lettuce can tolerate more shade.

Good soil is an important factor too, but most of us have to do the best we can with the soil we have. Getting the soil ready to plant will probably be the most physical part of the whole gardening project. Don't give into the temptation to cut corners with this phase of garden preparation. If you are planning a large garden, you may want to rent a roto-tiller, but most backyard garden plots can be prepared with a spade and shovel.

GARDENING
TRICIA THOMAS

If your area has a lot of weeds, or cover crop, you may have to wait a few weeks for the material to decompose once you turn it under. You could also remove it and add it to the compost pile.

To prepare the soil, dig down six to eight inches and turn each shovel full over completely. After the soil is turned, break up all clods and level the area with a rake. The more you pulverize your soil, the easier it will be to plant and grow vegetables.

If you are starting a new garden, chances are you won't have to worry about nematodes the first year. But those of us that have gardened in Florida for years know that eventually we need to take measures against nematodes and other soil-borne problems. Solarization is all that's left for us home gardeners to control nematodes. Solarization is the process of using solar heat generated by placing clear plastic over the soil. The garden plot should be completely prepared before covering with clear plastic and the plastic should remain over the soil for at least a month.

Once your soil is prepared, it's a good idea to have your soil tested if it hasn't been done recently. A pH test, done at the Cooperative Extension Service ($1.50 per sample), will indicate if your soil is acid or alkaline, or in other words, whether or not you need to add lime. To take a good soil sample, use a hand trowel to collect several 6-8 inch "cores" or soil in various locations in the garden. Mix these samples together in a bucket and remove one pint of soil and bring it in for testing. (We are located across the street from Fica World on 17-92 in Sanford). If your garden has been tested over the years with good results, chances are you can skip this part of soil preparation: When you receive your results from this test, we will make recommendations for amending your soil. Never add lime to your vegetable garden unless a soil test indicates the need! Improper liming can cause the soil to be too alkaline for good vegetable production. Vegetables prefer a pH between 6.5 and 6.8, and most home landscapes will fall within this range.

As everyone is probably aware, there are two vegetable growing seasons for us Central Floridians. When selecting plants for the spring garden, choose warm season vegetables, such as snap beans, peas, eggplant, cantaloupe, potatoes, cucumbers, sweet and hot peppers, etc. — and tomatoes of course! There are many other suitable choices available and a Vegetable Gardening Guide (SP 103) is available from the University of Florida for $1.35. You are of course welcome to come in anytime and look at my office copy for suggestions and pick up a order blank while you are here.

When your harvest comes in be sure to share the bounty with your neighbors. For more information about vegetable gardening come by or call the Cooperative Extension. Our numbers is 323-3500, ext. 5558 or 5550.

Wedding memories buried in snow

DEAR ABBY: You asked if anyone could top the ruined cruise wedding. Well, I can. I was married on March 13 in Albany, N.Y., during the blizzard of '85. Twenty-seven inches of snow fell and the wind chill was 60 below zero.

I cried for two hours that morning as the phone kept ringing. Relatives and friends were calling to say they were snowed in and wouldn't be there.

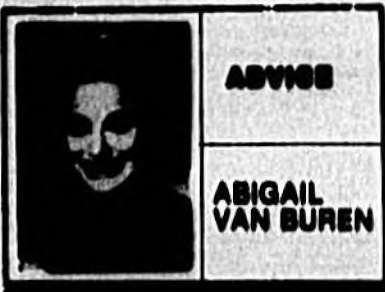

My soon-to-be husband called and fought with my mother. Somebody hung up on somebody — I still don't know the whole story. By the time the photographer arrived, I had regained my composure, until he told me his windshield wipers were frozen solid and he had to leave immediately to pick up another car.

Just then, I happened to glance out the window to see two limos drive by the house without stopping. The husband of one of my bridesmaids ran out in the blizzard and flagged them down. I wore snow boots under my wedding gown.

When we arrived at the church, the parking lot was scattered with 4x4's, and only half of our guests had made it.

After the ceremony, the photographer was taking pictures when one of the limo drivers ran into the church and yelled, "We have to leave now!" Apparently one of the limos was completely frozen, and visibility on the roads was near zero, so our wedding party of six piled into the one remaining limo and began a frightening ride to our reception.

We arrived to find 60 of the 120 expected guests. We called a halt to our reception after a few of the relatives became hysterical worrying about how they were going to get home, since all the roads were closed. I put my boots back on, and my husband and I pushed our guests' cars out of snowdrifts.

ADVISE

My husband and I finally arrived at my parents' home to get our luggage and head for the honeymoon suite of a local hotel. When we turned on the TV, we learned that the hotel was on fire and being evacuated!

All roads out of town were closed, so we had no choice but to spend our honeymoon at my parents' home. We were unexpected and there weren't enough beds, so we spent our wedding night on the floor in sleeping bags!

We had planned to travel to a ski resort the next day, but the roads were still closed, so we spent our honeymoon at my parents' house, shoveling snow and scraping ice. True to his word, my husband had said, "It will be a cold day in hell when I get married!"

Well, it was.

LISA FALLOCCI, BASKING RIDGE, N.J.
DEAR ABBY: Regarding listening to the tapes of a deceased loved one: Shortly after my husband died 26 years ago, his secretary thoughtfully sent his last dictation tape to me.

I curled up on the sofa and turned on my portable tape recorder. Kopy, our little dog, immediately came dashing down the stairs looking for her "Daddy." She pawed at the small black box and cooed her head quizzically. Then she jumped up beside me and covered my face with wet kisses and rested her head on my knee. It was an emotional, but comforting, experience for both of us.

I played that tape often during the first few years after my husband's death, and Kopy came running to join me each time.

God bless you, dear Abby. Your columns are invaluable.
LEIST MARRS, TAMAGUA, PA.

DEAR READERS: Today we pay tribute to a great American, Martin Luther King Jr., whose words of wisdom are even more meaningful today than they were 27 years ago, when he said:

"One day, somebody should remind us that, even though there may be political and ideological differences between us, the Vietnamese are our brothers, the Russians are our brothers, the Chinese are our brothers; and one day, we've got to sit down together at the table of brotherhood."

God bless America, and may we Americans, by our conduct, be worthy of God's blessings.
