Phantom Grentlin Strikes Three Times

A white Gremlin with red stripes was reportedly involved in three separate incidents of mischief and vandalism, according to Seminole County deputies.

Gavin Duffy, 42, of 102 Donnington St., near Longwood, told deputies persons riding in a car of that description selled up in front of his home about 4 a.m. Saturday. Che of the passengers threw a 20-inch boy's bicycle at Duffy's car causing an estimated $150 worth of damages, Duffy told deputies. Damage to the 1977 Pontiac included bent crome. scratches and body dents. The white Gremlin was reportedly seen in a second incident about 5:15 a.m. Saturday. Sal Scaramuzzino, 46, of 134 Ledbury Court, north of Forest City, told deputies he saw three men riding in the compact car that stopped in front of his home. The passenger in the front seat threw a sign measuring fourfeet by two-feet at his car which was parked in his driveway. Scaramuzzino said. He did not estimate the amount of damage.

Fred Texton, 45, of 109 Wyndham Court, north of Forest City reported the third incident to deputies. Texton said the Gremlin pulled in front of his home about 5:20 a.m. Saturday, and the passenger in the front seat broke out the driver's side window of his son's car.

The driver of the Gremlin sped down the block and returned a second time but left without incident, Texton said. He said the passengers were probably frightened away when he turned on the

5-Inch Crack In Pipeline

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (UPI) - Crews digging in bitterly cold 75-mph winds discovered a 5-inch crack in an underground section of the $9 billion Trans-Alaska pipeline, large enough to account for the leakage of over 1.500 barrels of crude oil.

The leak, discovered Sunday, brought to a halt a daily flow of some 1.2 million barrels of oil delivered by the 800mile conduit to tankers at the southern port city of Valdez. The crack was found in a section of the pipe where a f inch "wrinkle" was found earlier, indicating a buckle in

Pope In Tug Of War For Minds Of Youth

Pope John Paul II learned during his tenure as archbishop of Krakow how to survive under a Communist government hostile to Poland's huge Catholic population.

On his current trip to his homeland, too, he has been careful to avoid statements desgined to provoke misgivings on the part of Communist Party Secretary Edward Gierek, who gave permission for the visit, or the Communist hierarchy in Moscow, which pulls the strings. The pope has stressed in his public appearances the solidarity of the "often-forgotten" Christians of Poland's Sovietdominated neighbors. And he has focused, particularly, upon the youth of Poland, commending them for their perseverance in their Christian

But it is that capacity for faith that is earnestly sought by Poland's Communist leaders, who would like to translate it into loyalty to the regime. The evidence indicates that John Paul has the edge in the tug-of-war over the minds of the young people who will be Poland's leaders in the future. The pope must step carefully to protect the rare freedom enjoyed by the Catholic Church in Poland. Gierek, who is blamed for a deteriorating economy, could be toppled in a burst of religious enthusiasm. The likely result would be military intervention from Moscow and harsh reprisals on the church.

John Paul's policy in Poland follows the admonition laid down by St. Matthew nearly 2,000 years ago: "Render therefore unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's, and unto God the things that are God's."

The Communists acknowledge no such distinc-

And the pope's emphasis on the doctrine that no man may claim another's immortal soul is a subtle challenge to a basic principle of communism. The apprehensions in Moscow are understandable. Uncertain Russian critics have confessed their suspeicions that "some circles in the Polish church" may try to use the pope's visit

"for anti-state purposes." John Paul's years of experience seem to have made him adept enough to deny the suspicion convincingly. But his presence cannot do otherwise than strengthen the church, which will remain the strongest countervailing force to Communist dominance in Polish society. And that will be good for the cause of humanity and freedom.

What He Deserves

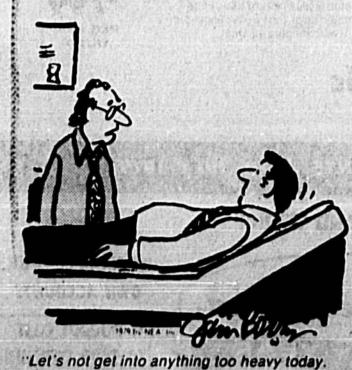

The deposed shah of Iran has been granted a visa to Mexico. But refuge in Mexico for the shah and his family won't erase the shameful spectacle of the United States turning its back on a friend and ally of 37 years standing. To quote Henry Kissinger, the Carter administration has Georgia coast th the time, appeared generally treated the shah "like a flying Dutchman who cannot find a port of call." That is hardly the kind of loyalty Washington should be demonstrating to nervous friends around the world. Privately, the president's aides stress that granting the shah permanent sanctuary now might endanger the lives of the 3,000 Americans still working in Iran. One official even wondered aloud whether the Ayatollah Khomeini's zealous followers might seize the U.S. mission in Tehran and hold American diplomats hostage against the shah's forced repatriation. Moreover, we cannot escape the feeling that if the United States had, as a matter of course, accepted the shah soon after he departed Tehran, the ayatollah and his minoins would have acknowledge the fact with hardly more acrimony than they now demonstrate toward Washington. Having waffled and equivocated in the face of imagined dangers, the administration has only encouraged additional bullying.

Time and the shah's considerable fortune should eventually enable him to find a haven. With luck he may even escape the assassination urged by one of Iran's revolutionary courts. If so, he will have ample time to reflect on the fruits of his lifetime of loyal support for American foreign policy. The Carter administration can take at least some of the sting out of that reflection by seeing to it that the shah does his

There is to be a new circuit judgeship for the 18th judicial circuit-Seminole and Brevard counties. It's agreed among many attorneys in the circuit, however, that the new judge will probably be a resident of Seminole County. There is a wealth of good attorneys in the county who would make exceedingly good judges. Who might the choice be? A judicial nominating committee composed of both Seminole and Brevard county attorneys some laymen and others will be interviewing and going through the selection process. The two lawyers from Seminole, who are members of the judicial nominating committee are Bar Association President Newman Brock and Gary Massey, Lake Mary city attorney. According to the law, the nominating committee will recommend several choices to Gov. Bob Graham who will appoint the new judge. The scuttlebut for several weeks has been that Joe Davis of the Stenstrom, Davis, McIntosh and Julian law firm of Sanford is among those who will be considered. It was said a few years ago that Kenneth McIntosh of the same law firm was being considered when Kenneth Leffler was appointed. And Gordon Frederick, unsuccessful candidate of the circuit judgeship held by Dominick Salfi in 1978, Seminole currently has four resident judges of the 13 in the 18th Judicial Circuit - Kenneth Leffler, Salfi, Volie Williams Jr. and Robert McGregor. Both Davis and Frederick were members of the Florida Legislature in the 1960's. Frederick has been attorney for the Seminole Memorial Hospital board of trustees and the Seminole County Port Authority. Davis is currently city attorney of Oviedo and Altamonte Springs. He recently submitted his resignation in Altamonte, after 21 years

Florida Supreme Justice Arthur England has urged the question be considered in a recent report to the

But actual realignment could not be accomplished until the Legislature meets again. There was a lot of controversy about the issue of whether Seminole and Orange should be in one judicial circuit more than a decade ago. At that time attorneys with offices in Orlando, but who either lived in Seminole County or practiced law a good deal in the county, and the few south end attorneys who existed at that time, were on the side of linking Seminole and Orange.

Sanford based attorneys that comprised the majority of the local bar then for the most part opposed the tie-in, preferring to stay with Brevard:

The reaction of the bar this time may be somewhat different. A majority of lawyers in Seminole have their practices in the southend of the county and few of them, from the past associations, have any connection with Brevard County.

WASHINGTON (NEA) - In the movies, a fully coordinated and highly sophisticated intelligence network instantly swings into action whenever the national security of the United States is threatened by an international crisis. But that's not quite how it happens in real life.

A rare view of the government's response to such emergencies is provided by a recently declassified Central Intelligence Agency postmortem analysis of the Mayaguez incident. The Mayaguez, an American merchant marine ship, was boarded by hostile Cambodian troops in May 1975. The first reports of the ship's seizure, in the form of high-priority intelligence cables, reached Washington between 5 a.m. and 7 a.m. on May 12.

Five different agencies were immediately notified - the National Security Agency, Central Intelligence Agency, Defense Intelligence Agency, State Department Bureau of Intelligence and Research and White House In each agency, the around-the-clock watch office promptly notified a senior official, usually the second or third in command, through a telephone call place before dawn. By 8 a.m., the senior officials had briefed the heads of their respective agencies. In other words, the information was rapidly transmitted upward, in traditional bureaucratic fashion. But also true to bureaucratic form, there was little communication or coordination between the various agencies. "The tendency. . . to report upward. . . rather than exchange information laterally," the CIA report says dryly, "may have hampered somewhat the effort to provide quick and clear

Let's Not Be Beastly

By DICK WEST WASHINGTON (UPI) - The persistence o bill collectors pitted against the obstinance of deadbeats is the closest thing in nature to an irresistible force meeting an immovable body. In the government, however, it's a mismatch.

As a debt collector, Uncle Sam has been badly outdone by the debtors. Let us recapitulate. Last month, using all of their fingers and most of their toes. Treasury accountants calculated the national debt at $805.66 billion. Which proves that Uncle Sam has no peer as a borrower. He is no slouch as a lender either. The record, as developed by a Senate appropriations subcommittee, indicates that even if Uncle Sam could scrape up the $805 billion he owes, he would fail to extract anywhere near the $140 billion owed to him. In fiscal 1978, the last period for which such

Industry Having Its Own Tax Revolt

ST. LOUIS (UPI) - Researcher Joseph C. Sansone recalls a tax assessor who agreed the property tax liability of a company Sansone represented should be cut

"But he told me he wouldn't do it," Sansone said. "He said if he reduced the plant's assessment, he'd have the mayor, the controller and the school district on his back because they needed the revenue." Sansone said the tax liability eventually was lowered by $19,800 - but only after a lengthy court battle. Fortunately, he said, most assessors treat appeals more

As a result, he said, more and more companies are willing to challenge their assessments. "Attention in the tax revolt seems to be focused on homeowners but industry is right on the heels of it," said Sansone, who heads Property Tax Research Co., which helps commercial enterprises appeal assessments. "In the last couple of years in particular," he said, "industries have been taking a closer look at their property taxes. The M.R. Stricklands Married 50 Years

She Is Happy — Just So Happy; He Wouldn't Change A Thing

OURSELVES Editor

A half century of marriagewhat's it like? According to Mrs. Meade Rupert (Minnie) Strickland of Sanford, celebrating her golden wedding anniversary "means a lot." It's a goal I never thought I'd reach. I have everything under the sun to be happy forno regrets anywhere." Adding that she and her husband had always "put religion first in their life," Minnie continued, "I'm not as good as Rupert. He is the strong one. He's the leader-and has ; always led us in the right path." And how does Mr. Strickland feel on his golden wedding anniversary? Would he make any changes if he had to live the past 50 years over? "No, I wouldn't change a. thing. I would pick the same girl. I have a lot to live for-

The M.R. Stricklands Married 50 Years

She Is Happy — Just So Happy; He Wouldn't Change A Thing

OURSELVES Editor

A half century of marriage-According to Mrs. Meade Rupert (Minnie) Strickland of Sanford, celebrating her golden wedding anniversary "means a lot." It's a goal I never thought I'd reach. I have everything under the sun to be happy for-no regrets anywhere." Adding that she and her husband had always "put religion first in their life." Minnie continued, "I'm not as good as Rupert. He is the strong one. He's the leader-and has always led us in the right path." And how does Mr. Strickland feel on his golden wedding anniversary? Would he make any changes if he had to live the past 50 years over?

"No, I wouldn't change a thing. I would pick the same girl. I have a lot to live forthree pretty nice gals to keep me straight," Rupert said. "It has been a real joy—no regrets. The good Lord has been good to Minnie and Rupert have lived in Sanford for 47 years of their married life. They were married in Madison, Ga., on June 12, 1929. "We were married in the

Extra Heart Beats Should Be Checked

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 73-year-old male who has experienced irregular heart beats (or extrasystoles) for 15 years. I've been having annual physical examinations and each time my doctor assures me that there is nothing that I should be concerned about. Nothing that I do, not even physical exertion, causes the skips. Recently my doctor prescribed a tablet of Inderal each day. I though Inderal was used for high blood pressure. usually about 110 over 80.

A 40-year-old disabled veteran, unable to find a home for his wife and six children, says he has had to live in his

Contending there is nowhere else to turn, the man has pleaded to the Sanford City Commission for help. But with hundreds of similar cases, the city will be able to do little,

James Debose, his wife and their six children were left homeless in April when the house they were renting on the city's east side was foreclosed by a mortgage company "They gave me three days to get out," said Debose, who has lived in Sanford for more than 20 years "Everywhere I went I got the same story. They told me they don't rent or they don't accept children. I even tried lying about my kids, but I couldn't find anything."

Debose, who lost the full use of his right arm while serving in the army in 1960, said he can't afford rent of more than $175 per month. He has a disability pension and his wife works as an electronics factory worker. Yet their combined income is not enough to qualify for a loan to purchase a home, he said. The combined income, he said, is under $800 a month.

Public housing would be the preferred choice of Debose. but there are no vacancies in the city's 480-units of subidized apartments. Even if there were, Debose would meet with problems. "There are 2,800 people on the waiting list ahead of him." said Sanford Housing Authority Director Tom Wilson. "I wish we could help, but even if a vacancy

'We need more public housing, it's that simple.

turned up tomorrow it would have to be a four-bedroom apartment. We're bounded by occupancy codes.' Wilson said it would be a violation of housing guidelines to place a family of eight in a one or two-bedroom unit. Besides, he said, there are others with circumstances as dire as the Debose family who have been waiting longer. With no other choice, Debose and his wife will continue living in their beatup, 1969 Plymouth sedan. He said the children will stay with his sister-in-law and her two children in a small, two bedroom home in Midway. "I think it's deplorable; there must be something that can be done on an emergency basis," commissioner David Farr said upon learning of the Debose case. But the emergency provisions of the housing authority guidelines that might help Debose if enacted could bump an equally needy family from obtaining housing. And that's the dilemma now facing housing officials - with a shortage of space, who gets priority. What they are doing, said the housing rehabilitation director, Stan Stone, is not unusual. Others like the Debose family, unable to find private housing and well down on the waiting list for public housing, have lived in vans, trailers or make-shift shacks, he said. "Usually they stay with family or friends or sometimes move into dilapidated, condemned housing that has not yet been torn down. But there have been other reports of people living in cars," Stone said.

According to Stone, a person whose home is condemned is given priority on the housing authority waiting list so that there will be a spot available in public housing when the home is torn down. The emergency list is already at a critical stage, Stone said. If the authority grants emergency status to Debose and places him in an apartment or home, it will have to do so at the expense of another family already earmarked for that home, he said. Since the home Debose rented was not condemned, but foreclosed, he didn't qualify for emergency status. "We need more public housing, it's that simple. The problem is getting worse. It's bad all over Seminole County, in Sanford it's impossible," said Stone. The problem, he said, is that there are about 10 homes being condemned each month, but there hadn't been any new public housing in the city since Lake Monroe Terrace was built in 1972. He said the authority's recent request to the Department of Housing and Urban Development for 40 additional housing units has been denied.

Stones co-worker, Linda Williams, said the scarcity of low-cost housing also is a result of the state of the economy. Where tenants used to stay in the public units for two or three years, they are no longer as mobile, she "The concept of public housing is that it should be a stepping stone. They used to live here until their incomes advanced and then move into the private sector. But they can't do that anymore," Mrs. Williams said. "It was possible to buy a home on a modest income 10 years ago, but today the homes built are strictly for the middle and upper income," she said.

As a result, nore and more of the tenants in Sanford's public housing units are deciding not to leave. As the turnover rate slackens, the waiting lists lengthen.

Warden's Advice: Check Out Letters To The Editor

Sanford and area residents who might have seen a letter to the editor in an area newspaper today written by an Arkansas prison inmate claiming to be on death row and urging people to write to him would do well to check with prison officials first. That was the advice today from the warden of the prison in Grady, Ark., Ronald Dobbs.

The letter published this morning in the area newspaper is signed by Joe R. Bishop. The inmate says he has been on death row in Arkansas for five years, is from Orlando, has no living relatives and would like people to write to

"Hogwash," said Warden Dobbs. The Evening Herald in its Sunday, Aug. 13, 1978 edition published a page one story detailing how prison inmates from institutions in Ohio and Florida were writing letters to editors of various newspapers asking people to write to them. Having received similar letters, and noting the letters' contents were similar though from different inmates, Herald editors contacted the wardens at the various prisons and learned the letter-writing campaigns are a con game.

It was discovered then that the inmates-some claiming to be on death row; some claiming to be females in have been around since the beginning of the prison system in the United States, cost some of its victims thousands of dollars lost to the con-artist inmates. Prison officials pointed out once people respond to the inmate's letter to the editor and contacts the prisoner the women's prisons, but actually men in male institutions when written to by sympathetic readers of the newspapers publishing their letters, would involve their "pen pals" in a scheme to rip them off. The letter-writing scheme, said by prison officials to con game begins. Wardens said the inmates strike up a friendship with the person writing them, then have a fashion or another, solicit funds for the inmate. Generally, the wardens said, once the inmate is released from custody, the victim never sees or hears from him again. When the letter to the editor appearing in the area newspaper this morning was spotted, the Arkansas prison warden was contacted by Herald staffers. Warden Dobbs said today the inmate, Joe R. Bishop is "indeed not on death row as he says in his letter. He's doing 10 years for burglary and grand larceny.

"And, as for having no living relatives, his prison records show a slew of relatives on his mailing list...all from Arkansas. Our records also show he probably was never even in Florida. Bishop was born in Hope, Ark., according to his jacket (prison files), attended schools there and there's no indication he's ever been in Florida.'

Are prisen officials able to do anything about it? "Well, the man's here doing 10 years. We'll certainly look into it, but the best advice I'd give anyone who might see such a letter to the editor is not to write to the inmate. Certainly, not at least until they've contacted prison authorities to determine the authenticity of the inmate's claims," Warden Dobbs asserted.
